

Sen. High to end legislative career

By DAVID MORRISSEY
Times-News writer

BOISE — Sen. Richard High will not be going back to the Idaho Legislature next year.

High announced Tuesday that he will not run for re-election this November to the District 25 seat he has held for the last 14 years.

Although the decision was unofficially known by several, High delayed a formal announcement until after his friend and fellow Republican Laird Noe opened his campaign for the soon-to-be-vacant seat. Noe announced his candidacy Tuesday.

"It's a changing process," High said, explaining his decision to retire. "It's just a matter of time. When I first went in, I had no idea I'd stay 14 years. But you get interested in the process and it's difficult to quit. But it's also healthy to have new blood."

High said he's seen many changes in state government, especially during his 10 years as chairman of the Joint Finance Appropriation Committee, the most powerful committee in the Legislature.

While many decisions of that budget-setting committee go unpublicized, High observed, they frequently affect individual lives more directly than do emotional "headline" issues.

One man who he has observed over the past years has been the mushrooming of the public services.

"If you reduce the size of the government," High said, "you can take almost any public service, and it's there usually because some group worked very hard to get it established."

High said his years of studying budgetary and fiscal matters has convinced him that Idaho needs increased "non-subjective," constitutional spending restraints.

"Tax restraints don't seem to work very often," High said. "But spending restraints do." Idahoans should be appreciative of their state constitution's balanced budget, he said.

High's retirement announcement brought immediate response from individuals in both parties.

"Few jobs are as tough as mastering the fiscal matters in the Joint Committee," said Jim Davidson, executive director of Idaho's Republican Party.

"Senator High was a great asset to Idaho there. He was one of the most knowledgeable people on taxes we've ever had. I think the state owes him a great debt of gratitude for the work he's done."

Reaction also came from Gov. John Evans, a Democrat and in the past a legislative foe of High's.

"I've known Dick High for almost 15 years," Evans said. "We came to the Legislature together after reappointment, and in 1967 we both served on the Joint Committee. Even though the two of us did not agree on the terms of some appropriation bills, we worked together to resolve those issues. I think his leadership on the Joint Committee will never be surpassed. People like Dick High are the kind of persons we are all very proud to know."

Silver Creek passes

House sends flow proposal to Senate

By DAVID MORRISSEY
Times-News writer

BOISE — With virtually no debate, the Idaho House Tuesday overwhelmingly approved proposed minimum stream flows for two sections of Silver Creek.

On a 63-4 vote, representatives endorsed House Concurrent Resolution 42.

That measure contains two minimum flows proposed by the State Water Resource Board, affecting some 21 miles of the Blaine County trout fishing stream.

The first would allow in-stream flows to drop no lower than 99 cubic feet per second (cfs) from the Flcabo Bridge to the confluence of Grove Creek and Stalker Creek.

The second would set a 74 cfs flow on a lower stretch of the stream running from the Flcabo Bridge to where Silver Creek intersects with U.S. Highway 93.

All 12 Magic Valley House members are Republicans. All but one, House Speaker Ralph Olmstead, R-Twin Falls, voted in favor of HCR 42.

Rep. Gene Winchester, R-Kuna, in the "only" debate Tuesday on the measure, urged legislative support of HCR 42. Winchester reminded legislators the water board had received 387 letters or written statements on the two proposed minimum flows. Only two of those opposed setting both flows at the water board's suggested levels, Winchester said.

HCR 42 now goes to the Senate. But House passage appears to mark the end of a plan to build commercial fish hatcheries on Silver Creek, a move which some said would seriously harm — the fish population — in that famous trout fishing stream.

Tuesday's vote came after hours of public testimony, at three separate meetings, on the proposed minimum flows and the fish hatchery proposals. At those hearings, a large majority of those who testified supported creation of the two flows and opposed the fish hatchery plan.

In a related action, the House also approved by a unanimous voice vote House Concurrent Resolution 36. That measure approves a Water Board minimum flow request of 30 cfs for a section of Wolf Lodge Creek, a tributary of the Coeur d'Alene River in Kootenai County.

Letting it flow

Twin Falls fireman Rick Frantz cranked open a hydrant on Wendell Street to let the water force out rust and deposits Tuesday. He and fireman Steve Johnson spent their day letting the water flow as part of a yearly cleaning process.

Massachusetts primary

BOSTON (UPI) — Jimmy Carter began an unstoppable march to the presidential nomination in New England four years ago.

No Republican is going to do that in 1980: Ronald Reagan has to be called the favorite again, but the road is going to be long and bumpy.

Reagan started as the consensus front-runner and got rudely bumped when George Bush won the Iowa caucuses and the Puerto Rico primary. Reagan untracked what some thought was going to be a Bush express train by whipping the former U.N. ambassador last week in New Hampshire.

Now, enter John Anderson. By denying both Reagan and Bush them the clean cut victory each coveted in big Massachusetts and little Vermont, he stopped both from building up the momentum all the campaigns believe is necessary to pile-up delegates and knock out competition.

A clear win in Massachusetts, the only state that went for George McGovern in 1972 and a citadel of liberal Republicanism in the nation, would have constituted a triumph for Reagan.

For Bush, Massachusetts was a lifeline. After losing what the polls had said was a good lead in New Hampshire, he was banking on a Massachusetts win to restore at least some of the momentum built up in his early wins.

He desperately needed the Bay State not only for delegates, but for a cushion against what is expected to be a tough week ahead for him in the South Carolina, Florida, Georgia and Alabama GOP primaries.

Bush saw the leak in the last weekend when the final Boston Globe poll showed he had lost a 3 to 1 lead in four weeks and was running virtually even with Reagan. Bush started talking about a "respectable" Massachusetts finish and emphasized he had a "national campaign" with sufficient funds to go the route to Detroit.

The pollsters, who warned everyone that the voters are volatile this year, picked up the Anderson surge in the week before the Massachusetts vote.

but missed its velocity. He was rated only a strong third when the pollsters looked up the final figures.

The New England showing leaves Anderson in a somewhat embarrassing position. He had neither the funds nor the organization to make an effort in the South and may now have to wait until the March 18 Illinois primary to try to capitalize on his sudden arrival as a bonafide contender.

The summation of all this is that none of the major Republican contenders is going to drive straight to the nomination. The leaves may be on the trees before it is clear who is going to win.

The Democrats? Sen. Edward Kennedy would have been out of the game if he had not won in Massachusetts.

In Massachusetts, with 91 percent of the precincts counted, the vote was:

| Candidate | Vote | Percent |
|--------------------|---------|---------|
| Democrats | | |
| Kennedy | 517,184 | 66 |
| Anderson | 227,846 | 29 |
| Brown | 26,591 | 3 |
| Republicans | | |
| Bush | 107,226 | 31 |
| Reagan | 99,046 | 29 |
| Baker | 17,137 | 5 |
| Connally | 3,969 | 1 |
| Crane | 3,850 | 1 |

Bush said in South Carolina he was "blatantly over-what's happened" and Reagan, in Los Angeles, said he had done better than he expected in both New England states, which he called "not exactly my territory."

Great Idaho-Maine potato war rages on AUGUSTA, Maine (UPI) — Idaho Potato Commission ads promote the state's spuds as the "perfect" mate for Maine lobsters.

"The ads are a blatant affront to the people of Maine, a state publicity official charged Tuesday.

"I've never seen an insult that's so directly aimed at a state as this one," said Maine Publicity Bureau Marketing Director Bruce Taylor.

"It's a blatant affront that should make the people of Maine so mad they should boycott Idaho potatoes and I would urge that."

The advertisements which began on network television last month claim Idaho has the "perfect potato" to serve as a side dish with Kansas beef, Virginia ham and Maine lobsters. "Maine's famous Downeast accent."

"We showed it all over the country and didn't aim it at Maine," said Gordon Randall, executive director of the Idaho Potato Commission. "I understand there's a little sensitivity in Maine, among the potato growers, but maybe it will help the lobster industry a little bit."

Maine's potato industry was the nation's top spud producer only 20 years ago, but now is fifth behind Idaho, Washington, Oregon and California.

"they've got some nerve. Maine potatoes taste much better and look a heck of a lot better," said the state's potato queen, Carrie Lothrop of Ashland.

Maine Gov. Joseph E. Brennan, who met with the potato queen Monday, said "Maine potatoes are the perfect mate for Maine lobsters, and they understand each other better. It seems they're trying to steal something we're famous for, but people will not be deceived."

Taylor said Maine growers should consider clearing their shelves of Idaho spuds, since "it's not in the interest of Maine people to have Idaho potatoes in their stores."

But Randall said "it wouldn't affect our shipments too much if they boycotted Idaho potatoes.

"Maine's not exactly one of our major markets."

© The Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — Major banks Monday raised their prime lending rate to a record-high 17.25 percent, fearing still higher inflation.

But Carter administration officials rejected credit controls that would affect most consumer and business borrowing.

The prime rate, charged by banks on loans to their most credit-worthy corporate borrowers, is the bellwether for other short-term interest rates and eventually affects mortgage interest rates and consumer loan charges.

Ever since this key rate broke new ground by climbing above 12 percent last August, it has risen rapidly: at the same time that the Federal Reserve Board jacked up interest rates as part of its anti-inflation strategy. The prime rate was lifted to 16.25 percent just last Feb. 15, after the Federal Reserve Board raised its key lending rate to a record 13 percent.

Secretary of the Treasury G. William Miller virtually ruled out use of the Credit Control Act of 1969 to increase down payments, shorten repayment periods or put a cap on the amount of bank loans.

Miller said President Carter might invoke the law, however, to give the Federal Reserve Board added powers to regulate lending by banks that are not members of the Federal Reserve system.

President Carter is expected to announce his new economic goals, including a balanced federal budget for the year starting Oct. 1, in a major speech late next week. Budget-cutting is expected to be the main focus of Carter's latest effort to reduce mounting inflation, which reached an 18 percent annual rate in January.

Carter hopes to eliminate a $15.8 billion deficit he projected when he sent his spending plan to Congress Jan. 28.

Miller and other top aides have rejected a steep tax on gasoline, rationing of gasoline and wage-price controls as remedies for the price spiral.

Meanwhile, Congress, flailing to find ways to balance President

Carter's budget for fiscal 1981, Tuesday bumped into its own spending ceiling for the current fiscal year and had to cancel all further action on key spending bills.

The crunch immediately delayed floor action on two major pieces of legislation: a Senate vote on a $17 million trade adjustment assistance act, and House action on an $8 billion foreign aid bill that contains aid for Nicaragua.

The budget problem is expected to stymie action on a spate of key money bills in both houses for at least four more weeks, and possibly even longer if the two sides cannot agree quickly on how to resolve the situation.

Among the proposals still to be caught in the crunch are renewal of the food-stamp program for the poor and President Carter's new plan to reinstate draft registration, which requires a $20 million appropriation.

The halt to congressional action on money bills came after the Congressional Budget Office reported that Congress had gone $10 billion over the $47.5 billion spending ceiling

"My heart is overflowing," Anderson told a victory party in Boston. He pledged to take his populist, plain talking campaign across the nation to prove he is not too liberal for the Republican party.

Kennedy won convincingly in the state where loyal Democrats have elected Kennedy since World War II. It was the win he needed to keep his critically ill campaign alive, and while it boosted morale, it did little to solve serious money and staff problems.

The Vermont Democratic presidential primary vote at 10:30 a.m. MST with 25 percent (25) of the state's 285 precincts reporting.

| Candidate | Vote | Percent |
|-----------|--------|---------|
| Carter | 24,896 | 75 |
| Kennedy | 8,441 | 25 |

| Republican presidential vote | Vote | Percent |
|------------------------------|--------|---------|
| Anderson | 18,600 | 30 |
| Reagan | 19,096 | 31 |
| Bush | 13,774 | 23 |
| Baker | 7,802 | 13 |
| Crane | 1,154 | 2 |
| Connally | 810 | 1 |
| Stassen | 96 | 0 |

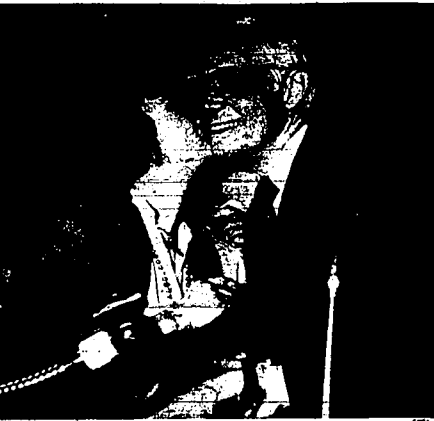

Carter congratulated Kennedy on his home state win and said he did better than expected by topping the senator 3 to 1 in Vermont.

Anderson's victory in Vermont and Massachusetts may not give his campaign the momentum as he hoped for since it may be wiped out in the south, where he has not campaigned extensively.

He said his next serious contest is March 18 in his home state of Illinois. Perhaps hardest hit by Anderson's sudden spurt was Bush, who had hoped to recover some of the ground lost when Reagan punched him out in

New Hampshire a week ago. Kennedy greeted about 1,500 supporters in a hotel ballroom and pledged to continue his campaign against Carter and the administration's record, "particularly on the economy."

"If our candidacy means anything and it means something after this evening's results — it is that the American people understand that the number one issue that is before the nation is the restoration of our economy and the American people will not tolerate an inflation rate of 20 percent and interest rates at 17 percent," Kennedy said.

Water pollution 'genocide'

RAPID CITY, S.D. (UPI) — A women's group charged Tuesday contaminated water is causing cancer, miscarriages and birth defects on the Pine Ridge Indian Reservation and in surrounding communities.

The group — Women of All Red Nations — called on the governors of Nebraska and South Dakota and the federal government to issue disaster declarations for the entire region.

"We don't need to look at papers any more. We have real, physical documentation: unborn children, deformed babies, youth suffering and dying from leukemia and ever-increasing cancer victims," said WARR founder Lorelle Means, wife of Indian activist Ted Means.

"Already 25 percent of our women have been sterilized. We are still under attack. This is genocide," she charged.

WARR showed water provided by the Lakota aquifer to the reservation and other arts of southwestern South Dakota and northwestern Nebraska contains dangerously high levels of radium and chemical contaminants.

The preliminary report did not blame any specific agency or individuals for the alleged contamination of the aquifer, an underground water source. Many of the possible causes listed were natural, such as radium deposits.

Death squads roam slums

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (UPI) — Assassination squads in Rio de Janeiro killed seven more people Tuesday in a campaign they claim is aimed at "cleaning up the city" of muggers and drug traffickers.

The morgue in Rio's poor northern suburbs said discovery of the seven additional bodies brought to 99 the number of such slayings in the past three months.

A gravel-voiced man known as "the public relations agent of the death squads" telephoned police to tip them to the whereabouts of many of the corpses.

Congress sets grain prices

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate and House Tuesday passed and sent to the White House a compromise agreement that will raise target prices for 1980 wheat and feed grains crops by 7 percent.

The Senate passed the measure "first" without dissent, then the House acted on voice vote and sent legislation to President Carter for his signature.

Under the measure, target price for wheat will be raised to $3.63 a bushel and corn to $2.35 a bushel.

Bert Parks successor reported

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (UPI) — Actor Ron Ely, the first television Tarzan and now a syndicated game show host, will succeed Bert Parks as the emcee of the Miss America Pageant, sources said Tuesday.

"It looks pretty good that it will be Ely," said a source at NBC, which televises the pageant. A source close to one of the sponsors also said Ely has been chosen.

Other entertainment industry sources said the 6-foot-6 Ely, TV's first Tarzan and currently the host of "Face the Music," had discussed the job with Miss America executives several times, most recently last Thursday.

Castro visit to Nicaragua

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (UPI) — Cuba's President Fidel Castro will soon visit Nicaragua, a member of the ruling Sandinista junta announced Tuesday.

Another official announcement called for a massive rally against the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency to protest alleged agency interference in Nicaragua's affairs.

Many Sandinista leaders are Marxists like Castro, but to date they have tried to maintain friendship with the United States.

Moses Hassan, a member of the five-member Junta of National Reconstruction, the government installed by Sandinista guerrillas after ousting dictator Anastasio Somoza last year in a bloody civil war, said Castro will visit Nicaragua "soon," but did not give a date.

Prior to and during the June-July civil war that forced Somoza to flee, members of the Sandinista National Liberation Front frequently visited Cuba.

Castro's trip to Nicaragua will be his first official visit since the Sandinistas seized power on July 19.

Meanwhile, the government-run Radio Sandino said 15,000 to 20,000 laborers will march today in front of the U.S. Embassy in Managua to protest "CIA intervention."

"The laborers, members of the Sandinista Workers' Center, demand an end to CIA manipulations to destabilize the economy of Nicaragua," the radio said.

Chemical munitions leaking

TOOELE, Utah (UPI) — At least 671 of the weapons in the huge stockpile of chemical munitions at the Tooele Army Depot are leaking nerve agents and other potentially lethal substances, a spokesman for the base said Tuesday.

The spokesman, Kathy Moore, also said depot officials believe there are additional leakers in the depot's 45,000-acre South Storage Area which haven't been located yet by inspectors.

Most of the defective weapons are leaking the nerve agent GB, she said. Others are leaking VX, another nerve agent.

Ms. Moore said the leaking weapons — M-55 rockets, artillery shells, land mines and 750-pound bombs — present no hazard to either base workers or civilians living near the base. The deadly chemical warheads in the weapons cannot escape from round storage bunkers known as igloos, she said.

Guardsmen fire on press

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (UPI) — National guardsmen, apparently still jittery from Monday's leftist guerrilla attack that left 18 people dead at a Guard headquarters, opened fire Tuesday on foreign press photographers, witnesses said.

They said the guardsmen began shooting when several foreign photographers, among them UPI staff photographer Oscar Sabetta, approached the National Guard headquarters to take pictures.

The men of the Guardia Nacional government forces and leftist continued throughout the day.

Witnesses said bands of leftists from the Popular Revolutionary Bloc seized four buses, forced passengers to get out and barricaded streets with the vehicles after shooting out the vehicle's tires.

Chip, wife split

AMERICUS, Ga. (UPI) — A Sumter County superior court judge Tuesday signed a final decree granting Caron Carter an uncontested divorce from President Carter's son, Chip.

Judge W.L. Blanks heard the divorce action last Friday when Mrs. Carter appeared in court with her attorneys.

Record cold harms Florida citrus, vegetable production

United Press International. A dangerous winter storm swooped out of the Rockies Tuesday and buried parts of the Plains in towering snowdrifts.

Crop-withering cold planted a kiss of death on Florida crops and put the squeeze on northern consumers — certain to pay higher prices for produce this spring.

Warm sunshine lured Virginia and North Carolina residents out of snow-buried homes for the first time in days and began melting snows that smothered the region during the weekend, killing at least 40 people.

Deep snow shrouded northwest Iowa, closing schools and snarling traffic.

"This is March and the girls basketball tournament is coming up and normally everybody gets stuck in the mudroom," an Iowa State Police spokesman said. "As long as there's basketball in Iowa, there's a blizzard."

Wind-whipped snow reduced visibility to 100 feet in some areas and turned highways into bobsled runs.

"There's a lot of cars and trucks in the ditches but no major accidents," the police spokesman said.

Florida and Georgia citrus growers and farmers — beset by three straight days of record cold — faced possible financial ruin. But conditions warmed encouragingly by mid-day and forecasters said the cold snap appeared over.

Tourists in Miami Beach grumbled and bundled up as the sun reported a low of 65 degrees Tuesday, the second straight day of record cold.

The temperature dipped to 21 degrees at Tallahassee, Fla., in its third straight day of record cold. Record lows were also set for the third straight day in Daytona Beach, Fla., at 28 degrees, and Augusta, Ga., at 19 degrees. Other records included a 25-degree reading at Jacksonville, Fla., and 18 degrees at Key West, Fla.

The cold decimated early spring carrots, potatoes, radishes, lettuce, squash, cucumbers, peppers and corn as far south as the Everglades.

U.S. population 230 million

Sunbelt fastest-growing

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. population increased by 16.8 million in the 1970s, with more than 40 percent of the growth occurring in California, Texas and Florida, the Census Bureau said Tuesday.

It said New York, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island and the District of Columbia had net population losses in the decade.

If the estimates hold up when the official 1980 census is conducted, California and Texas each would pick up two new congressmen, and Florida would gain three, the bureau said.

Arizona, Colorado, New Mexico, Oregon, Tennessee, Utah and Washington each would gain one seat.

New York would lose four congressional seats and Illinois, Ohio and Pennsylvania would drop two each.

Losing one seat each would be Massachusetts, Michigan, New Jersey and South Dakota, the bureau said.

In its Annual Estimates of the Population of States, the bureau said the population grew from 205,302,000 in 1970 to 220,095,000 by July 1, 1979 — an increase of 16,797,000 or 8.3 percent.

During that same period, California gained 5,723,000 people, bringing the state's estimated population to 22,694,000.

California remains the nation's most populous state, followed by New York with 17,648,000, despite a loss over the decade, and Texas with 13,380,000.

Texas' population grew by 2,182,000 or 19.5 percent, followed by Florida which had a 30.5 percent increase of 2,068,000 to 6,860,000.

New York's population declined 593,000 or 3.3 percent. Pennsylvania lost 70,000 of its population, down 0.6 percent to 11,731,000, and Rhode Island's population declined 20,000 or 2.1 percent to 929,000.

The District of Columbia had a drop of 101,000 or 13.4 percent to 656,000, the largest percentage decline in the nation.

