

Maine win for Carter

Kennedy, Brown encouraged by their caucus showings

AUGUSTA, Maine (UPI) — President Carter fought off a determined challenge by Sen. Edward Kennedy Sunday to win the Maine caucuses.

That was a contest Kennedy once said he had to win to stay in the race. Kennedy and California Gov. Edmund Brown Jr., who finished an unexpectedly strong third, combined to keep Carter's total under 50 percent a fact both challengers are likely to emphasize as they move to New Hampshire to campaign for that state's Feb. 26 primary.

A heavy urban vote helped Kennedy cut into Carter's strong early lead, but was not enough to stop the president from winning the second contest of the 1980 Democratic presidential race.

Peter Mead, Kennedy's Maine chairman, all but conceded in the late afternoon, but said, "They attempted to blow us out of the water and they didn't. We picked up ground and we now feel much more positive about New Hampshire."

Kennedy, on his return to Washington a few hours later, said: "There is good news from Maine tonight and good news for the Democratic Party. Four days ago, we were 19 points behind President Carter. And tonight we are in a dead heat with him."

With 67 percent of the results in, Carter had 41,450 votes and had elected 64 or 47 percent of the delegates.

Kennedy had 31,100 votes and had elected 566 or 39 percent of the delegates. Brown had 3,516 votes and had elected 196 or 13 percent of the delegates.

If these totals are close to the same ratio, under Democratic party rules Carter would get 10 delegates to the national convention from Maine, Kennedy eight, Brown three and one would be uncommitted.

"I'm enormously grateful, very much encouraged by this response," Kennedy told reporters. "I think it's given our whole campaign a very significant lift."

Paul J. Kirk Jr., Kennedy's national campaign director, called the results

"a victory for Sen. Kennedy and the political process," and said: "Over 50 percent of Maine's caucus goers voted for an alternative for President Carter."

"We are confident that when the Maine delegation convenes in New York City, there will be a majority for Senator Kennedy."

Carter's campaign manager Robert Strauss called the Maine results "a good solid win," and said, "We're very pleased."

"I have just finished talking... with our people in Maine and it looks like we're gonna get out of there with a very good win for the president," Strauss told reporters in Washington. "I'm delighted things have worked out well, and it's on to New Hampshire for us."

Brown told an airport news conference that the key in any political campaign is momentum. "And Maine is the first place where my campaign has really begun to take off. A spark has been lit in Maine for peace and against nuclear madness and against instituting the draft."

Brown said "the big number" is the size of the total combined vote "against the Carter leadership."

The 466 caucuses were held in private homes, rural fire stations and American legion halls across Maine. In May, the state convention delegates elected at the caucuses will pick 20 of the state's 22 delegates to the Democratic National Convention in New York Aug. 13.

The Maine caucus was Carter's second victory in a row in the 1980 battle with Kennedy. It was a contest Kennedy said he had to win, following his 2-to-1 loss to the president in Iowa last month.

Carter found a resounding vote of confidence for his policies in Iran and Afghanistan from rural Maine Democrats who turned their backs on their neighbors from Massachusetts.

But in the blue-collar wards of Maine's industrial cities and from the college campuses where draft registration was a big issue, the vote pointed out for Kennedy and to a lesser extent for Brown.

Proposed provisions in code spark battle

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A bruising battle is developing in the legal profession over two controversial provisions in a proposed new code of ethics for the nation's lawyers. One would put a crack in the current wall of secrecy around an attorney's relationship with his or her clients. The other encourages — but does not force — lawyers to provide more free public service each year.

The secrecy proposal sparked immediate and heated debate when it was unveiled at last week's American Bar Association winter meeting in Chicago.

Under the rule, if a client threatens serious bodily harm or death to another person, a lawyer must disclose the information to "appropriate authorities."

If lesser harm is threatened, it permits a lawyer to breach the confidentiality but does not require it. The provisions are part of newly revised ABA rules that govern lawyer behavior. The code will undergo hearings and changes during the coming year before replacing the current, 40-year-old attorneys' code that has been widely criticized as outdated and impractical.

Although some attorneys say there is an existing duty to disclose information in such instances as threats, many more feel it is the opening wedge in the privileged relationship a lawyer shares with his client.

Shortly before the proposed code was made public, the ABA panel drafting it dropped a controversial provision that would have required each attorney to contribute 40 hours of legal work "pro bono publico" for the public good.

Vigorous opposition halted that proposal, and the panel substituted a section encouraging lawyers to perform such unpaid work and to publicly report it.

Prospect of new draft registration receives mixed reaction from youth

By MARTY TRILLHAASE
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — They were little more than 15 years old the last time this country registered anyone for the draft.

Now the possibility of a new draft not only touches brothers and friends, it touches young women as well. And to some young women who will face the possibility of registering under President Carter's proposal, it is seen as a peculiar statement of change and of a trend in lifestyles they do not endorse.

Under Carter's proposal, which will be submitted to Congress, everyone born in 1960 or 1961 would register this year. Starting next January, those born in 1962 — and those turning 19 in 1981 — would register.

Thereafter, men and women would be required to register upon reaching age 18. Their names would remain on the rolls indefinitely.

The move has met with mixed reaction, particularly from women, including those who may be required to register if Congress approves the President's request.

"I've been against ERA ever since they came out with it," said Stephanie Osborne, 19, of Twin Falls. Women should be allowed to voluntarily register, she said. But women should be required to register, she said.

"Still, she said she would probably comply if required. "I wouldn't try to dodge," she said. But she added a resistance movement might find her support.

"If there was going to be a resistance to it, I'd probably be in it," she said.

Shawna Butler, 19, of Twin Falls, said she also opposes registration of women.

"I can't see us out there fighting," she said. "I think if the men are going to make the wars, I think they should fight it."

Maechel Morrison, 17, of Twin Falls agreed, adding the women's movement which has led to the proposal does not have her support.

Women who want to participate in the registration should have that opportunity, she said. But they should not force that lifestyle on all women, she said.

"We didn't make the ERA either," she said. "We had nothing to do with it. We were too young at that age."

But women have an equal responsibility with men, said Kris Schenk, 19. "We're right in the middle of it, too," the College of Southern Idaho freshman said.

She added she doubts some women are capable of serving in the military.

"I was thinking about registering last year," she said. "Certainly women should do it if they have the capability."

"I would do it. I don't think I'd go out of the country. But I think another war is going to end up in total destruction," she said.

The prospect of registering women seems to draw less opposition from men. But they are themselves facing the same prospect and oppose it for different reasons.

"I'll fight here but I'm not going to make another Vietnam out of

CSI students Jamie Bray, 18, and Kris Schenk, 19, consider impact of renewed registration for draft Afghanistan and Pakistan," Norm Brown, 19, of Boise, said. Brown, a CSI sophomore, added the registration proposal would still not produce a standing army in time to meet any emergency.

"It's too late. If they were going to do it, they should have done it long ago."

Bob Boone, 19, also of Boise, agreed, saying, "I don't expect to go over and fight in Afghanistan. I don't think we need that oil had enough to go over and fight for it."

Boone added he doubts such a war would accomplish anything more than the last one and could lead to a world-wide devastation. "I don't think it's worth our time. It's a waste of time, people and money."

Both acknowledged considering fleeing the country if a draft is reinstated, although they add that is only a possibility that must be tested if and when the time comes.

"When Carter was on TV, we all missed class," Brown said. "Then we all laughed. It's going to be such a fast war that they won't even need me."

To an outsider looking from at the CSI campus, Jamie Bray, 18, a Canadian from Niagara Falls, Ontario, sees a different picture emerging. While the registration does not immediately affect him, there may be no escape from world tensions.

"People are scared. They don't want to go to war because they know what will come."

U.S. losing attempt to stall nuclear sales to Argentina

The Washington Post BONN — The United States appears to be losing an attempt to stall European sales of sensitive nuclear technology to Argentina, which has not signed international nonproliferation pacts.

Both Switzerland and West Germany have rebuffed U.S. pleas to get Argentina to sign a blanket safeguards agreement before going ahead with construction of a heavy-water nuclear project there.

While the Bonn government has not yet given final export approval for its part of the deal, the Swiss, who are providing the more sensitive technology, have signaled their intention to proceed with construction, according to informed officials.

Some U.S. officials still hold out hope that West Germany will withdraw from the project, or at least negotiate a strong safeguards agreement of its own with Argentina. Washington continues to make a quiet but very firm appeal to the West German government, based on shared nonproliferation concerns, figuring that Bonn is more sensitive to this score than Bern.

Ideally, the U.S. officials would like to see West Germany make its sale contingent on Argentina signing a better safeguard agreement with the Swiss for sale of the heavy-water facility.

But much of the political heat has been taken off the West Germans by Switzerland's determination to proceed.

There is also resistance by the Argentine government to accepting reaching safeguards. And there is considerable domestic economic pressure on the Bonn government, coming from West Germany's stagnating nuclear industry, to approve the project. Moreover, Bonn spurred similar U.S. urgings in 1977 and stuck with the sale of a nuclear reprocessing system to Brazil.

False hope worst enemy of hostages' kin

By United Press International A hundred days of "imminent breakthroughs" followed by inevitable setbacks have made false hope an enemy more potent to families of American hostages in Iran than the Moslem militants who hold their loved ones captive.

Most families cling to faith brothers and husbands will return home but won't speculate when, turning deaf ears to reports of "encouraging developments" and "breakthroughs" that periodically surface in news reports.

"Well, we've been on an emotional roller coaster all through Christmas," said Pennie Laignon of Bethesda, Md., wife of U.S. charge d'affaires Bruce

Related story on page A2

Laignon, who is being "detained" at the foreign ministry in Iran. "I will not be encouraged until I see them on the plane. I refuse to get on that roller-coaster again," she said.

Mary Lopez of Globe, Ariz., said she thinks constantly of her hostage son, Jimmy, a 21-year-old Marine sergeant.

She said she still has moments of despair. "But I feel President Carter is handling the matter well."

"It's a situation where you have to take it slow," she said.

She added she has been "very encouraged" by recent developments but hesitated to predict a speedy release of the hostages.

"I hope so," she said, "but I hesitate to answer that because we've had so many highs and the lows that come the next day are so hard to deal with. So, we're trying to stay on an even keel. When the really good news comes, I'll deal with it then."

Impatience has gnawed at some families.

The parents of Marine Sgt. Kevin Hermening of Oak Creek, Wis., have hired a lawyer to try to expedite Hermening's release from the embassy.

The attorney, Karl McAfee, played a role in freeing Gary Francis Powers, who was shot down in a spy plane over Russia in 1960, and in the 1968 release of the crew of the USS Pueblo, held for 11 months in North Korea.

"The government is no farther ahead now, it appears, than in the beginning," said Hermening's mother, Mrs. Barbara Timm.

She said she has not been overjoyed by recent reports the hostages' release may be imminent.

"What does imminent mean? Another month or two?"

She said she has received a letter from her son in which he said he was planning an escape because he would rather "die in a try for freedom than remain a captive."

Mrs. Timm said she was at first alarmed but later wondered "if they were making him say it."

Judy Ehlenbeck, a St. Louis secretary whose brother, Marine Sgt. Rodney Sickmann, is among the hostages, said she is less than impressed by State Department briefings on the hostage situation.

She said she accompanied her parents to a briefing session for families in Washington.

"Things are being done behind the scenes, blah, blah, blah, and they're hoping for a breakthrough with new Iranian President Abolhasan Bani-Sadr," she said, mimicking the briefing officer.

"Dad calls it a hand-holding session."

But she said her family would not join in hiring McAfee to seek the hostages' release.

"We're not part of that," she said. "My brother's over there and, if that means being patient, I'll be patient. I don't want anything done hastily," she said.

Phillip and Gloria Lewis of Homer, Ill., also believe in patience. And faith.

"It is not if they are coming back but when they are coming back," said Lewis, whose son, Paul, a Marine sergeant, arrived at the embassy the day before the takeover.

"I have no doubt in my mind that they will be coming back," Lewis said.

Americans visit embassy in Tehran, fail to see hostages

Bus bearing 50 Americans enters rear gate of U.S. Embassy in Tehran Sunday

By United Press International
 Iranian President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr, on the eve of the 100th day of the hostage crisis, Sunday accused militants occupying the U.S. Embassy of giving orders to foreign embassies without his permission.

He said, "I will not accept such behavior."

In an interview with the official Pars news agency broadcast by Tehran Radio and monitored in Kuwait, Bani-Sadr also accused the militants of interfering in governmental affairs by inviting a group of 49 Americans to Iran without official permission.

The group of Americans visited the occupied embassy for four hours Sunday to meet with the militants, but a militant spokesman in a telephone interview with UPI in London said they did not meet with any of the 49 hostages on their 99th day of captivity.

Bani-Sadr has steadily escalated his war of words with the militants since his election as Iran's first president with an overwhelming 77 percent of the votes — a mandate he evidently interprets as a weapon with which to deal more firmly with those holding the U.S. Embassy.

Bani-Sadr said Iran's foreign minister, Sadegh Ghotbzadeh, told him the militants were issuing instructions and orders to foreign embassies without his knowledge.

"I will not accept such behavior, which I consider a government within the legitimate government," Bani-Sadr said.

"In my capacity as president of this government, I call on students to put an end to this behavior and to unify their opinions and actions with the government's opinion."

He did not elaborate on the alleged instructions to embassies.

However, the New Zealand embassy in Tehran closed down last week after a burglary. Its staff left Iran for New Zealand.

New Zealand officials later issued details their embassy had had any of the six American diplomats who fled Iran with Canadian help.

In the telephone interview, the militant spokesman replied indirectly to Bani-Sadr's attacks, saying the "only thing I can say, we and Bani-Sadr ... want to help our people but ... two ways. But just one of them is right. We think that the people can decide which one is right."

Asked if by "people" he meant Khomeini, the spokesman replied, "You know that Imam Khomeini has said he speaks for what the people want."

Norman Forer, a University of Kansas professor who acts as spokesman for the Americans invited to Iran, said in a telephone interview with UPI in New York that the group met with "about 100 students" inside one of the embassy buildings.

He would describe the meeting only as "very interesting and frank and far ranging. We choose to make no further details available."

In northeastern Iran just south of the Soviet border, heavy fighting broke out over the weekend between leftist guerrillas and revolutionary guards in the city of Gonbad-e-Kavus, leaving 22 dead and more than 100 wounded, an Iranian newspaper and Tehran radio reported.

Two reporters working for NBC and CBS were deported from Iran after being detained by authorities in Tehran, the networks said.

Monday briefing

Teachers accept contract

CHICAGO (UPI) — Teachers voted overwhelmingly Sunday to accept a contract reached in marathon negotiations with the city and return to work today, ending a two-week strike in the nation's third largest school district.

Board of Education officials in the nearly bankrupt system are expected to approve the contract Wednesday.

Teachers union representatives and the board agreed on a tentative contract Sunday after nearly 15 hours of negotiations in City Hall. Union members voted Sunday night by a margin of 4,645 to 213 to return to the classrooms.

In the city's other labor dilemma, the Fire Fighters Union and city officials agreed to mediation to settle that month-long dispute in which firemen have threatened to strike unless they are granted a written contract.

Guardsmen deliver meals

SANTA FE, N.M. (UPI) — Wary National Guardsmen Sunday distributed meals to the survivors of rioting at the New Mexico Penitentiary in which 33 inmates were killed.

"At first, they (the troops) viewed all of the prisoners as potential killers because you don't know which 50 or 100 are the ones who did the killing," said Col. Bill Fields of Santa Fe.

Each meal, prepared in field kitchens and a makeshift kitchen in the prison warehouse, takes about three hours to distribute, Fields said, and then it is nearly time for the next one.

Quints doing fine

CHICAGO (UPI) — Premature quintuplets born to a 27-year-old woman who used a fertility drug were assisted by breathing aids Sunday and listed in stable condition at Northwestern Memorial Hospital.

The four boys and one girl were delivered by Patricia Mueller, Chicago, nine weeks prematurely by Caesarian section. Their breathing was being assisted by inhalators in a special care nursery, hospital officials said.

Japan takes U.S. grain

TOKYO (UPI) — Japan has decided to import more than 1 million tons of U.S. grain originally earmarked for the Soviet Union to support U.S. economic sanctions against Moscow, a Japanese newspaper reported Sunday.

The newspaper, Sankei Shimbun, quoting government sources said details are being discussed among officials of foreign, finance and agriculture, forestry and fishery ministries.

Runaway engine wrecked

SCRINIC, Wash. (UPI) — A Burlington Northern locomotive broke loose from an 87-car freight train in the Cascade Tunnel Sunday and rolled out of control for about 10 miles before plunging off the tracks just 15 feet short of a highway.

Three men — an engineer, student engineer and brakeman — jumped off the runaway locomotive while it was still in the tunnel and escaped serious injury, a Burlington Northern spokesman said.

The speeding engine traveled about a mile and a half beyond the mouth of the tunnel before hitting a curve and jumping off the rails, causing extensive damage to the locomotive.

Avalanche claims 5 lives

SIRDAL, Norway (UPI) — Five students whose skiing party was struck by an avalanche in southern Norway were rescued Sunday, but police said five other group members were missing.

The avalanche hit the group of 12 Norwegian students early Sunday. Two people escaped and notified police of the accident.

Vietnamese attack news

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Vietnamese soldiers in Cambodia are apparently preparing an offensive to wipe out the remaining resistance of Khmer Rouge and Khmer Serei rebels, a Catholic Relief Services official said Sunday.

The Rev. Robert Paskey, just back from three months of working in refugee camps on the Thailand-Cambodia border, said he believes the Vietnamese offensive could drive as 250,000 more refugees over the border into the camps.

