George Meany

© The Los Angeles Times
 WASHINGTON — George Meany, who became the most influential labor leader in American history and one of the nation's most powerful citizens, died Thursday at the age of 85.
 Meany was admitted to George Washington Hospital Sunday for what was described as a painful buildup of fluid in his legs. He was transferred to the intensive care unit Thursday afternoon, a spokesman for the AIO-CIO said.
 Meany was an old-fashioned liberal who helped bring millions of workers into the middle class of America. He also was a leader of fights for such progressive legislation as civil rights and higher minimum wages.

 But union membership failed to keep pace with the increase in the size of the work force during Meany's long reign as the nation's highest-ranking union leader, and his critics usually blamed him.
 In his later years, Meany's age became for many a symbol of a labor movement grown old and tired, without the radical spark that excited so many intellectuals and liberals in the 1930s and 1940s.
 His furious attacks on communists, his opposition to almost any form of detente with the Soviet Union, his ardent support of the free enterprise system and his hatred of the New Left all combined to disillusion many young people, blacks and liberal intellectuals within the unions that Meany led.

 But he scoffed at those critics and maintained his power through the decades. He was almost without challenge within organized labor, holding firmly to his role as the champion of government as an instrument of social progress.
 While some charged that he was out of step with the American worker, public opinion polls showed that Meany usually reflected the mood of the labor movement; essentially conservative, anti-radical, but willing to fight for higher living standards for all workers and broad social welfare programs for those who needed assistance.

 When a Cabinet officer once asked why he did not stick with "labor" issues instead of jumping into every battle from foreign policy debates to health insurance, Meany snapped: "Sonny-boy, everything that happens today has to do with labor."
 His career as the dominant force of labor and adviser to and often vocal critic of presidents, spanned the generations from Franklin D. Roosevelt to Jimmy Carter.
 The forum for his power was the presidency of the American Federation of Labor and then the merged American Federation of Labor-Congress of Industrial Organizations, the largest independent labor body in the world.

 But his strength came from his astonishingly retentive mind, his unshakable will, his biting sarcasm, his ideological convictions, and his knowledge of and the ability to use the levers of power in all parts of the world.
 Meany died of a little hemorrhage from the high point posts that he held. Yet he forged unprecedented unity within the 13.6-million member AFL-CIO. Those who wanted to deny him could do so with impunity, but few ever did.

Winds, snow shut schools, roads

TWIN FALLS — A winter blizzard swept through southern Idaho early Thursday closing schools, cutting off electrical power to thousands of residents and slowing traffic to a crawl.
 Ski resorts welcomed from one to two feet of new snow although the blizzard conditions shut down some ski operations Thursday.
 Idaho State Police continued travel warnings late Thursday. All trucks were being held at weight stations, the Twin Falls ISP office advised. Officers said they anticipated issuing a warning sometime Thursday night for emergency travel only on all Idaho highways as drifting and storms continued. Galena Summit remained closed and Highway 20 between Mountain-Home and Fairfield had been closed all day.

 Nearly all schools were planning to be back in session today unless conditions worsened during the night. Students were advised to listen to early morning radio broadcasts for latest information.
 Forest Service officials issued avalanche warnings for a broad area from Fairfield to Halley and north to Stanley.
 Jan Packwood, maintenance superintendent for Idaho Power Co. in Twin Falls, said about 15,000 power customers were without power at some time during the day after winds blew down poles, trees and otherwise damaged lines and transformers.

 "Nearly every community in the district except Twin Falls had some power outages early this morning," Packwood said. "The major problem was in the Wood River Valley, where we had a 138,000-volt line go out. About 7,500 users in that area lost electrical service in a single outage."
 Packwood said winds blowing the lines caused the Wood River Valley outage.

 Power company line crews went to work in the blizzard conditions about 2:30 a.m. and remained on the job through the day, Packwood said.
 Winds in Magic Valley were estimated at 50 to 60 miles per hour in gusts during the early morning. Federal Aviation Administration personnel at Twin Falls' Joslin Field airport reported gusts to 51 miles per hour.
 Schools in Twin Falls remained open but those in other districts of the county were closed. Jerome, Cassia, Gooding, Minidoka, Lincoln and Blaine counties' schools were closed.

 Icy roads and blowing snow also forced cancellation of schools in the Deltrich, Richfield, Shoshone, and Valley districts.
 In Minidoka County, two school buses failed to return after a closure was called about 5 a.m. Officials said the driver drivers had already left the terminal when it was decided to close schools. One bus was stuck in drifts and found after an hour. The other left the road near Paul because of zero visibility and came to rest in a field.

Afghans capture province

KABUL, Afghanistan (UPI) — Rebel forces have taken control of the northeast corner of Afghanistan, Western diplomats and guerrilla leaders said Thursday.
 Rebels claimed four "major" victories over Soviet troops in fighting during the past few days.
 Field reports said hundreds of homes and mosques have been destroyed and dozens of civilians killed in heavy bombing to clear the way for an expected Russian counterstrike.
 The Soviets also appear to be fleeing isolated but sustained violence in Washington by Afghan civilians, who have attacked Soviet troops with rocks, knives and guns.
 "The strife will continue just as it did for the Americans in Vietnam," a rebel Afghan diplomat said here, then there.
 Western diplomats said Faisalabad, capital of Badakhshan province in northeastern Afghanistan, fell to rebels within the past three days. It borders China, the Soviet Union and Pakistan.
 "With Faisalabad in their hands, the whole northeastern corner of the country belongs to the rebels," one diplomat said.
 Moslem tribesmen held the city's Afghan army garrison under siege for more than a week. The end came when the airfield that served as the garrison's supply line was seized. The Jung newspaper in Rawalpindi, Pakistan, said 400 Soviet troops died in fierce fighting for control of Faisalabad and at least two helicopters were shot down. It also said the Soviets were preparing an immediate counterattack by bombing the region to prepare for an airlift of reinforcements.
 Spokesmen for the Taliban, one of the guerrilla groups fighting in Afghanistan, claimed their forces have checked Soviet advances in the northeastern provinces of Badakhshan, Kunar and Pakitia.
 The rebels' claims often conflicted with intelligence reports from Washington, which indicated the estimated 55,000 Soviet troops in Afghanistan have so far avoided major battles with the rebels.

Blaine County's Silver Creek included Agency recommends six streams for minimum flows

By DAVID MORRISSEY
 Times-News Writer
 BOISE — The Idaho Water Resource Board has recommended that minimum stream flows be established on sections of six Idaho rivers.
 Included was a 21-mile stretch of world-famous Silver Creek in Blaine County.
 The recommendations came in a letter dated Jan. 7 from the Resource Board to House Speaker Ralph Olmstead, R-Twin Falls, and Senate

Pro Tem Reed Budge, R-Soda Springs.
 Under Idaho's state water plan, recommendations for minimum flows become law if the Legislature accepts or amends them. If the Legislature fails to act on the recommendations by the end of the session, they automatically become law.
 If accepted by the Legislature, creation of the minimum flows establishes new water rights. While those water rights have legal precedence over any claims filed later on the same water, they would not affect existing water rights on those streams.
 Creation of the water flows would mean minimum levels of water would be designated for each of the six streams, providing prior legal claims on the water were not affected.
 How the Legislature deals with the recommendations will be closely watched by supporters of the 1977 water/power initiative. The initiative drive, which was abandoned when legislators promised to finally enact a state water plan, which they did in 1978, would have established minimum stream flows on all rivers and streams in the state with unappropriated water.

 Backers of the initiative have indicated that if the Legislature refuses to establish minimum flows as recommended by the Water Resource Board, the initiative may be resurrected.
 Each of the six streams nominated for minimum stream-flow status was selected because of scenic values or fishing habitats.

 The recommendations now go to legislative committees for examination. According to Rep. Vard Chabbert, R-Albion, chairman of the House Resources and Conservation Committee, his committee will hold public hearings on the proposed minimum flows.
 The streams recommended were:
 • Silver Creek. Two sections of this famous trout fishing stream are named for possible minimum stream flows. The stream was selected for a minimum flow to maintain wild trout habitat.

 The board asked the Legislature to approve a flow of 93 cubic feet per second (cfs) from Picabo Bridge to the confluence of Grove Creek and Stalker Creek. The board also asked for a minimum flow of 74 cfs from the point where Silver Creek intersects with U.S. Highway 93 upstream to Picabo Bridge.

State refusal to lower called affront Lawmakers want second crack at water rule

By STEVE LIPSON
 Times-News Writer
 BOISE — A state board's decision not to lower the dissolved oxygen standard for water below American Falls Dam is an affront to the Legislature, the Senate majority leader said Thursday.
 Key legislators, however, said Thursday they think they will get another chance to change the standards. And if they don't get another chance, they may resort to pressuring the Health and Welfare Board to change the regulations through the budget process.
 Sen. Reed Budge, R-Soda Springs and president pro tem of the Senate, said he is concerned by the board's power to legislate by regulation, especially when the regulations run counter to legislators' wishes.

 "In light of the affront done to the Legislature, legislators are extremely concerned," he said.
 Sen. John Barker, R-Buhl, said he was "disappointed" that the Health and Welfare Board didn't lower the oxygen standard for American Falls.
 "Air-injection equipment at American Falls can satisfy a five-ppm standard, while oxygen-injection equipment costing $1.5 million would be needed to meet the six-part per million standard, he said.

 Barker, who is also head of the American Falls Reservoir District, said the oxygen-injection equipment can't guarantee that the water will always be at six ppm.
 He said he thinks legislators will get a chance to change the oxygen standard. "The biggest mistake legislators is that this package is a new set of rules. There have been tremendous changes in some areas." Some rules were rewritten and all of them were recommended, he said.
 "If legislators cannot amend the dissolved-oxygen regulation, they could pass a bill lowering the standard — a bill, Budge said, "which undoubtedly would be vetoed."

 Budge said there may be other ways for the Legislature to get what it wants from the Health and Welfare Board since the Legislature controls the board's "purse strings."
 "We can get their attention," he said.
 Last year, legislators passed a resolution lowering the Health and Welfare Board's 1974 regulation for dissolved oxygen in state waters from six parts per million to five ppm. But a state judge ruled Tuesday that the Legislature can only change a regulation during the first 45 days of the first session after it is adopted.

 On Wednesday the board approved a revised set of water quality regulations and it rejected a regulation that would have lowered the dissolved oxygen requirement between American Falls Dam and the headwaters of Lake Walcott to five ppm.
 "Since the dissolved oxygen standard in the revised regulations is the same standard adopted in 1974, it isn't clear if it can be changed."
 Jack Hestonberger, deputy attorney general for the Division of Environment, said, "I'm not prepared to say which way it will go."

U.N. debates Soviet issue

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — Over strong protests from the Soviet bloc and the new Afghanists, the U.N. General Assembly Thursday opened an emergency debate on the Soviet military intervention in Afghanistan.

Before the debate opened, Afghanistan's new foreign minister Shah Mohammad Dost protested the session as an "open and flagrant intervention in the internal affairs of the Democratic Republic of Afghanistan."

The entire Soviet bloc then joined the protest but the assembly adopted the agenda without a vote. Dost led off the debate, accusing the former government of Afghanistan of "playing into the hands of foreign reactionaries."

"Then speaker after speaker took the floor to denounce the Soviet intervention before adjournment until this morning. As expected, one of the strongest attacks came from China, which warned that Moscow's intervention in Afghanistan marks a new stage in its expansionist activities in the Third World."

"This is not an isolated event," said Chinese Ambassador Chen Chu, "but an important component of the Soviet global strategy of pushing southward to the Indian Ocean, controlling the sea lanes, setting strategic points, outflanking Europe, threatening Asia and then dominating the world."

Diplomatic sources said a resolution would follow the lines of the protest submitted in the council calling for the "immediate and unconditional withdrawal" of all foreign troops from Afghanistan.

Gunman takes hostages

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — A "hipped-out" gunman holding his pregnant girlfriend and her two small children hostage Thursday rejected an offer to exchange his captives for a police officer and demanded a ship for Iran to help free the American hostages.

Samuel Andrews, 26, who claims to be a prophet, threatened to kill his hostages and himself if police interfered.

About 10 p.m. Thursday — as the ordeal neared its 29th hour — police said communications with Andrews had improved somewhat. They said they had no plans to move in on him so long as no one was being hurt.

Authorities said Andrews, an unemployed security guard, has a history of mental problems. He turned down an offer to free his captives in exchange for City Police Lt. Anthony J. Brozovich.

Jimmy Durante hospitalized

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (UPI) — Comedian Jimmy Durante has been admitted to St. John's Hospital, where the 86-year-old show business veteran is being treated for a form of pneumonia.

Hospital spokesman Chris Thomas said Thursday Durante entered the hospital Tuesday with pneumonia and he was currently in satisfactory condition.

Kennedy defends patriotism

United Press International
Sen. Edward Kennedy rejected suggestions from both Vice President Walter Mondale and the State Department Thursday that he support a resolution endorsing the embargo on arms to Cuba.

"I don't think that I or the members of my family need a lecture from Mr. Mondale or anyone else about patriotism," the Massachusetts Democrat told reporters.

Mondale, campaigning in Iowa for President Carter, denounced Kennedy's criticism and called the embargo "the patriotic thing to do."

Later, State Department spokesman Hodding Carter III raised the specter of Pearl Harbor by comparing some Kennedy advisers to critics who would have opposed a ban on the sale of scrap metal to Japan on the eve of World War II.

Meanwhile, apologeting if he "gave the wrong impression," Kennedy said he "backed away from his call for shipping U.S. arms to the Afghan rebels through Pakistan."

The day before, Reagan said in answer to a question "I think we should be funneling weapons through there (Pakistan) that could be delivered to those freedom fighters in Afghanistan to fight for their own freedom."

But Thursday, he told reporters, "Maybe funneled was a bad choice of words. It gave the impression that I meant the United States was doing this directly to Afghanistan."

Dock boycott in force

United Press International
Dockworkers in several American ports went beyond the call of their union leaders Thursday in refusing to handle cargo on Soviet vessels.

At the same time, the government announced the boycott might interfere with promised shipments of grain to the Soviet Union.

"I think we're going to be short — I think we'll owe them some grain," said Jack Keyser, a spokesman for the Department of Agriculture.

Wednesday, the International Longshoremen's Association President Thomas Gleason, calling the Soviets "international bully-boys" because of their invasion of Afghanistan, announced the union would refuse to load or unload Russian cargo.

In Texas and Pennsylvania Thursday, dockworkers refused to load even Soviet ships that had docked early this week.

In Europe, West German dockworkers announced their support for the boycott, saying they would not handle any Soviet vessels diverted there because of the Longshoremen's action.

Unions on the West Coast and in Canada have refused to join the boycott, but most of the grain still to be shipped would go out of eastern or Gulf state ports manned by ILA workers, Keyser said.

Students meet with Khomeini

TEHRAN, Iran (UPI) — A delegation of militant students holding 50 Americans hostage met Thursday with Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini.

But details of the talks — and any possible discussions over the fate of the hostages — were kept secret.

It was the first face-to-face meeting between the militant and the Islamic strongman since they overran the U.S. Embassy last Nov. 4.

The militants journeyed to Khomeini's headquarters in the Moslem holy city of Qom roughly 24 hours after a key aide to the 79-year-old religious leader said they had been "some movement" toward release of the captives.

The meeting also came a day after President Carter voiced strong doubt over Khomeini's ability to control the militants, telling a White House congressional briefing that the "international terrorists" had emerged as "the most powerful single entity in Iran."

U.S. to cut off Iran

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Encouraged by international support for the partial trade ban against Russia, the State Department said Thursday President Carter will impose sanctions against Iran with or without United Nations approval.

State Department officials said the United States will ban all exports to Iran except for food and medicine. Initially, if the hostages are not freed quickly, food and medicine could be included in the freeze.

The Census Bureau's Foreign Trade Division said that between January and October last year, the United States exported $369 million in goods to Iran.

