

Soviets battle Afghans

United Press International
Ten-thousand crack Soviet troops, backed by heavy armor and warplanes, Wednesday launched all-out offensive against Moslem insurgents south of the Afghan capital of Kabul, the Press Trust of India reported.

The news of the attack came as Afghanistan's new strongman Babrak Karmal, ignoring violent protests against Moscow's role in the strategic nation, warned the United States that defense aid from Russia to bolster the estimated 50,000 Soviet troops in the country to root out "all enemies."

"serious threat to peace" posed by the invasion, met with the National Security Council and other officials.

"There is not a consideration of a military response at this point," a White House official said, but said Carter and U.S. allies believe "the Soviet Union must expect serious consequences for their actions."

At the United Nations, diplomatic sources said Moslem delegates, are considering bringing the Soviet military action before the Security Council Thursday.

After strong adverse reactions from their national Olympic committees, NATO nations began backing away Wednesday from suggestions that they boycott next summer's Olympic games in Moscow in protest of the Soviet invasion.

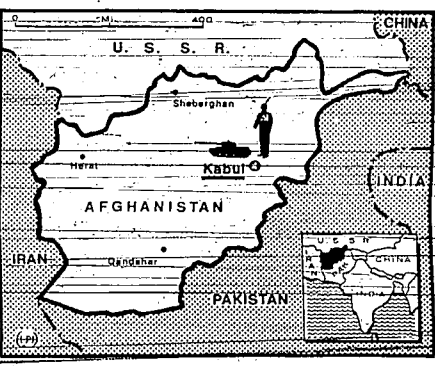

The suggestion was made and enthusiastically supported for further study, according to NATO and diplomatic sources, by representatives of a number of North Atlantic Treaty Organization countries at emergency meetings this week.

It was among a wide range of retaliatory options discussed by the Allies.

But the Olympic boycott suggestion was quickly opposed Wednesday by Lord Killanin, president of the International Olympic Committee, and the presidents of national Olympic committees throughout Europe.

"They vowed to fight any boycott move and emphasized that only their committees, which are independent of government, control and largely financed through private appeals, can decide who participates in the games."

Carter drops SALT; ambassador recalled

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter will ask the Senate to indefinitely postpone consideration of the SALT II treaty with Russia because of the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan, administration sources said Wednesday night.

Earlier Carter had recalled U.S. Ambassador Thomas Watson from Moscow for consultations because of the "serious threat to peace" posed by the invasion.

Officials said that Carter's feeling "is as strong as ever" for the need for nuclear arms controls and that he firmly believes the arms pact is in the national security interest.

But Carter feels "the Russians by their own actions have created a situation which makes it impossible to bring it (SALT II) before the Senate now," an official said.

Senate Republican leader Howard Baker, a candidate for the GOP nomination for president, had called on Carter to "seize the day" in considering the treaty because of the Soviet push into Afghanistan.

Press secretary Jody Powell said Watson would arrive in the United States today on the other side.

Carter has decided to take would be announced once American allies are notified.

It was learned that the United States will seek condemnation of the Soviet Union in the United Nations Security Council — one of the collective steps Carter has chosen to retaliate for the Afghan invasion.

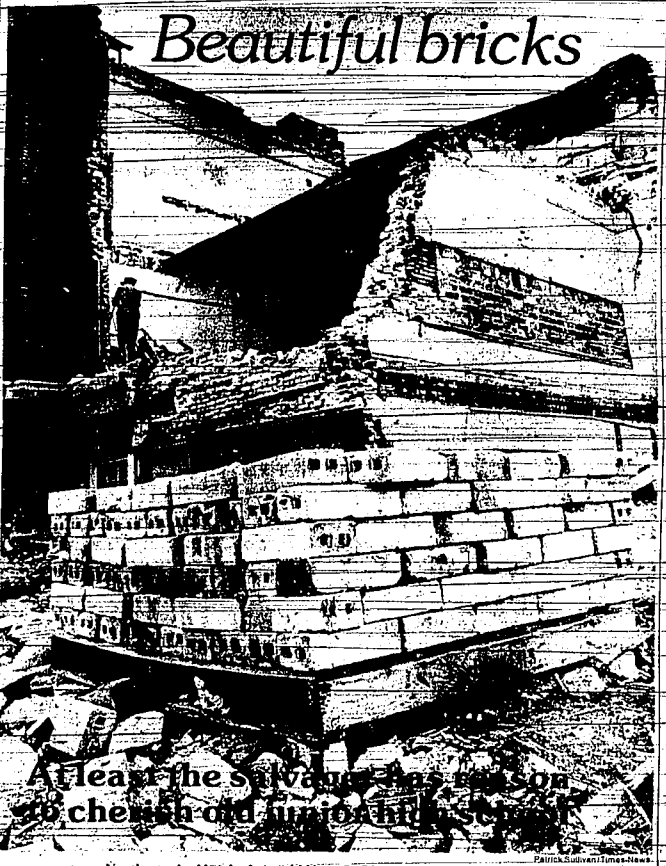

Sources said that Carter is embarked on a plan that will make the Soviets realize that they "made a serious mistake" by invading their southern neighbor.

"There is not a consideration of a military response at this point," a White House official said, but added that the president and U.S. allies believe "the Soviet Union must expect serious consequences for their actions."

"The president met this afternoon with members of the National Security Council and other senior advisers to review the continuing crisis in Iran and to consider the serious threat to peace posed by the invasion of Afghanistan by armed forces of the Soviet Union," Powell said.

"Other administration officials familiar with some of the options considered at the 7 1/2 hour meeting said the coming U.S. moves are 'pretty thin stuff... nothing very major.'

Beautiful bricks

A tear of the sun... 20 cents old for 100 new

Neatly stacked bricks from old Vera C. O'Leary school ready for sale

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The old Vera O'Leary school may have been a dump for youngsters tired of classes. But it is a gold mine to Salt Lake City contractor Richard Brown.

The 67-year-old building is Brown's Mother Lode for much sought-after used brick and other building materials.

For example, in California the bricks from the old school house are retailing at 32 cents apiece, compared to 18 cents for each new brick.

Brown offered $38,500 to demolish the building and salvage material while other firms were bidding close to $100,000 and up. He says he can sell every one of the "beautiful old bricks" in the 67-year-old building.

"If the people of Twin Falls only knew what they have right there in their community, they would be buying up the bricks as quick as we could pull them out of the walls," Brown said.

Apparently builders and residents of Twin Falls haven't acquired an appreciation for the bricks, but Brown thinks they are beautiful and says he cherishes every one.

"They don't make that kind of brick anymore. Each one is a work of art. Builders in California, Utah and other states will buy every brick we have, especially those in the older part of the school," says Brown.

One Salt Lake City couple made a special trip to Twin Falls to look at the brick and then told their contractor to hold up the construction of their new home until the brick was available.

"That building is finished now and is a $150,000 home," says Brown, "and it is beautiful."

He said bricks at the site are 16 cents apiece but local demand is slight. "Some bricks" have gone to Ketchum but generally builders in Twin Falls prefer the new brick, he explained.

According to Brown, the old bricks are a kiln-dried, hard-finish brick. They can be used in homes, fireplaces, for trim or even for patios and walkways because they will withstand all kinds of weather and moisture.

Iranians step up security 'Plot' against Waldheim foiled

TEHRAN, Iran (UPI) — Iranian authorities said Wednesday they had foiled a plot by "outside agents" to assassinate U.N. Secretary General Kurt Waldheim.

Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh said security measures will be stepped up for the veteran diplomat, who is in Tehran in search of a solution to the U.S.-Iranian crisis.

The official Press news agency quoted Ghotbzadeh as saying, "There has been a plot against the life of Kurt Waldheim today, which was detected and foiled."

The foreign minister earlier told an American television crew that a planned trip by Waldheim to a hospital for crippled victims of deposed Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi's regime had been canceled "because of a plot against him."

"There was a plot against Waldheim by outside agents," Ghotbzadeh said.

Neither he nor the Press news agency disclosed any details of the plot.

In a move to step up security, Ghotbzadeh announced through Pars that no announcement of Waldheim's movements today and the other officials.

Waldheim also was to have had a meeting with members of Iran's ruling Revolutionary Council Wednesday, "but for security reasons it was canceled," Ghotbzadeh said.

Instead, the 61-year-old United Nations chief spent most of his day in his suite at the Hilton Hotel, receiving carefully selected fellow diplomats, including ambassadors from Sweden and Spain, while plainclothesmen and anti-aircraft guards policed the grounds.

He also held his third meeting with Ghotbzadeh, who told Waldheim "Your ideas may have helped" efforts to solve the U.S.-Iranian crisis. Ghotbzadeh did not elaborate.

The Foreign Ministry late Wednesday confirmed that Waldheim was "extending" his visit but did not say for how long. Waldheim arrived New Year's Day and was to have left Friday.

In New York, U.N. sources said they still expected Waldheim to meet with Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, but no firm arrangement had been made.

Gold buyers go crazy, send price near $600

United Press International
The tumble of Russian tanks in Afghanistan sent gold speculators scrambling into world bullion markets Wednesday and the price soared above $575 in New York.

Economists predicted the $600 barrier would be breached in "a matter of days."

In Paris, panic buying on the domestic gold market drove the price up to a record $587 before Bank of France officials stepped in and halted trading. One banker predicted the shutdown would lead to even more panic.

"The markets are watching the United States being trampled by the Soviet Union," said a dealer for the Paris firm of Jean-Claude Melendes in New York, gold closed at $575.50 on an ounce, up $41 from the final 1979 price on Monday.

Gold closed in London at $587.50, up

$43 from the previous record high of $544 from a year's ago. The Zurich market remained closed on a long holiday.

A London analyst said the growing tensions over Soviet troops in Afghanistan, the escalating cost of oil and the unresolved situation of the American hostages in Iran, all contributed to the rush.

R. Leslie Deak, vice president of the New York based firm of Deak-Peters attributed much of the buying to Saudi Arabia, where he said, oil wealth is being transferred into gold.

"These gold purchases are for investment rather than speculation, he said, meaning the bullion will be slashed and gold prices will be pushed higher by short supplies.

"There is no reason not to expect to find gold at $1,000 an ounce or more in three to five years," Deak said.

Andrus to seek 720,000-acre Birds of Prey

By DAVID MORRISSEY
Times-News writer

BOISE — Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus will request in February that Congress adopt legislation creating an expanded Snake River Birds of Prey Conservation Area, the Times-News has learned.

Andrus will recommend an area of about 720,000 acres.

According to John Hough, a special assistant to Andrus, the interior secretary will likely accept most of the recommendations of the Bureau of Land Management on suggested size of the internationally-famous bird sanctuary.

"I suspect there won't be many changes" from what the BLM proposes, Hough said. Andrus' recommendations on the Southwest Idaho Raptor Refuge will be "if not the same, very similar" to BLM recommendations.

