

Jurors acquit Ford

WINAMAC, Ind. (UPI) — Ford Motor Co. was acquitted of reckless homicide Thursday.

The jurors decided prosecutors didn't present enough evidence showing Pinto gas tank design caused the deaths of three teen-agers.

Attorneys for nation's second largest automaker, who spent $1 million defending itself in the landmark case, said the verdict vindicated the Pinto.

But two members of the jury said they wouldn't drive the compact cars.

The prosecution, despite his loss, insisted the 10-week trial sent a message to corporate boardrooms across America: make safer products or face more criminal charges.

"We felt the state never presented enough evidence to find Ford guilty," said jury foreman Art Selmer, 62, a retired farmer. "We were waiting for more evidence."

An auto safety consultant who testified for the prosecution said after the verdict was delivered that the jury was allowed to see 10 percent of the evidence.

During the trial, Judge Harold Griffith granted Ford motions to bar all but 20 of 300 documents from Ford files which prosecutor Michael Costantino tried to introduce as evidence.

Many of those documents dealt with crash tests of various early model Pintos.

The Pulaski County jury deliberated 25 hours before deciding Ford was not responsible for the deaths of Judy Ulrich, 18, her sister, Lynn, 16, both of Osceola, Ind., and their cousin, Donna Ulrich, 16, of Roanoke, Ill.

The teen-agers were killed when their 1973 Pinto was struck in the rear by a van on Aug. 10, 1972, on U.S. 33 near Goshen.

The prosecution charged the placement of Pinto's gas tank made the car liable to explode in flames when struck from the rear.

James Neal, the former Watergate prosecutor who headed Ford's defense team, said, "I have always said the Pinto is comparable to all other cars and the jury has agreed."

Selmer told a news conference he wasn't convinced of the safety of the 1973 Pinto.

"I wouldn't feel safe," he said. "There is still room for improvement."

Juror Raymond Schramm, a Winamac mechanic, said his wife drives a Pinto and "can't afford a bigger car. I'm stuck with it."

Schramm was unhappy because, "I think we should have been able to see the 1971, 1972 and 1974 (tests) for evidence on the Pinto."

In Washington, consumer advocate Ralph Nader said the verdict was not surprising because the prosecution was unable to introduce several pieces of damaging evidence.

Gravel bar, on right, is site of proposed dredge mining on Snake River near Bancroft Springs

Gold from a gravel bar? Residents oppose plan to dredge Snake River

By BRUCE HAMMOND Times-News writer

GLENN'S FERRY — Gold fever has run into cold opposition in this Idaho farm community. At least 30 Glenns Ferry area residents have filed letters with the Idaho Department of Water Resources opposing dredging the Snake River for gold.

Hammert residents Douglas Stewart and Sidney Horman have applied for a stream channel alteration permit for a site immediately below Bancroft Springs in Elmore County. The two hope to dredge out a 1,320-foot gravel bar in search of gold.

However, several people say they don't want dredging in the Snake River.

"Our basic concern is that there'll be damage to the irrigation system," explained Glenns Ferry resident Patricia Farley. "We're afraid debris from the dredging will clog up irrigation pumps."

Farley added that signers of the letters sent to the DWR are also worried the gold mining would destroy the beauty of the river and upset trout fishing.

"What concerns these farmers in the King Hill irrigation system the most is that free-floating moss will stick on irrigation screens," said King Hill farmer and banker Henry Knox.

Knox, who didn't sign a letter of objection, stressed that he doesn't necessarily oppose dredging by Stewart and Horman, but is sure the mess problem is a threatening possibility.

"At this time," he said, "personnel employed to clear moss from the Snake and as a result of floating moss in the river would really know."

Stewart said the gravel pump he and Horman intend to use would affect only a small amount of downstream water, and that significant amounts of gold could be extracted from the stream.

Colleagues not to recommit the bill "Just for a few selfish people who want more."

The windfall tax is "good for America," declared Rep. Al Ullman, D-Ore., chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee.

The president wanted tax revenues to be used to develop alternate energy sources, urban mass transit systems, and to help poor people pay their rising fuel bills.

The tax bill also earmarks $57 billion to help poor people pay fuel bills. It only pegs $3 billion for energy and transportation programs.

Future Congresses will make the final decisions on how the funds are actually spent.

The bill provides $8.6 billion to businesses and $60 million to individuals who install energy-conserving devices and allows a maximum $4,000 tax credit for installation of solar, geothermal or wind devices.

Anti-inflation speech today Carter may hike gasoline

WASHINGTON — President Carter will announce today a new anti-inflation plan.

It is expected to include proposals to balance the fiscal 1981 budget through sharp cuts in spending and oil import fee of $4 to $4.50 a barrel. That could increase gasoline prices 10 cents a gallon.

Without disclosing details, the White House said Carter will lay out the program in a late-afternoon statement, after the financial markets close, and will also hold a televised news conference at 7 p.m.

Sources hinted the package will also include new steps by the Federal Reserve Board to restrain consumer spending by limiting use of credit cards. The Fed is expected to make a separate announcement today concerning its own actions.

As Carter prepared the anti-inflation announcement, his Council on Wage and Price Stability announced it is relaxing its current 7 percent wage guideline to a new and more realistic "range" of 7 1/2 to 9 1/2 percent, as recommended by Carter's new Pay Advisory Committee.

At the same time, Carter's companion Price Advisory Committee threw up its hands in open frustration Thursday, saying the administration's price-restraint program has been so battered by inflation that it is on the verge of collapse.

In an extraordinary formal statement, the six-member panel said the price program was floating on "a wave of inflation generated beyond its reach." It said the guidelines were having almost no effect on prices.

The developments came as the banking industry began a new round of interest-rate increases, the second in less than a week. A group of major banks led by Chase Manhattan Bank raised their prime lending rates to 18 1/4 percent from 17 3/4 percent.

These cuts would be in addition to some $5.6 billion in money-saving measures that Carter proposed in his budget last January. These latter measures included his hospital cost-containment plan and cuts in the school lunch program.

In addition, congressional economists have suggested cutting out Saturday mail service.

Idaho gas closer to 2-cent tax increase

BOISE (UPI) — The House voted 40-30 Thursday to increase Idaho's per-gallon gasoline tax to 11 1/2 cents from 9 1/2 cents.

The two increases partially would answer the pleas of the state Transportation Department for $39 million to carry out repairs on Idaho highways.

However, the department will get nowhere near this amount under the House defeated the gas tax proposal.

But the department stands to gain $9 million in additional revenue from the gas tax boost, and a total of $10 million-$15 million from the total package of increases, including the ton-mile hike.

The Senate still must consider both the ton-mile and gas tax bills.

Earlier this legislative session, the House defeated the gas tax proposal, but later the same day voted to reconsider it after the ton-mile tax hit the floor.

Most of Thursday's floor debate centered not so much on the amount of money needed or the shape of the state's highways, but on the quality of administration in the department.

Rep. B.E. "Bud" Lewis, R-St. Maries, continued his attack on Transportation Department Director Darrell Manning and his staff for alleged poor management.

Lewis repeated points he made Wednesday about the department's supposed wastefulness and misplaced priorities.

The sponsor of the gas tax bill, Rep. John Sessions, R-Driggs, defended the department.

House passes oil profits tax

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The $22.7 billion oil windfall profits tax won House approval by an overwhelming vote Thursday.

It was nearly a year after President Carter made it the centerpiece of his energy program.

The House voted 302-107 to send the bill to the Senate, where final congressional action is expected next week.

The tax, which would be retroactive to March 1 and last a decade, earmarks $136 billion for tax cuts for individuals and businesses between 1980 and 1990.

President Carter has promised to sign the final version hammered out by House and Senate negotiators even though it recommends making more than half the revenue available for tax cuts instead of energy programs.

Carter asked for it last April to capture for public use some of the $1 trillion in extra profits oil companies are expected to reap from phased decontrol of domestic oil prices.

In a statement, the president said he was "very pleased" by the House vote and urged the Senate to pass the bill "promptly."

"Our present economic problems are in large part due to the failure to take firm action in years gone by," he said, predicting the tax "will provide significant new incentives to U.S. oil producers" while preventing excessive, unearned income from decontrol and from precipitous rises in the world oil price.

The House acted on the windfall bill after defeating, 227-185, an effort by Rep. Bill Archer, R-Texas, to have it sent back to congressional conferees with directions to exempt the first 1,000 barrels of oil sold daily by independent oil producers.

Rep. Sam Gibbons, D-Fla., urged

State Department concludes U.S. hostages all alive, some ill

WASHINGTON (UPI) — An accumulation of new evidence has convinced the State Department all 50 American hostages are alive and held in the Tehran embassy compound.

The militants have occasionally used the figure of 49 for the number of hostages and there have been reports at least one of the hostages attempted suicide.

The U.S. official said, "We have come to the conclusion all 50 are alive and inside the compound. We don't have first-hand evidence, but the preponderance of the evidence is that all are alive."

He refused to describe the specific evidence, except to say it was a combination of clues.

Among the bits of information is a continuing trickle of hand-written letters from the hostages, delivered to the families through the international mails.

Occasional pictures have been permitted of some of the hostages, most frequently Marine guards. Officials said there appear to be "two or three tiers" of treatment accorded the hostages, and generally speaking, the diplomats concerned with political matters were being treated less well.

In addition to the 50 thought to be in the embassy, three other Americans, including a charge d'affaires, Bruce Laingen, are held as virtual prisoners in a room in the Iranian Foreign Ministry, where they have been since Nov. 4, the day the embassy was overrun.

State Department spokesman Hodding Carter said the administration is studying television film which was permitted to be released Wednesday by the militants. It shows about 10 of the American hostages being treated by a man identified as a Red Cross medical doctor.

One of the hostages was Barry Rosen, an embassy public affairs officer with the U.S. International Communication Agency.

USICA director John Reinhardt said Thursday, "Last night I watched the film of our colleague Barry Rosen with shock and dismay. It is obvious that the brutality of the past 121 days has exacted a high price and has affected his health, perhaps seriously.

"I cannot believe that if they knew the facts, the Iranian people would approve the hardships he and the other captives have endured."

Reason, in the film which was shown over NBC, combined in a thin, shaky voice he had been seriously ill in January, possibly suffering a convulsion, that his heart was beating irregularly and he had trouble sleeping.

The State Department spokesman said it is known that other hostages were also suffering medical problems which "could be exacerbated by confinement."

The spokesman said, "The film of the visit by the doctor, which should be viewed as a propaganda exercise, shouldn't obscure the basic cruelty of the situation."