He said he had returned to the United States in an effort to raise $5 million for Catholic Relief Services work in the border camps. In addition, he said CRS is also negotiating with the Cambodian communist government in Phnom Penh to begin work inside Cambodia.

Oil prices increased

NICOSIA, Cyprus (UPI) — Algeria and Nigeria, among the biggest suppliers of oil to the United States, have increased their prices $4.21 a barrel effective Feb. 4, the authoritative Middle East Economic Survey said Sunday.

The oil publication said the increase brings the official price of their top crude oils to $34.21 per barrel, roughly in line with Libya's price of $34.72, which went into effect Jan. 1.

Hospital being vacated

SAN LEANDRO, Calif. (UPI) — Buildings in the Fairmont Hospital complex that straddle the track of the Hayward Fault being faulted during a major shaker are being vacated, officials said Sunday.

Nine of the buildings in the complex are situated over a trace of the rupture line and a structural engineer's report lists 15 buildings that would be seriously damaged or collapse in case the fault ruptured, officials said.

Afghans vent feelings

Soviet control tightens

By United Press International
 Resistance by Afghan rebels against the Soviet-backed regime in Afghanistan has crumbled in all but the northeast part of the country, a prominent Indian journalist reported Sunday.

Kuldip Nayyar, a senior correspondent for the Indian Express Daily newspaper who reported from the Afghan capital of Kabul, said the Soviet army is in complete control except in Badakhshan and Baghlan provinces near the Chinese frontier and Kunar province bordering Pakistan.

In these northeast provinces, thousands of outnumbered Soviet troops "have been pinned down" by Afghan rebels, Nayyar said without elaboration.

The area is known for its rugged terrain where roads twist around blind corners, perfect spots for ambushes.

Paktya, Paktika and Nangravar provinces, all bordering Pakistan, were "bristling" with insurgency a few weeks ago but are now quiet, said Nayyar.

"There is some activity from the mountain hideouts, in the dark, but it is feeble and unorganized. It is after a sniper's bullet against the steel tank, desperate men against a determined, well-trained army," said Nayyar.

There are an estimated 90,000 Soviet troops in Afghanistan.

"Kabul is normal. Once in a while a Russian tank goes through the streets, perhaps to register Soviet presence."

But he reported anti-Soviet feeling runs high. Unhappy Afghans call

Kremlin-installed strongman

Kremlin-installed strongman Babrak Karmal "Watan Farosh," (one who sells the country) and "shorvi," an Afghan word for a Russian, which is now a term of abuse, Nayyar said.

"Outside Kabul, the formations of Russian soldiers, their tanks, their armored vehicles and their guns are (dug in) deep and solid," he said.

In Sibi, Pakistan, President Mohammad Zia ul-Haq told 1,000 Pakistani policemen that Soviet troops stood within 8 miles of Pakistan's border, having reached the southeastern Afghan city of Spin Baldak.

He did not say how many troops were involved or when they took up the position, but it was his first mention of Soviet forces close to Pakistan's border.

Aeroflot jet lands against orders

WASHINGTON (UPI) — For the second time in a row, a Soviet Aeroflot jet defied instructions and landed at New York's Kennedy Airport.

Later Sunday, it flew on to Washington.

The State Department was "miffed" and meetings are planned today with Soviet Embassy officials to reach an understanding so there is no repetition, a department spokesman said.

The jetliner carried 145 passengers. Port Authority police in New York said 122 of them were Soviet athletes bound for the winter Olympics at Lake Placid, N.Y., but the State Department could not confirm that.

Federal Aviation Administration officials said the Ilyushin-62 jet landed at Kennedy at 1:15 p.m. MST and left for Dulles Airport at 2:35 p.m. It landed at Washington's Dulles International Airport at 3:43 p.m. and all 145 passengers proceeded through customs according to normal procedures, the FAA said.

"We believed we had an understanding with the Soviets that they were going to operate this week's schedule into Dulles. That understanding was reaffirmed with the Soviet Foreign Ministry as late as Friday," said State Department spokesman David Passage.

"We first found they were going into Kennedy after noon today on the basis of an amended flight plan filed out of Gander, Newfoundland, where they normally refuel," he said.

"When it was apparent they were going into Kennedy, we got in touch with the FAA to make sure there would be no problem in terms of flight safety and we asked the Port Authority to assist in getting the passengers and their baggage off the plane. That was a humanitarian gesture."

Today's weather

Mostly fair, cool, dry for several more days

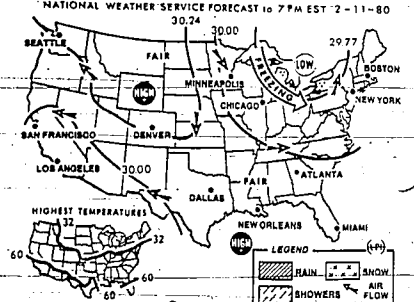

Twin Falls, Burley-Rupert, Jerome-Cooling areas — Mostly fair, through Tuesday with a few areas of night and morning fog and low clouds. Highs both days 35 to 45 degrees. Overnight lows 15 to 25.

Camas Prairie, Hailey, Wood River valley — Mostly fair, through Tuesday with patchy night and morning fog. Highs — both days — in the 30s. Overnight lows zero to 10 above.

Synopsis: Dry, cool and generally fair. That's the outlook for the Magic Valley and southern Idaho for most of the week. The reason is continuing high pressure off the Pacific Coast which is continuing to keep most storm systems north of Idaho. However, a weak storm system slid beneath the high pressure and produced some high clouds over southeastern Idaho. Patches of fog and low clouds were reported in many north Idaho valleys Sunday and in some southern Idaho areas as well. Twin Falls reported fog with visibility down to a mile. Temperatures Sunday remained generally cool, with Boise reporting the warmest in the state at 43 degrees. Stanley's 19 below zero was the coldest as most low marks were in the 20s although in the central mountains and southeastern highlands readings slipped to subzero levels. The extended forecast for Wednesday Friday calls for dry and cool with subnormal temperatures. Highs will be in the upper 20s to middle 30s with lows in the teens to middle 20s.

For northern sections of Utah and Nevada, variable cloudiness through Tuesday is forecast with a chance of a few snow showers in Utah. Temperatures will range from highs in the 30s or low 40s to lows in the teens. The warmest place in the nation Sunday was Hollywood, Fla., at 80 degrees. Saranac Lake, N.Y., was the coldest at 9 below zero.

Byrd advises Carter against registering, drafting women

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Senate Democratic leader Robert Byrd Sunday advised President Carter not to press Congress at this time to approve the historic and controversial registration of women for military service.

The West Virginia Democrat said the Senate is ready to vote funds to immediately resume registering men, but "divisive debate" over the issue of women might be misinterpreted by the Soviet Union.

"I think the president should proceed to reinstate registration for men and that the Congress should pass the appropriation," said Byrd.

"I would support registration for women. But I think from the practical standpoint, it would be best not to proceed with that immediately in the Congress."

Byrd was interviewed on NBC's "Meet the Press" program.

A national poll conducted for Newsweek, made public Sunday, found 50 percent of 500 persons surveyed believe women should be included in any draft. The copyrighted poll also showed 51 percent opposed to resumption of the draft now.

According to the poll, 61 percent of men surveyed favored drafting women, while 35 percent rejected the idea. Women opposed female conscription by a 58-39 margin.

Two-thirds of those polled said women should be assigned combat roles only if they volunteer. Twenty-one percent said women should not be eligible for combat under any circumstances.

Carter announced Friday he would ask Congress to quickly appropriate $20 million to crank up the now-dormant Selective Service System to register men and women aged 19 and

Jana Hirschmann-Levy, husband Richard Levy state views

20 this year, and 18-year-olds beginning next year.

Carter stressed he has no immediate plans for actually drafting young Americans into military service. But even the signing up of women for the first time has created a national debate.

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill said last week the House would not approve the registration of women, but Byrd said Sunday he could not predict what the vote would be in the Senate.

"What I am saying is that I don't think we need necessarily to go down that road at the moment and have that divisive debate that could send a signal to our possible adversaries that this country is not united" on registration, said Byrd.

Nixons relax at home of friend in Florida

KEY LARGO, Fla. (UPI) — Former President Richard M. Nixon and his wife Pat relaxed Sunday at the home of C.G. "Bebe" Rebozo, an old friend and former neighbor, on the first full day of their south Florida vacation.

Skies were gray with intermittent light rain and a blustery wind.

The Nixons arrived Saturday at Miami International Airport aboard a Pan American World Airways 747 from Los Angeles.

Without stopping for a word with waiting reporters or onlookers, they were whisked off to join Rebozo, a Key Biscayne banker.

Rebozo took them to his new home at Ocean Reef, a millionaires' hideaway at the north tip of Key Largo, some 55 miles south of Miami.

Nixon's former "Winter White House" on Key Biscayne has been sold twice since his resignation from the presidency and the structure has been torn down. All that remains of the complex is a helicopter pad in which the taxpayers invested $1 million.

Ocean Reef has some of the tightest private security arrangements in the nation. It is sometimes used by the Defense and State Departments to house foreign officials attending meetings at Homestead Air Force Base's secret conference center.

For its residents, Ocean Reef has a private yacht basin, light course, country club and guest suites.

Passengers aboard the plane that brought the Nixons said they remained in the upper deck lounge of the Boeing 747 throughout the flight. A flight attendant said the former president was "very quiet."

The Nixons are expected to fly to New York on Thursday to move into their new townhouse on Manhattan's Upper East Side. Nixon has sold his Casa Pacifica home at San Clemente, Calif.

Baker calls for special scam probe panel

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Senate Republican leader Howard Baker, saying Congress cannot "sit back and wait for justice to take its course," called Sunday for creation of a special panel to look into the "Arab scam" bribery scandal.

The allegations that lawmakers took bribes from under cover FBI agents are "as bad as anything that's been alleged against Congress since Teapot Dome," Baker said.

"There is a real danger Congress may lose the (public) esteem and respect it has left," he said on ABC's "Issues and Answers."

The Tennessee Republican called for the creation of select committees in both the House and Senate, or a special joint commission, to look into the charges.

He compared the panel's role to that of the Senate Watergate committee, on which he served.

The congressional inquiry should consider the validity of the charges, Baker said, and also address "the fundamental question — are we trying people on television?"

Reports of the "Arab scam" investigation were leaked to the press as the eight congressmen implicated in the bribery scheme were being told they were under investigation.

Outside medical aid disclosure ordered

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Department of Health, Education and Welfare said Sunday it would start requiring Medicaid recipients to disclose all outside medical benefits they receive.

Under new regulations, states will be allowed to collect other medical benefits available to Medicaid patients before spending state or federal funds, HEW said.

Under the new regulations, states will require Medicaid applicants or beneficiaries to declare any medical support or other payment plans under which they are covered.

The regulations were to be published in the Federal Register today and take effect in 90 days.

An agency spokesman said most of the millions of dollars in savings from the new plan were expected to come from health insurance benefits from Medicaid parents who provide financial support for children who are welfare recipients.

"In many Medicaid cases, we have found that a third party, such as private health insurer, automobile insurer, workmen's compensation or an absent parent was liable for the bill," said Leonard Schaefer, an official of the HEW's Health Care Financing Administration.

Brave citizens make Twin Falls proud

A number of Twin Falls residents risked body and soul in order to spoil three separate crimes last week.

In each case they put themselves in danger from armed or violent criminals, and in each case their actions led to the capture of the suspects.

The demonstrations of valor make Twin Falls proud. The city should publicly thank these citizens.

At the same time, the violence of the crimes comes as a shock and shows just what a resident or the cop on the street may encounter in Twin Falls these days.

Residents in one neighborhood came to the rescue of a city police officer who was attacked after a traffic accident Tuesday night.

Officer H.L. Brown had detained three men whose vehicle had crashed into a parked car on the 300 Block of Elm Street North. While attempting to keep them from leaving, the officer was jumped by one man.

They were on the ground and a citizen rushed over, pulled off a second man who was joining in and had to fight him. Other officers arrived and quelled the disturbance.

The three were arrested on various charges, including drunken driving, possession of marijuana, destruction of police equipment and resisting arrest.

In all the excitement, police did not learn who had helped them.

Early Thursday morning, Bob Hopkins, was robbed at his tavern, the Shuffle Inn. Two masked men carrying shotguns waited for him after closing time and made off with his cash.

Hopkins jumped into his car and pursued the vehicle of the robbers and two accomplices. They sped away from him, but Hopkins wrote down the license number and police traced one of them.

They were able to recover the money, arrest four persons and recover $2,000 in items stolen elsewhere.

Thursday evening on returning home, Mark Beams and his family surprised two men in their house, Beams and a neighbor chased them on foot as they fled.

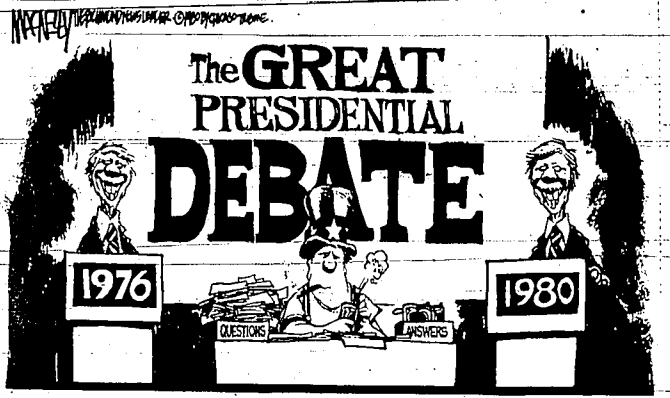

The burglars left their vehicle behind, and police took it away.

Later on, Beams was shot at when someone driving by his home fired through his living room window. This time he called the police.

The police spotted a suspect vehicle and were able to follow it through the aid of citizen's band radio operators around town. After overtaking the vehicle, police arrested two men and charged them with the burglary and the shooting.

The citizens who bravely helped catch nine criminals, recover more than $2,000 in stolen goods and cash and possibly prevent future crimes were far criminals, not medals.

But medals are what they deserve.

Remembering the draft

In dealing through Veteran's Administration documents over the weekend, I came across my armed forces separation papers.

Just about 10 years ago to the day Saturday Uncle Sam decided I could return to civilian life after a two-year tour of duty, including 11 months in Vietnam.

Ten years might seem like a lot of time, but today's renewed debate over whether to resume draft registration and include women for the first time makes it seem like only yesterday we were writing over the trait and the Vietnam war.

Already there have been marches and demonstrations and tag-teamings to protest President Carter's draft registration proposals, but nothing like it was in the late 60s and early 70s. The circumstances are different, of course, and not surprisingly, the much more support today for the draft and a beefed-up military because of the events in Iran and Afghanistan.

I understand full well the military needs men and women ages 19 and 20 today are going through registration comes and a draft follows.

In 1965 the most fearful part of the day was coming to the mailbox. That dreaded letter from your local draft board might be there. You knew it had to come sooner or later, particularly if you were registered in a small town.

Those of us in college at the time were given a 2S status, or full-time student deferment. As soon as a student left school, however, colleges notified local authorities and the draft board was super-efficient in tracking him down with a simple question: 'You're out of school and unless you appeal, you will become 1A and a top priority for induction.'

Along with reclassification came a wallet-sized card listing all the vital data and your classification. The law required the card be carried at all times. I still carry it, for sentimental reasons.

Formal classification was preceded by an order to report for physical and mental examinations. Every day hundreds of men were sent to various centers to have Army doctors do their thing. It reminded me of a giant food processing factory like an assembly line of human beings being certified, pooled, cut, tested and stamped. Most of the humans were deemed fit for military life.

If registration comes today, men and women won't have to go through being shipped off to a strange city and have be confronted by strange men and women who had short tempers and little patience. 'You! Get with the program! Move it! Move it! Next! Next!'

Carter's proposal would make registration quite simple compared to the old days. A form would be obtained at the Post Office, filled out and mailed in. I suppose Selective Service would issue some kind of notification and perhaps even a card, but nothing more would come of it unless draft machinery was put in motion.

I remember the marches, the draft-card burnings and debate over Vietnam in 1968. Ironically, one of my first assignments upon discharge from the Army in 1970 was to cover a march on a draft board. There, less than a hundred marchers started a fire on the draft board office steps feeding it with debris and draft cards. There was a lot of yelling and screaming — until someone threw either a real American flag or a replica in the fire.

Then, there was a deafening silence. I looked over at the police chief, who stood dressed in riot gear, armed crossed, barring the door to the offices. He was staring into the fire, seemingly paralyzed by the process. The look on his face mirrored the same agony on faces of men who attended memorial services in a chapel in Vietnam.

The war and the draft tore the nation apart. Now, the country is coming out of its era of self-imposed grief. There is a new sense of national defense and worry over the prospects of war.

The nation faces a full and prolonged debate over registration for the draft. It will be both interesting and painful to compare what happens from here on out with what happened only a decade ago.

Blue law revisited

Chicago Sun-Times (Field News Service)

CHICAGO — Joanne Christensen, 25, and Don McComb, 28, are "good friends."

In today's society, that can mean just about anything. For example, some "good friends" share the same bed. Some even have children together.

Other good friends, such as the ones I hang around with, simply play softball and belly up to the bar together.

In the case of Joanne and Don, they don't think it's anybody's business what kind of "good friends" they are. And I agree.

But for the record, they are willing to say that they live in the same house and that Joanne pays Don $24 a month rent for her room.

There's nothing unusual about this kind of arrangement. Hundreds of thousands of men and women live that way. The tax laws even encourage people to live together rather than marry.

And not only the young, but many old geezers, too. The Sun Belt retirement communities are filled with frisky grannies and gramps who are living in what used to be known as "sin."

To get back to Joanne and Don, until recently, both were cops on the suburban Glendale Heights Police Department. They met and became good friends after Joanne joined the department last year.