Alaska remains the nation's most sparsely populated state, despite a 34.3 percent increase from 393,000 to 496,000. Wyoming increased 55.3 percent from 425,000 to 450,000, and Vermont had 493,000, up 10.9 percent.

Fastest growing states were Nevada, up 43.6 percent; Arizona, up 32 percent; Wyoming, Alaska and Florida.

Only sticky-fingered pinpointed for Abscam

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Undercover agents tried to limit the Abscam congressional bribery investigation to lawmakers willing "up front" to make promises and take bribes, FBI Director William Webster told Congress Tuesday.

But Peter W. Rodino, D-N.J., chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, said he was concerned the investigation brought "so much peril and jeopardy of innocent reputations."

A middleman would say a particular target was "in his pocket" or "could be had," Webster said.

Canal exemption proposal may not surface

BOISE — A resolution before the Idaho Legislature that would lower state water quality standards on portions of four Magic Valley streams will probably die in a legislative committee.

said that on stretches of Rock Creek, Cedar Draw Creek, Deep Creek and the Big Wood River they might be unable to comply with state water quality standards. HCR 43 would have removed most state water quality standards from the stretches of those streams — covering about 70 miles — used by the canal companies.

According to state water quality officials, the water quality regulations the canal companies have been meeting for several years. But Rosholt said that under different interpretations of the rules, the canal companies might not be able to comply. The companies only want to protect themselves from re-interpretations of the rules and keep operating in the way they have operated for more than 70 years, he said.

But at a legislative hearing last week, HCR-43 was opposed by the state Department of Fish and Game, the Idaho Conservation League and farmers who use water from those streams for trout ponds. The trout farmers feared that their trout could be killed by increased use of dewatering chemicals by the canal companies if the water quality standards were relaxed.

Noh said he plans to work toward coordinating agricultural and urban interests in the state if elected, a task that may be crucial as the Legislature begins to reapportion legislative districts.

While not now a major problem, bridging that gap will become increasingly complicated as the state continues to grow.

Rep. Rusty Barlow, R-Pocatello, said he feared the proposed law might be used by some other city in the future to "hold a club over the head" of a company with less financial reserves than Cyprus Mines.

Monday, Gov. John V. Evans vetoed an "excessive" $400,000 boost in the Legislature's continuing yearly operating budget.

Evans told the legislators they should submit a "more appropriate funding request at a later date," adding that the veto "would cause no immediate fiscal shortage for the Legislature."

DON'T RISK LOSING YOUR DIAMOND

Noh said a public decision concerning the location of power plants.

Kimberly Republican overall restriction and blockage of electrical projects... has brought us to the point where our national security is threatened.

Rep. Patricia McDermott, D-Pocatello, the only member to debate the bill following the sponsor, claimed it would give the attorney general too much power.

Rep. Gordon Hollifield, R-Jerome, said he was worried the level of taxation in the following five years might be too low.

The governor said another reason he rejected the appropriation was that the Legislature has not drawn up budgets for many state agencies.

Representatives vote for federal project review

BOISE — The House of Representatives Tuesday said it wanted more control over federal funds coming into Idaho.

State budgets are impacted by federal funds, said Rep. Larry Harris, R-Boise.

BOISE (UPI) — Consideration of a bill changing Idaho's school funding formula was delayed Tuesday following an unpleasant exchange of words between State Public Instruction Superintendent Jerry Evans and Rep. Wendy Ungricht, R-Boise.

But Mrs. Ungricht said the committee needed to see the figures before acting on the bill.

Join in Twin Falls' historic celebration

There's a once-in-a-lifetime celebration coming up and you can — and should — be part of it. This year the city of Twin Falls and several institutions observe their 75th anniversary. For several months now, a plan has been taking shape to commemorate this historical occasion — a plan which should take final form this Friday in a 9 a.m. meeting at City Hall. The activities will take place during a 10-day span, June 5-14, and include everything from a spud peeling contest to a parade. Several individuals and organizations already are committed to specific events and a celebration such as this should have virtually every club and organization involved. If you're proud of Twin Falls and want to see this celebration really be something to remember, attend Friday's meeting or contact the mayor or the Chamber of Commerce. Coordinating 10 days of activities is no easy task and the organizing committee will need all the volunteer help it can get. Enthusiasm and interest in the 75th anniversary has been building, but it all must come together in the next three months to make the celebration a success. Lend a hand, won't you — and join in the fun.

A place for beauty

To keep Twin Falls from becoming just more asphalt-and-concrete, future improvement projects must make a place for Mother Nature. Fortunately, a master plan has been submitted to the City Council to accomplish beautification goals. Although the plan is a framework to be phased in, council should ensure that beautification plays an important role in any future project. Motivation for the plan rests with the public, says architect Richard Heindel. "Its success will depend on just how concerned civic groups are for incorporating "green" into the projects. The plan is a step in the right direction. Now, let's be diligent to follow through and see it work.

A horse race

Los Angeles Times Syndicate WASHINGTON — You saw it on television, you read it in the newspapers, and it was reported in the polls. The contest in New Hampshire between George Bush and Ronald Reagan was going to be a "horse race," and "much too close to call." When over 2,000 newspapermen and pollsters assure you that the New Hampshire Republican primary is a toss-up between two men, you would be a fool to doubt their word. After all, among them they interviewed everyone in the state, not once but three times. So what really happened? Reagan beat Bush by 2-1. The days following the results I watched all the newscasts and read all the papers hoping to see someone from the media admit he or she was wrong. It was not to be. To decide who down in Washington National Airport and meet the reporters as they got off the plane from Manchester and ask them why they missed the boat so badly. The ones who were bitter and a few refused to comment, explaining that they "never talk to the press." The ones who were willing to discuss it at all had various excuses for their bad showing in New Hampshire. A nationally-respected political pundit said, "The citizens of New Hampshire didn't level with us. This is the most outrageous primary I have ever covered." "Are you saying people in New Hampshire lie?" "What other conclusion can you draw? We went into their shops, we stopped them on the streets, we drank coffee with them, the next day they could have done as well as tell us the truth." "Maybe they were telling you the truth at the time... Perhaps they changed their minds after they talked to you." "That's too simple an explanation. I believe the people who said they were going to vote for Bush were really closet supporters for Reagan. They wanted us to believe it would be a horse race, so we'd all stay around. My next column is going to be an expose on how the citizens of New Hampshire manipulated the press to make us all look like fools." "A TV commentator staged a revolt of the plane and tried to push by my camera. But I stuck a microphone in his face." "You really blew it in Manchester," I said.

He tried to put his coat over his head. "I am innocent of any wrongdoing," he replied. "When all the facts are in, the public will realize that we were given the wrong information by the Bush and Reagan campaign managers." "Bush's people insisted their man had the momentum to sweep the primary. Reagan's campaign headquarters told me they would be happy to get 25 percent of the vote. I split the difference and that's how I came up with the horse race. I've only been in this business 15 years. Anyone could have made the same mistake." The next person I managed to talk to was a leading pollster who said, "Although we came out originally with 41 percent for Bush and 41 percent for Reagan, we have reassessed our data and have concluded it should have been 23 percent for Bush and 59 percent for Reagan. When you're polling a large state like New Hampshire, you always have to allow a 27 percent margin of error." The last person to get off the plane was the Dean of Political Reporters. He was wearing a large state like New Hampshire, you always have to allow a 27 percent margin of error." The last person to get off the plane was the Dean of Political Reporters. He was wearing a large state like New Hampshire, you always have to allow a 27 percent margin of error." He tried to hit me over the head with his typewriter.

Firemen blunder

There were several points at which they could have walked away with a satisfactory contract. They could have had one before the strike began. They could have had one during the strike. Instead, the union leaders thumped themselves — on the chest — and bellowed: "Mc Tarzan, you Jane." They had the wrong Jane. This one rights from the start, they acted as if being on TV, swaggering, holding noisy rallies and talking tough were more important to them than the basic goal of getting a contract. Every time you turned on the TV news, one of them was indignantly hawking into the camera: "All we want is a contract," as if it were as simple as saying, "All we want is a cookie." But it isn't that simple. Your wife or mother will bake you a cookie. But you have to negotiate a contract with your mayor. And, who she's sitting in City Hall, she's not exactly the motherly type. When they realized they had blown it, they looked around for someone to blame. They tried accusing other Chicago unions of abandoning them. But the more experienced leaders of the other unions didn't get where they are by joining in outside pacts. Other unions tried to help. But they were amazed and disgusted at the way the firemen negotiated. The firemen mangled basic rules of bargaining, such as reaching apparent agreement, then suddenly popping up with entirely new demands. They would come within a hair of having an agreement, then decide that they wanted something more. But their worst blunder was in overestimating their own strength. That's something experienced negotiators don't do. They know how far they can go, what they can expect to get, so they get it and get out. Unfortunately for the rank-and-file firemen, their leaders never explained that to them. They convinced the firemen that all they had to do was walk off the job and City Hall would give them a contract. Now, two weeks after their burst of bravado began, they are wondering how they can get out of the strike with a few sheets of pride and some kind of scrap of paper with Jane Byrne's name on it. Now they have their hats off and they are no longer demanding, threatening or blustering. They are politely asking for a contract. But now Byrne isn't budging. Having won, she is letting them sweat. Maybe she feels that she is entitled to the pleasure of being ruthless. But that's a mistake. In fact, that attitude could be the firemen's last hope. Byrne could make herself looper classy by being a gracious winner, by letting the firemen return with some dignity and by making contribution to a minimum. But if she chooses to stand there with her foot on their chests for a while, she's taking a dolefulous risk. For one thing, nobody likes a bully, even if the bully is a petite blond. And if she insists on crushing them completely, it will be the act of a bully. If she chooses to stand there with her foot on their chests for a while, she's taking a dolefulous risk. For one thing, nobody likes a bully, even if the bully is a petite blond. And if she insists on crushing them completely, it will be the act of a bully. Editor, Times-News: The rebels talk about having free enterprise, but yet since the Tax and Grazing Act went into effect in 1934, the taxpayers of the U.S.A. have been footing the bill so that the stockmen could raise their stock on the public lands. Sort of a round about welfare program, wouldn't you say? So, if they do win the rebellion, it certainly appears like the taxpayers of Idaho are then going to be the distributor of the welfare program for the public land out of the tax money. Kind of ridiculous, and most asinine, wouldn't you say? To see what the Sagebrush Rebellion is all about, and its ramifications on the people of Idaho, please read Ted Trueblood's article in March 1980 issue of Field and Stream magazine. JEARLE E. Editor, Times-News: Ominous predictions have been made that the coming twenty years will cause to become as familiar with the term "Food Shortage" as we are at present with the term "Fuel Shortage." This may or may not be true. I have become convinced that high prices for vegetables in our food markets may encourage many of us to raise a good family garden in the 1980 season. The city of Twin Falls is favored with good soil and a plentiful supply of water. Citizens in other areas may be envious of the splendid opportunity which is ours in producing home-grown vegetables, fruit and berries. There is much satisfaction and confidence which comes when all question marks are removed relating to commercial fertilizers, preservatives and coloring agents. Healthful exercise results in spading, planting and cultivating. For me there is more purpose and enjoyment in spading or cultivating for an hour every morning than in running down the road. If my own boys can learn to raise their own food supply it may be life saving in some future year as learning to swim. And for each season a more plentiful, affordable and healthful supply of food is available. Some of our senior citizens have a vast wealth of know-how and friendship which they may be willing to share with younger neighbors. The local newspaper may be challenged to give publicity to The Garden of the Month beginning with plot preparation in April and end with putting the garden to bed in October. WM. RALPHS Twin Falls

think I decreed that. There was Donahue, charming, caring and boyish, struggling-to-be-liberal-espouse-his-background. And suddenly I had the feeling that he was acting for all the world just like Phil Donahue. In one feverish moment, it occurred to me that it must be bizarre to make a living being yourself. Furthermore, when you are being yourself on stage, are you acting? Does your self become a role you are playing? After my week of undercover work, I have a list of people whose job in life largely consists of being who they are. These are people who cannot introduce themselves without sounding as if they're name-dropping. They are people who can be trapped by their own image. The television "personality" is the most distilled version of this Self Syndrome. Celebrities may be people who are famous for being famous. But "personalities" are people who are talented in the art of being a natural. Their "personality" is their tool kit, their union card, their paycheck. Personalities are to actors as autobiographies are to biographies. If actors feel sucked into the parts they are playing in Shakespeare or Stoppard, just imagine the difficulty of maintaining a sense of identity when you are "acting" as yourself. From my bed watch, I thought of the athletes and their gold medals. I thought of the amateurs who win by joining their best and then market that victory by being the persons who once did their best. "Remember me? I'm Jean Claude Killy," says the skier on the set doing a fine imitation of his former self. At some point, the true-life drama of Bruce Jenner and his wife Chris must have become such a commodity. Their real feelings were played and replayed on the mass media stage until they must have seemed as unbelievable as a fairy tale. After years trapped as the romantic lead in the Decathlon Tale, Bruce Jenner went Hollywood. It is entirely possible that he had to do something unlike himself — to hang onto his uniqueness. It happens all the time. Watching the candidates from my horizontal vantage point, I thought that there must be a moment when the character "you have created" seems like a caricature. A moment when you feel oddly distanced from your own image. What does John Anderson think of the "I'm not a politician" candidate he has become? Does Ronald Reagan ever wonder what this creature Ronald Reagan would say about an issue? At 3 o'clock in the morning does Jimmy Carter think of himself as the best leader? Most of us have at least one moment when we feel like the Wizard of Oz. We have all experienced self-doubt, doubt about the validity of our own sense of self, a depth of our own feelings. But there is something about public life that accentuates that process. I have felt it myself. After three weeks on a book tour, talking, talking, more talking, at times I have felt a sense of unreality saying things I meant sincerely. By sheer repetition, they begin to sound fake. It was as if I were role-playing my own life story. It was a spooky feeling. I suspect that we can only feel real when we are private. We instantly behave when we are being watched. I also suspect that many public people are uncomfortable with the notion that strangers "know" them. Authentically is a slippery thing, hard to keep a grip on. To the degree that people fit complete, static image — even one of their own creation — they attack their own uniqueness. If nothing else, we are all most aware of our own complexity, vacillations, contradictions and changes. We are simply different from one moment, one day, to another. And we don't have to be wasted by the flu to remember that.

Some captives freed

BOGOTA, Colombia (UPI) — The terrorists in the Dominican Embassy have agreed to free an injured hostage and several Colombian citizens, but will keep U.S. Ambassador Diego Asencio and other diplomats captive for at least the next few days, a government source said Tuesday.

The source said the government expected that a Peruvian diplomat who tore a muscle in his leg would be freed along with several Colombian citizens. But by nightfall, there was no sign of hostage release and it appeared the earliest it would occur would be Wednesday morning.

He said the terrorists, members of the left-wing April 19 Movement, agreed to free another group of hostages after the government postponed a second round of ransom negotiations, insisting that certain "details" had yet to be worked out.

The source said he now expected the negotiations to resume Wednesday but cautioned that freedom for the rest of the hostages — including most of Bogota's senior diplomatic corps — was at least several days away.

There was little activity outside the embassy, a two-story, fortress-like structure where diplomats from 17 countries, including 13 ambassadors, spent their seventh day as hostages.

Occasionally Asencio or one of the other ambassadors appeared in front of a window, forced to stand there to test the government's pledge that its ring of troops and police sharpshooters would not open fire.

One official source said no break in the siege was expected until after Sunday's nationwide municipal and state elections.

Khomeini overrules embassy militants

United Press International

Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini overruled the militants at the U.S. Embassy in Tehran, has ruled that the U.N. panel will meet the 50 American hostages, Iran's foreign minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh said Tuesday night.

Ghotbzadeh emerged from a meeting of the ruling Revolutionary Council to say the council has approved the meeting of the panel with the hostages, an official Pars News Agency report broadcast on Tehran radio said. The radio was monitored in London.

The minister added that Khomeini, who diplomats agree is the ultimate key to the meeting and eventual freeing of the hostages, has approved the meeting between the U.N. group and the U.S. captives.

Ghotbzadeh did not say when the meeting would take place and did not specify whether the panel would see all the hostages. Although the council meeting was also attended by President Abolhassan-Bani-Sadr, it was Ghotbzadeh who talked to the press afterward.

Earlier Muslim militants, defying the Revolutionary Council, said they would not permit the U.N. commission to meet with all 50 Americans held hostage in the U.S. Embassy.

But a militant spokesman said the commission would be able to visit with some of the Americans, in their 122nd day of captivity, on the basis that they are "spies, not hostages."

That statement — in a telephone interview with UPI in London — was the latest in a series of confusing and seemingly contradictory announcements by the militants throughout the day.

First, a militant spokesman was quoted on Tehran radio as saying a visit by the commission with some — but not all — of the Americans would be allowed.

Several hours later, the radio said that they had no idea where he was.

Soviets push Afghan rebels into hills

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (UPI) — A major Soviet offensive rolling across the eastern plains of Afghanistan has sent 10,000 rebels retreating into the mountains, a guerrilla group said Tuesday.

The Hizbi Islami (Islamic Front) headquarters in Peshawar, Pakistan, said the Soviet attack set off a new exodus of refugees, many of whom died trying to ford a river to stay ahead of the Soviet juggernaut.

The front said its fighting men moved into mountain strongholds in Kunar province after Soviet troops backed by tanks and aircraft forced them out of the plains.

"Our strongholds are under heavy artillery fire from tanks while helicopter gunships and MIG fighter-bombers are carrying out continuous raids, a front spokesman said.

"Many civilians, especially women and children, drowned in the Kunar River when trying to flee from the advancing Soviets," he added.

The spokesman said fighting was very heavy around in the Kunar valley towns of Asmara and Shegal, which were captured by the Soviets.

deated a major Soviet push in 12 Afghan provinces has been underway in the past week. But they have avoided calling it the long-expected "spring offensive," since winter conditions are still hampering Moscow's military efforts.

The offensive was timed with a Radio Kabul report which quoted Afghan President Babrak Karmal as saying "limited Soviet troops will remain in the country until all conspiracies against Afghanistan are eliminated."

The report, monitored in New Delhi, India, did not explain if "limited" meant a partial withdrawal of the 75,000 Soviet troops occupying the Texas-sized nation.

The Afghan Interior Ministry, in a statement broadcast on Kahul Radio monitored in London, said the curfew in the capital was eased and is now in force from 9 p.m. to 4:30 a.m. daily.

In Washington, the Pentagon announced that a battalion of 1,800 Marines would arrive at Phataya, Thailand, Wednesday en route to the Indian Ocean where they are due in mid-March.

Pentagon spokesman Thomas Ross also told correspondents the United States was continuing to deploy 21 ships in the Arabian Sea compared to 32 ships for the Soviet Union.

Police guard dissident's conference

MOSCOW (UPI) — Unformed militants Tuesday physically barred Western correspondents from attending a dissident news conference at the former Moscow apartment of exiled human rights campaigner Andrei Sakharov.

Members of an American TV crew reported that two Soviet policemen pushed them back into an elevator when they tried to get out on Sakharov's former apartment floor.

The unexplained official move coincided with the opening Tuesday in Moscow of the annual congress of the prestigious Academy of Sciences, to which Sakharov, although a member, has pointedly not been invited.

On Jan. 22, he was banished to the closed city of Gorky and stripped of his many state honors.

Commemorate famous train

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (UPI) — The "Chattanooga Choo-Choo" didn't leave Pennsylvania Station at a quarter-to-four, nor steam through Carolina, but it gave Glenn Miller a smash hit in the 1940s and endeared itself to a Tennessee city.

Residents in the Tennessee-Georgia border city will gather today at the station, ride the rails the "Choo-Choo" once traveled and take a day-long sentimental journey into the past in what has been proclaimed as "Chattanooga Choo-Choo Day."

The celebration will mark the 100th anniversary of the train, which left the Cincinnati station on March 5, 1880. A reporter on board dubbed the train the Chattanooga Choo-Choo and the name stuck.

But it was the song that caught wartime America's fancy and made the city famous.

"What's real crazy is that the train never left Pennsylvania station and never went to Carolina," said Allan Casey, chairman of the board of the Choo-Choo, a Chattanooga business organization that has restored the city's railroad terminal. "Mack Gordon wrote the words that rhymed, so he took a little liberty."

Chattanooga Mayor Pat Rose, Cincinnati Mayor J. Kenneth Blackwell and about 70 others will board a Southern railroad VIP train at 8 a.m. today in Cincinnati and travel the Choo-Choo's old route.

The diesel-drawn train with a dome car, dining car and a sleeper will arrive in Chattanooga about 4 p.m. where it will be met by a band blaring out the swinging Miller song and by hundreds of others joining in the celebration.

Later, a Tea Dance will be held and a concert conducted in the Chattanooga Choo-Choo complex, a 24-acre hotel-restaurant center located in the city's old Terminal Station.

The Choo-Choo complex features three restaurants, numerous gift and hobby shops and a hotel, which has 48 rooms located in renovated railroad cars.

Blindness ends physician's career

CHINO, Calif. (UPI) — Twenty patients lined up outside the door of Dr. Arthur R. Hederman's office Tuesday morning, but the 79-year-old physician could not treat them.

The state has ordered Hederman to stop practicing because he is blind.

"Oh, I'd like to keep going of course," he said. "I was hoping an operation would fix me up, but it didn't. If I can't see, well, I'm not going to fight it."

The door was unlocked once again Tuesday morning for the media — not for patients. The doctor's nurse said she opened the office because of dozens of requests for interviews and photographs after a UPI story described the doctor's situation.

