

Scores injured in California quake

EL CENTRO, Calif. (UPI) — A powerful earthquake followed by jarring aftershocks buckled buildings, speared window glass through the streets and caused injuries to scores of residents Monday in several desert cities of Southern California and Northern Mexico.

It was the strongest quake to strike all the 48 contiguous states since the San-Fernando-Valley earthquake, also in Southern California, of Feb. 9, 1971, when 65 persons were killed, the U.S. Geological Survey reported in Boulder, Colo.

Seismologists at the California Institute of Technology in Pasadena said Monday's quake measured 6.4 on the open-ended Richter scale, the strongest to hit the dry, desert area since 1940.

Severe damage was reported in Calexico, Brawley and El Centro near the Mexican border, 100 miles inland from the Pacific Coast. In Mexico, a newspaper reported about 30 persons injured in the border city of Mexicali, most hurt by flying glass.

Buildings swayed in Los Angeles, San Diego and Las Vegas.

Preliminary reports from a Red Cross team said 40 to 100 persons were injured. The volunteers said a number of buildings were heavily damaged in Calexico.

"The outside structures don't seem down but the contents are all scattered out," Red Cross spokesman Bill Swindell said. "It's shocking, crups now have to guess the damage."

The Red Cross team said it had an unconfirmed report of at least one death. Seismologists at the University of California, Berkeley, also reported a victim. But authorities in El Centro and Calexico said they knew of no fatalities.

The main concern was for Calexico, 10 miles west of the pinpointed epicenter, where "buildings are less sound" than the county seat community of El Centro 10 miles to the north.

In Mexico, "our volunteers in the Imperial Valley said Mexicali has suffered quite a bit of damage," Swindell said. "The construction there is less sound, some buildings are just unreinforced adobe. It's more than likely we'll have a larger number of injuries there because of the denser living conditions."

In Mexicali, the newspaper El Mexicano said none of the injuries there was serious. It said one building collapsed at a school and another, a meeting place for journalists, crumbled in places but remained standing.

Communications were temporarily cut off from the Imperial Valley towns.

The California Institute of Technology said the 6.4 shaker was followed by two aftershocks of 5.0 and "several dozen" above magnitude 3.5.

The UC scientists said it measured 6.5 to 7 with seven aftershocks all of lesser intensity. The major quake activity was followed by swarms of further aftershocks numbering in the hundreds, seismologists said.

Power lines were knocked down and water mains were snapped in the disaster area, and the UC seismologists said there were fires in the two communities.

Witnesses said from the scene in El Centro that glass from broken windows littered the streets. The city's five-story county Social Services Building suffered major pylon damage, and the entire structure sank 3 to 4 feet.

Porches on older wooden houses in El Centro were partially collapsed.

Renee Berkner in El Centro said, "In my home there lamps falling, things tipping off shelves and I've got 4 feet of dirt from plants scattered."

Twin Falls city impact area dispute winds up in court

By MARTY TRILLHAASE
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The city of Twin Falls will sue Twin Falls County to resolve the differences over the city's proposed area of impact.

Twin Falls City Council Monday voted to authorize the suit after the county planning and zoning commission Thursday rejected the proposed area of impact.

City Attorney Charles Brumbach said he will begin preparing the necessary papers today.

Mayor Leon Smith said the action was taken as a last resort.

"We've negotiated tacit agreements on the area of impact three times over the last several years and each time they have fallen through," Smith said.

Although the county commissioners have yet to act on the planning and zoning board's recommendation, they indicated they would endorse it, Smith added.

Under Idaho law, cities are required to establish areas of impact (future expansion areas). The city's proposed area contained lands generally within a one-mile distance from the city, as well as the airport and canyon rim areas.

But the county felt the city's proposal included too large an area, County Commissioner Tommy Walker said.

Now a judge will make the decision, which could include throwing out the state requirement.

Just who will make the decision from the bench is also unknown. The city may ask local district judges to disqualify themselves and 5th District Administrative Judge Douglas Kramer to appoint another in their place.

Given the political sensitivity of the issue, the local judges would be put in an unfair position, Brumbach said.

"I think the local judges would appreciate that," he said.

Walker agreed the case should be heard by an appointed judge.

In such deadlocked situations, a nine-member panel can be appointed to resolve the differences. Three members each would be appointed from the county and city, with three members at large. Just who would fill those last three seats could have resulted in another impasse, officials believed.

"I think it's time for a court to decide what we are going to do," Walkersaid.

But City Councilman Chris Talkington, who cast the sole dissenting vote, questioned the move.

Although disillusioned with the county's handling of the matter, he said he has even less faith in the courts.

"The court cases which I have seen the city involved in so far have been anything but friendly towards the city," he said.

Senate committee demands deep cuts in nuclear arms

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate Foreign Relations Committee, beginning its final review of the SALT II treaty, approved a reservation Monday calling for deep cuts in superpower nuclear arms in future SALT III negotiations.

The panel approved the reservation authored by Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., and Sen. Jacob Javits, R-N.Y., by a vote of 10-2.

McGovern said Senate liberals had "lost the battle" to hold down future arms spending to defense-minded legislators like Sam Nunn, D-Ga., who are pushing for increases of up to 5 percent in 1981 and beyond.

"I'm not willing to pay that big a price unless we are willing to see in SALT III that we are going to have substantial reductions," McGovern said.

Javits urged "deep cuts" in SALT III. He said the Senate should tell the president: "We won't consider a treaty which doesn't contain deep cuts. We should tell him now we expect only a treaty which would do such things."

The supreme allied commander in Europe said he believes most European leaders feel failure to ratify SALT would be damaging to the office of the presidency, to U.S. leadership of the NATO alliance, and could impede modernization of NATO's nuclear forces.

The panel began its final line-by-line scrutiny of SALT II, which will continue today, after hearing all testimony from Chairman Frank Church of Idaho that it was an "equally historic moment" as the time 60 years ago when it completed work on the Treaty of Versailles. The Senate never passed that treaty ending World War I.

The committee, in its initial action, voted 13-0 to attach to the strategic arms pact an interpretative reservation proposed by Church declaring that a lengthy side document of joint U.S.-Soviet interpretations has "the same force and effect as the provisions of the treaty itself."

This is a cosmetic change if ever there was one, "Lugar, a SALT critic, complained. "It is a way of covering yourself for a pro-SALT vote and I think we can interpret it that way."

At the same time, several non-members introduced SALT-related motions directly in the Senate.

Sen. Dee Huddleston, D-Ky., proposed a reservation which would require the president to report to the Senate every six months on Soviet compliance with the strategic arms accord.

Sen. Howell Heflin, D-Ala., introduced a resolution to allow radio and television coverage of the Senate floor debate which was expected to begin in early November on the SALT pact.

Committee voting during the markup process may provide the earliest indication of feelings about the SALT pact which would limit the two superpowers to 2,250 missiles and strategic bombers.

Church told the committee that by last Friday, 37 reservations, amendments or understandings either had been offered to the treaty or were in the discussion stage.

Airwest reports agreement

SAN MATEO, Calif. (UPI) — Hughes Airwest announced Monday a tentative contract agreement in a Western strike by some 2,200 reservation agents and clerical workers.

A spokesman for the airline said the agreement was reached in Miami where talks were under the direction of the Federal Mediation Service.

The Airline Employees Association said a ratification vote would be taken later. No details were released pending the vote.

Hughes Airwest provides service to Idaho and 17 other Western states as well as to Mexico and Canada.

There were no flights during the walkout.

Washington, D.C. — More than two out of three American consumers believe that greater government regulation is needed to protect them, according to a survey released here Monday.

That was one finding of the nationwide survey, conducted by Rep. James H. Scheuer, D-N.Y., chairman of the consumer protection subcommittee of the House Commerce Committee and by the Action Line Reporters Association, an organization of consumer journalists.

Ninety-six percent of the 5,000 respondents to the survey distrust some

'Pain' now, relief later

Federal Reserve Chairman Paul Volcker told the Senate Banking Committee Monday the Fed's tightened money policy may hurt now but offers the best promise of reducing inflation and high interest rates in the near future. He said the Fed's actions may cause Americans some short-term "pain," since credit and security bond mortgages may be harder to get for a matter of months. Volcker also told the committee he isn't sure the nation is in a recession.

American consumer not trusting suppliers of goods and services, particularly door-to-door salesmen and much of the automobile industry.

Eighty-five percent said they had had their cars repaired in the past year. Of these car-owners, 38 percent reported that they still had problems after the repairs.

The responses did not vary with region or population density, indicating that consumers everywhere share similar problems, Scheuer said.

"Which of these business people do you generally not trust?" the survey asked, and the following occupations led the list:

- Door-to-door salesmen, 79 percent.
- Used-car dealers, 63 percent.
- Auto mechanics, 52 percent.
- New-car dealers, 40 percent.
- Insurance agents, 34 percent.
- Appliance repairmen, 34 percent.

Nearly two-thirds of the persons questioned said they were satisfied with credit card companies, the highest rating of any business.

The support for greater government regulation was a surprise to him, Scheuer said, and was significant in light of what he called the "highly orchestrated" campaign that has been waged in Congress against regulatory agencies by business lobbyists.

Andrus said the advantages of Northern Tier included a route entirely within the United States, greater economic benefits like job creation and tax revenues and the best prospects for private financing.

"I view the ability of a proposal to obtain private financing as the ultimate test of a system's viability," Andrus wrote in a letter to Carter.

If the developers of Northern Tier prove unable to finance their $1.8-billion project within one year, he suggested that Carter shift his endorsement to their competitor, Trans-Alaska Pipeline.

Andrus recommends Northern Tier oil pipeline

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus recommended the Northern Tier Pipeline proposal to President Jimmy Carter as the best of four alternatives for transporting Alaskan crude oil to the Midwest.

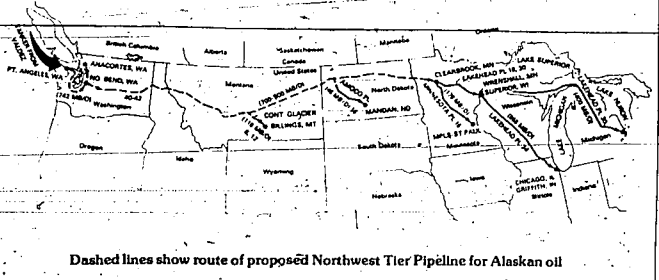

Andrus said the advantages of Northern Tier included a route entirely within the United States, greater economic benefits like job creation and tax revenues and the best prospects for private financing.

"I view the ability of a proposal to obtain private financing as the ultimate test of a system's viability," Andrus wrote in a letter to Carter.

If the developers of Northern Tier prove unable to finance their $1.8-billion project within one year, he suggested that Carter shift his endorsement to their competitor, Trans-Alaska Pipeline.

Andrus, who was asked to give Carter a cabinet recommendation, said Carter should endorse Northern Tier on the condition it relocate its West Coast end and that four large Puget Sound refineries be required to hook up to the pipeline.

Northern Tier's plans call for a pipeline from a tanker port at Port Angeles, Wash., to a terminus near St. Paul, Minn. The proposed pipeline would cross the Idaho panhandle.