Recently, the police chief of Glendale Heights paid a visit to the houses they share in that western suburb of Chicago.

But Chief J.C. Sanford was not making a social call.

He stood in their living room and somberly told a visit to the houses they share in that western suburb of Chicago.

But Chief J.C. Sanford was not making a social call.

He stood in their living room and somberly told a visit to the houses they share in that western suburb of Chicago.

here's what that one says:

"Fornication: Any person who cohabits or has sexual intercourse with another person, who spurs, commits, furthers or aids in the commission of fornication if the behavior is open and notorious."

Naturally, Joanne and Don were surprised. You don't expect a police officer to march into your living room and accuse you of fornicating in an "open and notorious" manner, whatever that means.

The chief went on to inform them that they had 15 days to mend their ways and report back to him.

After the chief marched out of their living room, they called their lawyer. He told them to remain calm and that nothing could be done to them without formal charges being filed and a hearing held.

So they went on doing their jobs and living in the same house.

After the 15 days passed, the chief called them to his office, read them their rights and asked them if they had corrected the situation. In other words, he wanted to know if they were still fornicating in an open and notorious manner.

Joanne and Don said "no comment," as their lawyer had advised them to do.

A couple of days later, Joanne was told that she was fired. Because she had been on the department less than a year, they didn't have to give her a hearing.

Don was told he would be suspended for five days for "insubordination." I guess he was guilty of insubordination because he wouldn't hold a conversation about fornication, which in Glendale Heights could be "quite a sensation of a revelation."

After Joanne told us about her firing, we called the chief, hoping he would tell us how he had gone about gathering evidence of open and notorious fornication.

I've always been fascinated by crime-detection techniques used in the pursuit of evildoers. Does one peep in a window to gather such evidence? If so, is a ladder used? Or is it better to climb a tree? And is it hard to peep in the shades or draw?

But the chief did not want to discuss how he went about gathering his evidence. He didn't even disclose whether he actually had solid evidence of sinful behavior, or just a dirty mind.

As far as Joanne is concerned, the fact that she and Don live in the same house isn't much evidence, since she admits to being there and paying the rent. And she says that as far as anybody's business is concerned, she sleeps in her bedroom and Don sleeps in his.

That explanation satisfies me. But, then, I wouldn't care if they slept in the same hammock. However, I am not the police chief and, therefore, do not have any responsibilities for snooping into somebody else's sleeping habits.

It's possible, though, that the chief does not understand the spirit of that law.

Back in the early 1960s, the law used to forbid any kind of adultery or fornication even if such was delightfully furtive and secretive.

So the more enlightened members of the Illinois Legislature decided the law was rather prudish, and they changed it so that the fornicating had to be done in an "open and notorious" manner in order to be a crime.

One of the men who wrote the present law was Amer Alkiva, now a U.S. Appellate Court judge.

At the time, I asked Alkiva what he would consider to be "open and notorious." He thought about that for a few minutes and said:

"It would have to be done on the steps of the Art Institute downtown in Chicago at high noon."

Whether Joanne and Don were that notorious, the police chief won't say. But Joanne and Don say they sure as hell weren't.

A hearing on Don's suspension will be held next week, and it's assumed that the chief will present his evidence then.

Maybe he'll even reveal whether he used a ladder or climbed a tree.

And if he fell on his head.

Test tube babies

Editor, Times-News:

I recently noticed a Times-News editorial (Jan 21) about in-vitro fertilization, wherein anti-abortion groups were described as "medieval minds who believe they have a patent on truth."

The editorial went on to explain innocently that "in vitro" conception is a tool that allows otherwise unfortunate couples the chance to have children.

In reality, the help given to infertile couples is only a facade to cover the real purpose of experimenting with human life.

Indeed, Dr. Steptoe of Louise Brown fame said at "Meet the Press" that "Once you learn how fertilization is achieved, you can learn how to upset it."

Dr. Steptoe testified that there were at least 100 implantation attempts before the Brown success, which, of course, means the destruction of like number of human embryos.

Bill Monroe, moderator of "Meet the Press," said: "They — the embryos — are allowed to die; they're intentionally allowed to die." Steptoe replied: "They are deliberately fixed on a slide and examined."

At this point, I will admit to the Times-News that I don't have a "patent on truth," and I cannot prove that human life begins at conception; but I can likewise assume that the Times-News does not have a patent on truth, and cannot prove that life does not begin at conception.

If my "opinion" is wrong, at least I'm not condoning the murder of the most innocent on a mass scale. I might remind the Times-News editorial writer that he did not come from a fertilized egg; at one time as a new-born baby, an embryo requires only time and nourishment to become an adult.

Please consider some of the following aspects of in-vitro experimentation.

Last summer, Lesbian leaders announced a call for 500,000 test-tube babies to be delivered by Lesbian mothers over the next four years. The Lesbian leaders said, "Sperm banks, of course, were provided by members of various gay male organizations." The leaders went on to say, "we are not trying to put up a master race of women; we are merely trying to win a few elections."

Dr. Steptoe has admitted that he has placed human embryos in rabbit oviducts to find a conducive environment to embryo development.

It's also been reported that researchers at the University of Hawaii are currently mixing human sperm with hamster eggs. Biochemist B. Jane Rogers says that this is all right because the fertilized eggs die after only one cell division.

Dr. Robert Edwards (also of Louise Brown fame) wrote in a scientific article that gene splicing and other techniques of genetic engineering open the way to further work on the human embryo in the laboratory.

The following testimony about Dr. Edwards was given at H.E.W. Ethics Advisory Board hearings: "I have personally spoken to Edwards, and he wasn't troubled at all by disposing of them (human embryos) at any point along the line... I asked him how he gets his chromosomes from an embryo for these things to examine them. He asked, 'Do you really want to know?'" I said I did, and he said, "I squish them."

Dr. Landrum B. Shettles, formerly of the Columbia-Presbyterian Medical Center, claimed success in reaching the first stages in cloning a human being. He says that three ova impregnated by sperm nuclei grew into multi-celled blastocysts before he destroyed them after three days.

Republicans dare to hope for a rebirth

Washington Post Company

EASTON, Md. — Republicans are traditionalists, so to speak. At the third annual policy conference for Republican officeholders, settled into past patterns.

Participants gathered around tables named for Republican heroes as a speaker — I gravitated to the Foster Dulles table. I can't think why and came to order, sort of.

Mr. Chairman, the Charles McNary table rises or to point of information, who was Charles McNary? (He was Republican leader of the Senate and Wendell Wilkie's running mate in 1940. So what? So he was from Oregon, as is Sen. Bob Packwood, founder and Boss Tweed of Tidewater conferences.)

Last year, Tidewater II declared that "The Carter administration has been consistently insensitive to the aggressiveness of the Soviet Union and its clients, and inaccurate in forecasting Soviet behavior." Tidewater II urged that consternation of SALT II be linked to Soviet behavior.

Today, SALT II is twisting slowly in the wind, hung by linkage.

Last weekend, while Republicans here were feeling vindicated, the Carter administration was turning an old boxer into yet another foreign policy embarrassment. Muhammad Ali was in Africa as the most novel presidential emissary since Ramsey Clark.

All was an inspired choice as successor to Andrew Young as carrier of Carterism to the Third World. Ploven was in Africa for the purpose of soliciting support for a boycott of the Olympics. All was floored when some African journalists told him that the Russians are friends of African "liberation" movements. Said The Greatest: "They didn't tell me in America that Russia supports these countries. Maybe I'm being very wrong." He added: "I'm not here to promote no role for America." Those last words suggest that Ali does understand the drift of Carter's U.S. foreign policy.

Evelyn Waugh should be living at this hour. The author of "Black Mischief" would do justice to the liberal administration that sent a black entertainer to deal with black nations.

Meanwhile, back in Washington, the Secretary of State was saying that another of the President's live-wire emissaries, Clark Clifford, had got the President's "doctrine" bollaxed up when Clifford said in India that — a Soviet move, against the Persian gulf would mean war. The Secretary of State thus made it clear that Clifford was too clear, or that the Carter Doctrine is unclear.

But Tidewaterites could not keep their minds on all the entertaining negotiations the administration was conducting with itself and with its various scandals. A new congressional scandal seems to be fermenting. Tidewaterites kept sniffing up lips because most of the names mentioned were of Democrats.

Tidewater III jumped on Carter's budget for managing, simultaneously, a significant deficit and the highest level of tax revenues as a percent of GNP since World War II. Tidewater III noted, with the merry sorrow of a party out of power, that under Carter inflation has soared 300 percent, unemployment is rising, productivity is declining, take-home pay is at the lowest level since 1964, and family savings have never been lower.

In 1976 Carter said: "The Republicans have become six percenters on inflation. They ask us to accept that rate to think of 6 percent as being a little bit worse."

Actually, Carter, a 13 percenter, was wrong. The Republican rate in 1976 was just 4.8 percent. But on one point he was more right than he knew: We certainly shouldn't think of 6 percent as normal.

In 1976 Carter criticized Republicans for deficits averaging $24 billion a year. His average will be at least $23 billion.

In 1976 Carter charged Republicans with "the highest interest rates since the Civil War," and was especially angry about home mortgage rates being 9 percent. Last month the average new-home rate was 11.65 percent. The prime interest rate has more than doubled under Carter to 15.14.

In 1976 Carter said that Republican policies were "disastrous" because industrial workers had suffered a decline in real purchasing power. Under Carter, the decline has been twice as fast.

Republican hopes rest even more on the Democrats' economic performance than on their foreign policy performance. Those who will be the youngsters' voters this November were about a year old when John Kennedy was assassinated. Forty percent of the electorate will be under 35. They will be for or at least will wish they could afford to be. at the home-buying, family-forming stage. Economic anxieties could turn the postwar "baby boom" into a Republican rebirth.

Connally may be next to fade out

By IRA R. ALLEN

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The recent news that John Connally, avowed in campaign contributions, had to take a loan to buy television time did not in itself signify a serious problem in his presidential campaign.

Neither did the departure of two top aides and the reassignment of a third. Nor did his failure to win a single delegate in Arkansas a week ago.

But, taken together, the episodes point to Connally as the first likely casualty in what is now a four-man race for the GOP presidential nomination.

With less than a month to go before what is expected to be a free-for-all in the March 8 South Carolina primary, Connally is struggling in the face of President Carter's effective use of the incumbency, to maintain his "leadership" theme and image as a tough foreign policy innovator.

More important, his long planned strategy of isolating and then eliminating Ronald Reagan has been demolished by the rise of George Bush to potential dominance in the field.

The former Democratic governor of Texas and treasury secretary under Richard Nixon began his assault early in 1979 loaded with campaign money — now more than $10 million — armed with a crowd-pleasing rhetorical arsenal and gifted with the charisma of a 6-foot-2, silver-haired, blunt-talking cowboy who took foreign policy advice from Henry Kissinger.

His publicity wasn't bad either, being escorted into one town by roller skating teen-age girls, riding a white horse into a Puerto Rican village and staging a 40-hour bitz marathon across Iowa to show his physical stamina.

But nothing produced votes. He was stung after budgeting $300,000 in the meaningless November Florida GOP straw vote and finishing a distant second to Reagan, finishing fourth in Iowa and getting shut out in Arkansas after taking most of the state party leaders to a resort for the weekend to be with them.

In the meantime, Connally's finance director quit in a dispute over his refusal to accept federal matching funds; the issues director — who came up with the candidate's well-publicized Middle East policy — was fired; and the campaign manager was reassigned while a business associate was brought in to cut spending.

After gearring his strategy toward a head-to-head run against Reagan in the California's South Carolina stronghold, Connally now is running third behind Bush and figuring on coming in fourth in Florida three days later. There are also reports, denied by his campaign, that solid support of the state party machinery for the critical March 18 Illinois primary is starting to desert him.

And a recent national poll showed President Carter and every major GOP candidate beating a presumably weak Sen. Edward Kennedy in trial heats — all except Connally.

The most damaging signal, however, is Connally's own diminished expectation of success in South Carolina, where he once hoped to either topple Reagan or come in a strong second.

Now his managers are hoping to keep Reagan below 40 percent and to win just six of the state's 25 delegates.

McHenry starts swing through Middle East

KUWAIT (UPI) — U.N. Ambassador Donald McHenry arrived in the Mideast Sunday for a seven-nation swing.

He promptly took a swing at nations involved in "foreign intervention" — an obvious allusion to the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan.

The 42-year-old U.S. ambassador told reporters that several matters he intended to discuss with Kuwaiti leaders were closely linked with the Middle East and southeast Asia, and U.N. responsibilities in the area.

He did not mention the Soviet Union by name.

The Soviet invasion of Afghanistan and the Islamic revolution in Iran and their possible impact upon the Middle East were among the topics certain to come up during McHenry's trip through Kuwait, Saudi Arabia, Egypt, Lebanon, Jordan, Israel and Tunisia.

Proxmire flays 'biased' Justice Department

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. William Proxmire said Sunday the Justice Department is "overwhelmingly biased" and cannot properly investigate whether Treasury Secretary C. William Miller lied to Congress about foreign payoffs by his former company.

Proxmire urged the Justice Department Friday to appoint an independent special prosecutor to investigate Miller's testimony during 1978 confirmation hearings before the Senate Banking Committee. Attorney General Benjamin Civiletti has said he had found no grounds for appointment of a special prosecutor.

The senator told interviewers on CBS' "Face the Nation" program Sunday that the committee now knows of 12 cases of bribes paid by Textron Inc., which Miller formerly chaired, "and in every single case Mr. Miller denied that he knew about those bribes."

"Whether he knew about them or not is what we have to determine," he said, "and I think an independent special prosecutor is the only way to do it because I think the Justice Department is biased; overwhelmingly biased."

"They have a massive conflict of interest," said Proxmire. "It's like having your own mother try you." The SEC, in a lawsuit filed Jan. 31 as part of a consent decree with Textron, alleged that Miller gave "erroneous" and "misleading" information to stockholders about $3.4 billion in overseas payments by the corporation.

Miller testified during Senate hearings to confirm his appointments as Federal Reserve Board chairman and Treasury secretary that the company, which he headed, had not made any such payments. He said last week that he had no knowledge of the payments.

REP. FRANK THOMPSON ... union favorite

Thompson receives support

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Rep. Frank Thompson Jr., one of eight members of Congress implicated in the "Arab scam" bribery scandal, got two standing ovations and pledges of support Sunday when he addressed a government workers union.

The audience of about 250 at a political-legislative conference of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees stood and applauded as the New Jersey Democrat entered and left the room. Several persons whistled and shouted their support.

Following Thompson's speech, AFSCME president Jerry Wurf predicted the 12-term congressman will be re-elected this fall "with the help of this union and I'm sure all the other unions of New Jersey."

The head of the 1 million-member union praised the congressman as "the one voice of concern to whom all working people owe a debt."

Thompson made only veiled references in his speech to media reports that he was among members of Congress investigated by the FBI in the "Arab scam" — in which FBI agents posed as bribepaying representatives of a wealthy Arab.

He thanked AFSCME members for the "tremendous outpouring of support in the past week" since the scandal began.

"I am absolutely determined to continue the business at hand," he said.

Questioned afterward, Thompson said: "I have seen no charges. I know no more about it than anyone who sees the newspapers or TV."

There have been allegations that the "Arab scam" constituted entrapment of the lawmakers, but Thompson rejected a proposal to protect members of Congress from such undercover operations.

"There should be no immunity for congressmen," he said. "They're citizens like anybody else."

At one point in his speech to AFSCME members, Thompson said he was "proud to be associated with the union movement."

Carter landslide

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (UPI) — Nearly 20,000 Democrats elected delegate slates supporting President Carter Sunday, while about 1,000 showed up to vote for slates pledged to Sen. Edward Kennedy.

"If we have this kind of turnout in the March 16 primary, Carter is in for a landslide," predicted Baltazar Corrada del Rio, Puerto Rico's resident commissioner in Washington.

GROWING UP
 Old-time fans of Spanky and "The Little Rascals" never dreamed the kid they loved as "Buckwheat" would play such a role — but even little rascals grow up, and so did Lloyd Scott. After all these years, Scott is surfacing on the screen again — in a movie called "The Exterminator." The New York Interstar Corporation flick stars Robert Ginty as a not-very-gentle crime fighter. Scott plays a street musician. No funny jokes this time.

ROAST REINER
 Everybody knows what a "roast" is. The New York Friars Club conducts them all the time — lampooning this or that celebrity in merciless honor of achievement — but nobody's ever turned one into a play before. Now it's happened. "The Roast," which examines one night in the lives of eight famous comedians, opens on Broadway this spring — with Rob Reiner starring as host. It's Reiner's Broadway debut, and for the first time he'll be directed on stage by his dad, Carl Reiner.

OATER UPDATE
 Time was when the Hollywood standard horse opera scenario involved cowboys vs. sheepherders or cowboys vs. sadhuslers. In "Roughnecks," it will be cowboys vs. toolpushers on a drilling crew trying to sink the deepest geothermal energy tap in history. Timothy Scott and Cathy Lee Crosby star in the MetroMedia

Florist attempts to aid young love

DENVER (UPI) — Florist John Hackett feels the price of roses this Valentine's Day is making young love a fiscal impossibility.

He wants to do something about it. Hackett said he was shocked to see growers boost rose prices to $30- and $60-a-dozen last week in preparation for the Valentine's Day rush.

"Where is this inflation going to stop? We are pricing young people out of everything else and now we price them out of expressing love in the most tender of ways," Hackett roared.

The charge was up considerably from last year's $30 a dozen, Hackett said, and he expects the price to drop after Valentine's Day, the busiest holiday for florists with roses drawing the biggest demand.