The patients, she said, lined up out of a habit.
For the past 28 years, Hederman has offered inexpensive medical care to hundreds of patients in Chino, a town of approximately 37,000 people located 35 miles east of Los Angeles.

Diabetes stole his sight in 1978, but until last week Hederman treated nearly 90 patients a day.

An office visit was $8. If a patient needed a shot, the price was $10. Except for insurance cases, Hederman has never sent out a bill in his 45-year career.

"Oh, I did all right," Hederman said between television interviews. Some people never paid, but most did. "Some folks would just leave a sack of oranges."

"Gee, years ago I would do physicals for sandwiches."
The state Board of Medical Quality Assurance ordered the doctor to end his 45-year medical practice or be closed down by the attorney general.

A board spokesman said there have been no formal charges filed against Hederman.

Vern Leeper, the board's manager for enforcement, said however he was aware of Hederman's reputation. "I've heard about the gentleman," Leeper said, "but if he's blind there's a limit about what he can do."
More than 10 years ago, Hederman did have a confrontation with the board. Investigators said he was prescribing too many diet pills. The doctor pleaded that 300 prescriptions for amphetamines over a two-month period was no excessive since he wrote roughly 1,000 prescriptions during the same period.
The board did not revoke Hederman's license and he voluntarily gave out of the diet business. Office nurse Dorothy Holmes said since Hederman's blindness she would describe a patient's symptoms to him and he would check their heartbeat and vital signs.
Holmes said she never performed any treatment requiring eyesight.

Did Marilyn star in '48 porn film?

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (UPI) — The editor of a Swedish magazine said Tuesday he hoped to sell still photographs in the United States from a pornographic movie in which he claimed Marilyn Monroe starred.

The magazine, FIB-Aktuell, published the pictures this week under the headline "World Sexop."

"We bought the film for $23,500 but we hope to sell pictures from it in the States," said editor Lars Petterson.

FIB-Aktuell bought the film, thought to have been made in 1948, from a Swede who wanted to remain anonymous, Petterson said.

The Swede bought it as part of a job lot of pornographic movies in Los Angeles 10 years ago, he said.

"We have examined stills of the film in the film and compared them carefully with pictures of Marilyn Monroe and we're sure it is her," said Petterson.

FIB-Aktuell claimed in an editorial that comparison of the girl's nose, teeth and eyes showed she was Miss Monroe.
Petterson admitted that the girl was not as slim as Miss Monroe. "But it is well known that she had weight problems," he said.

Egypt, Israel criticize U.S. vote at nations

United Press International — Israel Tuesday angrily rejected a U.N. resolution condemning its settlement policy in occupied Arab territories and Egypt welcomed the vote, choosing to ignore Washington's claim of support for the measure was a mistake.

U.S. Secretary of State Cyrus Vance accepted responsibility for the American vote in the U.N. Security Council, which unanimously condemned Israel's policy of resettling Jews in occupied Arab territories.

McHenry was instructed to abstain in the vote unless references to Jerusalem were deleted. But an "aye" vote was cast even though some references to Jerusalem were left in.

The Israeli Cabinet unanimously rejected the resolution in a stormy six-hour session and said American support for the "repugnant resolution" gives rise to deep resentment and sharp protest among the people of Israel.

The criticism of the American stance came despite Carter's message calling the result of a misunderstanding.

Sources in the Cabinet said Carter's letter, explaining the American mistake arising during the session and was roundly condemned as detrimental to the Middle East peace process.

Vance takes responsibility for settlement vote 'foul-up'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Secretary of State Cyrus Vance accepted blame Tuesday for the U.S. decision to cast a U.N. vote against Israeli settlements in occupied Arab territories and was later denounced by President Carter.

U.S. and foreign diplomats agreed the episode will hurt the Middle East peace negotiations, and the American role as mediator in the area.

At issue was a U.S. vote in the Security Council Saturday. Ambassador Donald McHenry, acting on Vance's orders, voted for a resolution condemning Israeli settlements in occupied Arab territories.

Carter said Monday night the vote had been an error — the result of failed communications.

Vance, spokesman, Hadding Carter, said Tuesday "Secretary of State Vance accepts the responsibility for the failure in communication. The statement is simple: Secretary Vance accepts responsibility for this foul-up."

McHenry told a news conference Vance instructed him to vote for the resolution condemning Israeli settlements in one paragraph regarding Jerusalem and "Israel respect-for-religious freedom was deleted."

That paragraph was cut out and McHenry accordingly cast the U.S. vote on the resolution, which the council passed unanimously. However, the resolution, as it emerged, contains seven other references to Jerusalem, equating the old part of the city with the other territories occupied by Israel since the 1967 war.

It was those references, appearing to support a divided city of Jerusalem, which prompted the White House Monday to disavow McHenry's vote and say that he should have abstained.

McHenry, clearly embarrassed by the switch, said he had included the references to Jerusalem were the real source of Israeli anger over the U.S. vote.

He said the rest of the resolution condemning Israeli settlements in the occupied territories accurately expressed U.S. policy that those settlements were contrary to international law and an obstacle to peace negotiations.

U.N. Ambassador Donald McHenry in wake of 'foul-up' vote

McHenry said it was too bad the controversy obscured the central point in the Security Council resolution — unanimous condemnation of the Israeli settlements.

He predicted the effect of the U.S. switch will be that the United States "gets the worst of both worlds" — ill feeling from both the Arabs and the Israelis.

Marxist wins in Rhodesia Mugabe appeals to whites to stay

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (UPI) — Robert Mugabe emerged from a landslide victory as Africa's first freely elected Marxist leader Tuesday and appealed to Rhodesia's fearful white minority to stay in the country and help him moderate it.

The prime minister-elect's nationwide television appeal came as blacks poured into the streets of Salisbury to demand security forces patrolled to avert any violence following the former guerrilla chief's election victory, which gave him a clear majority in parliament.

With a massive cooperation from rival guerrilla leader Joshua Nkomo and the country's last white prime minister, Ian Smith, Mugabe declared, "We don't want to drive anyone out of the country."

In one major move aimed at reconciliation, he announced white military commander Lt. Gen. Peter Walls, who led the war against his guerrilla forces, would remain in command of the army.

The broadcast followed an earlier declaration by the former guerrilla leader that he planned to invite Nkomo and white leaders to join him in a moderate government.

He said his government's first priority would be to create an atmosphere of peace and security, and stressed law and order and private property would be respected, allaying fear by whites that he would seize their property.

"I wish a moderate government could come overnight," Mugabe urged Rhodesians of all races to forget "our grim past" and to work together to rehabilitate the society and economy after a seven-year bush war.

He assured civil servants they would receive their pensions and all accrued benefits.

Rhodesian troops patrolled the capital to prevent clashes with whites or rival supporters after Mugabe had met with British governor Lord Soames, who officially asked him to form a government to lead the breakaway British colony to independence.

But the reaction among whites, who had pinned their hopes on the more moderate Bishop Abel Muzorewa, was starkly different than that of the blacks, who jubilantly danced in the streets.

A stunned and sullen silence descended on streets and restaurants in white areas. One woman was seen pulling her car to the side of a road and bursting into tears. The stock market opened sharply lower.

Muzorewa and his followers were equally dismayed. The bishop claimed seven of his supporters were stoned to death by mobs during the night and others were beaten up and had their houses ransacked.

South Africa warns Mugabe

United Press International — Black African nations Tuesday hailed the victory of Marxist leader Robert Mugabe in the Rhodesian elections, but neighboring South Africa — the white-ruled nation on the continent — warned the new government sternly against guerrilla tactics.

The United States called the vote a historic occasion and congratulated Mugabe and pledged economic aid for the "return and resettlement" of refugees displaced in seven years of guerrilla war in the breakaway British colony.

"help overcome whatever problems may arise... until independence." "The need now is for national unity and reconciliation," said Britain's Foreign Secretary Lord Carrington.

South African Prime Minister Pieter Botha said Pretoria would accept the election result as reflecting the wishes of the Rhodesian people.

But he warned Mugabe that Zimbabwe — as Rhodesia will soon be called — would suffer if it allowed its territory to become a guerrilla base for opponents to the South African government.

"Any neighbor which allows its territory to be used for attacks on or the undermining of South Africa and its security will have to face the full force of the republic's strength," Botha said.

Bill awaits governor's signature

Wyoming joins 'Rebellion'

CHEYENNE, Wyo. (UPI) — A "Sagebrush Rebellion" bill giving control of public lands in Wyoming to the state government won final approval in the Senate Tuesday, with an added provision aimed at protecting the bill in a potential court fight.

The proposal, sponsored by Rep. Marlene Simons, R-Crook, and 35 co-sponsors, would bring under state Land Commission control all federally administered "unappropriated" public lands in the state.

Sen. Tom Strock, R-Natrona, succeeded in attaching an amendment to the bill which specified that only unappropriated public lands would be brought under state control.

He said the added language would help the state preserve the bill if it was challenged in court, which he said was almost certain.

Without that provision, he said, persons with interests in public lands already appropriated for specific purposes would argue against the bill in court.

Opponents of the proposal have expressed fears that once the federally controlled lands are given to the state, the Land Commission may sell the lands into private ownership.

At a hearing last week, environmentalists also said multiple use of the lands could be diminished under state control and that a massive bureaucracy — comparable to federal agencies now administering the lands — would be created to manage the lands.

State Land Commissioner Oscar Swan, however, assured opponents that the current sentiment of the commission was against selling public lands, and that the state could do a better job of managing the land than the federal government.

The bill itself allows the sale of public lands acquired by the state, but requires public hearings prior to any sales or trades.

Gov. Ed Herschler said at a press conference late last week he supported the movement and would endorse a Sagebrush Rebellion bill.

List tours Nevada talking about the MX

CARSON CITY (UPI) — Gov. Robert List set out Tuesday on a three-day tour of rural Nevada to tell residents what he has been doing about the proposal to locate the MX missile project in the state.

List and other state officials scheduled meetings with local officials in Tonopah today, Alamo Wednesday, and Caliente, Pioche, Panaca and Ely Thursday.

"I want the people of Nevada to know what is being done in their behalf to assure that we are not steamrollered in a massive project that would have no regard for our way of life," List said.

Accused kidnapper served prison time also in Utah

UKIAH, Calif. (UPI) — A quiet-mannered hotel clerk with a sex conviction on his record — as well as newly disclosed other crimes — went to court Tuesday and pleaded innocent to a charge of kidnapping one of two boys found living with his family-style at a remote mountain cabin.

It was learned for the first time Tuesday the prison record of Kenneth Eugene Parnell, 48, also included time served in Utah for robbery and grand larceny.

Parnell appeared twice before Justice Court Judge James Luther on a charge of kidnapping 5-year-old Timmy White who disappeared last Valentine's Day.

Authorities also prepared charges against Parnell for luring Steven Stayner, 14, away from his family seven years ago and drifting with him from town to town in Northern California.

Both boys were joyfully reunited with their parents last weekend. Young Stayner returned home to Merced, Calif., having grown to a strapping 6-footer during his long absence.

He said his abductor told him when he lured him into a car off the streets of Merced in 1972 that his parents no longer wanted him, and he believed the man, and came to call him "daddy."

Authorities said Timmy White had not been sexually molested. They won't comment if the same was true of Steven.

Handcuffed, wearing jail denim, the chubby, graying Parnell stood with his head down in court and at first entered no plea to the charge of nabbing Timmy White. An hour and a quarter later he reappeared and, in the course of a hearing on a gag order, pleaded innocent.

Luther granted the gag order, barring police or court officers from discussing evidence in the case, and also raised bail for Parnell from $7,000 to $20,000. Parnell had not made court for March 12 before Luther. He was represented in court by Scott LeStrange, a public defender appointed to the case.

A preliminary hearing was scheduled for March 12 before Luther to determine if evidence warrants holding Parnell for trial.

In Merced, Calif., District Attorney Pat Hallford said he planned to file kidnap and child-stealing charges against Parnell "within 24 hours" or Stayner's Dec. 4, 1972, abduction were completed.

"We may eventually combine the two cases and have both trials in one county," Hallford said, "but for now we'll file separate charges here in Merced and transport him down here for court appearances."

'Bigfoot' turns out to be trashy imitation

RIVERDAL, E. Utah (UPI) — Police man Rich Dean thought he had the legendary "Bigfoot" in the bag, but it turned out to be only a trashy imitation.

Following a rash of Bigfoot sightings recently in northern Utah, Dean saw what looked like the elusive creature itself standing in the middle of South Weber Drive. On second glance, the "beast" looked more like a dummy constructed from plastic trash bags — which is what it turned out to be.

It was late at night and Dean almost drew down on the seven-foot creature with his police revolver before he realized he was dealing with "Bigbag" rather than Bigfoot.

"I jumped out of my car and walked toward it. I was apprehensive," said the officer.

Dean decided he shouldn't be the only one fooled by the wood scrap-and-carpet-remnant-filled construction. The patrolman called Police Officer Michael Dally and reported the capture of Bigfoot. "It was here for 15 seconds," Dean said of Dally.

Eventually, seven other officers and one reporter were taken in by the hoax.

Lines at service stations return in some U.S. areas

By PETER J. BERNSTEIN
Newhouse News Service
WASHINGTON — Although Americans are driving less and conserving fuel, gasoline lines are back in some parts of the country.

Letter, a weekly publication that reports on "oil" trends. "What is keeping present gasoline supplies from reaching markets that need them is an allocation system that requires uniform treatment in broad geographical areas," the Los Angeles-based letter says.

Federal energy officials maintain that the allocation system works pretty well in spreading gasoline supplies evenly. But they say the system could be even more responsive.

Increase in number of Idaho farm workers reported

BOISE (UPI) — The number of farm workers in Idaho during the week of Jan. 12 increased from 22,000 last year to 32,000 this year, the state Crop and Livestock Reporting Service said today.

Family workers accounted for 15,000 of the 16,000 weekly individual workers accounted for the remainder, the service said. Family workers averaged 36.1 hours per week while individual farm workers averaged 36.2 hours a week.

The service said farm workers in Idaho averaged about $3.72 per hour for all methods of pay, compared to the U.S. average of $3.69.

Beef promotion proposal rejected

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The first official vote count indicates 65 percent of producers who voted in a national beef referendum rejected a proposal to tax themselves for a beef research and promotion program.

The National Cattlemen's Association announced the defeat of the proposal last week. The department's announcement was the first official tally of the Feb. 19-20 vote.

Carlson said it appeared cattle producers voted against being assessed a small percentage of the value of each head of cattle sold because they feared government control of the program.

Harness for Camas Prairie geothermal energy prepared

By BRUCE HAMMOND
Times-News Staff Writer

FAIRFIELD—Operating an ethanol plant with geothermal energy is just one goal several Camas Prairie residents have for the near future.

"We're hoping to harness this geothermal energy we have to help even out some of the seasonal unemployment we suffer in this area," explained Mike Danielson, Wood River Resource Area coordinator in Camas County.

Danielson and others are working with an $8,000 grant recently received from the Economic Development Association. The grant is financing a feasibility study that may lead to construction of a 1-million-gallons-per-year ethanol plant by next year.

It is hoped that an ethanol plant, plus other geothermal proposals, including recreational hot springs and aquaculture, will relieve annual layoffs in farm and logging operations, according to Danielson. The feasibility study includes electromagnetic research to locate several faults running through the Camas Prairie near Fairfield, Forsgren and Perkins Creeks. Sections of Idaho Falls began the feasibility study in February.

Three major faults connect just north of Fairfield. According to Danielson, these faults are part of an active geothermal line extending from northern Camas County to Miracle Hot Springs near Buhl.

"It's pretty much a renewable resource, too—one that can be continually tapped," Danielson claimed.

"The first step is drilling a well," said Danielson. "The rest will come together once we have a feasible resource. For one thing, it will attract industry."

Preliminary plans call for drilling a 2,000-foot well to harness steam and hot water for the proposed ethanol plant. Earlier studies indicate a 2,000-foot well would provide at least a 170-degree resource, according to Danielson.

"You have to have heat to run an ethanol plant, and hooking up a plant with a geothermal development will work really well," Danielson claimed.

One possible site being considered is five miles west of Fairfield, near Carlat. However, Danielson stressed that other sites are also being considered.

"We figure a well like this will cost about $80,000 because of safeguards against blowouts and other requirements," Danielson said.

According to Danielson, a geothermal well has to have the same safety devices an oil well requires, causing construction costs to be high.

No cost estimate for the ethanol plant will be given until after the feasibility study is completed by Energy Services. Danielson said 11 million gallons of ethanol per year is a relatively small production figure. This estimate is based on the amount of grain Camas County farmers could sell to the plant at competitive prices.

Danielson stressed that once a geothermal well is drilled, establishing Camas Prairie as an energy source, the county's struggling economy will rise.

"After all, records show that the Fairfield area economy has been slowly declining since the 1930s," Danielson claimed. "If we want to preserve the kind of life we have up here, then we have to find some alternative economies to supplement the farming and logging industries."

Danielson said one method of financing the proposed plant is through grants and loans obtained through a non-profit organization such as the Camas Prairie County Geothermal Association, established about ten years ago.

"Of course that would depend on a vote from the association membership," he stressed, "but a non-profit group like that is eligible for federal grants as well as loans."

Ground work for the feasibility study began last summer when Danielson and Fairfield Mayor Russell Hollenback conducted a study of Camas Prairie wells.

All wells studied registered higher water temperatures than local surface water, according to Danielson. For example, water in Fairfield's city well stays about 67 degrees all year, compared to significantly cooler surface water. Hot springs bubbling from numerous Camas Prairie geostures average between 168 and 191 degrees.

St. Benedict's ready for disasters

By RON ZELLAR
Times-News Staff Writer

JEROME—St. Benedict's Hospital is prepared for major disasters but is frequently shorthanded for daily patient care, the hospital's administrator said.

A recent incident in the St. Benedict's emergency room underscores the fact that the hospital needs two or more additional doctors, said Bob Campbell, administrator.

On Feb. 13, a smoke-inhalation victim from a potato shed fire was told he would have to wait and advised to see his family doctor at Mizie

Valley Memorial Hospital in Twin Falls.

Doctors at St. Benedict's were busy treating three persons seriously injured in an automobile accident that occurred the same afternoon on Interstate 80.

In addition, Campbell said, the hospital had 29 patients in its medical care wing, nearly double the average patient load.

A recently revised hospital disaster plan spells out staffing and space allocations in the event of a major accident, such as a school bus crash, he said.

Doctors and additional staff would be called from nearby hospitals as needed.

"A downstairs section of the hospital would be used for triage—the process of sorting out patients and assessing their priority for attention."

The most critically injured would be seen in another area. Family members and the media would be assigned still other areas.

In the event of an even larger disaster, areas of the high school would be used for temporary shelter and a morgue, Campbell said.

Gooding airport survey proceeds

By BRUCE HAMMOND
Times-News Staff Writer

GOODING—A contract was issued to survey the Gooding Airport and garbage collection fees were raised Monday by the Gooding City Council.

Council members approved surveying the east end of Gooding Airport for proposed expansion this summer. J-U-B Engineers Inc. of Twin Falls was awarded the surveying contract to begin this month.

The proposed expansion hinges on opening a large area east of the Gooding runway for construction of three, 100-foot-long hangars. The expansion also includes paying a frontage access road to the runway, and building an access road to the hangars, according to Gooding Mayor Gene Heller.

"No estimate of the survey was possible at this time, because we asked Bill Block (of J-U-B) to survey Rice Avenue at the same time," Heller said.

Rice Avenue, a cul-de-sac in southwest Gooding, is scheduled for paving this summer.

"People there have been told that street will be paved every year for a long time, and we're going to see that it's finally done," Heller said.

Council members also voted to raise garbage collection rates to meet rising operation costs. Gooding operates its own garbage collection system.

Bluff development OK

SUN VALLEY — Planning officials voted Monday to allow the controversial Bluff development overlooking Elkhorn Village.

On a 5-1 vote, the Sun Valley Planning and Zoning Commission approved designs for 88 one- and two-bedroom condominiums on the bluff. Later phases of the planned unit development would place as many as 400 units on the 30-acre site.

Commission member Bill Taylor said his colleagues felt they had reached a point where the development could not be stopped. "Essentially, the objections are esthetic," Taylor said. "I'm sure Elkhorn feels they could win the case in court."

Elkhorn at Sun Valley first presented the development for design review and plat approval last October, but action was deferred in November when it became apparent mayor-elect Richard Heckmann would replace several members of the commission.

Residents of the Bonne Vie development below the bluff raised mild objections to the plans, stating that their view of the surrounding hills would be partly obscured by the new development.

But Elkhorn President John Harker said nearly all residents of the area purchased their condominiums through Elkhorn Realty, which has prominently displayed a model showing future expansion on the bluff.

Second computer pitch presented

JEROME—A second computer firm made its pitch Monday to the Jerome County Commissioners.

Richard Mc Cullough, area manager for Burroughs Corporation, said his firm could offer the county a higher trade-in value on its present bookkeeping equipment and more versatile expansion as its computer needs grow.

With 63 installations in southern Idaho, Mc Cullough said Burroughs offers the largest base of any computer firm in the state.

A Burroughs system tailored to the county's desires would cost slightly more than $70,000, he said. A salesman for International Business Machines said in January his firm could install a system for about $80,000.

Officials find nursing home care lacking

BY STEPHANIE SCHOROW
Times-News Writer

TWIN FALLS — An unannounced inspection of the Hazeldean-Skyview Manor by state health officials has found "significant problems in patient and nursing care."