Accused murderer Mrs. Jean Harris at court

Judge irked at delay request

HARRISON, N.Y. (UPI) — A town justice angered by the prosecution's legal tactics threatened Thursday to dismiss murder charges against a Virginia schoolmistress accused of killing "Scarface Diet" author Dr. Herman Tarnower.

At a felony hearing before Harrison Town Justice Harvey Fried, prosecutors requested a three-week delay on proceedings in their case against Mrs. Jean Harris, 57, who is charged with second-degree murder.

Fried postponed a ruling and agreed to allow the prosecution to continue with its case at a hearing today.

Westchester County District Attorney Carl Vergari said later: "We will proceed in court tomorrow. We don't want to run the risk of having the charges dismissed."

At funeral services for the slain 69-year-old cardiologist in Larchmont, N.Y., Tarnower's friends confirmed reports he had frequently dated his nurse some 40 years his junior — at the same time he maintained a close friendship with Mrs. Harris, who helped write the book that made him famous.

Gacy sentenced to die

CHICAGO (UPI) — John Wayne Gacy Thursday was sentenced to death for the murders of 33 young men and boys.

The jury, which took less than two hours Wednesday to convict Gacy, took two hours and 15 minutes to decide Gacy should die in the electric chair. Cook County Circuit Judge Louis B. Garipio imposed the sentence immediately after his clerk read the jury's decision.

The execution was set for June 2 but was expected to be delayed during appeals.

Applause broke out in the courtroom. Four alternate jurors sitting in a group huddled together and cried. Gacy stood emotionless.

Gacy's date with the electric chair is certain to be delayed — perhaps for years. State law requires an automatic appeal to the Illinois Supreme Court.

FTC to run out of money

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A House committee Thursday voted an emergency extension of funds for the embattled Federal Trade Commission.

But it went no further because the House, which would also have to approve it, recessed for the weekend.

The agency will run out of money Saturday. While members of Congress expressed hope the situation would not force the FTC to close its doors, its general counsel ruled FTC employees could come to work, maintain day-to-day operations — including continuing current investigations — and make court appearances, in anticipation of being paid.

Candidates attack Anderson

CHICAGO (UPI) — In the most argumentative meeting of their roadshow debates, four Republican presidential candidates clashed sharply Thursday night over domestic affairs and party loyalty.

Before their fifth candidate forum ended, former Gov. Ronald Reagan, former U.N. ambassador George Bush and Rep. Philip Crane all were taking broadside swings, most of them at the Illinois primary front-runner, Rep. John Anderson.

"Will you support the nominee of the Republican Party whoever he is?" Bush demanded of Anderson, the most liberal of the GOP quartet.

"Truly spoken by a former chairman of the Republican National Committee under Richard Nixon," Anderson snapped. "Don't point your finger at me, George. I expect to be the nominee of the Republican Party."

But Anderson said he would not "repeat the old shibboleth and embrace any candidate."

When asked the same question by moderator Howard K. Smith, Crane said, "I won't."

Turning to his colleague in the Illinois congressional delegation, Crane said Anderson had signed a fundraising letter for liberal Democrats.

"You have forfeited the support of the Republican Party," Crane said.

Anderson in church trouble

CHICAGO — Rep. John B. Anderson, R-Ill., a contender for the Republican presidential nomination, is in trouble with his own church over his stand favoring the right of a woman to choose to have an abortion.

Anderson refused Thursday to reconsider his abortion-views despite a warning from leaders of the Evangelical Free Church, of which he is a member, that abortion is against church doctrine.

Delegates to the annual meeting of the church's Great Lakes District overwhelmingly passed a resolution Wednesday calling on Anderson to "publicly change his attitude to conform to the word of God."

"I'm in trouble with his own church over his stand favoring the right of a woman to choose to have an abortion," Anderson said. "Likewise, I do not believe that in this instance you can say the power of the state, the coercive, intrusive power of the state, can be used to tell an individual — in this case a woman — what with respect to the most personal, intimate decision that she can make, that the state will decide the question."

Indians' land claim settled

AUGUSTA, Maine (UPI) — The state has reached an $81.5 million agreement-in-principle with two Indian tribes who claimed two-thirds of Maine was illegally taken from them, it was announced Thursday.

The Passamaquoddy and Penobscot tribes claimed 12.5 million acres of land were taken from them in violation of federal law more than 150 years ago.

No damage seen inside TMI

MIDDLETOWN, Pa. (UPI) — The first humans to peek into the crippled Three Mile Island reactor said Thursday that damage from the nation's worst nuclear accident may have been less extensive than previously suspected.

"It looked like a normal operating reactor inside from what little we could see," said George Kalman, 35, a U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission reactor operations inspector.

Jordan reported in Panama

PANAMA CITY, Panama (UPI) — Famed Houston heart surgeon Dr. Michael DeBakey, preparing to fly to Panama for expected splen surgery on the shah of Iran, must first obtain special governmental permission, officials said Thursday.

About admitting the shah, the director of Panama's Patilla Hospital, Rodrigo Moreno, said, "If the gentleman comes, we'll look after him."

Security forces patrolled outside the facility in obvious preparation for the arrival of the shah and the possible operation by DeBakey.

CBS News reported Thursday that President Carter's chief of staff, Hamilton Jordan, was in Panama to meet with officials about the shah. The White House declined comment, but an aide of Jordan aide told UPI: "I haven't seen him for a couple of days."

School prayers struck down

BOSTON (UPI) — The Massachusetts Supreme Court Thursday overturned the state's new school prayer law, declaring it unconstitutional.

The law, which took effect Feb. 5, required public school teachers to ask for student volunteers to lead daily prayer sessions in their classrooms. The law stipulated that if there were no volunteers, the sessions would not be held and that students who did not wish to participate should be excused.

In a five-page order, the high court agreed with the constitutional challenge filed by the Civil Liberties Union of Massachusetts on behalf of parents of public school children in Framingham and Marblehead.

The law violated the first amendment to the U.S. Constitution by establishing a "ritualistic religious practice," the court said.

"Here ... we find a religious program which was sponsored and put into effect by state and local officials under angle of state statute," the court said.

The justices added that the law "could not be saved from unconstitutionality" because the prayers were recited by volunteers or because students could choose to be excused from the exercise.

The statute was enacted by the Legislature and signed into law by Gov. Edward J. King late last year despite warnings from opponents that the measure was unconstitutional.

State officials have defended the statute as secular in nature, Assistant Attorney General Stephen Schultz describing it as an effort to promote religious tolerance.

The court order did not discuss the Civil Liberties Union's requests for reinstatement of an earlier statute that had directed teachers to announce a one-minute period of silence "for meditation or prayer" at the start of each school day.

'Death's angel' nurse investigated

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — A grand jury will investigate the deaths of critically ill hospital patients who may have been killed by a nurse nicknamed "death's angel" whose helpers made bets on who would die on a given day, sources said Thursday.

Authorities confirmed an investigation by the police department and district attorney's office began last week "in relation to an incident or incidents at Sunrise Hospital," but would not disclose details. At least two hospital employees were suspended Thursday as a result of the investigation.

An informed source said the investigators will present evidence to a grand jury next week involving the deaths of an unspecified number of patients.

The nurse, supervisor of a 10-bed intensive-care unit at the midnight shift, acted with the help of a boyfriend, the source said.

Her helpers, who referred to her as "death's angel," made bets on who would die on a given day, investigators said.

Commenting on the investigation, hospital administrator David Brandness said, "Personally, it makes me as sick as anything I can think of."

The number of deaths in the special unit over the past three years was being compared with coroner reports and statistical information on exact cause of death.

Employees in the special hospital unit apparently were aware of what was occurring and placed wagers on the life and death game, said one law enforcement source. Bets were placed on the sign of Pisces.

Today's weather

Increasing clouds; showers expected tonight

Twin Falls, Burley-Rupert, Jerome-Gooding: Generally cloudy with increasing showers later today. Clouds and showers decreasing by late Saturday. Windy. Cooler Saturday. Highs near 50 today and 40 to 45 on Saturday. Lows middle 20s to low 30s.

Kamas-Prairie, Halley, Wood River valley: Showers or periods of snow increasing today and then generally decreasing on Saturday. Locally windy at times. Cooler Saturday. Highs near 40 today and in the 30s Saturday. Overnight lows 15 to 25.

Northern Utah and Nevada: Variable clouds today with increasing rain and snow showers, decreasing over Nevada on Saturday. Gusty winds and cooler. Highs today near 50 and near 40 Saturday. Overnight lows 25 to 35.

Synopsis: Clouds, gusty winds, and showers. That's the weather picture for Idaho and the Magic Valley right on through next Tuesday.

Although a southerly flow of warmer air brought afternoon temperatures in the 50 degree range Thursday, gusty winds and showers of rain or snow appear likely across much of Idaho today, with cooler temperatures by the weekend.

Rain and snow fell in many areas of Idaho Thursday but amounts of precipitation were light. Northern Idaho received the most with Fort Hill reporting 4.1 inch, Mullan 3.4, Sandpoint and Wallace 3.0. In southern areas, amounts ranged from traces to 0.2 inch.

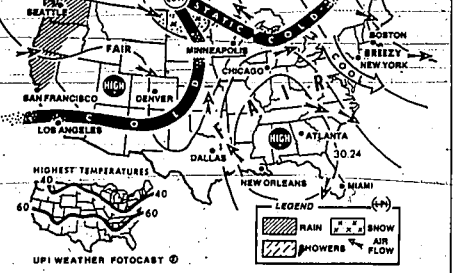

Wind velocities were generally brisk, with gusts reaching 30 miles an hour in the southern valleys and over 35 mph in the panhandle.

Low temperatures on Thursday were generally in the middle 20s to middle 30s although Galena Lodge is the coldest at 8 degrees above zero. Lewiston reported a low of 41. The warmest reading Thursday was 69 at Pocatello.

Elsewhere in the nation, the warmest temperature was 89 degrees at Vero Beach, Fla., while Massena, N.Y. had the coldest, 5 degrees below zero.

Unsettled conditions will continue into next week with scattered rain or snow showers likely Monday and Tuesday. Temperatures will range from highs in the 40s or low 50s to lows in the 20s to middle 30s.

Talks break down

BOGOTA, Colombia (UPI) — Most of the nations whose ambassadors are being held in the Dominican Embassy by leftist guerrillas have urged Colombia to ease its stance to gain the quick release of the diplomats, a diplomatic source said Thursday.

But the United States, whose envoy Diego Asencio is held, did not join the plea by the 13 nations. The plea was formulated after talks between the leftist guerrillas holding 29 diplomats hostages and government negotiators broke down Thursday — the 16th day of the siege.