A senior State Department official made clear earlier the United States would get support from western allies for the sanctions even if the United Nations does not vote in favor of them.

Minimum streamflow urged

"Together, the two applications propose a minimum stream flow for all of Silver Creek above the point of its intersection with U.S. Highway 90. The flow would be at least 12 cfs, a distance of approximately 2.1 miles."

"Vinyard Creek This Jerome County creek flows into the Snake River. It is scheduled to maintain trout populations and spawning habitats."

If approved for minimum streamflow status, a one-quarter mile section of the stream, beginning at its confluence with Snake River, would be allowed to drop no lower than 17 cfs.

Bancroft Springs, A 60-yard section of Bancroft Springs, at its confluence with the Snake River in Elmore County, has also been nominated for minimum stream flow status. The stream would be kept at a flow of 12 cfs, "to preserve the high quality fishery, fish population and aesthetics of the spring area."

Granite Creek, A section of this Bonner County creek, from its confluence with Lake Pend Oreille, to its confluence with Sullivan Springs, has also been nominated. A minimum flow of 45 cfs here would "maintain trout and kokanee passage flows," the application says.

Sullivan Springs, A one-half mile section of this Bonner County springs has been nominated for a 45 cfs minimum flow. The "minimum flow would run from the springs themselves to their confluence with Granite Creek."

Sullivan Springs was nominated to preserve trout and kokanee spawning and incubation areas.

Mott Forker Creek, Trout spawning and rearing areas in Kootenai County would be preserved with a 30 cfs minimum stream flow on this creek. The minimum flow would apply for its trout section. The creek near Interstate 90 in Kootenai County.

Storm shuts schools, roads

Pomerelle ski resort was closed with high winds blocking the road. Woody Anderson, resort owner, said it was hard to measure the windswept snow. He estimated that about 12 and 18 inches had fallen in the past 24 hours. He said Magic Mountain had 12 to 14 inches. Although plows did not reach Pomerelle, Floyd Davy, Twin Falls County District manager, said plows cleared drifts on the road to Magic. He said there was not enough snow on "valley roads" to cause too much of a problem and he was able to spare the lodge.

Roads in the Fairfield area were extremely slick because of ice under the new snow. The power outages forced critical delays in "milking" rat droppings near Jerome.

Dairy operators — many with herds too large to milk by hand — faced some anxious hours before power was restored throughout the morning and early afternoon.

Mastitis and other heat diseases increase markedly when milking schedules are interrupted by more than a couple of hours, Jerome County Extension Agent Bob Ohlenschien said.

Cows also begin to produce less milk, Ohlenschien said, a condition that can last for a week or more after milking is resumed.

"We had the wire breaks, lines down poles broken off, poles on fire — you name it," said Buck Morgan, Jerome district manager for Idaho Power Co.

Morgan estimated that 20 percent of the Jerome district's 5,211 customers were without power, sometime during the night and early morning.

Superintendents and principals of the district's schools said they would wait until early morning to decide whether schools could reopen today.

They urged parents to listen to area radio stations after 7 a.m. before sending children to school.

Wind and heavy snowfall interrupted power to several Sun Valley ski lifts, where officials estimated 22 inches of new snow fell during the 24-hour period ending at 9 a.m.

Officials temporarily closed ski runs on the south side of the resort until avalanche hazards could be cleared.

Cross-country skiers, snowmobilers and backcountry travelers were urged to use extreme caution in the area after heavy snow combined with high winds to create the potential for slides.

Twin Falls County Sheriff James Munis issued a request early in the day to all county residents to stay off outlying roads unless absolutely necessary.

Deputy Buddy Dewesse, attempting to assist stranded motorists, joined them about 8 a.m. He said blowing snow obscured his vision while driving on a county road, southwest of town, and his county vehicle slid into a drift-filled borrow pit. Fellow officers sent a wrecker to his rescue.

15,000 lose electricity

Blizzard leaves havoc in wake in Northwest

By United Press International
A blustery winter storm pressed eastward into the Rockies Thursday and took aim on the Plains.

The snow-battered Northwest, where emergency crews worked to clear roads and restore power, knocked out by the three-day storm.

The rain drizzle and over-waterlogged Southern California still mopping up from heavy rains that triggered street flooding, mudslides and rockslides and left three people dead in traffic accidents.

Seven people have been killed in weather-related accidents since the storm began — two in Oregon, two in Washington and three in Southern California.

Forecasters said the storm was heading for the Plains.

In snow-covered marsh lands near Hermiston, Ore., a search by more than 200 people Wednesday failed to find a missing 4-year-old boy.

Hundreds of Portland, Ore., residents took shelter in public buildings because of widespread power failures caused by an ice storm. A woman walking in downtown Portland was killed by a falling tree branch laden with ice.

A trucker was killed when his tractor-trailer collided with another truck near Umatilla, Ore.

Interstate 80N, the only freeway route east from Portland, was covered by 5 1/2 feet of snow forcing police to close a portion of the road.

Portland General Electric crews worked through the night to restore service to about 80,000 customers.

Today's weather

Increasing clouds, more snow coming

Twin Falls, Burley-Rupert, Jerome-Gooding areas:
Increasing clouds and periods of snow showers today and Saturday. Highs today upper 20s to mid-30s and mostly in the 30s on Saturday. Overnight lows 20s to low 20s.

Camas Prairie, Halley, Wood River valley:
Periods of snow or snow showers today and Saturday. Highs today 25 to 35 degrees and upper 20s or low 30s on Saturday. Lows 15 to 25.

Synops:
More snow and wind are expected across Idaho today and Saturday, but should taper off over the weekend.

Winds which buffeted the state Thursday in the wake of a rapidly moving cold front are expected to slack off somewhat today, but will continue to cause blowing and drifting snow in many areas.

On Thursday, sustained winds of 20 miles an hour or more were common, and gusts hit 63 miles an hour at Burley, 60 at Malad Falls, 48 at Pocatello and 40 at Idaho.

Snow blanketed the southern part of the state Thursday morning as a fast-moving storm passed, and a stationary front over northern Idaho produced periods of snow in that area during the day. Travelers were advised to use caution in many areas of Idaho as blowing and drifting snow was widespread.

The highest temperature in the state was 41 degrees at Burley.

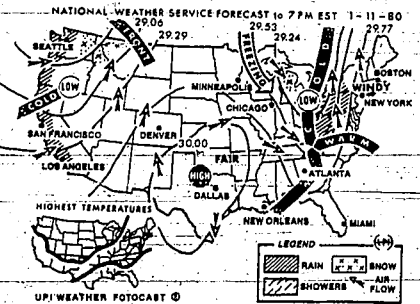

Elsewhere in the nation, the warmest reading was 84 at Fort Meyers, Fla., and the coldest was -19 at International Falls, Minn.

The extended forecast for southern Idaho calls for showers of snow or rain in the valleys and snow in the mountains on Sunday, becoming mostly fair on Monday and Tuesday. High temperatures will be mostly in the 30s with overnight lows in the 20s degree.

In northern sections of Utah and Nevada, gusty winds, colder temperatures and either snow or rain are forecast today. Periods of rain with snow at elevations over 6,000 to 7,000 feet are forecast for northern Nevada on Saturday.

Temperatures will range from highs in the 30s to lows in the 20s.

Full state highway funding doubted

BOISE (UPI) — Two House Republican committee chairmen said Thursday the Idaho Transportation Department likely will be appropriated extra money but not the $39 million it is seeking.

"We ought to merge the efforts," Sessions said. He said his committee might hold off action on the tax-shift plan until it finds out how the department's proposals will fare.

The chairman of a legislative committee projected state revenue in fiscal year 1981 would total $390 million — a few hundred thousand dollars more than the governor's office had calculated.

The figure was presented during a House Revenue and Taxation Committee meeting by Rep. Morgan Mungler, R-Torrey, chairman of the Joint Revenue Projections Committee.

Mungler also told his fellow committee members the governor's prediction of the impact of a recent increase in the income tax law gave "perhaps a little bit of a false impression."

"We're trying to clarify that as much as possible," said Mungler.

He criticized the method the governor's fiscal people used to show the impact a $250 increase in the personal income tax exemption would have on revenue. The governor's figures showed by 1981 revenue at $466.2 million without the deduction changes; then, in a footnote, subtracted the $20.5 million his staff projected as the impact. After this and other minor changes, the governor's revenue total was $392 million.

Mungler said the joint committee projected the exemption shift's impact would be about $13 million — a figure lower than four estimates presented to the committee during this week's meetings.

But other adjustments in the committee's projections brought its figure within $90,000 of the governor's calculations.

Rep. Steve Antone, R-Rupert, chairman of the Revenue and Taxation Committee, said the group would take up the recommendations of its interim committee this morning.

In the Senate, both parties met briefly after holding party caucuses.

GOP Caucus Chairman Walter Yanbrough, R-Grand View, said the Republicans discussed the Administrative Procedures Act, while Democrat Caucus Chairman is Merrill of Blackfoot, said his party talked about coming up with a suitable solution to the 1 percent initiative.

Merrill said Senate Minority Cy

Chase, D-St. Maries, planned to appoint a committee to try to work out a solution that the Senate Democrats could buy.

Elsewhere on the legislative scene:

Senate Majority Leader James Risch, R-Boise, introduced a bill to prohibit adult book stores. His measure would be retroactive to Jan. 1, 1980.

A bill was introduced by the House State Affairs Committee to voters the power to approve or reject comprehensive land-use plans. The legislation was sponsored by House Majority Leader Walter Little, R-New Plymouth.

Birds of Prey resolution prepared

BOISE — A House committee Thursday said the Bureau of Land Management is "not" for the birds.

In a morning meeting, the House State Affairs Committee introduced and agreed to later debate a memorandum al to Congress, the President and the Secretary of the Interior, urging a delay in any expansion of the Birds of Prey natural area, as now proposed by the BLM, until "a comprehensive study of the economic impact of the expansion upon the state of Idaho has been completed."

Committee members said there should be additional hearings and public meetings on the proposed expansion of the southwest Idaho bird sanctuary before any final decision is made by the Interior Secretary or Congress.

Women's commission requests funds

BOISE — The Joint Finance Appropriations committee Thursday heard requests that state funding of the Idaho Women's Commission be increased from $16,000 to $36,000.

According to Anne Pasley-Stuart, who now chairs the commission, the increased funds would be used for additional secretarial help and for the salaries of a part-time director.

The commission presently has no director. Pasley-Stuart said, adding she serves as an unpaid volunteer in her post.

The commission was established in 1965 by Gov. Robert Smylie to encourage women to increase their participation in social, political and economic activities.

No final action was taken by the joint committee on the commission's request.

$2 billion vo-ed program proposed for nation's youth

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter Thursday proposed a $2 billion program of basic education and work experience to help millions of disadvantaged youths find jobs.

A senior official said the administration regards the program as important domestic legislative initiative this year.

If approved by Congress, the program would, when fully implemented in 1982, increase the number of youngsters aged 14 to 21 served by youth employment programs from the present 2 million to about 3 million.

During ceremonies in the East Room, Carter said the plan was aimed at "a class of people without hope."

He noted that "our 1981 fiscal budget will be a tight budget" but that he approved the $2-billion expenditure because it amounts to "an investment in our future."

Carter called the program "a historic investment in our country's most precious, most underused national resource — the energies, the talents, the aspirations of America's young people."

About half the money would be spent by the Department of Labor during the next two years to provide job training and work experience primarily for high school dropouts.

The other half would be spent by the Department of Education to provide basic education to about 1 million low-achieving junior- and senior-high school students in the poorest 3,000 of the nation's 15,000 urban and rural school districts.

Past programs have showed that education and job training must go hand-in-hand, officials said. Accordingly, the new program will give many youngsters with basic education in classrooms and work experience after school hours.

It will provide "alternative" types of instruction for dropouts, officials said, because experience shows they will not return to their old schools. About 23 percent of those who begin school never receive a high school diploma.

"This is not a public-service jobs program for young people," said one administration official, stressing that the emphasis will be on preparing youth for jobs rather than giving them work.

Counting illegal aliens argued in census suit

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Saying it has the constitution on its side, the administration asked a judge Thursday to dismiss a lawsuit that seeks a separate 1980 census count of illegal aliens.

The Federation for American Immigration Reform, representing Sen. Walter Huddleston, D-Ky., and four Republican congressmen, contend in the suit that congressional reapportionment will not be done fairly if illegal aliens are counted along with U.S. citizens.

Since most illegals live in big cities, the suit says, areas with sparse populations will unfairly lose congressional seats and receive less than their fair share of $50 billion in federal revenues distributed on the basis of census figures.

The suit asks a three-judge panel to issue a preliminary injunction blocking any census that does not include a separate tabulation of illegal aliens.

In a court affidavit, Census Bureau Deputy Director Daniel Levine said there would be a "one year delay in the census" if the bureau had to prepare such supplementary forms for illegal aliens.

Aside from that, the Justice Department, in papers filed with U.S. District Judge Oliver Gasch, argued the Constitution requires "the whole number of persons" be counted in determining reapportionment of congressional districts.

It said all persons in the United States have been counted — since the first census in 1790 — and Congress has routinely used census figures including illegal aliens in reapportioning congressional districts.

Administration lawyers asked Gasch to throw out the legal case rather than joining with two other judges to hear arguments in the case.

"If Congress wants a differentiation of the illegal alien population from the total count, it may so provide by statute," the Justice Department brief said.

The Census Bureau already has spent $30 million preparing mailing and instruction forms for a census, scheduled to start April 1.

Administration officials are concerned that if the census format is changed, illegal aliens will be reluctant to cooperate for fear they will be singled out and deported — even though the government has promised census information will not be used against them.

Nuke waste dump OK'd in Alabama

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Tennessee Valley Authority this morning approved low-level atomic wastes at an Alabama reactor site because of new limits on use of the East's only commercial nuclear dump.

The TVA made its decision to develop a semi-permanent, low-level waste dump at Brown's Ferry, Ala., when the huge commercial Barnwell, S.C., facility "suddenly" cut the utility's storage allowances last week.

TVA executive Ben Rogers said the latest cutback hit all facilities using Barnwell and cut TVA's allocation in half, raising a potential threat to continued operation of the reactors.

"The feedback I've gotten from other utilities is they are all looking for some kind of temporary, almost permanent, facility at their reactors," Rogers said.

South Carolina Gov. Richard Riley, who says his state should not be the atomic waste dumping ground for the nation, is gradually choking off shipments to Barnwell, which averaged 200,000 cubic feet a month.

Barnwell is one of just three commercial dumps accepting the low-level waste. Nevada and Washington, the other two states with repositories, closed their sites briefly last year to demonstrate that all states will have to share the burden.

On Wednesday, Virginia Gov. John Dalton sought $600,000 in the new state budget to find a low-level waste storage facility in his state.

But most other states remain hostile to the idea of permitting waste storage on their territory.

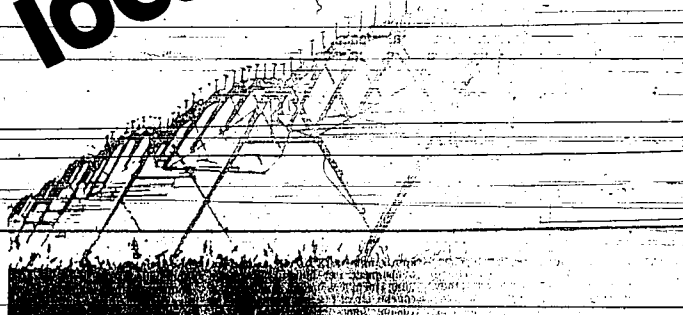

And Alabama "is a little uneasy" about TVA's Brown's Ferry plans, said state assistant Attorney General Mark Brandon.

Federal officials hope more states will open low-level storage sites, thanks to cutbacks at the existing dumps and political pressure from hospitals and utilities.