These problems may indicate inadequate staffing of trained personnel, according to Jean Schoonover, Department of Health and Welfare supervisor of licensing and certification.

The three-day inspection, held last week, comes amid allegations by some employees that staff cutbacks have hurt patient care.

The inspection was a scheduled follow-up of one held last August in which the home was ordered to correct certain deficiencies, Schoonover said.

Richard Drake, who has managed the manor for a month, said present deficiencies stem from previous problems which have not yet been corrected.

Schoonover said problems were found in patient care, housekeeping and maintenance, and new employees were not receiving adequate training.

However, she said, the general cleanliness of the facilities had improved. Infection control was more effective.

But, she said, the survey found patients' call lights often went unanswered, and patients did not have proper hygiene. One patient had gone two weeks without a bath, she said.

"If patient needs are not met, it would appear they are understaffed," she said. "The problems were apparently longstanding, a culmination of a period of time."

"These are significant problems. They are not common to the operation of other nursing homes," she said.

Drake took over the Skyview-Hazeldean Manor Feb. 1, from J & P Enterprises, owned by John Knutson, of Wenatchee, Wash.

"Understaffing" problems, Drake said, stem from a disorganized and sometimes un dependable staff inherited from the previous management, rather than a lack of employees.

"I'm not saying we don't have problems. We do. We're working to correct them, and we will," he said.

He said the number of scheduled employee hours "exceeds" the ratio required by the state, but employees are not "in the right places at the right time."

The DHW inspection team, which included a dietician, sanitation expert, pharmacist and two nurses, told Drake of deficiencies when they completed their work. A written evaluation, detailing specific problems, will now be sent to the manor.

Within 10 days, the manor must submit a plan of action to correct problems. Follow-up action will then be decided, Schoonover said.

When the manor was inspected in August, problems were found in nursing and patient care, dietary services and housekeeping. The August report noted "seven times in three weeks the nursing staff did not meet minimum staffing required by the state."

The management was given 30 days to correct the changes before another inspection, and told they would also have an unannounced visit in six months.

"We do feel patient care had deteriorated — up to the last month, anyway," Schoonover said.

Goldie Fawcett, former manor administrator under Knutson, said staffing problems had been corrected by January. "After 2½ years, we finally had enough professional staff to cover every shift."

Drake confirms the previous management had hired extensively in the last year. He said the payroll was 185 in December and 209 in January and is now 175 to 180.

But he said Knutson went on a "wild hiring binge" and took "anybody" to make up deficiencies before the anticipated six-month inspection. In January, 22 aides were hired, he said.

LPN Sheryl Colthrop disagreed, saying large shifts were due to trainees, not experienced workers. Now, she says, cutbacks have put inexperienced employees in responsible positions. Colthrop said six aides were scheduled on her shift; two were new, three had experience, and one did not show up. Seven to eight aides should be at work to adequately cover patients' needs, and adequately, Colthrop feels.

LPN Betty Royce contends cuts in work hours have contributed to the patient care problems. She said only one aide was scheduled to cover a hall with 22 patients. While the aide was bathing a patient, an incapacitated patient fell, and lay bleeding on the floor unnoticed for 10 minutes, she said.

Drake says the hours of some employees have been cut to alleviate overstaffing while avoiding layoffs. LPNs have been particularly affected, he said, since RNs, who have more training, have been sometimes scheduled to take their place.

Schoonover said until the written report is completed she can't say how many problems stemmed from the former management. The report will not be released until Drake has submitted a plan for correction.

However, from discussions with the inspection team, Schoonover felt the patients' hygiene problems, at least, existed prior to February.

City adopts the plan

TWIN FALLS — The city's comprehensive land use plan is now law.

After eight months of review and four public hearings, the City Council Monday approved the plan, which outlines growth patterns in the city to the year 2000.

The plan followed a public hearing on the last major point of contention in the proposed plan, whether to establish a residential zone for Scott's Refrigeration on Madrona St. near Harmon Park.

The intent of the plan will be embodied in a comprehensive zoning ordinance. Council members will now begin finalizing that document, which has been undergoing review by the Twin Falls City Planning and Zoning Commission.

The version of the comprehensive plan passed by the council reflects a number of changes from the original draft.

Among those are:

- A commercial designation for Campus Commons Western Nursery, rather than residential as previously stated. The change was made to reflect present uses and to remove possible restrictions on business expansion.
- Elimination of a three-year grace period allowing businesses in non-conformance with the plan to expand under their former zoning.
- Retraction of a policy to allow professional office buildings on the north side of Addison Avenue from East Five Points to Harrison Street.
- Re-imposing a residential zoning for Scott's Refrigeration. The council had previously voted to zone the firm industrial.
- Establishing an overlay on Shoup Avenue from Washington Street North to Martin Street to allow professional office buildings.
- Eliminating a requirement for design review in the plan. The plan now leaves it to the council to define design charges.

Residents of the Harmon Park area urged the council to pass the plan with the residential zone for Scott's Refrigeration. The object was to zone the firm's use of Harmon Park parking lots and to the location of an industrial plant in a residential area.

Scott's is in full operation under its grandfather rights, but only with the consent of the council. Public notice of any such decision by the council must be given.

The council unanimously voted to enact the plan. Councilman Alan Wubker was absent. Under state law, the plan cannot be changed for six months.

Conflicts between Filer Police Chief Randy Lammers and councilman Lee Alexander (inset) came to a head in a heated argument during the Filer City Council meeting.

Councilman takes chief's place on Filer hot seat

FILER — A Tuesday night meeting, expected to include a call for dismissal of the Filer police chief, instead brought out a demand for the resignation of a city councilman.

Approximately 75 persons crowded into the Filer city hall for the regular February Council meeting, most of them appearing to be in support of Filer Police Chief Randy Lammers and his two other police officers.

Led by former councilman Charles Crawford, several citizens called for the resignation of Councilman Lee Alexander.

Prior to the meeting, it was expected that councilmen Alexander and John Gintion would call for the removal of the chief at the meeting.

Alexander refused to resign, and Mayor Eldon Ryals informed the delegation there is only one way to remove a council member and that is by recall election. He asked if reports he had heard that recall petitions were already being circulated were true.

Crawford said petitions did exist, left the meeting and returned a few minutes later with the petitions. In a hasty check of signatures, it was learned the petition was five names short of the legal number needed to force a recall election.

Crawford said he would file the petitions, complete with the other five names with the city clerk this morning.

Alexander told the citizens that he did not know where reports originated about firing the police chief. He denied reports that he said he would call for the resignation Tuesday night.

Gerald Mullen, former fire chief and former police chief, said "it is all over town" that Lammers would be discharged.

In opening discussion on the matter, Ryals said, "We have a sad situation in this town where a group of police officers have not had a single complaint that I know of in two years are continually harassed. They are asking for Randy Lammers' resignation." Ryals said he wanted to bring the situation out in the open. He added there would be no vote to remove the police chief if he could prevent it.

In a heated exchange of charges, Crawford said the citizens were "demanding the resignation of Alexander," and Alexander reminded him that he (Crawford) had been defeated in the last election by 74 votes.

Businessman Larry Atinsworth asked the council to restore the police department to its former four-man size, saying the city should not ask officers to work 14 and 16 hour shifts in order to provide 24-hour police protection. Officer Bob Dauphins resigned after councilmen indicated last month they might cut the department in half in an economy move.

Fairfield bond wins

FAIRFIELD — Fairfield residents Tuesday overwhelmingly approved a $364,600 bond to finance the city's new water system.

115 voters favored the bond, while only 7 opposed the proposal.

The bond required only a simple majority to pass, according to Fairfield Mayor Russell Hollenback.

Immediately after the election ballots were counted Tuesday night, Fairfield councilmen met and canvassed the votes, unanimously approving the tally.

A $141,800 grant from the Farmers Home Administration will also be used in funding the $506,400 water system. Planned construction includes building an entire new piping system and drilling a second well.

A maximum interest rate of 8½ percent was set on the 30-year bond. This means Fairfield residents will be responsible for an annual $30,000 payment to the bond purchaser. Water users will experience an $5 to $10 increase in monthly water bills in order to meet these payments.

Police finally catch up to Saturday chase suspect

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES

TWIN FALLS — A 32-year-old Twin Falls man who escaped police in a chase through Rock Creek Canyon Saturday night was in custody Tuesday facing three separate charges.

Sam Ralph Evans was arrested shortly after officers spotted him apparently attempting to start a car on the police impoundment lot in the 350 block of Third Avenue East about 11 p.m. Monday.

Police Chief Tim Qualls said he is also alleged to have rammed a city police car Saturday night and then fled into Rock Creek Canyon on foot from Grandview Drive, where a search by city and county officers failed to locate him.

Qualls said one of his officers answered a call at Robbins Street and Grandview Drive Saturday night and found four persons standing beside a car with their hands in the air. The fifth, a man, was seated in the car.

The officer was unable to see a weapon in the dark, but assumed the man was armed. Qualls said he said the officer pulled open the car door, and using it for a shield, ordered the driver out. Instead, the man in the car threw himself across the seat, put the car in gear and took off.

School zoning plea tabled

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls City Council Monday finalized assessments for the northwest-local improvement district.

"That frees the city to sell revenue bonds to finance a project which installed new sewer lines in the northwest area of town. Assessments will be mailed to property owners and assessment rolls will be sent to the county to be recorded as liens against the property."

The action followed a 90-minute public hearing at which more than 60 people attended. The audience limited most of its comments to questions over the assessment process.

The council also sought to limit the hearing to the assessment rolls by passing a connection deadline prior to the hearing. Under that measure, a $250 system development fee for sewer connections will not be charged to property owners for two years.

State law required the hearing called to review requested waivers from assessments. The council waived two assessments deemed to be hardship cases, reduced one assessment due to a miscalculation, and reduced another property owner's assessment deemed disproportionate to the benefit he would receive from the system.

The waivers, totaling about $5,200, will be paid through the city's general fund.

City sets LID assessments

For the most part, the council took a hard line against modifying assessments determined by J-U-B Engineers of Twin Falls. Council member Bud Cheney said any deviation from that position could set a precedent, opening up all assessments to a case-by-case review by the council.

Under the formula established by J-U-B, a property owner per square foot is charged a rate of 19 cents per square foot. The total property footage would be determined by multiplying the length of the frontage by the first 100 feet from the property line.

The projects $24,000 price tag does not include additional interest costs incurred by the city until it sells revenue bonds for the project.

So far, the additional interest is estimated at about $7,500. An amended ordinance, if passed by the council, could include that amount into the final assessments.

Not included under those costs is what the city paid J-U-B to prepare designs for much of the sewer improvement work later deleted from the LID in 1978. According to receipts in the city clerk's office, the city has paid about $62,590 in engineering costs from the general fund.

Property owners have 30 days to pay their assessments in cash to avoid

Rupert water shutoff planned

RUPERT — Rupert Director of Public Works Don Courtwright said Tuesday the water supply to about 60 homes will be shut off from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. today.

The affected area includes South C, South D, and South Third streets.

Abductor frees Idaho girl

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — A 14-year-old girl kidnapped from her home in northern Idaho eight days before was released in Portland by her abductor who handed her 50 cents and asked for a good-bye kiss, police reported Tuesday.

The girl from Coeur d'Alene, Idaho, told authorities she had been sexually assaulted several times, threatened at gunpoint and beaten during a 17-day trip that took her and her abductor through Seattle and south to Portland. She said she was finally freed at a downtown Portland hamburger stand Monday.

Police said the girl's mother had reported her as a runaway and the girl was being held by juvenile authorities in Seattle. Scott Smith of the police sex crime detail said the girl told investigators she was abducted at gunpoint on Feb. 25 in Coeur d'Alene and forced to accompany a slim man about 6-foot-4 and 33 years of age. She said her abductor had a mulicoulor beard and wore tinted glasses.

The girl said they traveled part of the way in a Jeep driven by her abductor, later hitchhiked and often slept by the side of the road. She said the man continually threatened her with an automatic pistol and had several other guns in his vehicle.

She said when they arrived in Portland they went to a blood donor bank where the man sold some blood for cash and she tried unsuccessfully to get the blood bank's staff to call police. She said they then went to a hamburger stand, because the man was hungry, and he let her go after kissing her.

Seniors rate Symms, Hansen low

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Idaho Republican congressman Steve Symms and George Hansen have received falling ratings from the National Council of Senior Citizens for their votes on key issues affecting the nation's elderly.

The council, which represents 3,800 senior citizen clubs across the country, gave both Hansen and Symms "zero" ratings. The highest rating is 100 percent, the council said, noting that "not a single representative from North Dakota, South Dakota, Montana, Kansas, Oklahoma or Wyoming earned the 100 percent rating for votes cast on issues affecting the elderly in 1979."

In giving the lowest award to Hansen and Symms, the council said that the Idaho Republicans did not score a single correct vote by NSCS standards.

The council evaluation is based on a congressman's key votes regarding 10 issues of most concern to senior citizens, the council says. Those 10 issues are selected to be "most reflective of a member's true stand on a given issue." "Key votes," are often votes cast for crucial amendments that have the power to either weaken or strengthen legislation that is important to the nation's elderly," the council's announcement states.

Burley seeks park funds

BURLEY — The city of Burley will apply for a $70,000 federal grant which may give the city a new park within two years rather than 14.

J-U-B Engineer Wayne Forrey reported to the City Council Monday night the state had indicated this would be a good year to apply for the grant.

He said no promises had been made, but he is encouraged about Burley's chances to get the funds.

Last year, the city signed a 12-year agreement to purchase 74 acres between Hilland Avenue and 150 East, north of 27th Street. But if the grant is approved, the city could pay the $20,000 left over by 1982. It would have to match the federal grant.

If the grant is received, the city proposes to build picnic areas, baseball and softball fields, and courts for basketball, tennis and volleyball. A power substation, water tower and water storage and distribution facility are also in the plans.

The council hired J-U-B Engineers for $3,000 to complete the plan for park development and to write the grant application.

Hammer aide denies deal was offered

BOISE (UPI) — A spokesman for First District congressional candidate Jim Hammer Tuesday denied reports that a "messenger" was sent to offer fellow Democrat Terry McKay a deal to drop out of the race.

Sid Sprecher, Hammer's news secretary, said there was no messenger sent to visit McKay. Sprecher said an "interested party" had gone to visit McKay on his own accord. He said Hammer knew nothing about the visit to McKay.

Earlier reports said McKay was approached by a "messenger" who offered him an appointment to a higher paying job, a press secretary, future campaign contributions, and organizational help and endorsements in future elections if he would withdraw from the race.

Sprecher Tuesday named the person who apparently approached McKay. He said Boisean Warren Lundquist, a representative for the Service Employees International Union, was concerned that McKay would "burn himself out" and that he should start his political career at a "little lower" level.

He said Lundquist supported both McKay and Hammer and suggested that McKay "could run for something else."

"The whole thing has been blown a little bit out of proportion," Sprecher said. "Especially the specific offers. How could anyone be so detailed on those?"

Sprecher said he knew Lundquist wanted to talk to McKay, but he said he didn't think it was any "big deal."

However, he said he did not believe the reports would hurt Hammer's campaign, "when it becomes evident that he (Hammer) had nothing to do with it."

Lundquist, Hammer and McKay were not available for comment Tuesday.

But Lundquist's wife, Peggy Ann, said any inference that her husband had been involved in a "secret meeting" was an "absolute lie."

Mrs. Lundquist said her husband had spoken with McKay "many times" and regarded him as a personal friend.

"Both Warren and I were concerned about his (McKay's) future," Mrs. Lundquist said. "Since he was so young and had so little experience, we thought he had a better opportunity if he started out on the local level."

She said both she and her husband were "embarrassed" that "a personal conversation had been abused." She said her husband had given advice to McKay in "good faith."

Poll shows Kidwell, Nichols lead the pack

BOISE (UPI) — A random telephone poll conducted by Boise's KTVB television station gives Republican Wayne Kidwell and Democrat Glenn Nichols leads over their opponents in name recognition among those Ada County residents who responded.

With less than three months remaining until the primary election, however, the poll indicated that a majority of the Ada County participants still are undecided about their choice of a person to replace Republican Rep. Steve Symms in Idaho's First Congressional District.

Symms had announced his intentions of vacating that seat in Congress and is opposing Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho.

Kidwell, a former Idaho attorney general, holds a commanding lead over state Sen. Larry Craig, R, the Republican cent, the KTVB poll results indicate. With 415 Ada County participants responding, Kidwell was chosen by about 35 percent, while Craig picked up 19 percent.

Fifty-three percent of those who participated in the poll still are undecided about their choice in a head-to-head contest between Kidwell and Craig.

Glenn Nichols was the top choice among the Democratic candidates in the television station's poll. With 329 Ada County residents responding to questions about the Democratic field, Nichols picked up 14 percent, Terry McKay 11 percent and Jan Hammer 10 percent.

Selections in the Democratic race again swing to the undecided category, however, with 65 percent of those responding saying they had not made up their minds.

The poll was conducted over a five-day period before it was disclosed that McKay had been made an offer to bow out of the race. The telephone numbers were selected at random.

A KTVB spokesman said 415 individuals were polled about the Republican name-recognition questions, but only 329 were questioned about the Democrats because some individuals hung up the telephone after answering the first set of questions regarding Republicans or simply refused to answer questions about the Democrats.

Kellogg children may be given blood tests

BOISE (UPI) — A comprehensive blood sampling program may be conducted as a follow-up to a 1975 study on massive lead exposures to children in the Kellogg area, a state public health official says.

Dr. Edward Gallagher, administrator of the state Division of Health, said the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta may be asked to join in the project. The follow-up study has been urged by federal health officials at the Atlanta center, who offered to tie the blood testing without charge to the state.

Gallagher said a final decision on the project will be made in about two weeks.

If the study is approved, Gallagher said the center will be asked to only administer detailed psychological and neurological examinations to children who have left Kellogg since completion of the joint industry-state Shoshone Land Health Project in 1975.

Among the former Kellogg residents are two Spokane families who are suing the Bunker Hill Co. for $20 million, claiming their nine children suffered permanent brain damage from lead-laden dust emitted from the company's Kellogg Smelter.

The list of ex-Kellogg residents also includes at least seven other families led by a Coeur d'Alene man, Robert Wilson, Wilson, a retired miner, has threatened to sue the establishment in Kellogg, to Atlanta for testing. If the state does not invite center officials to Idaho.

Wilson has collected about 700 names on a petition he hopes to present later this month to Gov. John Evans, urging that officials from the Atlanta center be brought to Idaho.

Although the follow-up program still is in the "discussion" stage, Gallagher said he expected it also would include the establishment in Kellogg of a permanent public health team to work on a variety of strategies to lower blood levels of lead.

But at the present time, Gallagher said, there is no money in the health division's budget for the new blood testing or the permanent public health team. He said Bunker Hill may be asked to provide financial assistance.

Police

Six burglaries under investigation

TWIN FALLS — Six burglaries, including two house break-ins, were under investigation Tuesday by Twin Falls city police.

Gateway Trailer Sales Inc., located at the corner of Addison Avenue West and Blake Street, reported two burglaries Monday.

Police said Gateway officials reported entry was made into the office of the trailer sales firm and also a van parked on the lot. In both cases the burglaries occurred between 6 p.m. Sunday and 4 a.m. Monday. Police said someone broke into the office building on the lot then entered the sales manager's office and several other smaller offices. Missing were a check protector and three typewriters.

Police said someone broke into a 1976 van parked at the business and removed a radio, antenna and power cable. Thieves broke a window to gain entry, officers said. Loss was estimated at $125.

Police also reported a theft at the English House, 120 Main Ave. N. Pat Harder, owner, said she was working in the mail office at the rear of the store and was making out a bank deposit. When she left to wait on a customer in the front of the building, she said, someone apparently entered by the rear door from the alley and took $340, including $307 in cash, from her desk.

Mrs. H.O. Fortner of 316 Blue Lakes Blvd. N. told police she returned home at 10 a.m. Saturday and met a burglar leaving her home with a pillow case of valuables.

She said she may have neglected to lock a rear door when she left about 9:30 a.m.

Officers said a number of drawers and cupboards in the home had been ransacked and a pillow case used to collect two sets of silverware. Also missing was a $150 camera. Police said one set of silver was recovered at the scene, apparently discarded by the thief as he met the owner coming from the carport to the entrance of the house.

Another resident, Joyce Staugh of 1797 Third Ave. E., told police someone entered her home though a window, probably via some silver and turquoise jewelry valued at $150.

Bakken Brothers of Idaho, 356 Eastland Drive S., reported their building was entered sometime between 10:30 p.m. Monday and 8 a.m. Tuesday. About $40 in cash was taken from the accounting office along with some equipment. Loss was estimated at $185.

BURLEY — Cassia County deputies arrested a young Twin Falls man Tuesday after charging him with second degree burglary.

Alexander Alvarado, 19, of Twin Falls, was accused of entering the home of Fred DeBerry at 903 E. 2nd St. on Jan. 21. DeBerry came home and found Alvarado in his living room. A bottle of coins had been taken from the bedroom and was found in the living room. An DeBerry identified the man from his daughter's high school annual.

Alvarado was released on his own recognizance. Preliminary hearing was set for March 13.

Parole enforced

BURLEY — A former Burley couple was arrested at Salmon Sunday for violation of probation.

They were returned to Burley Monday night by Cassia County Sheriff's deputies.

