

Carter budget contains $15 billion deficit

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter Monday sent Congress a $61.8 billion budget for fiscal 1981 designed to strengthen America's defense against a "hostile world" while continuing to fight inflation at home.

Carter's election year spending blueprint — amounting to $2,786.43 for every American — calls for reducing the federal deficit to a seven-year low. Aside from increases in spending for defense, energy, a new youth employment program and increased housing subsidies for the poor, it proposed few new programs.

Carter termed the budget "prudent and responsible." Charles Schultz, chairman of his Council of Economic Advisors, called it "very tough." Treasury Secretary G. William Miller described it to reporters as "austere."

It proposes no tax cuts for the American people or for business during the coming year.

Schultz told reporters that, under current conditions, such cuts would risk stimulating inflation and entrenching it so deeply in the economy it would take "years and years and years to drag it out."

But Carter promised that if the economy "begins to deteriorate significantly" tax reductions and temporary jobs programs would be considered.

With spending of $61.8 billion and revenues of $50 billion, the budget called for a deficit of $11.8 billion.

That is short of his goal to balance the budget in 1981, but it still is the lowest amount of red ink since the 1974 recession, $50 billion less than when Carter entered the White House.

"We are taking the prudent course of keeping on an austere posture because of the clear and present danger of inflation to everyone," Miller said.

Carter predicted a "mild" recession during the first half of this calendar year, continued double-digit inflation and a sharp rise in unemployment that could increase the number of unemployed workers by 1.6 million by the end of the year.

Clearly, his top priority this year was to shore up the American military and its ability to protect U.S. vital interests around the world.

Carter, who campaigned in 1976 on decreased defense spending, asked for $12.7 billion for defense, a rise of $15.3 billion or an inflation-adjusted 3.3 percent, from current levels. Many defense advocates have been asking for a 5 percent increase or more.

The military budget contained billions of dollars for major new weapons, including $1.5 billion for the MX missile and $6.1 billion in shipbuilding and renovation funds.

"The long decline in real spending for defense that began in 1969 has been reversed," Carter said in a message to Congress. "The uncertain and sometimes hostile world we live in requires that we continue to rebuild our defense forces."

The president did seek $1 billion to assist up to 500,000 disadvantaged youths in finding jobs and a 24 percent rise in federally subsidizing housing funds.

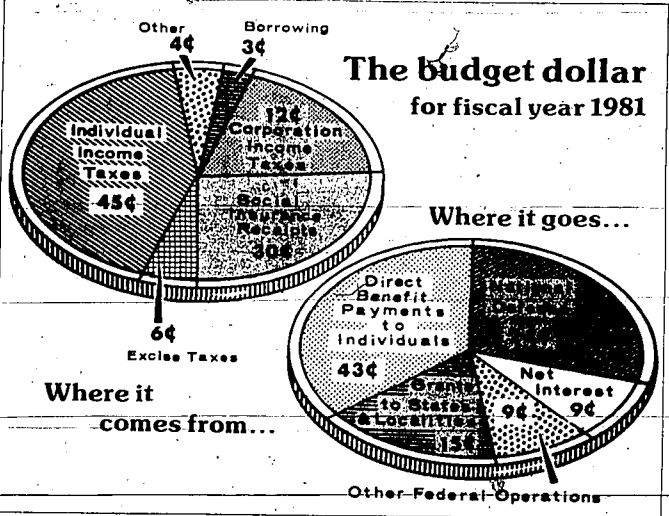

These social program boosts may help Carter defend his budget against possible campaign criticism from advocates of better instead of guns.

The new budget said the deficit for the current fiscal year would reach nearly $40 billion — far surpassing the $3.8 billion gap that was expected a few weeks ago.

James McIntyre, Carter's budget director, said the upswing was caused by higher inflation, which caught the administration off guard — and such other factors as an additional $2 billion to buy American-produced grain that was earmarked for the Soviet Union, but fell victim to the White House embargo after the Afghanistan invasion.

There were $9.7 billion in anticipated cuts contained in the proposed budget. But many — like hospital cost containment designed to save $800 million — are based on anticipation that Congress will go along with Carter on the reductions, a most dubious assumption.

Sometimes feet beat wheels

Lisa Otero, 12, the daughter of Mrs. Vida Otero, Twin Falls, traveled home on Main Street by one of the few means of transportation that is not affected by cold, snow or ice following Sunday's snowfall. As the snow packed, however, cyclists — along with motorists — found the going treacherous. Near zero tem-

Soviet pullout demanded

Moslem rebuke for Moscow

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (UPI) — The Moslem world unanimously called for the "immediate and complete" withdrawal of Soviet troops from Afghanistan Monday.

It also suspended the Kabul government from the 42-member Islamic Conference in a stinging diplomatic defeat for the Soviet Union.

"It's an outright condemnation of the Soviet aggression and the illegal regime," an exhausted delegate said after the late night session ended at 2 a.m.

Even Soviet supporters such as Libya, the PLO, Algeria and Iraq joined the Moslem belt of nations stretching from the Atlantic to the Far East on the key provisions asking for Soviet withdrawal and Kabul's suspension from the Islamic body.

"Every country present acceded to these items," conference Chairman Ayub Shahid told reporters of the sharp defeat given Moscow by the Islamic body, representing up to 800 million Moslems from Morocco on the Atlantic to Indonesia in the Far East.

In all, 36 Moslem nations and delegates from Africa, Asia and the Middle East backed the passage of a resolution asking for the Soviet pullout from Afghanistan and the suspension of Afghanistan from the Islamic Conference.

Approval of the 11-point resolution came hours after the conference's all-powerful political committee received six Afghan rebel leaders to hear their pleas for economic and military aid. It was their first official appearance at a diplomatic gathering.

It also was believed to be the first time in the 10 years since the formation of the Islamic Conference Organization that the Soviet-Union had Moslem resolutions.

The 11-point resolution also included provisions calling on Moslem countries to either break off their existing diplomatic ties with Kabul or withdraw recognition altogether.

Spending for defense supported, assailed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Key Republicans and Democrats in Congress agreed Monday President Carter's new budget does not seek a big enough increase in defense spending.

They indicated Congress would probably add to the defense programs outlined in Carter's proposed budget for 1981.

Carter asked for a $15.3 billion increase over last year's $127.4 billion defense budget, but several members said that would not be enough.

Acting Senate Republican leader Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, said Carter's proposed 5 percent real increase in defense spending falls to take into account increasing pressures on the United States as a result of the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan.

He said Republicans in Congress are willing to shelve efforts to balance the budget in order to finance the needed increase in defense spending.

House Democratic leader Jim

Wright of Texas predicted Congress would accept higher defense spending, and might add to Carter's proposals.

Patsy Mink, president of Americans for Democratic Action, criticized the budget for cutting back on "human needs" programs. The administration "has opened its purse for the military, and closed it tight against those most in need," she said.

Assistant House Democratic leader John Brademas, D-Ind., called the president's budget "a budget of restraint," although he said he hoped the predicted 10 percent inflation rate would not prove accurate.

Sen. William Roth, R-Del., a leading proponent of a major tax cut, roundly criticized Carter's budget. "Despite the president's claim, there is no restraint in the budget," he said.

Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., proposed to fight the proposed cuts in child nutrition programs.

Conspiracy cases against 2 dropped

By CAROL HOSLER Times-News writer

BURLEY — Charges were dropped Monday on the remaining two men charged with conspiracy to commit murder in the death of two Palestinians in Burley in early December.

In what was virtually a preliminary hearing to a preliminary hearing, Magistrate Judge Nathan Higer called the attorneys into his chamber and heard the arguments of the five defense attorneys and two prosecuting attorneys.

County Prosecutor Al Barrus said he had initiated the proceeding to get a reading from the judge on whether there was sufficient evidence to warrant the time necessary for a two-to-three-day preliminary hearing.

Barrus said during the 45-minute meeting in the judge's chamber he presented a summary of his witnesses and their testimony, the defense attorneys presented their rebuttal to witnesses, and how they planned to impeach or discredit testimony, and each of the attorneys presented a summary of his closing arguments. It was then turned over to the judge to determine if the prosecution had a case to present.

Whether the prosecution would have a case was left in doubt Jan. 4 when charges were dropped against Ilfiz Nassir, the first of the three suspects to face preliminary hearing. At that time Barrus said he had considerably more evidence against Norbert Burnell and Hassan Ali.

When Judge Higer returned to the bench, he said, "The state has presented evidence that there was sufficient conduct for Mr. Ali and Mr. Burnell, but it has not presented enough evidence that there was a conspiracy."

Barrus moved the charges he dismissed against Ali and Burnell.

After the court was dismissed Barrus said, "We felt we had enough evidence, it was obviously questionable. The judge determined it wasn't sufficient to constitute conspiracy. We had plenty of probable cause for the arrest warrant, we hoped some physical evidence would turn up and it didn't."

Barrus also said he was sure he had the correct suspects. Even though the door is open for filing new charges, Barrus said some surprise evidence would have to emerge.

"I have no regrets about filing the charges," said Barrus. "We're recruiting assistant prosecutors Steve Bywater) and the officers on the case did our best. We were faced in December with the decision to take this approach or let it go over; so we filed."

Idaho building wage law repeal proposed

By DAVID MORRISSEY Times-News writer

BOISE — Saying their action would save taxpayers thousands of dollars in reduced construction costs, members of the House Local Government Committee Monday introduced a bill that would repeal Idaho's Davis-Bacon Act.

That Idaho law, passed in 1933, requires employees be paid the "prevailing local wage" on state, county, and city construction projects.

According to Rep. John Brooks,

R-Gooding, sponsor of the repeal attempt, Idaho's law no longer stabilizes wages, but instead guarantees the payment of artificially high wages. The pay scales for Idaho building projects are so high they lack up construction costs and fuel inflation, he said.

"Requiring payment of the prevailing local wage on Idaho government construction projects has frequently come to mean that wages must be the same as those paid in large urban-out-of-state areas, Brooks added.

Brooks was one of five persons who spoke in favor of repealing the Davis-Bacon act. No one spoke against the repeal effort. Support for the repeal came from Boyd Hill, owner of Western Wholesale Supply at Boise. Repealing the measure would reduce the costs of building local schools, Hill said.

Also supporting the repeal bill were Chet Shawver, a Boise architect representing the American Institute of Architects; Paul Pusey, representing the Associated General Contractors, and Scott Gallant, representing the American Federation of Independent Business Men. Each said the existing law was inflationary, and added unnecessary costs to local construction projects.

While no person spoke against introduction of the repeal effort, Idaho AFL-CIO President Robert Kinghorn said union representatives would testify when the measure returns to the committee for a final hearing.

"We oppose the repeal effort," Kinghorn told the Times-News. "It is an attempt to dip profits for unqualified construction companies out of the "backs of construction workers." If construction companies say they can't make a profit, they're paying existing wage scales," Kinghorn added, "they must be unqualified in other areas."

Kinghorn said city, county, and state governments have numerous other alternatives available to reduce construction costs other than cutting workers' wages. Among those options, Kinghorn said, would be adoption of standardized designs for governmental and school buildings. A second cost-saving action would be purchasing building materials in large, wholesale lots, Kinghorn said.

Wanting to introduce the measure were representatives Gary Ingram, R-Coeur d'Alene; Peggy Bunting, R-Boise; Tom Silvers, R-Twin Falls; Linden Bateman, R-Idaho Falls; Mike Gwartney, R-Boise; William Lytle, R-Pinehurst; and Joseph Walker, R-Moscow.

Voting against introduction of the Brooks bill were Reps. Ron Harlow, D-Lewiston; Gary Gould, D-Pocatello; and James Stolcher, D-Sandpoint.

More oil firms report soaring '79 earnings

$1.1 Billion Profit in 1979

38% Increase Over 1978

By United Press International
 Atlantic Richfield Co., Monday reported its 1979 profits rose 45 percent and Shell Oil Co. announced a 38 percent increase in earnings last year.

Arco also boosted its quarterly dividend to 85 cents a share from 70 cents a share, payable March 15 to shareholders of record Feb. 8, and said it plans to seek shareholder approval of a two-for-one stock split.

"Without adequate profits, we can neither provide enough of our own money nor can we attract the outside investment necessary to meet this country's energy needs," said Robert C. Thompson, Shell vice president of finance. "Profits don't buy as much as they used to."

Arco and Shell were the latest of the nation's biggest oil companies to disclose healthy results for 1979. The 12 large refiners reporting earnings so far have posted gains ranging from Union Oil Co. of California's 21 percent increase to the hefty 164 percent surge announced by Standard Oil Co. of Ohio last week.

Arco ranked No. 7 among U.S. oil companies, earned $1.16 billion, or $9.48 a share, last year, up 45 percent from $804.3 million, or $6.60 a share, in 1978. Revenues rose 31 percent to $16.6 billion from $12.7 billion.

Arco's fourth-quarter profits climbed 54 percent to $342.9 million, or $2.78 a share, from $222.5 million, or $1.82 a share, in the final 1978 quarter. Revenues were up 54 percent to $5 billion from $3.2 billion.

Arco said its return on shareholders' equity — a key barometer of profitability — rose to 20.5 percent last year from 16.2 percent in 1978. The average return on shareholders' equity for all manufacturing industries was 16.7 percent for the first nine months of 1979.

Arco Chairman Robert Anderson attributed the gain in last year's earnings to higher crude oil prices, increased Alaskan production and improved profits on sales of petroleum products.

He also said Arco plans to spend a record $3 billion on capital expenditures in 1980, of which 71 percent will go to the development of domestic energy resources.

DENVER (UPI) — The Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers Union said Monday it was making a counter-proposal to the nation's oil companies to settle a 3-week-old strike.

Union President Robert Goss declined to detail the counter-proposal, but said it was drawn up by OCAW's national bargaining committee. It will be presented to the oil companies on the local level.

Goss said a settlement reached by OCAW at three Quaker State refineries in Pennsylvania and West Virginia was an isolated case and did not have national significance.

Shell, the eighth largest U.S. refiner, said its 1979 earnings were up 38 percent to $1.1 billion, or $7.32 a share, from $814 million, or $5.45 a share, in 1978. Revenues advanced 31 percent to $14.5 billion from $11 billion.

Shell's fourth-quarter earnings rose 72 percent to $331.2 million, or $2.15 a share, from $192.3 million, or $1.27 a share, in the fourth quarter of 1978. Revenues were up 48 percent to $4.3 billion from $2.9 billion.

Thompson said Shell netted 41 cents on each of the 24.4 billion gallons of refined product and natural gas equivalent it sold last year. Gasoline profit was less than 3 cents a gallon.

"That 4 cents is a far cry from the 40 to 50 cents public opinion polls show the public thinks we earn," he said.

Shell said most of its earnings growth came from exploration and production of oil and natural gas and its chemical business.

Thompson said Shell planned to spend $2.6 billion on capital development in 1980, including $1.8 billion to explore for oil and natural gas. Shell spent $2.4 billion on capital development in 1979.

Some oil refinery workers resume work

About 60,000 OCAW members, mostly refinery workers, struck Jan. 8, demanding "substantial" pay increases, fully paid health and dental insurance and additional vacation time. The union was negotiating about 400 contracts with 100 companies under a reopening clause in the second year of a two-year agreement.