According to Ives Graetzer of Boise, the final BLM recommendation call for a conservation area containing 515,000 acres of BLM lands, and 206,000 acres of state and private lands. Those BLM recommendations are now the government printing office and will be delivered to Andrus by Feb. 1, she said.

Andrus will make his recommendations to Congress within one month after receiving that report, Graetzer said.

Tentative BLM recommendations on the Birds of Prey refuge, which straddles an 81-mile stretch of the Snake River from Melba in Canyon County to Hammett in Elmore County, were released in June of last year.

The release of those recommendations, which called for the 720,000-acre conservation area, were followed by public hearings at which sometimes heated opinions were expressed on establishment of the larger bird refuge.

According to Graetzer, the BLM decided after those hearings to keep the acreage recommendations unchanged. "We feel we've assessed the impacts on the ecosystem. Any changes that come up will be congressional or from the interior secretary," she said.

The existing Birds of Prey National Area contains the densest nesting population of birds-of-prey on the American continent. Approximately 10 percent of the world's remaining Prairie Falcons live in the canyon region, which also supports Golden Eagles, endangered Patteridge Falcons and 11 other species of raptors. Bald Eagles hunt in the region during part of the year. BLM studies show more than 1,000 birds of prey nest in the Idaho refuge.

Created in 1971, then Interior Secretary Rogers C. B. Morton, called the region a raptor "sanctuary from the pressure of man." According to later BLM studies, the proposed enlargement of the region is necessary to protect the food supply and habitat of the raptors.

According to Graetzer, the enlargement, if accepted by Congress, will mean no change in the status of privately-owned land in the region. "They can do anything they want with the private," she said. In addition, she said the BLM "has made assurances that no private landowner would be hampered in the development of his lands."

The major change in land use, Graetzer said, would be a freeze on further conversions of the public BLM lands in the region to private lands, under either the Desert Land Entry or Caves Act programs.

Much of the public land in the proposed expanded conservation area is now used for grazing. According to Graetzer, the expansion of the refuge would not "restrict or interfere with those actions."

Soviets secure capital

The Indian news agency said the Soviet-armed division rolled out of Kabul before dawn, heading for a showdown with anti-Communist Moslem rebel forces in Pakhta province, on the Pakistan border 100 miles south of Kabul.

Quoting sources in Kabul, a Press Trust correspondent reported the troops appeared to have secured complete control of Kabul, although the capital remained tense.

About 10,000 heavily armed Russian soldiers appear to be in Kabul and are guarding all vital installations, the Press Trust said. The Russian formations are now fanning out to the rugged countryside to crush the rebels.

The latest clash in Kabul took place on Monday, lasting four hours after beginning at midnight, the Press Trust reported. A heavy exchange of fire between the Soviet troops and those who are resisting them was heard, the report quoted witnesses in Kabul as saying.

Radio Kabul — the first installation the Soviets captured in the Dec. 27 blitz in which President Hafizullah Amin died — quoted Karmal as saying his government would resist any additional Soviet support to fight military aggression from its enemies.

The aggression comes from renegade tribesmen and Moslems, insurgents who reportedly have joined forces with elements of the Afghan army to resist the Soviet invasion.

In another dispatch from Kabul, Karmal, a Moscow protégé, condemned President Carter's statements on the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan, calling them examples of U.S. interference in the country's affairs, the Press news agency reported.

Nearly 100 unarmed Afghan students, vowing to retake their country from the Russian invaders, took over the Afghan embassy in New Delhi for six hours as they stormed the building, they tore down the Afghan national flag and raised in its place a green Islamic flag.

The students complained that the seizure of the Afghan embassy showed Indian authorities have provided "clearly insufficient" security.

In Bonn, a group of 30 students, most of them from universities in southern Germany, marched through the streets of the West German capital and staged a demonstration at the Afghanistan embassy.

Soviet forces have arrived in Jalalabad, just 60 miles from the Khyber pass.

Afghan student paints slogan after occupying embassy

Students protest invasion

Afghan embassy seized in India

NEW DELHI, India (UPI) — Afghan students vowing to fight "Russian invaders" Wednesday seized the Afghan embassy for six hours in angry protest against Soviet intervention in their homeland.

Tearing down the Afghan flag and raising a green Islamic banner in its place, the 60 students, including 15 women, sacked the files at the embassy and spray-painted slogans over the walls.

They ended their occupation peacefully six hours later, releasing unharmed three Afghan diplomats and one Indian employee who were in the building when they entered.

In a smaller demonstration in Bonn, West Germany, about 30 Afghan students staged a 30-minute sit-in in their country's embassy. Police said the students broke up their protest peacefully when ordered to leave the embassy.

The students in New Delhi, chanting "We will fight," occupied the embassy to protest the intervention in their homeland by 50,000 Soviet troops and the installation of pro-Kremlin government.

Wahood Gazi, one of the student taking part in the demonstration, said, "The Russian pigs have not seen the last of us. This is just a symbol of how we feel about the Russian invaders in Afghanistan."

"Let the Soviet puppets see how it feels to be invaded," said Gazi, who explained the students had no intention of holding hostages or occupying the embassy for a long time.

The Afghan ambassador to India, Pash Gul Walidar, was in his home in another part of the city when the students took over the embassy.

After the students attacked the embassy, onlookers joined them and helped to distribute leaflets. A policeman at the embassy said the students surprised two Indian guards at the embassy gates and overpowered them. Officers said no shots were fired, although earlier told reporters he had fired a shot from his pistol into the ground.

Waldheim extends mission

The militants holding American hostages in the U.S. Embassy were having nothing to do with Waldheim.

Asked why Waldheim had called off without explanation a trip to a hospital to see victims of the alleged regime of the ousted shah of Iran, Gholbadeh told an American television crew "because of a plot against him."

"There was a plot against Waldheim by outside agents," the foreign minister said. He refused to disclose details.

Hundreds of Iranians, some of them unhappy with Waldheim's diplomatic offensive, gathered at the hospital to await Waldheim. But, said Gholbadeh, "we were not worried about the crowds."

The militants at the embassy rejected any meeting with Waldheim. "We won't let him in even if he wants to," a spokesman said.

Instead, they hoisted a poster with a year-old photograph showing Waldheim kissing the hand of Princess Ashraf Pahlavi, twin sister of deposed Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi.

A radical Islamic publication carried a photograph of the shah, a Star of David printed across his face, shaking hands with the secretary general.

"Waldheim hand-in-hand with the executioner," the caption read.

The U.N. Security Council passed a resolution Monday warning of economic sanctions against Iran if the hostages are not freed by Jan. 7.

To protect itself from possible sanctions, Iran disclosed Wednesday it has withdrawn an unspecified amount of its more than $13 billion in overseas accounts from British and other European banks and salted it away in countries it considers more friendly.

All Maanavi-Rad, head of overseas finances for Iran's Bank Markazi, the central bank, declined to name the specific British banks affected but said, "We withdrew the money from banks in Britain because we did not have confidence."

He also refused to disclose how much money had been transferred and to which countries it had gone.

Soviet Iranian funds have gone into banks in Algeria and Libya, but not in Algeria and Libya alone, he said.

Ailing shah has blood disorder

PANAMA CITY, Panama (UPI) — Deposed Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi and his family welcomed the New Year in quiet seclusion at their heavily-guarded home on Canadara Island, which has now become a tourist attraction.

Wednesday's Empress Farah was quoted in the French Magazine Paris Match as saying her husband is suffering from Wernstrom's Disease, a rare blood disease. But if an operation is necessary it would not be done in the United States to save President Carter from any trouble.

Panamanian students, who staged five days of violent anti-shah demonstrations two weeks ago, returned to school Wednesday after a holiday recess, vowing to continue their protests against his presence.

In an interview published Wednesday in the London Daily Mail the shah answered Iran's demands for his extradition by saying he would be "happy" to be judged by an impartial international tribunal on his actions as Iran's ruler as long as it was a precedent for other ousted heads of state.

"I would be content, happy, to be judged by what I believe was achieved during my years of reign," he said. The Daily Mail's reporter described the shah as looking "careworn and haunted."

The shah's wife, Empress Farah, told the Daily Mail the exiled royal family's plight was comparable to that of the 30 American hostages in Tehran.

"We are another kind of hostage. Yes, hostage and tortured," she said, alluding to the heavy security that surrounds them.

Union may boycott shipments to USSR

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter is restricted by law from cutting off grain sales to Russia, but rank and file longshoremen might impose an unofficial embargo by refusing to load ships, a union official said Wednesday.

In a telephone interview from his New York office, John Bowers, executive vice president of the International Longshoremen's Association, said there are "rumors going around at the waterfront" that union members may refuse to load ships bound for Russia to protest the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan.

At the Agriculture Department, in light of a possible union action, top officials decided to begin a routine study of the impact on farmers, consumers and the economy of a cutoff of grain sales to Russia.

"Nobody seems to like the word Russian or the red flag or the waterfront," he said.

will be delayed at least until Friday or Monday when union president Thomas Gleason, who is ill, is expected back to his office, Bowers said.

He said Gleason mentioned last week that the union was thinking about boycotting wheat to Russia, but no definite steps have been taken and no board meetings are planned.

The union refused to work Russian cargo for 25 years until President Nixon asked them to change their policy, he said.

No change-of-plane service.

Thumb-sucking season

WASHINGTON — The holiday season is not the easiest time for a Washington opinion-maker. If the truth be known, those of us who stay in town are easily recognized because we're the ones sitting around in restaurants and bars sucking our thumbs.

Whereas during the height of the political season we refuse to speak to anyone but the highest administration officials, we are condemned by Congress when they come back to quote "sources close to the Kennedy campaign" (a Dartmouth student volunteer home on vacation), "a spokesperson for Joey Powell" (one of Washington's most prominent contractors), "an informed-diplomatic contact" (a taxi driver with a foreign accent) and "a senior adviser to Secretary of State Cyrus Vance" (the head waiter of the Executive dining room).

Thumb-sucking is the hardest type of writing because it requires even more imagination than the most creative fiction writer usually expects to exercise.

The first thing we have to do is go through all the old press releases that we discarded with contempt when we were dropped in front of our doors. This flotsam, which we wisely saved, suddenly has more value than gold.

For example, my secretary Joanne, who gets very nervous when I started sucking my thumb, was wise enough to save a press release from the Department of Agriculture, informing the media that a U.S. District Court in Oregon ordered her producer David Van Eyk, of Myrtle Point, Ore., to pay the American Egg Board $75,000 for failing to file reports on how many eggs he handled. He also was fined for not submitting the required assessment of 5 cents for each 28 dozen eggs he marketed, thus violating the Egg Research and Consumer Information Act, which is administered by an 18-member American Egg Board, appointed by the "secretaries of Agriculture and mandated by the Department's Agricultural Marketing Service."

Now when I first stepped on this press release two months ago, I was leaving for the day. I didn't realize the significance of it.