Clinton Holland, 20, was on probation after serving 120 days for armed robbery. His wife, Debbie, 18, was on probation for delivery of a controlled substance. Last October, she tried to strangle marijuana to her husband in the county jail.

Cassia County undersheriff Billy Crysl said the couple identified their violations in several ways, including moving without proper notification and failing to submit monthly reports.

Deputies suspected they were in the Salmon area and had notified authorities there. They also had placed the couple on National Crime Information Center's wanted list. The Hollands were arrested when they went to town from the $15 per month cabin in which they were living. They were both in jail Tuesday in lieu of a $5,000 bond each.

Sophomore Greg Shrope's earned run average of 1.96 last year earns him the nod as CSI's first man out of the bullpen.

CSI opens baseball battles

BY IRWIN CURTIN
Times-News sports writer

TWIN FALLS — Jim Walker has a different type of baseball team this year: the College of Southern Idaho that he's had in recent seasons.

"Our pitching will dictate how we do, rather than our hitting. We've been used to getting runs in bunches. Last year (when the Golden Eagles won 34 of 43 games and hit .295 as a team) we averaged about eight runs a game."

"This year, we're going to do just peek-away in the trenches," Walker said late last week, as CSI worked out under sunny skies for its season-opening double-header Thursday at Treasure Valley Community College.

The doubleheader was originally scheduled for Frontier Field but has been switched with a twinbill slated for April 19 at Ontario, Ore.

"We've got good foot-speed and guys who can make contact with the ball. We'll hit-and-run a lot and bunt for hits, too," Walker said.

"We're going to leg them out and make the other team make mistakes. Another thing I like about this club is it's got heart. I'd rather coach guys with heart than with heads."

Because the Golden Eagles may not be able to overpower opponents offensively, and because Walker plans to start the season with three freshmen ("Untried products," he calls them) at the critical positions of shortstop, second base and left field, the coach will be counting on consistently strong performances from his top three pitchers, all sophomores.

They are Darryl Banks, a righthander, 6-2, 196-pounder who posted a 1.1 record last season with a 2.11 ERA and 37 strikeouts in 49 innings; Greg Schrope (5-11, 174), the team's only southpaw, who won three of four decisions last year and posted a 1.96 ERA and 33 strikeouts in 39.3 innings; and righthander Rick Eckelberry (6-3, 184), who saw such limited activity last year that his statistics are included in the pitching staff's "others" category.

Rick Eckelberry doubles as a fungo hitter but his chief role for CSI will be on the mound.

Banks will start Thursday's first game at 1 p.m., while Eckelberry will take the mound for the Golden Eagles to open the 3 p.m. contest.

"Everybody will pitch no more than two or three innings," Walker said. "We'll go by the number of pitches a guy's thrown. Fifty and he's history. That'll be the maximum. Schrodge's our fireman, the trouble-shooter. Situations will dictate when I use him. He's a real gutsy kid, the kind of kid you want out there in a tight situation."

Five sophomores will start in Thursday's games; and when you look at offensive stats for three of them from last season, you know why Walker is praying for pitching.

Roger Farnsworth (6-0, 190), who hit .185 in 37 at-bats last season, will catch; Arthur LaGaly (6-0, 190), who hit .150 in 40 at-bats last year, will play first base; Wayne Haeckel (5-6, 150), who batted .228 in 30 trips to the plate last season, will play third base; Tony Wilson (5-10, 170), who hit .301 with four homers and 27 RBIs in 113 at-bats last year, will play right field; and Andrew Barbee (6-0, 160), who hit .331 with seven homers and 31 RBIs in 136 at-bats, will open in center field.

Also starting will be the three freshmen: Kenny McAdams (5-8, 154) at shortstop; Perry Byrne (5-10, 150) at second base; and John Hughes (6-1, 170) in left field.

What type of season is Walker expecting?

"Well, if you make 90 percent of the routine plays, you'll be successful. We haven't been making them in practice, though," the coach said.

Centerfielder Andrew Barbee provides power and average.

Habitat hedge

Legislators okay pheasant stamp fee

BOISE (UPI) — The House authorized 37-30 Tuesday an Idaho Fish and Game Department plan to convert thousands of acres of bare land into pheasant habitat.

The program, to be funded through institution of a $5 stamp charged pheasant hunters, would run for five years. The Fish and Game Department would pay landowners to rehabilitate land into pheasant cover.

Rep. Ron Beltespacher, D-Grangeville, sponsor of the bill which now heads to the Senate, said the pheasant stamp would benefit bird hunting in Idaho as did the duck stamp, which was instituted in 1934.

Rep. Vard Chabman, R-Albion, noted that sportsmen would be willing to pay the $5 extra fee if there would be more pheasants to hunt.

A pheasant stamp bill died in the 1979 Legislature, and this year's version escaped only narrowly.

Rep. Gordon Haffield, R-Idaho, said he thought many young hunters might not be able to afford the stamp.

Rep. Mack Neilaur, R-Paul, said he was glad the current version of the bill included the requirement that wood control be practiced around the habitat rehabilitation areas. But he said he did not want the added hunter pressure that might be brought by the additional stamp.

"I've got all the hunters I can stand on my land, and then some," Neilaur said.

Rep. Linden Bateman, R-Idaho Falls, said the regressives who spoke against the bill had adequate pheasant habitat in their districts, "so naturally they're opposed to it."

New Mexico hierarchy absolved of complicity

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (UPI) — A special investigator Tuesday said it did not appear University of New Mexico regents or School President William Davis were involved in illegal activity or coverups in the school's athletics scandal.

In a related development, former basketball coach Norm Ellenberger requested a new jury panel in his upcoming trial on charges of mail fraud, wire fraud and interstate travel on racketeering.

"I have found no evidence that either the regents or the university president participated in either illegal actions or any attempt to cover up the scandal," UNM special investigator Franklin Jones said in a brief report to the school's board of regents.

Jones, named by the regents in January to investigate a sports scandal, said his comments constituted a preliminary finding. He said a written report, including recommendations, will be completed in about two weeks. He said he has already interviewed 95 persons and is still gathering documents for the report.

The scandal, which involved the alleged rigging of player transcripts, came to light with a police raid on the UNM basketball offices late last year. Subsequent disclosures led to the firing and indictment of Ellenberger, resignation of assistant coach Manny Goldstein, the indictment of another former coach, the ineligibility of several basketball players and forfeiture of basketball and football victories.

Ellenberger's attorney, Leon Taylor, said he wanted a completely new jury panel because of concern that the existing panel may already have been discussing the Ellenberger case and the problems. He said the current 60-member panel has already been working for several weeks and may have formed opinions on the case.

Mueller claims world skiing championship

LAKE LOUISE, Alta. (UPI) — Herbert Plank of Italy secured the fifth downhill World Cup victory of his career Tuesday when he won the 1979-80 season finale and ruin the day for the Canadian gallery that had come to cheer favorite son Ken Read to victory.

The 24-year-old Read, who won two races in Europe before the Olympics, needed to win the race to snatch the downhill World Cup title away from Switzerland's Peter Mueller, winner of three circuit events during the season.

When the snow had settled Read, who never previously had been defeated over the 3,150-meter Mount Whistler course, was placed eighth and Mueller 14th, enough to give the 22-year-old Swiss the downhill title.

Double Olympic champion Ingemar Stenmark of Sweden, who does not race the downhill, leads the overall Cup standings.

Plank, who clocked the fastest time in Monday's non-stop training, clocked 1 minute, 50.47 seconds to win from a couple of Aussies, Hart Weirauch, 1:51.24, and Werner Griesmann, 1:51.47.

Olympic bronze medalist Steve Podorski of Toronto was fourth in 1:51.76 followed by Andreas Wenzel of Liechtenstein, 1:52.03, and Helmut Hofer of Austria, 1:52.85.

Read said after Monday's training run he would not have good chances of clinching the Cup unless he drew a late starting position among the top 15 seeds. As luck would have it, Read drew No. 4 starting position and Mueller was seventh out of the gate.

"Certainly the start number didn't help and neither did the pressure, but I don't feel it's made any major mistakes," Read said.

The Calgary native, who lost a ski binding 15 seconds into the Olympic downhill at Lake Placid last month, said he was "a little surprised" at Plank's victory.

"It was a big disappointment that I no longer have an undefeated record at Lake Louise," Read said.

Plank said he found the course "very difficult and very hard on the corners... I let my skis do the sliding for me."

Conditions, according to the experts, were perfect for downhill packed-snow, a fast course, no wind and perfect visibility.

DePaul will make bid to host tournaments

By RANDY MINKOFF
UPI Sports Writer

CHICAGO (UPI) — Followers of DePaul who have had to travel more than 1,500 miles to follow the Blue Demons the past two years in the NCAA playoffs may be in for some relief in upcoming seasons.

DePaul Athletic Director Robert Gielow said Tuesday the school has made an application to host the Midwest Regional at the new Horizon Arena in suburban Rosemont. In addition, Gielow is reviewing the possibility of having DePaul apply to the NCAA to host the NCAA finals.

"We've already looked into the regionals and we'll just have to wait to see if it is awarded our way," Gielow said in an interview. "Certainly, moving to a new arena with a larger capacity (17,500) has got to be attractive."

Gielow is moving his games from Alumni Hall on the school's campus to the yet-to-be-completed Horizon. Gielow said he would investigate the procedures of applying to host the NCAA finals, which are being held in Indianapolis this year.

"We're going to see what has to be done," Gielow explained. "When we find out, we'll decide then how to make the necessary application."

Wayne Duke, chairman of the NCAA tournament selection committee, welcomed DePaul's decision to apply to host a Midwest Regional. He said the number of schools that have sought to host the regionals in recent years have decreased rather than increased.

"We would welcome DePaul's application," said Duke, the Big Ten Commissioner. "I think it's a good idea."

The regional sites are chosen usually two years ahead of time, Duke explained. He added the NCAA finals are awarded up to five years ahead of time and the earliest DePaul could serve as the host school would be the mid 1980s.

"We always try to work ahead two years on the regionals, which are all lined-up for next year," Duke said. "About the finals, that's a pretty competitive thing and they are selected several years ahead of time."

Duke said he has encouraged schools in the Big Ten to apply for regional sites in the upcoming years, saying conflicts with scheduling have prohibited some schools from applying in the past. Gielow said "I don't see many conflicts for us getting to see the place."

By United Press International

Pinned with their first loss of the season, by Notre Dame last week merely proved All America candidate Mark Aguirre and his DePaul Blue Demons are not infallible.

Observers say, however, the superstar quality of the team was just temporarily tarnished and DePaul will go through its "second season" undefeated by sweeping the NCAA basketball tournament war which opens on four fronts Thursday and four more areas on Friday.

DePaul, the UPI National champion with a 26-1 record, has drawn a first round bye and opens its bid for the NCAA crown Sunday when the Demons meet the winner of Friday night's Far Western Regional between UCLA (17-9) and Old Dominion (25-4).

In Thursday's opening pairings, Tennessee (17-10) takes on Furman (23-6) and Iowa (19-8) faces Virginia Commonwealth (18-11) as part of an Eastern Regional doubleheader at Greensboro, N.C.; in the Midwest Regionals at West Lafayette, Ind., Purdue (18-9) clashes with LaSalle (22-8) and Washington State (25-5) takes on the Ivy League champion (Penn State) Princeton.

The Midwest Regionals at Lincoln, Neb., features 14th ranked Missouri (23-3) against San Jose State (17-11)

Coach Andersen joins Couch in feeling his Red Devils have been pressure tested.

"There's not a nickel's worth of difference in our conference," he said. "We've been playing each other just three times and the rest of the time every game was tight. I think in the second half of the league (schedule) we were behind at halftime every game."

The Devils will meet Couch in the first round and Coach Andersen smiled "the only thing we know about Couch is that they're the Lumberjacks."

"We have four underclassmen who can stick the ball down through it," Coach Andersen said. "Gunnell also jumps very well."

Vandals go with spring

By Stu Murrell
Regional Conservation Officer

Spring fever seems to bring out the worst in some people in this area.

Fish and Game conservation officers have their hands full with careless shooters, illegal fishing, hunting without licenses and general vandalism of both public and private property.

Chuck Garey, Jerome district Conservation officer, stated he apprehended several violators at Vineyard Lake this past weekend who were fishing in closed waters and hunting without licenses. I cited two individuals who were shooting without hunting licenses on their persons.

We also discovered during the weekend that someone had drained our ponds on the Fish and Game public access site south of Jerome. The vandals destroyed a cemented-in guard and removed the boards that maintained the water level.

We have been attempting to establish a good fishery and had brown trout in the four-to-five pound range that developed from fingerlings planted two years ago. The ponds were also regularly planted with both fingerling and catchable rainbow, providing an excellent fishery for local people. Most of these fish were presumably washed into the Snake River.

Another example was the recent arrest by state patrolman Frank Mogensen of three juveniles who were shooting highway signs on U.S. 93. This is a serious problem in Idaho, and in addition to the thousands of dollars in damage each year could result in the death or maiming of innocent people.

I have bullet holes in signs facing my house near the Jerome golf course. Judges should consider public safety when shooting from, or across, public highway violations appear in their courts, and they should assess maximum fines. The misdemeanor law calls for up to a $500 fine and/or up to six months in jail.

The following are guidelines that might help people avoid problems with Fish and Game laws.

It is illegal to carry an unlicensed firearm in the fields of Idaho without a hunting license. This holds true for hunting any species, including unprotected wildlife such as rickshucks. If you have a hunting license but forget it at home, you will still be cited and then must prove to a judge you had purchased a license earlier.

The law states you must not shoot from or across a publicly maintained road. This includes gravel roads such as that leading from Highway 22 to the Shoshone Falls powerplant on the north side of the Snake River.

There are some waters that are open to year-round fishing in Region 4 and you must check regulations to make sure you don't fish in the wrong areas.

Rock Creek is one area that seems to cause problems and it's open to year-round fishing only from the Highline Canal downstream to its mouth. The canyon section above the Highline Canal is closed until general season, Vineyard Lake and the Creek into the Snake River north of Twin Falls reservoir, are also closed until the general season opener on May 24.

Some general safety tips include: Don't shoot into water with rifles or pistols. Avoid shooting into rocky areas with 22 rimfires unless it is well away from any people, since they are prone to ricochet. County ordinances in Twin Falls and Gooding counties prohibit shooting a rifle or pistol from private property on the Snake River Canyon Rim.

An additional restriction prohibits shooting from the Fish and Game property along the rim above Niagra Springs. Plinkers should shoot into a good dirt backdrop, clean up their cans after shooting and not shoot bottles, which leave broken glass scattered around.

A final reminder to our parents: Don't let your beginning shooters go out without supervision for the first few years to protect them and other people's safety.

Seattle considers dropping athletics

SEATTLE (UPI) — Seattle University, which may drop all intercollegiate sports, will run an estimated $300,000 deficit this year on its intercollegiate athletic program, the school's president said Tuesday.

Spiraling expenses, particularly in travel and athletics scholarships, will run the deficit to more than $400,000 next year, said the Rev. William Sullivan.

The rising costs of trying to be competitive at the NCAA Division I level combined with increasingly poor attendance at Seattle University basketball games has led Sullivan to appoint a task force to consider the future of athletics at the school.

The task force is to report back to the president by April 2, one week before the letter-of-intent day for signing new basketball recruits. The final decision will be made by the university's board of trustees.

Sullivan said among the options under consideration is dropping to the less competitive Division II. Under NCAA rules, that would require Seattle University to field fewer teams at the intercollegiate level.

In Division II, the school's opponents would be closer to home, which would save on travel, and coaches would not criss-cross the country recruiting blue chip athletes.

The task force will also consider dropping intercollegiate sports altogether and diverting the resources into intramural athletics and "fitness sports" such as tennis, skiing and sailing.

Sullivan said another Jesuit school — Loyola University of New Orleans — dropped its total intercollegiate sports program seven years ago.

"They're happy as clams that they did it," said Sullivan.

The university president said the question of what to do with its athletic program is ultimately an "educational issue" and he added that it's time to consider shifting the emphasis on sports entertainment to sports participation.

"We have a number of students who'd rather be out hiking in the Cascades or playing intramural soccer or racquetball than watching as Al McGuire used to say — ten grown men wearing short pants," said Sullivan.

Seattle University has a glorious basketball past, including a second-place finish in the 1958 NCAA tournament when Elgin Baylor was the team's star.

Sullivan said when he first came to the university as provost in 1975 he had hoped Seattle University would be able to revive its sagging basketball fortunes.

"I was a young faculty member at Marquette when Al McGuire was getting started. I've seen what happened at that school. I was hoping something would happen to this school on a national level. But facts are facts."

The Chieftains, members of the West Coast Athletic Conference, have a win-loss percentage slightly under the .500 mark for the past 10 years in basketball.

But, fighting a losing battle for fans with the Seattle SuperSonics, Seattle University has seen its attendance sag badly over the same period. The Chieftains' season ticket sales have fallen from 1,566 to 807 in the last decade and Sullivan described student attendance at games as "very, very marginal."

"I've received a few choice comments from alumni," said Sullivan. "But the comments from the local media have been very reasonable because you've been at the games. You have a stronger sense of the attendance."

Austin hopes to rule pro tennis world

By MARTIN LADER
UPI Sports Writer

NEW YORK (UPI) — It's evident in her manner, in the poise she displays dealing with older people and in her general demeanor. Mostly, it's the way she looks, a little taller, more filled out, with the brightness of a wholesome young lady.

There is still the occasional shy giggle when an embarrassing subject is mentioned, such as boys, but the truth is that Tracy Austin is growing up.

The growth has been mental as well as so much so that Austin is looking to break through the top this year, to be recognized as the best women's tennis player in the world.

"My goal always has been to try to be No. 1 eventually," she said Tuesday. "I think this year is the first time I have a possibility to do it."

The fact that she won the U.S. Open championship last September didn't necessarily influence this thinking, for as Austin says, "It's more that I've been moving up on the computer."

Winning the Open gave me confidence, but that was last year.

Currently ranked No. 2, there are four key tournaments that Austin is gearing for this year in her bid to overtake Martina Navratilova — the U.S. Open, Wimbledon and the finals of the two tour championships.

They are the Avon and Colgate championships — The Avon, matching the top eight women in the point standings, will be held in New York March 19-23, and on Tuesday Austin received a wild card invitation, thus joining Navratilova and Billie Jean King as definite entries.

For the last year Austin has been receiving help from Roy Emerson on her serve and strategy. "Someone was always teaching me strokes and how to hit the ball, but not necessarily how to hit the ball. Strategy is so important."

Perhaps the most important strategy for Austin is not to dwell on her target of being No. 1. "As she learned again last week, it can only cost her."

In a tournament at Houston, Austin was upset by Greer Stevens in the quarter finals, and she thinks her poor performance came about because she caught herself thinking of what might be. "I wasn't playing aggressively. I wasn't there," Tracy said. "I don't know why I was nervous, maybe I was putting too much pressure on myself. I was thinking of the consequences of the match. My mother told me she had seen me like that only twice before, last year in Philadelphia when I lost to Kathy Jordan and once in the 16 Nationals, when I wanted to win so much."

"I was thinking too much of my record, and I don't want to dwell on it anymore."

She is still only 17 and a junior in high school, but Tracy Austin has done a lot of growing up. Before she gets much older, she just may achieve her goal of being No. 1.

"We have a new home in Los Gatos, Calif., complete with a California hot tub. When I get home the first thing I'm going to do is get in with a bottle of wine," she said.

Fleming disagrees with boycott plan

CLEVELAND (UPI) — Peggy Fleming, 1968 Olympic gold medal winner, said Tuesday she is against President Carter's proposed boycott of the Moscow Olympics.

Fleming, appearing in Cleveland with the Shiptads and Johnson Ice Follies, gave her views on the boycott at a news conference.

"I'd hate to see all the time, money and effort the athletes invested in training for the Olympics go to waste," she said.

Discussing the future of Olympic figure skating, Fleming, who won her first national title in Cleveland in 1961, said she wants to see a return to balance.

"I want skating to go back to the beautiful sport that it really is. Jumps and other tricks detract from the real beauty," she said.

Noting that she thinks of herself as a performer rather than an athlete, Fleming designs her own costumes and selects her own music for the ice show. "I like the complete artistic freedom I have with the Ice Follies," she said.

Fleming, who started skating at the age of nine, said she doesn't stay off the ice for fear of injury. "I've had a few injuries, but they're not serious. The off season, the Olympic champion gave up skating during her pregnancy, however."

"I'm a wife and a mother. I don't have time to do the difficult feats I did in the Olympics, but I feel good about skating," she said.

She will finish her tour with the ice show when it concludes its Cleveland performances March 9. She said she has no immediate career goals, planning instead to spend time with her husband, Gregg Jenkins, and 3-year-old son Andrew.

"We have a new home in Los Gatos, Calif., complete with a California hot tub. When I get home the first thing I'm going to do is get in with a bottle of wine," she said.

Rockhill Native favored

HALEAH, Fla. (UPI) — Rockhill Native, will be last year's 2-year-old thoroughbred champion, will be only a slight favorite Wednesday in what promises to be one of the most competitive Flamingo Stakes in years.

The $175,750 event over 1 1/4 miles has drawn a field of 10 horses, all seeking the $107,850 first prize and consideration in this spring's Triple Crown events beginning with the May 2 Kentucky Derby.

Rockhill Native, a 3-year-old chestnut gelding owned by Harry A. Oak, drew the No. 8 post position for the Flamingo, but that didn't make trainer Herb Stevens unhappy at all.