"I don't have anything against the rose growers the rest of the season," Hackett said. "But they apparently figure that this is one day of the year they can really put it to the people."

In protest, Hackett said he has ordered about a fourth of the roses he could sell and he has complained to wholesalers.

He also is urging customers to buy just one rose with a bunch of white carnations.

"I know I could push 2,000 roses for Valentine's, but I'm only ordering 300. I'm just doing that for those people who demand them," Hackett said. "I don't care if I sell a rose."

"Anyone who would pay that has either got to be a damn fool or a jackass," Hackett said.

"But then, love sometimes has that effect."

Statuettes recovered

NEW YORK (UPI) — A pair of $100,000 Degas bronze statuettes, reported lost by Metropolitan Museum of Art officials, have been found in a museum storeroom.

The statuettes, part of a set of 72 cast shortly after the death of French artist Edgar Degas, were reported missing Friday night.

A museum spokesman said Saturday, "They weren't the storeroom where they were supposed to be. We looked in another storage area, and there they were."

The sculptures were to be installed in the Meyer Galleries of 19th century European art, scheduled to open in late March.

Officials said an alarm system on the doors of a temporary storage area failed for about an hour on a bad that afternoon. Although an inventory was taken when the alarm malfunction was discovered, officials said curators searching for the Degas statuettes Friday discovered that the count had been inaccurate.

The missing pieces are "Fourth Position Front, On the Left Leg," which is 16 inches high, and the foot-high "Dancer" (tubbing) "Her Knee."

The museum officials said the statuettes, which are marked with casting numbers, are too recognizable to be sold. The Metropolitan's Degas sculpture collection is "one of only a few virtually complete sets," a spokesman said.

Peking's best street sweepers honored at gala banquet

PEKING (UPI) — On a daily basis, they might not get much respect, but the best of Peking's street sweepers, garbage collectors and latrine cleaners were honored at a gala banquet Sunday featuring a performance by the city opera.

"You voluntarily take on the dirtiest work so that millions of others can enjoy a clean environment," Peking Deputy Mayor Bai Jiefu, the master of ceremonies,

"All work is worthy of pride," Bai told the 107 workers chosen on the basis of their seniority and outstanding records to attend the dinner.

The Xinhua news agency said Bai urged the public to show "greater respect" for the city's 14,000 street cleaners and to cooperate with them in making the Chinese capital cleaner.

Executive wounded

MILAN (Italy, UPI) — Urban guerrillas posing as church workers shot a business executive in the legs Sunday in Italy's latest incident of terrorist violence.

Shortly after the attack, an anonymous telephone caller told the Italian news agency ANSA it was carried out by the Fighting Communist-Attack Squads urban guerrilla group.

Police said a young man and woman posing as door-to-door sellers of the Roman Catholic weekly magazine Famiglia Cristiana knocked on the door of Mario Miraglia's seventh floor apartment and when he opened it shot him in the legs.

A Tribute To Our Boy Scouts

by JACK WARBERG

When Lord Baden-Powell, the Englishman, conceived the idea of the Boy Scouts and, later, our Own American Boy Scouts, he furthered and promoted the idea here, neither, we suspect, ever dreamed "what world-wide fountains-of-Youth-he was putting in action! Today the Boy Scouts are the flavor of young man-hood in every quarter of the globe. Their deeds are legion. Their clean, manly character shines forth from their scrubbed faces and the trim uniforms they wear. How very proud we fathers and mothers of Boy Scouts should be of their merit badges as a symbol of sincerity, eagerness to serve and pride in their organization. God bless them all. They'll be leaders tomorrow!

Valentine day comes full circle

By BYRON FARWELL
Special to The Washington Post
A man I know always explains Easter to his children. "Easter," he says solemnly, "is a commemoration of the resurrection of Christ."

He describes Christ's torture, tells of his entombment in a cave and relates the astonishment of the people when the great stone is rolled back from the door of the cave to reveal its emptiness.

But because my friend is a thorough and honest man, he adds: "And then there is this rabbit that lays chocolate eggs."

Laws reminded of this when I read of the Jewish teacher's aide who tossed the school Christmas tree into a parking lot to protest the celebration of the birth of Christ in public schools, and of the Christian teacher who protested the observance of Halloween in schools because it is a pagan custom used to atheistic evil.

Of course, Christmas trees have no more to do with the birth of Christ than egg-laying rabbits with the resurrection or trick-or-treat and funny masks with dead souls. All are indeed pagan customs, and, in truth, the pagans knew how to stage religious festivals better than Christians, Jews or Hare Krishnas.

Let her or she who has never cast rice at newlyweds in a churchyard contrive the first sneer.

We have not, of course, taken over pagan customs lock, stock and mistletoe. All have undergone a sea change with shifts in geography and the passing of time.

Valentine's Day commemorates an obscure saint about whom almost nothing is known. St. Valentine may have been a misogynist and a misogynist, but he has become by popular acclaim a pagan god of love.

Before any anti-salt cut organizes a Valentine-card-burning media event in a high-school auditorium, let me offer some background.

Once upon a time, before there were Christians or saints, the Romans celebrated Lupercalia as a religious festival. Although the Greeks probably had the same or similar festivities earlier, it was the Romans who perfected it, and it must be admitted, no one can surpass the Romans at staging dramatic events.

The Roman Lupercalia involved the sacrifice of goats and a dog. Young men, clad in goat skins, smeared themselves with the blood of the unfortunate beasts and then dashed about brandishing goat thongs. All this was done in the cause of fertility.

As the young men raced around the Palatine, virgins (some naked, it is said—deliberately placed themselves in their path in order to get a cut or two from the goat thongs—to help them conceive.

Lupercalia was, naturally, a popular festival—for who would not endure a bit of S & M for a good cause, and a religious one too? So popular was it that it endured well into the Christian era and was not suppressed until A.D. 494.

It was then replaced by St. Valentine's Day. So now the pleasure of young men in beating naked girls and the pleasure of the girls in getting thwacked by bloody young men have been replaced by the quieter pleasure of exchanging Valentine cards.

In a way the ceremony has come full circle, for many a Valentine card has proven the first step toward the making of a fertile woman pregnant.

Dear Abby

Poem about flowers has many authors

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
The Chicago Tribune
N.Y. News Syndicate, Inc.

DEAR READERS: Recently I published a poem sent to me by the participants of the Long Beach, Calif., Senior Day Center.

Its message, I thought, was worthy of sharing with my readers. The essence, and closing lines, are: "Just give me one flower today, pink or white or red. I'd rather have one blossom now, than a truckload when I'm dead."

The author was unknown, and I asked if any of my readers knew who had written it.

Are you ready for a random sample of my mail today?

DEAR ABBY: I read the poem in the Macon Telegraph News, and recognized it immediately as the poem written by a prominent Macon, Ga., dentist. He was R. Holmes Mason, now deceased 43 years. Dr. Mason was dedicated to his family, church and profession.

E. H. MAISON, GA.
DEAR ABBY: The author of the poem you published in the Los Angeles Times was written by my brother, Herman B. Stokes, now deceased. The name of the poem is "A Flower" and was set to music by Hallmark about 10 years ago. I was deeply touched when I read it.

THELMA STOKES, IN L.A., CALIF.

DEAR ABBY: I read in the Tulsa Tribune the poem whose real title is "A Flower for the Living." It was written many years ago by my mother, Letta Snyder, who lives in Okmulgee, Okla. She sent it to her sister, Mrs. Myrtle Copeck who lives in Ramon, Calif. Myrtle had copies made and sent it to her friends. Since then we have seen it published several times, always with "author Unknown." My mother is 78, has had many strokes and is confined to a wheelchair. She never misses your column. Her eyes are bad, so she has someone read it to her.

AUTHOR'S PROUD DAUGHTER
TULSA, OKLA.

DEAR ABBY: My husband noticed the poem in your column in the State Paper of Columbia, S. C. The version you printed is slightly different than the original, titled: "Kindness Through Life." It was written by Austin K. Snyder. According to my husband, Snyder was a professor at the U.S. Naval Academy, and this poem appeared in "Shipmate," a publication of the U.S. Naval Academy Alumni Association, in Sept., 1977.

VIRGINIA McMILLAN;
MYRTLE BEACH, S. C.

DEAR ABBY: You can nullify finding for the author of that poem printed in the Sioux City Journal. The correct title is "I'd Rather," and it was written by William Nek Gikas. He was a 2nd Degree Mason who lived in Everett, Wash. Dad, who is now 92, is a Mason and Shriner. He subscribed to the lodge publications, and mother was always cutting out poems and putting them in her scrapbook. That poem has been in Mother's scrapbook for years.

MRS. ARTHUR L. SCHMIDT,
SIOUX CITY, IOWA

DEAR ABBY: In the mid-40's I cut out the poem you ran in the Pocatello Idaho Tribune. The title is "The Stained Glass Window." And it was penned by Anna Mae Armstead, a local lady.

W. A. OGLE;
POCATELLO, IDAHO

DEAR ABBY: The poem you printed has been around for as long as I can remember and I am in my 60s. It was written by none other than the beloved, homespun, philosopher-poet, Edgar Guest. I am sure I saw it in a published collection of Edgar Guest's poems. I don't have the book anymore because I foolishly let someone borrow it, and I can't for the life of me remember who.

C. G. K., CHICAGO

DEAR ABBY: The poem you published was written by my mother, Mrs. Neta Thompson, in 1961. She called it "Lily's Roses." It was never copyrighted, but she did send copies to several of her friends, and the next thing we knew it was printed in a magazine with "author unknown."

under it. My mother died in 1966, and it always hurt me that my mother never got credit for her beautiful poem.

MRS. DORIS BRANSBY

DEAR ABBY: I am enclosing a postcard which I have had since 1930. On it is the poem you ran with "author unknown." The postcard was "designed" by four nobles of Medinah Temple (Shriners) who were called the Four-Horsemen, namely, Billy Jackson, Charley Kuhn, Charley Wackerhagen and Fred Raven.

MRS. HENRY A. SOLOMON,
SPRINGFIELD, ILL.

DEAR READERS: Are you confused? Well, so am I, and as if this weren't enough, my syndicate in New York advised me that they received a telephone call from a 91-year-old reader of the Dallas Times-Herald claiming that HE was the author of that poem and he wanted to know where in blazes Abby found it!

Address comments and questions to Abby, care of Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. For a personal reply, please enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Weddings

Ellery-Myers

JEROME - Robla Churmung Ellery of St. Helens, Ore., and Michael Lee-Myers of Jerome exchanged wedding vows Dec. 16.

Bishop R. Dume performed the ceremony at the LDS Church at Ontario, Ore.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R.D. Ellery of St. Helens, formerly of Ontario. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Lee Myers of Jerome.

The bride's gown, fashioned in white silk and chiffon, featured a Queen Anne neckline with lace and pearl trim and a hooped skirt, complemented by chapel length train. The three-tiered chapel length veil and blusher was caught into a pearl-encrusted Juliet cap.

Janel Bennett was matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Ginger Ellery, the bride's sister, and Lindsay Myers, the bridegroom's sister. Since Winegar was flower girl.

Dennis Myers served as his brother's best man. Ushers were Steve Allison, Keith Pittman and Mark Bennett, all cousins of the bridegroom. Greg Myers, the bridegroom's brother, was ringbearer.

A reception was held in the cultural hall of the church. Reception attendants were Vickie Winegar, Jean Price and Tina Heath.

Following a wedding trip to the Oregon coast, the bride's parents hosted an open house buffet at the LDS church at St. Helens. On Jan. 20, the bridegroom's parents hosted an open house in their honor at the American Legion Hall in Jerome.

The bride is a 1974 graduate of Ontario High School and attended Ricks College.

The bridegroom graduated from Jerome High School in 1974 and attended Denver Institute of Technology. He is employed by Janus Farms of Wendell.

The couple will make their home on a ranch south of Wendell.

Dr. Lamb

Doctor isn't too fond of grapefruit diets

Newspaper Enterprise Association

Dear Dr. Lamb:—What do you think of these so-called grapefruit diets? I've just started on one and been told that the acidic content of grapefruit will burn holes in your stomach. Is this true? Is it harmful to eat too many grapefruit in one day and seven days per week?

Dear Reader,

The harm is not in the grapefruit. Most normal people produce an appreciable amount of hydrochloric acid in the stomach. That amount of acid is so much more than any acid you get from grapefruit that the grapefruit isn't very important.

Now, if a person happens to have acid indigestion or ulcer problems, then he might need to go easy on grapefruit and other citrus fruits or might find that he would do better to avoid them entirely. Otherwise, I don't think you'll have a problem with them.

For this reason, I'm sending you The Health Letter number 47, "Weight Lossing Diet." It will provide you a balanced diet that you can follow. If you use this plan it will enable you to lose excess fat slowly. How fast you'll lose will really depend on how physically active you are as well. Other readers who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

And I'd like to caution you about overdoing it. The very fact you've started a fat diet suggests that you might. The safest way to lose weight is gradually. Many people think you can lose two pounds a week, but one pound a week unless they are very obese, in which case they need to be under a doctor's supervision for the weight loss program.

The key to successful dieting is learning proper nutrition and adjusting your habits so you'll get properly thereafter. Otherwise, you'll just go on one of the fat diets and lose a lot of water and perhaps some fat, then return to your usual eating habits and regain most everything you've lost.

Dear Dr. Lamb, While a friend of mine had carpal tunnel on someone turned the radio on full blast. Can it cause deafness or damage ear drums.

Dear Reader, Any noise that is sufficiently loud can cause ear damage. Sometimes if the noise exposure is of brief duration, the hearing will gradually return to normal. There is no way I can say what will happen in this individual case since I don't know how loud the noise was or what effects it had, but it certainly is the kind of thing that can cause permanent ear damage. For that matter, even exposure to loud rock bands and loud music on a persistent basis can lead to ear damage as well.

Orange Swirl Rolls

- 2 packages dry yeast
- 1/2 cup warm water
- 1/2 cup milk
- 1/2 cup sugar
- 1/2 cup margarine
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 4 1/2 cups flour
- 2 eggs
- 3 tablespoons butter
- 1 tablespoon orange juice
- 2 tablespoons orange rind
- 1/2 cup powdered sugar

Dissolve yeast in warm water. Scald milk then add sugar, margarine and salt. Cook. Add flour, eggs and yeast water. Mix well. Knead dough on floured bread board 5 minutes, turn in large greased bowl. Let rise until double in bulk. Roll out to 1/4 inch thick. Spread a mixture of the remaining ingredients on rolled dough save half of the mixture to spread on rolls after they are baked. Roll dough tight, pinch to seal seam. Slice and place in a large greased pan or cookie sheet. Let rise until double in size. Bake 25 minutes in 375 degree oven. Spoon the remainder of frosting on top as soon as they come from oven. Cool and remove from pan.

At Wit's End Dieters hate clever food names of Field Enterprises, Inc.

By ERMA BOMBECK

People on diets are not the same sweethearts people remember when they are pigging out.

Jolliness turns to irritability, shortness of temper, and a general falling apart. Little things get on their nerves, like discovering the answers to the crossword puzzle are printed upside down, the dog barking twice as much as an "Excuse me," and someone putting new toilet tissue on the spindle with the paper unrolling from "NDR" the roll.

If there's anything that ticks me off on a diet, it's recipes for diet foods with clever names. I'm an adult, for crying out loud. I can take it. Don't promise me a bowl of "popcorn before I go to bed each night. If the "popcorn" is nothing more than a bowl full of carrots, celery and radishes. I'm not stupid. I'm bound to find out and I'll hate you for it.

Do you know what all that cuteness does to dieters? It makes them suspicious and it makes them mean. I don't trust any food anymore with quotation marks around it. "Chocolate" eclairs for the dieter (Oh, yeah!)... Beef "Gravy" (Sure!)... Grow Thin "Pizza" (Ugh!)... Hollandaise "Surprise Sauce" (Ha ha ha!)

Don't give me your "Adam and Eve on a Raft." Tell me it's an imitation egg dropped in a dietary piece of bread with a hole in the middle resting in a saucer that has been sprayed by a substitute oil and has the appeal of lunch at the eye bank.

Spare me your "almost" lasagna. Give it to me straight. Dare to reveal that you've put a Lasagna pattern over perfect cucumbers and cut out something that resembles pasta, buried them with a sauce substitute, topped by a skim cheese with less calories than your fingernails.

You're looking at a woman who has gone down the road before that has been paved with promises and a lot of "Prune Dandy," "Pretend Pate," "Creative Ice Cream," "Virtuous Shortcake," "Confetti Consomme," and "Party Liver." I'm a pro. All I have to do is look at the bottom of the recipe and see those nine little letters UNLIMITED and I know I've been had.

A friend of mine who is also a dietician in the home of latter-day dieters scanned the menu in a restaurant the other night and against her judgment ordered, "Walstine Chocolate Kabobs." She had an entire kabob in her mouth before she realized it was liver.

She used to be such a sweetheart.

Study remedies deal with symptoms

The Washington Post

NEW YORK - Every night, Eric's parents try not to chew their nails as they 14-year-old son flops onto the rug in the den and begins his desultory reading of eighth-grade history and literature. Eric's grades are getting worse - so is his attitude toward school. Recently, when he came home at mid-term with two "D's," his mother finally asked what was wrong.

"Aw, it's boring," said Eric, in a refrain common to teen-agers. "Why do I need to know this junk anyway?"

Should Eric's parents accept his complaint at face value? Can they improve his schoolwork by asking teachers to make Eric's assignments more interesting or entertaining? Probably not, according to Marvin Cahn, head of a campus reading clinic in Garden City, N.Y., and author of a new book entitled "Helping Your Teen-Age Student" (E.P. Dutton, $10.95).