"It's very possible there may have to be some site in every state or at least regional sites," said Dr. Bob Augustine, an Environmental Protection Agency waste manager.

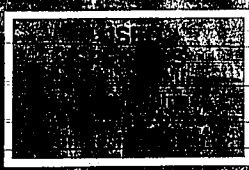

He said the EPA was concerned about proliferation of semi-permanent dumps at reactor sites and laboratories but that a national plan for low-level wastes would not be ready for 2 1/2 years.

'Star Wars' score composer new Boston Pops conductor

LONDON (UPI) — John Williams, who won three Oscars for his stirring film scores — most recently the music for "Star Wars" — accepted appointment Thursday as conductor of the Boston Pops.

award-winner chosen

Williams will succeed the late Arthur Fiedler.

The balding, bearded, bespectacled 47-year-old composer paid tribute to the traditions established by Fiedler in his half century on the podium but said he was eager to innovate and experiment.

He said he would develop his own ideas — the rescue of neglected music of our time and the 19th century, commissioning works from the young musicians seeking recognition in an America "bulging with musical talent" and use of the orchestra as a forum for experimental music.

The selection of Williams was announced in simultaneous news conferences in Boston and London.

Williams was 45 minutes late for his meeting with the press because he was conducting a sequence for "The Empire Strikes Back," the film sequel to "Star Wars," for which he won his third Oscar. The first two came for adapting "Fiddler on the Roof" to film and for "Jaws."

He said "Star Wars" helped shape his decision to accept the Pops post because he saw how many young people bought the symphonic album of his score.

Williams, who appeared as a guest conductor with the Pops last May, said he was pleased that Harry Ellis Dickson, assistant conductor to Fiedler for 26 years, had been named associate conductor.

Dickson had also been mentioned as a possible successor to Fiedler. Williams said Dickson's knowledge of the vast repertoire "will be a great help to me."

Williams' first concert as conductor of the Pops will be at Carnegie Hall in New York Jan. 22, and he will open the Pops season in Boston April 29.

This, he said, would make a permanent change in the musical and geographical pattern of his life thus far. A widower, he had resided in Hollywood.

"But I love Boston and it will be a joy to spend more time there," he said.

Designer names 'worst dressed'

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Do Derek may have looked great in the peekaboo swim suit she barely wore in the movie "10," but she captured the top spot on Mr. Blackwell's list of "worst dressed" women because she fails to glorify womanhood.

"The love child of the '80s gets a minus 10 for fashion," designer Blackwell said Wednesday as he announced his list of women on his out-of-fashion list.

The main requirement for making the list, he said, is to dress in a way that "violates" fashion's prime purpose — to glorify womanhood.

"I spent the whole year looking," he said. "It's like you look at a painting and you either love it or you hate it."

Blackwell said he put Miss Derek on top this year because her clothes look like they are "washed that morning, never ironed and never put together."

The other nine women he decided were most "care-less" about their looks are, in order:

*Actress Jill Clayburgh: "Dresses like an African bush... waiting for her safari."

*Actress Loni Anderson: "Gravily could be her worst enemy, and she dresses to prove it."

*Christina Onassis: "Dressed to check her oil tankers."

*Singer Deborah Harry (of the rock group Blondie): "Ten cents a dance with a nickel change."

*Singer Dolly Parton: "A ruffled bedspread covering king size pillows."

*San Francisco Mayor Dianne Feinstein: "Looks like she is wearing the voting booth."

*Princess Margaret: "Most women dress to disguise their age... she dresses to prove it."

*Actress Valerie Perrine: "Looks like the bride of Frankenstein doing the Ziegfeld Polka."

*Actress and model Margaux Hemingway: "A Hanukkah bush the day after Christmas."

Blackwell, who has previously designed Zsa Zsa Gabor, Dinah Shore, Barbara Streisand, Elizabeth Taylor and Raquel Welch as lifetime worst dressed, apparently noted improvement in the style habits of some of the world's well-known women.

Actress Suzanne Somers finished second last year, behind Miss Parton, but didn't make the list this time around.

Also missing from the new list were the top finishers from the five previous years — Farrow Fawcett, Louise Lasser, Caroline Kennedy, Helen Reddy and Bette Midler.

Sophia Loren and Angie Dickinson, who finished first and second in 1970, respectively, apparently noted improvement this year on a second list of eight "fabulous" fashion independents who now merit his approval.

Susan Anton and Princess Grace topped that list, followed by Christina Ferrari, Barbara Sinatra, Miss Loren, Nancy Reagan, Diana Ross and Miss Dickinson.

Gamblers seek new way of life

PIKESVILLE, Md. (UPI) — The lawyer nervously watched the clock during his disbarment hearing. Beads of sweat slid down his face. Legal debate dragged on — as past time at Pinlco Race Course.

Edward Moran (not his real name) had admitted embezzling $4,000 from a high school parents' group while he was its treasurer. He needed the money to support his gambling habit. What more did they need for a verdict?

"You might say my future was being weighed in the scale," he said. "I wish this would end. I'm going to miss the first race," said Moran.

His disbarment didn't keep him from the betting wheels at Pinlco, the home of the Preakness. Neither did the forced sale of his suburban Baltimore home.

"The compulsive gambler begs, borrows or steals until he has no more money beyond the limit," said Dr. Robert Polltzer, director of the state-funded compulsive gambling center. "The compulsive gambler does not choose to gamble; he stops when he's forced."

Polltzer and his staff opened the Maryland Compulsive Gambling Counseling Center in November 1979 to offer treatment to the estimated 1.1 million men and women nationwide who are addicted to betting on horses, sports teams, card games and just about anything else that has a chance to get money beyond the limit.

Most people who have entered the center's three-story clapboard house in the Baltimore suburb of Pikesville have been from Maryland — lawyers, car salesmen, restaurant workers, business executives.

They are bright, energetic, ambitious, charming — people who seemed destined to succeed until they crossed the line between a Sunday night poker player and a gambling addict.

Robert Custer, a psychiatrist with the Veterans Administration in Washington, said compulsive gambling is a mental behavioral disorder in which a person develops an emotional dependence on gambling to the point where it interferes with all normal functions.

It's the high from placing the bet, from the action. The winning becomes secondary. We have people who bet $50 to $150 a day on the state lottery where the odds are 1,000 to 1 to win," said center counselor Joanna Franklin.

Through a program of peer counseling, professional therapy and communication workshops, Ms. Franklin said gamblers begin the essential, painful task of finding other ways to occupy their time. Lifestyle contracts are drawn up with short- and long-range goals. Gamblers are expected to meet them.

We had one man whose diet consisted of bread and milk. He needed money for the track and eventually lost 54 pounds in four months," said Ms. Franklin.

The gambler was required to eat one full meal a day and later report to a staff counselor what he ate, she said.

The center's treatment program is modeled after the Gambling Anonymous therapy and programs used at VA hospitals in Ohio, Miami and New York. It is financed by a $38,900 grant from the Maryland Department of Health and Mental Hygiene.

Ms. Franklin said the center has received inquiries from California, Florida, the Midwest, New York and Tennessee. Addictions ranged from horse racing to sports betting to pinball and bingo.

Polltzer said the tragedy of compulsive gambling is the ripple effect the gambler's habit touches his family, employers and even the insurance company that must make good on embezzled money used to wager. At least seven people nationwide are affected by each gambler's habit, he said.

"Compulsive gambling is a public health problem," Polltzer told a crowd when the center opened. "It's society's responsibility, since we gain a tremendous amount of revenue from legalized gambling, to care for its addicts."

Moran hasn't been to the track since his treatment at a Pikesville, Ohio, VA hospital in early 1978. But he expects to be a "lifetime member" of Gambling Anonymous.

Today the 29-year state employee attends at least two Gambling Anonymous meetings in a weekly therapy group at Polltzer's center and chats with other compulsive gamblers like Joe Delaney (also a member).

your non-answer to the grandmother who refused to babysit for free except in cases of emergency. She asked how YOU handled the babysitting problem, and you said, "I have no sitting problems because my grandchildren live 2,000 miles away." But if they lived in the same town, I'd have to draw straws with the other grandmother because she loves to sit. Bless her.

That's easy for you to say, Abby. Living 2,000 miles away, you're not likely to be called upon to babysit. Instead of making her feel guilty, you should have told NO SITTER that she had every right to refuse to be an unpaid sitter.

LET DOWN IN DENVER
DEAR LET DOWN: I plead not guilty to laying a guilt trip on NO SITTER, but judging from the hate mail I received, you weren't the only one who misunderstood me. Read on.

DEAR ABBY: Nuts to you with your answer to the grandmother who told her daughter-in-law not to count on her to sit for free while Mom and Dad went off gallivanting. I raised my children, and I expect them to raise theirs. Oh, I'd help out in an emergency, but they know they can't just ring me up to come over and mind the kids, or dump them on me anytime they have a notion to.

When my children were little, my husband and I went only to places we could take the kids, or we stayed home. My children were MY responsibility to raise — not my mother's.

JUNE IN STRONGSVILLE, OHIO
DEAR ABBY: Who are you trying to kid? You say you would love to babysit with your grandchildren but they live 2,000 miles away. Boy, are you ever safe! Somehow you just don't strike me as a baby-sitting kind of grandmother. With all the work you have to do writing your column and running around the country making speeches, when would you have time?

CYNICAL IN SENECA, OHIO
DEAR ABBY: I'm the mother of four children under 10, and here's the way I feel about asking my mother to babysit. I think she owes it to me. Yes, that's what I said. I was the oldest of seven kids, and I missed out on plenty of fun because my mother made me stay home and take care of my little brothers and sisters. (She used to tell everybody she had a "free, built-in baby-sitter.")

My mother was hardly ever home when I was in my teens. She didn't have to be gone, she was mostly just out having a good time. Mom has arthritis now and can't dance anymore. It's hard for her to get around, so she's available for sitting when I need her, which makes it nice for me. I really don't feel one bit guilty asking Mom to stay with my kids. I sure stayed with hers enough.

MY TURN IN MEMPHIS
DEAR ABBY: I raised my five children without any sitters because we couldn't afford them. Now that they have children of their own and can afford to hire sitters, that's what they do.

I don't want a baby-sitting job, with or without pay. I've tended enough babies for a lifetime and I've earned a rest.

I sympathize with NO SITTER for refusing to be dumped on.
TIRED OF KIDS, SEATTLE
DEAR ABBY: I have nine grandchildren and two great grandchildren, and if any of their parents ever offered me money to stay with them I'd be insulted. I consider it an honor and a privilege to look after the little ones. I feel complimented that their parents trust me with their most precious possessions!

HONORED IN OXNARD
DEAR ABBY: The grandmothers of today did not have it so easy when they were raising their children. I say, leave the grandmothers alone — hire a baby-sitter. And if they can't pay a baby-sitter, stay home like THEIR grandmothers did.

Air Force starts picking out MX sites

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Air Force has begun the process of selecting specific sites in Utah and Nevada for the MX missile system.

The move comes in the face of a host of local concerns about the $3.3 billion project, defense sources said Thursday.

President Carter hopes to make a final decision by the fall, still facing the controversial "race tracks" on which the intercontinental missiles will circulate, the sources said.

His decision looms with new urgency, since U.S. Soviet relations have deteriorated due to the Afghanistan crisis and the president has requested a delay in the Senate SALT treaty debate.

Brig. Gen. Forest McCartney, deputy commander of the Ballistic Missile Office at Norton Air Force Base, Calif., Thursday briefed Gov. Robert List and state legislators at Carson City, Nev., on the complicated process of siting the missile system.

McCartney planned a similar presentation to Utah Gov. Scott Matheson and Utah legislators at Salt Lake City today.

On Monday, the Air Force begins two weeks of public hearings in the two states aimed at eliciting the concerns of private citizens over construction which the $3.3 billion project will bring to the area.

Issues sure to be raised include environmental protection, availability of water, determining if there is a better basing mode for the missiles and managing the expected influx of 100,000 out-of-staters.

"The influx of new residents will be a serious problem for local governments," said an aide to Rep. Gunn McKay, D-Utah, who heads the House military construction subcommittee.

"That raises the question of how you educate their children, how you pay for police protection, water and so forth."

"Unless there is some equitable sharing of this burden, what you end up with is trailer park ghetto. The local governments simply can't pay for it."

The Air Force plans no major changes in the controversial MX missile system as a result of the evident failure of SALT.

However, if U.S.-Soviet relations plunge to Cold War depths, military leaders may urge abrogation of the U.S.-Soviet treaty banning anti-missile ballistic defense systems.

That would allow the United States to defend the MX mobile missile system with interceptor missiles located on each "race track". Such interceptors currently are prohibited by the ABM treaty.

Under the MX program, the Air Force will base its new MX missile on loops in desert areas of Utah and Nevada. Under a still-game concept President Carter approved last year, each missile will be able to hit one of 23 shelters connected to each loop.

If the SALT treaty is not brought into force, the Air Force could add more missiles or shelters to further complicate the Soviet's problem in trying to destroy the system.

Regional power bill unity needed

SEATTLE (UPI) — The Northwest's congressional delegation is not unified in support of a regional electric power bill and that makes it difficult to convince the rest of Congress to support it, says Rep. Al Swift.

Swift, D-Wash., told the Seattle Rotary Club Wednesday that passage of such a bill plan for the Northwest's future power use is necessary to prevent "a decade of chaos" in energy planning and divisive battles over slices of the shrinking pie of cheap hydroelectric power.

The regional power bill, passed by the U.S. Senate last summer, would set up a region-wide power planning program, establish conservation guidelines and make electrical users pay for construction of new nuclear and coal-fired plants, if needed. The measure is now before the House.

"Opponents can win just by raising doubts," said Swift, a member of the House Water and Power Subcommittee. "The bill is complicated and complex. And members of Congress from other parts of the country don't see this as urgent. They don't have our problem."

Lake Tahoe scenic area proposed

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Rep. Vic Fazio, D-Calif., Wednesday proposed federal legislation to make Lake Tahoe a national scenic area, action endorsed by environmentalists worried about declining natural beauty at the Sierra resort.

But the plan faces major hurdles in light of already enacted congressional efforts to compromise on preservation of the lake basin spearheaded by Rep. James Santini, D-Nev.

The Nevada congressional delegation as well as some California congressmen have been cool to the idea of imposing restraints on commercialization in the Tahoe Basin without concessions for developers and the gaming industry.

"The basic threat to the lake is political," Fazio said at a news conference. "The economic interests in the basin may want to save the lake, but they want economic growth even more. We have had years of delay and delay is failure because it lets development at Lake Tahoe get its way."

He added that regional efforts to control development and overcrowding at Lake Tahoe "have failed and now it's a national problem."

WORKER PICKETING ...at Denver refinery

Refinery walkout continues

DENVER (UPI) — Federal mediators met separately Thursday with negotiators for Gulf Oil and the 60,000 striking Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers Union. Reported no progress in settling the 3-day-old refinery workers strike.

Minor outbreaks of violence were reported at a Louisiana refinery, and four refineries were closed down across the nation.

Wayne Horowitz, chief of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service, met briefly with two officials of Gulf Oil and the union, hoping to get negotiators for both sides together soon.

Gulf executive Martin Breux said the major problem in the negotiations was a union demand for fully-paid health care benefits.

Some 60,000 OCAW members, primarily refinery and petrochemical workers, walked off their jobs Tuesday in a dispute over a renegotiated contract. It is the first OCAW national strike since 1969.

OCAW President Robert Goss said the union wants "substantially" wage increases, more vacation time and fully paid medical insurance.

Horowitz and his assistant, Nik Pinlandis, met briefly and separately Wednesday night with both sides and the talks continued Thursday. He said there was some discussion of substantive issues.

Breux said Gulf, which has been the industry leader in the negotiations, believed its employees should contribute to medical insurance.

"The company feels it is healthy to have employees participate in the medical plans with a monetary contribution," he said. "But we're keeping all avenues of communications open."