The proposed pipeline could eventually handle 933,000 barrels of crude oil a day, more than half of it Alaskan, he said.

John Latz, vice president of Northern Tier Pipeline Co., said: "We should have the first oil flowing by October, 1982." If the president accepts Andrus' recommendation,

"We look forward to President Carter's prompt acceptance of Secretary Andrus' recommendation so that consumers in the 17 states of the northern tier and the mid-continent region — now faced with the loss of Canadian supplies — can regain their energy security," he said.

Carter is expected to make a final decision before the end of November on which, if any, of the competing pipeline routes merits "fast track" routing through the federal regulatory maze as a vital energy project.

The states of Minnesota and North Dakota, the secretaries of energy and agriculture, and dozens of senators and congressmen have already endorsed the Northern Tier route, the only one entirely within the United States.

Latz said he expected Montana to endorse his route soon and Washington to follow suit if Carter approved Northern Tier.

Proponents of a west-to-east pipeline insist it is the best solution to a shortage of crude oil reaching refineries in five states bordering Canada and a glut of Alaskan oil reaching West Coast refineries.

As much as 400,000 barrels a day of high-sulfur Alaskan oil must be shipped through the Panama Canal to East and Gulf Coast refineries because Pacific facilities can't handle it.

Judge places girl who shot stepfather on probation

KEISSIMMEE, Fla. (UPI) — A judge had a change of heart Monday and sentenced a Treckle-faced 15-year-old girl to probation for the shooting death of her stepfather who had repeatedly raped her.

Oscola County Judge Russell Thacker said he initially thought he would remove Laura McIntyre from her home for the slaying of David Lee McIntyre, 31. But he changed his mind after she testified before he passed sentence.

"I only hope I can stay with my grandmother and my mom and my brother and my sister where I am now, and I promise to be a good girl," Laura said softly.

Thacker put Laura on probation despite a recommendation by juvenile authorities that she be sent to live with an uncle in Nashville, Tenn. He ordered quarterly reports on Laura's progress and reminded her he could revoke probation any time before her 19th birthday.

"I think you did wrong and I don't mind telling you so, Laura, but I'm going to leave you where you are," Thacker said. "Somehow you changed my mind."

Laura cried quietly, as did her mother and grandmother when Thacker announced his decision. Her grandmother hugged Laura and her mother.

Carter won't duck problems

CHICAGO (UPI) — President Carter said Monday night he will tackle the challenge of the nation's problems no matter their political cost to him.

Carter told a Democratic Party fundraiser for Mayor Jayne Byrne that when he assumed office, "I decided to confront the fundamental problems of this country."

"I decided to do it forcefully and directly, no matter what the political impact would be or what the popularity polls might say."

"Whatever the future may hold, I want the personal satisfaction that I did not duck problems, that I did not settle for half-hearted approaches, that I always put the interest of this country first," Carter said.

Carter was the apparent winner in Saturday's Florida Democratic caucus over Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., a possible challenger to his re-nomination.

Ecevit resigns in Turkey

ISTANBUL, Turkey (UPI) — Turkish Prime Minister Bulent Ecevit announced his resignation Monday as a result of his party's devastating defeat in Sunday's special election.

The left-leaning Ecevit, 54, announced the resignation of his 21-month-old government after a three-hour meeting with members of his Republican People's Party.

Salvador president ousted

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (UPI) — A five-man junta ousted President Carlos Humberto Romero in a bloodless coup Monday and bundled him onto a plane for Guatemala.

But hours after the coup, reports said two colonels seized power from the junta. The two colonels were not identified.

Sources in the Salvadoran capital said Romero's ultimate destination was Miami "after a stop in Guatemala. But they had no further information on the flight."

The junta of four colonels and a civilian, which sprung the coup, dissolved Congress and the Supreme Court and called on left- and right-wing guerrillas to lay down their arms to end the fighting which has taken 550 lives this year, radio reports said.

Nuclear plant inspected

PLATTEVILLE, Colo. (UPI) — Technicians Monday inspected the cooling system at the Fort St. Vrain nuclear power plant, shut down Sunday because of a reported insignificant release of radioactivity inside the reactor building.

Company spokesman Gary Reeves said the radiation released Sunday was contained within the reactor building and no "measurable" radiation escaped the plant, he said.

"They began checking through the system today," said Reeves. "They need to determine why it is they are having this operating problem."

Reeves said the plant, located 40 miles northeast of Denver, might be put back into operation today.

Young on Carter bandwagon

EAST LANSING, Mich. (UPI) — Former United Nations Ambassador Andrew Young said Monday he would support Sen. Edward Kennedy for president in 1984, but will campaign next year for President Carter.

Young, who resigned in August, also said in a speech he felt Israel had been created to atone for America's guilt over ignoring the Jewish Holocaust of World War II.

Young said he did not think Kennedy, D-Mass., was ready for the presidency.

Young said he would be willing to work in connection with the Carter campaign, though he will not serve on the re-election committee.

Hua flays Soviets, allies

PARIS (UPI) — Chinese leader Hua Guofeng started a tour of Western Europe Monday by accusing the Soviet Union and its Vietnamese and Cuban allies of expansionism and urged Europeans to brace for a military confrontation.

Without mentioning Moscow, Cuba or Hanoi by name, Hua used a gala dinner at the Elysee Palace to hammer away at "revisionism" — Peking's code word for Soviet activities abroad.

Cambodia to receive U.S. help

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — President Carter Monday pledged an initial $7 million to ease the starving conditions in Cambodia, and warned Vietnam not to interfere with international relief efforts.

Carter, in Kansas City to speak to the Catholic Charities' convention, said the United States has pledged $2 million to Cambodia from the U.S. Refugee and Migration Assistance Emergency Fund, and $5 million worth of food under the Food For Peace Program.

"There is now developing to the horror of the world, a tragedy of profound consequences in Cambodia, known now as Kampuchea," Carter told some 100 delegates.

"This is beyond politics. It is a matter of simple and urgent humanitarian concern," he said.

He said the U.S. pledge "will be increased in the future, to help feed the tens of thousands of starving human beings" in Cambodia.

"We have difficult obstacles to overcome in the distribution of this food and this effort will be carried out by private charities and by organizations of the United Nations. Together we must succeed," he said.

"It obstacles arise between the starving and the food we offer, those obstacles need to be highly publicized so that the officials of South Vietnam will not dare perpetrate the horrible circumstances which they themselves have created," Carter said.

Carter, during his speech to the convention, also announced the Department of Health, Education and Welfare is creating an Office for Families to develop government policies and programs affecting families.

Court leaves fund transfers decision in Congress' hands

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court Monday left it up to Congress to decide whether financial institutions may continue providing customers with automatic transfer of funds between savings and checking accounts.

The justices turned aside a challenge to a federal appeals court finding that such transactions are illegal under current laws barring payment of interest on checking accounts.

However, the appeals panel ruled it is "the responsibility of Congress and not the courts to determine such policy," and stayed its order until next Jan. 1 to allow time for congressional action.

On Sept. 11, the House overwhelmingly passed legislation to let banks, savings and loan and credit unions provide the transfers through which customers with both types of accounts can automatically replenish one by drawing on the other.

The Senate is expected to approve similar legislation this year, and some form of compromise is expected to win final passage before the end of the year.

In other actions Monday, before recessing public sessions until Oct. 29, the court agreed to:

- Decide whether the government can use as evidence obscene films it received from a firm to which they were delivered accidentally. The case involves movies depicting homosexual activities which "L'Eggs Products," the women's hosiery firm, received by mistake and turned over to the FBI.
- Rule whether the Securities and Exchange Commission, in cracking down on stock fraud, must prove the accused had knowledge of improper activity by employees.

- Consider whether the Virginia Supreme Court must pay attorney fees and federal court costs in a case where a special tribunal struck down the state's ban on advertising by lawyers.

But the court rejected:

- An effort by Western Electric Co.

to avoid paying $1 million in legal fees in a class action sex discrimination case which has not yet been decided.

• A second effort by two California telephone companies to avoid paying customer refunds and more than $1 billion on federal taxes.

• The appeal of two firms claiming the Postal Service violated their free speech rights in barring mail order sales of products advertised as aphrodisiacs.

The account transfer case was appealed to the high court by the National Credit Union Administration, the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, the Federal Reserve Board and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation.

They said the appeals court ruling would disrupt banking services and "have a deleterious impact on the financial community as a whole."

Ruling in lawsuits filed by banking trade associations, the appeals panel said those regulatory agencies overstepped their authority in allowing the transfers, since the practice allows payment of interest on checking accounts.

The panel also held that allowing federal credit unions to let members withdraw funds from their share accounts were the "practical equivalent" of checks drawn on interest-bearing accounts.

FDA orders warning labels on hair dyes

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Food and Drug Administration Monday ordered warning labels placed on permanent hair dyes containing chemicals which have been a mainstay of the hair coloring industry for 60 years.

The chemicals already have been removed by the two major manufacturers of hair dye which, according to industry figures, is used by two out of every five American women regularly.

Under the order all permanent hair dyes containing 2,4-DAA and 2,4-DAA sulfate shipped in interstate commerce after next April 16 will have to carry a warning on their labels. The chemicals also are known as 4-MMPD and 4-MMPD sulfate.

The label would state: "Warning — contains an ingredient that can penetrate your skin, and has been determined to cause cancer in laboratory animals."

Tests done for the National Cancer Institute showed the ingredients — a mainstay of the hair coloring industry for the past 60 years — cause skin and lymph cancer as well as thyroid tumors when fed to mice and rats.

"In addition the FDA has determined that 4-MMPD can be absorbed through the skin and into the blood stream," the agency said.

Clairol Inc., which dominates the domestic hair dye market with 75 percent of all sales, said it already has reformulated its products to remove the dye. A second major manufacturer, L'Oréal Inc., also has dropped the coloring agent.

The FDA said "a few manufacturers" continue to use the chemicals. The agency added that the chemicals are not found in temporary tints or rinses or semi-permanent hair dye products.

The FDA said it is investigating several other hair dye ingredients also tested by NCI, including 4-amino-2-nitrophenol, 2-nitrophenylendiamine, 4-chloro-2-nitrophenylendiamine, and toluene 2,4-diamine.

Bush paces Iowa poll

DES MOINES, Iowa (UPI) — Former CIA Director George Bush was the first choice for the Republican presidential nomination among some 1,450 state GOP activists attending a weekend fundraiser, a poll showed Monday.

However, the poll conducted by the Iowa Daily Press Association was clouded by charges of manipulation, and the fundraising event where the poll was conducted was shunned by the man many consider to be the GOP presidential frontrunner — former California Gov. Ronald Reagan.

Nine other Republican hopefuls attended the fundraiser though, tired by the Iowa premier caucuses on Jan. 21 that kick off the presidential nominating process.

The poll of 1,454 contributors attending the $50-a-person event showed Bush grabbed 36 percent of the vote.

Former Texas Gov. John Connally got 15 percent, Kansas Sen. Robert Dole had slightly less than 15 percent and Reagan followed with 11 percent. Senate Republican Leader Howard Baker polled 8 percent and Illinois Rep. Phil Crane had 5 percent.