The revised proposals, which were drawn up in an effort to end the nationwide strike of oil and petrochemical workers, will be presented by local union bargaining committees to their respective employers as soon as negotiation sessions can be held. Goss said.

About 500 OCAW members at three Quaker State refineries in Pennsylvania ratified a new contract and returned to work Sunday. The settlement was reached with refineries at Emblenton and Farmers Valley, Pa., and Congo, W. Va.

Workers at Quaker State's refinery in St. Mary's, W. Va., were voting on the proposal Monday night.

American productivity drop doubles impact of inflation

WASHINGTON (UPI) — For only the second time since 1947, American productivity fell in 1979, an unwelcome development in the fight against inflation, the Labor Department said Monday.

In a highly technical report, with major implications for the average American, the department said productivity in the private business sector of the economy fell 0.9 percent last year.

It was only the second time since 1947 that this measure of the nation's economic efficiency showed a decline for an entire year. The last time was the recession year of 1974, when it fell 3 percent.

Productivity is the nation's output of goods and services per hour of work.

The total number of hours worked by Americans increased 3.3 percent last year, the Labor Department said, but their output increased only 2.3 percent.

Most economists, both in and outside the administration, of both liberal and conservative bent, regard productivity as a key to controlling inflation in the long run.

Most economists say only by increasing their productivity can Americans beat inflation and bring about a real increase in their living standard.

Courtesy Slater, chief Commerce Department — economist — said — one reason for the recent slowdown in productivity is that, as economic growth has begun to slow for the coming recession, output has slowed faster than employment, and hence faster than total hours worked.

While it actually declined last year, U.S. productivity has been growing at a slower rate during most of the 1970s. Economists are puzzled as to the reasons.

Government red tape, rising taxes, a "slowdown" in research and development and just plain lethargy have been suggested as causes.

All agree increasing productivity will be a long time process and that encouraging investment, saving and research — and development — will be among the keys.

Air, sea combat bars could fall

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Navy and Air Force are seeking a change in the law barring women from combat to allow the civilian secretary of each service to make the final decision how to assign women, military sources said Monday.

Current law prohibits the Navy, Air Force and Marines from assigning women to combat duties.

According to a 1978 change in the law, however, women may serve temporarily on combat ships so long as they are not expected to go into combat.

Several women have been serving on the USS Dixie, a combat stores ship, currently in the Indian Ocean.

"When the 1949 law was drafted barring women from permanent duty on Navy warships," one Navy source said, "the idea women might be assigned to combat in the Army was so unthinkable nothing restricting the Army was written into the law."

In practice, the Army has been assigning some women to combat-support roles.

Senate Armed Services subcommittee is currently holding hearings on whether to repeal the 1948 law and its amendments and allow the secretary of the Navy and secretary of the Air Force to make the final decisions on combat assignments.

Pressure for allowing women to acquire combat skills — like flying fighters or bombers — has been slowly developing within the services, the sources report.

Partly the services would like to get greater use out of the women, partly the women themselves have been pressing, they say.

Not being allowed combat roles, effectively puts a limit on the careers of some women — especially women pilots.

The Air Force and Navy are reluctant to give women expensive training in flying combat aircraft, for example, knowing that the women will not be allowed to fly in combat.

"I think I could do combat," said Lt. Donna Lynn Sprull in a recent interview with UPI at Atlantic Fleet headquarters in Norfolk, Va.

She said she felt not being able to fly a Navy F-15 would ultimately put a ceiling on her career.

Saudis seek unity, edge oil price up

By United Press International
 Saudi Arabia, America's largest foreign oil supplier, has raised its crude oil prices by $2 to $16 a barrel in a move designed to restore unity to OPEC pricing, analysts said Monday.

China informed Japanese refiners that it was increasing its Daqing crude oil by $6.33 to $32.33 a barrel, retroactive to Jan. 1 — the second OPEC price markup on oil since December.

In New York, Exxon Corp. said it was formally notified Monday by the Saudis of the 8 percent price increase, retroactive to Jan. 1.

U.S. analysts predicted the latest Saudi price move would add only about a half a penny to the American consumer's bill for gasoline and home-heating oil.

Saudi Arabia last raised its crude oil prices by $6 to $24 a barrel on Dec. 15 in a move that was retroactive to Nov. 1.

The Soviets don't deserve the honor

Two things appear certain regarding the gathering storm of controversy over the Summer Olympics to be held in Moscow:

One, the United States and a growing list of other nations will not participate if the International Olympic Committee does not remove the games from the Soviet Union.

Two, the Kremlin will not pull its troops out of Afghanistan by Feb. 20 as a condition to "save" Olympics participation.

Thus it appears the Summer Olympics are doomed in this political standoff, despite the Kremlin's insistence the games will go on as planned. The games may go on, but they will be merely a hollow Soviet attempt at face-saving—what a boycott will do the world Olympics movement, only time will tell.

The International Olympic Committee, the organizers and authority for the Olympics, meets in Lake Placid Feb. 8-10 during the Winter Games to consider the request by the U.S. Olympic Committee to change the site or face a boycott. But from the statements issued by Lord Killanin of the IOC, it is unlikely Moscow will be stripped of the games.

As of today, it appears likely some form of the games will be held in Moscow with the U.S., Britain, Canada, Australia, Saudi Arabia, Chile and perhaps many others watching from the sidelines. Moscow will be stripped of its place in the sun, embarrassed, angry and out millions in expected revenue.

A boycott will shatter the dreams of many U.S. athletes, and a Western "Free World Games" would be of little consequence.

For all the concern over a boycott "ruining" the Summer Olympics, the bottom line is that the Russians apparently will pay a penalty much higher than they ever anticipated for invading Afghanistan.

Some things have to transcend the making of a buck and the glory won on the field of athletic endeavor. The Soviets, with their aggression, have made a mockery of Olympics principles and do not deserve the honor of being a host nation.

The free world, this time, cannot turn the other cheek.

WASHINGTON . . . The role of the political pundit is to tell the reader what is going to happen before it happens, and then to explain what happened when it didn't.
I think it's time to explain what the Iowa caucus vote meant before all of us get too involved in New Hampshire.
Q — What did Iowa give George Bush, that he didn't have before?
A — Momentum.
Q — How did he get this momentum?
A — By beating the front-runner, Ronald Reagan.
Q — What was Bush before he ran in Iowa?
A — A virtual unknown.
Q — How did it happen?
A — Reagan started out as the early favorite but his lead dropped dramatically when he failed to take Iowa voters seriously. This was a strategic blunder of political magnitude because it propelled George Bush from obscurity into the position of leading challenger and what now looks like a two-horse race.
Q — What about the other Republican candidates?
A — They considered Iowa a "beauty contest" which had no national political significance.
Q — Did they always consider it that way?
A — No. They only did after they fared so poorly with the independent-minded Midwesterners who turned out in record numbers to indicate their preferences through the straw ballot, which is very complicated and does not really decide anything.
Q — What will the other candidates have to do now?
A — Reassess their positions and take a hard look at their campaign strategy.
Q — In order to get back the momentum they lost to George Bush, who, until Iowa, was an asterisk in the polls.
Q — Is this the end of Ronald Reagan?
A — No. But he has been politically wounded by his lack of grass-roots support in the heartland of America. He must now overthrow his complacency and lethargy in order to regain his momentum.
Q — What can we learn from

What Iowa means

President Carter's overwhelming and decisive victory in Iowa?
Q — That Teddy Kennedy has a long way to go.
Q — What was Teddy overwhelmed by?
A — Events at home and abroad.
Q — What did it put an end to?
A — The talk about the inevitable inevitability of the "Kennedy political juggernaut."
Q — What do you think Kennedy is doing now?
A — Apologizing over his inability to get President Carter to come out of the White House.
Q — What will Teddy have to do if he hopes to get back on the campaign trail?
A — Have an overwhelming victory in New Hampshire which is his own backyard.
Q — Was Iowa a knockout blow for Kennedy?
A — No, but since it was the kickoff of the 1980 presidential campaign, and Teddy now has the ball on his own five-yard line, he has to figure out a way of hitting a home run in New Hampshire.
Q — What does he need to do?
A — Momentum.

Letters

Jones' challenge
Editor, Times-News:
I did a little volunteer work for Jones during his last congressional campaign and I thought I should respond to the letter from Mrs. Dayle Satterwhite which was recently published in your paper. Mrs. Satterwhite says that it is no surprise that Jim got 44 percent of the vote since he reportedly spent more money on the campaign than Hansen did.

First, I think everyone would agree that it is phenomenal for a political unknown to obtain 44 percent of the vote against an entrenched incumbent in a last-minute primary campaign. The unknown just might have to spend a little more money just to become known to the voters.

Second, regardless of how much money is spent on a campaign, the voters are not going to support a candidate unless he has something good to offer. Idaho voters are not stupid enough to be bought.

Third, Mrs. Satterwhite forgets that Hansen has a full-time staff that is paid out of revenues extracted from the taxpayers. He doesn't have to pay for most of his postage—the taxpayers take care of that too. Jim could not afford a postal patron mailing throughout the Second District because it was much too expensive—Hansen could, however, because the taxpayers picked up the tab and he didn't have to report that as a campaign expenditure.

There are four full-time paid workers on Jim's campaign staff. I don't know how many people Hansen had in his office but I expect that he had over 12 full-time employees with four established offices in the largest cities in the district—a gain paid for by the taxpayers. When you consider all of the advantages Mr. Hansen had, I suspect that he well out-spent Jim, using mostly taxpayers' money.

Hansen did not have to travel through the district making himself known to the voters because he was already known. His staff was churning out self-serving press releases so that surely took up some of the slack. Despite the tremendous advantage which Hansen did, as all incumbents do to have, Jim made a marvelous showing and I surely expect that he will win this time.

The Russians
Editor, Times-News:
The time is long past for this nation to continue piddling around with diplomatic stab-and-goak with Russia. Any student of history can tell you that those people have never honored a commitment. Their signed documents aren't worth the paper used.

While we have bowed down to politicians feathering their nests, while we have worshipped at the shrine of international bankers and amused ourselves with football games the material strength of our armed forces has been siphoned into the pockets of graft and corruption.

Russia today has us over a barrel in military strength and preparedness. In two past show-downs we have had France and England to stand between us and disaster until men were trained and war supplies assembled.

Face it, Russia is no longer depend on other nations holding the field while we train men with broom sticks and stove pipes as we did in 1916-1917.

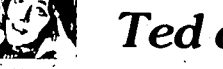

Face it, Russia is moving to an outlet on the Indian Ocean and control of the Persian Gulf and its oil. A month ago they held a "peace-time" maneuver of moving an entire army and its equipment to South Yemen, the Soviet holding at the mouth of the Red Sea. Then while the religious fanatic, Khomeini, stages a holdup game they swing arm 'd into Afghanistan and will then take Pakistan and in turn the entrance to the Red Sea. One by one these industrial bankrupt, strategically located nations will be taken. Then Russia will take the rest of the Balkans and gain free entrance to the Black Sea, Turkey cannot fight Russia along with its ground-oriented army. In truth not one of these tiny nations have the industry and know how to arm and fight a great power.

Ted doesn't want it
Kennedy, you never would have called him inarticulate. Whether you called him or didn't agree with him, you never would have called him inarticulate. It was a brilliant burning. There was a sense that he knew in his gut where he stood, what he stood for. Those who have followed him know that at times he can be incredibly distracted. He eeks out and nobody's home. But watching him now going through the motions of campaigning, I feel embarrassed, as if I were watching a great athlete striving for a comeback with bad knees. I want to change the channel.

His voice is strained, his timing is off, his eyes are glazed and his energy is drained by bad news or bad back or bad timing, a bad Karma. Everything is wrong.
But one impression keeps percolating up through the "everything." One sentence keeps recurring in my brain: "Ted doesn't want it."
It's written in his body language. It's in his eyes, his speech patterns, his erratic behavior. It's even in the calm, almost depressed affect. The man doesn't really want to be in Iowa, Maine, New Hampshire. He doesn't want to be asked again about Chapquaidick, about his sex life, about the Shah.
Before the Iowa vote, when I talked with Joan, I shared my own gut impression with her. She listened, as she does, intently and then sat a few seconds thinking before she answered.
Whatever you used to say about

Ted doesn't want it

"You really have to want it. You have to want it so bad you really can't taste it. Otherwise you wouldn't be able to put up with all that's thrown at you, including all the articles, innuendo, and all the stuff."
"You have to want it so bad and know you are the best because otherwise you could be deterred. You need all the junk and start to cry every other minute. . . . You just have to have that vision straight ahead. Ted's had that. Otherwise, how could you take it? Because it's a bitch, frankly."
She is right. You have to want it so bad you can taste it. Or else you can't take it. That, I think, is her husband's problem.
Looking at him from the stands, I feel a man running for President dutifully, fustally, unhelpfully. I see a complicated man with a lot to win by losing. Privacy, peace, family, personal freedom.
If Ted runs and loses, he exorcises the past. He's done it; he's run for President and doesn't have to do it again. If he runs and loses, he exorcises the fear. He has survived. He is, in a very real sense, a free man.
Kennedy was pushed into this race by internal and external pressures. His relief and delight in deciding has been followed by the depression of running. I'm no more a shrink than a sports announcer, but I look to me as if Ted Kennedy just plain doesn't want it. And that's why everything is wrong.

Old laws for the new pornography
Who knows? Raise the intractable question as a matter of law. The Supreme Court is little help. The court's 1957 decision in the Roth and Albers case provided a morass of conflicting interpretations. The subsequent 1973 decision known as the Miller case merely deepened the swamp. Judges, juries and prosecutors still must wrestle with such ephemeral terms as "average person" or "obscenity," and serious literary, artistic, political or scientific value.
Pornography has this in common with beauty, that it lies in the eye of the beholder. Standards change with the times. It is ludicrous to suppose that trial courts today would convict the exhibitor of such a movie as "I Am Curious, Yellow," but this once was a famous case. Obscenity laws are little more than nets to catch the wind.
But the laws that cover pandering and prostitution are as old as law itself. They lend themselves easily to proof beyond a reasonable doubt. They involve no thickets of First Amendment freedoms. Was the woman paid to perform these acts? Did the movie producer pay her? With a couple of other legal requirements met, the prosecution rests.
If I had anything to do with these matters, I would abandon all prosecutions based upon books or magazines. Let 'em go. But the hard law movie strikes me as a form of public pollution that society need not tolerate. Such films clearly present the distinction between the expression of ideas and the performance of acts. If the makers of Triple-X, explicit films can be convicted for pandering, whole fountains of sewage could be cut off at the source. First Amendment values would not suffer in the slightest.
Granted, the money might not be available to local prosecutors concerned with local movie exhibitors, though a case could be argued that the exhibitors provide the money, while the prostitutes are paid. But the great bulk of these films can be traced to California where prosecutors, if they will, could dust off the pandering laws and attack a dirty business.

Contingency fund gains lukewarm support

BOISE (UPI) — Riding lukewarm support, a bill setting up a contingency fund for taxing districts suffering under the 1 percent law was sent to printing Monday by the House Revenue and Taxation Committee.

Rep. Gordon Hollifield, R-Jerome, said his bill taking a maximum $13.7 million from the state sales tax for the ball-out fund would forestall the need for further implementation of the 1 percent law this legislative session.