The Colombian government has maintained it cannot ransom the hostages by giving in to the leftists' demands of paying a ransom, once said to be $50 million, or releasing jailed leftists because of restrictions of national laws and the Constitution.

But the 13 nations — Switzerland, Egypt, Israel and nine Latin American nations — prepared a note to Foreign Minister Diego Uribe, urging him to achieve the quick release of the hostages by putting international duty above internal law, a diplomatic source said.

The statement said Articles 22 and 29 of the International Vienna Convention on diplomatic privileges guarantee the "life, integrity, liberty and dignity" of diplomats, in accord with the oldest principle of international law.

"The obligation of a state to fulfill the standards set in these articles cannot be avoided by invoking the necessity of complying with certain provisions of internal laws," the statement said.

The affected governments "can only ... urge that a solution be reached that insures the rapid liberation of the diplomats' dignity," the statement said.

"Therefore, the territorial government should only use the methods adequate to obtain this result, renouncing the use of force because this inevitably endangers the lives of the hostages."

"If (a country) acts in such a way as to comply fully with international standards, this does not by any means signify a violation of internal legal order but on the contrary exalts it by underlining its flexibility, generosity and fairness."

Iranian elections start today

Ghotbzadeh: militants losing support

United Press International Iranian Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh asserted Thursday that Iranians no longer support the militants holding 50 Americans hostage.

But he said matter-of-factly the alling "shah's death" would be a rapid way of resolving the crisis.

Both Ghotbzadeh and President Abolhasan Bani-Sadr said the hostage crisis would be resolved after the still-to-be elected Parliament convened in May and discussed the fate of the Americans, who have been held 131 days by militants demanding the return of the shah.

In an interview shown Thursday night on NBC News, Ghotbzadeh said in answer to a question about the alling shah: "When he dies, and that is the possibility for every human being ... the center of the controversy will be eliminated."

"Then, obviously, that helps the situation be resolved faster."

CBS News reported Thursday that President Carter's chief of staff, Hamilton Jordan, was in Panama to meet with officials about the shah, who is reportedly ready to enter a private Panamanian hospital for surgery for an enlarged spleen.

The White House declined comment on the CBS report of Jordan's visit to Panama. But a Jordan aide told UPI: "I haven't seen him for a couple of days." Last year Jordan represented Carter in arranging for the alling shah to enter Panama after Mexico declined to renew the shah's visa.

Speaking on French radio, Ghotbzadeh, whose own authority has been continually overruled by the embassy militants, indicated the government could not exercise the authority to resolve the hostage crisis, until after Iran's new parliament was elected and took office.

Echoing Ghotbzadeh, Iranian President Abolhasan Bani-Sadr said in an interview published in Japan that the fate of 50 American hostages in Tehran rests with the new Parliament.

Rebels push back Soviets in province

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (UPI) — Moslem rebels have retaken a town in eastern Afghanistan, gunning down more than 100 Soviet paratroopers as they dropped into the combat zone, a guerrilla spokesman said Thursday.

And in India, travelers from the Afghan capital said hundreds and possibly thousands of people are missing following the recent violent anti-Soviet strike in the city.

"Asmar (in the eastern province of Kunar) is back under the control of the Mujahideen," said a spokesman for the Jamiatul Islam Rebel party.

The Afghan guerrillas fighting the estimated 80,000 Soviet forces propping up the regime of Marxist President Babrak Karmal call themselves Mujahideen, or freedom fighters.

"Soviet forces withdrew from Asmar — after taking heavy losses when trying to land parachute troops sent in as reinforcements," the Jamiatul spokesman said in Peshawar in northern Pakistan.

Both the Jamiatul and other rebel groups based in Peshawar claimed that more than 100 Russian troops were killed when they parachuted into Asmar.

The rebel spokesman said the Russians then started to retreat and "now our Mujahideen are back in control of the town."

He also claimed the various rebel parties have more than 2,000 guerrillas fighting in Kunar province, the target of a major Soviet offensive last week.

The rebel claims, which are often exaggerated, could not be independently confirmed.

In Moscow, an official Soviet report denied that Russian troops are directly involved in the fighting in Afghanistan.

POTATO GROWERS

Farmers have all said that growers won't get together to improve marketing and profits. We believe potato growers have had enough of below-the-cost-of-production prices . . . and that they're ready to consider a new approach.

Western Potato Growers, Idaho Farm Bureau, National Farmer's Organization and Independent Growers Assn. are also ready for a new approach . . . and have gotten together for the first time to reverse the trend to lower and lower potato prices.

These four groups have already made a strong written commitment to one another . . . now it's your turn to give us your ideas . . . and to make our program your program.

Join us this Friday evening, March 14 at 8 PM at the Burley Inn (formerly Ramada Inn). We promise to make this a fast-moving positive and constructive meeting. We invite and need your input. See you promptly at 8 PM this Friday at the Burley Inn.

War on inflation victimizes consumer

Indications are that President Carter today will announce the imposition of controls on consumer credit as part of his latest, so-called anti-inflation program.

The controls, mainly on bank and other credit cards, will shorten the period of interest-free credit from the current 25 days.

Combined with an increased tax on imported oil that may raise gasoline 10 cents a gallon, the attack on inflation will hurt the consumer more than anyone else. Of course, business may feel a ripple effect from reduced spending.

The early glimpses of the new anti-inflation measures show they will hurt the consumer by reducing his buying power, which is already constantly eroding because of inflation.

In a contradictory move, the House of Representatives has approved a windfall oil profits tax giving 60 percent of the revenues to the public in the form of tax cuts. When and if that happens, consumer spending will shoot up again, and the whole cycle repeats.

It is clear no battle plan exists in the belated war on inflation.

For want of a better excuse, some economists blame a spend-spend-spend attitude among Americans for part of the recent big jump in inflation.

But there is more to that attitude. At the root of the current, unexpectedly large wave of price rises is the inability of the government to control inflation and a resulting loss of faith in the lasting value of money.

It will take time, evidence that something is being done, and a lot of convincing before enough of that faith is restored to dampen the spending syndrome.

A number of actions that have been promised by the administration and Congress but never delivered need to be taken soon. They include:

- Encourage the production of new and alternative energy sources here at home. Still pending are inducements for gasohol production, syntuels and domestic oil. Solar energy development has been all but abandoned. Meanwhile, the cost of imported oil continues to be the largest single factor in inflation.
- Encourage people to save instead of borrow by increasing interest rates for small savers. Anyone who invests in a regular savings account is losing, not saving money.
- Stop federal deficit spending now and balance not only next year's budget — that does nothing against the existing problem — but also the current budget.

Tough medical choices

The Boston Globe Newspaper Co. Washington Post Writers Group BOSTON — The two books arrived on my desk within days of each other.

Two books that got down to the heart of the matter, to the essential muscle of life. Each was about coronary disease and each was about love — the double role and meaning of this vital organ.

In the first, "Heartbeats," Martha Weinman Lear chronicles in honest detail and language life with her 53-year-old doctor husband, from his first heart attack through his slow, unwilling descent into death.

It is painfully vivid, pulsating with his strength and illness, fibrillating with his powerlessness and their mutual pain.

The second, "Thursday's Child," by Victoria Poole, is plainer and more upbeat from the cover to the conclusion. This mother writes about her 17-year-old son whose heart disease led to a transplant.

The two end differently. Today Dr. Harold Lear is dead. Sam Poole is now a sophomore at Stanford, living with 50 medications and their endless side effects, saying, "When you consider the alternative, that's not much."

But what struck me most was not the different endings but the similar feelings. At some moment, each family desperately wanted their doctors to "Do Something!" As Martha Lear wrote, "I cannot make peace with it. I believed that I could but I cannot. Simply to stand by and let his heart, this part that should be a replaceable part, keep slowing down, flailing out; and then he is gone."

I was sensitive to this, I'm sure, because a few weeks ago the Massachusetts General Hospital decided Not to Do Something, not to do precisely what had saved Sam Poole, precisely what Martha Lear grasped at: heart transplants.

The MGH — satirized as "Man's Greatest Hospital" — characterized often as the most prestigious hospital in the world — made a difficult and influential decision not to do heart transplants, because "... in an age where technology so pervades the medical community, there is a clear responsibility to evaluate new procedures in terms of the greatest good for the greatest number."

The decision was surprising for many reasons. In medicine, doctors are taught to respond to the pain of the patient in front of them. To Do Something for one Harold Lear, one Sam Poole. At medical research centers, the elite often prefer that "Something" be "interfering" and "invasive," and -transplants are both. Often doctors have adopted new procedures first and worried about the consequences later.

Furthermore, the transplant operation is not as risky as it was in 1967 when Christian-Barnard kept his first patient alive for 18 days. Today at Stanford University where the heart team has the most experience and extensive program, 65 percent of the carefully screened transplants live a year, half are alive after five years.

So, when the MGH talks about the greatest good for the greatest number, and turns away from transplants, it is a neon sign of change. It is a blinking announcement of the arrival of the Medical Age of Limits.

The dialogue about "resources" — about allocating time and money and people — is a dialogue about short supply. We have stopped believing that we can do everything — in science, in family life, in government, in industry — and have begun talking about choosing. This is one of medicine's tough choices.

Heart transplants are as limited as heart donors. We can only "harvest" an estimated 1,000 hearts a year for an estimated 15,000 to 78,000 potential patients — should we then "spend" $100,000 for one year of life for a successful transplant? How do we comparative-shop the price of that life versus others that might be saved? Should we use our resources to give a Sam Poole a new heart or perhaps to improve the procedures and care given to Dr. Harold Lear? Should we concentrate on giving a Dr. Lear more quality care at the outset, or in providing him with the transplant he finally requested at the end? Is it moral not to do everything we are able to do?

The questions that responsible medical people are dealing with have no right or wrong answers. Increasingly, they have to make judgment calls, close calls. And the answers will course through the lifelines of very real people like the Lears and the Poles.

St. Patrick's Day rules

Chicago Sun-Times (Field News Service) CHICAGO — A serious question of protocol has arisen concerning the next St. Patrick's Day parade in Chicago.

President Carter wants to march in our parade, obviously to get himself some political exposure. But Mayor Jane Byrne doesn't want him to, because she is supporting Sen. Ted Kennedy.

Jay McMullen, the mayor's press aide and spouse, went so far as to say: "He (Carter) ain't no Irishman, he's a Georgia cracker."

His remark caused outrage among some Georgians, and members of that state's legislature considered passing an official resolution blasting McMullen, who couldn't care less, since nobody in Georgia is a Chicago precinct captain.