Receiving only marginal support were Illinois Rep. John Anderson, California businessman Benjamin Fernandez, South Dakota Sen. Larry Pressler and veteran office-seeker Harold Stassen.

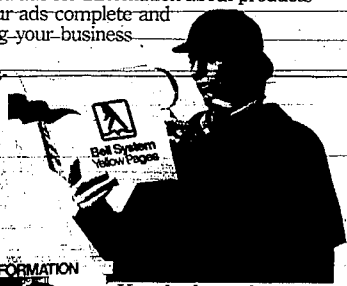

Some questioned the poll's significance in light of moves to influence its outcome.

A Des Moines Sunday register poll showed Reagan as the top pick of 30 percent of Iowa's Republican voters. Next were former President Gerald Ford with 23 percent, Baker with 16 percent and Connally with 7 percent. Bush drew marginal support.

Good government: choice is yours

Wanted: People interested in good government. Job description: Make decisions involving your own community. Low pay. Long hours. Subject to criticism.

Would you apply for such a job in your town? In four Magic Valley communities, not enough people did and come Nov. 6, elections in Murtaugh, Dietrich, Hansen and Eden will find blank spots on their municipal ballots. In another six communities, there will be no competition for elected jobs, although writers offer that opportunity.

The lack of candidates in municipal elections is not a new story. Unless a community happens to be going through the throes of a controversial issue at the time, elections historically draw few candidates.

Yet citizens want local control; more and more they point the accusing finger at Uncle Sam and complain about big government's heavy hand. But most complainers shirk local responsibility: Let somebody else do it, they say.

The trouble is, we don't sell the virtues of local government. We dwell on the negative. We don't give those who are elected enough credit for the job they do. We look for their faults instead of weighing their overall role and responsibility.

No doubt about it, being a public official is no bed of roses. Constituents want satisfaction, to have individual problems given priority and to have them resolved right now.

But if we give in to the attitude of indifference and avoid public office, what hope is there for the future of good local government?

There is immense satisfaction in seeing a community grow, in resolving problems, in setting a course for civic involvement and pride.

Cities and towns on the move are fostering that kind of attitude. Those dying on the vine show indifference and apathy.

In this country, we have freedom of choice. But unless we turn the corner on public office apathy, there will be no "choice" at all.

Now comes the tricky part...

Innuendo reporting

WASHINGTON — There ought to be a Pulitzer Prize for "innuendo reporting." Innuendo reporting is an offshoot of investigative reporting — the main difference being that the innuendo reporter has failed to get any facts to back up his story and therefore must resort to allegations that could or could not be true. We're seeing more and more of this kind of journalism in the newspapers and on television so the public believes it's easy to do. Wrong. Innuendo reporting is the toughest type of writing and requires a great deal of imagination.

Let me give you an example of what I mean.

Sources at the Justice Department revealed today they are investigating Halobird Gritts, Amy Carter's appointments secretary, for sniffing glue in the basement of FAO Schwarz toy store in New York City.

The sources said the case has been turned over to the FBI, which hopes to complete its investigation within the next six months.

The key witness is Miss Lalla Pigeon, former wife of punch rock singer Sydney Gravestock, who was sentenced to five years for the hatched murder of his cat Yo-Yo during a concert at Shea Stadium.

Miss Pigeon, who is hoping to start up her singing career again, said that she was in the Barbie Doll department of FAO Schwarz, which is located only three blocks from the barber shop where Albert Anastasia, the notorious mob leader, was gunned down while he was getting a shave.

She saw Gritts come in with three friends who apparently had been drinking wine with lunch at the Pierre Hotel, scene of one of the greatest safe deposit box robberies in the history of New York City.

She said Gritts came up to her and asked her to know where he could buy some airplane glue. She said she had a friend in the hobby department in the basement at Schwarz and would take him there.

On the way to the hobby department Gritts and his friends raucously played the pinball machines, and two of them tried on ski masks, a favorite play of stickup artists in the city's recent spate of bank robberies.

When they got to the hobby department, Gritts inquired of the clerk if he had any glue. The clerk asked if he wanted glue for model boats or model airplanes. Lalla said Gritts replied, "What's the difference?"

The clerk said it was in the small and he offered to let Gritts sniff the two kinds. Lalla, in a sworn statement, revealed that Gritts sniffed both the boat and airplane glue in her presence. Then he asked her if she wanted to go to Studio 54, whose owners are now being investigated for IRS violations.

Gritts denied, through the President's press secretary, that he had gone anywhere near the glue department and had only come into Schwarz to buy Amy a "Star Wars" game.

Gritts denied, through the President's press secretary, that he had gone anywhere near the glue department and had only come into Schwarz to buy Amy a "Star Wars" game.

In the meantime Lalla's lawyer said that she had changed her story and now maintains that she did not actually see Gritts sniff the glue. She said after Gritts bought the glue, he disappeared into the washroom with his friends, and when they came out they started dunking basketballs into the net set up in the sports department. The manager became enraged and asked them to leave.

The President's press secretary produced an affidavit from a clerk who said the only thing Gritts did while he was in FAO Schwarz was play with the electric trains.

If Gritts is convicted of sniffing glue he could face a maximum of 10 years in prison and a $50,000 fine.

Amy Carter refused to return this reporter's calls.

Events mobilize 'people power'

Overheard at Saturday's rim-to-rim race in the Snake River Canyon:

"You know, this is great; it's brought people together. We should have more events like this."

We agree. Communities should hold events that bring all kinds of people into a common meeting place to have fun, to talk, to spark new friendships.

Our finest resource is our people, but people have to interact to get things done. By getting together, we can tap into new and different ideas; we can discover talent that can be utilized for the enjoyment of the entire community. Sometimes people just need to be asked to lend their expertise to a project; all we have to do is find out who they are.

Community events open to all give us this opportunity. They also give us a chance to show our heritage and pride and to have some good old-fashioned fun.

Saturday's race was just that. Everyone had a good time and as a result, those who attended now know each other just a little bit better.

Teacher decline

© The Boston Globe Co. Washington Post Writer's Group BALTIMORE — The young woman stood up before the college audience and talked earnestly about her new job and her new class.

A June graduate, she was now a teacher. She was lucky and she knew it. Yet each day she carried a sheaf of self-defense papers and worksheets.

The women her age, you see, have been encouraged — to become astronauts and senators, corporate executives and assorted "firsts."

Though she had elected to go through the more traditional road, somehow she couldn't shake the feeling that she was "just" a teacher.

As a parent seated with her on the podium, I felt a wave of concern. There is no outsider more important to our children's lives than their teachers, no job that we weigh more heavily in accounting their futures.

We want our children to be taught by the best, the brightest, the most lively and sensitive. To us, there is no such thing as "just" a teacher.

And yet the decline in the status and stroking of society has gone to the innovators, how many others have felt left behind: "Just" a teacher, nurse, secretary, "nontenör." And yet the effect does that have on the choices that young people are making?

I know it isn't popular to talk about this, even in an era when everyone is worrying about teachers' "competency," but we are witnessing a young brain-drain from the old "women's jobs."

The young people planning to be teachers don't rank at high school as those who did. Dr. Timothy Weaver of Boston University studied this decline, and it's a substantial one. In 1971, the high school students planning to be education majors tested in the top one-third of all students on their English boards.

Six years later they were found in the bottom one-third.

On the graduate record exams taken by college seniors in the same time period, the scores of education majors dropped 18 points in verbal aptitude.

There are other reasons for this decline. The teaching job market isn't what it used to be. Neither are the salaries. In 1972, teaching salaries were about 25 percent above the national average. Now, says Weaver, they are just about on a par.

But 70 percent of the teachers in this country are women. Their test scores were typically higher than those of men, their salaries relatively higher than that of other women. Now the opportunities for young women are gone, and the decline in the test scores of women planning to teach is sharper.

Teaching isn't the only job or the best job for the ambitious and academically talented young woman today. As Weaver put it: "Women do have more opportunities. They are encouraged to feel they have more opportunities in higher-paying professions and that is reflected in the data."

It isn't just teaching that's been affected. In nursing, where there are many jobs, the scores have also declined. And in clerical work, employers continually mean to each other that, "We just can't find the same kind of young secretaries anymore."

But this isn't just a case of liberation chic. It isn't just the lure of the new, and the prestige of the different. The fact is that a rise in status for women is associated, for better and for worse, with entry into the male world. That's where the prestige has always been.

We have simply done a better job at luring some women into "men's" jobs than at raising the status of "women's" jobs.

The care-takers — those who are helpers, nurturers, teachers, mothers — are still associated, for better and for worse, with entry into the male world. That's where the prestige has always been.

We have simply done a better job at luring some women into "men's" jobs than at raising the status of "women's" jobs.

Now the job market competes for the brightest women as well as the brightest men. If the professions are right and we have a teacher shortage, not a surplus by the mid-1980s, we'll have to do some fancy status shifting.

Competency tests are nothing more than the last resort of despairing parents. There's no real secret to attracting and keeping the highest caliber applicants for any job. They need the rewards of independence, growth, initiative, respect, personal satisfaction and money. With these, one is a "Just."

Future of intensive care unit rests with citizens

Editor, Times-News: In your Sept. 23 issue, you had a story concerning the Newborn Intensive Care Unit. I would like to add a few comments based on my own experiences earlier this year.

On Dec. 31, 1978, a baby boy, Billy, was born to my wife and I at Cassia Memorial Hospital. Billy was from 6 to 8 weeks premature, and it soon became obvious that Billy's lungs were not fully developed. He was rushed to the Magic Valley Memorial Hospital's NICU. Thereafter, his life remained in limbo for several days.

On the 8th of January we received a telephone call from Dr. Wright (who has been taken over care of Billy). Billy had a heart defect and immediate corrective surgery was needed. Permission to send him to Salt Lake City was granted and he was taken by air ambulance that afternoon to Primary Children's Hospital. The surgery was performed the next day, and Billy spent a week at Primary Children's Hospital until he was stabilized.

Billy was returned to Magic Valley Memorial Hospital to finish recuperating. After another week, Billy was finally considered healthy enough to go home.

Throughout his stay at the hospital, there were a number of observations I was able to make, especially after being able to compare this unit at Magic Valley Memorial Hospital to that at Primary Children's Hospital.

First of all, if anything, the unit at MVMH is understaffed. It was not at all unusual to see two nurses caring for five or six babies, and one of those nurses had either worked a double shift, or was about to. Working double shifts appeared to be the norm here, whereas at Primary, there was one nurse for each infant.

Second, the competence and dedication of the MVMH unit is, I believe, above reproach. I am not qualified to make medical judgment, but I would challenge anyone to find them otherwise.

Third, the courtesy and compassion exhibited at MVMH is to be commended. My wife and I were extended every courtesy at the NICU, and for this I give my thanks.

The transportation to and from MVMH, and the operation, were coordinated by the March of Dimes and was shown during the March of Dimes Telethon on Channel 5 late last winter. Hopefully, the videotape will be shown on Channel 11 later this winter, courtesy of Rick Carroco.

After all we have been through, I can only say this: If the NICU at MVMH is either curtailed or closed by Mr. Burns, it will be a serious mistake, not only to the small helpless babies brought in, but to the Magic Valley at large. Anyone who thinks the NICU is overstaffed or unnecessary is either blind or a complete fool.