"The idea of making work more interesting just because a weak student says it's boring is often wrong, in and of itself," writes Cahn, who has evaluated "thousands" of "suburban teen-agers during 15 years as head of Adelphi University's reading clinic.

"The truth is that some things we learn are boring, and there is no way to get around that. . . . When children say that reading or schoolwork bores them, many of us assume that the youngster is reading competently and is bored with it. We try to change the activity to something more interesting. In other words, we deal with the symptom, not the cause."

Often, Cahn says, the student is bored because he can't really grasp the meaning of what he's reading. And the Adelphi professor goes on to describe, in clear, detailed steps, what parents can do to help a floundering son or daughter, even if they have no formal training as educators. He also deals with such issues as speed-reading, vocabulary-building and the writing of term papers under deadline pressure. Many of his suggested techniques have been presented before, by other researchers and writers. But Cahn brings them together. His guide is particularly well-timed, arriving at a time of increasing concern for teen-age school "dropouts." Among his suggestions:

Some students who don't understand the literal meaning of what they read can be helped through the use of a technique known as "structured comprehension." Using this system, a parent or other tutor reads a line from a textbook aloud while the student reads it silently.

Then the student is allowed to ask for explanations of any part of the sentence that he doesn't understand. Finally, the parent-tutor asks questions, designed to measure understanding of seemingly simple phrases that many poor readers find incomprehensible. For example, a typical textbook sentence might be: "The size of her population is a problem to Japan. In this case, the tutor would ask such questions as: When the sentence says "the size of her population," it means:

- a. How tall Japan's people are.
- b. How heavy Japan's people are.
- c. How many people Japan has.

A student can be taught to look for the main idea in a paragraph through a variety of techniques. For example, she might be asked to match headlines and stories clipped from a newspaper.

Organist Frank Renaud

Organist sets Valentine's concert here

TWIN FALLS - Frank Renaud, internationally known organist, will present a free concert at 7:30 p.m. Thursday at the Music Center.

According to Milo Price, store owner, Renaud's musical taste and style range from the Sunday morning church services and the Saturday afternoon ball game to the Saturday night dance.

His performance promises to provide a musical experience for organ enthusiasts as well as completely new sounds for the uninitiated. Price said: "A working professional at age 14, Renaud started by playing in a silent movie theatre at York, Pa. From there he went to the vaudeville pit band and by the time he was 21, had a radio program.

Television was the next step and he had his own weekly show for more than 10 years. In 1959, Renaud began touring the county presenting organ concerts and demonstrations. After concertizing in Europe in the early 1960's he was named organist for New York's Yankee Stadium.

In 1968, he joined Fred Waring as featured organist and has toured with the Waring show.

ROBERT MUGABE
...survives unharmed

Rhodesia bombing wounds 5

FORT VICTORIA, Rhodesia (UPI)—A massive, remote controlled bomb Sunday ripped through a motorcade carrying black Marxist leader Robert Mugabe.

However, he escaped unhurt from the "second" assassination attempt against him in less than a week.

Five people were injured, none of them seriously, in the explosion of an estimated 88 pounds of dynamite in the bomb. The motorcade was speeding along an access road to the Fort Victoria airport, 45 miles southeast of Salisbury, from a Mugabe rally when the bomb detonated.

An army officer at the scene said it was "one hell of an explosion."

The blast ripped open a crater in the road 10 feet deep and 30 feet long.

Mugabe's car passed over the device just before it exploded, and he was unhurt. The guerrilla leader, currently in an electoral campaign to lead Rhodesia in a black-majority independence, returned to the capital of Salisbury aboard a scheduled flight.

Police said they also found a British-made landmine which failed to go off in the crater. "If the mine had gone off, Mugabe would be dead," one police official said.

Mugabe was driving from a political rally where he threatened that his guerrilla forces would resume the war if Britain carried through on its threat to ban his political party in certain areas because of alleged rampant intimidation of voters by its armed men.

Hebron area settlements granted OK

HEBRON, Israeli-occupied West Bank (UPI)—In a move certain to spark Arab protests, the government Sunday bowed to pressures from radical Jewish settlers and opened the way for Jews to settle in Arab Hebron for the first time in 20 years.

The Cabinet, however, deferred a decision on when Jews may take up residence in the Arab-populated city of 70,000, about 20 miles south of Jerusalem and a center of anti-Israeli agitation that has been under Israeli rule since 1967.

To press their case for Jewish presence in Hebron, a few hundred rifle-toting settlers from the Jewish suburb of Kiryat Arba gathered for prayers at the ancient Tomb of the Patriarchs and then toured homes in Hebron's old Jewish quarter abandoned 50 years ago during Arab rioting in the city.

The Kiryat Arba settlers, and others from the ultranationalist Gush Emunim movement, held a memorial service in the Abraham Our Father synagogue in Hebron for Jesper Jehoshua Sloma, a 23-year-old seminary student shot dead in the city's marketplace last Thursday.

Tito's gains strike snag

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (UPI)—President Josip Broz Tito, 67, has developed kidney and digestive troubles, his doctors said Sunday, in the first hint of complications since his left leg was amputated three weeks ago.

A medical bulletin issued by a team of doctors at the clinic center in Ljubljana in northwestern Yugoslavia and carried by the national-news agency Tanjug was the first report on Tito since a bulletin Thursday said his "general health condition ... was further improved."

But the latest bulletin said, "In the course of the past days, the recovery of President Josip Broz Tito has been slowed down due to digestive disorders and certain difficulties in connection with the function of kidney."

"Necessary curative measures are being undertaken," the terse bulletin said without giving further details. "Government sources in Belgrade said Tito's condition was not alarming. They noted the medical report used the phrase "slowed down," and they said this was the first snag in Tito's speedy recovery from the Jan. 20 amputation of his left leg."

A senior Western diplomat said he had been told that Tito was to have left the clinic during the weekend.

Persian Gulf oil cutoff bad news for U.S.

By ROZLISTON
United Press International
What happens to Americans if Persian Gulf oil is cut off?

At the least it would be costly and uncomfortable. Under the worst circumstances it would leave us cold, dirty, hungry and broke in the grips of the worst depression the country has ever seen.

And it could happen.
The Persian Gulf area doesn't seem like it would be such a choice piece of real estate. Temperatures are often well into the 100s and the heat ranges from violently dry in Kuwait to miserably wet in Bahrain.

But 40 percent of the free world's oil comes from the countries along the long, sandy water-edge fringed by date-palms and bare dunes.

"And although the United States is less dependent on Persian Gulf oil than many other industrialized nations, in the event of a cutoff, international agreements call for the shortage to be spread evenly. Such international rationing would cut U.S. oil supplies nearly in half."

"The United States cannot afford to be strangled by the loss of Persian Gulf oil," said David Mizrahi, editor of the MidEast Report in New York. "Any cutoff of Middle East oil or just Saudi Arabian oil alone would mean war."

After the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan pushed Russian troops to within 300 miles of the Persian Gulf, President Carter warned the United States would use force, if necessary, to protect the area from attack by a hostile power.

About 19 million barrels a day flow through the Persian Gulf to the United States, Western Europe and Japan, U.S. Energy Department figures show.

Saudi Arabia — America's largest foreign oil supplier — Iran, Iraq, Kuwait, Qatar and the United Arab Emirates border the Persian Gulf and account for two-thirds of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries' production.

Industry specialists said the United States, which imports 2 million barrels a day from the Persian Gulf, normally would be in a better position to weather a stoppage than its allies because Americans have more leeway to conserve and U.S. wells provide 55 percent of domestic oil needs.

But analysts said U.S. participation in the International Energy Agency's emergency plan — under which 20 nations have agreed to share oil supplies during a major disruption — would subject the United States to a 40 percent oil shortage and severe economic hardship.

"The United States could withstand the loss of 2 million barrels a day of Persian Gulf oil, which amounts to about 10 percent of U.S. consumption, by rationing gasoline, lowering speed limits, setting thermostats below 65 degrees and burning more coal," an oil economist told UPI.

"But if the United States adhered to the IEA sharing mechanism, we'd be cut back from current consumption of 18.5 million barrels a day to about 11 million barrels and sharing a 40 percent crude shortage with everybody else," he said.

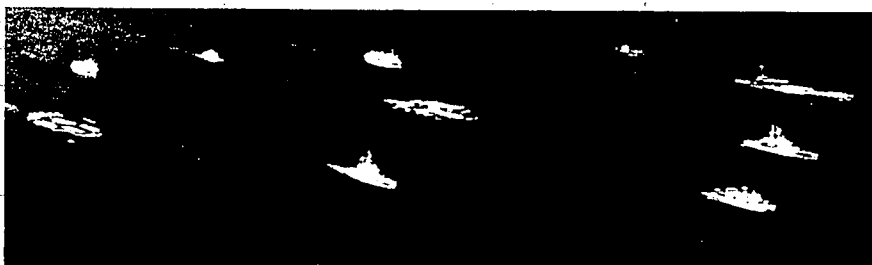

"The economic consequences would be a good deal worse than the worst depression the United States has ever had."

The 1973-74 Arab oil embargo, which lasted five months, reduced U.S. oil supplies by 15 percent, caused a severe recession in the United States and quadrupled world oil prices.

A disruption in the flow of Persian Gulf oil and its nightmarish impact on the industrialized world cannot be ruled out.

The Shah of Iran's forces had guarded the vulnerable Strait of Hormuz, which connects the Persian Gulf with the Indian Ocean, until the withdrawal of Iranian naval patrols last spring. Although 26 U.S. Navy units are stationed in the Indian Ocean, the 23-mile-wide Strait remains for all practical purposes unguarded.

Persian Gulf officials are holding

American naval task force sails Arabian Sea in response to heightened tension in Iran, Afghanistan talks with the United States on measures to secure the Strait of Hormuz against a Soviet takeover or a terrorist strike, sources said, but most Arab states are opposed to a U.S. presence in the Gulf.

The U.S. oil industry readily admits that it has no contingency plans to offset a Persian Gulf cutoff, which would leave little uncommitted crude up for grabs.

The federal government and the International Energy Agency would inherit immediate responsibility for handling the oil shock.

But several specialists expressed doubt that the United States would honor the IEA sharing agreement in the event of a Persian Gulf catastrophe.

"If only half of Persian Gulf oil were affected, there would be a fair chance of the IEA mechanism working and, hopefully, exerting quite a bit of discipline," said Warren Davis, chief economist of Gulf Oil Corp.

"But if the whole of Persian Gulf oil were lost, governments would panic. We'd be at economic war with each other bidding for crude from Africa and Indonesia and see an almost total breakdown in foreign commerce."

Even if the United States backed out of the IEA agreement, the loss of 2 million barrels a day of Persian Gulf oil imports would exact a heavy economic toll.

A recent Library of Congress Study estimated an oil cutback of 2 million barrels a day would reduce U.S. economic growth by 2.3 percent, add 2.5 percentage points to the inflation rate and raise pump prices by 90 cents a gallon over a two-year period.

A 40 percent oil shortage under the IEA sharing mechanism would translate into a loss of 7.4 million barrels a day and would put the U.S. economy on a wartime footing, the economists said.

Acute fuel shortages could mean an end to non-essential driving, the rationing of heating oil and electricity, setting thermostats at 50 degrees in winter, staggered working hours, widespread plant shutdowns, air pollution from dirty fuels and the scarcity of many products, they said.

"A lot of people would be riding bicycles, while others would have to chop wood or freeze to death," an oil executive said.

With the lifting of price controls on domestic crude in 1981, stiff competition among U.S. refiners for limited supplies would drive up both domestic and foreign oil prices to unthinkable levels.

"A prolonged Persian Gulf oil interruption would mean a worldwide depression of unprecedented proportions," an analyst said.

Since it would take years for the United States to substitute coal and nuclear power for the lost Persian Gulf oil, the only buffer would be the U.S. Strategic Petroleum Reserve.

The reserve is targeted to have 1 billion barrels — or 125 days of current U.S. oil imports at 8.2 million barrels a day — in storage by 1985. At present, however, the reserve contains only about 90 million barrels — equal to roughly 11 days of U.S. imports.

The current reserve could offset a 2 million barrel-a-day cutoff for 45 days. But a 40 percent drop in U.S. oil supplies of about 7.4 million barrels a day would drain the reserve in 12 days.

The U.S. government stopped buying crude for the reserve last year during the Iranian oil disruption but is expected to resume stockpiling soon.

"The Strategic Petroleum Reserve can provide a good cushion and political leverage for negotiating a crisis, but it's merely a way to get over a relatively short-term cutoff," said Kenneth Haley, an economist for Standard Oil Co. of California.

"The critical question is how long a Persian Gulf oil stoppage would last," Haley said. "If it were of short duration, the United States could ride out most of the missing oil by drawing down inventories."

Analysts said the United States now has about 15 days' worth of total supply in stock, including the strategic reserve. Japan, by comparison, has more than 100 days in inventories.

Second canal plan hinted

TOKYO (UPI) — The United States has expressed strong interest in building a second Panama Canal, a project that would be jointly promoted by the Panamanian government and Japan, a top Japanese industry official says.

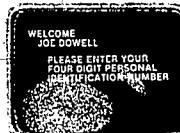

Nagano returned to Japan early this week from a week-long trip to Washington and Panama to seek cooperation for the construction of the new canal.

Japanese officials have said a second Panama canal would greatly reduce freight costs and travel time of merchant ships between South America and Southeast Asia.

At present, vessels above 50,000 tons have to detour around the Cape of Horn to transport commodities to Asian nations.

Helpful changes in tax laws

Field Enterprises, Inc.
(Part I in a series of 10)
ALERT: Several extremely helpful law changes made in the 1978 Revenue Act either show up for the first time on the '79 return you'll be filing this spring or become fully effective for the first time on this year's return. For the vast majority of you, these changes should result in your paying lower taxes for 1979 than you paid on the same amount of income in 1978. But some of you will pay more — and that includes YOU if you are single and had $3,000 or more of taxable income for 1979. (Explanation below.)

The personal exemptions for yourself, your spouse, dependents, for being 65 years of age or older, which were $750 each on your 1978 return have been hiked to $1,000 each on your '79 return.

This means that if you claim five exemptions on your return for 1979 and you did the same for 1978, your exemptions will total $5,000 for 1979. Instead of only the $3,750 you were allowed to claim for 1978.

But simultaneously, the lawmakers reduced other tax benefits. No longer permitted for 1979 is the 1978 general credit which was the larger of either (1) $15 per exemption, or (2) 2 percent of your taxable income up to $3,000.

While most of you will save more taxes because of the higher exemption, others of you will lose by elimination of that credit. For instance, say you are among the millions of single men or women who earned $3,000 or more of taxable income in 1979. You'll pay more in taxes just because of the elimination of this credit.

Reason: The loss of the $180 credit cannot possibly be offset by the savings due to the $250 higher exemption. Even if you are in the top bracket (which few of you are), you would get a tax saving of $175 from the larger $1,000 exemption against the loss of the $180 credit. If you are a typical single person in the 30 percent bracket, your tax will be $105 higher in 1979 (loss of $180 credit less $75 tax savings from the higher $1,000 exemption).

For the millions of you who take the standard deduction (known technically as "zero bracket amount") instead of itemizing your deductions, a change on your '79 return also gives you a small added tax break because the standard deduction has been raised.

Specifically: If you are married or head of household, the deduction is $2,000 for '79 against $1,000 for '78. If married filing jointly, it is $3,400, up from $3,200; if married filing separately, it is $1,700 against $1,000.

You will not see any indication of the raised standard deductions when you fill out your '79 return, because as in 1978, they are buried in the tax tables and the tax rate schedules. Also, the higher personal exemptions will be hidden in the tax tables, unless you have to fill out Form 1040 Schedule TC, used generally by individuals with incomes over $20,000 if single, $40,000 if married. One of the major changes for 1979 you will notice if you use the tax rate schedule is a completely new rate schedule with a completely new look.

You will find fewer brackets and each will be wider and with different tax rates. The result is to reduce your taxes to reflect somewhat the impact of inflation.

Using the Tax Rate Schedules, here are some comparisons of tax due on the same taxable income in '78 and '79.

taxable income	single '78	single '79	married '78	married '79
$15,000	$2,962	$2,005	$2,216	$2,655
25,000	6,310	5,912	4,566	4,631
35,000	10,040	10,207	8,242	8,068
45,000	15,540	15,117	11,804	12,156
55,000	21,928	20,817	17,960	17,228
65,000	28,191	26,614	24,281	23,121
100,000	51,572	50,914	41,200	41,968

If you itemize your deductions, an unfavorable change on your '79 return eliminates the deduction for state and local gasoline taxes on nonbusiness use of your automobile. This was a permissible deduction on your 1978 return.

Soviet grain embargo impact estimates vary

Chicago Sun-Times
WASHINGTON—The Soviet grain embargo could cost U.S. railroads up to $130 million in revenues this year if none of the embargoed corn and wheat is exported, an Interstate Commerce Commission official has warned.

That estimate, however, is a "worst case figure," ICC Vice Chairman Robert C. Gresham told the Joint Economic Committee.

If 7 million metric tons of the embargoed grain are shipped overseas, as the Agriculture Department predicts, revenue losses would amount to an estimated $92 million, he said.

The impact would be felt primarily by 11 Midwestern railroads that account for 67 percent of the rail industry's corn and wheat revenues, Gresham said.

"Four of these carriers may require special attention: The Milwaukee Road, Illinois Central Gulf, Chicago & North Western and the Rock Island," he told the committee. "Grain shipments revenue is a significant part of their total revenues."

The bankrupt Milwaukee Road is operating on federal subsidies, while the bankrupt Rock Island is headed for liquidation after subsidies for directed service run out on March 2.

On the plus side, Gresham noted, some railroads may suffer mostly "revenue delays" rather than losses. "It is also possible that the carriers will move grain twice because of the embargo (once to temporary storage) or that they will move it at higher non-unit train rates when they do move it," he said.