Some Georgia politicians said that calling a native of Georgia a cracker was comparable to referring to a black person as a "nigger." Maybe so. But until a few years ago the name of the Atlanta professional baseball team was the Atlanta Crackers, which would seem a strange thing for them to call themselves if the term is as derogatory as "nigger."

"Not being Irish, I don't know what the protocol is involving a president who wants to march in the parade. Only one person, the greatest expert on St. Patrick's Day parades, could resolve the conflict. But he is no longer with us."

However, I was able to contact him during a seance.

As with previous seances of this kind, the medium was Lefty Muldoon, a former Bridgeport attorney.

The seance was held in a smoke-filled room in Bridgeport. Six precinct captains sat around a table, joined at their pinky rings, chanting: "Boss, Boss, Boss."

Finally, Muldoon's eyes rolled upward, his jaw dropped open, and the familiar voice boomed forth:

"Who's bodderin' duh Boss? I'm stittin' up here on duh wunnerful Chicago cloud wit' all duh wunnerful Chicago angels. We're playin' our harps, so waddya want?"

"What song are you playin' on your harps?"

"Waddya think we're playin'?"

"Dat tiddlin', duh, dat's what we always play on dis cloud, except when I let 'em play 'My kinna town, Chicago is an.' On one in awhile, we play 'Beethoven's Chicago Symphony.'"

"I didn't know Beethoven wrote a Chicago symphony."

"He wrote it about a month ago. I got 'em to do it by promise'n to get him a free heurin' aid. I do favors like dat up here, too. So why are ya 'bodderin' me agagin'?"

"A question of protocol has arisen. They don't want Jimmy Carter to march in the St. Patrick's Day parade."

"Why not? He's still president, ain't he?"

"Yes, 'An' he's still a Democrat, ain't he?"

"Yes."

"Then what's the problem?"

"He's not Irish."

"Irish? Who says you gotta be born Irish to march in the Chicago St. Patrick's Day parade? I never said dat, did I?"

"But isn't it an Irish parade?"

"Yeah. But remember, I always had a loophole. I'd always say dat on St. Patrick's Day, everybody is Irish: Dat's why we had all dem wunnerful ballin' payrollers, and wunnerful Italian payrollers, and wunnerful black payrollers, and wunnerful German payrollers, and all the other wunnerful brown nosers marchin' in the parade. Because on St. Patrick's Day, they were all Irish — at least if they wanted to hold on to dere jobs, they were."

Then you would have let Carter march in the parade?"

"Sure. I'd even let him march inna front of me, so people would know he was somebody important. I wouldn't let him march right next to me, because it ain't like he's the assessor or something else, real big. But as president, he'd get to march next to the county clerk or next to one of my sons. I'd even let him march if he was a Republican president. But if he was a Republican, I'd put him back behind the horses. Who says Carter can't march?"

Mayor Byrne and her husband, Jay McMullen.

"Who? Mullens? What does dat guy Mullens know about St. Patrick's Day anyway? Why, he's an Irish Protestant. He's an Orangeman, which is worse than a Republican, and almost as bad as a Red. The one kind of subversive I wouldn't let in the parade was an Orangeman. When I was duh mare, Mullens used to always wear an orange turtleneck on St. Patrick's Day just to make me mad. So never mind what he says."

But McMullen isn't an Orangeman anymore. He has converted.

"Mullens converted? When did he do dat?"

"Before he and Mayor Byrne got married. They were married on a St. Patrick's Day."

"Did she see any written proof of it? And did she send it over to the crime lab to have it checked out? You know an Orangeman might forge something just to infiltrate my parade."

"I'm sure that McMullen's conversion was valid and sincere."

"OK, den dat answers your question."

What answers it?

"Mullens's conversion answers it."

How?

"It'll tell ya 'how. If our religion'll willin' to accept a guy like Mullens, den he can let the president march in our parade."

Nuclear power

Editor, Times-News: It cannot be stated too often that the accident at the Three Mile Island nuclear power plant resulted in no deaths and no injuries other than the mental stress suffered by the victims on misinformation. This was the conclusion reached by the President's Commission on the accident at Three Mile Island, which was headed by Dartmouth College President John G. Kemeny. That panel found minor faults with the equipment and design, and more serious deficiencies in operator training.

But when addressing the future of nuclear power, the commission said that "our attitude do-no, stand-alone, requires the conclusion that nuclear power is inherently too dangerous to permit it to continue and expand as a form of power generation." Nevertheless, this sound conclusion was almost added up to an end to new plant construction.

Shortly after the publication of the Kemeny commission's findings, the Nuclear Regulatory Commission took the next step and arbitrarily ordered a moratorium on new plant start-ups until next spring, at the earliest. In other words, the defendant — nuclear power — is not guilty, but let's hang him anyway.

The NRC moratorium will cause a delay in the operation of seven new reactors. Those seven would save over 100,000 barrels of oil per day.

Measures introduced by Edward Markey in the House and Ted Kennedy in the Senate to mandate a moratorium on new plant construction were defeated by Congress. Therefore, in spite of all the propaganda and near hysteria about nuclear power, Congress still favors it. What the legislators should do then is strip the NRC of its authority to delay plant openings.

Full scale nuclear power development is vital to a healthy energy program for America. Russia is using the technology we gave it to expand nuclear power development tenfold in the '80s. Yet, the Communists and their dupes in America oppose any expansion to make us dependent on oil sources the Russians will likely control.

Olympic errors

Editor, Times-News: About a month ago you mentioned Idaho's only gold medal winner in Olympic games, Emery Hudnund winning the 50 kilometer cross country ski race in 1927.

Again in the March 7 Times-News you had Emery Hudnund winning the 100 kilometer Olympic cross country ski race in 1927.

There were no Olympic games in 1927. The year was 1928, as the games are held every four years, on even years. To my knowledge there never was a 100 kilometer ski race in the Olympic games.

By the way, Emery Hudnund's time for the 50 kilometer was 4:52.03

Signs are everywhere if you just look about The Washington Post Company WASHINGTON — It was headline news the San Francisco flight, so the stewardesses were in the galaxy electrocuting what you might, if you drink, call food.

To staid myself for the ordeal of an airline meal, I went to the lavatory to wash cold water across my wrists and splash it over my drawn and ashen features. On the lavatory mirror, I read a familiar little sign:

"As a courtesy to the next passenger, many suggest that you use your towel to wipe off the wash basin. Thank you. You're welcome.

No, come to think about it, you're not. I didn't wipe the sink. I never have. I don't know anyone who has, and I don't like that glistening sink.

Signs. They are everywhere. I will read anything — cereal boxes, candy bar wrappers, airline safety instruction cards, the New York Post — rather than not read anything. So I am always reading remarkable but generally unnoticed words.

Consider the picture on the camera that takes your picture when you cash a check. In some stores, "We are taking your picture for your protection." Uh huh. And consider those words that are on many hot-air hand dryers in public restrooms: "To serve you better, we have installed pollution-free electric hand dryers to protect you from the hazards of disease which can be transmitted by cloth towels or paper towel litter. This clean, quick, sanitary method dries hands — more thoroughly — prevents chapping, and keeps washrooms free of towel WASTE."

This hymn of concern for our health, this pean to hot air, would be more touching were it not written by, and affixed to the machines by, the manufacturer of the machines.

There is a mad profusion of signs in Washington, where right-turn-on-red recently became legal. Legal, that is, except where forbidden. It is forbidden at 80 percent of Washington's intersections. So at all but 20 percent of the intersections, there are up to four "no turn on red" signs.

In New York's subway, I am told (I am not crazy enough to venture down to check), signs say: "No loitering. No spitting." Surely the sort of people who spit are not the sort who care about signs ordering them not to spit. New Yorkers are so aggressive, it would be an improvement if many would just stand around loitering and spitting.

New York is not the only place with eyebrow-raising signs. An elegant lady of my acquaintance once found herself in the ladies' room of a New Mexico airport, where she read this sign: "Girls: If you have been molested or raped, and are in need of assistance, call ... Jeepers, I know life on the frontier is rough and tumble, but colorful New Mexico is too colorful if the "girls" are in such constant, routine jeopardy that permanent signs are placed to advise victims.

The signs (in several senses) are better elsewhere. Out in central Illinois, where virtue is valued and I am from, folks subscribe to the Doctrine of Preventive Signs.

In the village of Savoy, at Skateland, a roller skating rink (that also has some of the finest pinball machines in Christendom), signs stipulate strict limits on the ruckus-raising that can break out in such an arena of pleasure. There are injunctions against intoxication, drugs, reckless skating, destroying property — injunctions backed by threats of arrest, and worse, "eviction" from the rink.

But that is just the beginning. Skateland is a major league pushing the Moral Law. Skateland's signs say, inter alia:

"No hats, sunglasses, scarfs, headbands, curlers, halters, midrifts, see-thru or short blouses, tight or short shorts allowed on floor. All fences over 10 years to be fully bloused."

"No muscle shirts on males 10 years or over. All clothing and persons must be clean."

"Neatness of dress is expected of every skater."

"No necking or indecency allowed."

"No smoking or gum chewing allowed anywhere except in smoking rooms for 16 years and older."

"No foul language allowed."

"Boys and girls forcing their attention on each other, not allowed."

"We reserve the right to refuse admission to anyone not meeting the good standards listed here."

They are, indeed, "good standards," and Skateland expresses them in stately cadences. But Skateland could be more concise. What it means is simply this: Libertines and others "inimical to established institutions should not pinball on roller-skate in Savoy.

Fresh plan for 1 percent, homeowner relief ready in House

BOISE (UPI) — After treading water all week, the House 1 percent subcommittee made progress Thursday toward solving the 1 percent property tax struggle with the drafting of a new compromise bill.

Members were scheduled to discuss the fresh plan with Senate tax legislators later in the day. Senate objections to the first 1 percent bill produced by the House subcommittee led to its recall.

Under the new proposal, implementation of the 1 percent tax would be delayed for another year and the freeze on property taxes would continue, just as outlined in the first measure.

But the latest draft would allow local governments a 6 percent budget growth, rather than the original 8 percent. A Senate version gave a 4 percent growth allowance.

Another change from the first House bill is that the controversial 2 percent limitation on property valuation would be retained.

Rep. Michael Gwartney, R-Boise, a co-planner of both House bills, said the 2 percent factor, although its constitutionality has been questioned, could be left in effect for another year because the Legislature plained to wrestle with the full implementation question again next year and it could be removed then.