It was only between Christmas and New Year that I dived on me that white-collar crime in the egg industry is rampant and could be one of the biggest problems the country will face in the Eighties.

While Mr. Van Eyk was caught and punished, the quietest of cases is how many egg handlers in this country are getting away with murder? By failing to send in the 5 cents for each 28 dozen eggs they have sold, the cost to the American Egg Board could be in the millions — perhaps billions — and since the money collected is used for research to develop new markets for eggs, the consumers are the big losers in what law enforcement officers now describe as one of the largest American shell games in the nation today.

To this observer, the problem seems to be that the lack of strong enforcement of the Egg Research and Consumer Information Act has encouraged egg handlers to ignore the law. It is another dramatic example of the malaise in this country. The white criminal butler and egg man will continue to lie about how many eggs have passed through his hands, because he knows that even if he is caught, the fine will be minimal, as opposed to the magnitude of the windfall profits that can be made.

Unless these unscrupulous dealers are stepped in their tracks by a beefed-up Egg Enforcement Agency, one of us will be safe on the streets or in our homes.

The time has come to get tough with every egg handler in the country. If the American Egg Board can't do it, we will do it, assign and turn the job over to people who can.

Response to Soviets must be strong

The Carter Administration will soon announce retaliatory moves against the Soviet Union for the Kremlin's invasion of Afghanistan.

This is another major test of the strength and will of America; one which cannot be met with a slap on the wrist.

America must respond with backbone.

Presumably, Moscow analyzed all the possible retaliatory moves before it sent thousands of regular army troops smashing into Afghanistan — and concluded the risk was worth whatever penalties the West would declare.

No one expects Washington to authorize a military strike as punishment; the odds of sparking a world holocaust are too great. The Soviets know this and they also know the U.S. will not yet risk world peace despite the tremendous pressures being exerted by the turn of events in Iran and Afghanistan. Moreover, the Soviets probably concluded the SALT II treaty also would not be jeopardized in the long run, an accurate calculation given President Carter's reiterated support of the arms limitation treaty.

Given the limited array of options, just what can America do?

For a start, it can shut off the grain pipeline feeding the Soviets; it can embargo all technological aid and all sales of sophisticated equipment — and ask other allies to do the same. One wonders how quickly the Soviets would smart if deprived of the imported foodstuffs it must have to feed its people.

Obviously such economic moves would hurt at home, but the alternative is war of a magnitude no one can comprehend.

There also has been talk of boycotting the Olympics, slated for Moscow later this year. While that would cost the Soviets a great deal of prestige, it likely would destroy the Olympic movement and make the athletes political pawns. Still, the U.S. can make a bare-bones Olympic investment and take away the frosting from the Kremlin's cake.

But no matter how one rationalizes retaliatory moves, the sobering fact is that Afghanistan is lost.

The question of whether it was worth fighting for is a moot question.

So-called detente ends

WASHINGTON — Quick, find that rule book, and not only the referee. President Carter says the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan violates "accepted international rules of behavior."

Actually, the Soviets are playing by rules they have proclaimed from the rooftops: "the West wants to waltz into international rules of behavior."

Or, more precisely, for believing that the Soviets do not mean what they say. Or, more precisely, for believing that the Soviets mean only what they say at summit conferences, and when subscribing to the U.N. Charter or the Helsinki agreements regarding human rights.

It is possible to speak of behavior conforming to "accepted rules" and to mean merely behavior that is "the rule" rather than the exception in international affairs. In that sense, the Soviets are playing by the "accepted rules" in small matters (such as India's "solution" to the "problem" of Goa in 1961, and the Soviets' expansion in 1979 of military forces on islands taken from Japan in 1945) and in large matters (such as North Vietnam's conquest of South Vietnam, and the scores of other wars in what is called "the postwar era"), far force is the rule because raw force works.

What Carter calls the "accepted international rules" are supposedly accepted by what he calls the "international community." But that "community" is another fiction. There are not the sort of shared values that are a prerequisite for a world "community." Certainly the "accepted rules" are not the U.N. Charter. Indeed, the condemnation of the Iran and Afghanistan debacles may do to the U.N. what Mussolini's attack on Abyssinia did to the League of Nations: it may demonstrate how moribund the United Nations is.

Perhaps the "accepted rules" of detente, signed at the 1972 summit. In 1977, before the ink was properly dry, the Soviets invited and financed the "Yom Kippur war" in 1974; they prepared the shredding of the Vietnam "peace" accords. In 1975, they sent Cuban proxies to Angola. In 1978, they sent their own advisors, including a general, to Ethiopia. In December, 1979, when the Red Army moved on Afghanistan, even the U.S. government noticed that something was amiss with detente.

A Washington Post headline decried the "blame" for the death of detente. "Detente is Dead." Actually, Americans will not have learned the lesson of the 1970s until they face the fact that detente never lived.

The Soviets murdered and expelled the West's winners with the Cold War. They told the West what it yearned to hear, and the yearning was so powerful that the West chose only to hear, not to see. Thus "detente" was a pact with unrepentant Soviet war preparations and expansionism.

And now? Watch the process, already begun, of apportioning to both sides the "blame" for the death of detente. Bad luck, bad timing, an administrative mistake here, an unfortunate diplomatic nuance there — soon we shall have concocted a soothing explanation for the "breakdown of understanding."

The assumption still is that at the beginning of the 1970s there was a mutual "understanding." That assumption, however, how little has been learned in all the time that has been lost.

Letters

Grandstanding
Editor, Times-News:
Grandstanding George is at it again!

Blatant political opportunism was a term applied by the national press to his previous action, and indeed it would appear he is willing to do anything — including risk the lives of Americans and the National interest — to get his feet and name in the national news. Given his past history and present escapades, it seems there is a more appropriate place for his face.

I have the greatest abhorrence for what has happened in Iran and Afghanistan. In an Insubstantial to Islam and the honor of man. I further understand that our president and State Department are not the ultimate in unflinching and correct action; but they are trying with their best resources and are certainly better informed than one irresponsible Congressman. A time of crisis calls for unity and National loyalty, not for our elected representatives to allow themselves to become the spokesmen (even unwittingly) of terrorists and fanatics trying to blackmail this nation.

Mr. Hansen claims to be doing all this because the Federal government is slow and inefficient. Representative Democracy, is by its very nature slow and sometimes cumbersome. Tyranny such as Communism is fast and efficient. Which do you value more — freedom or efficiency? Besides Mr. Hansen certainly is not aiding efficiency; his actions are creating more confusion. He is doing nothing to aid representative government, either, since he is comping around the world instead of being in Capitol Hill attending to the business for which he was elected. Whereas he while our water supply is being polluted by nuclear waste, Has he not made his case in Federal court, land or taken an interest in our energy problems in the last several months? Add to that the fact that his actions are most probably illegal.

He further claims his trips are financed by him personally. Did he forget his salary is paid from public funds? (I can't think he has too much resources outside his salary, since he had to operate a public fund-raising campaign to pay his personal and not altogether legally incurred debts.) He is paid to represent Idaho in congress and not to make his case into things he knows nothing about.

He says his "missions" to Iran have been as a "private citizen," but the Iranians know he is a congressman. They do not separate official titles from private life, therefore his presence could, and indeed has been, mistaken as "official" by a government that is not only foreign, but hostile to our own. If he truly does not understand that, then he is more foolish than even I think I am to be.

As one humiliated, offended American citizen, I call on other concerned citizens to contact the rest of the Idaho Congressional Delegation and tell them how we feel about grandstanding George!

(Thank goodness elections are coming up. I personally feel his actions are grounds for congressional censure on the basis of irreparable damage to national policy. Our founding fathers called giving aid to the enemy treason.)

Do not go gently into the 1980s

By ELLEN GOODMAN
© Boston Globe Newspaper Co.
Washington Post Writers Group

BOSTON — Normally, I begin my New Year by sharing a few weighty thoughts. But since I grazed through the past weeks, as if the holiday season were all you can eat night at the Galloping Gourmand, I would prefer shedding weight to sharing it.

In fact, my entire fantasy life this morning revolves around figuring out a way to come down with about three weeks worth of anorexia nervosa.

At the top of my New Year's resolutions is the determination not to go through the future bearing my own personal load.

However, since it takes two items to make a list, I will go on to the second resolution: I hereby promise that I shall not go gently into the 1980s. I am about to become a cranky consumer.

Let me explain. For the past several years I have had a creeping case of consumer crump-out. I have fallen victim to a lot of "deals" and "specials" which will do to consumers what the everyday hassles that have lacked me, lo, these past 12 months are not that unusual or even that cruel.

The pilot light in my gas stove has developed the constancy of a one-meal stand.

The bank where I have done business for several years sent me a series of intimate letters, rolly-polly personal to me, suggesting that I come to them for estate planning for my wife and children.

I had to replace an entire one-gallon-of-wine shower attachment because a small plastic joint broke and they do not sell the joints separately.

The handle has fallen off my new front-storm door; the blower that I sent to be cleaned isn't, but the buttnote in my new jeans has shredded; the newsboy has missed my doormat 17 days in a row; and by actual count, six people who were going to fix three things have yet to show up. One person who did show up, I wish hadn't.

My first intention to read all these routine events has been pre-empted by composed brilliant letters and had wonderful telephone conversations in which I was totally vindicated. Bank vice-presidents were abject. Manufacturers sent me new copies, and shop-makers revised their entire policy about parts, and the plasterer re-did the bathroom.

Unfortunately, these exchanges took place entirely in my head.

The fact is that, like so many other Americans, I am increasingly thwarted at the anger gate by the absolute certainty that it isn't going to be worth the hassle.

I am sure that I will not be able to (1) find a person to talk to or write to; that (2) this person will neither care about my problem or be able to help; that (3) it's company policy (4) the company did it and (5) after all is said and done, I am left with the choice of bad service or no service.

Under these circumstances you begin to feel that it's nutty to complain. It's clearly not sensible to waste your energy futilely fighting the system when you need every bit of it to deal with the system. It begins to appear that it's safer to cope with the world than argue with it.

But this is an absolutely invidious argument. I believe that you have, your own pick your fights. But when you find you aren't picking any fights, you're part of the problem. The problem of ruled rage and meekness, impotence, and disintegrating buttonholes.

People and product managers ought to be cafter to task for thoughtlessness, rudeness, incompetence and stupid-headedness. We ought to do it to keep our fire in shape and our anger going in the right direction and our principles propped up. If you have to rage powerlessly at an Ayatollah, the least you can do is confront a computer operator.

So, in 1980, I'm going to be cranky. I'm going to feel the need to plaster the front page with this kind of cruel and unfeeling reporting, when a fellow human being is in need of comfort, not more pain and sorrow in the time of trouble.

I certainly hope in the future you think of your readers and the feelings of the family of that loved one that were left behind.