I am not saying Mr. Burns is a fool, but he has obviously blinded himself to those tiny bodies whose care is entrusted to the NICU. Money has been known to blind more than a few people and Mr. Burns' loyalty lies with his parent company, not the people of Magic Valley.

The County Commissioners have passed the buck to the hospital board, and from what I read about the recent meeting between the hospital board and members of the staff, I have no doubts as to how the hospital board would react to any closures.

The choice of life and death for these infants, children of your neighbors, is not a matter to be decided by a few people, but by the citizens of Magic Valley. Anyone else in a position of responsibility will turn a deaf ear.

Hopefully, you can see the film "A Day for Billy" on KMYT in the near future and see what Mr. Burns wants to throw away.

The old homestead is being taxed away

© Universal Press Syndicate WASHINGTON — Time is running out for Congress to correct one of the worst provisions ever written into tax law. This is known technically as "the carryover basis rule of estate taxation." It is utterly destructive of inheritance and will produce billions of dollars in windfall revenues for the federal government. That is not the main purpose of the rule. The main purpose is to transfer American family life by making it unbearably expensive to hand down property, such as a family farm or an antique table, from one generation to another.

Sen. Edward Kennedy of Massachusetts is the principal author of the carryover rule. The senator has an obsession with what he calls "tax expenditures." This bizarre perception rests in the proposition that the government has a claim upon our total personal income. When the government takes $2,000 in taxes from a person earning $15,000, the $2,000 is a tax receipt. But when the government lets this person deduct the interest on his home mortgage, the tax that otherwise would have been collected is a "tax expenditure." In the familiar word, the interest deduction is a "loophole."

Three years ago, when Congress was working on the Tax Reform Act of 1976, Mr. Kennedy set out to close "the tax loophole of death." By agreement reached in conference committee and not greatly noticed at the time, the act included a drastically modified carryover rule. When the impact of the change became more widely understood, a public outcry developed. Congress voted last year to delay the imposition of the rule until Jan. 1, 1980. We are "nearing the deadline" and Congress will be wanting for another month only.

To understand the consequences of the rule, consider the hypothetical case of a small farmer, John Apple, and his son William. John had inherited the land from his father, added on to the property and greatly improved it. At John's death in 1972, the farm has a value of $30,000. William has to sell a third of the land in order to pay estate taxes at the time. In 1975,

William decides to sell the remainder; meanwhile, its value has increased from $60,000 to $70,000. Under the old rule, William would have paid a capital gains tax on the $10,000, representing the increase only from the time of his inheritance to the time of sale.

Under the new rule, behold what happens. If our hypothetical John Apple should die next year, and the same chain of events should occur, his son William would pay no capital gains tax on the increase in value from the time John himself inherited the land, perhaps 30 years earlier. In a time of rapidly inflated property values, the effect would be virtual confiscation.

This example is oversimplified. The Kennedy carryover provision contains some complicated adjustments for appreciation prior to Jan. 1, 1977. For death taxes paid on such appreciation and so on. But the thrust and the purpose of the rule are clear. The new rule makes a drastic change in tax law and it will enormously complicate the distribution of property after death.

J. Kenneth Robinson, R-Va., is among more than 200 members of the House who have sponsored a bill to repeal the Kennedy carryover rule. "The biggest problems," he writes me, "will occur not for the wealthy but for the relatively modest estates seeking equal distribution among heirs. The new law is especially painful to those who inherit farm real estate because more often than not the price of farm land is based on scarcity of land and bears little relationship to its revenue-producing potential. However, since it applies to all inherited property, every inheritance is affected, and the rule will distort decisions on whether or not families will keep or sell family possessions.

The Carter administration is opposing every effort at suspension or repeal, though the Treasury some months ago indicated a willingness to consider technical changes that would soften the impact of the carryover rule. Unless the Ways and Means Committee can be goaded into action, Mr. Kennedy's loophole will close in January — and it will close around the necks of our children.

Three Americans win Nobel prizes

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (UPI) — Two Americans and a Pakistani in search of the "Holy Grail" of physics Monday won the 1979 Nobel Prize for research on the underlying principle of the universe.

The chemistry prize went to an American and a West German for work that can help fight world starvation.

The physics prize went to Harvard professors Steven Weinberg and Sheldon L. Glashow, both 46 and from New York, and to Abdus Salam, 53, of Pakistan, for their work in trying to discover a unified field theory — the principle that could lead to an explanation of the creation of the universe.

Ever since Einstein, physicists have been trying to find a unified field theory, which has become known as the "Holy Grail" in the field.

Herbert C. Brown, 57, a London-born naturalized American from Purdue University in West Lafayette, Ind., and West German Georg Wittig, 82, won the chemistry prize.

"I think it's absolutely fantastic," said Glashow upon learning he would share the physics prize, which like the chemistry award carries a value this year of $93,000. Weinberg was shaving when he got the news. "It's a nice way to start the week," he said.

Salam, the first Pakistani to win the Nobel physics prize, said he was "absolutely delighted, thrilled and overwhelmed" and had "the greatest gratitude to Allah."

Salam is professor in theoretical physics at the Imperial College of Sciences and Technology in London and director of the International Center for Theoretical Physics in Trieste, Italy.

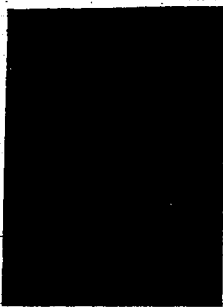

Weinberg said in an interview that "the theories that are involved here are the basic forces of nature and their interaction between elementary particles."

He said their work involved the bringing together of the weak and strong nuclear forces, which resulted in a theory of a "new kind of weak force that had never been known before."

Bengt Nagel, a member of the Nobel committee, said of the trio's work, "There is no immediate practical application of this theory. But it can open up possibilities in the future for energy."

Glashow has been on the Harvard faculty since 1966 and became a professor of physics in 1967. Weinberg, a graduate of Cornell University, has been a Harvard physicist since 1972.

Weinberg and Glashow are the 39th

DR. HERBERT BROWN
...key to insect control and 40th Americans to win the Nobel Prize in physics. Brown is the 21st American to win the chemistry award.

Nobel committee member Salo Granowitz said the work of the chemistry winners in organic synthesis was especially valuable in the development of insect control substances.

Chemists, as a result, were able to produce substances identical to those made by insects themselves, and use them as a lure to confine them before killing them by mechanical means instead of with chemicals such as DDT.

Granowitz said the "discovery has enormous importance for the common man because it would lead to improved and larger crops, and less starvation in the world."

Brown, an oil company consultant as well as a chemistry professor, said Monday, "It's nice to have received recognition of one's life work. I'm certainly very happy."

In Heidelberg, Wittig said he was "completely surprised." He said, "At my age, you don't expect honors or awards anymore."

Wittig was born in Berlin and is professor emeritus of organic chemistry at the University of Heidelberg. Brown, who received his doctorate from Chicago University in 1936, is especially known for his work with boron, from which he created borohydride.

Kids and the VD spectre

© The Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I just read the letter from the 14-year-old boy who was afraid he had VD and didn't want to tell his parents, and I just had to write.

I am a 15-year-old girl who had a similar experience. I thought I had VD. I cried for days. Finally, I decided the only thing I could do was to tell my mother. Abby, that was the hardest thing I ever had to do. When I told her we both cried, but she said she had to—some pretty cruel words were exchanged among the three of us.

The next seven days were the toughest I've ever experienced, but it also proved how much my parents really loved me. They stood by me the whole time. When we finally got the doctor's report, we were relieved to learn that it wasn't VD—it was another kind of infection.

My friends thought I was crazy for telling my mother, but it was the best decision I ever made—it really brought us closer together, and we got to understand each other better.

Abby, please keep encouraging kids to take their heavy problems to their parents. It's not always the easiest way, but it's the smartest. Thanks for letting me have my say. I believe you really do care.

BEEN THROUGH A LOT DEAR ABBY: Thanks for the testimonial. Read on for a letter from a girl who wasn't as lucky as you:

DEAR ABBY: Thank you for that letter in your column warning kids about VD. I wish I had seen something like that when I was 14.

I am a 16-year-old girl who just underwent a very painful and serious operation as a result of gonorrhea.

I had to have a hysterectomy. Abby, I don't "sleep around"—I have only one boyfriend.

I also have a surgically-sewn mesh scar down my stomach. The worst part is knowing that I will never in my life be able to bear my own children.

Not many kids realize how serious VD can be. Please inform your readers of this. And if you print my letter, please don't use my name. Thank you.

PAID A HIGH PRICE

DEAR ABBY: The 57-year-old wife of the impotent 61-year-old "spiffy dresser, great dancer, and big spender" has a lot to learn. (She can't understand why "the other woman in his life" finds him so attractive.)

There are literally thousands of women who would be overjoyed to have such a companion. ESPECIALLY if he can't do anything in bed! What a pleasure it would be to have a man take me out and show me a good time, and not wrestle me to the floor when the evening is over!

Another thing the poor wife doesn't seem to know is that many a man who is impotent at home is a powerhouse with women other than his wife.

Name designers enter children's market

NEW YORK (UPI)—Fall fashions for schoolgirls reflect four themes: classic, country, disco and the same big name designers who make mothers' clothing.

A trade publication, Earnshaw's Review, says, "Country-western looks are stronger than ever and sport a new sophistication as well. Overalls, bifurcated jumpers, western shirts, western fabrics like denim and calico are reflected in this facet of fall." The sophistication stems from such features as lurex plaids and designer signature apparel. Among the designers now in the children's wear market are Givenchy, Anne Klein, Ralph Lauren, Pierre Cardin and Charlotte Ford.

Free screening clinic Oct. 18

TWIN FALLS — The Region V Adult/Child Development Center will offer a free screening clinic for children ages 1 through 6 on Oct. 18 at the Adult/Child Development Center, 803 Harrison St.

The purpose of the screening is to identify those children who may have delays in physical development, language, speech, motor and self-help skills. Vision and hearing will also be tested where possible. Parents of children showing delays in any of the areas tested will be referred to appropriate sources for professional help.

Parents who suspect their children may be delayed in one or more of the areas to be tested are urged to participate in this special screening as treatment is usually far more effective when problems are identified at an early age.

Screening will be by appointment only and parents must call the Center at 734-4000, ext. 200 from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily for an appointment time.

Inflation, tight credit chase investors; Dow average skids

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Dow Jones industrial average skidded for the sixth straight session Monday as stockholders continued to flee the market because of inflation pressures and the Federal Reserve's tight credit policies.

Trading was fairly active, but did not measure up to last week's performance in which a record 253 million shares changed hands and gave the New York Stock Exchange an unprecedented daily average of 50 million shares.

The Dow average, down more than 11 points in the last 90 minutes of trading, recovered a bit at the end to finish with a loss of 7.93 points to 831.06. That brought its six-day total slide to 66.55 points, one of the worst performances in its history. The closely watched average, which shed 58.62 points overall last week, fell 5.63 Friday.

The NYSE index surrendered 0.69 to 58.60 and the price of a share dropped 36 cents. Declines, continuing last week's trend, routed advances, 1,223 to 233, among the 1,894 issues traded at 4 p.m. EDT.