The subcommittee plowed more ground today by deciding on a homeowner relief bill in which owner-occupied residences would be exempt from property taxes up to $10,000 or 20 percent of assessed value, whichever is less.

Rep. Ron Harlow, D-Lewiston, the sponsor of the first homeowners plan that, along with the first 1 percent bill, was called back to the subcommittee, said the "new proposal" is a "good compromise we've worked hard on."

GOP leaders want spending curb

BOISE (UPI) — Republican legislative leaders Thursday urged that spending be limited to provide a cushion in the state's general account.

House Speaker Ralph Olmstead, R-Twin Falls, and Senate President Pro-Tem Reed Budge, R-Soda Springs, said spending should be held to a level that would leave up to $4 million of anticipated revenue unappropriated for the ensuing fiscal year.

charges of "ridiculous" and counter-charges of "you started the slowdown," the Republican majority and Democratic minority went through a series of procedures that at some points bordered on comedy.

After several years of hassling about who is the state's legal officer, the Legislature completed action on a bill providing the attorney general's would provide legal services for all state agencies. The bill, which already had been approved by the House, was passed 20-15 Thursday by the Senate and sent to the governor.

The Idaho Attorney General's office issued an unofficial opinion, stating the appointment of the directors of the Office on Aging and the Office of Energy are subject to Senate confirmation.

"Due to a significant downturn in the state and national economy brought on by seemingly uncontrollable inflation and increased interest rates, it is poor budgeting practice to budget monies for the ensuing year on revenue that, at this point, may not be there," they said.

Olmstead and Budge said if the anticipated $8 million surplus for fiscal year 1981 is not available, "then this would mean a tax increase."

In other action:

- A Republican-amended bill originally sponsored by Democratic Gov. John Evans to limit state spending based on a percentage of statewide personal income passed the House 42-26 and was returned to the Senate.
- Embrolled in a Democratic slowdown over funding, the Idaho Senate couldn't agree to agree Thursday to take a lunch break. Amid

Fate of pilot program at CSI for displaced housewives in doubt

By DAVID MORRISSEY
Times-News writer

BOISE — A bill which would give the Office of Southern Idaho authority to create a job counseling and guidance program for "displaced homemakers" faces an uncertain future.

After three days of testimony, the House State Affairs Committee Thursday sent Senate Bill 1355 to the House floor for amendments — legislative terminology for an action which can help a measure will be amended to death.

The bill, which passed the Senate earlier this year, is largely designed to aid displaced homemakers in finding new employment. Supporters of the measure said most persons in this category are middle-aged women who have served as homemakers all their lives. In the event of the death of their husband or divorce, they frequently find themselves without incomes or marketable job skills.

"I feel very strongly about this bill because I'm a widow," Rep. Elaine Kearns, R-Idaho Falls, told the committee. "I know what a traumatic experience that can be. There are thousands of women out there who can't cope with that, and who don't know where to turn."

This program could help these displaced homemakers begin new careers, rather than ending up on the welfare rolls, Kearns said.

Support also came from Rep. C. Wendell Miller, D-Idaho Falls. "I see nothing wrong with helping people to help themselves, and that's what this bill does," he said.

But Rep. Gary Ingram, R-Coeur d'Alene, criticized SB 1355 as poorly written and unnecessary. Existing government programs already provide counseling and employment services, he said.

Opposition also came from Rep. Virginia Smith, R-Caldwell. "It's no disgrace to go to an employment office," Smith said. Many private employment firms already provide the services discussed in SB 1355, she said.

Should the bill become law, it would establish a single trial, two-year program at CSI. It would be funded by $35,000 in state vocational-educational monies and $10,000 in federal funds.

The measure will likely see final action in the House within a week.

Memorial raps EPA for river diversion plot

BOISE — Idaho's Legislature Thursday criticized the Environmental Protection Agency for proposing a plan to divert Snake River water to the Colorado River.

By a unanimous vote, representatives passed Senate Joint Memorial 112.

That bill called the recently completed EPA study on water diversion "unrealistic and unworkable, in addition to being patently illegal."

The memorial, which will be sent to the president, the Congress, the EPA, and the Secretary of the Interior, "explains how important water is in Idaho," said Rep. Noy Brackett, R-Twin Falls, the House sponsor of the measure.

"It protects Idaho's water for all of us," Brackett said.

SJM 112 passed the Idaho Senate earlier this year.

PRESS-WALL CORRUGATORS

Ideal for corrugating grain fields

The Acme Press-Wall Corrugator is excellent for forming corrugations in fields of seeded grain.

The smooth-flowing lines require a minimum amount of tractor power and form the contour without unduly tearing up the seed bed. Soil disturbance is minimized by specially designed row opener. This corrugator presses seed kernels and young plants into the side walls of the corrugation where they continue to grow.

Wings press and smooth the walls of the corrugation to control washing and water absorption. Recommended for use with Acme 3/4-inch shank for best results.

SOME MARCH ...
 The Englishman in the White House finally has an invitation to march in Chicago's St. Patrick's Day parade. Mayor Jane Byrne — who has endorsed Ted Kennedy for the presidency — earlier resisted efforts to invite President Carter to head up the parade on grounds he isn't Irish. In fact, Her Honor's husband and press secretary, Jay McMulen, called him "a Georgia Cracker." But Mayor Byrne has relented — reportedly at Kennedy's behest.

The Chieftains — Ireland's greatest folk musicians — will be in the United States on St. Patrick's Day, but they'll do no "weantin' o' the green." They have a Monday interview in New York on ABC-TV's "Good Morning America" right when the Irish of the Big Apple take to the streets, so they'll miss that parade. Then they fly to Birmingham, Ala. — arriving just in time to miss another parade.

Studying old matters brings right solution to Geminis this time

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A time not to resent slight or make sudden changes, or you could fall to gain your objectives. Accept conditions as they are and don't become irritated with others at this time.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Try to please your friends today instead of talking about personal worries. Show more consideration for the one you love.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Don't irritate a higher-up or you could have more trouble than you can handle. Show increased devotion to family members.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Be alert to opportunities but don't jump into anything hastily. Studying old situations that need clarification brings right answers.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) You have to be tactful with an associate and prevent some action that could be detrimental to you both. Think constructively.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Any situations that arise today should be considered from a standpoint of how they will affect you and family members.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Attend to duties that must be done early in the day so you'll have time for social activities later. Be cheerful.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) You need to apply yourself more now to gain your cherished wishes. Sidelstep one who likes to impose on you.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Use good sense today, especially in the face of a possible emergency. Also, be sure to show thoughtfulness for others.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Carry through with original plans even though you may be limited in some way. Use diplomacy in your business dealings.

What's what

Fields' early career spanned many stories

There are more small stories about the early career of W. C. Fields than about most, I guess. One of same: He once picked up his walking-around money near a concession stand in Atlantic City, N. J., by pretending to drown. Help! Help! A crowd gathered. With or without a life-guard's assistance, he struggled to shore, and underwent revival treatment. The old boy who owned the concession sold hot dogs and soft drinks to the onlookers. Later, Fields split the take.

In Iowa, no one-armed piano player can charge admission to his performances, according to law.

SHOP LIFTERS

Q. What sort of stores get hit the hardest by shop-lifters?

A. Fond markets. One crime study showed the grocers reported pilferers typically about six times a day while other stores only noted thieves about six times a week. And these were just detected instances, bear in mind.

Q. How much does a newborn baby gorilla weigh, typically?

A. About four- or five-pounds. First one ever born in captivity at the zoo in Columbus, Ohio, back in '50-weighed four and a half pounds.

Q. What musical instrument called a kit, what-is-it?

A. A pocket-sized violin. About three inches wide.

ATLANTIS

A society was formed in Denmark in 1933 to prove the onetime existence of the legendary island of Atlantis. Who put it together is not in the record at hand. Nor is exactly how much who paid for what. But it was a financial success in its time. Designated as the Principality of Atlantis, promoters named a monarch, designed a flag, printed currency, sold postage stamps, and signed up 25,000 members: 10 citizens of Atlantis.

Creative Advertising Awards

Dear Friends:

We would like to take this opportunity to express our appreciation to all the students and their families, teachers, school administrators, and Magic Valley businesses for supporting our first Annual Creative Advertising Awards Contest. The response was tremendous!

We at the Times-News are very proud to be a part of the Magic Valley, and are always pleased to be able to serve its citizens. We hope our Creative Advertising Contest will serve as a reminder to all of us that the young people of Magic Valley are special. They possess tremendous potential, and this section demonstrates one aspect of that potential.

A special thank you goes out to the Magic Valley businesses that believe, as we do, that supporting our youth is an important part of our community responsibility. We look forward to an even better contest next year.

Sincerely,

Hub agrees to no 'underground' ski lessons

By RON ZELLAR
Times-News writer

HAILEY — A former Sun Valley ski instructor proposed Thursday he would not conduct "underground" lessons on Bald Mountain pending a decision on an injunction sought against him.

Hans Hub, a German native who filed a human rights suit against Sun Valley Co. several years ago, told 5th District Judge Sherman Bellwood under oath he would not accept compensation for ski instruction on the mountain.

Bellwood gave attorneys for Hub and Sun Valley Co. 20 days to file additional briefs before the judge rules on a permanent injunction brought by the company.

Sun Valley Co. contends that Hub has operated an illegal business on the mountain since he left the employment of Sun Valley Ski School during the winter of 1975-76.

Hub told the court he has been offering instruction during the period but has not accepted payment.

The former instructor contends he has been followed, photographed and generally harassed by Sun Valley employees while on the mountain. A New York man who took a lesson from Hub also told reporters he was harassed and embarrassed by the issuance of a subpoena while in the presence of friends.

Wally Huffman, Sun Valley Co. general manager, said Thursday he was pleased with the judge's action requiring Hub to swear he will not accept compensation for ski instruction.

"We maintain his giving lessons is a violation of our Forest Service permit," Huffman said.

Terms of the permit include a provision that states the company "shall maintain and operate a ski school on the permit area," he noted.

Hub applied for a special-use permit in January of 1979 to teach skiing on Bald Mountain, but the application was denied.

Forest Service officials noted in the decision that Sun Valley Co. is required to maintain many non-revenue services on the mountain to fulfill conditions of its permit.

In the discrimination suit, Hub said his job with the ski school was terminated after he complained to the Human Rights Commission that he was given assignments inferior to those granted instructors of Austrian descent.

The charge is scheduled for trial April 28 in federal court at Boise, Huffman said.

Former county clerk Whitwell guilty of grand larceny

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

BUHL — Gary Wayne Whitwell, 34-year-old finance officer for Rangen Inc. of Buhl, has been fined and ordered to make restitution after pleading guilty to grand larceny in Power County.