He also suggested that the bill would save the Legislature from having to repeal the people-mandated 1 percent measure.

Hollifield said the fund would leave the 1 percent as it was put on the books by the 1979 Legislature, giving local governments another year to further adjust their budgets for conformance with the property-tax law. The main reason the bill is needed, Hollifield said, is "we don't get all the money appropriated and finally have to repeal the 1 percent."

Several committee members — both Democrats and Republicans — said they voted to introduce the bill only because they felt they had an obligation to see it printed. It was approved for printing on a unanimous voice vote upon the motion of Rep. John Brooks, R-Gooding, and Hollifield's second.

Hollifield several times was asked by fellow committee members to give specific figures on the various effects the legislation might have, but he said the figures would be made available when the introduced bill is brought back before the committee. The legislation would empower the state Tax Commission to distribute the funds to local governments "who find themselves in extreme difficulty under the 1 percent," Hollifield said. The bill would provide a contingency fund only for one year, he said.

Funds from the sales-tax allocation would be distributed on a percentage basis if there is a total statewide relief request for more than the $13.7 million, the Jerome Republican added. "What you're saying is that there will be a loss of local control if the ball-out bill is passed; that the Tax Commission will determine the distribution," Jack Spurgeon, D-Coeur d'Alene, said to Hollifield. "It's not a thing I really like, but that's the way it works," Hollifield replied.

He said it is inherent in all increased state funding of local programs that the state has more choice to tell local governments what to do.

Rep. Harold Reid, D-Craigmont, said he believed "every taxing district might request a heck of a lot of money" under Hollifield's plan.

Rep. Darwin Young, R-Blackfoot, said he wondered whether the contingency plan might "reward the big spenders in the past" while having an adverse affect on those districts which have been more frugal in budgeting.

Hollifield said it is "a little hard to tell" at this point whether this would be true.

He also said he did not know how much it would cost the Tax Commission to administer the emergency account.

Idaho treatment benefits listed

By DAVID MORRISSEY

BOISE — Idaho's severely emotionally disturbed children would benefit if they could receive care at Idaho treatment facilities rather than out-of-state, state legislators were told Monday.

Treatment within the child's home state allows frequent visits from parents, said John Vassar, a member of the board of directors of the North Idaho Children's Home at Lewiston. The presence of parents can often determine whether an emotionally disturbed child responds to treatment, he added.

The child's mental health can depend on the parents, he said. When those parents are miles away, in another state, there is little they can do to help their child.

Monday's testimony was before the Senate Health, Education and Welfare committee and the House Health and Welfare Committee. Vassar and representatives from the State Department of Health and Welfare and the Idaho Ranch for Youth in Rupert reminded legislators the goal of treating severely emotionally disturbed children within the state had been endorsed by Gov. John Evans.

In his State of the State address, Evans told "legislators '22" Idaho children are now being treated for severe emotional disturbances in out-of-state facilities. The cost of that out-of-state treatment is approximately $600,000.

Twenty of those students could be treated in Idaho if the funds now spent in other states were spent in Idaho, legislators were told Monday.

The committees will make final recommendations on the suggestion for in-state treatment at a later date.

Child care law changes handed back

BOISE (UPI) — Despite warnings that dozens of children may be injured or killed unless Idaho's child-care licensing law is beefed up, a House sponsor a bill containing several statutory revisions.

The proposed legislation would establish civil penalties for child-care facilities which don't live up to the state standards, said the sponsor, Rep. Percival Wesche, R-Nampa.

Wesche said the current licensing law is "useless" because it doesn't include an enforcement clause. "I'm afraid 25 or 30 kids will be fried before we do anything," said Rep. Steve Scanlin, D-Caldwell, who arguing against the motion to send the bill back to the sponsor. "If we don't do something, this will happen."

Scanlin was joined in dissent by Republican Reps. Herb Fitz, New Meadows, and Chris Hooper, Boise. Wesche had to leave the meeting and did not vote.

The packed House Health and Welfare Committee meeting listened to two hours of testimony, which reflected two basic positions. Those supporting the bill said they feared many children will be abused and injured or killed, while those opposing it said they don't want more government interference in child-care.

The successful motion to reject the bill was made by Rep. Robert Geddes, R-Preston, who said he believed the committee needs more information before making a decision to introduce the bill.

The bill also would clarify definitions of child-care facilities and exempt small residential day-care centers from the state requirements.

Presently, Wesche said, about 130 day-care homes in Idaho are violating the licensing law, but would be outside the restrictions under Wesche's version.

Wesche said the lack of an enforcement clause makes it easy for day-care facilities to ignore the law. Lobbyist Sue Heerts, speaking for the Concern for Children group, warned the lawmakers to revise the law this session or sooner or later it will be forced to beef up the statute as a result of a "compelling" reason, such as the death of a child or children in a shabby-run or unsafe day-care center.

She said she was worried that the law now has no provisions barring child molesters and persons with checkered histories of drug or alcohol use from opening child-care center

Rebellion hearing scheduled Feb. 8

BOISE — The House Agricultural Affairs Committee Monday voted to hold a public hearing to receive testimony on the Sagebrush Rebellion.

That meeting will be held in the Idaho State House on Friday, Feb. 8, at 2 p.m.

The hearing will focus on House Bill 418, introduced by Rep. John Brooks, R-Gooding. That measure, patterned after Nevada's original Sagebrush Rebellion bill, would claim for the state all unappropriated Bureau of Land Management land within Idaho.

Land management proposal killed

BOISE (UPI) — Legislation to provide multiple-use management of Idaho's forest and range lands came under attack from a wide range of interests Monday before being killed by the Senate Resources and Environment Committee.

By a 5-4 vote, the committee tabled a proposed constitutional amendment and legislation to conform statutorily with the amendment after hearing opposition from spokesmen from agriculture, mining, the timber industry and education.

They argued that the multiple-use was not fully defined. They also noted the proposed legislation would reduce income to the public schools, multiple-use had not worked for the Forest Service and the Idaho Department of Lands presently was doing a good job of managing state lands.

Sen. Art Manley, D-Coeur d'Alene, sponsor of the legislation, said it was time for a change in the constitution. He said when the Idaho Constitution was drafted, there was no thought given to multiple-use management.

Manley said while he did not support the "Sagebrush Rebellion" to take from the federal government management of forest and range lands, this legislation "is essential to make any intelligent move in that direction."

Mining spokesmen said the legislation was not in the best interest to their industry because it would stop exploration on state lands.

They also contended, along with education spokesmen, it would reduce revenue to the school endowment fund, which would have to be made up by the taxpayers through the general fund.

Dave Suhr, Wallace, representing ASARCO, told the committee that the legislation would result in "select use."

"It would just lock up additional land that have minerals under the ground," Suhr said.

Glen Youngblood of Boise Cascade Corp. said the legislation would "serve no useful purpose and disrupt the use of state lands," which he said generally were well managed at present.

Pollatch Corp. spokesman Richard Lloyd, Lewiston, said the forest industry was "gun shy" of multiple-use proposals because of the experience the Forest Service has had with the concept.

A spokesman for the League of Women Voters supported Manley's proposals, saying the measures would provide "more latitude and reason in the management of state lands."

Most Idaho handicapped instructed

BOISE (UPI) — Nearly all handicapped or gifted students in Idaho are receiving special instruction, the state supervisor of special education told the House Education Committee Monday.

Dr. Judy A. Schrag said the state Department of Education now is reaching 9.9 percent of the estimated 10 percent of Idaho students who need special education.

She outlined the history of special education in Idaho, which has risen dramatically, since 1972, when the Legislature mandated a minimum level of special education funding.

At the time, she said, funding is leveling off. She warned that the Legislature must keep appropriations up or a downward trend in special education will begin.

This fiscal year, local school districts are receiving $15.9 million in state and local funds, compared to $14.8 million in fiscal year 1979, Ms. Schrag said.

Some 678 teachers are giving special instruction to 20,198 students in 108 of Idaho's 115 school districts, all highs in state history, she told the committee.

Rep. Joseph Walker, R-Moscow, said he was "aware of abuses" in Idaho special education, saying he was concerned there is some duplication of services and that "underutilization of staff" may mean some of the special education money could be put back into the mainstream of education.

Exxon invested $6.2 billion* in energy in 1979. That's more than ever before.

1979 was also our best year ever for profits, at $4.3 billion. A lot of money — and yet it represents only 5¢ profit on each dollar of sales.

1980

We don't know what our profits will be in 1980. But we do know that we plan to surpass our 1979 investment record by spending $6.6 billion to find, develop and distribute more energy.

*In addition, Exxon spent $1.2 billion to acquire Reliance Electric Co. to develop energy-saving devices.

Carter's election year budget runs $15.8 billion in red

On the other hand, the increasingly hawkish lawmakers — expressing nervousness over the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan and the Middle East stability — could boost defense spending even more than Carter's inflation-adjusted 3.3 percent plan.

Congress is also expected to approve a windfall profits tax that is considerably below what Carter wants. This would increase the deficit and push back further into the 1980s the prospect of a budget surplus.

"This budget for 1981 is prudent and responsible," Carter said in a message to Congress which accompanied the budget document. "It continues the strategy of restraint" began last year.

"At the same time it proposes selected essential increases in areas of high priority and great national concern," he said.

Although emphasizing budgetary frugality, Carter said the document proposed "selected, essential increases in areas of high priority and great national concern."

Carter noted that projections of how the economy will perform this year "deeply affect this budget."

He said if the recession does not materialize, as it did not in 1979, and unemployment remained around its current 5.9 percent rate "the 1981 budget would be in surplus."

"We must monitor the economic outlook carefully," Carter said. "If the economy begins to deteriorate significantly, I will consider tax reductions and temporary spending programs for job creation targeted toward particular sectors of economic stress."

"But I believe current economic conditions argue for restraint."

There are the major components of Carter's budget.

DEFENSE
The proposed large gain for defense was prompted by recent strains in the relations between Washington and Moscow. Despite the $15.3 billion spending rise, conservative lawmakers are expected to ask for more — a demonstration that "the mood in Congress is shifting rapidly."

The budget calls for $1.5 billion for the land-based MX missile — to be located in Utah and Nevada to the dismay of residents — and $6.1 billion to commission new vessels and to renovate old ships.

There was $80.7 million for research on the new C-26 cargo aircraft and $207 million for the start of the first two "maritime Pre-Positioning ships" both designed to speed troops and equipment of the 100,000 member Rapid Deployment Force toward trouble spots located thousands of miles away.

Carter's plan to reactivate the Selective Service System was not included but the administration said $10 million will be included in a supplemental package.

ENERGY
The administration proposed $8.1 billion for energy programs, up $400 million from fiscal 1980 and $1.3 billion since 1979.

Spending on energy conservation, including research, grants, public education, utility oil, blackouts and weatherization aid, will go from $698 million to almost $1.1 billion next year.

The new emphasis on solar power and fossil fuels comes at the expense of nuclear fission and the breeder reactor. But the Nuclear Regulatory Commission will be allowed $55 million, up from $307 in 1980, to beef up staffing and correct some of the safety problems highlighted by Three Mile Island.

HEALTH AND HUMAN SERVICES
Formerly HEW, the budget outlay is $219.3 — meaning it now takes up 35.6 percent of the entire budget.

The administration decreed against making any cuts in Social Security: The total outlay for Social Security is $136.9 billion, distributed among nearly 36 million beneficiaries.

The administration will try again to pass the "hospital cost" containment bill, and assumes it will save nearly $300 million — money that is factored into the overall presentation. The bill failed by about 80 votes in the House last year.

EDUCATION
The first budget ever for the new Department of Education is $15.5 billion, up 7 percent from 1980 when it was the Office of Education. A big chunk — $90 million — goes to a new program of youth education and employment initiative designed to provide disadvantaged youths with skills needed to secure employment.

HOUSING
Carter proposed a 24 percent rise in funds for subsidized housing, one of the few domestic initiatives. Federal spending for housing for the year is $4.6 billion, which would provide an additional 300,000 rental and public housing units.

JOBS
A major point by the administration is its new youth employment proposal aimed at helping 500,000 youths get jobs over a two-year period in the face of its predictions the unemployment rate will rise to 7.5 percent by 1981. The budget includes $93 million in increased budget outlays to start the effort.

SPACE
Carter asked for a record $2.1 billion for the space shuttle which is 1 1/2 years behind schedule and 20 percent over cost. The budget requested a shuttle appropriation of $1.87 billion for the next fiscal year and an extra $300 million to meet unexpected costs in the current year.

ENVIRONMENT
Carter said he wanted to emphasize the growing problem of hazardous chemical waste. The Environmental Protection Agency would receive a 47 percent increase in funds and a 91 percent jump in personnel for that program. Most would come from shifts in existing programs, including a $2 million drop in the clean air program.

Weakening economy could bring tax cuts

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter Monday held out the prospect of a series of tax cuts beginning in 1982 — if he wins a second four-year term — but no tax cuts of any kind this year unless the economy worsens.

Carter said in his proposed fiscal 1981 budget that it was more important this year to fight inflation and hold down the federal deficit than it was to give any tax relief.

Congress may have other ideas. Republicans already are pushing for a tax cut, and it will be difficult for the majority Democrats to follow their president in an election year and hold the line.

"If the economy begins to deteriorate significantly, I will consider tax reductions," Carter said.

"But I believe current economic conditions argue for restraint."

The budget also noted, however, that it was the "long-term policy of this administration" to reduce taxes.

Therefore, "periodic tax reductions will carefully be considered between now and 1985," according to the document.

"The appropriate timing, magnitude and composition of tax cuts in the 1982-85 period, however, depends upon future economic conditions and therefore must be determined at a later time," it said.

Taxes actually will rise during the year because of increases brought in earlier laws and because of inflation.

Andrus gets just enough to hold line
By PATRICIA KOZA
WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter Monday sent Congress a hold-the-line 1981 spending plan for conserving and developing the nation's natural resources. Barely would keep pace with inflation.

Carter proposed $6.34 billion to finance interior-Department operations, an increase of $1.5 billion over the $6.19 billion figure for 1980.

Careful review of plans and programs enabled the department to recommend reductions in some areas in order to allow more funds for high national priority needs, such as energy development, range land management, water resources construction, and parks and recreation.

Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus said in unveiling the budget.

Altogether, federal agencies administer about 762 million acres, or one-third of the land area of the United States.

In the energy category, the administration wants $15.2 million for oil and gas leasing exploration and development, an increase of $5.9 million from 1980. It also seeks $30.9 million for the federal coal management program, up $6.1 million from this year.

A total of $96.7 million is requested for range land management, an increase of $17.6 million.

The budget for fiscal 1981 proposes $815 million in new budget authority for water and power resource development and operations in 17 western states, including a program to add hydroelectric facilities at existing power plants.

Among the water research projects is a proposed $5.9 million for salt water conversion. The program is for beginning construction of the nation's first two such water demonstration plants — one in Alamogordo, N.M., and one in Virginia Beach, Va.

No draft signup funds in budget

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Although President Carter called for a resumption of peacetime draft registration for military-age youths, he did not include any funds for it in the fiscal 1981 budget sent to Congress Monday.