The strike, which involves 415 contracts with about 100 oil companies, had little effect on operations of most refineries where supervisors were running the operations.

Both company and union officials said the strike would have no immediate impact on gasoline prices or supplies.

OCAW spokesman Jerry Archuleta said Gulf had 13 contracts with the union covering some 3,400 workers, and the firm's offer had set the pattern for settlements in three previous contracts.

Strings attached to rebate offer

FLAGSTAFF, Ariz. (UPI) — Visitors lured to a Las Vegas casino with the promise of a $30 rebate learned on arrival that they had to remain inside the gambling hall for 30 hours to collect the rebate at a rate of $1 an hour.

Arizona authorities confirmed Wednesday that they were investigating the rebate plan reportedly offered by the Treasury casino, which distributed coupons in northern Arizona promising a $30 rebate to visitors.

Felony level investigators they were required to remain in the casino for 30 consecutive hours in order to collect the money.

Prosecutor Bob Bouchal said the investigation was launched when Gene Reynolds of Flagstaff complained to Arizona authorities.

Commissioners hope for year's delay of 1%

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — County commissioners here are hoping the Legislature will give them one more year before implementing the 1 percent initiative.

Commissioner Chairman Merl E. Leonard said this week another year would allow counties to complete revaluation of property and bring up the assessed value to which the 1 percent will be applied.

The revaluation has been under way for the past year but values are continuously changing and another year would give assessors a chance to finish the review of all types of property in their counties.

"As it stands now, Leonard said, all of the more populated counties will face a stable revenue loss.

"In Twin Falls County, our operating budget for the past year, which was held to a minimum under the tax levy freeze, was $9.18 million," Leonard said.

"Our assessor tells us the current assessed value of our county is $655 million including utility. The 1 percent initiative would add a total budget for everything at about $8.5 million. That's nearly a million dollars short of what we have now," he added.

"At the same time we are faced with rising costs under current inflation that requires nearly every department budget to be increased. The state and federal governments are constantly handing us new regulations which mean added costs to county administration and operation," the chairman said.

Many of the costs imposed on counties are beyond the control of the county commissioners. Leonard said the judicial system, for example, must be financed by the counties as prescribed by state law.

In addition, new restrictions on solid waste control are costly. "We have to bury everything. We can no longer burn even our papers," Leonard said. "I am not saying we should be burning, but the cost of trenching, burying and handling solid waste is extremely costly," Leonard added.

"If we are faced with having to cut our budget by nearly $1 million next year, it will be extremely difficult to operate. We feel we have already cut out every luxury item and every expenditure that is not absolutely necessary. Required services and programs cannot be cut, which leaves us with salaries and employees. We are against cutting salaries and feel this is unreasonable since our workers must meet inflationary living costs too," Leonard said.

For the past year the county has maintained a policy of not replacing workers who quit their jobs. Others in the department are asked to share the extra work load, but Leonard said it is not fair to ask for extra work without granting a wage increase. Leonard said department heads have been working out some pay increases for workers doing additional jobs, but the increases have amounted to less than the previous full salary so some savings have been achieved.

"If we could get our assessed valuation up to the billion-dollar mark," Leonard explained, "that would give us our $10 million which we feel would about cover the necessities in the county."

County Assessor William Clark said he doesn't think another year would make that much difference. He said all counties must complete the reappraisal of all property on a basis of the market value as of 1978 by May 15 of this year.

He said the work is pretty well complete in Twin Falls County and he believes the market value will remain at about $60 million in this county. Only the subsequent tax rolls and some personal property are incomplete, Clark said, and the personal property depreciation just about keeps pace with the new additions each year.

"I don't expect much change, maybe a million or so dollars one way or the other," Clark said. "I sort of lean to the thinking of those who feel the 1 percent initiative was a mandate and we should put it into effect now and spend the remainder of this year working out our solutions."

Clark has predicted about 30 percent less revenue for this county as a result of the 1 percent property tax limitation and he said he is sticking with that prediction.

'Verbal jocks' looking for another trophy on their shelf

By BEN MCKELWAY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Running the entire length of the debate team practice room at Twin Falls High School is a row of trophies.

If the team successfully defends its championship title at the Southern Idaho Conference tournament this weekend in Boise, it will have to make room for one more.

For five years Twin Falls debaters have won over 70 percent of their debates, according to Roy Nicholson, speech teacher and debate coach. They have never returned home without a trophy.

Determined to uphold this winning tradition, varsity debaters Eric Kahn and Scott Woodruff will be fighting the midnight oil this week to polish their arguments and counter-arguments. Best friends since fourth grade, they work well together. That's why they are the top team out of four, two-member varsity teams.

This year's topic, the same throughout the country, is "Resolved: That the U.S. government should significantly change its foreign trade policies."

Kahn and Woodruff prefer to take the negative side. The stacks of neatly prepared notebooks on the desk testify to the hours of time spent in the library and at home, preparing to knock down any affirmative argument.

Because the topic is so broad, the negative team must prepare many different arguments. The affirmative team, on the other hand, can focus the whole debate on one specific proposal, but they also must be prepared to rebut.

"The affirmative almost has to be perfect, because there are lots of different ways you can maul them," said Woodruff.

One of the boys says debating this year's topic has taught them a lot about U.S. foreign policy.

Woodruff says the global influence of the United States is still greater than that of any other nation because the U.S. trades with more nations than any other country. And the U.S. is still the super military power, in spite of the worries of some politicians.

"At first glance it appears that the Soviet Union is spending more on defense, since they put a greater percentage of their gross national product into weaponry," Woodruff says. But the Soviet Union's GNP is only about half of the United States', he adds, and Soviet missiles are inferior to U.S. missiles in both range and accuracy.

Most varsity debaters spend at least 15 hours a week outside the classroom — on research and practice. Nicholson said. But all this work is still not enough to bring them to the attention of the school's athletic receive.

The team does not get the attention it deserves, Kahn says. He says debate is not a spectator sport. It is a way of life or delivery, he explained.

"We're the verbal jocks," said Kahn.

But unlike other sports, the audience has to rely on its own analytical powers rather than a running total on a scoreboard, Woodruff said.

In a contest between evenly matched teams, the judge can make a big difference, but judges are not always reliable, said Nicholson. Some grade primarily on the content of the team's case while others give more points for style or delivery, he explained.

"We have judges that say 'She wins because she's pretty,'" said Nicholson, pointing to varsity debater Liz Harrison. "You never know what to expect."

Another hardship faced by the team is a lack of money. Nicholson said last year's $2,000 debate team allocation from the school district

Twin Falls High School debater Liz Harrison smiles as Scott Woodruff challenges a point she made during practice.

Last month at the Twin Falls Invitational, the TFHS team won first place in the varsity division and second place in overall competition, which includes debates between novice and junior division debaters as well.

Evans says dumping halt try assured

BOISE (UPI) — Gov. John Evans Thursday received assurances from the federal government that the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory will try to discontinue its practice of discharging radioactive waste into the Snake River Plain aquifer.

Evans said he received a letter from INEL manager Charles E. Williams, stating the facility is studying alternative methods of disposal at the site.

The governor also said, Worth Bateman, deputy secretary of the U.S. Department of Energy, told him by telephone that "a serious effort is under way to explore every conceivable means possible to eliminate the practice of using injector wells."

Evans and his Radioactive Waste Task Force has asked INEL to halt dumping of liquid radioactive waste into the aquifer.

"My task force experts feel most of the problem can be solved by the elimination of disposal practices," Evans said.

In his letter to Evans, Williams said INEL is studying alternative methods of disposal which "will be completed as rapidly as possible."

He also said Evans would be invited to participate in making recommendations to DOE's Idaho office.

However, Williams said after an alternative method of disposal is selected, funding for the change will have to be obtained.

"The funding process may take considerable time, and no promises can or should be made on when funding will be appropriated," Williams said.

Evans said Thursday's communications with Williams and Bateman allow him to postpone a meeting with Energy Secretary Charles Duncan.

Idaho Poll

By BEN MCKELWAY
Times-News writer

BOISE — A clear majority of Idahoans want the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory to stop pumping radioactive wastewater into the ground, according to the latest Idaho Poll.

In mid-December 68.8 percent of those polled favored stopping the practice, and 72.7 percent wanted INEL to continue the practice, and 22.7 percent were undecided.

Published Wednesday, the results are from a poll conducted Dec. 10-17 by the Boise-based Professional Resource Group, a private company funded by subscribers to its monthly poll reports. Two hundred people in 10 representative counties were called at random, according to Howard Schrag, director and editor of the reports.

Schrag said the majority would probably have been higher if Jefferson and Bonneville counties had not been two of the 10 counties polled. Because the economies of both counties are dependent on INEL for jobs, the results there were more favorable toward the federally-funded reactor testing and waste-processing compound, he explained. Bonneville County includes Idaho Falls, and INEL is located in Jefferson County.

Of those polled, 78.7 percent said they had heard about the INEL injection wells.

"The statewide awareness level is relatively high for a southern Idaho issue," the report said, and Schrag told the Times-News he thinks more people know about the matter now.

Latest tally shows nearly 70% of Idahoans want halt called to INEL's practice of dumping wastewater into river aquifer

On Dec. 13, a month after the Lewiston Tribune first reported that INEL had been injecting radioactive waste and other chemicals into the Snake River Plain aquifer since 1952, Gov. John Evans' Radioactive Waste Task Force called for a halt to the practice.

State attitudes toward nuclear power have changed over the last five years, the report added. Since 1976, the percentage of Idahoans preferring nuclear methods to other ways of generating electricity has fallen from 62 percent to 24.4 percent, based on former PRG polls. Since the Three Mile Island accident last March, the percentage of Idahoans considering nuclear facilities unsafe has jumped from 27 percent to 42 percent.

"It's something people feel they really have no control over," Schrag said. "It's threatening to them, and they want to do something about it."

The December poll also measured public opinion on the 1 percent initiative. Rep. George Hansen's first trip to Iran, and the upcoming race for the U.S. Senate.

Of those polled, 41.3 percent opposed postponing the implementation of the 1 percent initiative. Favoring postponement were 34.9 percent, and undecided people totalled 23.8 percent.

"We can only conclude that the public remains steadfast in their view that property taxes are too high and should not be allowed to grow rapidly," the report says.

Asked to judge Hansen on his first trip to Iran, 42.6 percent of those surveyed said the trip lowered their opinions of Congressman Hansen. For 39.9 percent, their opinions were raised by the trip, and 26.5 said their opinions were unchanged. The poll was taken before Hansen's second trip.

For the senatorial race, 38.2 percent of those polled favored Sen. Frank Church, a Democrat, while 35.8 percent favored Rep. Steve Symms, his Republican challenger. The undecided block came to 26 percent.

Over 70 percent of the undecided people said they viewed the race as a choice between two extremes, said the report.

Every Idaho Poll contacts different people in the same 10 counties, which include Owyhee, Jefferson, and Idaho counties along with the seven most populous counties in the state. Schrag said. Fewer people are called in the less-populated counties.

Subdivision preliminary plan north of Buhl gets approval

TWIN FALLS — The chairman of the Twin Falls County Planning and Zoning Board, broke a tie vote Thursday night in favor of a proposed subdivision northwest of Buhl.

Mr. Lanting's vote sends the subdivision preliminary plan to the county commission with a favorable recommendation.

John Priester, a Buhl engineer, presented the plan in connection with the request for a zone change from agricultural to residential agriculture. The zone change is required to allow the subdivision.

Priester said the land, owned by Mr. and Mrs. Robert Bayless, is located in an agriculture zone about 1 1/2 miles north of the old Lucebarn School at the entrance of Fingerman Valley. Priester said the land is not farmable and has no water, but it is suitable for housing. He said about 10 to 15 homes would be built with scenic views and a view east of the land would be left as open space.

Subdivision preliminary plan north of Buhl gets approval

With a 5-5 tie, Lanting was left to cast the deciding vote.

He said he and board member Bob Nail had walked the entire acreage and felt it was not suitable for farming or even for good pasture. Saying the only value to be realized would be in housing, Lanting cast a "yes" vote.

In the public hearing on the request, six residents of the area voiced opposition to the zone change and development of a subdivision in a farm area. Dennis Couch, Melon Valley resident, pointed out the county spent several years adopting a comprehensive land use plan to protect agricultural areas against non-compatible housing developments only to have the zoning board authorize zone change requests for more rural subdivisions.

A public hearing on the zone change request will also be required before the board and county commissioners take final action.

Murder suspects expected back in Burley soon

BURLEY — Cassia County Prosecutor Al Barrus received word Thursday that the two murder suspects in Albuquerque, who were wanted in connection with the December murder of two Palestinians, will be returning to Idaho.

Barrus said governors' warrants were issued against Norbert Burnett, about 36, and Hafan Ali, 26, who will not contest the warrants. They will be picked up within 10 days.

The third suspect, Hafiz Nassar, about 27, was released Friday following a motion by the prosecution to dismiss charges of conspiracy to commit murder for lack of evidence.

Declo man dies in accident

DECLO — A Declo man was killed and two others injured in a one-car accident two miles east of Declo sometime between 1 a.m. and 5 a.m. Thursday, according to Cassia County sheriff's officers.

The victim, Grant C. Bailey, 57, had just moved to Declo from Ogden this summer. He was pronounced dead at the scene.

Raymond Pringle underwent surgery at Cassia Memorial Hospital and was listed in stable condition Thursday evening. Tom MacKenzie, driver of the car, was admitted and treated for a broken ankle.

When MacKenzie failed to negotiate a turn, the vehicle jumped a canal bank and was airborne 75 feet.

Cassia County Deputy Ruben Saldana said the car may have been traveling at an excessive speed.

Albion sets election on liquor sales

ALBION — The Albion City Council decided Tuesday night to call a special election Feb. 12 to decide whether to sell liquor by the drink.

Only beer is allowed to be sold in Albion.

The decision follows an application for the election last month by Joy and Karma Cagle, the wife and daughter, respectively, of Mayor Chris Cagle. The Cagles own a restaurant in Albion.

Cagle explained several other Albion people want the election as well.

Cagle said Cassia County has a system by which an establishment may obtain a beer, wine and hard liquor license.

"We're interested in having wine and champagne with meals in the back dining room," explained Cagle. He stressed it would not be allowed in the front dining room.

The state ruling allows any city to have at least two establishments which serve wine and/or liquor. A city may have more proportionate to the population.

Church slams grain aid plans

BOISE (UPI) — The Carter administration's plan to shield farmers from the effects of the Soviet grain embargo is "an unduly inordinate use of money," Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, claims.

Judging from early indications of how the White House will shore up the farm economy, Church said, the Carter plan "falls short of what I would regard as fair treatment for the farmer. It is woefully inadequate."

Defending champion John McEnroe shows the form that carried him past Guillermo Vilas 6-2, 6-3 in the Grand Prix Masters Thursday.

Connors loses tie-breaker

McEnroe, Borg post Grand Prix wins

By MARTIN LADNER
UPI Sports Writer

NEW YORK — Bjorn Borg displayed little emotion in a heart-stopping match, won a final-set tie-breaker from Jimmy Connors Thursday night, joining defending champion John McEnroe as the only unbeaten players after two rounds of the $400,000 Grand Prix Masters.

Borg, belittled by a scorching start that deserted him at the most important times, was extended for two hours and 40 minutes before subduing Connors for the seventh consecutive time, 6-3, 7-6, Borg won the tie-breaker 7-4 but only after Connors staved off two match points.

McEnroe, making several remarkable recoveries that cost him a head-ache and some bruises, had a surprisingly easy time in beating Guillermo Vilas 6-2, 6-3.

With 20 records, Borg and McEnroe virtually have clinched berths in the semifinals Saturday.

White Connors, Roscoe Tanner, Vilas and Vilas Gerulaitis all are at 2-1. Tanner, accounting for five aces with the swift service, kept himself in contention by overpowering Jose Higueras 7-5, 6-4 Thursday night while in an afternoon match Gerulaitis, although weakened by a persistent flu bug, withstood pesky Harold Solomon 6-1, 7-6.