"Being that far off the rail doesn't bother me. All I care about is having him on the racetrack," Stevens said. "In fact, breaking from the outside might make it a little easier for (jockey) Johnny Otis to take him back early in the race. He doesn't need to be near the front end."

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls Wildlife Conservation, Inc. will meet at 8 p.m. March 11 at College of Southern Idaho rather than the day previously reported in the Times-News.

Bills sign free agents

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. (UPI) — The Buffalo Bills have announced the signing of six free agent players, including three who were drafted previously by NFL teams.

The players signed by the Bills were wide receiver Billy Diggs of Winston-Salem, cornerback and kick returner Howard Billage of Colorado, wide receiver Mike Almond of Northwestern State (Ga.), cornerback Reggie Owens of Bethune-Cookman, linebacker Robert Ratter of Nevada-Las Vegas and running back Doug Thomas of Eastern Michigan. Diggs was a ninth round draft choice of the Minnesota Vikings while Billage was a 10th round pick of the San Francisco 49ers. Almond was a Pittsburgh Steeler's 12th round selection in last year's draft.

NFL gets big radio payoff

NEW YORK (UPI) — A record $12 million bid has netted CBS radio the national rights to 26 National Football League regular season games and all 10 post-season games for the 1980, 1981, 1982 and 1983 seasons, NFL Commissioner Peter Rozelle and CBS Radio President Sam Cook signed announced Tuesday.

The $12 million, to be paid over the next four years, is the largest ever for a network radio sports package. CBS won the rights in sealed bidding with ABC radio, NBC Radio, Mutual and the Robert World Co. CBS also held the rights in 1977-79.

N.Y. fetes hockey team

NEW YORK (UPI) — With banners and bunting and a big playing field, the U.S. Olympic hockey team members wrapped themselves in "I Love New York" scarfs Tuesday and accepted the key to the city — and the warmth of about 3,000 fans.

In a concluding ceremony on the steps of City Hall that included a moment of silence for the 50 hostages in Tehran, City Council President Carol Bellamy and acting Mayor Nat Leventhal gave the gold key to team coach Herb Brooks.

"You just give me to every player, but with the budget crisis, we can't afford it," Leventhal told the crowd, which, in turn, boomed. Brooks promptly unwrapped the red-and-blue scarf from around his neck, held it aloft in the balmy 50-degree temperature and sang to a cheer with the knitted slogan — "I Love New York."

Brooks said, "The gold medal is for all of you... for the reception we've received and the nationalism that we've seen." As the players took their positions on a red-and-blue platform underneath a 20-foot-long team banner, the spectators each waved a single finger in the air, signifying the team's No. 1 ranking, and shouted "U.S.A., U.S.A."

Big 10 honors shared

CHICAGO (UPI) — The tightness of the 1979-80 Big Ten Conference basketball race was mirrored in the balloting for this season's league coach-of-the-year. Six different coaches received votes in the balloting done by the coaches, reflective of the closest race in years.

When the votes were counted, four coaches tied for the honor: Purdue's Lou Ross, Indiana's Bobby Knight, Iowa's Lute Olson and Minnesota's Jim Dutcher.

Eldon Miller of Ohio State and Johnny Orr of Michigan were the other coaches receiving mention. It would be difficult to single out one coach in a season where three and four-way ties for the league lead were commonplace.

Spain plans boycott

MADRID (UPI) — Spain will boycott the Moscow Olympics if the United States, West Germany and Britain maintain their boycott positions over the next few months, sports sources said Tuesday. The sources said the Spanish government was not expected to make a formal policy statement until May—but was leaning in the direction of a boycott after initial resistance to it.

The sources said Spain's vote-pace on the boycott issue was the result of a visit to Bonn and Chancellor Helmut Schmidt last month by Premier Adolfo Suarez.

The fate of Spain has been decided outside Spain, the daily newspaper El Pais commented bitterly. The paper said Suarez would attempt to sell a boycott of the Olympics to the Spanish public, and to sportsmen, with the argument: "Spanish sport doesn't have much to win in Moscow."

Morales cancels fight

LONDON (UPI) — Mexican flyweight Alberto Morales, whose WBC title elimination match against Charlie Magri was called off Monday because the Brit had a cold, Tuesday pulled out of his rearranged match against substitute hantamweight John Feeney.

"I offered Morales the same money to fight Feeney but he refused, despite an assurance by the WBC president that his flyweight ranking would not be affected," said promoter Mickey Duff. "Morales was unhappy about conceding weight to Feeney but we would not have had to give away much more than four pounds."

Jackson's enthusiasm may reflect advancing years

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (UPI) — Reggie Jackson has one again found splendor in the outfield grass.

For the first time in several years Jackson is approaching the dawning of a new baseball season with the gusto of a rookie. Maybe it's because he no longer has to lock horns with his old antagonist, Billy Martin, or perhaps it's the fact the New York Yankees were beaten last season and a new challenge awaits an old warrior.

More than likely, though, the real reason for his boyish enthusiasm is chronological. Jackson will be 37 years old before the season is barely five weeks old and he can see only a few more spring trainings on the horizon.

"I'm starting to appreciate it more as I get older," Jackson admitted the other day at his first workout. "I couldn't wait to put on the wrist bands and get all geared up. To put on a uniform after the winter is a nice feeling."

"Just to walk out and feel the spikes in the grass is a nice feeling. To grab a bat and know you can use it is a nice feeling."

Jackson didn't exactly get off on the right foot with the Yankee's new management. He showed up two days late for spring training and was fined by general manager Gene Michael. But while the old Reggie might have whined or contended the fine, this Reggie took it in stride.

"Whatever they have to do I'll go along with," Jackson said.

"But I did try to make a concerted effort to keep them abreast as to what I was doing. I wanted them to know I wasn't being a smart aleck or an inarticulate. Everything is fine and I don't even consider it (the fine) disciplinary."

Jackson admits his attitude about baseball began to change last season. Originally, he had not intended to play beyond the 1981 season — at which time his contract with the Yankees expires — but the success of older players like Lou Brock, Gaylord Perry, Willie Stargell, Carl Yastrzemski and Phil Niekro gave him a new outlook.

"I said, hey, I'm doing okay off the field and I have a lot of businesses going, but guys who had great years (in 1979) have come down hard on him. But, he insists he has made his peace with the Big Apple."

"I guess you could call it coming-of-age," said Jackson. "I've gotten all the braces out of my system. It's like a woman who has pain when she has a child. She can never remember that pain. When winter comes you get excited about playing and you forget about the bad times and reflect on the good times. If I think back on it, my bad times in '79 weren't really that bad."

Jackson said he has no timetable as to how much longer he will continue to play. Nor has he asked the Yankees to renegotiate his contract.

"If somebody talks to me, fine," Jackson said. "But I have no intentions of renegotiating. I'm happy with the contract. After this year I'm in my option year, so if they are interested in extending my contract, this year would probably be a good time to start negotiating. But I don't need an extension."

Dodger pitcher fights alcoholism

VERO BEACH, Fla. (UPI) — Yankel Bolt Welch, the Los Angeles Dodger pitcher, was getting nationwide acclaim when he struck out Reggie Jackson to end the second game of the 1978 World Series against the New York Yankees, disclosed Tuesday he spent five weeks at an alcoholism treatment center in January.

Welch told his Dodger team mates about his drinking problems at a morning meeting at their spring training headquarters and said, "I'm happier now than I've ever been in my life. And I'm proud of myself."

Welch had a 7-4 record with a 2.93 earned run average in 1979. But last year with arm troubles, Welch slipped to a 6-6 record and a 4.00 ERA.

British boycott weakens

LONDON (UPI) — The British Olympic Association Tuesday declared its "present intention" to send a team to the Moscow Olympics but delayed taking up the invitation to the summer Games until it consults with "European counterparts" later this month.

BOA President Sir Dennis Follows said at least three quarters of the association's members voted for the decision which, he said, had not been influenced by government calls for a boycott of the Games.

But he admitted that if a British team did go to Moscow some sports might not be represented, indicating the government's strenuous boycott lobby had not been entirely unsuccessful.

The Association confirmed that it is its "present intention" to send a British team to the Olympic Games in Moscow," said Sir Dennis.

"However it will defer its reply to the invitation to participate until its next meeting Monday."

"Soviet aggression was universally condemned but there is a very big difference between that and sports being used as a weapon to bring about a change of government which you don't like," said Sir Dennis.

Sir Dennis said it would be "impolite" to accept the invitation until the BOA attended a meeting of west European Olympic committees scheduled for March 27 in Brussels but that Britain would "in all probability" accept eventually.

He said the decision to send a team was intended to reassure athletes and commercial interests but observers felt that by failing to announce a definite acceptance the BOA is allowing itself room for maneuver should there be a change in the political climate.

Spring training Bonds makes loop contender of Cards

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (UPI) — Catcher Ted Simmons of the St. Louis Cardinals Tuesday welcomed outfielder Bobby Bonds to training camp with glowing words.

"Am I glad to see you," Simmons told Bonds.

Bonds, acquired from the Cleveland Indians in December, is expected to provide another power hitter and protection for Simmons in the Cardinals lineup. One-evidence of Bonds' abilities is his 92-lifetime home runs.

"It's made me very enthusiastic about our ballclub," Simmons said about the arrival of Bonds. "If he hadn't come here, we'd been fighting for second place. With him here, I'm convinced we can win."

Bonds is penciled in as the Cardinals' left fielder. He had played Bonds just once in his major league career — when he had a bad leg last year — but he doesn't foresee any problems making the adjustment.

"I've got to get used to the ball breaking the opposite way," Bonds said. "But with the guys we've got at shortstop (Garry Templeton) I won't have to get used to anything."

Bonds, who last played in the National League five years ago, spent part of the off-season talking with some National League friends, including George Foster of the Cincinnati Reds.

"I'm excited about this," Bonds said. "I really like this ballclub. They didn't see why we couldn't win the division."

Outfielder Keith Smith was absent from the camp for the second straight day. General Manager John Claiborne said Smith's agent told Smith not to show up until he had signed a contract but Claiborne said Smith has expressed interest in staying with the Cardinals.

Infielder Tommy HRT signed a one-year contract Tuesday, leaving only Smith and outfielders Leon Durham and Jim Lentine unsigned.

Borgmann gets bigger bat

SARASOTA, Fla. (UPI) — Chicago White Sox batting instructor Orlando Cepeda has ordered a heavier bat for Glenn Borgmann and predicted Tuesday the veteran catcher will match his career home run total during the 1980 season.

Cepeda was surprised to learn the 235-pound Borgmann, signed as a free agent during the off-season, was swinging only a 32-ounce bat and promptly requisitioned 33 and 36-ounce models for the catcher.

"A big guy like that can handle the heavier bat," Cepeda said, "and when he makes good contact, the ball will jump out of the ballpark for him. With the light bat, he was overswinging and not making good contact, the new bat should allow him to hit at least 15 home runs this season."

Borgmann hit 14 homers in seven major league seasons with the Minnesota Twins before signing with the Sox.

The Sox were cheered by the news Tuesday that non-roster rookie pitcher Mitch Lukevics will be released from Sarasota Memorial Hospital on Wednesday and should be able to resume workouts in one week. Lukevics underwent surgery Monday to repair of his broken nose, which was struck by a line drive off the bat of Lamar Johnson.

McWilliams' arm improving

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (UPI) — Larry McWilliams, the Atlanta pitcher who missed most of last season because of an ailing elbow in his pitching arm, reported Tuesday he is pleased with his progress since coming to training camp.

"(The elbow) is coming along, there's no pain," said McWilliams. "I haven't really thrown hard yet to test it, but I'm confident there will be no problem. I worked on the Nautilus weight machine all winter and that probably did more for me than anything else."

McWilliams, left-hander, was 9-2 in half a season as a rookie in 1978. He had a 3-2 record last year while managing to get into only 13 games because of his elbow problem, a problem that was never officially diagnosed.

"Because of that, I think there might have been some people who didn't think it was real," said McWilliams. "But it was, I know that, no matter what anyone else thought. Now I feel fine and I'm ready to go again."

The Braves open their exhibition baseball schedule March 12 against the Texas Rangers at West Palm Beach.

Pirates sign Robinson

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — The Pittsburgh Pirates announced Tuesday that an agreement had been reached with right-handed pitcher Don Robinson for the 1980 season.

No further details were released.

Jackson takes one-day leave

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (UPI) — It's in again, out again, here again, gone again for Reggie Jackson and the New York Yankees this spring.

Jackson, who checked into camp late by way of getting Manager Dick Howser's regime off to a swell start, was gone again Tuesday after putting in one day of calisthenics.

Jackson left camp early Tuesday morning, accompanied by pitcher Tommy John, to attend a meeting of player representatives in Tampa, Fla. He even went to the trouble of getting permission from Howser to make the trip and absent himself from a routine workout.

"In his one-day-of-working-out, Jackson-pun-in about three hours, shagging flies, taking batting practice and running in the outfield."

Connors tries to shape KC staff

FORT MYERS, Fla. (UPI) — Billy Connors has a tough job.

As pitching coach for the Kansas City Royals, Connors must instruct players who have little more to learn.

"Working on the major league level, you're dealing with pitchers who already have a great degree of skill," Connors said. "In the minors, where I spent most of my pitching and coaching career, I'd watch a youngster throw to see if he had any flaws, then try to correct them."

Connors, 38, assumed his duties this spring along with new Royals manager Jim Frey. Former pitcher coach Galen Cisco was dismissed along with manager Whitey Herzog after the 1979 season.

"I assume every pitcher is different and I try to help each individual with the positive things he has," Connors said.

Right-hander Craig Chamberlain is an example.

In his first three games last August after being called up from Jacksonville, Chamberlain smoked Detroit on six hits, Baltimore and Jim Palmer on three hits and Boston with seven strikeouts.

But Chamberlain's only tool was a fast ball and he finished the season 4-1. He now is developing a curve.

"Chamberlain has a good breaking pitch and we're going to make it part of his repertoire," Connors said. "When you rely only on the fastball, the good hitters simply lay back and wait for it. And no matter how hard you throw the ball, they'll hit it."

Once a teammate of Nolan Ryan and Tom Seaver when both were with the Mets, Connors saw what he thinks to be the best pitching in baseball.

Seaver has the perfect delivery," Connors said. "He has power and bends his arm back and leg to get additional power. I would watch his approach to spring training, the way he gets his legs in shape, then throw lightly before he'd cut loose."

"Ryan started out with a fast ball and later developed his curve. He's really an overpowering pitcher."

Brewers upset with Travers

SUN CITY, Ariz. (UPI) — General Manager Harry Dalton of the Milwaukee Brewers showed irritation Tuesday that pitcher Billy Travers, whose contract was renewed Monday, did not show up for workouts.

But he was pleased second baseman Paul Molitor, the team's best hitter a year ago, was taking part in the drills even though he has yet to sign. Dalton said he was confident of reaching agreement with him.

Travers and Dalton could not reach agreement on a new one-year contract, and his contract was renewed at existing terms for the coming season. Travers had been signing for $1.5 million over five years.

"We're trying to win a pennant," said Dalton, who indicated some punitive measures might be taken if Travers doesn't show up soon. Travers was dubbed "the phantom" by teammates. He checked out of his motel Sunday.

Full scale drills begin Wednesday.

Molitor, a third year player. Is reportedly seeking about $200,000 for one season. "We're still a little apart but we're making progress," said Molitor. "You have to try and get what you deserve."

Outfielder Gorman Thomas and shortstop Robin Yount showed up early. Thomas and outfielder Larry Hise, recovering from a shoulder injury, hit several long home runs during Tuesday's workout.

You can have your tomato, but can you eat it?

By Robert W. Strube
©Chicago Sun-Times

The fresh tomato is not only one of our most important vegetables, but is one of the most controversial topics, as to taste, in the produce industry. The tomato became controversial from the start when there were some lengthy discussions as to how the tomato really should be classified — as a fruit or vegetable. The United Fresh Fruit and Veget-table Association offers this explanation. By cultivation and use, the tomato is a vegetable, but botanically, it is a fruit. Among fruits, the tomato is considered a berry, being pulpy and containing one or more seeds that are not stones.

The tomato that is grown locally is generally accepted as having a much better flavor than the tomato that is shipped great distances, and of course under refrigeration. The problem is being resolved by shippers getting the information to the consumers through food editors and the media, that storing tomatoes in the refrigerator is robbing the consumer of the flavor they desire. Always store tomatoes at room temperature and handle them carefully.

Fresh fruits and vegetables are low in calories but high in nutrition. The tomato is a very good example.

There are only 35 calories in a medium-size tomato, yet it provides over 75 percent of the recommended dietary allowance of vitamin C for an adult a day, and more than 25 percent of the vitamin A.

It would seem that "rosy red" tomatoes have been with us always, as they were almost always grown in our home garden when we were kids used for our salads in the summer and to make catsup and chili sauce for the winter months ahead. Now we have fresh tomatoes all year. There is a time of the year when tomatoes are arriving only from Florida and Mexico.

This is during March, when Mexico ships 22 percent of its yearly production into the United States. Florida sends only 10 percent of its fresh crop at that time of the year.

The "ideal" tomato, from the consumer's point of view is one that is full-size, vine-ripened, unblemished and characteristically, at the red ripe stage, or at anything near that stage. Such fruit is too fragile to stand commercial harvesting, packing and shipping. So "vine-ripe" tomatoes offered on some markets are not vine ripe, but were harvested at the turning or pink stage. If a grower harvests his tomatoes at the stage when they are most resistant to shipping injury, they will lack juiciness and flavor.

Unfortunately, it is extremely difficult to make this compromise, because it is no simple matter, in practice, to pick over a field of tomatoes, selecting fruits that are "mature green," and leaving those that are immature to continue growing.

Go nuts in March; it's National Peanut Month!

The protein in peanut butter complements that in kidney beans, thus giving a complete protein entree. Meatless Spaghetti Sauce. Inexpensive pasta further enhances (and stretches) the proteins available.

ENGLEWOOD CLIFFS, N.J. — For those people who are nuts about peanuts, March is designated National Peanut Month.

Half of the peanuts, grown in this country today are used whole or in miscellaneous products, and the other half are used to make peanut butter. Out of the 550 million pounds of peanut butter consumed every year in the U.S., Americans on the average eat almost three pounds each. Peanut butter is 25 percent protein and is one of the least expensive sources of protein per serving available to consumers. Not only is peanut butter a good protein source, it is high in niacin and phosphorus.

Peanut butter sandwiches have been eagerly consumed by kids of all ages since peanut butter was first invented. There are peanut butter lovers, however, who are adventurous enough to explore other ways to use peanut butter. It combines easily with a variety of foods in unusual new dishes. And what better month than National Peanut Month to try them.

Vegetarians, for example, sometimes use peanut butter in main dishes. Even so, you don't have to be a vegetarian to enjoy this Meatless Spaghetti Sauce. It's made with fresh onion, green pepper and zucchini, with tomatoes and tomato sauce. Kidney beans and peanut butter provide the major portion of the protein. Serve the sauce over cooked spaghetti for more protein, and add a crusty bread (still more protein) and a salad.

To boost the protein in a meatless meal, vegetarians and nonvegetarians alike can use peanut butter. Make, for example, a different quick bread, Peanut Butter Pineapple Bread. Crushed pineapple adds moistness and the peanut butter adds a subtle flavor. Peanut Butter Whole Wheat Cookies, crisp and nutty, are delicious for dessert. In making the cookies the dough is shaped into rolls, frozen until firm and then sliced and baked.

- Meatless Spaghetti Sauce
- 2 tablespoons corn oil
 - 1/2 cup coarsely chopped onion
 - 1/4 cup coarsely chopped green pepper
 - 1 small zucchini, diced (about 1 cup)
 - 1 clove garlic, minced or pressed
 - 1 can (16 ounce) tomatoes, chopped
 - 1 can (18 ounce) tomato sauce
 - 1 can (8 1/2 ounce) red kidney beans, drained
 - 1/4 cup super chunk peanut butter
 - 1 teaspoon dried oregano leaves
 - 1/2 teaspoon salt
 - 1/2 teaspoon dried basil leaves
 - 1/2 teaspoon crushed dried red pepper

- 1 bay leaf
- In 5-quart dutch oven or saucepot heat corn oil over medium heat. Add onion, green pepper, zucchini and garlic, stirring occasionally, cook 5 minutes or until tender. Stir in tomatoes, tomato sauce, beans, peanut butter, oregano, salt, basil, red pepper and bay leaf. Cover. Stir occasionally, cook 30 minutes or until flavors are blended. Remove bay leaf. Serve over hot cooked spaghetti. Makes about 1 quart or enough to fill 1-pound spaghetti. Sauce may be frozen. Stirring occasionally, reheat gently over medium heat.

- Peanut Butter Whole Wheat Cookies
- 1 1/2 cups sifted whole wheat flour
 - 1/2 teaspoon baking soda
 - 1/2 teaspoon ground cinnamon
 - 1/4 teaspoon salt
 - 3/4 cup super chunk peanut butter
 - 1/2 cup corn oil margarine
 - 1 egg
 - In small bowl stir together flour, baking soda, cinnamon and salt. In large bowl with mixer at low speed beat together peanut butter and margarine. Add sugar; beat well. Add egg; beat well. Gradually add flour mixture; beat just until smooth. Shape into 2 rolls 1 1/2 inches in diameter. Wrap in waxed paper. Place on cookie sheet. Freeze about 2 hours, or until firm. With sharp knife slice dough 1/4-inch thick. Place on sugared cookie sheets 1 to 1 1/2 inches apart. Bake in 350-degree oven 8 minutes or until lightly browned but still soft. Cool on wire racks. Makes about 5 dozen.