Partier held in probe of fire that killed 43

CHAPUIS, Quebec (UPI) — A man suspected of setting a New Year's Day fire that killed 43 people and injured 50 others attending a party was ordered held Wednesday pending an investigation of Quebec's worst blaze in four decades.

Florent Cantin, 21, was not immediately charged but he was taken a Quebec City jail on a coroner's warrant issued by Quebec Chief Fire Commissioner Cyrille Delage.

Cantin appeared briefly Wednesday at a closed hearing before Delage in Chibougamau, 19 miles northeast of Chapuis.

He was ordered held after witnesses reported seeing a man playing with a cigarette lighter near a Christmas tree before the early morning blaze gutted the crowded community club.

The fire struck suddenly about 1 a.m. EST New Year's Day while the party was in full swing at the Opemiska Club. Some 300 people escaped, but others were trampled in the stampede. Their bodies were found outside a doorway.

People attempted to put out the fire with fire extinguishers, but it was too avial.

Delage emerged from an inspection of 41 badly burned bodies in the local fire station to say Cantin would be held until an inquest began, probably on Jan. 14. The other two victims of the blaze died in a Quebec City hospital.

The disaster was the worst fire in Quebec in 41 years. In 1938, 46 people were killed in a blaze at Sacred Heart College in Ste. Hyacinthe.

Call to end unrest

Generals warn Turkish government

ANKARA, Turkey (UPI) — Turkey's armed forces issued a veiled threat of military takeover Wednesday, warning that the country's chronic political violence could escalate into rebellion and the turmoil in Iran and Afghanistan could turn the region "into a battlefield."

But political experts said the generals were reluctant to take power, as they did in previous crises in 1960 and 1971, and would give civilian authorities more time to try to curb the unrest.

"We face a serious situation," said

Prime Minister Suleyman Demirel, who met with President Fahri Koruturk and opposition leader Bulent Ecevit to discuss the army move.

Demirel declined to say if he would resign and end the rule of his 6-week-old right-wing government.

The two-page warning was presented to Koruturk by the chief of the general staff, Gen. Kenan Evren, and the commanders of the army, navy, air force and police. It was broadcast to the nation Wednesday.

"Recent developments in our region could easily turn the Middle East into a battlefield," the military statement said, referring to upheavals in Iran, the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan and turbulence in the Persian Gulf region.

"Anarchists and terrorists inside Turkey are rehashing a general rebellion," it said. "... the people of this country will no longer tolerate the anarchy, confusion and exploitation of the rights of freedom."

The generals called on the politicians to end their arguing and get the country back to the democratic principles on which Kemal Ataturk founded the Turkish republic in 1923.

The armed forces want an end to political violence that has forced the government to keep 19 provinces under martial law for a full year and has cost some 2,200 lives.

The latest eruption was on Christmas Eve, when five were killed, scores wounded and hundreds arrested when left-wing demonstrators clashed with security forces in Ankara and Istanbul.

U.S. military sales to Thailand quadruple in one year

BANGKOK, Thailand (UPI) — America has quadrupled its military sales to Thailand and beefed up the number of U.S. Army instructors in the Southeast Asian country in the year since Vietnam invaded Cambodia, the chief of the joint U.S. military advisory group said Wednesday.

Sales climbed from $100 million to $400 million in 1979 with the introduction of sophisticated new U.S. weapons such as the M48A5 tank, the C-130 transport plane and new anti-tank weapons, Air Force Col. William R. Deans said.

The biggest military training team in Thailand in recent years — 10 U.S. Army armor instructors — returned to the United States last week after teaching a six-week course on the new tank.

The increase in instructors coming here "is associated with the arrival of new kinds of weapons," Deans said.

Thailand is worried about its tank defenses because of the year-long occupation of neighboring Cambodia by tank-equipped Vietnamese forces, Col. Deans said. The Vietnamese have an estimated 200,000 troops in Cambodia.

Soames rejects guerrillas' plea for more time

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (UPI) — British Governor Lord Soames Wednesday rejected Patriotic Front demands for an extension to the Friday deadline for guerrillas to report to Commonwealth officials at reception centers in the bush.

"The seven-day interval and the provision for assembly areas are central elements to a solemn and binding agreement," his spokesman said. "They cannot now be changed."

He was responding to complaints by Patriotic Front officials that the week allowed for the guerrillas to assemble was far too short a time to get word to their bush fighters.

A spokesman for Joshua Nkomo said the deadline should be extended several weeks until Robert Mugabe's representative called for the time span to be prolonged for six months.

They aired their demands as the British showed growing impatience and anxiety over the relatively low percentage of guerrillas reporting to campsites where they were to remain until after elections at the end of February.

Military spokesmen said only 1,500 of these bush fighters moved into the assembly points in the first five days of the truce, compared with an estimated total of 14,000 inside the country.

They also reported 45 new incidents of violence, and crime directly attributable to guerrilla units around the country.

Jim Carlin waves as he leaves Portland, Me., on powered surfboard to begin 4,000-mile journey

Klein family likes to be first

United Press-International
BABY NEW-YEAR
"One thing is certain about men in the Klein family — they like to be first: Gail Klein gave birth Tuesday at 12:30 a.m. in Washington, D.C., to a 9-pound, 5-ounce boy — the first baby of 1980 in the nation's capital. Exactly 30 years earlier, her husband, Roger Klein, was the first baby of the new year in Oak Ridge, Tenn. Says Mrs. Klein of her new son, "It was a nice way for him to be born."

HAUNTING MELODY
Daniel Follack, may be "ghost playing" now, but he'll be stroking the keyboard under his own name at the end of the month. Follack — who lost only to Van Cliburn at the 1958 Tchaikovsky competition in Moscow — has been invited to tour China. He'll be the first American-born pianist asked to play Peking since the thaw of the cold war. Right now, Follack is busy making Richard Dreyfuss sound like a credible keyboard artist for Columbia Pictures' "The Competition."

BOARDING PARTY
Supersurfer Jim Carlin is out to confirm his title once and for all — with a 4,000-mile trip from Portland, Maine, to Matamoros, Mexico, aboard a motorized surfboard. Carlin cast off Wednesday — says he'll surf down the Atlantic seaboard, through an inland waterway in Florida and into the Gulf of Mexico in about two weeks. The trip is nothing new. He made a 1,600-mile voyage down the Mississippi last year and a 1,200-mile trip from New York to Florida in 1978.

HOLEY HOLIDAY
John Halpern, Jack Bashkow and 10 fellow New York artists celebrated New Year's Eve down in a hole. It was a nice hole — 10 feet wide and 4 feet deep. They dug it themselves in a subtle stream Manhattan lot. The purpose — to discuss why the winter, says Halpern, "The physical experience of working became part of the dialogue. The activity was part of the meaning." Adds Bashkow, "Digging was very satisfactory. You felt you were digging into something." Different strokes ...

PROCRUSTINATING
It was a gala wedding Tuesday in Menesqueville, France. The bride, Marie-Angèle Millet, is 38. The groom, René Cuhagne, is 78. The mayor gave them a banquet and the minister at the church ceremony gave them a tribute. Said he, "This couple has set an example to so many young people who only think to break off their relationships or shy away from ties." They have lived. They've been living together for 44 years. They gave no reason for deciding to make it official.

Richard Rodgers mourned

NEW YORK (UPI) — Several hundred mourners wept Wednesday as composer Richard Rodgers was eulogized at a private funeral as the man whose melodies are the heritage of the world.

"To the music of Bach, more than 250 family members and friends filed into the Bethel Chapel at Temple Emanuel on Fifth Avenue to pay tribute to the "composer" of "Oklahoma," "The King and I," and "The Sound of Music."
Rodgers, whose health had been declining since 1974 when he underwent a tracheotomy for throat cancer, died Sunday at his apartment in the Pierre Hotel, a few blocks from the temple. He was 77 years old.
Among the mourners were actresses Lillian Gish, Helen Hayes and Gale Sondergaard. — (Twin Falls) newspaperman Harry Reasoner, former Mayor John Lindsay, and Mayor Edward Koch, who sat alone in one of three rows that had been reserved for family members at the front of the chapel.

Rodgers' wife of 49 years, Dorothy Feiner Rodgers, sat in a front row with her children and grandchildren. She wept briefly at the beginning of the service when Metropolitan Opera star Shirley Verrett, a longtime friend of Rodgers, sang Bach's "Bist Du Bel Mir" (I Thou Art Near). Then she sat with her head held high.

Ronald B. Sobel, senior rabbi at Temple Emanuel began his eulogy saying, "Let us now praise famous men."

"Only from a man who loved life so passionately could come the special creativeness that was the hallmark of Richard Rodgers," Sobel said. "Through his songs, Richard Rodgers has probably given more pleasure to more people than anyone else in the 20th Century."

"His melodies are truly the heritage of the world."

Powers, astronauts' wives, succumbs in Phoenix home

PHOENIX, Ariz. (UPI) — Lt. Col. John A. "Shorty" Powers, NASA's one-time "Voice of Mission Control" who made the term "A-OK" a global byword, was found dead Tuesday night in his secluded home, police reported Wednesday.
Powers, 57, who was retired from the Air Force, died of intestinal hemorrhaging caused by chronic alcoholism, Dr. Heinz Karnitschnig, Maricopa County medical examiner, said.
Powers apparently died 24 to 36 hours before his body was discovered Tuesday night by a man who rented a studio on his property.
Powers originated the term "A-OK" during the early flights of the astronauts, and was also credited with popularizing the phrase. "All systems go." He originally credited the "A-OK" term to astronaut Alan Shepard, but transcripts later showed Shepard had not used it, and Powers then said it had come to him during the excitement of describing the flight.

Powers was appointed public affairs officer responsible for the original seven astronauts in 1959 and became so close to them he was often called the "eighth astronaut."
He once described his job with the astronauts as "the most exciting job I've ever had."
During the Mercury missions, the first manned American space flights, reports from Powers often were the first indication of how the flights were progressing. The six flights Powers was involved with included the first orbital flight by John Glenn.
He left the space program in 1964 in a dispute over a remark he made at a news conference after the last Mercury shot was launched. Powers later said he had not been happy with the way the program was being publicized.

Poster child shot by party reveler

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (UPI) — The 1980 National Easter Seal Poster Child shot in the face during a neighborhood "New Year's" celebration, may have been wounded by a reveler firing a gun instead of fireworks, police said Wednesday.
The girl's mother, Helen Alvarado, said she, her daughter, the child's young friend and the aunt were watching fireworks about 12:15 a.m. Tuesday when suddenly she turned to see Jeanette holding her hands to her blood-covered face.
"Alice said she had been shot," the mother said. "We didn't know where the bullet came from."
The girl, described by her school principal as very bright, was named last November as poster child for the National Easter Seal Society.

Police Lt. Robert Katz, terming the shooting "a cruel and senseless act," said questioning of area residents had provided no clues.
"We are baffled as to the true motive," Katz said.