There were few easy points in the Borg-Connors confrontation, particularly in the second set when there were six service breaks. Typical of the trouble he endured all night, Borg was guilty of two double-faults when serving for the set in the eighth game, allowing Connors to break. But the poised Swede broke right back in the ninth game to even the match.

A break in the fourth game of the final set seemed to baffle Borg, needed as he ran off to a 5-2 lead. But Connors, cheered on by the crowd, broke back in the ninth game to force the tie-breaker.

Connors accounted for the only service breaks of the opening set, in the fifth and ninth games, and in the final game he was helped along by a Borg double-fault at deuce.

Despite the intensity of the match, the result could turn out to be meaningless if Connors wins his final contest of the round-robin phase against Tanner Friday.

McEnroe, although claiming he had been worried about his game, pleased himself with his performance against Vilas. He broke the Argentine post in the sixth and eighth games of the opening set, then put together a string of four consecutive games for a 5-1 lead in the second set.

Vilas achieved his only break of the match in the seventh game, but McEnroe held in the ninth game despite crashing into the net and tumbling on his head in a futile effort to scoop a ball that hit the top of the cord and stopped short.

"I came to the net and couldn't stop," said McEnroe, who also ran into the net. It knocked me down and it came back up and knocked me over. I had a little headache, but otherwise I was OK."

McEnroe said he played much better than he had in his opening-round victory over Solomon, adding, "There's a good chance of getting into the semis no matter what happens tomorrow, but I'll still go out and try to win."

Tanner won the opening set against Higueras with a break in the 11th game and broke again in the opening game of the second set, running off the match from there.

Gerulaitis required only 18 minutes to romp through the opening set against Solomon, who managed only nine points. In the second set, however, Solomon three times broke back after Gerulaitis had broken his service, and Gerulaitis required a tie-breaker, which he won 7-5, to end the match.

"I've had the flu for about a week and a half," said Gerulaitis, wearing a heavy turtleneck sweater for his interview. "After the first set I got tired, I thought I was playing well, then I made a few sloppy errors. I haven't played that many matches and that hurt me. This is a tough time of the year to get rolling."

Ohio State's Bruce named coach of year

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — Earl Bruce, who succeeded the vaunted Woody Hayes at Ohio State and led his team to an 11-1 season this year, Thursday won Coach of the Year honors from his peers in the American Football Coaches Association.

Bruce won the award in the university division, while Bill Naradzuzl of Youngstown (Ohio) State won the college division honor.

About 1,500 members of the coaches' association, a record, voted on the awards this year.

Bruce, in Tokyo for the Japan Bowl, was awakened at his hotel room at 2 a.m. Tokyo time for comment on the award.

"I am very honored to be selected as Coach of the Year by my peers," he told association officials. "This reflects the hard work and dedication of our entire team. I am overwhelmed."

Bucs' Selmon wins defensive honors

NEW YORK (UPI) — Lee Roy Selmon, Tampa Bay's agile end who anchored the Buccaneers' league-leading defense, was named the clear-cut winner Thursday as UPI's National Football Conference Defensive Player of the Year.

Selmon, the Buccaneers' first draft choice in their four-year history, received 32 votes from UPI's panel of 66 pro-football writers, four from each NFC city.

Washington safety Lemar Parrish, who led the conference with nine interceptions, finished a distant second with 10 votes and New York Giants' linbacker Brad Van Pelt and Los Angeles end Jack Youngblood tied for third with six votes apiece.

Selmon's aggressiveness—between the sidelines—is in sharp contrast to his mild-mannered temperament off the field.

"I think I received recognition as a direct result of our team's success," Selmon, who led the Buccaneers to the NFC championship game against Los Angeles in the team's fourth year, "My mind goes back to the team's coaches and players. It has all been a combination of things. I never set any personal goals. I just wanted to get us started and use my ability the best I could. Just being on a winning team is a thrill."

Selmon, an All-America end out of Oklahoma, who captured the Lombardi and Outland trophies in 1975 as the nation's outstanding collegiate defensive lineman, got used to that thrill in college as Oklahoma compiled a 43-2 record during his days there. When he joined Tampa Bay, however, the thrill was quickly gone for nearly two years.

The Buccaneers dropped their first 26 games and finished 5-11 in 1978. This season, the defense joined and Tampa Bay captured the NFC Central title with a 10-6 record, then upset the Philadelphia Eagles 24-17 in their first playoff game before losing 20-0 to the Rams last Sunday.

"I think these honors highlight this year was to remain healthy," said Selmon.

Decision in Gillett case expected Monday

BURLEY — Whether former basketball coach and history teacher Tom Gillett will be reinstated at Burley High School will be decided over the weekend and released Monday.

Judge George Granata heard the case of Gillett vs. Cassia County Schools in 5th District Court Thursday.

Gillett was the only witness called by Idaho Education Association Attorney Byron Johnson. School Attorney Herman Bedke presented three witnesses: School Superintendent Bill Peckham, Burley High School Principal Tom Gruwell, and Burley High School Vice Principal David Peck. School Board Chairman Dr. Paul Brown was expected to be called by Bedke, but was not. Athletic Director Bob Matthews was not called.

Mathews filed suit against the district after the school board refused to reinstate him "due to his abandonment of teaching and coaching duties and acts of insubordination."

Gillett said Thursday night, "We feel real good about it. We should know in writing by Monday or Tuesday." Peckham did not wish to comment.

At about 4 p.m. Judge Granata asked the attorneys to submit their closing briefs in writing. Whether the school board receives the verdict before the regularly scheduled meeting Monday night remains to be seen.

Jimmy the Greek Rams' defense may be nearing peak

NEW YORK — The Steelers remain a 10-point choice over the Rams in Super Bowl XIV. But the LA defense, which has been handicapped by injuries throughout the season, could well be the healthiest it has been all year. CBS Pat Thomas and Rod Perry are expected to be equally recovered from the assorted ailments that handicapped them throughout the season.

There's little doubt that two weeks worth of rest will improve the physical condition of Jack Youngblood. The latter's performance against Tampa Bay was simply sensational. I saw Jack in the hotel and Swamp via the air. The LA front line must be sure to walk. By game time, he was ready and it was a most courageous performance.

Another reason why the Rams figure to present a tough defensive challenge to the explosive Steeler attack can be found in the coaching genius of former Steeler aide, defensive coordinator Bud Carson. It was Carson who formulated the defensive coverages which drove Roger Staubach to distraction and completely confused Doug Williams. And, considering the fact that Carson is responsible for the Steeler pass defense during the best of times and worst of times of Terry Bradshaw's recent career. Bud will get the chance to take advantage of the weaknesses of Bradshaw's ability to handle complex defensive coverages which he might have noticed while coaching against the Steeler QB every day during practice.

The key to the Rams success will be twofold. It must pressure Bradshaw into mistakes — it doesn't happen all that often in Super Bowl competition where Terry has thrown just one interception in 93 passing attempts while setting a parcel of records — the way the Rams defense did in last year's meeting when the LA secondary intercepted him three times.

In addition, the defense must also find a way to contain the explosive Steeler receivers. Tough, aggressive coverage and punishing physical type of play will help. And, when the Rams have prevented Bradshaw from delivering on the promise of the collective abilities of Stallworth and Swamp via the air, the LA front line must be sure to contain Franco Harris and the Steeler's powerful running attack.

On offense, the Rams must be careful not to make the killing mistake in the form of a Vince Ferragamo interception or a Wendell Tyler fumble. The latter's reputation for coughing up the ball will serve as an added attraction for physical punishment which will be inflicted by the Steeler defense in its inimitable fashion.

When Tyler does get past the line of scrimmage, he will have to really concentrate on holding the ball when he meets up with the likes of Lambert, Wilson, Cole, Stiel and Blount. It isn't called the Steel Curtain by mistake.

THE GRAPEVINE: Though a number of names have been mentioned as possibilities for the job, John Swafford will be the new athletic director at the University of North Carolina. At 31 years old, he will become the youngest athletic director in the country.

PGA season begins

Rookie shoots four-under 68 to share Hope Classic lead with Pate, Fergus

By JOE SARGIS
UPI Sports Writer

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. — Young Bob Proben, playing west of the Mississippi for the first time in his life, shot a 4-under-par 68 Thursday to tie Jerry Pate and Keith Fergus for the first-round lead in the rainedelayed $304,500 Bob Hope Desert Classic, opening event of the 1980 PGA Tour.

Proben had difficulty describing his round and was so nervous his hand shook while he tried to recall most of his shots.

Pate, a former U.S. Open champion, and Fergus, who joined the top 60 money winners last year, had no such problems as they tied for the lead with four rounds to go in the 90-hole tournament, nearly washed out on Wednesday by heavy rain.

Proben, who won his PGA playing card last spring, shot his 68 at the host La Quinta course. Pate had his 68 at Indian Wells and Fergus his 68 at El Dorado.

The best score at Bermuda Dunes, the fourth course used in the tournament, was a 70 by Howard Twitty.

Defending champion John Mahaffey, playing with an amateur muscle, scored a 70 at Indian Wells, managed a 70 at Indian Wells to lay two shots off the lead.

Arnold Palmer, who has won five Hope titles, but none since 1973, also opened with a 70 at Indian Wells, a round which included an ace on the par-3 sixth hole.

Most of the low scores were shot at Indian Wells, fated the easiest of the four tournament courses. Gil Morgan, Scott Simpson, Mark Hayes, Lee El-amateur champion had completed eight holes on the back side when play was halted Wednesday. He finished up on the 18th hole for a 33, then played the next nine holes in 35.

Veteran Arnold Pate, scored an ace and shot 70

Proben made a 15-foot putt for a birdie on the first hole, chipped in from five feet on the fifth and two-putted from 45-feet for a birdie on the sixth. That put him 6-under but Proben three putted the eighth and ninth holes for bogies.

"I'm more nervous being in here," Proben said, referring to the "in-view room." "I'm happy to be here and I'm having a great time because until I stepped on the golf course here. It's the first time I've ever been west of the Mississippi river."

Pate won $153,707 last year although he failed to take a title. However, he had 10 finishes in the top 10, including three seconds. He seemed reasonably pleased with his opening round of the year.

"I didn't drive it all that well but I made some good putts," said Pate. "I'm going to work harder on my putting this year because it's been 15 months since I last won a tournament."

Pate also started at the 18th hole when play resumed Thursday. He chipped in from 25-feet for a birdie on that hole, two-putted from 20-feet for a birdie on the fifth, tapped in on the eighth for a third after missing a 16-foot try for an eagle. He closed out the round with a 20-foot uphill putt for a birdie on the ninth.

Fergus made the turn in 34 then scored the year's first hole-in-one when he sank a four iron on the par-3 21st hole at El Dorado. That put him 4-under par but he bogied 17 and birdied 18 to finish in a tie for the lead.

Olympics

DES MOINES, Iowa (UPI) — President Walter Mondale urged Monday that the International Olympic Committee to more strongly support the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan.

Mondale, beginning three days of campaigning in Iowa, said holding the Games in Moscow would grant "legitimacy" to a nation that had violated international law by invading a sovereign state.

"It is my personal belief that the Olympics should be held somewhere else," Mondale said.

"This would permit athletes from around the world to hold that important event without politics but in the setting where we are. In effect, granting legitimacy to a country that has just committed this outrageous and indefensible act of aggression."

The vice president raised the issue in a telephone call to the president before embarking on the campaign tour Thursday.

Although he emphasized he was expressing only his personal feelings, he indicated considerable concern about being given the administration task a stand, even though the government can exercise little more than an advisory role in influencing the decisions of the IOC.

Carter, in a televised address last Friday announcing his moves against the Soviets, said consideration should be given to pulling out of the Olympics.

By moving the Olympics — most likely to Montreal, Canada — from the city facilities to accommodate the Games — Mondale said the Soviet boycott would be athletes around the world would not become embroiled in the super power confrontation.

"That would be a good resolution to this dispute," he said.

Ulbriksen okays political use

SEATTLE (UPI) — Al Ulbriksen, coach of the medal-winning crew that defeated German oarsmen Sunday at the 1980 Winter Olympics, said he is in favor of a United States pullout from the Moscow Olympics next summer.

"I think I am against our taking part unless the Russians move out of Afghanistan or show some other evidence of a change in policy," said Ulbriksen, the former crew coach at the University of Washington.

"This is nothing but naked aggression on their part and I think they are just testing us to see whether or not we have any guts. And this is one of the few ways we can express our disapproval of their actions."

Despite the sending of Nazi troops into the Rhineland in violation of the Versailles Treaty shortly before the Berlin Olympics, Ulbriksen recalls no debate similar to the one now raging over American participation in the 1980 Games.

"There had no discussion of any boycott, even when we were in England," said Ulbriksen. "They had no apparent thoughts of war and nobody mentioned the possibility that the games might not be held. We weren't really aware of the politics of the situation until we arrived in Germany and saw their propaganda effort."

Ulbricksen said Hitler was in attendance the day his eight-oared crew won the gold medal by defeating the Germans in the Olympic finals.

"He was well protected every place we went," Ulbricksen recalled. "The storm troopers would line up all the way from his headquarters to the Olympic village and back. It was a very tight security. Proof limousine would travel this route at 50 or 60 miles an hour."

"But once he reached the rowing stadium, he sat in the open air, surrounded by thousands of people."

Polish hadn't entered the Olympics before the 1938 Games, Ulbricksen said, adding that things have been different ever since.

"I don't think athletics should be used for any political purposes since 1938 governments have dominated the athletic scene, using it as a foreign relations tool. When they took over funding for the training of athletes it created an entirely different climate from the pure amateurism of the U.S. team at the Berlin Games."

Kings rip Bulls 104-83

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — Billy McKinney and Bill Robuznik combined for 48 points off the bench and the Kansas City Kings used a brilliant second quarter to rout the Chicago Bulls 104-83 Thursday night over the 104-83 victory Thursday night over the Bulls.

The Kings put the game away in the second quarter by holding Chicago without a single field goal and outscoring the Bulls 31-10 to take a 57-34 halftime lead. Chicago was 0-for-15 at the field, scoring all 11 points in the third quarter.

McKinney scored 12 points in that quarter.

The Kings' lead in the second quarter was 14-0 at the end of the first quarter. The game was tied six times and the lead changed hands on four occasions during the opening 20 minutes.

O'Leary caps undefeated year

TWIN FALLS — The O'Leary eighth grade conferred an undefeated season by winning the Marv Taylor junior high conference tournament title Thursday night.

O'Leary, which was 12-0 on the season, nipped Jerome 35-33 for the honors.

Consolation finals will be played later due to weather conditions that prevented Wood River and Bull from getting together Thursday.

and may be just reaching his peak. And Evangelista is confident.

Spinks wanders through the hotel, surrounded by trainers and sparring partners, alone in a crowd. Celebrities keep their distance, as if they are afraid to approach this product of a world few Resorts guests can understand. Spinks, Sawyer said, feels most comfortable around children.

"I have to try to make him cognizant of giving of doing things for people, like visiting hospitals when we were in California," said Sawyer.

He has also given Spinks a start in the business world, offering a portfolio of investments. "Leon knows the difference now between bonds and stocks," he said, and you know the thing he is least likely to lose is his two-car Express card. He'll lose his jewelry before he parts with that."

Spinks' loss to Coetzee cost him a shot against John Tate for the International World Boxing Association heavyweight championship, promoted by Bob Arum. "We just lost $4 million," said Sawyer after the fight.

Big money is still available, now from Don King, who is promoting the fight with Coetzee. Spinks will earn somewhat more than $100,000 for the Saturday night fight, perhaps a shot against Holmes for bigger money. And if not?

Spinks admits to being 'scared' on eve of comeback

ATLANTIC CITY — Leon Spinks is at the "crossroads," again and this time Leon Spinks is "scared."