Officials said they held the budget open until the very last moment, but the Carter's announcement of his registration plans came in Wednesday's State of the Union message — too late to make the budget.

The administration anticipates including about $10 million in a supplemental budget request for legislation re-instituting a registration program.

Outlays to farms reduced

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The $20.1 billion Agriculture Department budget sent to Congress today includes generous domestic food and agricultural programs for a smaller immediate price tag — because much of its largesse is in loans instead of direct payments.

Nearly half of direct outlays were earmarked for the Food Stamp program and more than 70 percent for all domestic food programs combined.

But sharp increases in food program costs did not result in cuts in traditional farm and rural programs.

With a slip of the hand, the administration was able to cut the proposed fiscal 1981 budget by $3.5 billion from this fiscal year by selling more financial notes to cover loans made by the Agriculture Department.

Department budget chief Stephen Dewhurst said the "total value of everything the American people will get from the department" is $48.4 billion.

The department guarantees loans by the private sector for such things as commercial exports, rural development and farm purchases, but those expenditures did not show up in the federal budget.

In making direct loans of federal funds to farmers and for rural programs, the department is able to reduce cash outlays by selling notes against its loans and receiving repayment of other loans.

Dewhurst acknowledged that growing federal practice of guaranteeing private sector loans to avoid budget expenses is "out of control" and said President Carter wanted to put limits on it.

The administration expects that food stamps in fiscal 1981 will cost $9.6 billion for an average of 20.4 million recipients. The cost for fiscal 1980 is projected at $8.7 billion. The fiscal 1979 cost was $6.8 billion.

Benefits are indexed to inflation so the cost of the program rises with the cost of food. In addition, elimination of the cash requirement for getting stamps added more people to the program.

All the food programs — food stamps, school lunches, a special milk program for school children, food donations and a program for mothers and infants — are expected to cost $14.3 billion, up from $13.1 billion.

Dewhurst said the budget is more generous to research and agricultural education than in several years.

He said Farmers Home Administration programs to help farmers buy or operate farms or to develop rural areas are "fairly constrained" for more spending for housing for rural low-income people.

The budget provided for no new construction in watershed and flood prevention programs.

A timber sales program would provide enough money to cut 11.9 billion board feet of wood in national forests, reduction from 12.2 billion board feet this fiscal year.

$2.8 billion tag placed on embargo

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In the budget sent to Congress Monday, the Agriculture Department predicted it will cost $2.8 billion to offset the impact of President Carter's embargo of grains and soybeans.

The department said $2 billion of the cost would be included in a supplemental appropriation for fiscal 1980, the current fiscal year, and the remaining $800 million will be included in fiscal 1981.

"The fact is that the grain suspension (embargo) has thrown all our commodity programs out of whack," said department budget chief Stephen Dewhurst. "Nobody knows whether those figures are inaccurate."

The budget provides few clues as to how the $2.8 billion will be spent. The administration offered to take over grain traders' contracts of grain bound for Russia and to buy corn directly. It altered farm programs to entice farmers to put corn in the farmer-owned reserve.

Officials said they would not know the breakdown of the expenditures until it is clear how much of the Russian-bound grain ends up in government or private hands — as exports to other nations.

To retaliate for the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan, Carter embargoed 13 million tons of corn, 4 million tons of soybeans and 1 million tons of soybeans. East Coast and Gulf Port longshoremen have refused to ship another 2.5 million tons of grain which Carter said could go to Russia.

Some of "nobody expected" to be shipped through West Coast ports and legal steps are being taken by private parties to force the longshoremen to load the grain. Questions about the fate of that 2.5 million tons also translate into uncertainty for federal costs.

The administration said most of the funds will be recovered by taxpayers eventually when farmers repay loans on grain that goes into reserve or when the government sells grain it takes over.

The total budget estimate includes $500 million in fiscal 1980 for federal takeover of contracts or purchase of 4 million tons of wheat bound for Russia. The wheat will be placed for a food aid reserve.

Fonda, Hayden think they've got an issue

By United Press International
FONDARIDES AGAIN

Not since the Vietnam war has Jane Fonda and husband Tom Hayden had a real military issue — but with President Carter's call for draft registration, they've got one now and they're taking the protest rhetoric out of mothballs. Hayden says they're heading for the college campuses again with "a campaign of resistance" to what Hayden calls "the Brzezinski doctrine." He says the specter of the draft has ended campus apathy that "students are going to get engaged now."

UNWELCOME MAT

They may be celebrities in the West, but as far as the government of Cambodia is concerned, Joan Baez, Liv Ullmann and company are hostiles, and they've been told to keep their "March for Survival" out of the country. They're in Thailand with 200 fellow activists and 20 truckloads of food and medicine for starving refugees — but Phnom Penh calls the mercy march "a hostile action," and says it won't be allowed across the border. They vow a border sit-in in retaliation.

CLIFF'S BEACHHEAD

Cliff Robertson wants to build a $75,000 sea wall to protect his shorefront home in La Jolla, Calif., but the California Coastal Commission says it will cost him his private beach, which must be dedicated to public use before one stone is set. Robertson is peeved about that says he'll take the matter to court. It's not that he's greedy about his beach — he's always kept it open to the public — but he says resistance to being told the must is a matter of principle.

Feline fate ends flight of rare bird

DANSVILLE, N.Y. (UPI) — A rare bird that attracted as many as 750 birdwatchers to the quiet Livingston County village of Dansville has met its fate, apparently in the mouth of a cat.

Mary Dilgard, who first spotted the painted redstart outside her home in the community of 5,400 several weeks ago, said she suspected something was wrong last Thursday when the warbler failed to show up on a tree in her backyard.

The following day, Mrs. Dilgard, with visitors from Detroit and Buffalo, waited the entire day hoping to spot the black, 3-inch bird with distinctive bright red breast, white tail feathers and wing patches.

On Saturday, Mrs. Dilgard decided to investigate.

When Mrs. Dilgard went behind her house, she discovered a tiny bird foot attached to a wing with a white patch and black-and-white tail feathers.

"We know he's gone," a distraught Mrs. Dilgard said. "A cat probably got to him. We have a lot of cats in the neighborhood."

"It's a sad ending," she said.

The Audubon Society says the redstart is usually found in oak trees in the high canyons of New Mexico, Arizona and northern Mexico. It normally winters in Central America.

The only other sighting reported east of the Mississippi was in Massachusetts in 1947, officials said.

Birth rate slashed

PEKING (UPI) — China's birthrate dropped drastically between 1971 and 1978, largely because of more than 170 million operations for sterilization or the implantation of birth control devices, the official Xinhua news agency says.

The dispatch Sunday said China's birth rate dropped from 23.4 per thousand in 1971 to 12 per thousand in 1978 — a reduction in births of 34.6 million.

Family loses home to fire but adds girl

COLUMBUS, Ohio (UPI) — Daryl Clingman is ready to take his wife Carol and their newborn daughter Jennifer Elisha home from the hospital.

But the family suddenly hasn't got a home.

While Clingman was at St. Ann's Hospital Thursday night awaiting the birth of his first-born child, firefighters were battling flames in the couple's home in the suburb of Blacklick.

The family still was repairing some $25,000 worth of damage caused last September by flood waters from Hurricane Frederic when the blaze broke out.

Fire officials estimated the new damage to the home at $75,000. It was insured for only $10,000.

"We were starting to recover from the flood," said Clingman, a sheet metal mechanic. "We were starting to get there... and then the fire."

"At least we have a little girl," he said happily. "We'll make it. Without her, we'd have nothing to look forward to."

Mrs. Clingman sees the baby as a good omen.

"I'm pretty positive about everything," she said. "After the flooding, I learned to be pretty cool."

Clingman wants his wife and daughter to stay with her parents while he looks for a house to rent.

Fire officials have not determined what caused the blaze in Clingman's home, where two dogs and a cat were killed. One dog was revived by firefighters.

Fifteen horses in a stable behind the house were saved. The stable was not damaged.

Man is a predatory beast, no doubt about that. If his mentality doesn't reveal it, his physical characteristics do. Take the eyes, for example. Eyes of predatory animals are set straight ahead. To see their prey in front of them. The eyes of prey animals are set on the sides of their heads. To see predators behind them. Man's eyes are set straight ahead, you'll observe.

TO COOK A STEAK

Debate goes on over the best way to cook a steak. Campfire specialists recommend it be seared quickly on both sides to hold its juices in, then fried evenly over a lower heat. Sophisticates insist it be barbecued on charcoal outdoors, a practice popularized by women who'd just as soon see their husbands do it, and clean up the grill, too. All depends on the steak. But if it's thick, nothing beats baking it in a 500-degree-F oven. Some ladylike ladies like to squeeze a steak in a mini-grill like a toasted cheese sandwich. But our Love and War man does not believe you can find permanent happiness with that sort.

Vinyl floor coverings elegant enough for other rooms besides kitchen

No-wax floors get wider use

No-wax floors have habitually been regarded as "kitchen floors" and, by and large, that's how they've been used.

But now no-wax floors are appearing in dealer's showrooms with the right blend of performance and styling features that are causing consumers to rethink where in the house these floors should go.

More often these days, no-wax floors are turning up in foyers, family rooms and bathrooms. For example, realistic and affordable brick and stone designs in no-wax floors are ideal for entry ways. And other smaller-scale designs in pastel colors are notably compatible with bathroom decors.

The newest candidate bidding to break the kitchen-only restriction for no-wax floors is a deluxe entry from Armstrong, made possible by a major development in styling technology.

Most no-wax floors are made by one or the other of two methods: rotogravure, in which the designs are printed on (like a Sunday newspaper supplement) or inlaid, in which the designs are built up step by step from thousands of colored vinyl granules.

Rotogravure floors are noted for their precise and realistic designs. Inlaid floors, on the other hand, are a sturdier, more luxurious piece of goods, with richer, deeper colors and a "crafted" look.

The styling process for Solorian Supreme, Armstrong's new deluxe collection, combines both printing and inlaying to give these no-wax floors many of the best features of the two other types.

Included among the Solorian Supreme offerings are a Maltese cross design in costly-looking "marble" and another design featuring delicate fleur-de-lis on a bold white background.

The designs and colors are locked in with a super-tough Mirlabond wear surface that makes these floors easier to clean and provides a long-lasting shine without waxing.

For all their delicate looks, Solorian Supreme floors are exceptionally resistant to indentation and puncturing because of their rugged, inlaid construction.

These vinyl no-wax floors also have an elastic vinyl backing that speeds installation and prevents future damage caused by shifting of wood sub-floors due to seasonal changes in temperature and humidity.

Unlike conventional floors, which are cemented down all over, Solorian Supreme is fastened down only at seams and at the sides of the room. It actually "bridges" defects in the sub-floor. As a result, old problem floors can sometimes be covered with Solorian Supreme without first putting down underlayment — a savings of up to $5 a yard on installation costs.

But the primary reason why these new no-wax floors are candidates to come out of the kitchen and into other parts of the house is their good looks. They're not just tough enough for foyers, family rooms and other hard-use areas — now they're stylish enough, too.

Historic house plans

By MICHAEL deCOURCY HINDS

NEW YORK — Frank Lloyd Wright's lifelong dream, mass production of his residential designs may yet come true. And houses designed by other famous architects (who might have considered reproduction of their designs a nightmare) may also start dotting the landscape if the hunches of Russell Swinton Oatman and Evan Pollitt, two modern-day architects, are correct.

The first credit goes to President Franklin D. Roosevelt's Works Progress Administration, which put unemployed architects to work surveying America's architectural monuments in 1933. Later, students of architecture and their professors took up the task, and they continue to spend their summers adding to the Historic American Buildings Survey, as it is called.

The Library of Congress now has records on 17,000 buildings, including residences, windmills, churches, theaters, barns, apothecary shops, forts and other significant structures. In addition, it has an extensive collection of the original blueprints of many other historic houses. Everything is in the public domain and may be copied by anyone for any purpose.

This means that someone interested in building a copy of Frank Lloyd Wright's famous Robie House in Chicago can buy a set of plans from the library for $2.50. Or Wright critics may prefer a house by H. H. Richardson or Cass Gilbert. The list includes virtually every important architect, including anonymous ones, who worked in pre-1900 America.

Naturally, the plans may not conform to new building codes, may lack provisions for indoor plumbing and modern heating systems and may need alterations in room layout to suit modern ways of life. An architect should be hired to make these changes.

This is where the two backward-thinking architects come in. Oatman, president of Architectural Period Houses in Princeton, Mass., and Pollitt, an architect based in Easton, Conn., are in the business of selling updated plans for historic houses.

Where to write: A11

Oatman, who used to work at Shepley, Bullfinch, Richardson & Abbott, the Boston architectural concern, got tired of seeing "colonial architecture bastardized in tract home developments, gasoline stations and fast food shops," he said. He and his wife, Lynne O'Connor, selected houses from the files of the Library of Congress, revised the construction drawings and offered them to the public two years ago.

Renderings and floor plans of the 25 houses are published in two booklets, "The Golden Age of Victorian Architecture" and "The New England Brochure." Victorian houses include "a villa in the Italian style" with a 38-foot tower, attributed to Alexander Jackson Davis; a Midwestern farmhouse with fish-scale shingles and a gingerbread-laced porch; and Frank Lloyd Wright's "House Number 11," an 1889 design with gabled roof, Palladian windows and an elegantly curved veranda. The houses date from 1830 to 1900 and vary in size from an 1,089-square-foot Martha's Vineyard cottage to a 2,600-square-foot Gothic villa designed by Gervase Wheeler in 1845.

Colonial house plans include Nathaniel Hawthorne's birthplace, a two-story clapboard with a gambrel roof, and the Squire Bowdoin House, which Asher Benjamin designed in the Greek Revival style with pilasters, columns and a portico. The Colonial houses date from 1657 to 1835 and range from the 1,056-square-foot New England Half-House to the 3,776-square-foot Colonel Robert Means House, which includes a kitchen wing added after the house was built in 1785.

Oatman has sold about 30,000 of the 34 booklets and 665 plans, which cost $125. About 100 houses have so far been built from the plans, all of them Colonial as the Victorian booklet was just recently published. The houses, according to the architect, can be built for about $35 to $40 per square foot if paneling, carved molding, leaded glass and other expensive interior detailing are omitted. (Drawings for the original interiors are available.)

To cut costs further, the sizes of all doors, windows and other building elements have been slightly altered, to accommodate materials made in readily available stock sizes. For more unusual items, like fish-scale shingles, Oatman provides the builder with a list of sources.

Pollitt, who is "simmering down" after 35 years of designing traditional houses in Connecticut, started the historic-house-plan business because "I'm a real Colonial nut," he said. In two years, he has sold 10,000 copies of his two $5 catalogues, "Old Colonial Houses" and "Old Cape Cod Houses," and about 900 plans, which cost $62 each.

Pollitt borrowed materials from the Library of Congress as well as measuring many houses himself to prepare construction plans. Classic salubrious, eaves and gambrel roofs predominate in the collection of 85 houses, most of which were designed by anonymous architects. The exteriors have been faithfully duplicated, with minor adjustments to suit available building materials, and the interiors have been simplified and room layouts altered.

Before buying house plans from any source, however, a landscape architect or an architect should be consulted, according to George Lewis, executive director of the American Institute of Architects in New York City. "A professional should be hired on an hourly basis to size the thing up and make sure the house is right for the site," he said.