- Peanut Butter Pineapple Bread
- 2 cups unsifted flour
 - 3/4 cup sugar
 - 2 teaspoons baking powder
 - 1/2 teaspoon salt
 - 1/2 teaspoon ground nutmeg
 - 3/4 cup super chunk peanut butter
 - 1/4 cup corn oil margarine
 - 1 egg, lightly beaten
 - 1 can (8 ounce) crushed pineapple. In own juice, undrained.
 - 3/4 cup milk

Grease 9x5x3-inch loaf pan. In medium bowl stir together flour, sugar, baking powder, salt and nutmeg. With pastry blender or 2 knives cut in peanut butter and margarine until coarse crumbs form. Stir together egg, pineapple and milk. Stir into peanut butter mixture just until moistened. Turn into prepared pan. Bake in 375 degree oven 1 hour or until cake tester inserted in center comes out clean. Cool in pan 10 minutes. Remove to wire rack; cool completely. Wrap with foil or plastic wrap and store overnight at room temperature. Makes 1 loaf.

Wheat germ's good for sprinkling, but don't stop there

Natural foods, unrefined grains—good nutrition, high fiber, better health — you've been reading about these things for a few years now. Probably the most swooned over natural health food recommended is wheat germ. And, maybe you're loaded with it, with fine intention to put it into or sprinkle it onto all that you eat.

Months have gone by, and you're tired of wheat germ sprinkles. You want to do something else with your potential disease-fighter. Good tricks are available. Here are a few you might want to try.

- WHEAT GERM PUFFS
- 1 cup finely grated American cheese
- Preheat oven to 350°F. Grease regular-sized muffin pans. In mixing bowl, combine lukewarm milk and yeast. When yeast is dissolved, stir in honey, salt and vegetable oil. Beat well. Add wheat germ, flour and grated cheese. Beat well again. Fill muffin pans half full. Cover. Let rise about 40 minutes, or until doubled. Bake 20 minutes or until puffs thump done.

- WHEAT GERM CANDY
- 1 cup chunky peanut butter
 - 1 cup seedless raisins
 - 1 cup honey
 - 1 cup powdered non-fat dry milk powder
 - 3 cups wheat germ pinch salt
- Grease a small, square cake pan. In mixing bowl, combine peanut butter, raisins, honey, non-fat dry milk powder, wheat germ and salt. Knead until well-blended. Press mixture into cake pan. Score and cut into pieces. If needed, add more honey to knead the mixture.

- WHEAT GERM PANCAKES
- 2 eggs

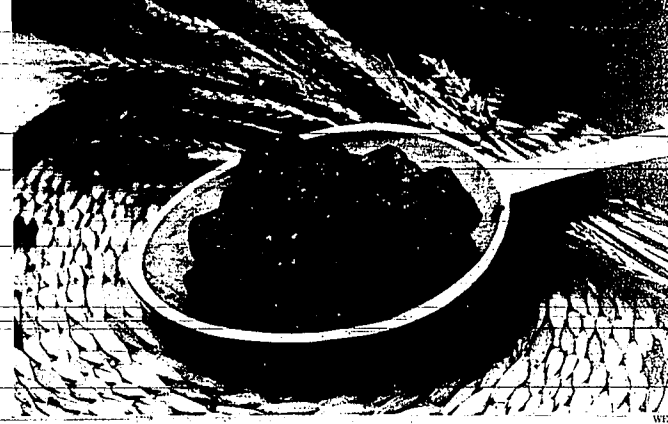

- 1 1/2 cups milk
 - 2 cups gluten flour
 - 1 cup wheat germ
 - 1 teaspoon baking powder
 - 1 teaspoon salt
 - 1 teaspoon honey (optional)
- In mixing bowl, beat together eggs and milk. Add flour, wheat germ, baking powder, salt and honey. Mix together until all ingredients are moistened. Cook cakes on hot griddle.

- HOMEMADE DRY CEREAL
- 1 cup wheat germ
 - 1 cup sesame seeds
 - 1 cup shredded, unsweetened coconut
 - 3 cups rolled oats
 - pinch salt
 - 1/4 cup vegetable oil
 - 1/2 cup honey
 - 1 teaspoon almond extract
- Preheat oven to 250°F. In mixing bowl, combine wheat germ, sesame seeds, shredded coconut, oats, salt. Toss them together lightly. Then toss together with oil, honey and almond extract. Bake 30 minutes, or until golden brown. Stir occasionally away from sides of baking dish or pan because sides brown faster. Set aside to cool. Store in covered jars. Eat with milk or cream. Makes 8 to 10 servings.

- WHEAT GERM MEAT LOAF
- 2 tablespoons vegetable oil
 - 1 medium-sized onion, peeled and minced
 - 1 rinsed handful fresh parsley, minced
 - 1 large clove garlic, peeled and mashed
 - 1 egg, beaten
 - 1 1/2 pounds ground beef
 - 1/4 cup wheat germ
 - 1 slice whole wheat bread, soaked in water and squeezed dry
 - 1/2 teaspoon salt
 - 1/2 teaspoon pepper
 - 1/2 teaspoon ground fennel or oregano
- Preheat oven to 325°F. In skillet, heat oil. Add minced onion, parsley and garlic; lightly brown, stirring constantly. In bowl, combine cooked onion mixture with egg, ground beef, wheat germ, bread, salt, pepper and ground fennel. When thoroughly mixed, shape into a loaf. Bake in roasting dish or pan for about 1 hour, or until done. Makes 4 generous servings.

THIS WEEK'S BEST MARKET BUYS: Beef costs will climb a bit. Pork and chicken prices will be stable. Sugar went down a few cents. Don't be fooled by those headlines — going to shoot up. Rains have cleared in California. Tomatoes and strawberries are looking better. Scarcity of canning supplies is predicted so order your needs now.

Let the kids try their hands at kneading no-bake Wheat Germ Candy, a nutritious high-protein blend of peanut butter, milk powder and wheat germ.

Stir-fried beef strips with vegetables in oriental-flavored sauce are served over rice, as in the Orient.

Less tender meat needs care

NEW YORK — Fry, roast, broil — these are familiar cooking methods for these expensive cuts of meat we do now? Silver and stir-fry, cover and simmer — methods that make less expensive cuts more tender.

And in the process, some very tasty meals are appearing. You can't just cook less tender cuts of meat plain. Flavorings and seasonings need to be added. Among them — a dash of soy sauce, a bit of ginger, beef broth or catsup, onions and celery. These meats aren't as easy to put on the table as a broiled steak, but the added taste and eye-appeal of the finished dish is more than worth the effort.

A "sauced" and "simmered" entrée needs to be served over something to absorb all of that good gravy. One of the easiest accompaniments to prepare is rice. It cooks in about 15 minutes and goes well with just about any food. The fact that it is also economical is a plus your budget will appreciate.

ORIENTAL BEEF SUPPER
1 cup sliced onions
1 large green pepper, cut in thin strips

- 1 cup diagonally sliced celery
- 2 tablespoons vegetable oil
- 1 pound beef round steak, thinly sliced
- 1 cup beef broth
- 3 tablespoons soy sauce
- 1 teaspoon sugar
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1/2 tablespoons cornstarch
- 3 fresh tomatoes, peeled and cut in quarters
- 3 cups hot cooked rice
- 1/2 teaspoon ground ginger

In a heavy skillet or wok, cook onions, green pepper, and celery in oil till tender crisp. Remove vegetables and set aside. Add meat to hot skillet, brown quickly. Blend broth, soy sauce, sugar, and salt into cornstarch. Pour into skillet. Cook, stirring until thickened. Add cooked vegetables and tomatoes; heat thoroughly. Serve over Ginger Rice. Toss rice with ginger. Pass additional soy sauce if desired. Makes 6 servings.

Each serving provides: 316 calories, 2 meat exchanges, 1 bread exchange, 2 fat exchanges, 1 1/2 vegetable exchanges.

- 6 lean pork shoulder steaks (about 2 pounds)
- 1 teaspoon seasoned salt
- 1/4 teaspoon pepper
- 1/2 tablespoons vegetable oil
- 1 large onion, sliced
- 1 cup catsup
- 1 can (120-oz.) chunk pineapple in natural juice (drain and reserve juice)
- 1/2 cup soy sauce
- 1 large green pepper, cut in 1-inch squares
- 3 cups hot cooked rice

Sprinkle chops with seasoned salt and pepper. Brown in oil on both sides. Push chops to one side. Add onions; cook until onions are tender crisp. Arrange chops with onion on top. Blend catsup, pineapple juice with enough water to make 2 cups liquid, and soy sauce. Pour over chops. Cover and simmer 20 minutes. Add green pepper and pineapple. Replace cover and continue cooking 10 minutes longer. Serve over beds of fluffy rice. Makes 6 servings. Each serving provides: 617 calories, 2 1/2 meat exchanges, 2 1/2 fat exchanges. NOT RECOMMENDED FOR DIABETICS.

Dear Abby

Birth plan upsets mother

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
© The Chicago Tribune
N.Y. News Syndicate, Inc.
DEAR ABBY: I have never needed advice so badly in my life, and you are the only one I can turn to.

My married daughter is pregnant with her second child and is planning to have natural childbirth this time. She and her husband have been going for "lessons." It sounds very far out to me, but if that's their choice, it's all right with me.

But, Abby, she plans to have her 3-year-old son watch the delivery! Her husband will be present at the birth, and she also has invited her 19-year-old unmarried sister to witness the whole business! Lord help me! I had all I could do to keep from getting hysterical when she told me this.

Abby, do you think a 3-year-old child can handle something like this? Even a 19-year-old unmarried girl might not be able to handle it. I get sick at the thought of it.

We are conservative people, and I have raised my daughters to be modest, so this is a terrible shock to me.

What do you think of this whole business?

APPALLED IN K.C.
DEAR APPALLED: There is no better way to learn about the miracle of life than to witness childbirth. I see nothing shocking or immodest about it. And a 3-year-old child should find it a fascinating and educational experience.

DEAR ABBY: Remember me? I'm Abe Puchkoff (age 83) from Brooklyn. Ever since my name appeared in your column last summer, I've had letters and phone calls from all over the country.

How's this for a story? When I was a 27-year-old bachelor, a pretty girl caught my eye. I called her for a date, but she played hard to get, so that ended that.

Well, last Saturday my phone rang, and this very same lady (only 56 years later) said, "Is this Abe Puchkoff?"

I said, "Yes, that's me."

When she told me who she was, I nearly fainted. Then she said, "I saw your name in Dear Abby's column. I've been a widow for 20 years. How would you like to take me out to lunch?"

I very politely said, "It's not good for us to see each other so often." Then I added, "Besides, with God's help, my wife and I will celebrate our 50th this June."

ABE PUCHKOFF
DEAR ABBY: Thanks for another day-brightener. And mazeltov!

DEAR ABBY: I am making plans for my wedding. My father has given me a note in which he has put a note in the wedding invitations: "Send no gift, but give a donation to the Cancer Society."

Do you think this would be all right? I trust your judgment.

DADDY'S GIRL
DEAR GIRL: I know you mean well, and I sympathize. But I think such a note would be inappropriate.

Wedding bells in your future? Whether your lifestyle is bridal gown or blue jeans, Abby lays it all out for you in her book, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." Send $1 and a long stamped (28 cents) self-addressed envelope to Abby: 132 Laaky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

Photograph blood clots

LA JOLLA, Calif. (UPI) — Doctors have announced the development of an instrument which enables doctors for the first time to look directly into the heart and lungs and take color photographs of blood clots.

Researchers at the University of California at San Diego School of Medicine described the 40-inch glass-like device, called an angioscope, as a major development in the diagnosis and treatment of blood clots which kill thousands of Americans each year.

Current techniques for locating blood clots involve the injection of a contrasting material into the blood vessels, which may or may not show the clots in X-rays.

"This is very important," said Dr. James H. Harrell, one of three pulmonary researchers at University Hospital who developed the new device. "For the first time it allows us to be absolutely sure of what we are dealing with by using the existing radiographic techniques are wrong."

"They may not be displaying a clot at all. This allows us to look directly at it and say, 'Yes, this is a clot,' and not a tumor or some other type of material."

The new device, which has been used safely and effectively on animals and should be ready soon for use on humans.

Into the jugular vein in the neck, is fitted with an inflatable balloon. Attached to the other end is a control device which guides the instrument through the heart and blood vessels.

"As the device is advanced, anything that the balloon touches within the murky blood becomes clear," the researchers said. "The physician's view is somewhat like looking through a diving mask underwater."

"We've used a number of optical tricks to reproduce the images picked up by the angioscope, as a visual aid for diagnosis," Dr. Kenneth M. Moser said. "We are now reproducing excellent color photographs—and movies, and reasonably good video tapes of what the probe visualizes, for the diagnosis of blood clots."

Deviled egg pate, which borrows the term from the French, could be called a glorified egg salad

Pate idea utilized with eggs

Pates are among the many fine foods the French have shared with the rest of the world. In spite of their glamorous names and often sinfully expensive price tags, pates are basically nothing more than glorified meat loaves, since they're well-seasoned, ground meat mixtures.

Though it's not authentic French, the pate idea works well with eggs, too. In what could be called a glorified egg salad, hard-cooked eggs are prepared so they have a pate-like texture and a deviled egg flavor.

The egg yolks, which are separated from the whites, are blended together with the typical deviled egg flavorings: mayonnaise, mustard, lemon juice, Worcestershire sauce, salt and pepper. The whites are pressed through a sieve and mixed with the yolk mixture. The pate is then ready for serving. Melba rounds, bread slices or sliced fresh French bread are good accompaniments.

DEVILED EGG PATE

6 hard-cooked eggs
 1/4 cup mayonnaise
 1 1/2 teaspoons prepared mustard
 1 teaspoon lemon juice
 1/2 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
 1/4 teaspoon salt
 1/4 teaspoon pepper

Separate egg yolks from whites. In mixing bowl, mash yolks with fork. Blend mayonnaise and all seasonings into yolks.

Using spoon, press egg whites through a sieve and add to yolk mixture. Blend thoroughly. Chill. Yields about 1 1/2 cups.

*To hard-cook, put eggs in single layer in saucepan. Add enough tap water to come at least 1 inch above eggs. Cover and quickly bring just to boiling. Turn off heat. If necessary, remove pan from burner to prevent further boiling. Let eggs stand covered in the hot water 15 to 17 minutes for large eggs. (Adjust time up or down by about 3 minutes for each size larger or smaller.) Immediately run cold water over eggs or put them in ice water until completely cooled. To remove shell, crackle it by tapping gently all over. Roll egg between hands to loosen shell, then peel, starting at large end. Hold egg under running cold water or dip in bowl of water to help ease off shell.

Anniversaries

Both vegetable chowder and cheddar zucchini bread use several vegetables and are easy to prepare

MR. AND MRS. HERB RUSSMAN

TWIN FALLS—Mr. and Mrs. Herb Russman were honored on their 60th wedding anniversary Feb. 11. They were feted at a dinner party at the Little Tree Inn hosted by their son-in-law and daughter, John and Ferdi Humphreys of Corral, assisted by Lee and Marie Tucker of Fairfield. They have one daughter, Mrs. Russman and Alyce Holmberg were married Feb. 11, 1920, in Pender, Neb., in a double ceremony with her sister and his brother. They farmed in Nebraska, coming to Twin Falls area in 1936. The couple lived in Fairfield prior to returning to Twin Falls in 1957.

Homemade soup, bread provide nutrition

ROSEMONT, Ill. — As the mall brings a flock of bills and budget stretching becomes a serious matter, consider what foods give your family the most satisfaction. Don't home-made soup and bread stand with butter come to mind and stand near the top of the list?

They should, for both are time-tested foods. Not only does their appeal rest in their nutritious, wholesome qualities but also in the fact that they're homemade. And they need not be time-consuming to make. The soup uses quick-cooking vegetables in a milk sauce base, while the bread is a quick type, i.e., made with baking powder rather than yeast.

Preparing both for the same meal will fill the house with warm, wonderful aromas. The four good groups are represented in this simple supper. Vegetables figure prominently in both dishes, since the soup contains onions, green beans, potatoes and carrots, while the bread is flecked with zucchini. In addition, there are milk, eggs and cheese representing the meat group and the bread for the grain group.

Vegetable Chowder, as the soup is called since it is thick and creamy, cooks in less than half an hour while Cheddar Zucchini Bread bakes in about three quarters of an hour. Both are within easy reach even of the worker who rushes home to cook.

In-season fruit on hand — apples, oranges, pears and grapes — teamed with cheese provide an easy dessert.

VEGETABLE CHOWDER

- 6 cups
- 2 tablespoons butter
- 1/2 cup chopped onion
- 1 package (9 ounce) frozen cut green beans
- 1 1/2 cups thinly sliced carrots

- 1 1/2 cups diced potatoes
- 2 cups chicken broth
- 1 teaspoon savory
- 1 teaspoon seasoned salt
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1/4 teaspoon dill weed
- 1/4 teaspoon pepper
- 3 tablespoons flour
- 2 cups milk
- 1 tablespoon fresh lemon juice

Melt butter in a 3-quart saucepan; saute onion until tender, about 3 minutes. Add vegetables, broth and seasonings. Bring to boiling; reduce heat. Simmer, covered, 10 minutes, or until vegetables are tender. Combine flour and milk until smooth. Stir into hot mixture. Bring to boiling, stirring constantly. Boil and stir 1 minute. Stir in lemon juice.

CHEDDAR ZUCCHINI BREAD

- 1/4 cup (1/2 stick) butter
- 1 cup chopped onion

- 2 1/2 cups flour
- 1 tablespoon sugar
- 1 tablespoon baking powder
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1/2 teaspoon Italian seasoning
- 2 eggs

Age affects driving

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Changes in vision that occur normally after age 55 can interfere with driving unless the driver learns how to overcome or compensate for the problems.

The American Optometric Association says the changes include a need for more light, more sensitivity to glare, greater difficulty in changing focus from near objects to far and vice versa, slower reaction time, diminishing side vision and sometimes more difficulty in distinguishing the color of traffic signals accurately and quickly.

Some such changes may signal a more serious problem, so the association recommends regular eye exams.

The association's recommendations for compensating for the age-related changes are spelled out in a free brochure. They include:

- Having proper prescription glasses for day and night driving with a possible difference in power between the two;
- Avoiding driving at dusk or night;
- Avoiding glasses with wide side pieces that can block side vision;
- And knowing the effects on driving and alertness of any medications you take.

For a copy of the full list of "Driving Tips for Older Adults," send a self-addressed, stamped, business-size envelope, to the Communications Division, American Optometric Association, 243 North Lindbergh Blvd., St. Louis, Mo. 63141.

Harness readied for Camas Prairie energy

Spring water on Lloyd Barron ranch near Fairfield too hot for Mike Danielson to dip his hand in.

By BRUCE HAMMOND
Times-News writer

FAIRFIELD — Operating an ethanol plant with geothermal energy is just one goal several Camas Prairie residents have for the near future. "We're hoping to harness this geothermal energy we have to help even out some of the seasonal unemployment we have in the area," explained Mike Danielson, Wood River Resource Area coordinator in Camas County.

Danielson and others are working with an $8,000 grant recently received from the Economic Development Association. The grant is financing a feasibility study that may lead to construction of a 1-million-gallons-per-year ethanol plant by next year.

It is hoped that an ethanol plant, plus other geothermal proposals, including recreational hot springs and aquaculture, will relieve annual layoffs in farm and logging operations, according to Danielson.

The feasibility study includes electromagnetic research to locate several faults running through the Camas Prairie area. Fairfield, Forsgren and Perkins Energy Services of Idaho Falls began the feasibility study in February.

Three major faults connect just north of Fairfield. According to Danielson, these faults are part of an active geothermal line extending from northern Camas County to Miracle Hot Springs near Buhl.

"It's really much a renewable resource, too — one that can be continually tapped," Danielson claimed. "The first step is drilling a well, which we will do as soon as we can."

"Preliminary plans call for drilling a 2,000-foot well to harness steam and hot water for the proposed ethanol plant. Earlier studies indicate a 2,000-foot well would provide at least a 170-degree resource, according to Danielson.

"You have to have heat to run an ethanol plant, and hooking up a plant with a geothermal development will work really well," Danielson claimed. One possible site being considered is five miles west of Fairfield near Corral. However, Danielson stressed that other sites are also being considered.

"We figure a well like this will cost about $80,000 because of safeguards against blowouts and other requirements," Danielson said.

According to Danielson, a geothermal well has to have the same safety devices an oil well requires, causing construction costs to be high.

No cost estimate for the ethanol plant will be given until after the feasibility study is completed by Energy Services. Danielson said 1 million gallons of ethanol per year is a relatively small production figure.

This estimate is based on the amount of grain Camas County farmers could sell to the plant at competitive prices. Danielson stressed that once a geothermal well is drilled, establishing Camas Prairie as an energy source, the county's struggling economy will rise.

"After all, records show that the Fairfield area economy has been slowly declining since the 1920s," Danielson claimed. "If we want to preserve the kind of life we have up here, then we have to find some alternative economies to supplement the farming and logging industries."

Danielson said one method of financing the proposed plant is through grants and loans obtained through a non-profit organization such as the Camas Prairie County Geothermal Association, established about ten years ago.

"Of course that would depend on a vote from the association membership," he stressed, "but a non-profit group like that is eligible for federal grants as well as loans."