Murder, war death rate differs little over years

Somebody dies violently by murder or in war just about every 66 seconds. Or so some scholars believe. One study in particular—called "Statistics of Deadly Quarrels" by Lewis F. Richardson—examined the years between 1820 and 1945. It suggested the every-66-seconds figure. Nothing indicates the death rate differed much, either, or since.

Item No. 692D in our Love and War man's file is an observation by actor Glenn Ford: "I've always believed that a gentleman must be two things—he must be gentle and he mustn't be afraid to cry. Unfortunately, every woman I've met can't stand that type of man."

The renowned writer James Joyce made his choice, too, of the most beautiful word in the English language: "Cuspider."

HIGHEST PAID

Q. Who's the highest paid movie actor now?
A. Steve McQueen, it's said. He gets $5 million up front against 15 percent of the domestic gross as well as 15 percent of the overseas net.

Q. Who was the so-called "father of capitalism"?
A. Adam Smith. He never used the word capitalism, incidentally. Karl Marx coined it.

Q. Do ants have eyes?
A. Some do, some don't.

If you were a resident of either Jersey or Guernsey Island off the coast of France, you most probably would refer to the Queen of England as the Duchess of Normandy.

DOUBLE NAMES

The company called Johnson and Johnson employs a man named "Shalaby-Shalaby." That doesn't tell it all, however. He has two doctorates. So you might refer to him as Dr. Dr. Shalaby Shalaby of Johnson and Johnson. Pity he doesn't live in Yalta Yalta, what?

What I like about Austria is that house payments there—both principal and interest—are tax deductible.

Two out of three Swedes live in apartments.

University youth to talk at schools

MOSCOW — Members of the University of Idaho Student Alumni Relations Board will be meeting with high school students across the state during the UI holiday semester break to answer questions about the University.

The students and their parents will have a chance to ask about activities, scholarships, admissions procedures, and many other aspects prospective students might be concerned about.

Steve Snow, a junior business management major and son of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Snow of Burley, will represent the university at the Burley High School today.

At Buhl High School at 8:30 a.m. Friday Terry Dolar, a sophomore business management major and son of Mr. and Mrs. Otto Dolar of Buhl, will help those interested in learning more about UI.

On Monday Ron May, a sophomore biology major and son of Mr. and Mrs. Glenn May of Wendell, will be at Wendell High School to answer questions.

Representing the University of Idaho in Jerome Tuesday is Vicki Last, a freshman foods and nutrition major and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Last of Jerome.

Layne Dodson, a junior business management major and son of Mr. and Mrs. Mack Dodson of Twin Falls, will be at the Twin Falls High School to answer questions at 10 a.m. Tuesday.

Student information gatherings are also planned in other Idaho towns including Hagerman High School where Connie Sturtevant, a sophomore communications major and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Sturtevant of Hagerman, will answer questions and at Wood River High School in Halley where Shelin Armstrong, a freshman veterinary science major and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Armstrong of Sun Valley, will be in charge.

More information is available from high school counselors or the students listed for each gathering.

Food label overhaul is suggested

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The government today proposed a major overhaul of the way processed foods are labeled, to require every ingredient be listed, in many cases, by quantity, with special attention to sugar, fat and salt.

In addition, colors and spices would have to be listed by specific names, nutritional information may become mandatory instead of voluntary, and open date labeling — the type that tells a consumer how long a food will last — could become required for many classes of foods.

The proposals follow months of study and cross-country hearings by the Food and Drug Administration, the Agriculture Department and the Federal Trade Commission.

FDA Commissioner Jere Goyan said half of all food now consumed by Americans is processed.

"Foods no longer are purchased near where they are grown. People have a greater need than ever to know what is in the food they eat — its ingredients, its nutritional value, the colors and additives and other important information," he said.

"We want complete ingredient labeling for all foods. We want colors and spices to be listed by specific name. We want open dating on appropriate information. We want labeling on more foods. And we want the label to provide more information about sugars, salt and cholesterol," he added.

Roger Coleman, vice president of the National Food Processors Association, said that industry group is "troubled by what the three agencies appear to be proposing."

He said a detailed comment would await study of the actual proposals but it appears some of them "would add to the cost of food without bringing corresponding benefits to consumers."

The agencies said consumers and others who commented during its survey mentioned sugar more frequently than any other food ingredient. Current regulations require only that the presence of "added sugar" be mentioned on a label.

The FDA said it will propose changing its regulations to require "the quantitative declaration of total sugars as part of a food's nutrition label when the food contains sugars above a specified level." More study will be required before that level can be determined, it said.

Both the FDA and the USDA said they would also seek legislation giving them the right to require sugar be declared by quantity when public health considerations — such as dental concerns — make it necessary.

The FDA also said it wants legislation to require standardized foods — those such as canned fruits and vegetables, breads and cheeses — to begin listing all their contents.

The agencies said sodium, a factor in high blood pressure, was the second most commonly mentioned food ingredient in its study. It said it would propose changing its regulations to require both sodium and potassium content be listed.

The FDA also said it wants the power to require cholesterol and fatty acid content to be listed.

Dear Abby

How do you tell a 9-year-old his father is now 'Anita'?

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN.

© The Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Syndicate, Inc.

DEAR ABBY: At 16 I married a 21-year-old man I thought I loved. We had a son a year later, but the marriage didn't work out, so we were divorced when the boy was 6. I'm now married to a wonderful man who adopted my son.

Meanwhile, my ex dropped out of sight for three years. Yesterday, out of the blue, he called saying he had something very important to tell me, and would I meet him downtown — alone.

When I met him, I nearly fainted dead away. He was dressed like a woman. He said he was a transsexual who had been living as a woman for two years and was scheduled for a sex change operation next month! He said his name is "Anita" now, and he's in show business. Abby, I couldn't believe my eyes. He had electrolysis to remove his facial hair, look like a woman to develop female figure, and was wearing a wig, makeup, and stylish clothes. He looked like a beautiful woman! This was a great shock to me because he was all man when we were married. Our sex life was normal, and I never dreamed he had these tendencies.

My problem is how to tell our son. Or should I tell him at all? (He's 9 now.) My ex lives in another state and has promised not to come near our son without approval. If the boy ever saw his father as "Anita" he would die, and so would I. I am so afraid someone in this little town will find out about this and blab it around. What should I do?

SMALL TOWN MESS

DEAR MESS: A 9-year-old is too young to comprehend what transsexualism is all about, so hold off telling him. But prepare to tell him one day by educating yourself now. Write to The Janus Information Facility, University of Texas Medical Branch, Galveston, Tex. 77550 for enlightening, up-to-date literature. They are a legitimate, non-profit facility, dependent on private donations, so send $5 to cover cost of literature and mailing.

DEAR ABBY: My daughter met a smooth-talking fellow nine months ago and fell for him. She's 22 and he's 21. He isn't working now and he's not even looking. He keeps saying that—the jobs he wants—don't pay enough. In the meantime he borrows from my daughter's driver, her car, eats every meal at my table, and his clothes are washed in my machine! He never mentions marriage, but my daughter looks at him like he's a god, and she calls this "love."

FED UP

DEAR FED UP: You can ask him, but I think I can tell you. His intentions are to eat at your table, drive your daughter's car, get his clothes washed in your machine, and freeload off you and your daughter as long as you let him.

DEAR ABBY: I have a mother-in-law who comes to my house and starts cleaning it up, or changing things around, the minute she gets here. If my clothes are in the dryer, she takes them out and folds them. She's always poking around in my cupboards and rearranging things.

If I had a dirty or messy house, that would be a different story, but my house is spotless, and I am never behind in my laundry.

This really took the cake: She came over and pulled the sheets right off my bed and laundered them! I was never so insulted in all my life. (I change my sheets on Friday, and this was only Sunday!)

I spoke to my husband about her, and he said, "Don't hassle her. She's getting old." (Abby, she's 46.)

Please tell me how to handle her. HAD IT IN ALLENTOWN DEAR ABBY: To handle such a strong and assertive person, you must be even stronger and more assertive. Let her know in no uncertain terms that when she is in your home, she is a guest—and she's not to do a thing—At 46, she's young enough to learn.

Are you the lonely face in the crowd? Friends make you a winner, and Abby tells you how to win them in her booklet, "How To Be Popular: You're Never Too Young or Too Old." Send $1 with a long, self-addressed, stamped (28 cents) envelope to Abby: 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

Dr. Lamb

Calorie needs are different

By LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D. (Newspaper Enterprise Association), Dear Dr. Lamb,

I want to comment in reference to your column about the lady who was unable to lose weight even though she only consumed a 1300-calorie diet and engaged in a vigorous exercise program daily. I gather you felt that she either couldn't count calories well or might not be telling the truth. But I am like her, and I know other women with the same problem.

First, the term hypometabolic to describe this condition. It's a slow metabolism that's not hypothyroid. I take one grain of thyroid and can burn nine calories per pound of body weight for 24 hours if I also follow a program of long-distance running. Of course, I only weigh 100 pounds so I can only eat about 900 calories a day.

I think there are a number of women who have this problem, and they have difficulties because well or ask advice from a male-dominated medical establishment. Instead of getting help, they're humiliated. We're told we're not possible and we can't count or that we're crazy or liars, or all of the above. Maybe after doctors admit we exist they will be able to study the problem and help us.

Dear Reader, As I've indicated before, there are certain laws of nature that can't be changed. You are absolutely right that if a person really didn't use very many calories he would get fat on a relatively low-calorie diet. The law of energy simply is that if you consume more calories than your body uses, you will accumulate fat. And, in order to lose body fat, which is nothing more than stored energy, you have to take in fewer calories than your body uses.

Now anyone who thinks that he or she is one of the low-metabolism group you speak of can really have it verified. All you have to do is have your doctor request a basal metabolism rate test. This is an old test in medicine based on how much oxygen the body consumes. It's done in the resting state after a good night's rest and with the person fasting. Lying there resting for an hour the total amount of oxygen used at absolute rest can be measured.

The technician can multiply the liters of oxygen the body actually used by 4.825 to determine how many calories the body uses for one hour at absolute rest. By multiplying this by 24 hours, you can determine how many calories the body would use if you stayed in bed and rested all day long. The normal adult will use between 1900 and 2400 calories a day under such circumstances.

Clearly, if you adjust the diet for such a person to provide exactly the same number of calories that the body uses for the entire 24-hour period, that individual would be consuming fewer calories than the body would use when you're up and active part of the day. So your question can be easily verified with facts rather than argued about.

Using available formulas, your basal calorie requirements for a full day are only about 1000 calories. But your individual requirements could be calculated with the method I just described.