Whitwell, who served in 1976 as Twin Falls County clerk, auditor and recorder, entered the plea in Power County Feb. 29, in connection with the theft of about $50,000 worth of equipment nearly two years earlier from the D and M Farm Service yard just east of American Falls.

Whitwell was charged with taking a John Deere skid loader and about a dozen pumps on Aug. 28, 1978, from the D and M yard while that firm was under bankruptcy proceedings. The theft occurred while the equipment was held by the bankruptcy trustee, L.D. Fitzgerald of Pocatello.

Since the theft involved the bankruptcy trustee held items, the case is now being investigated by the Idaho Attorney General and the Federal Bureau of Investigation, according to Power County Deputy Sheriff Charles Kelley.

Kelley said the investigation of some two years culminated Feb. 28 when Whitwell was taken to Power County and arrested on the felony charge. He appeared before District Judge Arthur Oliver Feb. 29, pleaded guilty, and the judgment was immediately issued.

A judgment filed in 6th Judicial District Court in Power County by Judge Oliver of Pocatello, ordered Whitwell to pay $9,750 reimbursement to Power County, with the amount to be placed in the sheriff's budget; pay $200 for special prosecution expenses to Power County; reimburse the district court in the amount of $500 and make full restitution to the victim in an exact amount, he decided.

The court also ordered that Whitwell return the John Deere skid steer loader to the Power County sheriff.

Records in Power County show a check for $13,250 was paid from a trust fund by Whitwell's attorney, Brock Taylor of Twin Falls on March 7, drawn on the Idaho First National Bank in Twin Falls. It was dated Feb. 27.

Whitwell was also placed on six months probation by the court.

Impact areas get go-ahead

By MARTY TRILLHAASE
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls County Planning and Zoning Board Thursday endorsed proposed areas of impact for both Kimberly and Buhl.

The areas of impact, which outline areas of expected growth surrounding the cities, would fall under each city's zoning jurisdiction, but would remain independent of the city governments unless annexed.

Agricultural lands, 20 acres or larger, would be exempt from the area and remain under county zoning, County Zoning Administrator Ed Woods said.

Board members, on a 7-3 vote, recommended passage of the Kimberly area of impact to the Twin Falls County Commissioners.

Richard Heindel, a resident of the proposed area of impact, objected to the proposed area, which runs north to the Snake River Canyon Rim. Heindel said the area included was too large a tract for the city of Kimberly to effectively administer. As such, development in the area could be haphazard.

But Kimberly Planning and Zoning Commission Chairman John Nelson said the city could adequately administer the area since the bulk of it remains agricultural.

The Buhl area of impact, endorsed by a unanimous vote of the board, would include land a mile north of U.S. Highway 20. As with the Kimberly area, some residents questioned if area was too large.

Jim Davidson of Buhl said by including the area to the north, the board would be encouraging eventual annexation of areas beyond the reach of the city's sewer system.

Both actions must now be approved by the Twin Falls County Commissioners following a public hearing.

In another move, the board voted to approve a proposed 25-unit planned unit development north of Buhl near Mud Creek. The development, to be constructed on a 261-acre site, drew opposition from residents of Melon Valley.

Howard quits city job

TWIN FALLS — The chief building inspector for the city of Twin Falls leaves today to take a position with Elko County in Nevada.

Darrell Howard, who has been with the city 22 years, Tuesday told city officials he was resigning effective March 31. Howard's vacation credit will enable him to stop working Friday.

He will begin work in Elko, April 1, as the county's chief building inspector.

Howard said he was reluctant to leave the city, where he served as a fireman for 20 years, an electrical inspector for three years, and chief building inspector for five years.

Claims fly thick and fast at Skyview-Hazelde Manor

Employee reaction varies

By STEPHANIE SCHOROW
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Employees at the Skyview-Hazelde Manor opposing the current union drive contend Richard Drake's management has been a "positive force" at the nursing home.

The also claim that pro-union forces have "harassed" other employees into supporting the union.

But pro-union employees say patients' care has deteriorated and harassment charges have been drummed up to give the union a negative, "Teamsters-like" image.

On Feb. 12, Richard Drake, who had taken over management of the manor 11 days earlier, was informed employees had petitioned the National Labor Relations Board for a union election. The election date has been set for April 7, according to the Idaho Employee Service Union.

"I'm for Drake. They (the pro-union employees) should have given him a chance," said Nancy Horne, a licensed practical nurse who works 1 1/2 years at the home. "Drake is a very positive force. His priority is his patients."

Another nurse's aide, Marjorie Meyer, has charged that a fellow employee, whom she declines to name, was threatened with her life because she did not support the union.

The Times-News has been unable to locate the unnamed aide for comment.

Meyer, who has received no threats herself, said a "dear friend" was "threatened by phone" and "actually threatened."

"I don't know exactly the words," Meyer said. While her friend did not know who had called her, Meyer said, she was sure "it was because of the union."

Union activists deny knowledge of the call, and say because it was anonymous she it can not be independently traced to union forces. "If (the phone call) has been done, someone has done it on their own and they've kept their mouth shut," said Sam Jones, a former aide, who is active in the union drive.

On Feb. 28, Drake told the Times-News that he was called on an in-house phone and told that if she took down pro-union signs posted by employees, "We will do you in."

However, "if she says we threatened her life over the phone, why does the police department know nothing about it?" questions RN Pam Monson, a former employee and president of the pro-union group.

Although in February Meyer did sign a union card, forms which are sent to the NLRB to indicate interest in a union election, she said she regrets the action.

A 19-year employee, Meyer said union supporters told her if she signed the card that she would get vacation pay owed her by the previous management, J & P Enterprises. She now feels those promises were exaggerated.

Meyer also said pro-unionists held meetings "on the boss' time" when they should have been working.

Monson admitted that "in the beginning, before we were told what we could or could not do, we would answer questions or comment on the NLRB" while on duty. But after the NLRB explained this violated labor law, Monson said, "we have since stayed in our boundaries."

Monson said she did tell people the union would work to get vacation pay owed them, as well as increased wages and job security.

According to Tom Hazzard, spokesman for the Idaho Employers Council, a union may "demand almost anything as long as it doesn't violate state or federal law" at the bargaining table. But that does not mean they will get it, and they are wrong to make promises they may not keep, he said.

Monson also contends the eight people who asked for card signatures did not threaten workers.

However, one employee contacted by the Times-News said she was harassed and eventually quit.

Shawn McNeil, 15, worked in the manor's dietary section. She said in February Monson approached her at 4 merging potato groups to meet tonight in Burley

BURLEY — Four recently united growers' groups will begin hammering out a program to improve potato prices Friday.

At a meeting set for 8 p.m. in the Burley Inn, representatives of the Idaho Farm Bureau, National Farmers Organization, Western Potato Growers of Idaho and the Independent Potato Growers Association will begin work on a cooperative marketing program.

The groups signed a marketing agreement earlier this week. The agreement will give members of each group more marketing and bargaining clout, according to Carl Reynolds, executive director of the Western Potato Growers.

The agreement allows the Western Potato Growers to act as a marketing representative for members of each organization. But while the groups are united in their desire to improve and stabilize potato prices, they have not committed themselves to a particular marketing program to reach that goal, Reynolds said. It will be up to the individual members of the four groups to formulate a marketing plan, he said.

"Each group has some good ideas of its own," he said. "What I like to combine the best each group has to offer into a plan that is acceptable to all growers."

One of the first acts of the newly united groups was to urge their members to support the Potato Growers of Idaho, who last week broke off negotiations for pre-season contracts with Ore-Ida Foods Inc. Ore-Ida is offering the contract rejected by PGI to independent growers. PGI wants growers to reject the contract and force Ore-Ida to come back to the negotiating table with a better offer.

Cable cars future looks precarious

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — President Carter's efforts to balance the federal budget may cut the cable on San Francisco's famed hill-climbing trolleys.

City Public Utilities General Manager Richard Sklar, just back from a trip to Washington, said Thursday the $32 million in federal aid needed to rebuild the dilapidated 65-year-old transit system is being cut because of Carter administration economy plans.

Sklar said Carter may attempt to balance the budget by diverting billions from the windfall oil profits tax into the general fund rather than allocating it to mass transit programs as he originally proposed.

Sklar and San Francisco Mayor Dianne Feinstein received assurances from U.S. Transportation Secretary Neil Goldschmid last January that the federal government would provide 80 percent of the cable car rebuilding costs, then estimated at $44 million.

Federal leasing is under study

CASPER, Wyo. (UPI) — Federal officials are studying how to resume "first assignments" of oil and gas lease titles.

They also are determining what to do with applications and fees received before Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus suspended the federal leasing program Feb. 29, a Bureau of Land Management official said.

A Casper newspaper Tuesday quoted Don Truesdell, deputy assistant director of the BLM's Energy and Mineral Resource Division in Washington, as saying a study team would decide this week whether to refund applications and fees already received or to hold a lease drawing.

Andrus suspended all further oil and gas leasing on federally owned public lands pending a Justice Department investigation into reports of fraud in the leasing process.

Truesdell said Monday if a lease drawing is held, the leases probably would be withheld until it could be determined whether applications had been properly filed.

Wyoming's BLM office in Cheyenne received almost 400,000 applications for the January and February lottery drawings, both of which were canceled. Andrus' decision to suspend the state office collected about $1 million in application fees, and the study team will decide whether to refund that money, Truesdell said.

He said the group also will make a decision of procedures for allowing "first assignments" of lease titles. Lease title assignments are used to transfer ownership, and lease holders routinely treat leases in order to establish contiguous parcels of land for exploration.

Comments split on Hells Canyon

BAKER, Ore. (UPI) — Public comments on the future of the Hells Canyon National Recreation Area are split down the middle, a Forest Service spokesman said Tuesday.

More than 2,000 written comments have shown a great diversity of opinion on how the Hells Canyon recreation area should be managed, according to Jim Hulbert, a recreation specialist on the NRA planning team and U.S. Forest Service employee.

"There are some awfully polarized ideas out there," Hulbert said. "A lot of people want it either one way or the other."

Hulbert said actual computer totals on the number of comments will not be available until the end of this week. He said more than 1,200 letters from private individuals are being analyzed, then the findings are being tabulated by Forest Service computers.

Another block of comments with probably more than 1,000 responses came from commercial, governmental or other organizations. Hulbert said he is reviewing those responses himself.

Council not biting on salmon quota

RENTON, Wash. (UPI) — A treaty Indian request for selling quotas on all ocean salmon fishing off the West Coast has been denied by the Pacific Fishery Management Council.