"Ground work" for the feasibility study began last summer when Danielson and Fairfield Mayor Russell Hollenback conducted a study of geothermal resources.

All wells studied registered higher water temperatures than local surface water, according to Danielson. For example, water in Fairfield's city well stays about 67 degrees all year, compared to significantly cooler surface water. Hot springs bubbling from numerous Camas Prairie pastures average between 181 and 191 degrees.

"One of the main points to all of this, is that it's a community effort," Danielson said. "While the Wood River Resource Area is helping, it's mainly the involvement of community residents in developing this resource."

"We're trying to push along as fast as we can, and now we seem to be getting somewhere," Danielson continued. "As to when we can start building an ethanol plant, it's hard to say, because of the way loans and financing are these days, but we hope to be under construction by next year."

Danielson said the ethanol plant would provide between 10 and 15 local jobs.

"It's also hoped that the ethanol produced can be marketed for the most part in the Camas Prairie region to help boost the local economy and keep the income here," Danielson said. "Mainly the ethanol will be used to operate farm equipment, and it's believed most would be consumed within the county."

Bluff development granted approval

SUN VALLEY — Planning officials voted Monday to allow the controversial Bluff development overlooking Elkhorn Village. On a 5-1 vote, the Sun Valley Planning and Zoning Commission approved designs for 88 one- and two-bedroom condominiums on the bluff. Later phases of the planned unit development could place as many as 400 units on the 30-acre site.

Commission member Bill Taylor said his colleagues felt they had reached a point beyond which the development could not be stopped. "Essentially, the objections are aesthetic," Taylor said. "I'm sure Elkhorn feels they could win the case in court."

Elkhorn at Sun Valley first presented the development for design review and plat approval last October, but action was deferred in November when it became apparent mayor-elect Richard Heckmann would replace several members of the commission. Residents of the Bonne Vie de development below the bluff raised mild objections to the plans, stating that their view of the surrounding hills would be partly obscured by the new development. But Elkhorn President John Harker said nearly all residents of the area purchased their condominiums through Elkhorn Realty, which has prominently displayed a model showing future expansion on the bluff.

"Taylor said Monday that commission members were torn between aesthetic goals for the community and a zoning ordinance that allows high-density development on the bluff."

"What it came down to," he said, "is that we don't have a big enough case to say no to it." City Attorney Evan Robertson attended Monday's meeting to discuss the commission's legal dilemma. Several members had requested advice on the possibility of downzoning the site to prevent development.

Home decorating hints offered by Jerome agent

JEROME — Jerome County Extension Home Economist Cindy Paulos will offer Monday tips on home decorating, "without spending a fortune."

The session costs 50 cents, and will be held 1:30-3:30 p.m. Monday in the Jerome County Courthouse meeting room. Interested persons should register before Thursday by calling 324-8811.

Solar energy coordination plans take shape

By BRUCE HAMMOND
Times-News writer

NORTH VALLEY — Solar energy workshops and a coordination program are taking shape in North Valley counties.

Resource workers for the Wood River Resource Area have begun a cooperative program with the Idaho Office of Energy to develop farm and residential uses of solar energy.

"Our main thrust at this point is towards passive solar energy," said Nicholas Cimino, state solar research analyst. "I think with active solar you still need to practice some caution."

Cimino advocates building structures that capture solar heat without the aid of mechanical collecting devices.

Three examples he discussed with WRRRA workers are window box collectors, flat-plate collectors, and hot water collectors. All three of these solar techniques are simple to build and install, Cimino claimed.

Cimino met with WRRRA workers from Elkhorn and Camas counties Friday to offer technical assistance and to encourage North Valley residents to form a chapter of the Idaho Solar Energy Association.

People there also heard how WRRRA representatives stressed that localized clinics instructing residents how to build energy-saving devices were their main priority. "The people around here in many ways are part-time mechanics. They're quite capable of building these units themselves, and the only thing that will interest them is ways to cut their electric bills," said Camas County Energy Coordinator Brian Cluer.

"What people here need are facts and figures, and design models that they can plug their own figures into and get an idea on how to build units specifically for their own home or farm," Cluer stressed.

In response, Cimino is working with several WRRRA representatives to set up workshops in all North Valley counties. Solar energy clinics in Camas and Gooding counties may be held before the end of March, provided scheduling problems can be overcome.

"With the price of fuel rising so fast, this next year we're going to see a big explosion towards solar energy," predicted Mike Danielson, WRRRA resource worker in Camas County. Danielson and Cluer are hoping to schedule a workshop on hot water collectors this month. If held, this clinic would show Camas Prairie residents how to build a hot water collector that would reduce their

Gooding council lets airport survey contract

By BRUCE HAMMOND
Times-News writer

GOODING — A contract was issued to survey the Gooding Airport and garbage collection fees were raised Monday by the Gooding City Council.

Council members approved surveying the east end of Gooding Airport for proposed expansion this summer. J-U-B Engineers Inc. of Twin Falls was awarded the surveying contract to begin this month.

The proposed expansion hinges on opening a large area east of the Gooding runway for construction of three, 100-foot-long hangars. The expansion also includes paving a frontage access road to the runway and building an access road to the hangars, according to Gooding Mayor Gene Heller.

"No estimate of the survey was possible at this time, because we asked Bill Block (of J-U-B) to survey Rice Avenue at the same time," Heller said.

Rice Avenue, a cul-de-sac in southwest Gooding, is scheduled for paving this summer. "People there and I have been told that street will be paved every year for a long time, and we're going to see that it's finally done," Heller said.

Council members also voted to raise garbage collection rates to meet rising operation costs. Gooding operates its own garbage collection system. "It's not salaries or anything like that causing the increase. Primarily, it's the rising cost of fuel that's making us go into the hole," Heller explained.

The council approved a 27 percent fee increase for all service subscribers. This amounts to an increase of 75 cents a month for residential users, according to Heller. Businesses and other large volume subscribers will experience a higher monetary increase, though these will still be assessed at 27 percent.

In other action, Lloyd McLeod, city water department supervisor, was named city superintendent by Mayor Gene Heller. McLeod, a 20-year city employee, will coordinate all city departments while continuing as water department supervisor.

"We're going back to the one-boss arrangement," explained Heller. After taking office in January, Heller had complained there was a lack of cooperation between city departments resulting in wasted time and money. At that time he expressed to Heller his desire to establish better relationships between the various departments and tighter organization of city work.

"He (McLeod) has been a very loyal and industrious employee and we do expect some substantial savings from this change."

Disasters will find St. Benedict's prepared

By RON ZELLAR
Times-News writer

JEROME — St. Benedict's Hospital is prepared for major disasters but is frequently short-handed for daily patient care, the hospital's administrator said Monday.

A recent incident in the St. Benedict's emergency room underscores the fact that the hospital needs two or more additional doctors, said Bob Campbell.

On Feb. 13, a smoke-inhalation victim from a potato shed fire was told he would have to wait and advised to see his family doctor at Magic Valley Memorial Hospital in Twin Falls.

Doctors at St. Benedict's were busy treating three persons seriously injured in an automobile accident that occurred the same afternoon on Interstate 20-N.

In addition, Campbell said, the hospital had 20 patients in its medical care wing, nearly double the average patient load.

"A recently revised hospital disaster plan spells out staffing and space allocations in the event of a major accident, such as a school bus crash, he said.

The most critically injured would be seen in another area. Family members and the media would be assigned still other areas.

In the event of an even larger disaster, areas of the high school would be used for temporary shelter and a morgue, Campbell said. A hospital like St. Benedict's, though it serves as a regional care center, is equipped only to stabilize the condition of some patients, he said. They are then routinely transported by air or ambulance to larger treatment centers.

Initial phases of the plan might have been implemented Feb. 13, he said, but first reports indicated no serious injuries from the fire and the accident situation was being handled adequately by the medical personnel on hand.

Hospital staff reported the smoke victim's condition was not life-threatening, he said; and the patient was told he might be seen more quickly at Magic Valley Memorial.

"It's tough to staff up to the maximum that might be needed," Campbell said. "But the hospital's board has embarked on a recruiting drive to improve the area's medical coverage.

Three additional doctors are needed in the Jerome area, he said. Help also is needed in the Shoshone, Wendell and Eden-Hazelton areas. A new ambulatory care clinic in the hospital will help relieve some of the burden on the present staff of five full-time doctors, Campbell said.

"Nurse practitioners Judi Beem will see persons at the clinic for routine physicals and minor ailments from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday. Beem will consult with other members of the hospital's staff and refer patients to doctors when necessary.

"The clinic was to have opened this week, Campbell said, but the opening was rescheduled for March 10 to allow for the arrival of some needed equipment.

Seamstress Cindy McLoughlin stitches a sheepskin coat as customers browse in the salesroom of the shop at Ketchum

By SUSAN GALLAGHER
Times-News writer

KETCHUM — Sheepskin coats fashioned after the one worn by the Marlboro-puffing cowboy are the mainstay of a small garment factory here.

Three seamstresses at the Sheepskin Coat Factory, 525 Fourth St. E., produce some 300 coats annually.

Manager Susan Peterson said buyers typically are Sun Valley-area residents and tourists, but coats bearing the Ketchum label also travel as far east as Bloomington's department store in New York.

A small mail-order enterprise is part of the factory's business, too.

A businessman founded the Ketchum factory eight years ago after observing a similar operation in Aspen, Colo., Peterson said. The Ketchum firm has since been sold to David Norton, owner of a sheepskin coat factory in Salt Lake City.

Coats are the most popular item, but the Ketchum factory also creates vests, hats, mittens, tennis racquet covers, quilts and more than 30 stuffed toys.

"We started with the ubiquitous teddy bear," Peterson said. "Now we have everything from aardvarks to zebras."

Price tags range from a few dollars for an eyeglass case to around $800 for full-length coats. Leather quilts run upward of $1,000.

Though sheep might outnumber people as summertime inhabitants on Blaine County's slopes, Peterson said the factory purchases hides from a Napa, Calif., tannery, which acquires them worldwide.

Working in the attic of the tiny Ketchum shop, Doug DeJohn trims the hides to fit various garment patterns. A steam device removes wrinkles and DeJohn shears the wool to reduce bulk.

A New York native who moved to southern Idaho in December, DeJohn joined the factory after learning of an Idaho Department of Employment job notice seeking someone who would enjoy sewing.

Seamstresses using industrial machines say it takes about a day to construct a coat.

Peterson, who claims anyone able to sew conventional fabrics can sew hides, said few employees have previous experience working with leather.

One exception is seamstress Jan McCrae, whose work background includes sewing leather motorcycle jackets, often with intricate designs and emblems.

Peterson said coat sales are evenly split between off-the-rack selections and custom orders.

Several standard designs enjoy popularity year after year, she said, and the shop introduces a few variations annually.

Reversible coats, which can be worn with the fur in or out, are among the newest lines. But the coat fashioned after one worn by the western horseman in cigarette ads continue to be the best seller, Peterson said.

Finishing touches on the coats include buttons crafted from buffalo horn, deer antlers and wood.

The popularity of sheepskin clothing has grown enormously in the past four years, Peterson said. She attributes that to both fashion sense and durability, claiming the coats wear well in practically any weather, including rain.

monthly electric bill by 15 percent, Cluer said.

WRRA representative Geraldine Fields plans to sponsor a similar clinic for Gooding County residents this month, if Cimino can schedule instructors for the workshop.

Clinics in other North Valley counties could be held next winter after the farming season is past, Cimino said.

"We're trying to reach several audiences," Cimino said. "We try to work closely with the building industry and contractor associations, the financial community, and local governments. We also try to help establish chapters of the Solar Energy Association."

"This association serves as a resource center, providing books and informational material, as well as serving as a forum for discussion," Cimino continued.

Jerome commissioners hear second computer firm pitch

By RON ZELLAR Times-News writer

JEROME—A second computer firm made its pitch Monday to the Jerome County Commissioners.

Richard Mc Cullough, area manager for Burroughs Corporation, said his firm could offer the county a higher trade-in value on its present bookkeeping equipment and more versatile expansion as its computer needs grow.

With 63 installations in southern Idaho, Mc Cullough said Burroughs offers the largest base of any computer firm in the state.

A Burroughs system tailored to the county's desires would cost slightly more than $70,000, he said. A salesman for International Business Machines said in January his firm could install a system for about $80,000.

Maintenance contracts on the two systems are about comparable, Commission Chairman Mel Grindstaff noted.

"We recognize who our competition is," Mc Cullough said. "And we feel our equipment is superior to or equal to anything IBM has."

He said computer programs for property tax assessments have been written for the state of Idaho, and are available free to county governments.

Other programs for Burroughs have been written by Franklin County Clerk Mike Kunz, who is familiar with county operations and is probably one of the best programmers in the Northwest," Mc Cullough said.

The programs written by Kunz sell for between $15,000 and $18,000, he said, and are included in the $70,000 estimate.

Burroughs computer customers range from the Bank of Idaho to Bean Growers Warehouse Association of Jerome.

The commissioners agreed to consider both proposals, but will delay any decision on a computer purchase until budget meetings begin next month.

In other business, the commission discussed granting a variance to North Rim Fairways developers near the Jerome Country Club golf course.

Developer Joe Davidson has asked the South Central Idaho Board of Health to include the golf course in the development for purposes of determining density allowed for septic tanks.

North Rim Fairways has asked to develop 120 units on its 80-acre site adjacent to the new course, according to Bill Allred, environmentalist for the South Central district of the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare.

Original plans for the development put the site at 120 acres, but several modifications were made as the golf course was constructed.

The regional health board will take up the request at its March 19 meeting, Allred said. The board has sought legal advice on the possibility of encumbering golf course land to the development for septic tank purposes.

Nuclear sub Nautilus becomes tourist lure

MARE ISLAND, Calif. (UPI) — The USS Nautilus, named for the undersea vessel that came from the deep reaches of Jules Verne's imagination, was once literally on top of the world.

Pretty soon it won't be anything more than a tourist attraction.

The Navy says the world's first atomic-powered submarine was no longer worth keeping in service. Workers have been getting the 25-year-old sub ready for retirement since last year at the Mare Island Naval Shipyard, where decommissioning ceremonies were held Monday.

At the very same mast on Jan. 17, 1955, the Nautilus pulled away from its slip and Cmdr. Eugene P. Wilkinson issued the message, "Under way on nuclear power."

Then on Aug. 5, 1958, the Nautilus was the first ship to complete a voyage across the top of the world, sailing under the Arctic ice cap from the Bering Strait to the Greenland Sea. The sub took 96 hours to travel the 1,830 miles without surfacing.

Nuclear power gave the Nautilus and later submarines the ability to stay submerged for long periods of time. Previously subs had to surface about every hour while cruising at high speed.

In 1957, the vessel set a submerged speed record from England to New York City in less than 6 1/2 days at an average speed of nearly 20 knots.

President Harry S. Truman laid the keel for the Nautilus on June 14, 1952, at Groton, Conn., and the sub was launched Jan. 21, 1954, by Mrs. Dwight D. Eisenhower.

In 1963 the Nautilus was host to the great-great-grandson of Jules Verne, author of the epic "Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea," about the adventures of a fictional undersea vessel, also called the Nautilus.

With a length of 319 feet and a beam of 27 feet, the Nautilus displaced 3,000 tons and carried a crew of 11 officers and 100 enlisted men. It could dive to a depth of more than 400 feet and was armed with six torpedo tubes.

During its quarter century of active service the Nautilus traveled more than a half million miles and visited ports from Robesey, Scotland, to La Spezia, Italy.

The Navy plans to turn the Nautilus into a tourist attraction in the Washington, D.C., Navy Yard at a cost of $7.5 million.

The sub was the sixth "Nautilus" in Navy history. The first was a 12-gun schooner captured at the outbreak of the War of 1812. The first submarine christened with the name was built in San Francisco in 1911 and served until 1922.

Comedian enters world of straight politicians

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — Comedian Pat Paulsen, who once ran a tongue-in-cheek presidential campaign on the STAG Party ticket, is now involved in the realm of real politics.

He will be host for a fund raising dinner for Rep. Dan Marriott, R-Utah, Paulsen, who said he's retired from the STAG — Straight Talking American Government — Party, is scheduled to headline a "Dan Marriott Roast Dinner" March 21 at 7 p.m. in the Grand Ballroom of the Hotel Utah.

The $130-per-plate fund raiser will be the official kick-off for the two-term congressman's re-election campaign, said John Hanks, Marriott's press secretary.

"It's going to be a roast and we're going to take this guy apart," Paulsen said of Marriott.

When Paulsen made his joke presidential bid, he also held fund raising dinners. But he charged only $9 cents per plate. "I raised over $200 once, which wasn't bad," said the comedian.

Paulsen said he agreed to host Marriott's campaign "kick-off" so he could get a free room at a Marriott Hotel. When informed that the Utah congressman is not the Marriott who owns the hotel chain, Paulsen, who has never met Marriott, said, "Well, he's an old friend of mine and I like to help my friends."

Hanks said there will also be "one surprise guest."

Stand costs editors jobs

WACO, Texas (UPI) — The Baylor University campus newspaper's three top editors were fired because the paper ran an editorial defending the right of female students to pose for nude photographs.

The publication's board, made up of five faculty members and six students, announced the firings Monday.

The flap began last month when Playboy magazine announced it planned photo-series on "Girls of the Southwest Conference."

School President, Abner V. McCall said any Baylor student posing for a frontal nude shot and "representing Baylor University" probably would face disciplinary action. He said posing for the magazine would be a violation of Baptist tenets.

The board's action was prompted by a controversy over an editorial saying female students should be allowed to decide for themselves whether to pose for the nude photographs.

Several staff members submitted sympathetic resignations, closing down the newspapers until after spring break, which begins Friday.

Actress sues renter

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Actress Mario Thomas has filed a $200,000 damage suit against a producer who rented her hillside home and took or destroyed art objects, antiques and silver.

Miss Thomas, daughter of comedian Danny Thomas, filed the Superior Court civil suit Monday against Keith Barish, who allegedly agreed to rent her home for $9,500 a month.

The suit, charging Barish left the home "in grossly unclean condition," said some of her antiques, sculptures, rugs, desks and other items had been either removed or destroyed and landscaping had been damaged.

CHEYENNE, Wyo. (UPI) — A "Sagebrush Rebellion" bill aimed at returning control of public lands to the state advanced in the Senate Monday.

However, it picked up an amendment that would forbid sales or trades of the lands without a public hearing.

Opponents of the measure, a House bill sponsored by Rep. Marlene Simons, R-Crook, have expressed fears that the state would sell public lands into private ownership once it acquired control from the federal government.

Although current law provides that the state cannot sell state-owned lands without a public hearing in the county where the land is located, Sen. Diemer True, R-Natrona, offered an amendment expanding that provision to include land trades.

Another amendment, sponsored by Sen. Tom Stroock, R-Natrona, sought to exempt National Parks lands from the proposed bill, which has already passed the House. But Stroock's amendment failed to win support in the Senate.

Opponents of Stroock's amendment said it would defeat much of the bill's purpose, since the headwaters of many Wyoming rivers are located on National Forest land.

"If you change it in this respect," said Sen. Donald Cundall, R-Goshen-Platte, "then you've lost the battle."

In other action Monday, the Senate gave final approval to a House-proposed state plan for the regulation of coal surface mining and reclamation activities in Wyoming.

The plan was drawn up during months of negotiations between Gov. Ed Herschler's office and the federal Office of Surface Mining, which earlier threatened to take over regulation of mining and reclamation activities unless the Legislature approved a suitable state plan.

Herschler urged legislative approval of the plan in his State of the State address to the Legislature last month, saying the proposal was the state's only hope of retaining control over strip mining and reclamation.

The plan, if adopted by the 1980 session, would be submitted to the OSM for approval.

In earlier Senate debate on the plan, several members expressed doubts that the federal agency would approve the state proposal, and others argued that the state should go to court to resolve the conflict.

On Monday, Stroock offered an amendment that would have appropriated $250,000 for legal fees to fight the OSM in court.

Stroock said the money would be used if the state plan was rejected by the OSM, and his amendment said the legal fees would be allocated "when appropriate."

plan) doesn't fly," Stroock said, "then the attorney general would go to court and try to protect us."

The measure met stiff opposition, however, as some members were unsatisfied with the term, "when appropriate" and others said the state Attorney General's Office should not be given that much money and power.

Sen. Robert Novotny, R-Fremont, said the court fight should be left to the governor to decide, and that Herschler's contingency fund could provide the legal fees if needed.

The amendment was supported by Sen. Diemer True, R-Natrona, who called it "entirely appropriate." He earlier said he was dissatisfied with many of the proposed state plan's provisions, but supported its passage.

Energy auditors train

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — Eighteen persons from 12 utilities Monday began training to become home energy auditors under a $4 million home-weatherization pilot project by Bonneville Power Administration.

Training classes through Friday will be sponsored by BPA and conducted by consultants from A.I.P. Incorporated of Minneapolis-St. Paul, Minn. The course will cover characteristics of differing insulating materials, heat transfer theory, residential construction, weatherization techniques, methods of auditing homes, and follow-up inspections.

"They will be trained to identify energy saving opportunities in homes and other buildings, give weatherization tips and make recommendations on cost effective improvements that can help make homes efficient," said BPA administrator Sterling Munro. "Once they are on the job, we will also look to them for advice for future energy saving ideas."

In the pilot project, BPA will invest the money to insulate 2,500 electrically heated homes in Oregon, Montana, Idaho and Washington in the next two years. Homeowners will repay the insulating costs provided under interest-free loans.