Readers who want a balanced diet plan to help lose excess body fat can send 75 cents with a long-stamped, self-addressed envelope for The Health Letter number 47, Weight Losing Diet. Send your request to Dr. Lamb, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1501, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

Expeditions to witness sun eclipse Feb. 16

By WALTER SULLIVAN
© N.Y. Times Service

NEW YORK — No predictable celestial event is more awesome than a total eclipse of the sun. Once a person has witnessed one of them, the temptation to repeat the experience is "almost irresistible."

Although for Americans the path of the next one, on Feb. 16, will be remote, as it sweeps across Africa and southern Asia, at least 10 expeditions and tours are being organized to enable them to witness the spectacle.

In addition to the tourists, scientists will take up positions along the eclipse path while others fire rockets from White Sands, N.M., or chase the moon's shadow — in specially-instrumented aircraft. The eclipse will last the longest — four minutes and eight seconds — just off the coast of Africa, after it has started across the Indian Ocean.

With the advent of space observations of the sun a total eclipse, no longer provides the unique observing opportunities it once did. Nevertheless, a trip to India or Africa is less expensive and easier than one into space, and many will take advantage of it.

Total eclipses of the sun occur roughly once a year when the moon completely covers the face of the sun. They are visible only along a narrow path. On Aug. 10 there will be an annular eclipse of the sun — one in which the face of the moon does not entirely cover the sun.

A total solar eclipse occurs only when the earth is far enough from the sun and the moon is close enough to the earth for all sunlight to be cut off. It is only then that the sun's halo of light — or corona — with its radiating streamers can be seen in all its glory.

Watching the sun's face by means of special interest because it will be close to the maximum of the 11-year cycle of sunspots and solar eruptions. Those who see the eclipse in clear weather should observe, in addition to the shimmering-white corona, deep-red tongues of flame soaring into space around the moon's edge.

The path of the moon's shadow will first touch the Atlantic Ocean, then sweep across-Euro-Africa, the Indian Ocean, India and Southeast Asia into South China.

Most of the tours offer professional activities as guides and, in some cases, specialists on the culture of the region to be visited. Several include an African safari as an optional sidelight.

One is offered by the American Museum-Hayden Planetarium in New York and Park East Tours of 184 Broadway. Dr. Kenneth L. Franklin of the planetarium will be co-leader. The basic cost is $2,195. Another is provided by the Amateur Observers Society-of-New York and Design Studio-Travel, 2620 Bouck Ave., the Bronx. The base cost is $1,995.

Star and Sky Magazine, P.O. Box 324 — Department S, Southport, Conn., offers a trip taking in both Egypt and Kenya at a basic cost of $2,195. Other tours are being organized by agencies in Canada and on the West Coast.

A more professional expedition with sessions at scientific institutions in India is sponsored by the American Astronomical Society in conjunction with Professional Group Travel Inc.

Police escort five from Moonie camp

BOSTON (UPI) — Debbie Block says she was grateful when a member of the Unification Church offered her a place to stay on Christmas Eve. And she thought the group's $20 trip to Florida would be fun.

"I just didn't know what I was getting myself into," she said Tuesday after police escorted her and four other students out of a Florida campground where followers of the Rev. Sun Myung Moon were holding a church seminar.

Miss Block, a 19-year-old Northeastern University student from Medfield, Mass., said her encounter with the "Moonies" began Dec. 24 as she wandered around Boston's Allston section on Christmas Eve trying to find an apartment to rent.

"I couldn't find anything I could afford and I was feeling pretty bad when a man came up to me, handed me a flower and said, 'Here's a flower for a beautiful person.' I said, 'I'm not beautiful.'"

He asked what her problem was and then invited her to come and live in a suburban Brookline home run by the Collegiate Association for the Research of Principles (CARP), an offshoot of the Unification Church, she said.

After several days, she signed up for the $20 trip to Florida, which she said was billed as a week of "fun, sun and surf" at a CARP retreat about 16 miles south of Gainesville, Fla.

Just before leaving, Miss Block said she was taken off the bus carrying about 50 others and placed in a van by CARP members who told her they were afraid her parents would have police stop the bus.

"I objected, but they kept telling me I had to learn to break away from my parents," she said.

Mother burns baby to 'exorcise' devil

NEW YORK (UPI) — A woman, trying to "get rid of the devil" in her 20-month-old son, scalded him with water, placed him in a hot oven and then stood in the nude crooning an exorcism chant, police said Wednesday.

The child, Leon Justin, was in critical condition in the hospital with burns over 65 percent of his body and was not expected to live. His mother, Patricia Abraham, 25, was charged with first degree assault.

The police said the incident occurred about midnight Tuesday in the woman's first-floor apartment in a low-income housing project in Harlem.

"It was an exorcism rite," a police spokesman said. "She said she was trying to get rid of the devil. God had told her the baby was possessed."

Miss Abraham turned her kitchen oven on, scalded her son with water and placed him inside. Then, she burned his clothes on top of the oven.

Miss Abraham's mother, Lucia Abraham, 56, stood by in a nightgown while the woman chanted and moaned in the nude.

She told neighbors, "If you want to see the devil burn, come on in," the spokesman said.

Neighbors called police and firemen, who found the infant in one of the apartment's three bedrooms. The child was rushed to St. Luke's Hospital, then transferred to the burn unit of New York Hospital-Cornell Medical Center.

Evans says time required

BOISE (UPI)—Gov. John Evans Monday reiterated that the use of wells to dispose of wastewater into the Snake River Plain Aquifer is "inappropriate," but said it would take time and money to rectify the problem.

Following a briefing with state Water Resources Department Director Gary DeWitt, Evans said Health and Welfare Department head Mill Klein, Evans said the departments had drafted new regulations for wastewater disposal wells which have yet to be reviewed by the departments' boards.

He said he expected the rules to be approved by the departments this year and be before the Legislature in 1981.

But even with new regulations, Evans said it was estimated about $100 million would be needed to eliminate present waste disposal wells.

Evans said recent reports that about 5,000 wells existed in the state were "inaccurate." The departments of Health and Welfare and Water Resources could account for only about 1,000, he said.

However, he said it is still "a serious problem that needs to be rectified." He also said he did not believe agriculture should be exempted from compliance with more stringent controls.

"Agriculture as an industry, should be treated like any other," he said.

Allred said the departments were looking at methods of collecting the contaminants before they were injected into the aquifer. He said one of the most expensive methods would be the use of retention ponds, which would require a certain amount of land and the cost of maintaining the ponds.

He said the two primary contaminants

House candidates call for less government

BOISE (UPI)—Republican Wayne Kidwell and Democrat Glen Nichols Wednesday called for a reduction in government in their announcements as candidates for the 1st Congressional District in Boise.

"My concern and disenchantment have grown out of the feeling that we in this country have turned far too much control over in every aspect of our daily lives to the federal government," said Nichols, who is director of the Idaho Department of Employment.

"We have abdicated individual responsibility and initiative and turned to Washington, D.C., to solve many, many problems that could better be solved in our state capital or in Wallace, Kellogg, Coeur d'Alene, Moscow or other communities, and by institutions other than government."

Nichols said the "family-free" market system.

Nichols said he advocated "less government and particularly at the federal level."

"Free enterprise and private initiative are the backbone of our nation's society and economy and are the fundamental source of our greatness," he said. "We need to return to a reliance on our private sector as the key to solving our nation's problems. We must reverse the recent trend to rely on government as the answer to all our problems."

Kidwell, a former Idaho attorney general, said he also supported less government regulation and a balanced budget in a news conference one hour after Nichols' announcement.

"We must begin to control federal spending and reduce federal taxation," Kidwell said. "In this regard, I support a federal constitutional amendment to require a balanced budget."

"Congress must stop delegating its responsibility to overzealous regulating agencies that are overwhelming this country with unnecessary rules and regulations."

Good reviews on Goldschmidt

WASHINGTON — Waiting to see Transportation Secretary Neil Goldschmidt is like waiting to see the doctor.

First you wait in a very large waiting room while a constant flow of humanity moves past. An assistant press secretary has been sent up to tell you things are running a little late. After 20 minutes the chief press secretary arrives to convey you to another, smaller waiting room which is done in the manner of Western Hotels. After 20 minutes, the press secretary dies of the wait and chafes to return to his office. So another aide is brought in to make more conversation. When the appointment is almost one hour over, the secretary is free.

As mayor of Portland, Goldschmidt conveyed the air of a man trying to do twice as much as he could hope to accomplish. Another characteristic was his rapid-fire speech—hard to believe, but he talks even more rapidly now than in those days.

He still smokes cigars, and he recently was pictured in that pose—something he threatened photographers not to do in Portland. The self-deprecation is still there. "I can't afford the wine I like and the country that makes the cigars I like, I can't afford them, but we can't import them anyway," says Goldschmidt.

In the wake of the recent flurry over Goldschmidt's piddling in Chicago Mayor Jane Byrne, he continues to get good press here. While some Oregonians were embarrassed and seemed let down at Goldschmidt's strained, drawn-out tiff with Byrne, it has not seemed to hurt him here.

Deputy Secretary Super-Silvestro, the Administration, was the headline on a recent Washington Post article, which featured a drawing of Goldschmidt, vest open, cigar in hand.

Of the Byrne affair, the Post wrote, "It has not harmed his good standing with the Carter-Mondale campaign committee." The Post reported that when President Carter recently was unable to make campaign commitments and Vice President Mondale had to substitute, Goldschmidt was assigned to substitute for Mondale.

Why, then, did Goldschmidt trouble himself to joke about the Byrne affair in Portland, saying that he'd hopped across the country with one foot in his mouth?

"I didn't mean to apologize," he says. "It was my way of saying, 'There is a much less here than meets the eye.' People like you to make fun of yourself, and I would like to do it a little, so what can I do. If I don't make fun of myself, someone else will."

In light of the good reviews he gets here for his ability to play the political renegade, Goldschmidt bristles at the suggestion that re-election campaigning will inhibit him from accomplishing much. "You know me well enough to know that I don't want to spend my time traveling for the president," he says. "If the president had really wanted someone to come here and spend full time running for office, I would have taken the job. And, by the way, this is not what he said."

"I have made maybe four trips that were specifically for politics. A one-day trip to Portland and Seattle with the vice president, a night trip to Philadelphia and a night trip to Miami. That's all. Now I have tagged on some political stops to other things."

"The appointment of time is around 90 percent. I'm putting in 12 to 14 hours a day here and almost none of it is on politics."

Asked about the Milwaukee Road issue, Goldschmidt does manage to take a shot at Edward Kennedy, Carter's challenger. "Sen. Kennedy's recent discussion of the railroad provides an enormous example of how little he knows about railroads. If Kennedy wants to make railroads an issue, I'd love to see him out on the stump somewhere and talk about it because I don't think he knows what he's talking about."

Goldschmidt's education as a cabinet officer has been largely on the subject of railroads. "We have a serious problem with railroads and that is that you've got to get them in a position where they can respond to what the economy does. Railroads don't push the economy, it's the other way around. Without the problems of the farm states, you've got the whole question of how you shift to a coal strategy in the south and southeast off oil and natural gas, and in upper New England and New York off oil, when you can't move coal."