This was among recommendations voted upon by the council for 1980 and 1981 in the negotiations for the federal fisheries zone. The U.S. Commerce Department will make a final decision in April.

The council Wednesday, in addition to endorsing no ocean quotas, also turned down a ban on Chinook landings north of Cape Falcon, which is located just far south of the mouth of the Columbia River.

The major changes for fishermen in Oregon and Washington were a return to a bag limit of three a day for sports fishermen for at least part of the season, and a decision that trolliers would be shut down three weeks longer than the 1978 regulations required. The biggest effect on trollier would be losing the first two weeks of July.

The sport fishing season was set for May 10 through Sept. 14. If landings indicate it would take more than 240,000 cocho before Sept. 14 in the Oregon Production Index Area, the recreational fleet would revert to the two-fish limit of last year.

Federal action due

Policeman being fingered in Salt Lake bank robberies

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — U.S. Attorneys Thursday were to charge Salt Lake City Police Corporal Paul Brooks with robbing two banks of $33,000.

His wife has pleaded innocent to similar federal complaints. Acting Federal Magistrate Paul Badger scheduled Brooks' arraignment on the four-count complaint for 10 a.m. The appearance for Brooks had to be delayed one day because police were holding the officer for a lineup.

Badger Wednesday ordered Brooks' 30-year-old wife, Sheila, held on $100,000 cash bail because the stolen bank funds were still missing. Mrs. Brooks pleaded innocent to two federal counts of bank robbery, armed bank robbery and aiding and abetting. She also waived her right to a federal grand jury investigation of the charges.

The federal complaint charges

Brooks, 32, with four counts of bank robbery and armed bank robbery in connection with hold-ups on July 30, 1979, and Feb. 29, 1980, in suburban Salt Lake.

Federal prosecutors allege Brooks took $31,000 from a Continental Bank and Trust branch in February and $2,000 from a Utah Bank and Trust branch last summer. In both stickups the robber was armed with a handgun. Mrs. Brooks is charged only in connection with last month's robbery.

Brooks was arrested Monday night when he reported for the graveyard shift. Mrs. Brooks was taken into custody shortly after her husband's arrest.

Brooks, a seven-year department veteran, was being held in the Davis County Jail at Farmington, Police Chief Bud Willoughby said Brooks was moved to the northern Utah jail "for his own safety and protection."

Mrs. Brooks was being held in the Salt Lake County Jail. Her attorney asked that she be released without bond because her family lives in the Salt Lake area and she is the mother of a 3-month-old child. But Badger said the woman could seek a bail reduction hearing next week before a federal judge.

Valley happenings

Mid-east seminar slated

JEROME — A seminar on "The Middle East: Crisis Conflict" will be held Saturday at the Jerome United Methodist Church.

The seminar will be led by Bob Colner of Twin Falls.

All Magic Valley women are invited to attend. Registration will begin at 9 a.m. There will be a $3 registration fee that includes the noon luncheon.

Reservation for child care may be arranged by calling the Jerome church office.

Junior Miss campaign opens

TWIN FALLS — The Optimist Club is starting its fund raising campaign for the second annual Twin Falls Junior Miss Scholarship program.

The Optimists will be contacting businesses in order to gain support for this year's program.

The program is open to all Twin Falls and Jerome County High School girls who will be seniors during the 1980-81 academic school year.

The pageant is scheduled for Sept. 27 at the College of Southern Idaho.

Scout-O-Rama tickets on sale

TWIN FALLS — Tickets are now on sale for the Scout-O-Ramas scheduled throughout the Magic Valley in April. Action displays will demonstrate crafts, skills and methods of scouting. The Scout-O-Ramas, described by Scout leaders as "a great training and learning session," are scheduled in the Middle and Wood River area April 19 and in the Twin Falls, Cassia and Northside area April 26.

The Snake River Area Council will have a four to five week sales camaign but a bonus 35 percent cash return will be given to the troops for all tickets sold the first 48 hours. The tickets cost $1 and the boys selling them should be dressed in Scout uniforms.

This year's Scout-O-Rama ticket sales chairman is Jeff Harris, manager of the United First Federal Savings and Loan. The overall show chairman is Lynn Johnson, owner of the Karpet Shoppe. Harris and Johnson are Eagle Scouts.

Public dance planned Saturday

TWIN FALLS — A public dance will be held Saturday at 8:30 p.m. at the 100F hall with live music by Archie Turner.

Consumer food co-op meets Monday

BUHL — The Magic Valley Consumer Food Cooperative will hold its quarterly meeting at 6 p.m. Monday at the Buhl Jaycee Hall.

A potluck dinner will be served. Those planning to attend should bring their own table service and their musical instruments.

Rupert boy places in contest

BOISE (UPI) — A Rupert youth finished third in Darin Dawson of Welter in the 43rd annual American Legion State Oratorical contest held at Boise State University this week.

Dawson advances to the regional contest in Seattle on April 21.

Second-place winner was Carol Peterson of Lewiston. Third place went to Douglas Jones of Rupert and Michelle Looell of Ashton won fourth place.

All participants in the regional contest will receive $500 scholarships from the national organization of the American Legion.

Regional winners will advance to a contest at Ventura College, Ventura, Calif., April 23.

Gem show slated in Pocatello

POCATELLO — The Southeast Idaho Annual Gem and Mineral Show will be held in Pocatello in the Westwood Village Mall, Garrett Way, and Oak St., Saturday and Sunday.

Sponsored by the Southeast Idaho

Gem and Mineral Society, the show is scheduled from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. Saturday and from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Sunday. It will include dealers from five states, demonstrations, special displays, rock and mineral specimen.

Scouts change uniforms

IRVING, Texas (UPI) — The Boy Scouts of America Tuesday unveiled new uniforms for Cub Scouts, Boy Scouts and Explorers, the first time the entire outfit has been redesigned in 58 years.

Chief Scout Executive J.L. Tarr said the new uniforms, designed by internationally known Oscar de la Renta, will be introduced in August, and that they will gradually replace the old uniforms as they wear out or as stocks are depleted.

J. Jay Cassen, national director of the supply division for BSA, said requests for changes had been increasing from members and sponsors for a long time.

"We felt the uniform should meet several criteria," he said. "It should be suitable for strenuous activity; it should be made from easy care fabric, and at the same time the wearer should still look like a Scout."

Cassen said the basic components of the Boy Scout, Explorer and male adult leader uniforms are khaki tan shirts with long or short sleeves and olive drab green trousers and shorts with cargo pockets. Cub Scouts will wear similarly styled uniforms in navy blue.

Baseball style caps in appropriate colors will replace the old Cub Scout, Webelos and Boy Scout visored caps.

TWIN FALLS — Mr. and Mrs. John E. Holley of Twin Falls announce the engagement of their daughter, Joyce, to Ed Rogers.

Rogers is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Rogers of Rupert. Miss Holley is a 1978 graduate of Twin Falls High School. Rogers is a 1973 graduate of Minico High School and a 1975 graduate of Idaho State University.

The wedding has been set for March 22 at 7 p.m. in the Immanuel Lutheran Church at Twin Falls.

Bonnie Childers

TWIN FALLS — Dale Childers of Twin Falls and Mrs. Walter Will announce the engagement of Bonnie Childer to Mike Bolender.

Bolender is the son of Mr. and Mrs. David Bolender of Portland.

Miss Childers is a 1978 graduate of Valley High School and is employed by Super Save Drugstore at Pocatello. She attends Idaho State University.

Bolender is employed by Bucyrus Erie of Pocatello and also attends Idaho State University.

A March 22 wedding is planned at St. Edward's Catholic Church in Twin Falls.

Sandra Reed

EDEN — Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Reed of Eden announce the engagement of their daughter, Sandra, to Gerald Griffiths.

Griffiths is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Griffiths of Hazelton.

Miss Reed will graduate from Valley High School in May.

Griffiths is a 1978 graduate of Valley High School and is engaged in farming with his father.

The wedding is planned for May 24 at the First United Presbyterian Church in Twin Falls.

Aina Seter

TWIN FALLS — Mr. and Mrs. Baste Seter of Sweden announce the engagement of their daughter, Aina, Seter, to Kevin Lee Walker.

Walker is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Lee Walker of Evanston, Wyo.

Miss Seter was a foreign exchange student with the Gordon Beckstead family of Twin Falls in 1976-1977. She graduated in 1979 from High School in Sweden.

Walker is a 1976 graduate from the Air Force Academy's High School in Athens, Greece. He has attended one year at Brigham Young University and has served a two-year mission for the LDS Church.

A May 23 wedding in the Salt Lake LDS Temple is planned.

16-gallon blood record reached

TWIN FALLS — It has taken more than 21 years, but Vernon E. Smith of Twin Falls may have saved or helped save more than 100 lives.

He is one of two Twin Falls residents who have given 16 gallons of blood — that's 128 pints — of blood in American Red Cross blood drawings.

Ann Livingston, executive secretary of the local Sawtooth Red Cross chapter, said Smith, a retired mail carrier, and Idaho State Patrolman Frank Mogensen each have reached the 16 gallon mark. No one else in the entire region who has given more, she said. A man in Boise has reached the 17 gallon mark.

Mogensen received his 16 gallon pin some time ago and Smith reached that record in this week's blood drawing.

Livingston said gallon pins were earned by 24 persons in the Monday and Tuesday visit of the regional blood center's bloodmobile.

Because so few people reach the 16 gallon mark, Smith didn't get a pin. It has to be made to order as they don't keep 16-gallon awards on hand, Livingston said.

The Morningside school took the traveling trophy from Lincoln School with the most teachers participating in the drawing.

Livingston said the response in Twin Falls was excellent, the bloodmobile closed early both days with the 100 pints per day exceeded both Monday and Tuesday.

There were 119 donors Monday and 115 Tuesday. The center can process about 100 pints a day so collects only that amount when visiting each community.

Others who received awards include Jim Webb with 11 gallons now donated, James Bondurant, eight gallons; Boyd Biggers and Walter Todd, seven gallons each; Woody Turley and Buddy Dewese, six gallons; Norma Fritzy, five gallons; George Baker and Ivan Swager, four gallons; Jack Hayes, three gallons; Rose Wetzelstein, Jim Winterholler, Marilyn Patterson, Mark Jensen, Jeanne Earl and Ron Fisse, two gallons each, and Charles Brockway, Debbie Nelson, Patricia Randolph, Gary Bondleld, Shelley Sorenson, John Larribeau and Samuel Gibson, all with one gallon.