The embargo's immediate impact has been to help ease the shortage of jumbo hopper cars for hauling grain, he said.

Because of a glut at the port of New Orleans, worsened by the International Longshoremen's Association boycott of Soviet grain shipments, there is a backup of 2,500 to 2,900 barges on the Mississippi River, Gresham said.

The embargo will help reduce the backlog, but if none of the embargoed grain finds new foreign outlets, the barge industry will see "reduced profits," Gresham said.

The barge operators had been expecting to move 6 to 7 percent more export grain this year than last.

Ready or not, the student body's on skis

Horizon program also attracting teachers, parents

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — When the bus filled with 5- to 12-year-old youngsters pulls into the Magic Mountain Ski Area parking lot every Friday morning, it's quite an education for an entire school.

The Horizons School of Twin Falls is one of many schools participating in skiing programs at Magic Mountain and Pomerelle resorts that bring the grade schoolers. But it is the only school that brings the whole student body and most of the teachers.

Marilyn Wright, an administrator with the private school, says there are 62 children enrolled in the first through sixth grades at Horizons this year and only four are not taking part in the six-weeks ski program.

"We even have parents who come with their children from our school and take their older children out public schools to take part in the skiing. They feel it is beneficial to the whole family," says Mrs. Wright.

An enthusiastic cross-country skier herself, she says there are eight of the students who leave the ski resort for the cross-country trails each Friday when the others are heading for the rope tow and lifts.

"This is the third year on the slopes for the Horizons School and some of the older youngsters are becoming avid and talented skiers."

Each year there are some new 5- and 6-year-olds introduced to the sport. While some of the instructors in the Magic Mountain Ski School think they are hopeless that first day, most youngsters can struggle to the top of the rope tow slope by the second class.

Skiing isn't all the children learn, says Mrs. Wright. Skiing means different things to different children.

"Some who read poorly ski well and it is often an ego builder. Others learn a lot by mingling with the older students and other adults. Many learn something other members of their families cannot do, and some just learn to enjoy the outdoors in the winter time," says the school administrator.

The first day on big Magic Mountain had its exciting moments for wide-eyed Lisa Conner, left, and Greg Bussman. Horizons School students learn to ski for six weeks. Bob DeLashmire/Times-News

"In our cross country program some of the teachers are trying it for the first time and they fall more than the children. Naturally, the students love this," she says.

"Some of our students' parents could not afford to let their children ski other than through this program. We get such a good price through the package at the ski resort and the bus transportation contractor, that even with full rentals it comes to only just over $6.50 a week," Mrs. Wright says.

The ski program fits in with the Horizons program of variety and of teaching responsibility.

"The children learn to take care of their equipment and to meet their instructors on time. If the ski poles or the mittens aren't on the bus when we leave, they stay behind and the child has to solve the problem at the next class."

"The parents usually make sure they aren't forgotten more than once," she added.

Handling 56 small youngsters, eager for play in the snow and a ride to the top of the ski hill isn't easy. Usually about four staff members and four parents volunteer for duty each week to help out. Most of these parents and teachers also get into a ski class.

When ski classes end the school directors look toward another six-week physical education program, but staff, teachers and students agree the six weeks of skiing is a highlight of the school year.

One of the more petrifying moments for the small beginners usually comes when they graduate from the rope tow and Poma lift to the chair lift. Despite the edgy feelings, most never go back to the beginner slopes.

"A well-managed landfill is far superior to an incinerator as far as the environment is concerned," she said, noting the use of the incinerator will not eliminate the county's need for a landfill.

She said the lost value of the recyclable materials burned could also outweigh any economic benefits of the incinerator.

Federal grants for the first year of any recycling program are available, Couch said.

Before Twin Falls city, county officials

Public meeting on solid waste incineration set tonight

By MARTY TRILLHAASE
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls county and city officials' efforts to introduce solid waste incineration will be discussed in a public information meeting tonight.

The meeting is set for 7 p.m. at City Hall. Members of the Council and County Commission are expected to attend.

County and city officials have been proposing the construction of a garbage incineration plant since last summer, with the capability to produce steam as a by-product. The steam could be sold for industrial purposes, thereby offsetting the costs of the project.

Although solid waste disposal is a function of the county, city officials have been involved in formulating the proposal, pointing out that the city contributes about 80 percent of the county's total solid waste output.

Late last month, officials met with representatives of Consumat, a Virginia-based company which manufactures modular incinerators. The officials agreed to sign a letter of intent, authorizing the firm to continue its study. The letter, while not binding, could lead to a contract.

That agreement followed the officials' decision to forgo a previously planned economic feasibility study of the project, a study several officials later said would have been too costly and unnecessary.

Although not a public hearing, public sentiments concerning the proposed project are being sought, Councilman Chris Talkington said in calling for the meeting.

"Among those who plan to attend is a Buhl woman who says the incinerator approach poses environmental and economic concerns."

Doris Couch last month presented officials with alternatives to the incinerator, saying recycling of waste materials would prove more efficient.

Such an approach has been working in Lewiston for about eight years and a similar project is now beginning in Grangeville, she said.

Under Couch's proposal, garbage would be sorted, with such items as aluminum cans and paper separated for recycling. Payments for the materials could be used as an incentive for residents to sort garbage, she said. A market in Twin Falls for the aluminum cans may already exist, Couch added.

Organic wastes, including sewer sludge, could also be used to produce fertilizer, gasoline, or methane gas, she said.

Couch said she is not saying the incinerator won't work but such a plant could pose air pollution problems.

"A well-managed landfill is far superior to an incinerator as far as the environment is concerned," she said, noting the use of the incinerator will not eliminate the county's need for a landfill.

She said the lost value of the recyclable materials burned could also outweigh any economic benefits of the incinerator.

Federal grants for the first year of any recycling program are available, Couch said.

Man shoots self in knee

TWIN FALLS — A Hansen man Sunday was reported in good condition at Magic Valley Memorial Hospital after he shot himself in the knee.

Twin Falls Sheriff's deputies said Larry Fenewald suffered an accidental gunshot wound while placing a 22-caliber rifle into his truck. Fenewald was South of Hansen on a canal bank when the mishap occurred, deputies said.

Fenewald was taken by private vehicle to Magic Valley Memorial Hospital for treatment. The incident occurred at about 6:30 p.m., deputies said.

Burley man released

BURLEY — A Burley man was released from protective custody Sunday after stabbing himself with a small knife, Burley Police said.

Police said Keith Eckley, 28, Saturday stabbed himself at "The Mint lounge" in Burley. Eckley's injuries were not reported serious and he was not hospitalized, Police said. Eckley's wound was located in the upper abdomen, about two inches below the sternum. The incident occurred at about 6 p.m.

Eckley was taken to the Burley Police Station where he was held in protective custody. Police said the incident was thought to be alcohol-related.

Suspects jailed for burglary

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls Sheriff's deputies Sunday were holding two Hansen men allegedly caught burglarizing the Roundup Inn.

Arrested were a 17-year-old youth and Jerald Michael Keller, 19, both of Hansen. Keller was being held on $5,000 bail. The other suspect was being held on an order of detention.

Deputies said they found two persons removing beer, wine, and food from the establishment at about 4 a.m.

The value of the goods was undetermined, Lt. Harold Jensen said.

The juvenile suspect is set to appear in court for a detention hearing today. Keller will face arraignment today in 3rd District Magistrate Court in Twin Falls.

No draft for women

BOISE (UPI) — Three of Idaho's four congressmen oppose registration of women for the military draft as proposed by President Carter.

Only Sen. James McClure said he favors female registration, predicting Congress would approve a registration program for men but not women.

Sen. Frank Church and Reps. George Hansen and Steve Symms said they will vote against registering women.

McClure, a Republican, said he felt a men-only registration program would be challenged and, for that reason, he would vote for registration that includes women.

Jones feels organization will beat Hansen this time

BOISE (UPI) — Second District congressional candidate Jim Jones said Saturday he can beat incumbent George Hansen this time because he has more time to organize, raise money and inform people of Hansen's ineffectiveness.

Jones was defeated by Hansen two years ago in the Republican primary, but he thinks this time it will be different. He said he believes Hansen's two trips to Iran in connection with the American hostage situation have damaged the incumbent politically.

"We've done some preliminary polling in Bannock and Bonneville counties," Jones said. "Results would be about evenly split on his first trip to Iran, but on the second trip people were overwhelmingly against him."

"People feel sorry for the hostages and that's understandable — but George Hansen didn't help them any... It's not his job."

Jones has criticized Hansen's performance more than his philosophy, but he said this week there also are philosophical differences between the two.

"He (Hansen) hasn't said much about energy, and I'm a strong proponent of energy independence. He supported the Chrysler bail-out, and I opposed that. He has opposed vocational rehabilitation funds, and I support that. He hasn't said much about national defense, and I'm a strong proponent of increasing our military strength," Jones said.

2,4-D gets blame for 9 miscarriages

POISON, Mont. (UPI)—Miscarriages by nine of 10 pregnant women living in a 10-mile stretch of Western Montana's Swan Valley are "pretty difficult" to attribute to coincidence, a doctor says.

Lake County, Mont., Health Officer Ralph Campbell said although their presence in areas sprayed with the herbicide 2,4-D was a common denominator among the women, there is no solid evidence to support their contention the herbicide was responsible for the miscarriages.

"The striking thing is that, without exception, they all seemed to be healthy, very well-informed people with good living habits," Campbell said. "We found these people to be living the pristine life, growing their own food and water, doing their eating habits. They came to live in that area to be away from the hazards of the civilized world."

The miscarriages occurred during a one-year period ending last fall, Campbell said. With the exception of one woman who spent most of her term away from the area, all 10 pregnant women living in the area north of Condon miscarried.

"I'm very bitter about this," Virginia Pelsen, said. She miscarried in the fall of 1978 and the others aborted after her. "It's all tied in with the miscarriages."

A spokesman for the Montana Highway Department said 2,4-D was used to battle weeds along roadways, in accordance with state law mandating spraying of noxious weeds.

Chief of Field Maintenance Bill Hebert said 2,4-D is used in places of 2,4,5-T, which was banned in parts of Oregon and Idaho national forests. The Environmental Protection Agency concluded that a high number of miscarriages and physical ailments in the Alesha Basin area of Oregon were linked to the herbicide's use.

The Forest Service said it does not use 2,4,5-T in Montana. In Oregon, 2,4-D was used as a substitute for 2,4,5-T but a continuing high rate of cancer, miscarriages and migraine headaches among residents has prompted a study of that chemical.

Exhaust rules could affect Magic Valley

SEATTLE (UPI) — Residents of 20 Idaho counties may be affected by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency's proposed new exhaust standards to eliminate air pollution in areas with an elevation above 4,000 feet.

The new standards have been proposed to ensure that cars and light trucks operating above 4,000 feet achieve the same level of tailpipe emissions cleanup as vehicles operating at lower altitudes.

To achieve this, the EPA is proposing that automakers manufacture vehicles so that they meet the new standards as they come off the assembly line or manufacture them so they can be easily modified to meet the standards.

The agency will hold a public hearing on the proposed rule on March 5, 6 and 7 at the U.S. Post Office Auditorium in Denver, Colo.

If approved, residents in Blainock, Bear Lake, Bingham, Boise, Bonanza, Butte, Camas, Caribou, Cassia, Clark, Clearwater, Fremont, Jefferson, Madison, Minidoka, Owyhee, Power, Teton and Valley counties would be affected.

Matheson says U.S. retreats on water policy

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — Gov. Scott Matheson says the federal government has backed down from a water policy that could have usurped western states' rights to allocate unused water rights.

Matheson told a Salt Lake County ground water seminar Friday he had received a letter from Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus informing him that the government will not follow an opinion on water rights issued in June 1979 by the Interior Department's solicitor.

Interior Solicitor Leo Krullitz suggested that the Interior Department could lay claim to unallocated water rights on federal land without specific legislation from Congress.

Matheson, head of the National Governors' Association committee on water, strongly protested the opinion, saying it was a break from the long-standing tradition that states control water rights in the absence of a specific Congressional allocation to federal agencies.

The governor read a segment of Andrus' letter to the water experts. It said, "No blanket assertion of rights persisted to this part of the opinion is being undertaken by this department and none will be without further discussions with you."

"By virtue of this action, this part of the (solicitor's) opinion may be regarded as inactive in all but the most limited of circumstances," Andrus wrote.

Those circumstances, Andrus said, would include cases where the Interior Department would be forced by the courts "to specifically" claim water rights in order to settle disputes over water.

Matheson called the concession "a

Roberts survives the wilds to find he's a dead man

BOISE (UPI) — An Eagle man, walked out of the Sawtooth Wilderness Area near Stanley after spending 85 days in a sleeping bag, has learned what it like to return from the dead.

Last week, Donald Roberts walked out of the Idaho wilderness nearly three months after he was declared dead. He had disappeared 85 days earlier after setting out alone from Grandjean to hunt mountain goats.

Roberts said he shot a goat, but fell and injured himself while trying to pack the animal out of the rugged and rocky Sawtooths. For nearly three months, Roberts said he lived in his sleeping bag, surviving sub-zero temperatures and subsisting on provisions he had brought with him and the slaughtered mountain goat.

Upon Roberts' return, some local law enforcement officials voiced their doubts about his story, but that doubt turned out not to be his biggest problem.

He found he had been declared dead by two Idaho County judges at the request of his wife's attorney.

A life insurance company was in the process of paying off the mortgage on his home. His Mormon bishop had stamped "deceased" on his church records and sent them to church headquarters in Salt Lake City.

Bill collectors, figuring he was dead and unable to pay his bills, were pounding on his wife's door. A dispute had arisen between his business partner and his family over the estate's share of the company.

And his relatives were quarreling over his possessions. Somehow, Roberts has been able to take it in stride. "I'm not going to be mad at anybody — it feels too good to be home," his wife, JoAnn, recalled her husband saying.

"It's given me all kinds of weird thoughts though," Roberts said. "I was at the bank today and I was in the deceased file. My insurance has been canceled. There's been all kinds of complications."

But his local church leaders came up with a unique explanation for Roberts' return from the dead.

Mormon bishop Dale Hopkins said the local church officials met to decide what to do now that Roberts has returned. They still had a duplicate of Roberts' church records and using a red pen wrote one word on them: "Resurrected."

Pharmacy board action feared by investigators

BOISE (UPI) — Two Idaho Board of Pharmacy investigators, who have publicly disagreed with the board's executive director, believe they may lose their jobs.

Chief investigator Bert Wilson and Investigator Jeff Black received letters from the board's executive director, Clifford Barnett, asking them to appear before the board to discuss your employment, and other matters of an administrative nature.

However, Barnett said Saturday the five-member board is meeting to discuss "routine reports" and not the suspension, termination or employment of Wilson or Black "in any way."

The Idaho Legislature is considering moving the agency's investigative division to the Department of Law Enforcement. Wilson and Black have spoken in favor of the transfer, while Barnett opposes the move.

The investigators contend that reluctance to prosecute or hold disciplinary hearings for unethical pharmacists and lawbreakers would be eliminated by the move.

Wilson, who has been with the Pharmacy Board for 13 years, has gone before two legislative committees recently to recommend the transfer. After receiving Barnett's letter, Wilson and Black said they suspect the board plans to suspend or terminate their jobs.

"It would appear to me they (board members) have something like his in mind," Wilson said. "I presume this is because it stood in front of the senators and also in front of the (Joint Finance/Appropriations Committee) and told them why I thought the board's enforcement division should be moved to the Department of Law Enforcement."

Convention opposed

BOISE (UPI) — The Idaho division of the American Association of University Women has voted to oppose a resolution calling for a U.S. Constitutional convention to consider a right-to-life amendment. The resolution has been submitted to the Idaho Legislature by Sen. Dane Watkins, R-Idaho Falls.

Cobalt lock up feared by Church

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Idaho Sen. Frank Church says passage of the River of No Return Wilderness Bill would increase Idaho's timber harvest and rejected arguments it would "lock up" potential mining of cobalt.

Church said Friday the U.S. Forest Service's current timber sale program anticipates a timber harvest of $52.7 million board feet in the Blitterroot, Salmon, Boise, Challis, Payette and Nezperce national forests without passage of the wilderness bill. He said the harvest would increase to $65.5 million board feet with the passage of the proposal.

Church said his figures come from a Forest Service analysis of timber sales and the impact of various legislative proposals for the central Idaho wilderness area.

The Idaho Democrat also said the bill omits areas where cobalt deposits are known to exist and the existing Blackbird mine.

"Furthermore, the bill specifically allows five additional years for exploration of minerals within the wilderness, and specifically allows for underground mining within the wilderness itself if valid mining claims are filed and cobalt is found in commercial quantities," Church said.

Repeated offense brings probation

TWIN FALLS — Robert Paul Graybill, 42, of Twin Falls, has been placed on a two-year probation for a repeated offense of driving while intoxicated.

Graybill was sentenced last week by 5th District Court Judge Theron W. Ward to five years in the state penitentiary and the sentence then suspended in favor of a two-year probation.

The judge said if the man completes a good probation he may return to court and plead innocent to the charge.

EARL EUGENE JONES

Thank You
In the memory of Earl Eugene Jones.
We the family of Earl Eugene Jones, who passed away on December 20, 1979 in a fatal accident, wishes to say Thank You, to the many friends and relatives for the many contributions, floral tributes, and kindness we received during the loss of our loved one. The phone calls and cards were such a great help to us during our trying time of sorrow. Cards and kindness came as far away as Victoria Australia and Hendersonville, Tennessee. A special thanks to those far away friends who sent their love and sympathy from so far away. Thank you all very much for all the kindness and caring you gave to us, the family of Earl Eugene Jones.