The former world-heavyweight champion, who has not won since upsetting Muhammad Ali on Feb. 15, 1976, fights Alfredo Evangelista of Spain here Saturday afternoon in what amounts to his second-comeback attempt. The first, seven months ago, ended in 122 confidence-shattering seconds. Spinks knocked out in the first round by Gerrie Coetzee of South Africa.

Spinks is back, bigger than ever, but the confidence has not returned. "He appears out of shape, physically and mentally, a scrawny reminder of the vulnerability of human beings. And yet he knows he must go on."

A victory over Evangelista, the former European champion, could put him one warmup bout away from a World Boxing Council shot against Larry Holmes.

Another loss, says Jerry Sawyer, the former world champion who is now Spinks' closest adviser, and Sawyer will "suggest he do something else."

"This is the crossroads, the last chance cafe," said Sawyer, referring to gambling casinos downstate from his hotel room at Resorts International, the new boxing palace where the nationally televised 10-round bout will be held.

"It's a test for me," said Spinks, in the adjoining room. "You get afraid, you get scared, I can explain it. I was down in the dumps for a long while because inside I didn't accept it. Finally I said, 'What the hell, everybody loses.'"

"The main thing that scares me," he said, "was being knocked down. Anybody who says he can't be knocked down by one punch is a liar."

That had never happened before to Spinks, not in his brief professional career of nine other fights, and not in his championship career of 189 bouts, capped by a 1976 Olympic championship.

Even Spinks finds it difficult to remember what the once was, and Wednesday, in his last rounds of sparring in preparation for Evangelista; it was difficult to see the old Leon undertake the rest of inactivity. Spinks, after all, has fought only those 122 seconds in the 16 months since losing in a rematch with Ali.

He still drops his guard, especially after throwing a left jab. Del Williams, his new head trainer, can only shake his head and say, "Sometimes it's difficult to get things across to Leon."

A lot of instruction confuses Spinks. Most of the confusion has been confined to within the ring in the year and a half Sawyer has been in charge. There have been no driving violations, no drug busts, no three years in the months after he took the title from Ali. But there has been that incredible charge across the ring into Coetzee's right hand at Monte Carlo.

Spinks said Spinks' problems had been "personal, family." He can be crushed by the pressures of his wife, mother and brother Michael. When they're around, said Sawyer, "Leon goes berserk." But, said Sawyer, Spinks has also matured since the Coetzee loss.

"I've been a revolutionary change," said Sawyer, "but there have been positive things. He's carried himself, his responsibility. There's been a reduction of materialism, a concentration on what's important."

Spinks has grown in other ways: He weighed 198 lbs. in 1976, and Sawyer said he would probably weigh 200 lbs. around 206. The narrow-waist physique has been replaced by an almost barrel-chested body hardened by five-weeks of training at Don King's farm outside Cleveland. "Real live horses and cows nags," said Spinks.

"I'm grown-up now," he said, and his corner is happy because he won't be giving away more than 15 pounds to Evangelista.

Spinks struggled through his final sparring session. After two rounds, his arms appeared to be shaking and gasping for breath. By contrast, Evangelista, whose American representative, Eddie Maruz, reported him to be "in the greatest shape of his life," had lost 25 pounds in the past 10 months.

Evangelista, who dropped a dual 15-round decision to Ali in 1977 and was knocked out by Holmes in seven rounds last year, at 25 is a year younger than Spinks; is much more experienced (a pro win-just-drawn record of 32-4-2)

Celtic coach still unsure team can maintain its pace

BROOKLINE, Mass. (UPI) — Boston Coach Bill Fitch, whose team's record is the best in the NBA at the midway point of the season, says the jury is still out on whether the Celtics can continue its stellar play.

"If you came up to me halfway during a game and asked me what I thought of the movie, I'd say, 'wait until it was over,'" the coach said Thursday prior to a workout at Hellenic College.

"Well that's the way I feel about this season. We're 31-10, but we're struggling, trying to stay ahead of Philadelphia. We're only one game ahead of them," Fitch said.

The Celtics completed their first half with a 112-95 victory over the New York Knicks Wednesday night, Boston has the league's best record at home, 17-1, with the only loss coming to Atlanta, whom Boston helms Friday night. On the road, the Celtics are 14-9, also tops in the league. Their 31 wins are two more than the team totaled all of last season.

The Celtics have been lucky this season, as well as good. No one has missed a game due to injury, a startling fact. And in two cases, visiting teams came into Boston minus two key players, allowing the Celtics' running game to take a toll on their opponents.

"It's a start, and you should look at it as just that," Fitch said. "I think we should be—and will be—a better team at this time next year. We might not have a better record, but we'll be a better team."

"Our record is deceiving. We won some overtime games. And we've won some games where if Red Auerbach had been on the other bench, he would have already latched up his victory cigar," the coach added.

Fitch, who hands-out compliments about as frequently as his team loses, took time to praise several players.

"M.L. Carr, you can say now, he was worth getting (as a free agent). Larry Bird is every thing they said he would be. Dave Cowens said he'd come to camp in excellent shape, and he did. I still had faith in Tiny Archibald and he came through," and Fitch said. "Bird is proving he's still the best third guard in the league — as a starter," Fitch said.

The Celtics' acknowledged weakness is the bench, outside of Carr. Rick Robey has been inconsistent, but is showing signs of coming-around. And rookie guard Gerald Henderson has added a few gray hairs to Fitch's head.

"I've done everything to Gerald. I've been tough on him. I've screamed at him, and he just tries to improve. He doesn't bellyache. I could have killed him at San Antonio (a recent Boston loss) and no judge in the world would have convicted me," the coach said.

Carr, the ebullient forward with the bubbling personality, said he new — because "the Celtics couldn't continue their strong play."

"If before the season, some one had predicted we'd be 31-10 right now, I'd have told him to take Jimmy the Greek's job. I thought we'd be just rounding into form, ready to turn it on down the stretch."

"We still should be in that position. We have a goal to be the best in the league. We're being hunted, we're the fox and we don't want the dog to catch us. It will be hard to put us away," Carr said.

Martin tired of Cubs

CHICAGO (UPI) — Chicago outfielder Jerry Martin, saying he can't stand the team's organization any longer, has asked the Cubs to trade him.

Martin, an outstanding defensive player who batted .272 last year with 19 homers and 72 RBI, was quoted in the Chicago Tribune Thursday as saying the Cubs' organization is in the "dark ages."

"I want to be traded. I want to get away from the Cubs and I want it right away," Martin said. "I never thought I would feel this way because I love the city of Chicago and the fans, and last year was the first time in the major leagues that I really had a chance to play regularly."

Martin was acquired in an eight-player deal last February from Philadelphia.

"But I can't stand the Cubs' organization anymore. The whole situation stinks. They are in the dark ages, and they are never going to win anything unless they change," he said. "If the season started tomorrow, the Cubs would finish the same way they did last year — fifth place. If the Mets weren't so bad, the Cubs would finish sixth."

Buerkle on comeback

NEW YORK (UPI) — Dick Buerkle, the former indoor mile record holder who has been beset by illness and injuries in the past two years, will compete in the U.S. Olympic Invitational Track and Field meet Jan. 19 at Madison Square Garden.

Buerkle, 32, clipped one-tenth of a second off the world indoor mile mark for the mile Jan. 13, 1978 with a clocking of 3:54.9 at College Park, Md. Last year, the record was lowered to 3:52.6 by Edmund Coghlan of Ireland.

Buerkle has not come close to his former time in the last two years. Shortly after setting the record, he suffered a stress fracture in his left leg and tendinitis. In his right leg, stopping his training program for six months. Early in the 1979 season, he was discovered to be suffering from a blood disorder.

He is still undecided whether he will try and make the 1980 U.S. Olympic team in the 1,500 or the 5,000 meter events.

All-star voting in

NEW YORK (UPI) — Due to a last-minute surge of ballots, the starting teams for the 1980 NBA All-Star game won't be announced until early next week, the league said Thursday.

Teams throughout the country select the starting players for the game, scheduled for Feb. 9 at the Capital Centre in Landover, Md. Conference coaches will then vote on the remaining six members of each squad.

Boxer still in coma

HARTFORD, Conn. (UPI) — Welterweight boxer Charles Newell, 26, his brain injured in professional boxing's third serious accident in less than two months, remained in a coma and on a respirator Thursday.

While doctors worked to save his life, state officials launched a full investigation into his injury, but urged people not to "panic."

Page okays match

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI) — Greg Page, billed as the best heavyweight from Louisville, Ky., since Muhammad Ali, will fight Johnny Bordeaux Feb. 1 in Louisville Gardens.

Promoter Butch Lewis said Thursday the card also will include an eight-round bout between light-heavyweight Michael Spinks, brother of former heavyweight champ Leon Spinks, and Mexico's light-heavyweight champ, Michael Lopez. Spinks is 9-0 and Lopez will bring a 15-1 record into the bout.

Stadium study due

BUFFALO, N.Y. (UPI) — Buffalo and Erie County officials Thursday pledged $25,000 to cover costs of a feasibility study for a new combination baseball-soccer stadium.

Mayor James Griffin told an informal meeting of the county sports board that the city would contribute $10,000 for the study and county executive Edward Rutkowski said the county would put up the rest of the money.

Bird's hand okay

BOSTON (UPI) — X-rays of Larry Bird's right hand were "within normal limits" and the Boston Celtics forward should be able to play in the team's next game, team physician Thomas Silva said Wednesday night.

Bird, who scored eight points in Wednesday night's 119-95 win over the New York Knicks, was taken to University Hospital after the game for the x-rays. The rookie forward jammed his hand against the rim while warming up for the second half, Silva said.

KITZBUH, Austria (UPI) — Canadian downhill ace Tim Gilhooley broke a leg Thursday when he fell in the "mouse trap" bend on the fast Streif slope at Kitzbuehel during timed practice runs for the weekend's World Cup races.

Gilhooley fractured his leg below the knee and was transported to the hospital by helicopter.

Colts maintain Kush has no lock on job

BALTIMORE (UPI) — Former Arizona State Coach Frank Kush does not have a lock on the job to succeed Ted Marchbanks as coach of the Baltimore Colts, but he is one of three top candidates, a club spokesman said Thursday.

Public relations director Jim Hubstads said Kush, who was fired Oct. 13 after accusations he tried to cover up the alleged punching of a punter after a poor kick, is one of at least three candidates still under consideration.

But Hubstads said, "Frank Kush does not have a lock on the job." Kush was an early leader, but when you're the first guy interviewed, it's how you stack up against the competition," Hubstads said.

The list of candidates includes Navy Coach George Welsh and former Philadelphia Eagles Coach Mike McCormack, Hubstads said. Hubstads said General Manager Dick Szymanski is traveling around the country to interview prospective coaches and hopes to make his selection about the Super Bowl Jan. 20 in Pasadena, Calif.

But it is necessary to interview other candidates. Szymanski will delay the decision until after the Super Bowl, Hubstads said.

Kush is among the defendants in a $1.1 million suit filed by the player he is accused of hitting.

Kush's suit against the state and the school, claiming he was denied due process in his dismissal, was settled with Kush accepting a $200,000 payment. The former coach still has a conspiracy and defamation suit pending against dragstrip promoter Rick Lynch, who Kush claims headed the move to oust him.

After Kush was fired, eight Arizona State players were declared academically ineligible and the Sun Devils were forced to forfeit five victories. Last week, Athletic Director Fred Miller, who fired Kush, was himself fired.

Dallas to get next NBA team

NEW YORK (UPI) — A Dallas group Thursday was endorsed by the NBA Expansion Committee for a franchise starting in the 1980-81 season, pending certain conditions are met over the next three weeks.

After a meeting at league offices, the committee voted to recommend expansion of the NBA by one team for next season and will recommend the franchise be awarded to a Dallas group.

The committee will also recommend the new Dallas team select in the 11th position in each round of the collegiate player draft and select one player from each remaining round after each is allowed to freeze seven players.

Potential expansion to other locations was considered, but the committee concluded that no other city meets the requirements set by the NBA.

The prospective Dallas group was represented by Norm Sonju and Robert Walker.

Fifth and sixth seeds Dianne Fromholtz and Wendy Turnbull, both from Australia, also breezed into the quarterfinals. Fromholtz ousted Marita Redondo of National City, Calif., 6-2, 6-1, while Turnbull defeated Anne Smith of Dallas, Tex., 6-2, 6-1.

In doubles play, Betty Stove and Wendy Turnbull defeated Jeanne Duvall and Wendy White, 3-6, 6-2, 6-2. Evert was never challenged by Holladay, of Del Mar, Calif., who is suffering from tendinitis in her serv-

OSU picks aide

CORVALLIS, Ore. (UPI) — Robert Ford, the only player in NCAA history credited with catching two 99-yard touchdown passes, was named Thursday as an assistant football coach at Oregon State.

New Coach Joe Avezano said Ford, 28, receiver coach at the University of New Mexico for the past three seasons, will coach receivers. Ford was a prep all-America as a running back at Belton (Texas) High School, where he graduated in 1961. He then lettered for University of Houston in 1970, '71 and '72.

Assistant conductor Robert Henderson rehearses the Utah Symphony, which logs over 20,000 miles each year touring. He will conduct the concerts in Jerome.

The Utah Symphony: The baton is passed

By BEN McKELWAY
Times-News writer

SALT LAKE CITY — "Take good care of my daughter," said retired conductor Maurice Abravanel. "These words were Abravanel's greeting at his induction to Varujan Kojian, who will take over as the new conductor of the Utah Symphony in July. By 'daughter' he means the symphony itself, which Abravanel led for 32 years until his failing health forced his resignation last spring.

It was Abravanel who, in the 1940s, shaped the part-time "Utah State Symphony Orchestra" into the full-time professional regional orchestra that it is today.

Now on tour, the Utah Symphony will play in the Jerome High School auditorium at 8 p.m. Jan. 14 and 9:30 a.m. Jan. 15. The afternoon of Jan. 15 the orchestra will play in the Monticello County High School gymnasium, before heading east for concerts in Rexburg and Idaho Falls.

Conducting the Idaho concerts will be the symphony's assistant conductor, Robert Henderson.

Kojian, 34, will conduct two concerts in Salt Lake City April 4 and 5 in the symphony's new $10-million county-owned concert hall. He is now in Stockholm, Sweden, where he is principal guest conductor of the Swedish Royal Opera Orchestra.

The Utah Symphony's search committee signed Kojian to a three-year contract in November, choosing him from over 120 conductors considered for the job, according to Betty Kay, public relations director for the symphony. The committee cut its selection process short because the musicians were so impressed with Kojian after his stint as a guest conductor last fall, Kay said. While leading the symphony on a tour of Utah, Kojian also received favorable reviews from the press, she added.

"We felt that this really was the man," said Kay. "He was outstanding."

As conductor, he will select the symphony's repertoire and guest conductors as well as directing the group's 85 musicians.

Born in Lebanon, Kojian grew up in Paris, where he graduated from the Paris Conservatoire at 13 with first prize in violin. Later he traveled to Los Angeles, where he auditioned for private instruction with Jascha Heifetz. Kojian was one of three students chosen by Heifetz out of a field of 280.

In 1964 at age 19, Kojian joined the Los Angeles Philharmonic as an assistant conductor. Here began his interest in conducting, and soon he was musical director of the Beverly Hills Orchestra.

In 1972, after more study in Vienna and appearances with the Israel Philharmonic, Kojian boosted his growing reputation by capturing first prize at the International Competition for Conductors in Sorrento, Italy. A conducting tour of Europe followed.

After landing his current job in Stockholm, Kojian was also named associate conductor of the Seattle Symphony. For four years he commuted between the two cities on a regular schedule.