One reason for investor reluctance, in addition to Fed policy, was the Petroleum Intelligence Weekly's report that Libya and Iran had raised oil prices above the $23.50-a-barrel ceiling established by OPEC last summer, setting the stage for more inflation.

percent. Business inventories increased 0.8 percent.

Meanwhile, the dollar rose sharply in Japan and was higher in Europe. Gold also was higher.

But Fed Chairman Paul Volcker, who said he wasn't certain the nation has entered a recession yet, defended his credit-tightening program before the Senate Banking Committee and said it would remain in effect indefinitely.

Volcker, who opposed discussions of a tax cut at this time, said the tight-credit medicine would reduce inflation and interest rates faster than a less restrictive policy.

Various reports made it difficult to get a clear picture of the economy. Early October car sales fell sharply. But, in a report late Friday, the government said September retail sales rose a strong 2.2 percent and August business sales advanced 1.4

Composite volume of NYSE issues traded on all U.S. exchanges and over the counter at 4 p.m. totaled 36,954,040 shares, compared with 36,694,520 traded Friday.

The American Stock Exchange index, which lost a record 22.94 points last week, shed 3.67 to 208.14 and the price of a share gave up 27 cents.

Rising gas prices to affect Idaho

BOISE (UPI) — Idahoans will not be exempt from rising Canadian natural gas prices, at least not in the near future, state Office of Energy Director Robert Lenaghan said after a meeting with Canadian energy officials last week.

Lenaghan and Oregon Public Utilities Commissioner John Lobdell met with energy officials in Vancouver, British Columbia, and Edmonton, Alberta, to discuss the possible variable pricing policy for Northwest consumers.

But the Canadian officials said they could not change rate increases that already were scheduled. Canadian natural gas will increase from $2.80 per thousand cubic feet to $2.45 Nov. 3.

Following a briefing with Lenaghan, Gov. John V. Evans said he is still "somewhat optimistic" that Canadian natural gas prices will level off.

"There doesn't appear to be any way Idaho can get a premium rate for Canadian gas at this time," Evans said.

basic energy source. Officials say large amounts of money would have to be spent to build more electric-generating facilities, accompanied by electricity rate increases.

"However, as a result of last week's meetings, I feel the Canadian officials have a better understanding of their burgeoning marketing problems in Idaho and we plan to work closely with them on marketing surveys and other mutual problems which I hope will preclude any more sudden and dramatic increases."

Utility officials fear rising natural gas prices may force consumers to turn to tight electric supplies as a

"The problem right now is that the prime ministers of the two Canadian provinces are faced with great public pressure to at least meet the price set recently by Mexico refineries — $3.62 per thousand cubic feet," Evans said.

That helped to keep NYSE volume down to 34,850,000 shares from the 36,390,000 traded Friday.

Housing leaders said the Fed's decision to tighten credit, require banks to keep more cash on hand and

Fed actions right course to Idahoans

BOISE (UPI) — Idaho businessmen and economists say the Federal Reserve Board's recent action to restrict the growth of credit and the money supply and free interest rates will slow the country's frantic borrowing pace.

Trus-Joist Corp. President Walter Minnick said with inflation running at a 13 percent annual rate, Canadian consumers find it cheaper to borrow now and pay later with inflated money.

Minnick said interest rates should be a percentage point or two above the inflation rate and the board's action should restore that balance.

The board's action was "inevitable," Minnick said. "It should have happened six months ago or maybe 12 months ago."

Interest rates are expected to continue rising, at least into next year. Some business expansion borrowing and other kinds of borrowing will be curtailed.

But Boise State University economist John Mitchell said Idaho and the Northwest should brave the economic storm reasonably well in the next few months. Mitchell said the region is growing, oil and gas production is accelerating and agriculture also is experiencing a furry good year.

But Boise State University economist John Mitchell said Idaho and the Northwest should brave the economic storm reasonably well in the next few months. Mitchell said the region is growing, oil and gas production is accelerating and agriculture also is experiencing a furry good year.

U.S. District Judge Thomas R. McMillen, who is overseeing the operation of the bankrupt railroad, approved the application at the request of Milwaukee Road officials.

The money was authorized in a bill, passed and signed into law late Friday, designed to keep the Milwaukee Road running through Nov. 30. Sen. Warren D. Magnuson, D-Wash., sponsored the bill.

McMillen last month ruled the Milwaukee Road will be out of cash by Nov. 1 and granted permission for railroad officials to abandon service on about two-thirds of its 10,000 miles of track.

That action would end Milwaukee Road main-line service through Montana, Idaho and Washington and would cut feeder and secondary lines in several other states, including South Dakota, Iowa, Minnesota and Wisconsin.

The Milwaukee Road is conducting negotiations with other lines to buy some of the abandoned right of way and the Interstate Commerce Commission could direct other railroads to provide service on track which otherwise would be abandoned entirely.

We've got a run going!

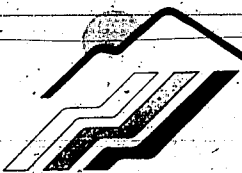

One year ago this month, Dr. Jack McNeese walked into the Times-News with the idea of a "Rim to Rim Run". Twin Falls could provide runners from all over the region a spectacular scenic course unparalleled in natural beauty.

One month later, through the efforts of Jack, Newton's Sport Center and the Times-News, Jack's dream became reality. Over 200 runners assembled in the First Annual Rim to Rim Run.

This year more organizations teamed up to make the rim to Rim an even greater success.

Successful community projects require the dedication of concerned individuals and organizations. The Times-News is proud to be an active part of making Magic Valley an even better place to live. In this spirit we invite public service minded groups to team up with a winner. Make the Times-News a part of your coming events. We're planning our 1980 community calendar now, so let us know early if we may help you with your projects.

We make things happen. Make it happen for you.

No council action on land plan, irrigation

By MARTY TRILLHAUSE
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls City Council Monday delayed enacting its proposed comprehensive plan, which has been undergoing revision since July.

The council also approved a contract with the city's firefighters and again put off any action regarding the proposed abandonment of its 15-district irrigation system.

As revised by the council, the comprehensive plan designates more land for commercial and industrial use. Specifically the revised plan calls for more commercial designated land along Addison Avenue East, across from K-Mart. It also provides for westward expansion of industrial land along South Park Avenue.

A series of floating zones designed for future commercial planned unit developments in residential zones had also been included.

Although the council had previously called for a floating residential zone in the industrial area, that zone was eliminated.

But several questions remained, including what effect the plan would have on industrial property contained within residential zones under the city's proposed area of impact.

Community Development Director LaMar Orton said the plan would take precedence over current zoning laws. That was apparently news to some council members.

"To me, this is a plan, something we would work [on]," Councilman Bud Cheney said. "I can't see us taking it as gospel."

Noting the plan can be amended only every six months, City Attorney Charles Brumbaugh recommended delaying action.

The council approved its 1979-1980 contract with the Twin Falls Fire Fighters Association.

Although five department payroll positions were eliminated due to budget restraints, firefighters felt the city was fair with them, union spokesman Larry Webb said. "They did the best they could for us this year," he said.

Although several irrigation system water users attended the council session, no action was taken on a measure, which would set in motion city abandonment of the system.

Rain relief Dampens tinder-dry forest land

By United Press International

While Idaho's first general fall storm reduced the fire danger in the state's forests, U.S. Forest Service officials said more rain and snow were needed to put one of the Gem State's worst fire seasons behind.

"It doesn't break the back of the drought for us, but it will weaken it," said Dale Dufour, information officer for the Boise National Forest.

Dufour said officials were hopeful that "it puts the fire season behind us."

"The fire people are smiling this morning," Norm Hesseladahl, Coeur d'Alene information officer for the Panhandle National Forest, said.

"We won't think we're over the hump," Hesseladahl said. "One hot day could wipe us out. We're kind of hoping now we can get a real soaker — that's what we really need."

A National Weather Service spokesman in Boise said the moisture from a frontal system that moved into Idaho Sunday night "helps immensely, but it's really not enough" to alleviate the fire danger.

The weather spokesman said additional moisture was needed to end any fire threat. He said the storm was general throughout Idaho, with rainfall ranging up to three-quarters of an inch.

The spokesman said, however, the storm just wet the surface and the extended forecast was calling for a drying trend later in the week. He said what was really needed was an average of a half-inch of moisture throughout the state's forests to put the fire season in the past.

He said the rain was accompanied by some snow at higher elevations. The freezing level was 9,000 feet and snow fell above 8,000 feet near the top of 10,000 feet of snow were reported at some higher elevations.

The storm prompted forest officials to begin reducing firefighting personnel, but Clyde Barthol, Intermountain U.S. Forest Service regional information officer at Ogden, Utah, said a ready force of smokejumpers and retardant planes were being maintained at the Boise Interagency Fire Center.

He said 30 smokejumpers were standing by at the Boise center to launch an initial attack if there was a new fire outbreak.

Autopsy ordered in death

JEROME — Autopsy results are due today on a Jerome woman who died over the weekend after being found unconscious in her burning home.

Twin Falls County Coroner Cloyce Edwards said Vera Martinez, 44, 232 Glacier Drive, died at 7 p.m. Sunday at Magic Valley Memorial Hospital without regaining consciousness.

Jerome firemen say they found her alone in the house shortly after arriving about 9:15 p.m. Saturday. She was dressed in street clothes and lying on the bedroom floor. She was not burned, according to fire officials.

The fire, which started in the living room, could have been caused by arson, Jerome Fire Chief Lynn Bingham said Monday. However, Bingham said the cause will not be confirmed until Jerome police and state arson inspector Don Kelly complete their investigation.

The coroner said a blood test shows Martinez had a large amount of carbon monoxide gas in her blood stream when she died and that she had been drinking.

Edwards said he ordered the autopsy because initial tests do not explain why Martinez was unconscious in the burning home.

Officials said Martinez' husband, Joe, and their two children were not home when the fire started.

Burley PD commander post filled

BURLEY — Lt. C.K. Harkness has accepted the temporary appointment as patrol division commander of the Burley Police Department.

Harkness replaces Gary Smith, fired Oct. 4 by Police Chief Larry Broadbent.

The new division commander is the brother of Kirby Harkness, demoted by the chief from major to sergeant Oct. 10.

In a related personnel matter, the police chief temporarily transferred Cpl. Dan Thornton from the patrol division to the detective division to assume the formal responsibilities of C.K. Harkness. Thornton had been a detective before the 1 percent initiative required he be transferred to patrol.

Burley City Council Monday night was expected to approve Broadbent's appointment of four new dispatchers: Cheryl Brown, Jeanne Bronson, Vicki Lynn Kindig, and Marlene Metcalf. Broadbent said the women underwent written exams and oral interviews. After being sworn in today, the new dispatchers will receive more than 100 hours of extensive training.

get then a young lawyer out of school."

It took nearly two months for Gary Whitwell, of Rangen Inc., to hire a qualified secretary. Few of his applicants could take shorthand, many made two to three spelling mistakes in their applications, many could only type 40 wpm when 60 wpm required and others came to interviews in jeans and an old shirt.