Watch auto insurance ratings

By LEONARD GROUPE

©Chicago Sun-Times

Everybody knows auto insurance premiums can go up. If you have an accident or if you are convicted of a moving traffic violation. But did you know that some companies will automatically count an accident against you even though it wasn't your fault?

If you are involved in a minor fender bender, get a ticket and are convicted, some insurance companies will increase your premiums twice—once for the accident and once more for the traffic violation.

What's involved is the auto insurance merit rating plan—a point system that takes into account accidents or traffic violations during the last three years. All companies use this type of rating system in one form or another.

But there are vast differences in how companies use the point system. Some companies won't charge some kinds of accidents against you while other companies will, in some policies, each traffic violation will cause an increase in your next premium while in others, except for certain serious violations, tickets won't cause premiums to rise.

Some companies won't penalize you double when you have an accident and are convicted of a moving violation because of that same accident. But there is no rule against a company charging for the accident and the violation.

You ought to find out how the point system for accidents and traffic violations works in your insurance company. You'll want to know if an accident will count against you if the other driver gets a ticket and you don't. That's also a good thing to check for when you're shopping around for a new insurance company.

If you feel you've been unjustifiably penalized under the point system, write to the company and protest the imposition of extra charges. I know of situations in which the extra charge for an accident was removed after the policyholder complained to the company and gave a satisfactory explanation of the accident. A second penalty for a moving violation arising out of an accident has also sometimes been removed after the policyholder complained.

But even when you are at fault in an accident and get a ticket, sticking up for your rights in court may save you a lot of money if you are in a company that charges extra for the accident and the violation.

Say you hit a car in the rear. The police are called and an officer who did not see the accident gives you a ticket for following too close. Just because you hit the other car in the rear and it looks like the accident had to be your fault, this does not in itself establish that you were guilty of following too close. It may be that you were in fact guilty of some other violation—but you were charged specifically with following too close.

If the driver you hit was not in court, as he often wouldn't be if he didn't get a ticket, and you had a lawyer to protect your rights, it would be difficult for the prosecution to prove you had been following too close.

Winter driving tips

ENGLEWOOD CLIFFS, N.J. — Whether you're driving hundreds of miles for week-end skiing or running out to do last minute shopping this winter, be prepared.

First, no matter how long or short the drive, fasten your seat belt and if you have passengers, be sure they fasten theirs.

Then you can begin to think about your car's winter running condition. Check your ignition, fuel, exhaust and cooling systems and battery, brakes, lights, wiper blades and alternator belt.

Winterizing should include antifreeze in the windshield washer fluid, seeing the heater is in working order, making sure headlight lenses are clean, and changing to lower viscosity winter grade oil like 5W-30 for the engine and 75 weight for the gear box.

Good tires are essential for safety as well as fuel economy. If tread depth is $\frac{1}{8}$ inch or less, it is time for new tires. If the top of Lincoln's head shows on a penny inserted upside down in the tread, it is a good test of tread wear.

Tire pressures drop one pound for every 10 degrees drop in temperature and should be checked regularly as the weather grows colder to insure proper inflation.

While radials offer sure traction on snow- and ice-covered roads and resist cuts better, they are no substitute for snow or studded tires or chains even if they are less sensitive to cold weather under-inflation.

Four snow tires are best, but if only two are used or chains put on only two wheels, be sure they go on the drive wheels. Don't forget on the new front wheel drive cars they go on the front.

If the rubber boot coverings in the constant velocity joints — which allow the shafts on front wheel drive to operate at different angles — are torn, have them repaired right away to avoid loss of lubricating grease.

When driving on snow-covered roads keep a reasonable distance from the car ahead. Always maintain a safety margin between cars. If a front wheel drive car needs a tow or lift, keep hooks, jacks or grapples away from the front drive shaft as damage to the velocity joints means big trouble.

Front wheel drive cars should be handled as any other car: turn in the direction of the skid until you feel the wheels regain traction and you are back in control. Don't hit the brakes, as locked brakes will negate handling characteristics.

A fact most car experts agree on is that bad weather brings out the best in front wheel drive. The weight up front gives traction conventional cars do not have. On ice and snow or in rain and wind, the handling advantages become obvious. Nevertheless, it is wise to reduce speed well in advance of turns and curves and gentle acceleration will help the vehicle through a turn without loss of control.

Any discussion of winter driving must go beyond the car itself. If you must drive in bad weather, plan ahead: think of alternate routes; keep up with the latest weather reports and be sure your car radio works; try not to travel alone and, if possible, travel in convoy with at least one other car; fill your gas tank — in an emergency it is your source of power for heat, lights and radio. If a storm prevents further movement, seek refuge.

If you can't find shelter, stay in your car. You can easily get lost in a storm. Don't try to push your car; it probably won't work and the exertion may not only exhaust you — combined with stress it can cause stroke.

Even in Alaska a few simple checks and precautions can help your car do a snow job on winter weather

Dear Abby

Mom raps sons's girlfriend for burdening family with gifts

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
 Of The Chicago Tribune
 M.Y. News Syndicate, Inc.
DEAR ABBY: How do I go about telling the girl our son dates to please stop buying our family expensive gifts for every occasion? It embarrasses us to accept them since we can't afford to reciprocate.
 She comes from a very large family, and because she gave everyone in our family she ever said hello to a Christmas gift last year, my son felt that he had to do the same for her family. (He is still paying for them.)
 For Valentine's Day she gave me a present and also my husband. On Mother's Day, another one, and she's not even engaged to our son. She even found out when our birthdays were (mind and my husband's and the other children's, even the grandparents!) and the presents come.

 I have no objections to her exchanging gifts with my son, but I wish she would leave the rest of his family alone. So, what should I do?
TOO MANY GIFTS
DEAR ABBY: Ask your son to tell the young lady that he appreciates her thoughtfulness and generosity but prefers that she discontinue the gift-giving to the members of his family. And if that doesn't do the trick, send her thank-you cards for the gifts, and let it go that.
DEAR ABBY: Our little boy is 8 years old and very much overweight, so my doctor put him on a strict diet. I've tried to keep him on this diet, but I can't follow him around every minute because I have three other children to look after and my work to do. My next-door neighbor told me she's seen my son eat the dog food right out of her dog's dish, and also that he eats the bread she throws out for the birds. What should I do?

TROUBLED MOM
DEAR MOM: Take your son to the doctor for a thorough checkup, and tell the doctor how the boy has been supplementing his diet. And be sure to explain to the boy the dangers of eating out of the dog's dish as well as food meant for the birds.

DEAR ABBY: You suggested that it might be a good idea to invite someone who might be alone to spend Christmas with your family.
 I am a widow, and my children and grandchildren all live far away and can't be here for the holidays. I work, so it's impossible for me to visit them. Being ALONE doesn't mean being LONELY, Abby. I have received three invitations so far, and I would much rather spend Christmas Day alone than to accept any of the invitations.
 Why? Well, with my limited income, I can't buy gifts for the whole family, or even for the hostess. Second, while the invitations are sincere and well-meant, nobody considers how I am to arrive at their home for the meal.

 Third, the meal is usually set for late afternoon, and it is well into the dark of the evening before I can leave and I don't want to go home alone at night. (It's rude to eat and run.)
 So I will decline all Christmas dinners, and spend Christmas resting up and eating what and when I want.
 If some kind soul knows that an older single person is alone and lonely, transportation to and from the dinner should be provided.

STEADY READER
DEAR READER: Of course, it's too late for Christmas 1979, but it would be well to remember your words for all of those special occasions in 1980.
 Do you hate to write letters of condolences, congratulations, and thanks. It's not difficult when you let Abby guide you in her booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Send $1 and along, stamped (28 cents), self-addressed envelope to Abby: 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

Dr. Lamb

She hears heartbeat in ear

By LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.
 (Newspaper Enterprise Association)
Dear Dr. Lamb,
 I'm a 32-year-old mother of two boys in fairly good health. I was born with a heart murmur which was corrected when I was an infant. My parents were told the hole in my heart would close on its own by the time I reached 10. Nothing was ever said about it again.
 All this time I thought my murmur had corrected itself, but about five years ago my heart began to beat in my left ear very loudly. I thought it was my hearing, so I went to an ear specialist, but he said no. I went to a general practitioner, who confirmed that I still had the murmur but said not to worry about it, because if I went to a heart specialist, the first thing he'd want to do would be want to operate.
 I've tried living with the noise, but it's very loud, and I think it's louder than it was a few years ago. Not only do I hear the heartbeat, but there's a loud rushing sound like blood rushing through my head rapidly. It interferes with my hearing, especially on the phone, and I have to ask people to repeat what they're saying. If I press against the side of my neck, which I do sometimes in order to hear well, the noise stops.

Dr. Lamb: I sometimes think this noise will drive me insane. I get tired of hearing it day and night. Is there the slightest chance this could be corrected without open-heart surgery? I hate to think that I'll have to hear this the rest of my life.
Dear Reader,
 There are many causes for ear noise, but it can come from the circulation. Some people who have disease in the arteries in the neck can have such sounds as you describe. It's true that if you press on the artery in the neck in such cases that the noise may stop. I don't advise this because pressing on these arteries in the neck sometimes triggers very strong reflexes that can cause people to faint and can create other problems.

 There is no way your problem can be resolved without a very complete proper diagnostic study. You can have a sound from your heart, called a heart murmur, without having heart disease. Usually they're not that loud. From your description I think you ought to see a heart specialist as soon as possible. After all, they're trained in disorders of the heart and are best able to give you good advice. If you still do have a mechanical defect in your heart or the major arteries next to the heart, the probabilities are that it can be corrected.
 It's perfectly true that some holes in the heart will close spontaneously. That's why heart specialists don't always rush in to close such defects noted during infancy. It depends a lot on how big the defect is and whether it's really causing any serious problems with the circulation.
 If you do not happen to have heart trouble, the noise in your ear is caused by something else and also deserves attention. I'm sending you The Health Letter number 12-10, Help For Tinnitus: Noise Or Ringing In The Ear. Other readers who have ear noises from any cause and want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.
 Today many people with birth defects of the heart can have them corrected. Often, once the anatomical defect is corrected, it's the same as having a normal heart.

House plans available

For more information about the Library of Congress's collection of historic-house plans, write to the Prints and Photographs Division, Thomas Jefferson Building, Room 1051, Washington, D.C. 20540, or call Mary Ison, reference librarian, at (802) 426-6399.
 The collection is available on microfilm, and so some public libraries and historical societies have part or all of it.
 Copies of the reproductions range from $1.25 to $2.50 each, although in some cases, a printed package of drawings may cost only $2.50 for the lot.
 Evan Pollitt, 61 Vista Drive, Easton, Conn. 06012, (203) 238-5955, sells his catalogues for $5 and the first set of plans for $62; a package including five copies of a plan costs $98.
 Russell Swinton Outman sells his catalogues for $4 and the plans for $125; a package of five copies is $195. Mr. Outman will also act as a consulting architect to alter the plans or to do site planning for a $40-an-hour fee. The cost of on-site visits is based on a $100-a-day rate, plus travel expenses.

Countess addresses Boise audience

BOISE (UPI) — The Countess of Romanones told a Junior League Celebrity Series lecture audience in Boise last week that Americans aren't heroes to the rest of the world anymore.
 The countess, 56, who was born Alaine Griffith in upstate New York, is a citizen of both the U.S. and Spain, where she lived for 36 years.
 She criticized American policies and said the rest of the free world doesn't idolize the U.S. anymore, but she said most nations look to the U.S. for leadership.
 "The American vote next fall will determine the future of free people in many parts of the world," she said.

Defense stocks strong

NEW YORK (UPI) — The stock market overcame early profit taking to register a small gain Monday as institutions flooded the market with orders for defense, oil and sweetener issues.

Trading was active. The New York Stock Exchange Index, which was down in January, 1966, climbed 0.69 to an all-time high of 65.96. The previous high was 65.48 on Jan. 11, 1973. The price of a share rose 36 cents.

The Dow Jones Industrial average operating at a 145-point deficit because of three of its components were trading minus their dividends — rose 2.28 points to 875.50. The Dow gained 8.96 points overall last week despite losses 3.84 Friday.

Advanced topped declines, 822 to 662, among the 1,889 issues traded at 4 p.m. EST.

NYSE volume totaled 53,620,000 shares, up from 47,100,000 traded Friday. It was the 13th session of 50-million-plus shares this year.

Among the defense stocks, McDonnell Douglas rose 4 1/2 to 50 1/2, General Dynamics 2 1/2 to 80 1/2, Lockheed 1 1/2 to 47, Northrop 2 1/2 to 59 1/2, Rockwell International 3/4 to 62 1/2, Raytheon 2 1/2 to 81 1/2, and Watkins-Johnson 1 1/2 to 34 1/2.

Chrysler Corp., the financially troubled automaker, rose 7 1/2 to 39 1/2, as the three most active NYSE-listed issues. Chrysler also is a big producer of tanks.

Coca-Cola triggered a run on fruitcake manufacturers when it announced it was allowing its bottlers to use 50 percent of the sweetener as a substitute for sugar, which has climbed substantially in price.

A.E. Slayley rose 5 1/2 to 49 1/2, Standard Brands 3/4 to 32 1/2, CPC International 4 3/4 to 47 1/2 and Archer-Daniels-Midland 3 1/2 to 37 1/2. Coca-Cola stocks gained 1 1/2 to 10 1/2.

Texas, the second most active NYSE-listed issue, gained 1 1/2 to 36 1/2 after broad trades of 100,000 shares at 36 1/4, 100,000 shares at 36 1/4 and 100,000 shares at 36 1/4. Marathon 5 1/2 to 64, Superior 4 1/2 to 152 1/2, Sun Co. 4 1/2 to 79 1/2, Ohio Standard 4 to 101 1/2, Mobil Corp. 2 to 57 1/2, Cities Service 3 1/2 to 36 1/2, Atlantic Richfield 2 1/2 to 92 1/2, and Murphy 3 to 101. Atlantic Richfield reported higher earnings, raised its dividend and declared a 2-for-1 stock split.

Composite volume of NYSE issues listed on all U.S. exchanges and over the counter at 4 p.m. totaled 56,493,120 shares, compared with 52,541,000 traded Friday.

The American Stock Exchange Index rose 4 to a record 270.79, and the price of a share climbed 28 cents. The National Securities Dealers' NASDAQ composite index of OTC stocks gained a point to a 1973-80 high of 160.70.

Utah budget faces unresolved issues

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — The Utah Legislature today begins its final week of the 1980 budget session facing two major and still-unresolved issues — pay hikes for state workers and tax relief.

Tax relief will likely be debated until the last minute, as it was last year. But lawmakers must soon decide whether they will approve a 12.1 percent salary hike for Utah employees proposed by Gov. Scott Matheson.

The legislature's various joint appropriations subcommittees have finished their work on individual budgets for state agencies and programs. All those budgets were given tentative endorsements because the final decision of pay raises could drastically change spending levels.

As much as 80 percent of the funding for some agencies goes for salaries. The Executive Appropriations Committee was scheduled to begin the process of pulling the individual budgets together into an overall state spending package. Before that task can proceed very far, the pay raise issue must be decided.