IN MEMORIAM
Earl Eugene Jones known to MWMH employees as "Gone" died as a result of a motorcycle accident on Thursday, December 20, 1979. Gene had been a MWMH employee in our Maintenance Department for the past four years. Most of us remember him as the "Groundskeeper." In August of 1978, he was transferred to Plant Operations where he was responsible for the operation of the boilers. It was noted on his evaluation form by his Department Head "Eim" Harmon, "Gene is always willing to go on to a new project."
Our sincere sympathy is extended to Gene's family, Gene and children Dale (13), Kristina (9). Joan is a MWMH Environmental Services employee and she says that she would like to thank the entire hospital staff for the "money gift" presented to her and the children from hospital personnel.

19 mayors want power project halted

BOUNTIFUL, Utah (UPI) — Mayors from 19 Utah towns Saturday demanded that all planning work be immediately halted on the Inter-mountain Power project until tax issues involving the "huge 3,000-megawatt facility are solved."

The mayors represent most of the 24 Utah municipalities making up the Intermountain Power Association (IPA), the sponsor of the project planned for construction near Lyndell, Utah.

Following the closed meeting at the home of Bountiful Mayor Elmer Barlow, the mayors and municipal representatives released a position paper which said: "The Utah Legislature has appeared indifferent to the desires and needs of Utah towns and cities whose needs were and continue to be the original motivating force behind the IPP."

The meeting was convened to Barlow's home from Bountiful City Hall in a Salt Lake City television station objected to closure of the proceedings. An attorney for the agency said the mayors could not meet in private under the terms of Utah's Open Meetings Law.

Earlier this year, the Legislature approved a measure to impose a 2-percent tax on the gross receipts of IPP, a move which some mayors said could cause the project to pull out of the project. Another bill, which was supported by IPP, set up a schedule for payment of impact fees to communities in the project area.

The gross receipts tax would be paid by IPA members. At least 60 percent of the tax revenues would come from Los Angeles County suburbs, which will receive more than 38 percent of IPP's electricity.

During the meeting, the mayors called Gov. Scott Matheson, who agreed to discuss the issue with the group Monday at noon. Another call to IPA Chairman Reece Nielsen, Krumm, sat up at 2:45 p.m. Monday meeting between the mayors and the IPA Board of Directors.

The mayors said they would not ask Matheson to veto the gross receipts bill, but would seek assurances that the governor will work to return that tax revenue to those cities which pay it.

"Unless these mayors say so, I don't think the project can continue," said Logan Mayor Walter Nicker, an outspoken opponent of the taxing legislation.

"If the current legislation does not receive some correction or revision, some towns will pull out," added Enterprise's Mayor Alpine Bowler.

The mayors said their major concern was that the gross receipts bill, sponsored by Sen. Charles Bulten-R-Logan, would remove the elites' tax-exempt status.

"That status could be jeopardized in other areas where we collect revenues," Barlow said.

They also said some developers and contractors in the project area would receive tax revenues to underwrite their construction projects.

"Why should the elites subsidize a contractor for putting in water or sewer lines?" asked Logan City Attorney Blaine Zollinger. "We want to help with legitimate public service impact costs, but somewhere we have to draw the line."

Kaysville Mayor Gar Ellison said the cities had already agreed to provide impact money to towns in the IPP area, but he said developers do not want impact funds since those contractors can pass on their costs to people who move into the new housing districts.

The mayors also admitted they were deluged in lobbying for their interests when the Legislature considered the bills.

"We're learning a valuable lesson from all this," Barlow said.

The public hearings concerning the proposed action will be held on:

Tuesday, March 4, 1980, 7:00 P.M., Former District Court Room Old Courthouse 602 North Capitol Avenue Idaho Falls, Idaho

NOTICE OF INTENDED RULE-MAKING AND NOTICE OF HEARING

Pursuant to section 67-5-203(a)(1), Idaho Code, notice is hereby given that the Idaho Department of Water Resources (IDWR) and the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare (IDHW) Division of Environment, have initiated rule-making and scheduled a hearing. The proposed action, under Docket Number OWR/DHW 07-800, involves the adoption of rules governing "Construction and Use of Waste Disposal and Injection Wells." The following is a concise summary of the substance of the intended action and of the principal issues involved.

Rule 1 describes the statutory authority under which these regulations are proposed and provides for use of a certificate of compliance for certain waste wells which cannot presently meet the effluent quality standards of these regulations.

Rule 2, described definitions.

Rule 3 describes the effluent quality standards for material disposed of through a waste disposal and injection well and criteria for their location and use.

Rule 4 describes the construction standards and abandonment requirements for waste disposal and injection wells.

Rule 5 describes the requirements for filing a permit application for a waste disposal and injection well.

Rule 6 describes the public notification requirements, provides for coordination of application processing with the Director of the Department of Health and Welfare, and provides for public fact-finding hearings.

Rule 7 describes additional factors the Director of IDWR will take into consideration in reviewing such waste disposal permits.

Rule 8 describes permit monitoring, record keeping, and reporting requirements.

Rule 9 provides for the assignment of a permit to a new owner.

Rule 10 describes actions which would be considered violations of the regulations and provides for enforcement.

Rule 11 provides for hearings on permits which have been voided, cancelled, disapproved, or conditionally approved.

Rule 12 provides the means for the repeal of these regulations to remain in effect in the event some part is found to be invalid.

Military says missile tests ended in tie

DUGWAY, Utah (UPI) — The Defense Department has wound up the last of 20 tests flights of prototype cruise missiles — and the score stood tied at six successes and four crashes ended for General Dynamics and Boeing Corp.

The two aerospace firms competed in a "fly off" for a $4 billion contract to produce the missiles for the Air Force. The testing began last July 17 and ended Friday.

Each company flew 10 test flights launched from B-52 bombers off the California coast and aimed at the Utah test range.

A General Dynamics AG-109 missile was successfully launched from a B-52 bomber off the California Coast Friday morning. It flew sparsely populated regions of California, Nevada and Utah to a programmed destination at the Dugway Proving Grounds, where it was retrieved in mid-air by a helicopter.

It was the final test of the General Dynamics missile. Boeing completed tests of its AGM-86B missile Jan. 22.

The Defense Department said each contract had "four unscheduled terminations," or crashes, during the series.

Two missiles dropped in the ocean, two hit near the California Coast, one crashed in Nevada and three others piled up on the test range in Utah. No one was injured in the crashes.

Dugway spokesman Dick Whitaker said data gathered from the flights would be analyzed before the Defense Department chooses a winner. He said that decision would probably be announced in about two months.

Whitaker said the crashes served a useful purpose.

"While the crashes and unscheduled terminations did occur, we did not lose 40 percent of the data sought," he said. "Almost eight hours of data was obtained from these flights."

Current plans call for production of 3,418 missiles over the next seven years. The missiles will be deployed in B-52 bombers.

Initially, each B-52 will carry 12 missiles — six under each wing. Later a rotary launch device will be installed in the bomb bays of the jets. That device will hold an additional eight missiles.

Johnson says her appeal delay is cause of chaos

OAKTON, Va. (UPI) — Excommunicated Mormon feminist Sonia Johnson said Sunday a church official's decision to delay a ruling on her appeal of the excommunication left her and her family in "physical and spiritual chaos."

Mrs. Johnson said she had been promised a ruling by last December after she defied Mormon Church President Spencer W. Kimball's call for church members to oppose ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment. She is a founder and leader of an organization called "Mothers for ERA."

"I have been given no reason why the appeals process has taken as long as it has," said Mrs. Johnson. But she said, "Rumors indicate church leaders are waiting for public interest to die down."

Mrs. Johnson announced her excommunication to Keshay Dec. 23, one week after she was expelled from the church by Bishop Jeffrey H. Willis. Each Mormon ward is directed by a bishop, the equivalent of a minister. The next step up from a bishop in church organization is a stake president. Her ward is in Sterling, her stake is headquartered in nearby Oakton.

"I have been given no reason why the appeals process has taken as long as it has," said Mrs. Johnson. But she said, "Rumors indicate church leaders are waiting for public interest to die down."

Mrs. Johnson announced her excommunication to Keshay Dec. 23, one week after she was expelled from the church by Bishop Jeffrey H. Willis. Each Mormon ward is directed by a bishop, the equivalent of a minister. The next step up from a bishop in church organization is a stake president. Her ward is in Sterling, her stake is headquartered in nearby Oakton.

Johnson says her appeal delay is cause of chaos

OAKTON, Va. (UPI) — Excommunicated Mormon feminist Sonia Johnson said Sunday a church official's decision to delay a ruling on her appeal of the excommunication left her and her family in "physical and spiritual chaos."

Mrs. Johnson said she had been promised a ruling by last December after she defied Mormon Church President Spencer W. Kimball's call for church members to oppose ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment. She is a founder and leader of an organization called "Mothers for ERA."

"I have been given no reason why the appeals process has taken as long as it has," said Mrs. Johnson. But she said, "Rumors indicate church leaders are waiting for public interest to die down."

Politics hang heavy over the Olympics

LAKE PLACID, N.Y. (UPI) — With the future of the Olympic movement at stake, politics continued to create an unsettling atmosphere Sunday just two days before the start of the Winter Games.

In this small upstate community, where the contract for garbage removal generally qualifies as big politics, the United States and Russia are clashing in a war of words, at the same time inciting harsh reaction from other parts of the world.

Sergei Pavlov, the Soviet Sports Minister, has accused the U.S. of trying to lure Soviet athletes into defecting, and the International Olympic Committee delivered an official swipe at the United States because of that country's outspoken demand for a boycott of the Moscow Olympics.

"It was the first time in the IOC's history that a political speech has been made at an opening session," said Monique Berthou, director of the IOC. In response to the sharp speech of Secretary of State Cyrus Vance on Saturday night calling for the Summer Games to be moved, postponed or canceled.

"I think it was clear the IOC did not appreciate having political speeches in the opening ceremony."

At the same time, it was reported by the Washington Post that White House Deputy Counsel Joseph O'neil warned the U.S. Olympic Committee that the Carter Administration would "definitely" support the IOC if it rejects the U.S. position. The Post said that O'neil apologized for his remark a day later.

In Moscow, the Russians denounced America's boycott call. In fact, a leading member of the West German Olympic Committee supported the U.S. position. In New York, airport workers refused to service an Aeroflot flight containing some Russian athletes, and in Lake Placid, the austere IOC seemed unwilling to budge from its commitment to Moscow.

Said former-IOC Vice-President Willi Dorn of West Germany, "Mr. Vance's speech has united the IOC in its determination to go ahead with the Moscow Olympics."

On a local level, Olympic preparations hit a more immediate snag when some 200 buses were idled because of management and labor problems. According to Ed Lewi, press director for the Lake Placid Organizing Committee, only about 40 buses were left to handle the expected 30,000 daily spectators, 3,000 media representatives and 1,400 athletes.

"If we don't solve this problem, I am going to grab somebody by the jugular or have a heart attack myself," Lewi said. "Everything else is going smoothly, this is our only problem right now."

With all the political furor, preparations for the Winter Games have been overshadowed, but U.S. hopes in the bobsled were jolted when Switzerland's Erich Schaefer, world champion in 1978 and 1979, broke his unofficial two-man bobsled record on his first run Sunday with a time of 1 minute 2.83 seconds.

East Germany's Horst Schomay was second fastest on the day with a second-run time of 1:03.00, eight hundredths of a second better than Canadian Serge Cantin. The men's downhill racers went out on Whiteface Mountain Sunday for their first look at the Olympic trail and they liked it.

"They had one non-stop run and two slower inspections on the artificial snow, finding the track just outside Lake Placid very fast, very technical and well prepared."

"But there's really very little difference, at least for me, between real and artificial snow," said Peter Mueller of Switzerland, one of the favorites along with Canada's Ken Read for the downhill gold medal Thursday.

"The top half is very technical with a few small bumps but the last part is very flat and very slow and I'm only worried about losing time at the top," the 22-year-old Swiss tree surgeon said.

"I know I am known as a good glider but all the same I don't think it is possible to pick up half a second on the flat."

Read said he found the trail "very well prepared indeed."

But his speed seemed a bit slow with the warm sun on this artificial snow, the 24-year-old Canadian said.

Dave Irwin, another Canadian favorite, was out on the trail despite his spectacular fall on the Lautherhorn track at Whistler, Switzerland, in January. "I found the artificial snow very different" from the real thing.

"It's all a lot of little ice balls. This is okay at the slow but it's damn dangerous on the speed parts because your skis can just slide on sideways," Irwin said.

Bjorn Borg used intense concentration to beat Vitas Gerulaitis for the 16th time and capture the Grand Slam of Tennis. UPI

Grand Slam Bjorn Borg collects $150,000 top prize

ROCKY HATON, Fla. (UPI) — Bjorn Borg, fighting off an aggressive second-set rally, defeated Vitas Gerulaitis for the 16th straight time Sunday with a 6-1, 5-7, 6-1 triumph for his fourth Grand Slam of Tennis title.

Borg, already believed to be the richest paid athlete in the world, collected a check for $150,000, the richest prize in tennis.

He destroyed Gerulaitis in the first set, but the 25-year-old New Yorker shifted to a more aggressive serve-and-volley game to win the second. In the first game of the third set, Gerulaitis went down with a twisted knee and Borg rolled to victory.

Despite Borg's unbeaten record against his opponent, Gerulaitis showed in the second set that he is by no means owned by the 24-year-old Swede.

But nobody was denying that the event is owned by Borg, who has taken four straight Grand Slam of Tennis championships. He advanced to the finals by defeating American Guillermo Vilas 6-1, 6-2 in the semifinals Friday.

In the three previous Grand Slams, Borg sailed through the tournament almost as easily, crushing Jimmy Connors in the finals all three times. Connors did not qualify for this year's event.

Borg established his dominance early in the championship match of this $200,000 event.

The reigning Wimbledon champion won the first eight points and allowed his opponent only three points as he rolled to a 4-0 edge. Gerulaitis finally won the next game when Borg was wide with a forehand from the baseline, but Gerulaitis errors gave Borg the win and the set.

Gerulaitis came out battling in the second set and in the first game a fierce contest that took 14 points to decide. He broke Borg's service when the Swede handed a forehand into the net.

Borg broke back and then held his service to make it 2-1 but Gerulaitis evaded it at 2-2.

Gerulaitis took the lead at 3-4, breaking Borg's service with a backhand cross-court volley, then dropped to 3-4 before winning the final three games of the set. He made it 5-5 with an ace, 6-5 on an error by Borg and won at 7-5 when Borg was long with a service return.

Although Gerulaitis showed no evidence of a limp as a result of the leg injury, he was never in it the rest of the way. The match took two hours and six minutes.

It was the second time Borg had defeated Gerulaitis this year. In the first match, the bearded baseline specialist drubbed his foe 6-2, 6-2. In 1978, Borg defeated Gerulaitis four times. His 16-game streak dates to 1974.

As usual, Borg showed an open preference to rove the baseline and came to the net only when he had little other choice on the slow clay surface he plays so well.

Gerulaitis, however, ignored the slow court and played his natural game, attacking the net whenever he could.

In the earlier consolation match, John McEnroe defeated Vilas 6-7 in a one-set match. The two agreed before the match to split their winnings at $37,500 each, rather than play for the difference between the $45,000 third prize and the $30,000 just for showing up. Gerulaitis earned $17,500 for second.

The event was sponsored by Pepsi Cola and played at Boca West.

Sun Valley's Cooper wins tuneup races

SHERBURNE, Vt. (UPI) — U.S. Ski team member Christin Cooper of Sun Valley outclassed 61 competitors Sunday in a Winter Olympic tuneup in the giant slalom competition at Killington Ski Area.

It was the second victory in three days for Cooper, who also won the women's slalom competition Friday.

Cooper ran the 1:57-meter course in a combined time of 2:35.94 seconds. She finished 14 hundredths of a second ahead of teammate Heidi Prescher of Lakeport, N.H., followed by Amy Bergstrom of East Burke, Vt.

Other U.S. Alpine team competitors Abbi Fisher, Holly Flanders, Viki Fleckenstein and Tamara McKimney all failed to finish the race.

Big Sky Wildcats near title

By United Press International
The Weber State Wildcats assured themselves of at least a tie for the 1980 Big Sky Conference title by knocking off two league rivals last week.

With just three regular season games remaining and Weber State enjoying a four-game edge over second-place Idaho, the 17th-ranked Wildcats need to win only one contest to clinch their third straight Big Sky crown. Weber State would also win the Big Sky if Idaho loses all its remaining games.

Weber State pummeled Montana 74-69 Thursday, then took a decisive 94-83 victory Saturday over Montana State.

Idaho can still take a share of the title by winning all its remaining games, and can win the league if Weber State fails to win another game while the Vandals go undefeated. Idaho beat in-state rival Boise State Saturday by an 81-69 margin.

The Wildcats are 10-1 in the conference, while Idaho is 6-4.

The top four teams in the division will compete for a berth in the NCAA playoffs in a tournament which begins Feb. 29, with the top regular-season squad getting to host its opening game.

Montana is also a strong contender for a tournament spot with a 6-5 league mark. The Grizzlies beat Idaho State Saturday in Pocatello 63-52. It was the first time Montana has won at ISU's Minder.

In other league action last week, Montana State, 5-6 in the Big Sky, kept its tournament hopes alive by splitting a pair of road games. The Bobcats lost to Weber State this weekend but picked up a needed 74-61 victory Thursday night against the Idaho State Bengals.

Bean cashes in at Hawaii

HONOLULU (UPI) — Andy Bean fought off late challenges by Lee Trevino and Ed Sneed to win the $225,000 Hawaiian Open with a tournament-record, 19-hole, 65 on a 22-rod par 365 Sunday.