Other local businesses, however, say they have no problems hiring qualified persons. Green Giant, also in Buhl, had a secretarial opening and personnel manager Dick Huberty said he had no trouble getting qualified applicants. The pay started at $3.49 an hour, Idaho Frozen Foods, which employs eight to 10 clerical positions, including some with secretarial work, has had no problems either, according to Royce Williams, director of labor relations.

Good 'Gal Fridays' no longer a dime a dozen

By STEPHANIE SCHOROW
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Folkllore says that behind every successful man stands a woman. Modern logic says that behind every successful business sits a secretary.

"Without a couple of good secretaries, a law firm can't function at all," says Monte Carlson, partner in a Twin Falls law firm.

"A secretary knows what goes on in the business more than anyone in the business," said Gary Whitwell, credit manager for Rangen Inc., Buhl.

"A good secretary can make or break a new business," said Mary Taylor, owner/manager of Rem-A-Secretary, 507 Main Ave. W.

The demand for executive secretaries — the "gal Friday" who can type, take dictation and handle management responsibilities — continues to increase and employers in big cities are struggling to hire enough. Many women are no longer content to be the woman behind the man, or the secretary taking dictation; they plan to do the dictating instead.

Growing career opportunities for women and the low wages generally paid to secretaries are leading many women away from secretarial work. Besides, the job title offers little prestige. As Taylor, a former secretary, put it, "No way 'd go back to being just a secretary."

So added to the list of big city woes, like the gasoline shortage, is another: the secretary shortage.

In this area, it's easy to find women just out of high school with three credits in typing, some local businessmen say, but it's getting difficult to find a woman who can type quickly and accurately and run the office when the boss is away.

Many Twin Falls women possessing clerical skills, who might have sought out secretarial positions five to 10 years ago, are now opting for jobs in marketing, real estate or sales, according to Virginia Bancroft, owner/manager of New Horizons Personnel Service, 409 Shoshone St. S., and branch manager of Manpower Temporary Service. "Young women in college and high school are saying, 'I don't want to go into secretarial work. I can go into marketing and merchandising and get a better starting salary.'"

According to the Idaho Department of Employment, the Twin Falls area is not suffering from such a shortage. Craig Hobbey, labor market analyst, reports that there are "plenty of people aspiring to be secretaries," although he added that the secretarial wages in the area are "awfully low." Last year the department listed 700 openings for clerical, secretarial and typing positions, and Hobbey estimated there were 1,500 openings in Magic Valley last year.

Barbara MacNeil, past president of the National Secretaries Association, Twin-Ida Chapter, estimates there are at least 2,300 secretaries in the Twin Falls area.

"However, local business are complaining not about a lack of people who can answer phones, but a lack of executive secretaries or assistants, a sort of 'aide de camp' who can assume responsibility without supervision and make decisions on her own.

Law offices, with their demand for skilled legal secretaries, have particular problems hiring qualified women. Carlson, partner in Wall, Burton, Carlson Pedersen and Paine, noted that if he ran an ad for a legal secretary, he might get "one or two nibbles" from qualified women, but if he ran an ad for a young lawyer he "would be swamped" with applicants.

Then it careened across the road to the west side borrow pit, clipping a power pole, knocking down a chain link fence, and striking a tree. Skidding across the lawn of the Jake Kraus residence, the vehicle damaged a wrought iron fence on the front porch and struck the southeast corner of the garage.

Guillermo was cited for driving while under the influence of alcohol. He was uninjured.

Woman falls from canyon bridge

BONNERS FERRY, Idaho (UPI) — A long-time Sandpoint resident and mother of four died from her death from the Moyle Canyon Bridge east of Bonners Ferry Saturday. Witnesses said Patricia Dawson, 39, reportedly walked to the middle of the bridge at about 5 p.m., left her purse on the bridge, climbed over the railing and fell about 495 feet to three feet of water. Friends and relatives reported Mrs. Dawson had been depressed for several days.

Child dies, murder count filed

RENO (UPI) — In what may be the first such case in Nevada, a murder charge was filed against a Reno man today after doctors allowed the 5-year-old victim to die Sunday.

Steve Fogarty, 25, Reno, was arraigned in justice court on the open murder charge stemming from the child abuse death of Yancy Reid. He was arrested on felony child abuse charges last week after paramedics found the girl in the bathroom of the South Reno residence he shared with the girl's mother. She was taken to Washoe Medical Center with critical head injuries. Doctors said she was being kept alive by machines and three different physicians certified Sunday that she had suffered brain death. They said the child showed no brain wave activity or reflexes for three full days before the machines keeping her alive were unplugged.

Lakalt said felony child abuse charges against Fogarty were changed to open murder this morning and Fogarty's bail raised to $150,000.

FBI probing Indian's death

FORT HALL, Idaho (UPI) — Law enforcement officials said today they were probing the results of an autopsy to determine the cause of death of a 28-year-old Oregon man on the Fort Hall Indian Reservation near Blackfoot. They said he may have been clubbed to death. The body of Ronnie Toman, an Indian from an Oregon reservation, was found dead Saturday.

Alert for light plane overdue

BOISE (UPI) — The Idaho Aeronautics Division Monday issued an alert for a light plane declared missing when it did not arrive in Boise on a flight from Boise to Mont. Worthie Rauscher, aeronautics division chief, said the small aircraft was piloted by Bozeman resident J.H. Schmitt, who filed a flight plan when departing Bozeman at 6 a.m. That plan routed the plane to Emmet, Mont., then on to Idaho Falls with a final destination in Boise, Rauscher said. "It failed to arrive here in Boise at 8:30 this morning so we'd like anyone who heard or saw an aircraft in this time frame and along this route, to please call our office in Boise," Rauscher said. Rauscher would not release a description of the craft, saying he would prefer that individuals who believed they saw the plane call the aeronautics division and describe it.

Neither Jay E. Bailey, special agent in charge of the FBI's Butte, Mont. division, nor FBI agent George Calley, Boise, would comment on the matter, stating only that the incident is under investigation.

Johnny Sack Cabin to be saved

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. Forest Service has agreed to save the historic Johnny Sack Cabin in the Island Park area of eastern Idaho, U.S. Sen. James McClure said today.

The cabin, which has been placed on the National Register of Historic Places, is located adjacent to Big Springs, the headwater of the North Fork of the Snake River.

"The Johnny Sack Cabin will, Forest Service officials testified, be preserved and opened for public use in conjunction with their plans to restore the entire Big Springs area to near-natural state," McClure said.

Bomb threat closes Simplot plant

CALDWELL (UPI) — The FBI is investigating a bomb threat at the J.R. Simplot Co.'s food-processing plant in Caldwell which resulted in the closure of the facility from midnight Wednesday until Monday morning.

The bomb threat was sent through the mail and would have demanded $500,000 in exchange for information on how to disarm the bombs which the written threat claimed had been placed in the plant, the Press-Tribune Newspapers reported Monday.

But in a statement released Monday, Simplot spokesman William T. Maxwell said the company received Wednesday a written message stating "bombs had been placed at the company's food processing plant in Caldwell" and the bombs would be rendered harmless only after the company agreed to pay a substantial sum of money.

Maxwell said company officials decided to close the plant to search for the alleged bombs and to turnover to local and federal authorities the task of locating the extortionists.

"Because of the intensity" of the searches of the plant by Simplot officials, bomb experts and a team of bomb-detecting dogs, Maxwell said, "It is felt with absolute certainty there is no danger to plant workers and that the bombs never did exist."

Water safe to drink

BOISE (UPI) — Bruneau residents no longer will have to boil their water, the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare said today.

The agency's Division of Environment said recent water samples from the Bruneau water system indicate there no longer is any coliform bacteria in the water system.

Few people associate the runny noses and watery eyes of hay fever victims with spinal misalignment, yet there is often a close relationship. When spinal segments become misaligned and the nerves that go to the nose, sinuses, throat and lungs are pinched, they cannot function with full efficiency. Such impairment of nerve efficiency diminishes the ability of the respiratory system to resist infection. When the air is full of pollen, hay fever is the result. Chiropractic treatment has no universal cure but, in many cases, a chiropractic adjustment can correct the spinal misalignment that has resulted in hay fever. Phone for an appointment.

A shortage of good secretaries

Helen Young, Idaho personnel manager for Mountain Bell, said the company has not had difficulty hiring qualified clerical workers, but it took longer to find persons qualified for executive secretaries. "It isn't as easy as it used to be (to hire secretaries). But it's not difficult enough to call it a problem," she said.

All companies and secretaries contacted by the newspaper said that secretarial wages were especially low in this area. Secretarial wages run from $250 to $1,000 a month, MacNeill, now owner of the local Snelling and Snelling Employment Agency, formerly of Boise, 1033 Shoshone St. N., said most secretaries start at $520 to $550 a month, with $400 a "good wage" for the area. Carlson said legal secretaries make $750 to $800 a month to start and speculated the top legal secretaries in Twin Falls make more than $1,000 a month.

Young said clerical workers for Mountain Bell salaries range from $670 to $1,280 a month. Executive secretaries in this area could make as much as $1,320 a month.

Bonnie Ewing, president of the National Secretaries Association, Twin-Falls Chapter, said she often hears local secretaries express frustration at how they are required to make career decisions but do not receive executive wages. "The wages are not commensurate with what they expect out of you," she said.

MacNeill, a secretary who went on to own her own business, feels an executive secretary is more than a typist and should be treated as such. "To me a professional secretary knows how to walk, talk, sit, dress and answer the phone," she said. "She's the public relations person for the company."

In other cities, where the secretary shortage is more acute, secretary wages are increasing. Pacific Telephone, California's largest private employer, for example, starts its secretaries at $16,400 a year and some executive secretaries can earn between $22,000 and $28,000.

Thus, some secretaries say, there's a drain of qualified secretaries in this area to slick cities like Salt Lake, where the wages are higher. But Hobbey noted that many Twin Falls secretaries tend to be women who get one job and stick with it until they retire. Competent ones are rewarded with higher wages by companies trying to keep them. "If you are with a good company in the area, the pay is not low," MacNeill said.

Other careers are attracting would-be secretaries, MacNeill said, "to become a secretary is a last resort. Most people say 'I don't want to be a secretary and sit at a desk all day.'"

Affirmative action programs have also driven women out of their desks and into jobs that have normally gone to men. "Farm girls who used to be secretaries now want to climb telephone poles," Bancorrell said. Real estate is another driving force, as Mary Taylor, former secretary and now a real estate agent, found.

Yet MacNeill feels executive secretarial work can be a stepping stone to a management position. She contends her 15 years of work as an executive secretary led her into her present management position. In which she supervises a staff of secretaries and finds it hard to hire qualified new ones. Whitwell also feels women looking for a career without a college degree can use a secretarial job to get ahead, although "she has to work twice as hard as a man."

Yet even as bosses begin to recognize the importance of the good secretary, others may show a "they're a dime a dozen" attitude, as Taylor called it. If a secretary job is a good stepping stone into management, why aren't more men secretaries? Although men are showing more interest in becoming secretaries they represent only about 1 percent of the total nationally and nearly zero in this area.

Whitwell replied that "if a man wanted to be a secretary, his superior would ask, 'Who does a man want to be a secretary. Doesn't he have any initiative, any drive?'" So although a woman secretary may be more knowledgeable about the company's business than anyone in the company, to the top brass, she may still be "just a secretary."