Matheson proposed a fiscal year 1981 budget of $1.1 billion. Leaders of the Legislature's Republican majority said the size of the final budget approved by the lawmakers will be near Matheson's request, but there might be some changes in the way the money is distributed.

For instance, House Majority Leader Norman Bangert, R-Granger, said the Legislature might take advantage of a quirk in the federal Social Security law when it figures pay hikes.

The Legislature could approve a pay hike significantly smaller than 12.1 percent. At the same time lawmakers would increase the state's share of Social Security payments and decrease the employees' share.

Net pay for workers would rise as much as it would from a 12.1 percent hike in gross pay, while the program would cost the state considerably less than a straight 12.1 percent wage boost, said Bangert.

Once the pay issue is settled, the Executive Appropriations Committee will face the task of reviewing, and sometimes cutting, all the individual budgets endorsed by subcommittees.

Some individual budgets are significantly higher than spending proposed by Matheson. For instance, the higher education budget is about $2-million more than the governor's recommendation, and Social Services' budget is almost $3 million more than the governor's request.

Chevron energy report:

1980 OIL SUPPLIES— NOT A BARREL TO SPARE

America's energy situation is in a delicate balance between supply and consumption.

If we can maintain the balance, America should have an adequate supply of fuel for 1980. Motorists should have enough gasoline, if used carefully, truckers enough diesel fuel, and homeowners enough heating oil.

But we could lose our balance. Continuing political unrest in the Middle East could cause a reduction in our nation's oil supply. Considering our heavy dependence on foreign oil, this could cause shortages here at home.

And in 1980, we can't expect increased domestic oil production or alternate energy development to tip the balance in our favor. But we are optimistic that continuing large investments will result in new sources of domestic energy for the future.

Consumption levels could also tip the balance. An increase in oil consumption would have a very negative effect. So, strong conservation efforts, which proved effective in 1979, will be more necessary than ever this year.

Therefore, we must accelerate our efforts to find new sources of domestic energy, and continue to conserve the energy we have.

Thank you for listening.

Toll in plane crash remains undetermined

GRANTSVILLE, Utah (UPI) — Federal and local officials Monday resumed efforts to determine how many people died in the crash of a light airplane that plowed nose first into nine feet of mud in a marsh near the Great Salt Lake.

The plane flipped over and crashed Sunday on a flight from Wendover to Salt Lake City. The cockpit was buried deep in the mud and sheriff's deputies were unable to reach the bodies by nightfall Sunday to determine who was aboard.

The recovery effort was hampered by bad weather and difficult access.

Verlin B. Tranter, investigator for the National Transportation Safety Board, said the single-engine Mooney Mark 20 airplane was owned by John Shelton of Salt Lake City, but it couldn't be verified if he was flying the craft.

Tooele County Sheriff Walt Schubert said he was reasonably sure the plane crashed a Salt Lake City couple, but he declined to release the names "until we've confirmed they're in the plane."

"We think only two people were in the plane, but they may have picked up two other passengers for the return flight from Wendover to Salt Lake," he said.

"Frankly, we've only been able to dig down four feet into the thick mud. We got into the tail of the plane, but all we could see was the rear of the back seats," the sheriff added. "We won't know how many people were in the plane until we can get into the cockpit."

He said special excavation equipment was scheduled to arrive at the crash site today to dig out the plane.

A motorist driving along Interstate 80 saw the crash and told authorities he saw the plane go over on its back and then "come straight down."

"In my opinion, no one could have survived that kind of impact," said Schubert. "It sheared off the wings and crashed the body like a stepped-on can."

Tranter said the pilot filed no flight plan with the FAA but had checked weather conditions upon leaving Wendover.

Sheriff's Deputy Alan James said there was a low ceiling and overcast conditions at the time of the mishap. But visibility was good.

News briefs

Record power use

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — The federal power supply system in the Pacific Northwest set a record electrical usage with today's cold spell — then on hour later broke it.

Gene Tollefson, a spokesman for Bonneville Power Administration, said the old mark of 10,986,000 kilowatts set Feb. 2, 1979, was topped at 8 a.m. today at 11,002,000 kilowatts. At 9 a.m. the usage climbed to 11,064,000 kilowatts.

Tollefson said BPA was getting power from the coal-fired Centralia facility and Trojan and W-Reactor nuclear plants to handle the load.

Portland General Electric Co. also reported a record amount of electricity was used in its system this morning.

WPP officials said the utility was operating all generating facilities at full power, including two expensive natural gas-fired generating facilities.

In addition, WPP has borrowed electricity from both Southern California Edison in Los Angeles, and Pacific Power and Light in Portland.

The utility urged its customers in eastern Washington and northern Idaho to conserve electricity when possible.

Chopper crash, 2 dead

REDDING (UPI) — A Marine helicopter flying from Washington to Arizona crashed in a remote area 43 miles east of Redding Monday, killing the two persons aboard.

A radio transmission from the helicopter shortly before the crash reported rotor failure and fire, said Sgt. Chester Ashmun of the Shasta

County sheriff's office.

The craft, a UH-1N, was based at Whidbey Island Naval Air Station, Wash., and was en route to Yuma, Ariz., to take part in a weapons-tactics course.

A spokesman at Whidbey Island said the two killed were assigned to the Marine Air Group, 46th Detachment.

Wallenda scales office

SEATTLE (UPI) — Steve Wallenda, 30, who claims to be the last of the high-wire "Flying Wallendas," scaled the outside of an unfinished downtown office building Sunday night and did a handstand on top. He was cited by police for criminal trespass and released.

Wallenda, stripped bare to the waist in sub-freezing temperatures, said he pulled the stunt for publicity, to "prove I can do it," and to protest the holding of American hostages in Iran.

He told police he climbed 39 stories but witnesses suggested he didn't go that high.

Last summer, the self-styled acrobat was arrested for walking the cables of the Tacoma Narrows Bridge.

Your average actor makes $7,380 year

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Ah, the glamorous trappings of an acting career — prestige, popularity, parties, Perrier and poverty.

Poverty? An earnings survey released by the Screen Actors Guild discloses that the average income for male actors is $7,380 per year. An average actress earns less, an average 68 percent less, making about $4,908 annually.

The statistics compiled by SAG's Women's Committee member, Carol Buchanan, a research psychologist, were to be submitted to the full membership of the guild during its annual meeting Sunday.

Statistics compiled from 1979 show a membership of 49,652, with men comprising 59 percent and women 41 percent, but earnings for women members accounted for only 33 percent of the total income of guild members.

Only one age category of women guild members fared better than their male counterparts, the report said. Actresses between ages 20 and 29 work slightly more than men in the same age group. But actors made more money.

DePaul stays No. 1 in weekly UPI poll

NEW YORK (UPI) — Once again, DePaul was virtually a unanimous choice as the top-ranked college basketball team in the country and Oregon State was a strong second, but intense regional play elsewhere caused some shifts among the elite in UPI's weekly balloting.

With 37 of the 42 coaches on UPI's College Board of Coaches reporting, Ray Meyer's Blue Demons collected 36 first-place votes and 354 points to remain atop the weekly list after extending their perfect season with two victories. DePaul downed Alabama-Birmingham 57-54 and Evansville 105-94 to raise its record to 17-0.

Oregon State, which routed California 86-55 over the weekend, drew one first-place mention and added 504 votes to hold on to second place.

But a couple of intra-conference surprises and continued dominance of the East by Syracuse precipitated some scrambling in the middle of the top 10.

Duke secured two triumphs during the week but a 90-84 Atlantic Coast Conference loss to Virginia cost the Blue Devils dearly, as they fell four notches to seventh.

Syracuse, meanwhile, bolstered its claim as the best in the East with

1. DePaul (30) (17-0)	354
2. Oregon State (11) (16-1)	504
3. Syracuse (17-1)	375
4. Ohio State (15-2)	354
5. Louisville (18-2)	334
6. Kentucky (15-3)	334
7. Duke (18-1)	315
8. St. John's (17-1)	315
9. Notre Dame (15-2)	315
10. Louisiana State (13-4)	315
11. Missouri (15-3)	315
12. North Carolina (13-4)	315
13. Maryland (18-2)	315
14. Virginia (14-4)	315
15. Weber State (18-1)	315
16. Indiana (15-4)	315
17. Clemson (15-4)	315
18. Brigham Young (15-4)	315
19. Kansas State (15-3)	315
20. Purdue (15-4)	315

victories over Detroit, Rutgers and Connecticut to move into the No. 3 slot. The Orangemen, 17-1, garnered 372 points to advance two rungs.

Virginia also played a role in determining the fourth-place team. Ohio State, 14-3, rallied for a 70-65 triumph over the Squires Sunday to hold on to fourth place — a spot that seemed gone for sure after the Buckeyes' 72-71 loss to Big Ten rival Wisconsin Saturday. OSU, 14-3 overall and leader in the Big Ten, collected 355 points.

Duke's plummet allowed Louisville, 16-2 after beating Marquette, St. Louis and Florida State, to move up a notch to fifth place with 334 points, while cross-state rival Kentucky, 17-3, leaped three slots into sixth with 333 points.

Duke, 16-3, edged St. John's by two points for the No. 7 spot despite the Redmen's victories over Manhattan, Davidson and Villanova. Notre Dame, 12-2 after a rout of Canisius and a 1-point victory over Maryland, followed in ninth with 310 votes and Louisiana State was a distant 10th with 154 points.

Leading the second ten was North Carolina, which moved up a slot with ACC victories over Wake Forest and Clemson. Missouri fell from 10th to 12th after being upset by Oklahoma and Maryland's impressive show against Notre Dame was good for a one-spot improvement, to No. 13.

The biggest advance of the week was made by Virginia, which vaulted from No. 19 to 14. The Squires are 16-4 overall and 5-2 in the ACC — one game back of Maryland.

Weber State, 18-1, moved up a notch to 15th, leaving the No. 16 spot to Indiana, 11-5. Clemson dropped four spots to No. 17 after a loss to North Carolina and was followed by Brigham Young and Kansas State — two newcomers to the top 20 — and Purdue in 20th.

Suns' hockey team battles streak of injuries this year

By IRWIN CLIRTIN
Times-News sports writer

SUN VALLEY — The Sun Valley Suns reached the midpoint of their season this weekend by whipping the Jackson Hole, Wyo. Stampede twice.

With the 4-2 and 9-5 wins Friday and Saturday, the Suns record reached 12-4.

Coach John Weekes said last week this is already the team's most injury-riddled season in its five-year history. The team goes on the road this weekend to Lake Tahoe, Nev.

"The troops are diminishing but the guys are still playing well," Weekes said. "This is the worse year for injuries we've had. We've had shoulder separa-

— This article appeared in Sunday's North Valley edition and is reprinted for Twin Falls area readers tions, knee injuries and the usual minor stuff, like bruises. One guy who works with the ski patrol wrecked his knee the other day on his last run down the mountain making sure everybody was off.

"This is a very funny team," he continued. "It can play great games when it's tested. But then, we've never been a team that beats a much weaker team 15-1. We've always been a team that's played only as well as it's had to win."

There are still several Suns this season who haven't traded their skates and sticks for Ace handgags and shoulder slings.

And the best of those, Weekes said, have been defenseman Glenn Hunter, left wing Perry Babcock, and goaltender Dan Nee.

Hunter, 26, a native of Stoneham, Mass., leads the team in scoring with 10 goals, on two goals and 17 assists. The 23-year-old Babcock of Clinton, N.Y., has eight goals and nine assists for 17 points.

Hunter teams with Herm Haavik, 29, of Duluth, Minn., on defense. Weekes said Haavik started the season as a forward, was moved back to defense about six to eight games ago and has been playing "just great." Babcock plays on a forward line with center Pat Kearney, 22, of Rochester, N.Y., and right wing Rip Kirby, 27, of Duluth.

The Suns' other top forward line consists of left wing Bobby Noyes, 25, of Cold Spring Harbor, N.Y., center Dave Hutchison, 23, of New Canaan, Conn., and right wing Andy Dealy, 26, of Newton, Mass.

Hunter and Babcock are two of the major reasons the Suns are averaging close to five goals a game.

Goaltender Nee, meanwhile, is surrendering less than three goals a game. Keep in mind that a goal against average of three a game is to hockey what a .300 batting average is to baseball.

"He started off kind of shaky in games," Weekes said of Nee. "Then, my God, he started to play. It started the weekend we played Tahoe (Jan. 4-5). We lost 6-5 Friday night, and he got bombed with about 45 shots. Then we beat them 9-2 Saturday night, and he played great again."

"His confidence has really improved. I think it's just been a mental thing. We all could see he was a good goaltender as soon as he got here. At the beginning of the season, he'd be great in practice and then tighten up in games. But now he's got six or eight games under his belt where he's played excellently. He's got his confidence and the confidence of the team."

"It's not like he just makes one great save a game or saves on a breakaway. Anyone could make a save on a breakaway with a little luck. Dan makes saves on rebounds, on second and third shots. He's got composure, he manages his position really well."

Howe's son says Gordie will retire

HARTFORD, Conn. (UPI) — Mark Howe says his father, Gordie, will end his legendary 22-year hockey career at the end of the season with the National Hockey League Hartford Whalers.

"After this year I'm sure he'll retire," he said.

The younger Howe, a Whalers' defenseman, said in a recent interview that his father has had a "bad year from the start" and the veteran center has been frustrated because he hasn't had much time on the ice.

Howe had considered hanging his skates up before this season started because of nagging dizzy spells. This season, he has had a lingering chest cold.

But Howe, who played 25 seasons in the NHL for the Detroit Red Wings before retiring in 1971, had told the Whalers that he didn't want to play this season if he was just going to be "showcased."

"I just said if I would have to sit, I would probably retire," Howe said.

The elder Howe, 51, the first professional hockey player to score more than 1,000 goals, met on Friday with Jack Kelley, the Whalers director of hockey operations, to discuss why he's been spending so much time on the bench this season.

"I just wanted to know what was going on," Howe said over the weekend. "I just hate like hell to sit."

"I'd been thinking about it before, but the team was doing good," he said. "I was accepting my role. But when we got so far behind against Montreal (last Thursday's 7-2 loss to the Montreal Canadiens) I thought I'd better find out what was going on."

He said he asked coach Don Blackburn "why I didn't play and he said he had too much on his mind." Howe said Kelly told him during Friday's meeting that he wasn't playing because club managers thought he needed a rest.

Hawaii to host bowl next year

HONOLULU (UPI) — National Football League Commissioner Pete Rozelle said Monday the Pro Bowl game will return to Honolulu's Aloha Stadium next year.

A near-capacity 48,000 fans saw the underdog National Football Conference all stars beat the American Conference 37-27 Sunday in a game nationally televised.

Rozelle said early television rating information indicated the 10th game in the AFC-NFC series, the first to be played in Hawaii, could be among the highest rated games in Pro Bowl history.

"Because of the intense enthusiasm displayed by Hawaii's football fans, and the excellent cooperation and support we received from Mackey Yanagisawa and the Hula Bowl committee, we responded to the urging of Gov. George Ariyoshi and scheduled next season's Pro Bowl for Honolulu on Sunday, Feb. 1, 1981," Rozelle said.

The 1981 game will again be televised by ABC.