"There is such need that we could have wall-to-wall coal trains out there in places that aren't equipped to handle it. There's a whole shift going on."

"It has got to be a situation where we choose between letting our current system of financing capital improvements in the United States work, or we buy the railroads and end up with another part of the gross national product occupied in a government endeavor."

Goldschmidt finds Carter's situation not unlike what he faced as a new mayor. "The president's attitude is not dissimilar from what I found in my first term in office. You really don't have a choice not to stand and fight or to go on the offensive almost every place.

"It isn't an isolated case of mechanical problem in an industry. It's the fundamental underpinnings of the way our economy works that are being affected by the impact of oil dependence and the effect on the dollar and on inflation."

"General Motors in their research capacity had a truck that would reduce wind resistance substantially, and probably result in about 30 percent fuel savings. The truck is illegal. The cab size is not legal. Sen. Charles Percy, R-Ill., and our shop and others are working on changes in cab size and overall length for fuel efficiency."

"You've got to go after it everywhere. You can't say, 'We'll do that this year and maybe in two or three years we'll get to something else.'"

SEATTLE (UPI)—Smoked-filled the cabin of a Hughes Airwest DC-9 minutes after taking off from Seattle-Tacoma Airport Wednesday and passengers were forced to use oxygen breathing masks while the aircraft made an emergency landing.

One unidentified female passenger who was apparently returning to the University of Oregon, was hospitalized as a precautionary measure, reported Mike Flynn, UPI regional executive from San Francisco, who was aboard Flight 901 when it returned to the ground at 8 a.m.

Robert Schultz, Hughes Airwest spokesman in Seattle, had no comment.

The plane took off at about 7:30 a.m., had leveled off and passengers were beginning to settle in after the "No Smoking" lamp turned off, Flynn said.

Almost immediately smoke began filtering through the cabin, and at that point the covers to oxygen masks over the passenger seats dropped down and passengers were advised by the cabin attendants to use the apparatus. "There was no panic, just a few wide eyes," Flynn said.

The plane descended quickly back to the airport where fire equipment with red "flights" flashing lined the runway as it touched down. Passengers breathed through the oxygen masks until the doors were opened and they filed off the aircraft.

The plane had been en route to San Francisco with stops at Eugene, Redmond, Klamath Falls, Ore., and Redding, Calif.

The Franklin County Sheriff's Office said the youngster was hunting with his father when he fell into the hot pond near Preston, Idaho. An ambulance rushed the boy to the university hospital in Salt Lake.

Party of 13 turns back

Teton Peak refuses climbers

GRAND TETON PARK, Wyo. (UPI) — Thirteen mountaineers trying to scale Grand Teton Peak on New Year's Day may have been turned back by savage winds and ice, a park ranger said today.

Bob Howard said the weather around the Grand Teton Range in northwest Wyoming had deteriorated in the last three days, and today he mentioned another problem: "raining," or the crystallization of moisture on cold objects.

Moisture will build crystals out from anything coming in the wind," he said. "It's one of the real stoppers in mountain climbing."

The climbers, four instructors and nine graduates of the National Outdoor Leadership School in Lander, Wyo., set out Friday and hoped to scale 13,700-foot Grand Teton peak by New Year's Day.

But Howard said no one would know whether they were successful until the party returns, because they were not carrying a radio.

"It is completely overcast and even if it weren't you probably couldn't see them with a telescope," Howard said. "The route for the climb is up the back side."

The original climbing party numbered 16, but one member suffered a minor shoulder injury and two others decided the effort was not worth it, Howard said.

"Some people came out three days ago and said there are real high winds up there," he said.

Last year's attempt by the NOLS team was thwarted at the 11,000-foot level by high winds and freezing temperatures.

Now, to clean up mess....

PASADENA (UPI) — All that remains at the foot of the towering San Gabriel Mountains — scene of the lavish Tournament of Roses Parade — are tons of trash and the pounding sounds of dismantlers.

City workers began cleaning up the New Year's Day bonanza moments after the final flower-decked float pulled into Victory Park Tuesday morning. The 58 floats were on display throughout the day today.

While an estimated half-million persons swarmed over floats for a closer look, city workmen scooped up trash and garbage left by the 1.4 million spectators who lined the Colorado Boulevard parade route.

Grandstands that provided choice views for 75,000 paradegoers were dismantled and trucked away for the 2nd edition of the Rose Parade. Some 125 million television viewers saw the parade worldwide.

An estimated half-million persons secured prime curbside locations Sunday and Monday; untired sleeping bags and set-up barbecues for the traditional New Year's Eve street celebration.

Bolmy temperatures brought twice the number of usual overnight camps, police said. It also brought out the drunks and brawlers, and by parade time there had been 150 arrests.

"There were a lot of really nasty people out there," said police spokesman Rocky McAllister. "The crowd displayed a more violent nature than last year."

The death of a teen-ager and the stabbing of a young man marred festivities.

Lamont Gladden, 16, was shot to death in an alley near Colorado Boulevard just before dawn. Five minutes later, Bruce Morgan, 25, was critically stabbed in an unrelated attack.

But the violence went unnoticed by the spectators along the 5 1/2-mile parade route. The atmosphere was carnival-like, with roller skaters weaving through the crowd and Frisbees skimming through the air.

The parade theme was "Music of America," and singer Frank Sinatra, riding in a blue convertible with his wife, Barbara, was the grand marshal.

Watch bowls? Not when you can fly kites.

SEATTLE (UPI) — J.C. Young did not join millions of people across the country who were glued to their television sets Tuesday watching the college football bowl games — he was flying his kite.

Young's kite was three feet wide, about 105 feet long and it sported a dragon head.

The red, green and gold kite with brown chicken feathers weighed a little over two pounds.

It was one of the premier kites flown at the Washington Kitefliers Association's sixth annual "Protest the Bowls" kite fly at Golden Gardens Park on the shore of Puget Sound.

Young, a 60-year-old Seattle resident who fled mainland China in 1950, said he has flown kites for more than 30 years ago, built the kite a year ago. He said he worked on it three to four hours a day for three weeks.

"Nobody in China or any place makes a kite like this anymore," Young said. "It is just too much work."

Young carefully packed the dragon kite away and pulled out another hand made kite shaped like an eagle with a five-foot wing span.

He sent that kite into the air.

"This kite can flap its wings by itself," Young said. "I don't have to do a thing except hold it still. If the wind is right it flaps its wings."

"When I was flying it once at Saltwater State Park it was attacked by seagulls," he said. "They came in formation and made a pass at it and then flew away."

Nuclear plant at full power

RAINIER, Ore. (UPI) — The Trojan nuclear-power plant reached capacity production of 1.1 million kilowatts at 8:05 a.m. today, Bruce Landrey, spokesman for Portland General Electric Co., said.

The plant reached full production 23 1/2 hours after it was restarted at the end of an 80-day closure while the firm repaired a leak in the steam generator and strengthened pipe restraints to meet standards for earthquake resistance.

PGE won permission Monday to return Trojan to operation under an interim permit while making modifications to the control room to comply with earthquake resistance standards. A hearing on PGE's plan for making those modifications is scheduled April 1.

PGE officials warned that, despite the return of Trojan to full operation, conservation of electricity is still needed for the cold months ahead. He said the company must repay other utilities with provided with power while Trojan was shut down.

Fire burns up sheik's mansion

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — A three-year-old Lewiston, Idaho boy who accidentally tumbled into a natural hot springs was listed in critical condition today at the University of Utah Medical Center.

David Harris suffered second-degree burns over 95 percent of his body, said a spokesman at the hospital's Intermountain Burn Center.

The Franklin County Sheriff's Office said the youngster was hunting with his father Tuesday when he fell into the hot pond near Preston, Idaho. An ambulance rushed the lot to the university hospital in Salt Lake.

Man dies of rock thrown in melee

RENO (UPI) — A Salt Lake City man died Wednesday, apparently a victim of a thrown rock during New Year's Eve "wreath" Tuesday in downtown "caspio row" in which 2,000 persons were involved.

Police said the man, whose identity was withheld pending notification of family, died at St. Mary's Hospital where he was taken after found lying unresponsive in an intersection where the disturbance took place.

Death was attributed to a skull fracture, possibly caused by a rock or a bottle, hurled during the fracas.

During the three-hour melee, there was rock and bottle throwing, looting and setting of fires. Police took more than 130 persons into custody but most were released without charges being filed against them.

City Manager Henry Etchemendy said Wednesday officers showed restraint in handling the situation and did not over-react to the problems.

U.S. 'unprepared' for atomic attack

PROVO, Utah (UPI) — A Brigham Young University faculty member who wrote a disaster survival manual for the Energy Department says America is almost totally unprepared for a nuclear attack.

"At this point the amount of Civil Defense preparation is almost negligible in this country," Dr. Kay Franz, an associate professor of food sciences and nutrition, said.

Her manual outlining the nutritional needs of the United States, in case of an atomic attack or other major disaster is the first of its kind ever distributed, the country's Civil Defense officials.

The United States has seen a steady decline in the preparation for nuclear war since the early 1960s while the Soviet Union and China have continued to prepare for a possible attack, said Franz.

Utah's loss of sugar beets hikes small grains harvest

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — The virtual closing out of the sugar-beet industry in Utah was a major factor in increasing the number of acres of small grains harvested in the state in 1979 by 6.23 percent.

The Utah Crop and Livestock Reporting Service said that the acreage of small grains — wheat, oats and barley — harvested during 1979 totaled 393,000 compared with 370,000 the previous year when sugar beet growing ground to a halt in the state.

However, despite the increased acreage harvested, production of winter wheat was down 10 percent from 5.82 million bushels in 1978 to 5.04 million during 1979. That meant the average yield per acre dropped from 29 bushels to 24 bushels.

The production of spring wheat totaled 1.64 million bushels during the 1979 season — an increase of 37 percent from the previous year with yield standing at 41 bushels per acre compared with 36 in 1978.

The total amount of oats produced was 788,000 bushels during 1979 — an increase of 23 percent from the previous year's crop. The yield per acre jumped by 11 bushels to 59.

World champion calf roper Dean Oliver of Boise shared his rope tying skills with several cowboys at the CSI Expo Center...

Roping Local cowboys are getting instruction from one of the best — Dean Oliver

BY IRWIN CURTIN
Times-News sports writer
TWIN FALLS — The green cardigan-wearing Dean Oliver was wearing Wednesday morning seemed out of place.

...and later those cowboys demonstrated what they had learned

He was in the College of Southern Idaho Expo Center watching nearly 25 cowboys toss ropes at bales of hay, which, incidentally, are more cooperative targets than the calves they usually aim at while striding their horse-like talents.