"Even if laws change, ideas do not," Whitwell added.

In other cities, however, the secretary shortage has started to change the idea that secretaries are a dime a dozen. They cost $22,000 a year.

A pair of Ketchum bodybuilders are proof that drugs aren't required to develop a physique which wins medals

Patrick Sullivan/Times-News

Ketchum bodybuilder and policeman Jerry Engelbert was recently named 'Mr. America Natural' for those over 40

BIG winners in a natural way

By GARY ELLIASEN
Times-News sports editor

KETCHUM — Jerry Engelbert speaks softly, but packs a mighty pair of biceps. Those biceps, along with the rest of his powerful physique, have made him the new "Mr. America Natural" for men over 40.

The 43-year-old Ketchum bodybuilder also placed third in the open division of the recent national contest at Los Angeles. His training partner, Mike Coolidge, who was runnerup to "Mr. Idaho" last spring, captured fifth.

Unlike the "Mr. America" contest which allows the bodybuilders to take steroids, "Mr. America Natural" bans any use of the drug to muscle up the body. "We all took a blood test prior to the competition," said Engelbert who has never relied on the synthetic hormone in his two years of active bodybuilding competition. "This contest is held to recognize those who don't use the drug."

For Engelbert, it was his first national honor after a string of state awards. Two years ago, he was named "Mr. Idaho" and just last spring was acclaimed "Greater Mr. Idaho."

It also was the first time a bodybuilding competitor from Idaho has won the national title.

A Ketchum policeman, Engelbert talks quietly about his accomplishment. "It's made all of our training worthwhile," he said. "Now all I want to do is take a few weeks off from lifting and do some fishing."

His body is proof that "you don't need drugs" to get somewhere in the world of bodybuilding. Its development has come from months of strenuous, six-day a week exercise routines at The Clubhouse, just off Ketchum's main street.

The two bodybuilders spend about two hours a day doing exercises designed to build a "symmetrical body," one that is perfectly built from head to toe. Both started training for the contest back in November of last year.

"Mike and I push each other," said the new title-holder. "If I'm having a bad day, then it helps me to have him urging me on."

Though training buddies, each has concentrated on different parts of his body during their workouts. The results have begun to pay off.

Engelbert uses to be known for his sleek, powerful legs, but lately his upper body has developed strength and form. On the other hand, Coolidge's chest was getting him judges' kudos, but his slender legs were a drawback.

Both got into bodybuilding after competing in powerlift contests throughout the state.

A former Twin Falls resident and Jerome policeman, Engelbert began lifting about 15 years ago. Two years ago, he switched to bodybuilding.

"I just wanted a change," said Engelbert. "I had been powerlifting for about 15 years and just decided this would be something different."

To Coolidge, a former football player at Cal State-Fullerton, bodybuilding is an art form.

"You're out there on the stage, and though it gets a little lonely at times, you're displaying the best features of your physique. It sometimes brings on butterflies, but it's satisfying," he said.

Building even more pride in the local competitors at Los Angeles was the quality of the judges. Every one of them was a former Mr. America or Mr. Universe.

"We were down there competing against some of the best around," said Coolidge. "And though we were from Idaho, I think I may have worked to our advantage because not many expect us to have top bodybuilders."

The judges grade each contestant during a series of appearances on stage. Body symmetry is uppermost in the judges' minds.

"The judges are not looking for someone who has a powerful chest or arms," Engelbert pointed out, "but rather someone whose body is proportional from chest to legs."

"That's why it can be the most difficult sport there is from a training standpoint," he said.

Coolidge added that in displaying your body before the panel of judges, one "learns to show what the judge wants to see."

"If you have less strength in your arms, then you concentrate on the moves that will show your strong points — the chest, etc.," Coolidge said.

Being center stage, Coolidge said, is a learning experience itself.

"You learn a lot about yourself," he said. "When the time comes, you go out and put everything on line."

Though thrilled by their national status, Engelbert and Coolidge haven't let it affect their lifestyle.

"I'm still just a Ketchum policeman," Engelbert laughed. Coolidge works at Anderson Lumber. Their accomplishment, though, has brought them repeated "congratulations" in The Clubhouse from friends and a circle of young admirers as they work out.

In the future, both are considering turning professional. "When I get back to training, I'm going to give it some thought," Engelbert said. "I'll see what I look like."

For Coolidge, the money and glamour of a pro career may come after improvements in muscle tone and display.

But for right now, both are savoring their most recent accomplishments — Engelbert "Mr. America Natural" and Coolidge an impressive showing.

Mike Coolidge, training partner of Engelbert, put in months of exercising before contest

Pirates, Orioles to resume World Series

BALTIMORE (UPI) — The Baltimore Orioles, having trouble whittling down the heavy lumber of the Pittsburgh Pirates — learned Monday they may have to get the rest of the World Series without their ace reliever, Don Stanhouse.

Still needing one victory to win their first world championship since 1970, the Orioles will send right-hander Jim Palmer to the mound against Pittsburgh's John Candelaria tonight when the Series resumes with game six.

Clear skies with temperatures in the high 40s were forecast for the 6:30 p.m. MDT start. The game can be seen on KTVX, Channel 4.

Without Stanhouse, however, the Orioles would be at a distinct disadvantage.

Stanhouse is suffering from a pulled muscle in his lower back and his status will be determined after a visit to a doctor Monday and today. The 27-year-old right-hander was hit hard for the second time in the Series Sunday during the Pirates' 7-1 victory and has given up five hits and three runs in two innings.

"It really hurts now and it might be advisable not to go out there," said Stanhouse, who first felt the injury the last week of the season. "It hurts to a point now where I can't rotate my hips when I pitch. When something hurts bad enough that it's detrimental to the ball club, then it's time to get out."

"I'm usually not one to complain, but I'm unable to turn on the mound. I don't want to hurt the club, but I don't want to ruin my career."

Although the Pirates have handled Stanhouse well, he is still the man manager Earl Weaver turns to most often in crucial situations and it would leave a big gap in the bullpen.

So far, the Orioles' pitchers have had little success in keeping the Pirates off base. Through the first five games, the Pirates have a team batting average of .339 and have four players — Phil Garner, Bill Madlock, Dave Parker and Willie Stargell — with eight or more hits.

"As far as I'm concerned they're all good hitters," said Palmer.

"Everyone talks about Parker and Stargell, but they've got Madlock in there, too. He's won a couple of batting championships. You have to respect all of them. They all hit."

Palmer, who could well be pitching his last game in a Baltimore uniform Tuesday night, has a reputation for being at his best in the money games. Palmer has a 7-2 record in post-season competition over the years, including a 3-1 mark in the World Series.

The Pirates faced Palmer in the second game of the Series and managed only two runs off him in seven innings. Palmer left the game with the score tied 2-2 and the Pirates went on to score a 3-2 victory.

"Obviously we're going to have to outright them to win Tuesday night," said Palmer. "I feel fine. I might be better than last time. But, I could be worse...time will tell."

If Candelaria pitches worse than he did as the third game starter, the series will end tonight. Candelaria was tagged for eight hits and six runs in three innings as the Orioles took an 8-4 victory.

Neither team worked out at Memorial Stadium Monday, which was just as well as far as head groundskeeper Pat Santaroni was concerned. There was a pro football game at the stadium Sunday and Santaroni, who did such a fine job in getting the field in playing condition for the first two games of the Series, spent the whole day with his crew repairing the torn sod in the outfield.

The Pirates worked out at Pittsburgh before flying to Baltimore later in the day and the Orioles didn't even bother to schedule a practice session.

"I feel that what we could accomplish at the stadium isn't worth getting out there for," said Weaver. "We're better off staying away."

Because of the bad weather and adverse playing conditions, this has been one of the toughest series mentally on the players and they welcomed the day off after having played five straight days.

"I think the rest will help," said Orioles' catcher Rick Dempsey,

Jets finally end Monday Night Football jinx

NEW YORK (UPI) — Shaler Suggs returned an interception 32 yards to the winning touchdown and forced two key fumbles as the New York Jets ended their Monday night football jinx with a 14-7 victory over the Minnesota Vikings on Oct. 15.

Suggs, a fourth-year strong safety from Ball State, scored his first pro touchdown in the third period when he stepped between two Viking receivers to intercept Tommy Kramer's pass and raced to the end zone untouched, giving New York a 14-0 lead.

Quarterback Richard Todd earlier sprinted three yards around left end to help lift New York to its first victory on Monday night football after seven straight losses. It was the Jets' third victory against four losses while Minnesota dropped to 5-4.

The Jets' defense, which had allowed the most points in the league entering the game, forced seven turnovers — four fumbles and three interceptions. New York held Minnesota scoreless until midway through the fourth period when Chuck Foreman went over from the 1 for his club-record 52nd career touchdown rushing. The Jets ended Minnesota's last hope when rookie middle linebacker Stan Blinks intercepted Kramer's pass at midfield with 2:54 remaining in the game.

Suggs' clinching touchdown came just 50 seconds after the Vikings turned in a sparkling defensive effort, stopping the Jets on a 4th-and-1 at the Minnesota 24.

Two plays later, Kramer threw to the sidelines toward Bob Tucker but Suggs raced up between Tucker and Foreman, took the ball in full stride and sped up the left sideline for the score.

Minnesota trimmed the lead to 14-7, thanks to a blunder by rookie Donald Dykes. The Jets had stopped Minnesota on the Vikings' 44 and Greg Coleman dropped back to punt. But Dykes barreled into Coleman after the punt and Minnesota received an automatic first down at its own 49.

Two plays later, the score after Kramer passed 16 yards to Ahmad Rashad to the Jets' 2.

The Jets struggled to hold a 7-0 lead at the half. The error-prone Vikings lost their fumble, but a pass intercepted deep in New York territory and committed a critical holding penalty to blunt their offense in the first half.

Minnesota's Jimmy Edwards fumbled a punt early in the game and Tim Moresco recovered for New York at the Vikings' 18.

Kevin Long picked up 12 yards in two carries and helped set up third-and-goal at the 3. Todd then sprinted around left end untouched for the score and Rich Szaro added the extra point for a 7-0 lead just 4:56 into the game.

The remainder of the first half was a case of blown opportunities by both teams. Foreman fumbled for Minnesota on the Vikings' next series and Lawrence Pillers recovered for New York at the Minnesota 34. New York moved to the Minnesota 2 but three plunges failed to produce a touchdown and Szaro's 18-yard field goal was blocked by Randy Holloway.

Kramer was 28-of-48 for 270 yards and four interceptions.

O'Leary beats Irving

POCATELLO — Vera C. O'Leary Junior High School ripped Irving of Pocatello 29-0 in football action Saturday night in the Mini-Dome.

Coach Ed Storey's squad raised its season record to 4-1 heading into Thursday evening's clash with cross-town rival Robert Stuart Junior High School. The game begins at 7 p.m. in Bruin Stadium.

"All of the kids did a heck of a job," said Storey. He had praise for both the offense and defense.

A blocked punt produced the first O'Leary score. Noseguard Ken Miller slipped through the Irving line to block the punt on the five-yard line. Mark Klempoff fell on it in the end zone for the score. Brent Stanking kicked the extra point.