This is the 10th 32-week season for the Utah Symphony, which will change to a year-round schedule when Kojian takes over. The symphony now plays 210 concerts a year, many of them to high school audiences. Kay said there were only four nights last month when the symphony was not rehearsing or performing. One of the most mobile symphonies, it travels more than 20,000 miles every year in order to take its music throughout the Intermountain West, she said.

On tour, the group travels in two buses, with a truckload of instruments following behind, Kay said. Several musicians take responsibility for the loading and unloading, she added.

At the evening concert the symphony will play "The Prelude to Khovantchina" by Moussorgsky, "The Romeo and Juliet Suite" by Prokofiev, and "Symphony No. 8" by Dvorak. The next morning, they will play "Overture to William Tell" by Rossini, "Overture to Egmont" by Beethoven, excerpts from "Ein Heldenleben" by Strauss, "Waltz from The Sleeping Beauty" by Tchaikovsky, "Siegfried's Rhine Journey" by Wagner, and selections from the movie "Rocky" by Conti.

The concerts are sponsored by the Jerome Chamber of Commerce, which has been trying to get the symphony to Jerome since 1977, when the auditorium was completed, according to Ethel Nelson, manager of the chamber.

The amount of the symphony's set concert fee is confidential, Nelson said, but any additional money raised will go toward better lighting and curtains for the auditorium.

Old-time adventures

Times-News writer

In recent years, we have developed an increasing awareness of the plight of the elderly. Youth-oriented America is finally realizing that growing old is not only inevitable, but is a particularly painful process in our society.

This sad truth is fully appreciated by Joe, Al and Willie, the central figures in a poignantly funny movie entitled "Going in Style." Portrayed by veteran actors George Burns, Art Carney and Lee Strasberg, these three characters will touch you deeply and leave an indelible imprint on your mind. The production has a degree of subtlety and delicacy rarely encountered in American films.

As the story begins, we see the three retirees sitting on a park bench, staring aimlessly into space, occasionally feeding pigeons as bands of screaming children dart around them. They are obviously bored with the ritual. Joe (George Burns) is more than bored — he's thoroughly fed up with their sedentary, meaningless existence. He devises an outlandish scheme which will relieve the monotony and also provide a solution to their almost impoverished financial state.

Joe slyly asks his companions "How would you like to go on a slick-up?" Naturally, they think he's kidding. But Joe has everything figured out. What do they have to lose? If they're caught, they can get three years of free room and board while their social security checks accumulate. If they get away with the heist, they will have enough money to live comfortably. Either way, they are winners. The logic is perfect!

Joe's wisdom appeals to our sense of irony. Yet, even though the idea is amusing, it is also a disturbing commentary on growing old. The film makes it very clear that the "golden years" for most people are filled with loneliness, apathy and a feeling of uselessness. The moral dictates of society no longer apply. Jail is not a threat to those whose lives already imprison them.

The film pays attention to detail. The meager comforts and pleasures of old-age are depicted with heartbreaking accuracy. Still, the feature is basically a comedy.

Preparation for the robbery and its actual undertaking are hilarious.

The makeshift disguises, the false bravado and their bumbling style provide many moments of laughter.

The ensemble acting is a joy to behold. Burns has never been better in a role which calls for greater depth and insight than some of his previous ones. Art Carney is wonderful as Al, the ex-bartender who regains part of his lost youth. Dancing in the street to a marimba band or losing himself in a game of craps at a Las Vegas gambling casino, Carney fills the screen with warmth and humor.

The most special treat, however, is the performance of Lee Strasberg, the renowned acting coach and founder of the Actor's Studio. His portrayal of Willie is beautifully understated and touching. In the scene in which Willie regretfully reminisces about his son, he suffers for all of us who never told someone how much we really cared.

"Going in Style" is a comedy with tears. Sensitive! Directed by Martin Brest, the film entertains while gently reminding us of a vital problem.

Burns but no Denver in 'Oh, God!' II

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — George Burns, who became a movie star in his 80s — thanks to "The Sunshine Boys" and "Oh, God!" — returns to the big screen to star in "Oh, God! Oh, God!," a reprise of the original hit.

The new Warner Bros. movie began production Jan. 3 with Gilbert Cates producing and directing from a screenplay by Josh Greenfeld.

Champlin picks 'em for year's best

By CHARLES CHAMPLIN
©The Los Angeles Times

HOLLYWOOD—The film year ended with a flourish, although you may remember of a family who scrums and saves and does without for 11 months to make possible a grand Christmas splurge. The richness was only holiday deep, with a few birthday presents earlier in the year.

Still, there were two dozen films that ranged upward from solidly respectable to thrilling. The winning element, like a darker smudge on an X-ray, was that even the so-called little pictures cost a lot. "Kramer vs. Kramer"—$6.5 million) and the budgets of the big pictures would have financed a republic.

Modesty is an imperiled notion in filmmaking; yet some of the year's best work (whatever its cost) was modest in tone, in theme and large only in emotional force. The uses of courage and diversity were well illustrated in the year, and so was the folly of the so-called "safe" picture (49413).

What is clear is that for the major distributors the ever-rising costs of making and of selling films mean that every title is to be regarded as an "event" picture. The diamonds may be large or small but they are all on black velvet.

The importance of independent films and independent distribution is accordingly greater, but so are the difficulties, especially of competing for the good theaters, whose owners are bidding (blindly or otherwise) to get the well-promoted event films. Yet the lightweight daring and the experimentation and the uninhibited romps through the genres are apt as always to come in transfusions from the independents. The behemoths will survive one way or another; it's the outsiders who are bucking a cold wind.

Picking a Best 10 is, if possible, even more personal than most criticism, although we'll pickers may masquerade in the robes of objectivity. The listing is alphabetical.

1. Bob Fosse's "All That Jazz," with Roy Scheider as a choreographer-director very much in the hard-driven image of Fosse himself, and an intricate, fast-paced, psychic autobiography, pounding and skipping and dancing with death like an errant heart. Its employment of music, dance, design, editing and performance is not less than extraordinary.

2. Francis Coppola's "Apocalypse Now" is the monument by which the year may be longest remembered, a $31 million obsession—with form, scale and content. (A historical view of the Vietnam war—as a disorienting, deranging human drama.) If a final perfection stayed just beyond grasp, the film remains an unforgettable tableau of performances and epic constructions, a shared journey into the darkness.

3. "Breaking Away"—the Peter Yates-Steve Tesich film about four Indiana boys precariously poised between high school and adulthood, was warmly hilarious, precisely observed (or remembered) and refreshingly unpretentious. It was the year's most gratefully accepted reminder that the lives of ordinary people are in the hands of artists, the stuff of the human comedy.

4. "The China Syndrome" was a well-constructed agitprop melodrama, a film of advocacy that would have done well in any event, but that got its best reviews from current history and the technicians of Three Mile Island. But its gift of quick prophecy cannot obscure its excellence of direction (James Bridges), script and performance.

5. "Hair," the definitive stage musical of and about the tumultuous '60s, became a vibrant film, overflowing with kinetic energy. As directed by Miles Forman (the Czechoslovakian so well attuned to the American experience), the adaptation kept the spirit and substance of the original, enriched by the perspective of another decade; it was doubly moving, as film making and as a recollection of a foregone young generation.

6. "Kramer vs. Kramer," Robert Benton's adaptation of the Avery Corman novel about a father's fight to keep the son he has been raising alone after the mother split to rediscover herself, was nearly perfect—economically told, superbly acted, extremely moving and the more impressive because it dealt honestly with a frequent and identifiable human dilemma. For me, it was the most successful realized film of the year.

7. "Manhattan" continued Woody Allen's exploration of the life and emotional hard times of a central character—not unlike himself (to say the least), played by himself. It was also a visual prose poem in favor of Manhattan Island, seen in glorious black and white and accompanied by Gershwin scores for symphony orchestra. The sea-change from "Annie Hall" was not only the growing assurance of Allen's direction but the harder edge to his portrayal of his protagonist and the loss of innocence by all but the wise girl-child who, perhaps unwisely, loves him.

8. "Norma Rae" focused on a superlative performance by Sally Field of a Deep South mill worker caught up—reluctantly at first, then passionately—in the struggle to form a union at the mill. But it was more than a film of performance; Martin Ritt's exploration of the place and the time (now) and the conflict of past and present had the texture; the drama and the wry humor of a kind of documentary painting, and in the end it was triumphant but not facetiously sentimental.

9. "Promises in the Dark," an uncommonly polished and assured first feature by Jerome Hellman, dealt with the slow death-by-career of a teenage girl (resiliently well-played by Kathleen Beller) and the impact of her ordeal on all around her—notably her tough-minded doctor (a fine and fabled characterization by Marsha Mason). The detailing and the honesty of the film made for a more enduring emotional impact than an obvious and traditional manipulation of the plot would ever have had.

10. "Yanks," John Schlesinger's evocation of the Yankee invasion of Britain in the months prior to the Normandy invasion in World War II, reflected his and his principal author's (Colin Welland) own experiences as young boys in wartime. For that reason, the whole panorama of anecdotes and memories, hung on three central relationships, rang poignantly true. But there were also nasty detours (a race riot, bitter resentment by the locals) that made the movie more than a sentimental journey to a touched-up past.

Warren to star in 'Beulah Land'

HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—Lesley Ann Warren has been signed to star in "Beulah Land," a Civil War story about a Georgia plantation and the men and women involved in its life and times.

The six-hour NBC miniseries, based on the best-selling novel, "Beulah Land" and its sequel, "Look Away Beulah Land," are being produced for the spring of 1980.

The miniseries will cover a 45-year span from 1827 to 1872, a saga of the Kendrick family.

CYBILL SHEPHERD
...singing the blues

Q: Some time back you mentioned that Cybill Shepherd was expanding her career by becoming a singer. We haven't heard much since — is she still at it? — D.L., Chicago

A: You bet, Cybill, a blues vocalist, recently played a New York nightclub — Reno Sweeney's — and her reception wasn't all that bad — in a couple of weeks, she plans to go to California where she'll be looking at some movie projects.

Q: Those books based on movie plots — do they really make any money? After all, who would buy a book after they've seen the film? — C.K., Tampa, Fla.

A: Apparently, a lot of people. These script spin-offs can be pure gold. A writer receives anywhere between $5,000 and $25,000 for a book based on a movie. One such novel, "The Eyes of Laura Mars," was actually more successful than the picture.

JACK NICHOLSON
...Anjelica-bound

Q: I know you've been more or less following the relationship between Jack Nicholson and John Huston's daughter, Anjelica. Tell me, are they still together? — T.V., Houston

A: She and Jack must be setting some sort of longevity record by Hollywood standards since they're still on the best of private terms. When Jack showed up at a recent black-tie party thrown by retired industrialist Norton Simon for Rosalynn Carter, Jack and Anjelica were arm-in-arm and very lovey-dovey.

Q: Now that Shelley Hack seems to be making it as one of "Charlie's Angels," are there any other famous models likely to turn actress now? — B.H., New York

A: According to Bert Knapp, Broadway's most famous drama and speech guru, if Cheryl Tiegs continues to work as she's doing in class at the moment, there's no end to the possibilities in store for her. The beautiful Cheryl, whose face has been her fortune, has also been blessed with a talent which is beginning through hard work to be her road to movies and TV. She's shown it in her commercials of late, and as a result she's now looking at five movie scripts.

PLAYING A ROUND: Part of the new hit movie "The Electric Horseman" starring Robert Redford and Jane Fonda was filmed at Casars Palace in Las Vegas. The hotel made certain that everyone's privacy was protected just in case any guest was visiting the hotel and casino with someone he or she didn't want to be seen with. Warning signs were posted to suggest that couples who might be embarrassed to see themselves in glorious color in their local movie houses should stay out of camera range while filming was going on.

Q: Can you tell me something about that actor who portrayed 007 in just one James Bond film and then dropped out of sight? — O.P., Niagara Falls, N.Y.

A: You're referring to Australian actor George Lazenby, 40, the least-known of the actors who've played James Bond. He starred as 007 in "On Her Majesty's Secret Service," in 1969 and that was it. Sean Connery was the original Bond, and Roger Moore took over after Lazenby. He's since been involved in a number of movies overseas, and just recently landed a fat TV commercial contract with a major U.S. auto manufacturer. Lazenby's also moved back to Hollywood, and thus he's likely to reappear — but not as Bond — very soon.

Q: What's this about another woman figuring into the breakup of Christina Onassis' third marriage to Russian Sergel? Was he seeing someone on the sly all the time he was married to the Greek shipping heiress? — O.M., Spokane, Wash.

A: Not that we know of. Sergel was actually a pretty-acknowledged husband whose chief attraction for Christina was that he was reasonably unimpressed with her fabulous wealth. He's not the philanthropic type. As for those "other woman" stories, they probably stem from the time Christina made a solo trip to New York while Sergel remained in Paris where he was seen shopping in a ritzy department store — accompanied by his mother.

Q: Any idea what the great actress Jill Clayburgh will be doing next in terms of a film role? — B.T., Birmingham, Ala.

A: Producer Ray Stark has Jill lined up to play the role of Libby Holman — the famed 1930s singer who is credited with originating the torch song. Holman made her Broadway debut in Rodgers and Hart's "Garret Galleites" in 1929. She married Zachary Smith-Reynolds of Reynolds Tobacco fame in 1931 and was charged with his murder in 1932. But the charges were later dropped. Her second husband, Bill Hays, killed himself in 1945. Libby died in 1971. Sounds like a juicy role. It was Stark, by the way, who launched Barbara Streisand's career when he cast her as Fanny Brice in "Funny Girl."

Q: Isn't Kirk Douglas planning to write a "tell-all" autobiography that will drop some bombshells concerning his private life and, particularly, about his relationships with his talented sons? — E.H., St. Louis

A: Kirk is taking pen in hand but he's writing a novel, not an autobiography. Inspired by the success of other authors, turned fiction writers — Tony Curtis is a case in point — Kirk's new book promises to have a section on showbiz but neither he nor his family figure in the plot. Too bad.

Gossip

Q: One of the most beautiful actresses ever out of Hollywood was Rhonda Fleming. How old is she now, who is she married to and what is she doing? — H.D., Erie, Pa.

A: Rhonda, 36, is still active in the movie industry. For one thing, her husband is Ted Mann, who owns a chain of theaters. She and Mann recently showed up at a Hollywood tribute to Ingrid Bergman, an occasion of special significance to Rhonda since she made her first film with Bergman, "Spellbound," in 1945. She just finished the film "The Return of Maxwell Smart" in which she co-starred with Don Adams. In recent years she's also had occasional TV roles.

Q: What's this about a report we've been hearing that Elvis Presley took all those pills and medication because he was afraid he had cancer? — M.R., Philadelphia.

A: This, more or less, is the contention of a new Elvis book due this April, "The Truth About Elvis," by Jess Stearn with Larry Geller. They say Elvis thought he was dying of bone cancer and thus took all the medication and pills. How do they claim to know? Geller was Elvis' hairdresser and spiritual advisor.

Q: Didn't John Wayne write a book of some kind just before his final illness? — N.G., Reno, Nev.

A: Not a book — a list. The late Duke, as one of his last contributions to motion picture history, picked his personal choice of the five Best Motion Pictures of All Time, for the Wallace Family's all-new "Book of Lists No. 2" coming out in February. It wouldn't be fair to give them all away but as an appetizer I can reveal that Wayne's choice for No. 1 is — "A Man For All Seasons."

OUT OF THE MOUTHS OF BABES: Justin Henry, the 8-year-old who plays Dustin Hoffman's son in Columbia's "Kramer vs. Kramer," was never allowed to see "Kramer" during the shooting of the film. After production director Robert Benton ran the picture for the boy, Justin thanked Benton politely and left without saying anything. Next morning, someone asked the lad's mother what Justin's reaction was. Mrs. Henry replied, "Shortly after we came out of the theater, he reached up and brought my head down to his and whispered in my ear, 'I was great.'"

Q: Simon and Garfunkel were one of the best pop singers-composers ever to record. Do you think they'll ever get back together on a regular basis? — J.L., Erie, Pa.