The NFC now holds a 6-4 lead in the Pro Bowl series that began in 1970 after the merger of the National and American Football Leagues and officially closes the professional football season.

Sunday's most valuable player award went to New Orleans Saints' running back Chuck Muncie, playing in the Pro Bowl for the first time.

In all, he rushed 12 times for a game-leading 71 yards, scored two touchdowns and passed for a third to log a total offense of 104 yards.

Connors still seeks top ranking

By United Press International
Being No. 2 may be fine for some people, but it's no good for Jimmy Connors.

Connors finished second to Bjorn Borg among the world's tennis players in 1979 and won seven tournaments. But he had been ranked from July, 1974 to last April 9, and his slip to No. 2 was much more drastic.

Another thing that bothered the fiery 27-year-old veteran last year was that he failed to survive the semifinals at Wimbledon, the French Open and the U.S. Open. He may have picked up an early boost Sunday in an effort to regain the top rung, however, by defeating John McEnroe 6-3, 2-6, 6-3, 2-6, 6-4 to capture his record-tying fourth title in the U.S. Pro Indoor Tennis Championships.

"By all standards last year wasn't that bad," Connors said after accepting the first prize check of $40,000. "To me it was not a good year. I'm not used to losing the semifinals. I've lost in the finals every year. But I found it difficult to play last year because I had so much on my mind."

Connors married model Patti McGuire last year and also became a father in August to newborn Brett. The new responsibilities distracted him from his game, but he said he doesn't expect to be as distracted this year. "This year I'm able to separate the two," he said. "It's a tribute to my concentration that I can block out one thing and do the other. I can work on my game when I'm not working on my family and I can enjoy the time I spend with them when I'm not playing."

MARK MATTOS, a guard for Weber State, and University of Montana forward Craig Zanon have been named co-Big Sky Conference players of the week for their performances during Jan. 21-26.

Mattos, a 6-foot-tall senior from Santa Barbara, Calif., had 14 assists and five rebounds as he led Weber State to its 18th consecutive win. Mattos set an Idaho State Mini-Dome record for assists and led the season high set by himself earlier this year against Nevada-Las Vegas.

Zanon, a 66 junior guard from Kallispell, Mont., was six of 10 from the field and 13 of 14 from the free throw line as he obtained 25 points in Montana's win over Montana State. He also had two rebounds, one assist and two steals in 29 minutes of play.

GEORGE GERVIN of the San Antonio Spurs, whose 55 points at Indiana Wednesday was the top individual scoring effort of the season, has been named the NBA Player of the Week.

MAURICE HOPES, British world light middleweight boxing champion, underwent a successful operation Sunday for a damaged retina in his right eye.

Hope was scheduled to defend his title against American Tony Chaverrin at London's Wembley Arena March 4, but now his career is in doubt.

"The first thing that matters is restoring perfect sight," said Dr. Adrian Whitson, chief medical officer of the British Boxing Board. "Technically the operation — for a slight hole or tear in the retina — was a complete success, but the whole result will not be known until the bandages come off in two or three days, and the consultant makes his report. Any other discussions start after that."

THE NEW YORK JETS Monday traded defensive tackle Marshall Harris, who quit football last year in his rookie season, to the Cleveland Browns for a conditional draft choice.

Harris, a 6-foot-6, 260-pounder who was the Jets' eighth-round draft choice out of Texas Christian last year, quit in training camp to study art. He decided to return and was dealt to the Browns, who will give the Jets an eighth-round draft pick in 1981 if Harris makes the Cleveland roster next season.

JESSE OWENS, Olympic gold medalist, battling malignant cancer in his left lung, will continue chemotherapy as an outpatient and doctors remained optimistic about the treatment, hospital officials said Monday.

Owens, 66, entered University of Arizona Health Sciences Center last Wednesday for evaluation and tests that involved a cancer cell cloning technique pioneered at the hospital's cancer center.

Owens was in satisfactory condition and tentatively was scheduled to go home Monday afternoon, officials said. The time of release was not disclosed in advance.

Dr. Stephen E. Jones, a professor of internal medicine, said Owens, the first man to win four Olympic gold medals in track, has a type of cancer "frequently related to smoking" but said he felt the disease would respond to treatment.

Wolves, Pirates to battle in key conference matchup

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News sports writer

MAGIC VALLEY — The Castletford Wolves, dodging a couple of two-point bullets the last two times out, stay in the fire tonight in their quest for a Magic Valley Conference title.

The Wolves, who have nipped Murtough and Oakley in their latest close encounters, will entertain the Hagerman Pirates.

The game is pivotal for both. A Hagerman win would pull the Pirates back into a tie while a Castletford decision would just about end Hagerman's hopes for a comeback as it would fall two games behind.

Castletford won the first meeting 61-53 and that's the only time Hagerman has stumbled in the conference year.

That game has the biggest title implications of eight slated for tonight.

In a Cross State battle, the Jerome Tigers will play host to the Tull Caldwell Cougars. This is a makeup date, replacing one that was snowed out earlier in the year.

Buhl sticks with its midweek scheduling, the Indians repaying a visit to Glenns Ferry and then traveling to Burley Thursday.

In another non-league encounter, the Wood River Wolverines come down the hill to play the Senators at Gooding. Gooding dropped Wood River 56-50 the first time around.

While Castletford and Hagerman are squabbling for the Magic Valley Conference top spot, Murtough, two games off the pace, steps out of league action to entertain the Kimberly Bulldogs.

Kimberly showed some pretty good offense last week and has returned 6-3 senior Keith Haas to action following a month layoff due to injury.

Hansen and Raft River, two Magic Valley league teams now just waiting for the district tournament, will collide at Malta.

Kush given settlement deadline

PHOENIX, Ariz. (UPI) — Former Arizona State football coach Frank Kush has until 5 p.m. today to accept a $200,000 settlement from the state or the state may withdraw its offer, Arizona Attorney General Bob Corbin has said.

Corbin said Saturday Kush has delayed accepting the offer several times.

"I'm tired of these delays. I guess frustrated is a better word," Corbin said, adding the state could withdraw the settlement or try to have the settlement enforced in court.

He said the state still had not decided which course to take in case Kush fails to meet the deadline.

According to the Arizona Republic, sources said the delay has resulted because Kush was $150,000 of the settlement labeled as for "personal injuries and personal damages" to make the money tax free.

But sources said the attorney general's office is not willing to do this. Corbin said this issue was not discussed when Kush reached a deal with the state Dec. 21.

Under that deal, Kush was to drop a $40 million against ASU, the state Board of Regents, ASU President John Schwada and former athletic director Fred Miller, and release ASU from future claims. The suit claimed he was denied due process when he was fired Oct. 13.

The settlement was for $150,000 plus $17,420 for Kush's 1980 teaching contract.

Corbin said he agreed to the settlement because he figured the state would spend more than $200,000 in fighting the case in court.

Kush's suit still stands against Beeline Dragway operator Rick Lynch.

The coach was fired by Miller who claimed Kush tried to coverup an incident in which he allegedly punched a player, who subsequently sued Kush. Kush has repeatedly denied hitting the player.

Former coach dies

RUSTON, La. (UPI) — Former Louisiana Tech football coach Maxie T. Lambright, who sent quarterback Terry Bradshaw and seven other players to the NFL, died Monday of a stroke.

Lambright, 55, retired last year due to ill health after 12 years as coach and athletic director.

His teams compiled an overall 95-36-2 record and won seven Southeastern Conference titles and five assorted national championships.

Washington decides to quit playing

PONTIAC, Mich. (UPI) — Veteran wide receiver Gene Washington, who achieved his greatest fame with the San Francisco 49ers, has informed the Detroit Lions he is ending his 11-year NFL career, the Lions announced Monday.

"Gene had a great career in the NFL, one typified by his class and dignity," Coach Monte Clark of the Lions said in making the announcement. "We hate to lose him. But I'm sure he'll be a success in whatever he decides to do."

"It was a very satisfying career, especially because I was able to accomplish all the goals I had set for myself," said Washington, 33, who spent the last two seasons of his career with the Lions.

Washington was All-Pro four times and started in the Pro Bowl game three times, all during his nine San Francisco seasons. He holds 49er club records for career touchdown catches with 59 and reception yardage, 6,664. His best season was 1970, when he caught 53 passes for 1,100 yards and 12 TDs.

Detroit obtained him in 1978 but he missed the season because of Achilles tendon problems. He rebounded last season to appear in all 16 games, starting all but two of them.

Washington caught 14 passes for 192 yards and one TD to give him career totals of 6,856 yards on 385 receptions and 60 scores.

Washington played his college ball at Stanford and as a sophomore was one of the first black starting quarterbacks at the major college (Division I) level.

NBA fills vacancy on all-stars

NEW YORK (UPI) — Forward Kermal Washington of the Portland Trail Blazers has been selected by conference coaches as a replacement for the injured Scott Wedman on the West team for Sunday's NBA All-Star game at the Capital Centre in Landover, Md. It was announced Monday by NBA Commissioner Lawrence F. O'Brien.

Washington will join Walter Davis of the Phoenix Suns, named earlier by the coaches, as reserve forwards on the West. Milwaukee's Marques Johnson and Adrian Dantley of Utah were chosen starters in the fan balloting.

Washington, who starred as a collegiate player at American University in Washington, is among the league's top rebounders and will be making his first All-Star game appearance.

Wedman, of the Kansas City Kings, suffered a broken cheekbone in three places in last Thursday's Kings victory at Utah and underwent surgery Saturday. He is expected to be sidelined for a minimum of two weeks.

Previous Olympic competitors — Al Oerter (discus thrower), John Thompson (basketball coach 1976) and Anita DeFrantz (crew team 1976) — listen to testimony

Senate group endorses boycott of summer games

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate Foreign Relations Committee Monday unanimously endorsed President Carter's call for a U.S. boycott of the 1980 Moscow Olympics if Soviet troops refuse to pull out of Afghanistan.

After listening to testimony from American Olympians, the committee voted 14-0 for a resolution that recommended the 1980 Games "be removed from the territory of the Soviet Union and either relocated, postponed or cancelled."

The panel then rushed the measure to the Senate floor, where debate began immediately. A similar resolution passed the House with only 12 dissenting votes last Thursday.

The Senate measure, which urges the permanent relocation of the Olympics to Greece, said "no American team should participate in those Games and no Americans should attend them" if the competition takes place in Moscow.

Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, the committee chairman, expressed the view of many colleagues by saying a permanent site in Greece, the ancient birthplace of the Olympics, would "put an end to this movable propaganda feast."

Discus thrower Al Oerter, 43, who was aiming for a record fifth gold medal in as many Olympics, told the Senate panel that a boycott of the Moscow Games would be "a unifying thing" for America.

Oerter testified that it was time for American athletes "to put aside all personal considerations" and support their government's position.

Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.J., the only senator to win an Olympic gold medal, also endorsed a boycott. He was a member of the winning U.S. basketball team in 1964.

"The prospect of American participation under the Olympic flag in Moscow while innocent Pushtoon people are nerve-gassed in Afghanistan would not be something that should make the United States proud or respected," Bradley said.

But Anita DeFrantz, the 1976 women's rowing team captain, complained that the boycott effort has "betrayed" U.S. athletes and portrayed them as "villains."

'Countries would play'

BOSTON (UPI) — U.S. Olympic basketball coach Dave Gavitt thinks a change of venue for the 1980 Summer Games will result in all but two countries participating in an alternative basketball competition.

"It's my gut feeling the United States will be part of some alternate Olympics," Gavitt told a basketball luncheon Monday.

"If that happens, there would be only two teams who would stay in Moscow: the Russians and the Czechoslovaks. The U.S., Canada, Australia and others would probably play in the alternate games."

Gavitt said no one was particularly excited about going to Moscow anyway and added the prospect of playing the Soviets on their home turf was a challenge which in some ways ran contrary to Olympic ideals.

"We would be at a helluva disadvantage and I'm not sure everything we would have done to prepare for it would be done in the true Olympic spirit. And I'm not so sure the game would be either," he said.

Amateurs oppose idea

LONDON (UPI) — The British Amateur Athletics board, which controls track and field in Britain, Monday rejected the idea of a boycott of the Moscow Olympics.

"The council of the British Amateur Athletics Board regrets the dilemma that athletes are faced with at the moment with regard to the 1980 Olympic Games, but at present supports the view that our athletes shall be free to participate in the Olympic Games," a statement said.

A spokesman said athletes chosen for the Moscow Olympics would be free to turn down the selection on grounds of conscience if they wished and that such a refusal to join the British Olympic team would not be held against them.

Morocco backs boycott

CASABLANCA, Morocco (UPI) — Prime Minister Maaft Bouabid has declared Morocco "completely in agreement with a boycott of the Olympic games in Moscow," according to official reports Monday.

Bouabid made the statement, first by the Moroccan government on the subject since President Carter's call to move the games from Moscow or boycott them, in a news conference during a visit to Libreville, Gabon.

The prime minister took the position because of "unjustifiable and unqualifiable Soviet intervention in Afghanistan, a Moslem and non-aligned country," the reports said.

He also commented on the banishment of Soviet dissident leader Andrei Sakharov, saying that "it would be well if this affair causes a reform of Soviet internal policies. Sakharov is a matter for all humanity."

W. Europeans to meet

HAMBURG, West Germany (UPI) — The National Olympic Committees of West Europe are going to meet in Frankfurt Friday to discuss the question of boycotting or moving the Moscow Olympic Games, Willie Daume, President of the West German NOC, said Monday.

"The meeting is not to pass any resolutions or anything like that, but to take stock of the situation," Daume said.

Daume denied a press report that the West German NOC would follow the United States in boycotting the Moscow Olympics. He said no such decision had been reached.

Quarterbacks make most

NEW YORK (UPI) — National Football League quarterbacks averaged $113,932 in salary last season, tops in the league by position, according to a survey released Monday by the NFL Management Council.

The survey of 1,517 players under contract to NFL clubs at the end of the 1979 regular season showed that quarterbacks average the highest salary in the NFL, followed by defensive linemen, running backs, offensive linemen, receivers, linebackers, defensive backs and kickers.

The average salary for all NFL players according to the survey was $68,893.

The 43 quarterbacks surveyed averaged $113,932 and 212 defensive linemen averaged an average salary of $75,246.

The 197 running backs averaged $74,194, 278 offensive linemen averaged $66,284, 241 receivers averaged $64,631, 213 linebackers averaged $63,977 and 233 defensive backs averaged $58,874.

The 60 kickers were low on the scale with an average salary of $53,030.

Iowa St. fires coach

DES MOINES, Iowa (UPI) — Iowa State Head Coach Lynn Nance has been fired from his position as head men's basketball coach by the ISU Athletic Council, WHO-TV reported Monday.

A special meeting of the council will be held today to make an official announcement, the Des Moines station said.

Nance allegedly will not make the trip Wednesday with the Cyclones in their Big Eight game against Colorado and Assistant Coaches Reggie Warford and Rick Samuels will coach the team.

Spencer retains title

BEAUPRE, Que. (UPI) — Alison Owen-Spencer, America's leading hope for a women's cross-country Olympic medal next month, Monday retained her U.S. national 10-kilometer ski title by leading the race from start to finish.

The meet, moved from Bretton Woods, N.H., because of a lack of snow, is serving as a final tune-up for next month's Lake Placid Winter Olympics.