It was the sixth tour victory for the 26-year-old Bean, who started the final round tied for the lead with George Burns, who finally broke through last week for his initial success at the Crosby National Pro-Am.

But Bean quickly took charge with birdies on the first three holes and then simply became a matter of his holding on for victory, which he sealed with a 35-foot birdie on No. 17 and an eight-foot par on No. 18 at the Waialae Country Club course.

Trevino, playing for the first time this year, moved within two shots of Bean when he birdied the 14th hole but a bogey at No. 16 prevented him from making it closer. Trevino shot a 66, the same score Bean had for the final round, and he finished three strokes back at 19-under.

Sneed had a 68 to finish another shot back while Mark Lye, with a 67, and Burns, with a 71, wound up at 27, 17 under par.

Larry Neison had a 67 to finish at 272 while Tom Watson, who made his 1980 debut two weeks ago by winning the San Diego Open, shot 68 to finish at 273.

Hubert Green set the old Hawaiian Open tournament record of 21-under-par when he won the event for the second straight year in 1979. This time, Green failed to start the cut.

John Schroeder shot 67 and Frank Conner, the only man ever to play in both the tennis and golf

Andy Bean breaks away from pack to win Hawaiian Open. UPI

U.S. Opens had a disappointing par-72, and the two tied at 274. At 275, came Chi Chi Rodriguez, Don January, Artie McKenzie and Bill Krenzler.

Bean, who has more than $200,000 last year, took home

$38,500 for his Hawaiian victory, while Trevino won $15,100 and Sneed $22,100.

A tournament record crowd of more than 15,000 saw the windup and gave the Hawaiian Open an all-time attendance mark of 57,395.

Idaho meet

Plunkett sets new discus mark

MOSCOW, Idaho (UPI) — Ben Plunkett, a former University of Missouri athlete, set a new American indoor discus record of 211 feet, seven inches during the fifth annual Vandals Indoor at the University of Idaho Saturday night.

Plunkett's record throw came on his last attempt of the event, as he erased the mark of 203 feet, one inch set by Mac Wilkins during the 1977 Vandals Indoor. It also was made by 25 John Powell, bronze medalist at the Montreal Games, had made a throw earlier of 208 feet, seven inches.

Ironically, Wilkins broke his own record, but his best throw of 205 feet, 10 inches fell far short of Plunkett's attempt.

Plunkett's record, however, did not come close to the world record of 217 feet, two inches set last month by Wolfgang Schmidt of East Germany.

The discus event was the highlight of the Vandals Indoor as only two other meet records were set during the evening.

Barla Bettiol of Brigham Young established a new meet record in the women's high jump with a leap of 53 inches.

In the men's 100-meter relay, the Washington State team set a new mark of 3:24.4.

Confrontation between U.S., Russia grows

LAKE PLACID, N.Y. (UPI) — The confrontation between the United States and Soviet governments over Afghanistan, in which the International Olympic Committee and its Moscow Games are now tightly wedged, escalated further Sunday in the sporting rather than political arena.

Secretary of State Cyrus Vance bluntly spelled out to the IOC Saturday night the United States' determination to prevent Moscow from holding the Summer Olympics because of the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan, while one of President Carter's aides was quoted as saying the Administration would "destroy" the IOC if it rejects its proposals to take the Games away from Moscow.

In return, the Russian organizing committee boycotted Vance's speech in a calculated diplomatic snub, and Sergei Pavlov, the Soviet sports minister, accused the CIA of trying to lure visiting Soviet Olympic athletes into defecting.

Vance's speech at the formal opening of the IOC's 82nd session, in which he said no American team would take part in an Olympic Games held in an "invading country, was not heard by Ignat T. Novikov, the president of the Moscow organizing committee and ranking member of the Soviet Politburo.

Novikov and his delegation read an advance copy of Vance's speech and deliberately stayed away from the ceremony, informed IOC sources said.

Vance's speech also was greeted coolly by the 60 or so IOC members present. Fewer than half a dozen were seen to applaud.

Former IOC vice president Willi Damm of West Germany said he thought Vance's speech "would have the opposite effect of its intention." Mr. Vance's speech has united the IOC in its determination to go ahead with the Moscow Olympics, Damm said.

The chances of the IOC coming around to the American viewpoint were not helped by a report in the Washington Post Sunday which quoted White House deputy Counsel Joseph Onek as telling the U.S. Olympic Committee that the Carter Administration would "destroy" the IOC if it rejects its proposals to cancel, postpone or shift the Moscow Games.

The Post said Onek apologized for the remark the next day but that several USOC members were resentful of the "strong-arm" tactics being used by the White House.

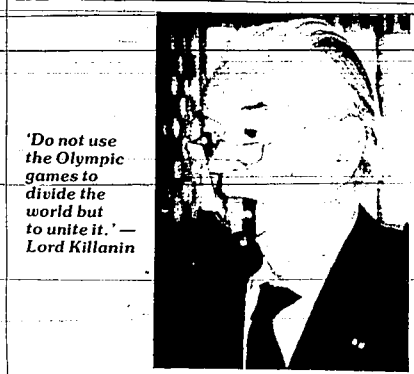

Meanwhile, Pavlov, in Lake Placid as the leader of the Russian Olympic team, accused the CIA of trying to entice Russian athletes to defect with promises "including cash bribes, according to a well-placed European Olympic source.

Pavlov said the CIA wanted to get a Russian competitor to defect so that he would denounce Soviet policy in Afghanistan, the source said.

Lord Killarin, speaking before Vance at the opening ceremony, urged all governments not to use athletes as pawns in their political battles.

"Do not use the Olympic Games to divide the world but to unite it. Do not use athletes for solutions of political problems," Killarin said.

"I have never denied or ignored the intrusion of politics into the Olympic movement," but I believe it to be in our interests that these intrusions be resisted," said the 65-year-old Irish peer.

'Do not use the Olympic games to divide the world but to unite it.' — Lord Killarin

"It is the first time in the IOC's history that a political speech has been made at an opening session," said Berlioux. "I think it was clear the IOC did not appreciate having political speeches in the opening ceremony."

Asked if the IOC was angry at Vance using a sports forum to put across the U.S. political view, Berlioux said, "I think they were shocked."

Former IOC vice-president Willi Damm of West Germany said he thought Vance's speech would have the opposite effect of its intention.

"Mr. Vance's speech has united the IOC in its determination to go ahead with the Moscow Olympics," Damm said.

Questioned about a report in the Washington Post that quoted one of President Carter's aides as saying they would not attend the 1980 Olympics, the IOC's Damm said he did not agree to the U.S. representative removing the Games from Moscow, Berlioux said, "there are many sad statements that unfortunately are made too rapidly."

Berlioux said the concept of holding "parallel games" during the Moscow Olympics was "impossible" since the international federation would not sanction them.

She said Mayor Jean Drapeau of Montreal had told her the Quebec city would be unable to act as a host for any such Games because of the technical problems involved in such a vast project.

In another development, the IOC will set up a special commission to study the possibility of returning the Summer Games permanently to an independent state at Olympia in Greece. The commission will make its report at the 1981 Olympic Congress in Baden Baden, Berlioux said.

She also announced that the IOC membership of Prince Ghanim Rega Talib of Iraq, a hall brother to the deposed Shah, had lapsed, because he had not attended the past three sessions.

West German seeks delay

BONN (UPI) — A German member of the West German Olympic Committee Sunday called for the postponement of the Olympic Games amid indications from leading politicians that West German athletes would not be going to Moscow.

Willi Weyer, president of the 1.1 million-member West German sports association, told the mass circulation tabloid Bild am Sonntag that the Summer Games should be postponed since it was "certainly" Soviet troops would not pull out of Afghanistan.

Weyer is the first leading sports official in West Germany to question the nation's participation in the Moscow Summer Games and his comments were warmly welcomed by Foreign Minister Hans Dietrich Genscher in a special statement issued in Bonn.

Genscher, stressing solidarity between West Germany and the United States, indicated Bonn would support Washington on the Olympic question.

"We expect solidarity from the United States in Berlin, and we will not deny it in the question of the Olympics."

His words echoed those of Defense Minister Hans Apel on Saturday told a meeting of defense experts in Munich that it was "unthinkable" for the West Germans to march into the Olympic stadium in Moscow if the Americans stayed away.

IOC Tass said his request that the Summer Olympic Games be moved from Moscow or canceled was unimpressive

IOC Tass said his request that the Summer Olympic Games be moved from Moscow or canceled was unimpressive to members of the International Olympic Committee's sessions.

"Judging with the Cold War phraseology, the state secretary in the name of the U.S. administration was in effect another example of crude political interference in the affairs of the IOC," Tass said.

Placid poll backs boycott

LAKE PLACID, N.Y. (UPI) — According to people who attend the Olympics, the United States should not attend with its proposed boycott of Russia.

A week-long survey conducted on Main Street in this Winter Olympic capital showed 79 percent of the respondents in favor of boycotting the Summer Games. Only 21 percent of the 456 Americans polled felt the United States should send a team.

The survey was conducted by SIMA Corp., a Chicago-based manufacturer with a store here.

In reply to another question, 63 percent thought a boycott would serve to change the structure of the Olympics, while 45 percent felt a boycott would have no impact whatsoever on future Games.

"You have to assume that the vast majority of people now in Lake Placid would have to be considered Olympic enthusiasts, Olympic supporters," said Irwin Diamond, president of SIMA.

"Yet, these are precisely the Americans who are telling us that the national interests in the United States should come before participation in a Moscow Olympics."

"Apparently patriotism and nationalism are again being very much invoked."

Tass blasts U.S. position

MOSCOW (UPI) — Secretary of State Cyrus Vance's appeal before the International Olympic Committee was "crude political interference" in the affairs of the sports body, the Tass news agency said Sunday.

In a dispatch from Lake Placid, N.Y., where Vance addressed the IOC sources said Vance's speech also was greeted coolly by the 60 or so IOC members present. Fewer than half a dozen were seen to applaud.

Former IOC vice president Willi Damm of West Germany said he thought Vance's speech "would have the opposite effect of its intention." Mr. Vance's speech has united the IOC in its determination to go ahead with the Moscow Olympics, Damm said.

Vance speech shocks IOC

LAKE PLACID, N.Y. (UPI) — Monique Berlioux, the director of the International Olympic Committee, told a news conference Sunday the IOC was "shocked" by the political nature of the speech by U.S. Secretary of State Cyrus Vance at its opening session Saturday.

Berlioux pointed out that Vance actually forgot to formally open the IOC's 82nd session, the mission for which he came to Lake Placid.

Navratilova routs Austin

CINGLEWOOD, Calif. (UPI) — Top-seeded Martina Navratilova continued her torrid 1980 women's streak Sunday with a 6-2, 6-0 rout of No. 2 seed Tracy Austin in the championship match of a $125,000 women's tennis tournament.

Navratilova needed just 45 minutes to defeat the 17-year-old Austin from Holling Hills, Calif., for the second time this year and the 14th time in 20 meetings.

Navratilova, 25, the two-time Wimbledon champion and the world's No. 1 woman player, matched her 10th straight match win of the year. She won 34 of 43 singles sets, the only loss coming to Billie Jean King in Chicago.

The ex-Czech, now living in Dallas, broke Austin's record twice in the first set and three times in the second set while dominating the match with an aggressive serve-and-volley game. Leading 2-2 in the first set, Navratilova broke Austin, the defending U.S. Open champ, in the sixth and eighth games to clinch the set.

Navratilova, who earned $24,000 for the victory, gained a berth in the finals with a 6-0, 6-5 victory over Australian Wendy Turnbull in Saturday night's semifinals. Austin overcame a first set loss in her semifinal match to score a 1-6, 6-1, 6-2 triumph over Virginia Wade of England.

Austin lost the first five games of the opening set against Wade but rebounded with an awesome display of ground strokes and accurate passing shots to clinch the match. But against Navratilova the teen-ager appeared overmatched.

Marquette upsets Duke 80-77

MADISON, Wis. (UPI) — Marquette's Oliver Lee hit a short jump shot to give the Warriors a two-point lead with 46 seconds left, then added a free throw with 22 seconds remaining Sunday as the Warriors held on for an 80-77 victory over Duke.

The victory was the Warriors' third straight in their drive for a 10th successive NCAA bid and boosted their record to 13-7. Duke, which has lost three straight, dropped to 17-6.

Duke led behind 3-20 at the ball and trailed by 19 points with 12:10 to go. Then he turned back to tie the game 53-53 on a basket by Vance Taylor with 2:38 left. Both teams turned the ball over several times in the final frantic moments before Lee put the Warriors ahead for good.

Cuba's Stevenson leads Cuban boxers

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (UPI) — Two-time Olympic heavyweight champion Teofilo Stevenson of Cuba took a split decision over the United States' Jimmy Clark to give Cuba a 6-5 edge over the U.S. in an anticlimactic bout Sunday at the Charlotte Coliseum.

Stevenson, who won gold medals in 1972 and 1976, took a 2-1 decision over Clark, a Gainesville, Fla., boxer who lost two fights in his 10th career.

The Cuban team left immediately after the fights, but Clark said he thought the Cuban bout was not given a fair shake because of Cuba's referee Romeo Santiago.

The NBA Bird, Maravich lead Celtics victory

BOSTON (UPI) — Rookie Larry Bird poured in 24 points and Pete Maravich scored 21 in the second quarter Sunday to lead Boston to a 128-111 victory over the Detroit Pistons for the Celtics' seventh straight triumph.

The Celtics led their longest winning streak of 12 games and improved their league-best record to 27-10.

Detroit, which has won only three of 39 road games, jumped to a 31-27 first-quarter lead behind John Lutz, who scored 8 of his 19 points, and Greg Kessler's seven points. Archibald kept the Celtics close by scoring 12 points in the period.

Milwaukee 109, Phoenix 107

MILWAUKEE (UPI) — Marques Johnson's basket with two seconds left Sunday clinched a last-minute rally that lifted Milwaukee to a 109-107 victory over the Phoenix Suns, the Bucks' third straight triumph since center Hoban Lanier joined the club.

Lanier, acquired from Detroit last week, finished with 23 points to lead the Bucks in scoring, Brian Walter Davis scored 27 points, all in the final three quarters, as the Suns came back from a first quarter 30-27 deficit to lead most of the way.

Philadelphia 105, Los Angeles 104

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Darryl Dawkins scored 10 points in a fourth-quarter rally Sunday and Maurice Cheeks sank the clinching two free throws with 29 seconds left to give the Philadelphia 76ers a 105-104 victory over the Los Angeles Lakers.

The 76ers came back from a nine-point deficit entering the fourth quarter to overcome the Lakers, despite a magnificent performance by Kareem Abdul-Jabbar — who hit his last 11 shots of the game to finish with 38 points and intercepted a Cheeks' pass that could have given Los Angeles the victory. Mike Cooper missed a layup with nine seconds to play to ensure the 76ers' victory.

Kansas City 108, Washington 106

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — Otis Birdsong hit a

15-foot baseline jumper with 42 seconds left in the overtime period and Bill Robinson added an insurance free throw Sunday to give the Kansas City Kings a 108-106 victory over the Stamping Washington Bullets.

The Kings had fallen behind Washington 106-102 with 2:07 left in the overtime, but Kansas City scored six straight points on baskets by Reggie Miller and Birdsong and two free throws by Robinson to beat the Bullets for the sixth straight time.

Seattle 122, New Jersey 107

PISCATAWAY, N.J. — Dennis Johnson and Gus Williams combined for 50 points Sunday to lead the Seattle SuperSonics to a 122-107 victory over the New Jersey Nets.

Johnson scored 14 of his game-high 29 points in the first quarter to give the Sonics a 25-21 lead. They widened it to 39-15 but recently acquired Roger Pheley hit 16 of his 26 points in the second quarter to bring the Nets within eight.

Chan-hee retains title in flyweight match

SEOUL, South Korea (UPI) — Champion Park Chan-hee of South Korea scored a unanimous decision Sunday over Philippine challenger Arnold Arosal in a World Boxing Council flyweight title bout.

Japan's referee, Ken Morita scored the fight 47-44 for Park.

Philippine judge Alfredo Quizon scored it 46-42 and And Korean judge Kim Kwang-soo had it 49-44 for the Korean.

Arosal had a knockdown in the second round and continued to pound the slow-footed Filipino throughout the bout for an easy victory.

There was virtually no exchange of sharp punches in the duly paced clash. An estimated crowd of 3,000 at the Chungchung Gymnasium voiced its obvious disappointment with occasional boos.

The 25-year-old Philippine challenger had a weight problem which apparently affected his fight against the tough and fast-moving Korean.

Arosal had to make three trips to the scale Sunday morning to make the limit. After the second unsuccessful try, he went to a sauna bath to shed the extra weight.

After an easy first round, the Korean champion forced Arosal in the middle of the ring at the start of the second round and knocked down the Filipino with a lightning one-two combination. Arosal fell but stood up immediately to take a mandatory eight-count.

BRIDGE

Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag

Cunning defense illusion better player South is, the more likely he is to fall for the illusion that South can set up.

Alan: "West starts with the ace of clubs and receives the discouraging three from his partner. He should be aware that West that a diamond shift is indicated. South surely has only three minor suit cards."

Oswald: "Most West's lead the diamond-duce—the illusionist-leads the king and continues with the deuce. East is in with the ace and leads his diamond five—What should South do?"

Alan: "A doubtless play West for a southern diamond and ruff high. This play can only cost him if trump break 4-1, but that is the way they break and expert South bites the bullet."

Oswald: "We keep getting questions about whether a player is legally entitled to pass his partner's forcing bid."

Alan: "Of course, he is! He does so at the risk of losing a partner, but he is not violating any law."