A: Doubtful since both have moved on to other things — notably making movies. Paul Simon will star in a movie he's written about touring rock musicians which has no title yet. And Art Garfunkel recently completed a starring role in a British movie, "Illusions." So it looks like the idea of a reteaming isn't likely.

Q: I understand one of my all-time favorite — movie — actresses, Janet Gaynor, has come upon hard times, and is trying desperately to get a movie or TV role. Can that be true? — G.V., Chevy Chase, Md.

A: Nothing could be further from the truth. At 74, Janet, who was a fabulously successful star in the 1920s and 1930s lives in lush Palm Springs with her husband, producer Paul Gregory. What's more, Janet is now a highly successful still life painter whose canvasses command as much as $2,000 each at sellout gallery shows. She opens this week in the Broadway show "Hild and Maud."

'3-2-1 Contact' takes off Jan. 14

By PAMELA REEVES
WASHINGTON (UPI)—Grade school children may not think of science in terms of roller coasters or figure skating but public television is betting $10 million it can interest them in the subject through such unusual means.

Starting Jan. 14, more than 220 stations of the Public Broadcasting Service will carry a half-hour program called "3-2-1 Contact" aimed at the nation's 13 million 8-to-12 year olds.

The program, featuring two girls and a boy who go adventuring around the country, is designed to get children interested in science and show them it is not a subject limited to the hill eggnog crowd.

"This series is for kids who don't think they're interested in science," executive producer Kathy Mendoza said in an interview. "Kids are deciding what they're going to do when they grow up at this age. This is a perfect time to catch them."

Because there are no such science programs on television now, the series—developed by Children's Television Workshop did two years of research on some 8,000 youngsters before starting work on the show.

CTW, which also produces Sesame Street and the Electric Company, concluded that most of America's children—especially girls and minorities—do not think of science as a possible career. To remedy the problem, CTW is devoting $10 million to the program—partly its own money but also contributions from the National Science Foundation, the U.S. Office of Education, the Corporation for Public Broadcasting and United Technologies Corp.

The show, to be broadcast Monday through Friday about 6 p.m. local time, will have appearances by such celebrities as Rita Moreno and the Sha Na Na pop music group.

It will demonstrate science through roller coasters, "What kind of person puts together a roller coaster, a gravity machine?"; supertankers ("How much stuff could go in a supertanker? Enough jellybeans one layer end-to-end to go all over the island of Manhattan?"); football, surfing, ice skating and a host of other action activities.

"The idea is to make science relevant by dramatizing the scientific principles behind the fun of the human activity around us," said CTW president Joan Ganz Cooney.

Producer Mendoza hopes especially to attract girls and minority youngsters to the program, so its three hosts—all professional actors who look younger than their average 20 years—are a black boy, a white girl and a Hispanic girl.

Ms. Mendoza herself was an art history major at Vassar College, but says she might have been a scientist today had she been exposed to such a show.

"If you're in seventh grade in many schools, you can decide not to take science any more," she said. "We're getting in there early enough to say, 'This is a possibility.'"

Ms. Mendoza recently produced a science and technology film series distributed for use in high schools and colleges. She hopes grade school teachers will use "3-2-1 Contact" in their classes.

The 65 shows filmed for this season will be available for schools to tape, and supplementary materials for classroom will be provided also. The National Education Association endorsed the show, meaning it will recommend the program to its member teachers.

Ms. Mendoza said the CTW survey not only showed that children do not think of science as a career, but that many lack knowledge of basic principles. More than one child, when asked where milk comes from, responded, "From a refrigerator."

Lisa (Liz Moses), Marc (Leon W. Grant) and Trini (Ginny Ortiz), will host "3-2-1 Contact," intended to stimulate children's curiosity about the world around them, both natural and technological. The show, airing on PBS, is produced by Children's Television Workshop, creators of "Sesame Street" and "The Electric Company."

Harper sheds 'Rhoda' image — and poundage

By PATRICIA McCORMACK
NEW YORK (UPI) — Valerie Harper says she is a size four and weighs 115 to 118 pounds. And those facts amaze her.

As television's Rhoda, Valerie, as she prefers to be called, says she battled blubber for nine years the kind that brings a 5-foot-6 frame up to 160 pounds.

At her suite in the Plaza Hotel the other day she said the war on calories went on in real life, too — not just before the television cameras.

"All those 'fat' jokes in the script hit home," she said.

The last Rhoda episode was filmed Nov. 3, 1978, and Valerie weighed around 134.

She turned to movies, hoping to shed the situation comedy stereotype character "Rhoda."

First, she worked in "The Last Married Couple in America" which has not been released yet. Then she acted in "Chapter Two," a new movie based on the play.

That was pound-shedding time.

There was a swimsuit sequence and Valerie said it terrified her.

"The cameras put on its pounds," she said. "And my thighs didn't need it."

To get thighs and the rest of her anatomy camera-ready, Valerie said she rang up Tony Cacciotti, an actor, gymnast, and fitness consultant to the stars.

He came to her house at Malibu Beach in California at the end of June and got her started on the diet and exercise way to a size four and 115 pounds.

Valerie said he changed not only her body but her life. She said she and Tony fell in love and now live together. They have formed a production company called "tal" which stands for "together at last."

The fitness regime combines stretching, weight training, running and a spartan diet, plus vitamins.

During the interview, aimed at publicizing just-released "Chapter Two," Cacciotti returned from the Valerie Harper, who says she is a size four and weighs 115 pounds, shares smiles with Tony Cacciotti, actor and fitness consultant to whom she turned for help last summer in her battle against blubber green grocer's with victuals for Valerie. Celery, three tomatoes. Then he left for lunch with an attorney.

Valerie's lunch was to be more than celery and tomatoes; by the way.

Cottage cheese to supplement was in the suite's refrigerator.

Earlier in the day, she and Cacciotti ran in Central Park. A fun, not-a-jog, is part of the daily routine.

Valerie said Cacciotti claims running exercises the thighs better than jogging does.

When she was a young actress in New York, Valerie recalled she used to look at the Plaza as she passed by, wishing she could go inside and eat in one of the elegant restaurants.

And now that she could afford expensive meals in the posh hotel; there she was in a spacious suite nibbling celery and dining on cottage cheese — flavored with lemon or parsley flakes, if she desired.

She praised the diet rather than cursing it.

"It's not a crazy diet," she said. "I really work. I've done all the crazies. Grapes and fasting. And other ones. The fat always comes back. On this diet and exercise program, the fat stays off and I have energy."

It took 49 days of the fitness treatment to make the size four.

The diet plan prohibits shellfish, fruit, fruit juice, carbonated beverages ("They feel the salt and chemicals in them cause cellulite"), vinegar, oil, dairy products except cottage cheese, tea or coffee, sugar, flour, vegetables — except celery, carrots, lettuce, zucchini, tomatoes, spinach, asparagus.

Chicken, baked or broiled and with skin removed, is allowed. Ditto for fresh halibut, white fish, salmon, swordfish, broiled.

Valerie's also allowed an egg or two, poached or boiled, every other day.

For breakfast, there is tomato juice, made from fresh tomatoes. If no juice is available, Valerie said she just munches two or three tomatoes. This is supplemented by a teaspoon of Brewer's yeast, and a teaspoon of vitamin C crystals mixed with water.

Next come vitamins and minerals: A and D, B complex, E, pantothenic acid, calcium, diatomite magnesium — a three-in-one supplement.

Lunch is cottage cheese and tomatoes or a similarly non-nonsense platter.

Dinner is chicken or fish and one vegetable.

Celery and carrot sticks are allowed anytime. So is green drink.

Green? Yes. It's parsley, spinach, celery juice.

"After a few days you don't want other stuff," Valerie said.

Early this month she's starting work on a movie for television, "The Shadow Box."

It's about a hospice for the terminally ill, and their families. Valerie plays the wife of a blue collar worker who is dying of cancer.

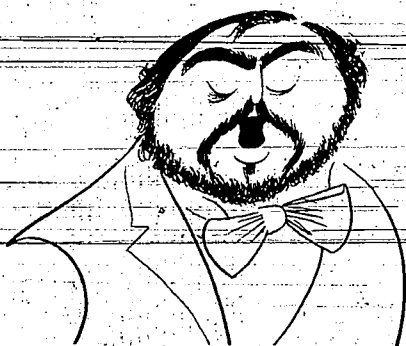

Like her new shape, the role's a far way down the road from the Rhoda role.

"Acting is hard work," Valerie said.

"To young people who think they might like that for life's work, I say try it out and find out if you like the hard work. Start in high school, then try college or community acting groups!"

The hard work aspect turns some aspirants off, she's noticed.

"Some make it on a stage or good looks or some other vulgar thing but that's not acting," she said.

Pavarotti power

Tenor Luciano Pavarotti will perform in concert Jan. 11, with the New York Philharmonic, conducted by Zubin Mehta, to benefit the New York Philharmonic Pension Fund. The concert will be televised nationally on "Live from Lincoln Center" on PBS. Pavarotti will sing arias from Glinka's "Orfeo Ed Euridice," Donizetti's "L'Elisir D'Amore," Verdi's "La Traviata," Puccini's "La Fanciulla del West," Leoncavallo's "Pagliacci" and Puccini's "Tosca."

Richard Rodgers: stored in our subconscious

By WILLIAM A. RAIDY

Newburgh News-Register

NEW YORK — This past Saturday night at exactly 8 o'clock — curtain time — the marquee lights of every Broadway theater dimmed for one minute to pay tribute to its most renowned composer, Richard Rodgers, who gave so much luster to the American musical stage for six decades.

Two minutes later, the orchestra of the new revival of the composer's "Oklahoma!" began its overture with the strains of "Oh, What a Beautiful Mornin'" and the audience at the Palace Theater, which is at the very heart of the Great White Way, knew Dick Rodgers hadn't left them at all.

Critic emeritus Brooks Atkinson who is eight years older than was Rodgers, who died last week at 77, and sat on the side to judge that of so many of the man's great musicals written first with Lorenz Hart and later Oscar Hammerstein II — said "it's best for everybody."

"There is a little of Rodgers stored away in the subconscious of every American. It was genius that created so many warm and glorious melodies, they have become the language of America. Every day they are mechanically piped into supermarkets, elevators, bus terminals, offices, building lobbies."

Rodgers — a warm, friendly and exceptionally modest man, always denied he was "a genius." While admitting that "not many people can do it" — compose an extraordinary string of songs and musicals including "Oklahoma," "Carousel," "South Pacific" and "The Sound of Music", Rodgers always insisted: "No, I'm no genius, it's my job."

"I remember when I wrote his first songs, "Dear-Old-Wigwam" and "Camp Fire Days," when he was 14 years old attending summer camp in Maine — wasn't a "genius" he was at least a wizard.

I remember having a luncheon with Rodgers, just the two of us, on the eve of his 75th birthday. Although he had some difficulty speaking because of a laryngectomy three years earlier, after also suffering from cancer of the jaw, Rodgers, who always reminded me of a banker rather than a Broadway music man, started to laugh about what might have happened to him if he had not strayed down Tin Pan Alley, as the popular music world was known when he was still in his teens: "You know I almost went into the bubble under your business," he explained softly. It was the only offer I had when I got out of college. If I hadn't become a composer, God only knows what would have happened. I'm convinced I would have been a total failure. But then I never wanted to do anything else but be a composer."

Richard Rodgers, born near Arverne, Long Island, where his parents, William and Mamie, were summering, could pick out melodies on the piano when he was four years old. His father was a New York doctor, who liked singing and show going; his mother was an accomplished pianist: "I owe my whole interest in music to them," said the composer. "They were mad about musicals and they'd come home from a show with the musical score. When I got old enough, they took me to matinees. And when I was in my teens, I started to write my own music. At the age of 15, Rodgers had his wife-to-be. It was the theater season of 1925 and he was conducting the orchestra of "Dear

General Howe by staging a phony ball in his honor. He told it in his biography, "Musical Stages."

"One evening at the Knickerbocker Theater, I remember particularly well. The Benjamin Feinlers, whose son Ben, was a close friend of mine, were sitting in the first row on the left of the stage with their daughter, Dorothy.

"She was pretty but looked very young, and though I was careful to cut the corners while conducting, I couldn't help showing off for her and her parents. A couple of months later, after Lind given up my job as music director, Ben and I had a date to go to the movies to see "The Big Parade," and I went to pick him up. Andrew Goodman, the son of the founder of Bergeford Goodman, was at the Feinlers' apartment, too, calling for Dorothy to see "Sunny." Suddenly she appeared in evening dress.

"Although I had seen her at the theater only a short time before, she no longer looked like just a young kid; in fact, she looked like the prettiest girl I'd ever seen. For the first time in my life, I knew the feeling that Oscar Hammerstein and I would express many years later in the song "Some Enchanted Evening." Ben and I may have gone to see "The Big Parade" that night, but all I saw on the screen was the bright-eyed, smiling face of Dorothy Feinler."

Dorothy and Dick Rodgers, the composer failed to mention, had actually first met when his future bride was two months old and he was, as Dorothy put it, "an old man of 7." Mrs. Rodgers has an entirely different recollection of their earliest days. In her own autobiography, "A Personal Book," she said, "That summer of '26 we sailed for home early in September on the Majestic — a trip that affected the rest of my life. As the tender that was taking us to the big ship drew alongside, Mother, Father and I looked up at the passengers who had already embarked on the Majestic at her home port, Southampton.

"A man on the boat deck appeared to be waving enthusiastically at the girl standing next to me. Isn't that Dick Rodgers? Mother asked, and Father and I agreed that he did look like him. Ben and Dick had been good friends for years. Dick was one of the boys who came to our apartment and seemed not to notice me. I was very much the kid sister — and since Dick was not only two years older than Ben but also a successful composer with three Broadway shows to his credit, I felt awed by him. When we boarded the ship, I went right to my cabin and found Dick waiting for me in the companionway.

"We spent every possible moment together, and by the time the ship landed in New York, we knew each other better than we would have after five or six months of ordinary dating — and I was shamelessly in love. Dick tore off the corner of a magazine page and wrote his phone number on it for me.

"I still have that scrap of paper, the number was Schuyler 8181." For more than 20 years, Richard Rodgers, with the help of his loving Dorothy, fought one sickness or another. He never complained and he never stopped working on the thing he loved most of all in his life — musical composition.

Rodgers once told me that he was never happy unless at least one of his shows was running on Broadway. He was too sick to make the opening night of the new "Oklahoma!" at the Palace but he was looking forward to seeing it. The show, he would be happy to know, is doing big business.

Rodgers gives his OK first professional melody parlor hits "Auto Show Girl." Before the prodigy had enrolled as a freshman at Columbia University, he and his collaborator of almost 25 years, Lorenz Hart, managed to have one of their songs, "Any Old Place With You," put in a Broadway musical called "A Lonely Romeo." One still hears that song. He was 17 and Larry Hart was only a few years older when the team of Rodgers and Hart had Broadway credit to their names [with Sigmund Romberg sharing the honors] in "Poor Little Ritz Girl."

After almost a quarter of a century of working together, Larry Hart died at the all too early age of 48. Shortly after Hart's death, Rodgers entered into another partnership with the late Oscar Hammerstein II, whom he had known since his early days at Columbia, where they even collaborated on a varsity show, song called "Room For One More."

Before Hammerstein's death in 1962, Rodgers and that great lyricist created nine musical comedies together, including the "Oklahoma," which is revived on Broadway now. His longest "partnership" however, was the team of Rodgers and Rodgers (nee Dorothy Feinler). The couple would have marked their golden wedding anniversary on March 5 of this year. Their courting and life together might have been the inspiration for a Rodgers and Hammerstein musical, noteworthy usually for tenderness and lasting love.

Enemy," a musical he and Larry Hart wrote, about how Mrs. Robert Murray — of Murray Hill fame — helped win the American Revolution by detaining the Redcoats.