Owen-Spencer, fresh from impressive results during a tour of Europe, led a trio of Olympic team members home, covering the hilly course in 31 minutes, 54.79 seconds. The 27-year-old East Wenatchee, Wash., native took an early lead and never surrendered it.

Both Paxson, 19, of Morehead, Ky., finished second in 32:33.63, ahead of Leslie Bancroft, 20, of Paris, Maine, who clocked 33:13.31.

Rounding out the top six were Lynn Spencer, Anchorage, Alaska, 33:10.32; Pat Engberg, Seattle, Wash., 33:58.47, and Colleen Bolton of Australia, 34:15.98.

Gibson to meet Cardinals

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Kirk Gibson, already penciled into the starting lineup of the Detroit Tigers, will meet with the St. Louis Cardinals about possibly signing a pro football contract, the NFL team said Monday.

A spokesman for the Cardinals confirmed Gibson and his agent, Doug Baldwin, will meet with team officials Tuesday.

"He and his agent are coming into town and we're going to discuss his future," said Joe Sullivan, Cardinals vice president for operations.

Gibson, a former All-America wide receiver at Michigan State, was drafted in the seventh round by the Cardinals last year even though he already had signed with the Tigers.

Wesleyan mourns deaths

ATHENS, Tenn. (UPI) — Students at tiny Tennessee Wesleyan College mourned the deaths Monday of three women basketball players killed in a automobile accident 200 yards from a restaurant where the team had been enjoying a victory party just moments before.

Students and team members filed into the Trinity Methodist Church, located next to the East Tennessee campus, for a memorial service for the victims.

Another team member and a 52-year-old man also were injured in the 8 p.m. Sunday two-car crash.

Wesleyan Coach Brenda Paul said the team was in a "state of shock," but had voted to play its scheduled game Monday night against Lincoln Memorial University. The coach said only six members of the squad would be able to play in the game.

"We think this is what the girls would have wanted," said the coach.

Tripucka to miss one more

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (UPI) — Kelly Tripucka, a second-team All-America selection last year and Notre Dame's leading scorer, is expected to miss one more Irish game but will be back for the final month of the season.

Tripucka, who missed the Irish victory over Maryland last Saturday, had been hospitalized with back spasms since last Friday. He was to be re-examined on Monday but Notre Dame Coach Digger Phelps said Tripucka would not be out for a long period of time.

Bengals sign Ebeling

CINCINNATI (UPI) — The Cincinnati Bengals Monday signed Ken Ebeling, a free agent linebacker from Chicago.

The 6-5, 226-pounder was one of the final cuts last year of the New England Patriots, where he played during the preseason for Hank Bullough, the Bengals new defensive coordinator.

Hijacker delivers speech, surrenders

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — A knife-wielding Shiite Moslem, accompanied by his wife and four infants, hijacked a Lebanese airliner Monday but surrendered after being allowed to deliver a speech calling for Iranian fighters to come to south Lebanon.

The 137 passengers and crew members were freed unharmed.

Lebanese-born Ahmed Ali Issa, 26, commandeered the Middle East Airlines Boeing 720 10 minutes after it left Baghdad, Iraq, for Beirut at 9:40 a.m.

"He pulled out a small knife and stuck it in my face," said MEA stewardess Rouaida Souaidy. "He demanded to see the the captain and be allowed to give a speech. He didn't harm anyone. All he wanted to do was give his little talks."

While the jetliner made the two-hour journey from Baghdad, Issa marched up and down the aisle with a knife in one hand and a megaphone in the other, haranguing the stunned passengers about his community's missing spiritual leader, Imam Musa Sadr, and the need for Iranians to take over in south Lebanon.

Issa and his family have been living in Baghdad for the past five years, ever since they fled their south Lebanon village of Houmin et Tahin during 1975 fighting between Israel and Palestinian guerrillas.

South Lebanon is the home of the majority of Lebanon's 800,000 Moslems, most of whom were followers of Musa Sadr until he mysteriously disappeared on a trip to Libya in August 1978.

Once the plane landed in Beirut, Issa released all the women and children, including his wife and four infants, but held the men until the reporters arrived.

U.S. aware of Soviet spying in UN

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — The United States knows Soviet spies pose as international civil servants at the United Nations headquarters and has acted to ferret out and expel them, an American spokeswoman said Monday.

Arkady Shevchenko, a Soviet undersecretary-general at the United Nations who defected in 1978, said in an interview on CBS-TV's "60 Minutes" Sunday night that about half of the 600 Soviet mission employees worked for the Soviet KGB and military intelligence.

Reading from pink-lined stationery, Issa delivered a 20-minute speech through his bullhorn while standing in the doorway of the aircraft.

"The pope sent a representative to see the American hostages in Tehran, but he has ignored Musa Sadr," he said.

No mercy for condemned men

NASSAU, Bahamas (UPI) — The committee on the Prerogative of Mercy, ignoring emotional pleas, refused mercy Monday for three men condemned to hang Tuesday morning.

At 8 a.m. today, one of three convicted murderers — Charles Dickenson, 21, Winslet Hart, 24, or Vernal Starr, 27 — will walk to the gallows at Her Majesty's Fox Hill Prison.

The second will follow at 9 a.m. and the third will take his last walk an hour later.

"We discussed all the issues and found no reason to change our recommendations," committee member Dr. Timothy McCartney said.

Starr's attorney and former partner sent emotional letters to Clement Maynard, minister of labor and home affairs. Both begged the committee to spare Starr's life and said he was innocent.

Another plea for the lives of the three men came from the son of one of the victims.

But the family of the other victim published a "public message" to her killer in a local newspaper. They said: "Your totally-useless life is to end in ignominy."

The committee's meeting was an "informal one" to consider the last minute appeals. Earlier, the seven members recommended that "the royal prerogative of mercy" be withheld.

Sakharov prepared for trial

MOSCOW (UPI) — Dissident Andrei Sakharov Monday blasted the Kremlin for a serious "deterioration of the international situation" and challenged Soviet authorities to bring him to trial on spy charges.

The 56-year-old physicist, sentenced to internal exile last week, said the Soviet Union has "launched a merciless war" against Afghanistan, supports terrorism and "tries to destroy the possibility of peace" in many parts of the world.

Sakharov's charges, the strongest ever made, came in a two-page statement that he sent from Gorky to Moscow via his wife, Yelena Bonner Sakharov.

The Nobel Peace Prize winner denied he handed over state defense secrets to foreign diplomats and journalists, mostly Americans, as charged by the government newspaper Izvestia last week and said: "I am ready to go before open trial."

Soviet authorities have denounced Sakharov repeatedly since last Tuesday, when he was picked up in Moscow, brought to a prosecutor's office and informed he was being deported to Gorky, closed to foreigners 250 miles to the east, on two hours notice.

Members of the Communist Party Central Committee and other officials subsequently pledged that Sakharov would not be brought to trial for his alleged crimes, ostensibly for "humanitarian reasons" and in tribute to his past contributions. He was known as the "father of the Soviet H-bomb."

But in the statement read by Sakharov's wife to Western reporters at the Sakharov Moscow apartment, he charged the authorities have imposed worse restrictions on him than on inmates of Soviet prison camps.

The restrictions placed against them, Mrs. Sakharov said, include a ban on either receiving or sending letters abroad. She said "even those in a prison camp can receive letters."

Troop forces in Tunisia remain alert

TUNIS, Tunisia (UPI) — Tunisia put its armed forces on alert and sent reinforcements Monday into the Gafsa region where officials investigated possible Libyan involvement in a fierce guerrilla attack.

The government has made no official statement on the predawn attack by about 300 guerrillas armed with Communist-made automatic weapons and mortars at the phosphate mining center, 180 miles south of Tunis, or given a casualty total.

Unofficial reports said at least 20 persons were killed and scores more wounded before the shooting stopped.

The government sent fighter planes and helicopters to help overpower the guerrillas Sunday and Gafsa was reported calm Monday. The Tunisian news agency said most of the guerrilla force was captured and women and children who they took hostage were released unharmed.

Unofficial sources said the guerrillas, who attacked army and police posts in the town, were all Tunisian nationalists who apparently crossed the border from Algeria about 40 miles away.

Taiwan anti-tank missile deal near

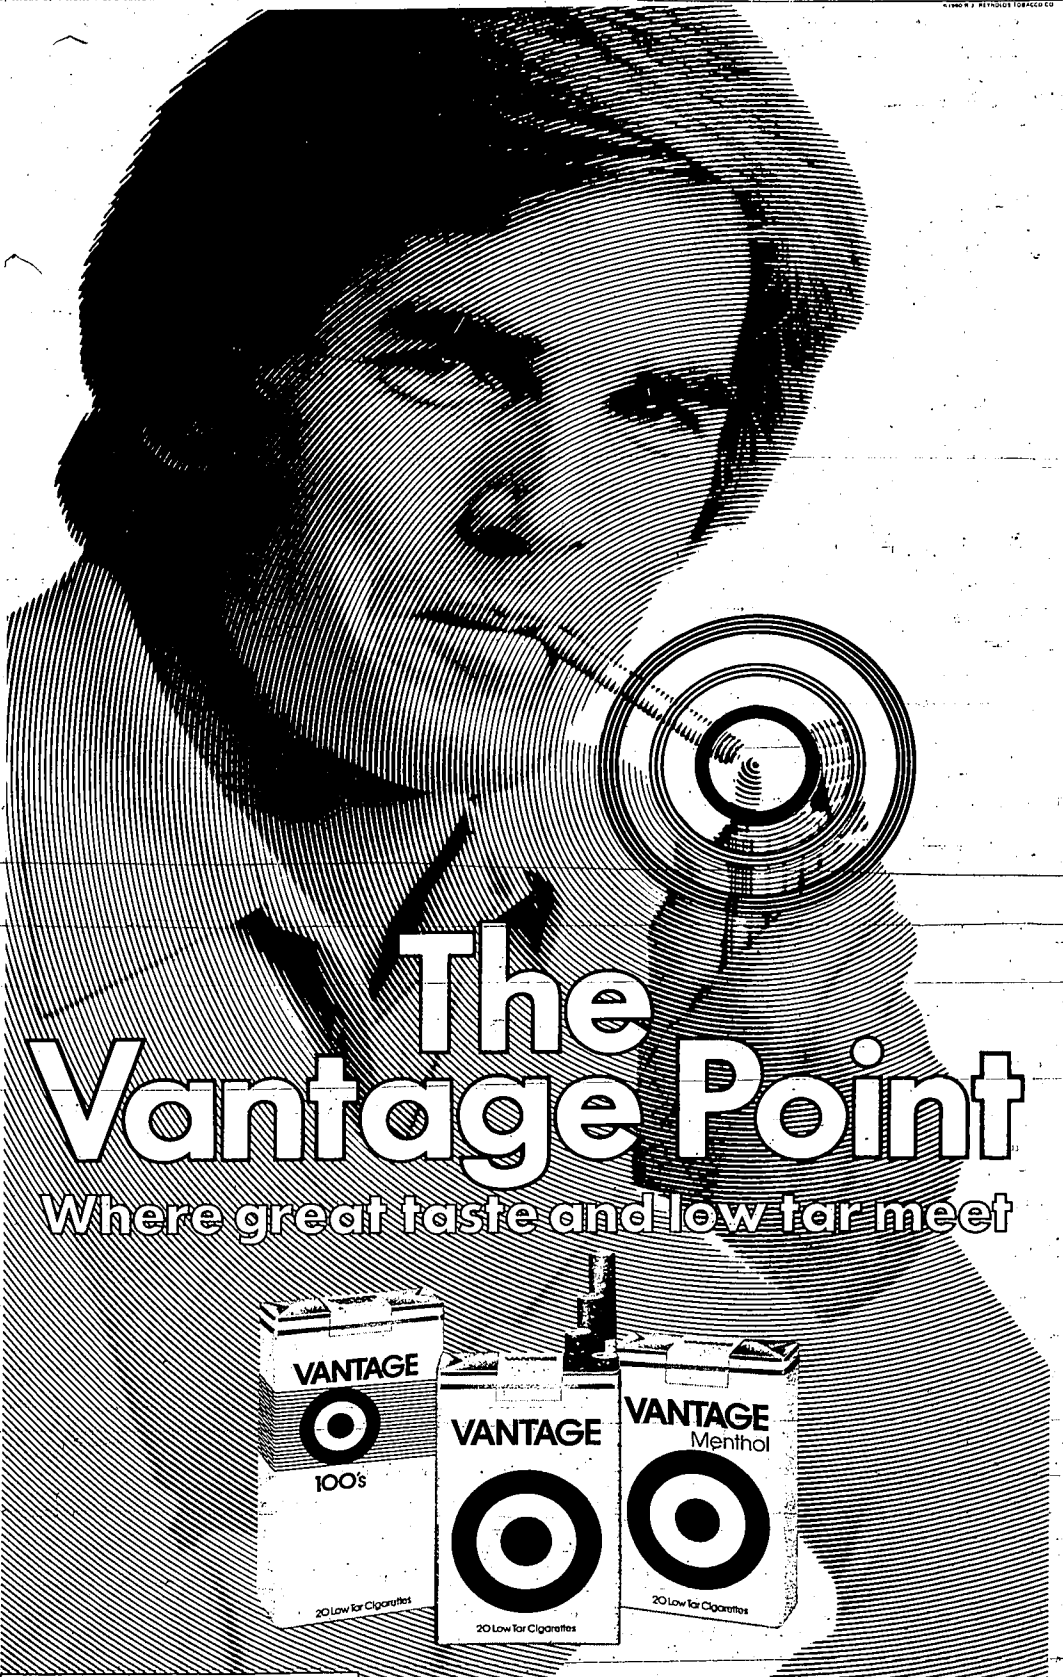

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Pentagon informed Congress Monday it is prepared to sell Taiwan TOW anti-tank missiles worth $12 million.

U.S. willingness to resume defensive arms sales to the Nationalist Chinese government on Taiwan was announced shortly before Defense Secretary Harold Brown visited Peking, Jan. 6-13.

The United States had imposed a one-year moratorium on arms sales to Taiwan after recognizing Peking as the legitimate government of China in December 1978.

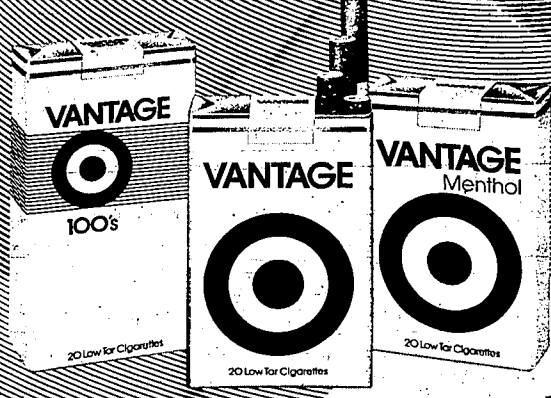

"The TOW is an anti-tank defensive weapon the sale of which will maintain Taiwan's self-defense capability while posing no offensive threat to the People's Republic of China," the Pentagon said.

The letter of offer forwarded by the Defense Department to Congress said the proposed sales involved 49 TOW launchers, 1,013 TOW missiles, 40 practice TOW missiles, as well as technical assistance and spare parts.