Virgil Hurt scored the final two touchdowns on quarterback option plays. In the third quarter, he went 10 yards and in the final stanza 15 yards.

A standing to Mike Rice passed picked up two points after one of the touchdowns, and then standing kicked the final PAT.

Bliss ties Dietrich

DIETRICH — Bliss moved into a tie for second in the Southern Idaho Soccer League with a 1-0 win over Dietrich Friday.

The Bears and Dietrich trail Keichum (4-1) by one game with final games scheduled Thursday.

Following this week's final action, there will be a playoff among the four teams next week. Gooding is fourth place.

Perkins wins second

BOISE — Lori Perkins, 17, of Twin Falls, captured second place in the B Division of Boise's pro-am racquetball tournament over the weekend.

Perkins, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bill Perkins, lost her final match to Edith Smith of Eugene, Ore., 21-20, 21-19. Earlier, she had beaten the number three seed, Sonya Kadmirs.

More than 600 people participated in the tourney. Perkins was the only local contestant to place.

Bronco film tonight

TWIN FALLS — Films of Boise State's 41-17 win over Idaho can be seen tonight at 7:30 at the Little Tree Inn.

Weber, ISU share honors

BOISE — Players from Weber State and Idaho State shared the Big Sky Conference football offensive honors this week while defensive tackle Les Sherrill of Montana State was selected defensive player of the week.

The offensive honors went to Bill Kelly, Weber State quarterback, and Eddie McGill, Idaho State tailback.

Kelly was 16 for 33 in the passing department for 189 yards and 3 touchdowns to lead Weber State to a 34-10 upset win over previously unbeaten Northern Arizona. He had TD passes of 23, 42 and 43 yards to 3 different receivers.

McGill rushed for 209 yards on 29 carries as Idaho State fell to Montana 20-9. He became the first running back in ISU history to gain over 200 yards.

It was only the second 200-yard plus performance of the 1979 season in the conference.

Bucks drop Utah Jazz

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — Reserve guard Junior Bridgeman scored 23 points and Marcus Johnson added 27 in leading the Milwaukee Bucks to a 131-107 win over Utah, spelling the Jazz' first regular-season NBA game in their new home.

Bridgeman came off the bench when Utah jumped ahead 33-23 late in the first quarter. And the reserve guard poured in 16 points in the first half, leading Milwaukee to a 63-57 margin at the intermission.

Redd top WAC player

DENVER (UPI) — Brigham Young linebacker Glen Redd Monday became the first player this season to be named a Western Athletic Conference player of the week for a second time.

A league spokesman said the 6-foot-2, 227-pound Redd previously named WAC player after his performance in a win over Texas El Paso on Sept. 29.

Redd, a junior from Ogden, Utah, was named WAC defensive player of the week Monday for his work in a 48-24 win over arch rival Utah State in Logan last weekend.

He keyed a defense that allowed only 86 yards rushing with eight unassisted and nine assisted touchdowns, plus a key fumble recovery.

Anthony ahead in PBA

BATTLE CREEK, Mich. (UPI) — Earl Anthony moved into the lead Monday after five rounds in the PBA's $95,000 Kessler Open at Ken Noltke Lanes.

Anthony, a left-hander from Kent, Wash., had games of 244, 236, 248, 208, 228, 223 and 216 for a 34-game pinfall of 6025 — 45 pins ahead of second-place Fred Conner of Mar Vista, Calif.

After losing his first match to Conner, 245-244, Anthony had fallen 89 pins off the pace. Conner averaged 217 while winning four of his next seven games for a 7,980 total.

Mike Hanes, a rookie right-hander from Buffalo, N.Y., who moved from sixth place to third during the fifth round, averaged 228 for eight games and a total of 7,847.

'Bama takes UPI poll lead

NEW YORK (UPI) — Alabama, second in a national championship last season by Southern Cal and held the No. 2 spot in the preseason and through the first five weeks of the fall by the Trojans, finally broke through in the polls to become the nation's top-ranked college football team in the United Press International Board of Coaches ratings.

The Trojans, who had been undefeated with five wins, were stunned Saturday when unranked Stanford rallied from a 21-0 deficit behind the passing of reserve quarterback John Elway and earned a 21-21 tie. The Trojans, passing a four-of-seven for 67 yards — knocked USC into the No. 4 spot while the Crimson Tide's 40-0 romp over Florida boosted Bear Bryant's team into the top spot with 577 points, including 29 first-place votes.

Texas, which downed archival

Oklahoma 16-7, moved into the No. 2 spot with 372 points and nine first-place points and Nebraska shut out Kansas, 42-0, to move up to No. 3 with 528 points and four first-place votes.

Houston defeated Texas A&M 17-14 to run its unbeaten streak to five games this season and moved up to No. 5. Ohio State trounced Indiana, 47-6, Saturday, to gain the No. 6 spot while Florida State remained unbeaten at 6-0 with a 17-6 win over Mississippi State to move from 10th to seventh.

The Sooners, who suffered their first loss to Texas and are 4-1, dropped from No. 3. No. 3 Notre Dame, with a 38-13 victory over Aie Force, stayed ninth while Arkansas, which crunched Texas-Tech 20-6, took over the No. 10 position.

Rounding out the next 20 were Michigan which remained No. 11, No. 12 Washington, which dropped from No. 7 after losing to Arizona State 12-7. Brigham Young, which stayed at No. 13, the No. 14 Pitt Panthers, who shut out Cincinnati 35-0 to move up three spots, and 15th-ranked Purdue, which defeated Illinois 28-14 to run its record to 4-2 and reappear in the top 20 after a three-week absence.

Navy, steadily improving and now 5-0, moved up a spot to No. 16; North Carolina State handed Maryland's third straight loss to move up to No. 17. North Carolina lost to Wake Forest, 24-19, to drop back to 18th; Tennessee reappeared and gained the No. 19 spot after defeating Georgia Tech 31-9 and Louisiana State, 40-14. Its 24-14 loss to Georgia, stayed in the top 20 after dropping from No. 12.

Hockey career

HOWE MAY NOT QUIT AFTER ALL

HARTFORD, Conn. (UPI) — Hockey legend Gordie Howe says talking about retirement and actually doing it are two different things — and he was only talking about it over the weekend.

"I always talk about retirement," the 51-year-old Hartford Whalers center said Monday. "But talking about it and doing it are two different things."

Howe, who began his 33rd professional hockey season last week, was quoted after Saturday's tie with the Pittsburgh Penguins as saying he would hang up his skates at the end of this season.

"It's too early to announce it, but I might as well make it early. If I can get through this year, I'll be happy or crazy," he said after the game and his 787th National Hockey League goal.

But Monday's only playing grandfather in the NHL, and holder of 25 league records, said he felt "agreat" and had made no definite plans to retire at the end of the Whalers' current season.

"It's got to be premature," he said of the earlier reports that this would be his last season. "Nothing's official yet. It's too early."

"I've left it open. If it gets real tough at the end of the season we'll see," he said. "I'll talk retirement for the next year and it will depend on the mood I'm in, whether I'm feeling real good or feeling bad."

Dizzy spells had clouded Howe's preseason with the Whalers this year and the possibility had been discussed. But the veteran center said Monday he "felt great" and was only a little tired by the hectic road pace the Whalers kept over the weekend.

"I did it once and didn't do a very good job of it," he said, referring to his retirement from the NHL in 1971. He returned to pro hockey two years later with the Houston Aeros of the now-defunct World Hockey Association to play with his sons, Mark and Marty.

Howe has played the opening games of this season more like a flashy rookie than a tired veteran. In the last two Whalers' games he has scored a pair of goals in two ties.

Howe began his career with the Detroit Red Wings after spending two years with minor league teams. He started with the club until his first retirement in 1971.

In 1977, he came to Hartford with his two sons to play with the then-New England Whalers of the WHA.

Athletic director explains decision rumors regarding the Rutledge allegations would have on the team and said he told players and coaches not to pay attention to them.

He said he also talked with one player but did so only to stop the rumors. He said the conversation was held in his office with the door open and after the player had been advised his football career would be jeopardized.

He said he denied striking Rutledge. "To me, there was no punch at all," he said.

Kush admitted that he is a physical coach and that he has struck players on their helmets and has grabbed them by their face masks. He said he does such things only to get a player's attention and then only with an older player, never a younger player.

"The things I have done on the football field, I've never done to abuse them," Kush said. "I never hit them skin-to-skin."

Miller said he did not ask the players and others with whom he talked to take similar polygraph tests.

Kush first announced his own dismissal three hours before Kickoff Saturday evening. Miller confirmed it after the game but called it a "suspension." When the question came up again Monday, Miller said, "I have no intention of bringing him back."

The athletic director said his appointment of assistant coach Bob Owens as head coach "is not in my judgment to be an interim appointment."

"I want no one to infer anything about this that this is a short-term assignment," he said. "This is not short haul. If they are successful, and I believe they will, they will have my complete support."

President John Schwab said when the Rutledge charges first were made he told Miller only to "search out the facts." He said when Miller presented his evidence he concurred in Miller's recommendation to relieve Kush after 22 years of service as head coach.

"There is no place at Arizona State for the kind of behavior described," he said, acknowledging "there is no question of the contributions Frank Kush made to this university over the years."

JEROME — The Twin Falls Bruins and the Burley Bobcats played a close first and second game but the Bruin girls came back and soundly defeated the Bobcats in the third game of District 4 volleyball Monday night.

Twin Falls won the first game in an 16-14 overtime victory, lost the second 15-13 and came back for the win in the third game for a 3-1 total.

Twin Falls scurried out to a quick lead in the first game. Burley came back to tie the game at 11, 12 and 14 before Twin Falls took the game.

Eileen Neville led the Bruins with four winning serves while Robin Fribble managed six for the Bobcats.

Twin Falls coach Kathy Anderson said the reason for the Burley comeback was the nervousness of the players.

"I called a time out to get the girls settled down," they were getting a little bit nervous and just needed to play their game," she said.

Twin Falls and Burley both settled down to a dog fight in the second game as the score was tied on five different occasions.

Burley then rambled to a 13-7 lead and won the game despite a late threat by the Bruins.

Twin Falls took complete command in the third game as Krista Kravitz scored nine of 15 points.

"We caught Minico off on defense and took advantage and were more effective on offense. The girls also

By Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag

Here is another problem hand from our British friends. The bidding is poor but fancy. The North's jump to three hearts is one of those splinter bids designed to show spade support and not more than one heart.

South ruffs the opening heart lead in dummy, notes that seven spades or seven diamonds were both very good contracts and then steps to figure out how to play safe for six spades.

After the heart ruff, the safety play for six is for declarer to play a spade to his ace, lead a small spade to dummy and ruff the 10 spade. This play would cost him the contract if East produced the Jack of spades and was able to give his partner a diamond ruff but that would only happen if diamonds were breaking 4-0.

After the play of the spade 10, South makes seven tricks. West holds the Jack. If South had played queen, the hand would have collapsed and he would be down at least two.

Ask the Experts

We have been asked several times what a splinter bid is. A splinter bid is an unnecessary jump in an unbid suit. It shows strong support for partner's bid suit and either a singleton or void in the splinter suit.