Oliver, who is 50 now, butlered Alabama slightly creased with age. He's a mountain of a man: 6-3, 200 pounds, broad shouldered and ramrod straight. His large, weathered, right-hand gently devoured the right-hand a visitor offered in greeting.

Oliver, who talks about his past and success only with a little prodding, said he gets a lot of satisfaction from passing along his knowledge.

CSI to face tough tests on the road

ready to go home. They tell me that last year Spokane held the ball on CSI when they beat CSI (127-25) in Spokane. I don't anticipate them doing that against us because they had a good offensive line against us here, shot the ball well. Then (Grice) Searies had a great night against us. I feel based on their home floor they'll want to show his offensive skills. Overall I feel that Spokane believes they played pretty well against us here and can beat us on their floor with their crowd, without going to blowdown," he said.

A vote for a college football playoff game

By DAVE ANDERSON

NEW YORK — Two polls and one computer agreed on Alabama Wednesday.

Alabama tops all three polls
(Complete ranking list B7)
NEW YORK (UPI) — There's no doubt about it — Alabama is No. 1.

Alabama also won the title in both the Associated Press and New York Times polls.

Rollnick also explained that if Alabama had lost the Sugar Bowl, the winner of the Rose Bowl would not necessarily have emerged as No. 1.

Analysis
pairings: Alabama-Houston, Southern Cal-Oklahoma.

Alabama is No. 1. Rollnick explained, "because it's undefeated and untied and also because of its defense. It held its opponents to a ridiculously low total of 55 points a game."

Louisiana State, meanwhile, was the only common opponent for both Alabama and Southern Cal.

Rollnick also explained that if Alabama had lost the Sugar Bowl, the winner of the Rose Bowl would not necessarily have emerged as No. 1.

Big Sky conference to open league season

BOISE — The "second season" in the Big Sky Conference basketball season opens Thursday.

Montana will visit Northern Arizona and Montana State at Nevada-Reno in the first league game of the year.

Each of the eight teams will play the other twice — home and on the road. The team with the best regular season record will host the Big Sky post-season basketball tournament Feb. 2-March 1. From that four-team tournament will come the Big Sky's representative to the NCAA's.

League action continues Friday with Boise State at Weber State and Idaho at Idaho State.

SHORT TAKES

Weber State will take an 11-game winning streak into the 1980s. They only lost to Utah State in overtime. In the league's longest win streak — 14 games back in 1968-69 by you guessed it, Weber State. Idaho is on a two-game streak, Northern Arizona two and Nevada-Reno one. Boise State's Larry McKinney made the all-tournament squad at the recent Puget Sound Holiday Tournament. Don Newman, a guard, did the same at the Far West Classic. Six Big Sky players are on the Pizza Hut all-star ballot including Idaho's Don Newman, Montana's John Strodes, Nevada-Reno's Gene Ramsom, Northern Arizona's Mark Stevens and Weber State's Bruce Collins and David Johnson. Weber State's Bruce

Lobos seek investigator

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (UPI) — Two district judges were among five candidates being considered for a job to coordinate an investigation of the shooting of a child.

Regent president Henry Jaramilla Jr. declined to identify any of the candidates being considered.

"The majority of them have legal backgrounds and two are district judges," he said. "They asked that their names be kept private until they have a chance to ask their law partners if they could take time off to take the job."

The scandal, which involved the alleged rigging of athletes' transcripts, led to the firing of head basketball coach Norm Ellis and the resignation of assistant coach Manny Gutierrez. The ineptibility of several basketball players and the forfeiture of football and basketball victories.

Reno players charged

RENO (UPI) University of Nevada-Reno basketball players Aaron Cusick and Alvin Alexander were arraigned Wednesday on grand larceny charges.

Justice of the Peace William Beemer set Jan. 16 for a hearing. The athletes were accused of removing property from a room at the College Inn on the campus. They denied it when they were arrested by campus police Tuesday.

Gilmore may be back

CHICAGO (UPI) — Artis Gilmore, the Chicago Bulls 7-foot-2 center who has missed the past 2½ months with a knee injury, may return to action as early as Friday when his team meets the San Diego Clippers.

Gilmore's doctors have given the veteran the go-ahead to play when he feels ready and Chicago Coach Jerry Sloan said Gilmore may see action this weekend.

"The doctors have said he is ready, but it's strictly up to Artis when that will be," Sloan said.

Gilmore, who had never missed a college or professional game before suffering the knee injury during the opening week of the season, said he does not want to come back until he is 100 percent ready.

Oregon drops players

EUGENE, Ore. (UPI) — Two University of Oregon basketball players suspended last week during the Far West Classic in Portland have been dropped from the team by Coach Jim Hanes. It was announced Wednesday.

Center center Dar Harshorne and freshman guard Paul Bain were dropped for what Hanes described as "violations of training rules."

Vilas wins Aussie play

MELBOURNE, Australia (UPI) — Argentina's Guillermo Vilas won his second consecutive Australian Open Tennis Championship Wednesday with a 7-6, 6-3, 6-2 victory over American John Sadri.

Vilas then announced he may miss the French Open this year to concentrate on solely on Wimbledon.

The left-handed Vilas needed 2½ hours to defeat Sadri, who had entered the match with the possibility of a bye because he was using abusive language in a quarter-final match. Sadri, from North Carolina, had already been fined $250 Monday for his behavior.

Oilers head writers picks for all-pro

NEW YORK (UPI) — Led by all-everything Earl Campbell, the Houston Oilers placed five players on the 1979 NFL All-Pro team announced Sunday by the Professional Football Writers of America.

The defending Super Bowl champion Pittsburgh Steelers followed Houston with four players while Denver Broncos garnered three places and the San Diego Chargers and Kansas City Chiefs had two players each named. Dallas, a substantial contributor in recent years, placed only one player — tackle Randy White.

For the second straight year, first-time electees outnumbered repeaters in the annual balloting by 300 sportswriters. Record-breaking passer Don Fouts, whose league-leading 3,022 yards prompted the San Diego Chargers to a divisional championship, was named quarterback while Otis Anderson, the St. Louis Cardinals' running sensation, and punter Burt Reynolds of the Los Angeles Rams, offensive guard Joe Delamater of Buffalo were selected for the second year, as well as linebacker Jack Ham of Pittsburgh and wide receiver Eric Decker of Philadelphia. ## Florida State's unbeaten dreams were shattered

MIAMI (UPI) — Florida State Coach Bobby Bowen walked into the chalkboard Wednesday and diagrammed the defense that dashed his Seminoles' dream of an undefeated season.

Called the "nickel" because it adds a fifth defensive back, Oklahoma switched into the alignment after stopping Florida State repeatedly on first down and forcing the Seminoles into passing situations.

"That was the most frustrating thing in the game," Bowen said about the Orange Bowl contest.

"The success of the 'nickel' was borne out by the performance of Oklahoma's Bud Hebert — the fifth back — who intercepted three Florida State passes. He and his teammates limited Seminole quarterback Jimmy Jordan and Wally Woodham to eight completions in 27 attempts and 100 yards.

"I thought our throwing and catching was the worst since our first halfback (of the year)," Bowen said Wednesday.

"You can't beat a team like Oklahoma without executing perfectly," he added. "... The most underplayed part of their football team was their defense."

Bowden said he believed the Seminoles still belong in the top 10.

Despite his disappointment with his team's play, Bowen said the Orange Bowl loss won't put a damper on Florida State's regular season.

"As time goes by it will be a 11-1 season," the Seminole coach said, quipping that some might say the Seminoles went undefeated in 1979 and just lost the first game of 1980.

"They didn't give me much time. Even the passes I completed I was looking at them from the ground. And a 3-yard touchdown pass from Scanlon to Robert Farrell.

"They are a big, strong physical football team," said Holtz. "They run many different defenses and we were a little confused. We had some missed assignments but that is a credit to Alabama. We just got beat by a better football team."

"Little did I realize that the best football team in the country would play an almost perfect game."

Holtz, however, made it clear that in no way was Alabama only a defensive team.

Sugar defense

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — Alabama's victory over Arkansas in the Sugar Bowl Tuesday could be characterized by one word — defense.

Aggressive, disciplined, constant. These were the three words Arkansas quarterback Kevin Scanlon used to describe the top-ranked Crimson Tide's defense, which lived up to its billing by keying a 24-9 triumph over the seventh-ranked Razorbacks.

"They have the best defense in the country," said Scanlon, who passed for 249 yards and was sacked three times and intercepted twice by the gang-tackling Crimson Tide. "They have the best defensive ends in the

Houston's Dan Pastorini still doubtful for title matchup

By United Press International

Houston Quarterback Dan Pastorini remains a doubtful starter for Sunday's AFC title game with Pittsburgh.

Suffering from a groin muscle pull, the Oilers' starter didn't practice Wednesday.

"It's much better. No matter how good it feels, I don't intend to work out until the pain's gone," Pastorini said.

Punt return specialist Richard Ellender was the only Houston Oiler classified as definitely unable to play in the championship game.

The team's official injury report filed with the NFL office was long but not as pessimistic as the one issued one week ago.

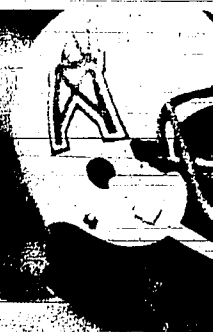

Backup running back Roy Carpenter was the only other Oiler who did not practice. Carpenter is staying off a sore ankle.

Pastorini and running back Earl Campbell missed the Oilers game at San Diego Sunday, but Campbell appears to be healthy. He can hurt in practice and for the third day tested a 10-day old groin pull.

Campbell, wide receiver Ken Burroughs, tight end Mike Barber and middle guard Ken Kennard were decked out on Wednesday.

Mitchell, a second-year pro from Auburn, averaged 28.3 points, had a 12.0 rebound average and shot .547 from the field as Cleveland defeated Detroit, New York and Denver in the Christmas win over the Pistons — he pulled down a career-high 18 rebounds.

"Mike's a remarkable player and has continued improvement among the reasons that we are a legitimate playoff contender," said Cavs' Coach Stan Albeck.

Baker, a former Penn State star, will work with the Jets' linebackers and on special assignments. Baker, New York's sixth-round draft choice in 1964, played 11 seasons in the NFL, all with the Jets, before retiring after the 1974 season. He was traded to the Oakland Raiders on the team that stunned that Baltimore Colts 16-7 in Super Bowl III.

Nilsen said that although the report was "pretty bad," Sadri's good conduct in the subsequent men's singles final — a straight-set loss to Argentina's Guillermo Vilas and the doubles semifinal had influenced him to relent.

Convention bid tells all

In which neither side South started with 13-5-2-2, South became declarer in five clubs. West's lead of the heart king won the first trick. If he had switched to a spade at the second trick, declarer would have had no play for his contract and there would be no story.

Tournament players are very fond of conventions that times these bids can be helpful at arriving at the proper contract. However, sometimes too much information is given to the opponents.