Livingston expressed thanks on behalf of the Sawtooth Chapter for the many persons who supported the blood drawing. She said the next drawing here will be May 5 and 6.

Academy aides will visit area

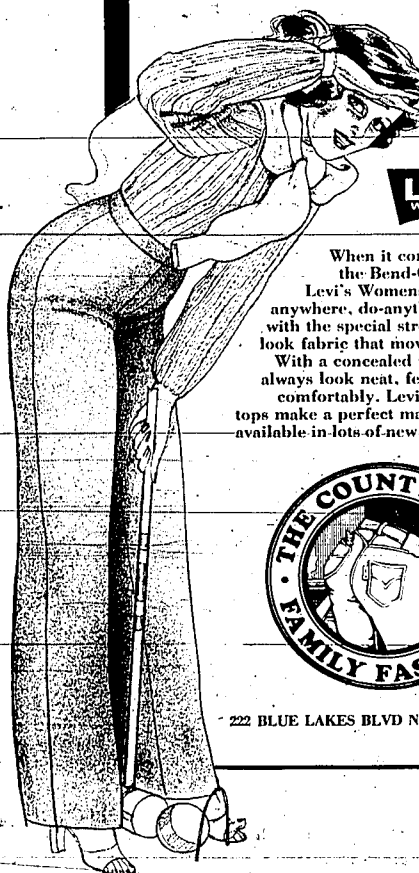

TWIN FALLS — Representatives from the U.S. Service Academies will be at four Magic Valley high schools next week.

Sen. James McClure has arranged to have liaison officers and students from the academies (Air Force, Naval and Military) available to explain the procedures and requirements for entering an academy. Sen. McClure's academy assistant, Arlene Kirby, will also be available to explain application procedures.

They will be at Twin Falls High School at 9:30 a.m. March 26 and at Jerome at 1 p.m. that day. On March 21 they will be at Minico and Burley High Schools.

McClure said he is concentrating his efforts in the southeastern area of the state because only five of last year's 75 applicants were from that area. The bulk of the applicants were from Boise and northern Idaho.

MR. AND MRS. BILL ALDRICH

BUHL — Mr. and Mrs. Bill Aldrich of Buhl will celebrate their 50th wedding anniversary Sunday at Greer Hall. An open house will be held in their honor from 2 to 5 p.m. at the Lincoln Courts at Buhl.

Bill Aldrich and Margaret (Peggy) Rogers were married March 5, 1930, at the Twin Falls Presbyterian Manse

by the Rev. James Millar.

They have one daughter, Barbara Dillon of Sacramento, Calif.; four grandchildren; and one great-grandchild.

The open house will be hosted by their daughter, Barbara, and Aldrich's sister, Grace Shriver. All friends and relatives are invited.

MR. AND MRS. LOUIS CARPENTER

GLENN'S FERRY — Mr. and Mrs. Louis Carpenter were honored on their 50 wedding anniversary Sunday at Greer Hall.

They were married March 3, 1924, in Twin Falls and came to King Hill, where he farmed. He later worked for the Union Pacific Railroad and as a carpenter.

They are members of the Methodist Church and for years have been active workers.

They have five children, Reynolds Carpenter of Fremont, Calif.; Ira Carpenter of San Diego, Calif.; Esther Hawkins of Burley; Doris McAdermott of Sacramento, Calif. and Mrs. Ila Bell Vermulm of Boise.

Middle aged families consume most gas

NEW YORK (UPI) — American families between the ages of 35 and 54 buy over 40 percent of the nation's gasoline.

And they spend an average of 30 percent more on gasoline than other groups, The Conference Board reported Tuesday.

Households under 25 years old account for only 7 percent of all U.S. gasoline consumption and relatively older homes (55 and over) purchase about 25 percent, according to an analysis by the private business research organization.

The Board said the 35-54 group uses the bulk of U.S. gasoline because middle-aged families have a relatively high percentage of people of driving age and a large number of working wives.

The middle-aged household also is more likely to be located in the suburbs, where 45 percent of the gasoline is consumed. Motorists living in the central cities buy only 23 percent.

The study found gasoline consumption increases with family income.

U.S. households earning less than $10,000 a year use substantially less gasoline than the average. But consumption in the $15,000-to-$20,000 bracket runs about 30 percent above the norm and leaps to more than 80 percent above average in families with annual incomes of over $35,000.

"The nation's present pattern of gas consumption may soon represent our nostalgic past," said Fabian Lindem, director of consumer economics at The Board.

"It seems clear that price hikes and restrictions on gas availability will not allow the family car to be driven with the same casualness as in the past," he said.

"Should mandated restraints be necessary, they would likely be imposed democratically and would cause shifts in long-term consumption patterns. This would have the largest impact on the heaviest gas-consuming segments of our populations."

Gasoline use also varies with occupation. Households headed by craftsmen consume gasoline at a rate roughly 40 percent above the national average, The Board said. Nearly half the craftsmen's families have more than four members.

Families headed by managers and administrators buy 35 percent more gasoline than the national norm and households headed by professionals and technicians 30 percent above the average.

Idaho cited for child support

SEATTLE (UPI) — Federal Health and Welfare Department officials will present Gov. John Evans with an award Friday citing Idaho's "superior" administration of the Child Support Enforcement Program.

In 1979, Idaho collected more than $2.5 million from absent parents for the support of their children — an increase of nearly 29 percent over 1978's collections of more than $1.9 million.

The national average was a 27 percent increase from 1978. Of the amount collected, nearly 82 percent or $2,048,847 was collected for children receiving Aid to Families with Dependent Children, a joint federal-state welfare program. The collections represented the recovery of nearly 9 percent of the AFDC expenditures for the year.

The remainder was collected for families who did not receive AFDC, but who applied to a local child support agency for help in obtaining support from absent parents.

Dr. Lamb

Breath causes unpopularity

By LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.
(Newspaper Enterprise Association)
Dear Dr. Lamb,

My son is 14 years old and he has terrible breath. I took him to the family dentist for a check up to have his teeth cleaned.

He has no cavities. However, his dentist said that his foul breath is due to gastric juices. This odor in his mouth is causing unpopularity in school. Is it true that the odor is caused by his stomach and, if so, how can it be corrected? If you have a Health Letter on bad breath, I'd sure like to have it.

Dear Reader,

Bad breath is a symptom. It was proper to take your son to a dentist. Frequently, bad breath is caused by dental problems. That doesn't mean cavities. It means either accumulation of food particles around the teeth or an infection that involves the areas around the roots of the teeth and under the edges of the gums (gingivitis). The latter requires treatment by a dentist and is not something that a person can correct himself just by improving his dental hygiene.

Then, some cases of bad breath are caused by food accumulation on the tongue. That's because not everyone knows you need to brush the tongue regularly, just as you brush your teeth.

I am sending you The Health Letter that you asked for, number 9-4, Halitosis: The Breath Problem And What To Do About It. Other readers who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10103.

As The Health Letter I'm sending you explains, you can have bad breath from many different causes other than the teeth. It can be but seldom is associated with bad tonsils. Much more often it's associated with sinus problems. If your son has an infection in the nose and throat area, such as a problem with the sinuses, that can be the source of the odor. So your next step should be to see an ear, nose and throat specialist.

If the problem can't be solved there, you might want to talk to your son's physician (pediatrician or family doctor). You can have bad breath from any upset in body chemistry.

The classic example here is the diabetic or the patient with liver disease. Abnormal chemicals are carried by the bloodstream and escape into the lungs to be exhaled. That's the same way that alcohol breath works.

I doubt very much that your son's problem comes from his stomach. In the first place, we all have gastric juices and not everybody has bad breath. The stomach is functionally closed at the top so its contents do not emit odors unless a person burps or belches and that's very transient. A number of people also have the mistaken idea that colon problems will contribute to bad breath. There is no way that this can happen. But any of the digestive disturbances that result in an upset body chemistry can cause the problem through the bloodstream and lungs as I mentioned.

Sometimes it's quite a search to find out what factors are related to bad breath. It's not a simple problem that may be relieved by mouthwash as many TV advertisements would have you believe. There's no way that a mouthwash can correct a disturbance in body chemistry or infected sinuses or, for that matter, infected teeth.

Promise and threats old trick

By ERNA BOMBECK
© Field Enterprises, Inc.

When the history of the Great Parental Disciplinarians is compiled, there will be an entire section devoted to the "PT Mother" of the teeth and the "PT Mother" of the gums.

The "PT Mother" is a fun name given by children to Moms who rule by "Promises and Threats."

Promises-and-threats was never meant to be as effective as hitting and spanking, but it is one of the few non-violent ways of communication that can be used where anything physical is frowned upon. For example, it's one of the few techniques that can be used in a piece of worship.

A child grabs a hymnal and begins to rip out the pages and the mother whispers, "You be a good little boy and we'll stop for ice cream after church."

The child pauses to consider the offer and rejects it by standing up on the pew and sticking his wet fingers into the mouth of the woman praying behind him and counting the number of her teeth out loud.

The mother grabs him and promises him a whole week of parties complete with magicians and dancing bears. ELUS, watching the Tonight Show in his entirety.

As the child gathers four handbags and runs them to the altar, the mother grabs him and makes her last offer... a trip to Disneyland, Sea World and the circus in Moscow.

Somewhat, you can almost sense the exact moment when the parents shift into the second phase: threats. It's no more Mr. Nice Guy. She's playing for the big marbles.

When the child starts to dance on the seats and sing, "Eighty-nine bottles of beer on the wall," the mother grabs him, holds him in her arms like a vice and says, "That's it! No more television. No more soft drinks. No more talk about getting a puppy!"

The kid figures she's bluffing and besides she's been "talking" puppy for two years. He's in over his head anyway so he plays his ace in the hole, screaming at the top of his voice, "Don't hit me, Mama! Don't hit me again! Please, Mama! I'll be good!"

There isn't a dry eye in the house as 300 pairs of eyes hand down a verdict against the mother's custody of the child. She grabs him to a post office in a ghost town in Arp, Oklahoma. You will never see Oreo cookies again as long as you live."

PT Mothers used to be pretty effective as disciplinarians, but that's before children learned how to play poker. Still, it's worth mentioning.

Head Start is praised by Carter

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Celebrating the 15th anniversary of the Head Start program, President Carter pledged Wednesday to keep the program going for another five years despite inflationary pressures on the budget.

In a ceremony in the jam-packed East Room with Lady Bird Johnson by his side, Carter praised President Lyndon Johnson who founded the program as part of his "Great Society."

"We've increased allocation of funds for the program by 15 percent since I've been president," Carter said. "I'm determined to keep Head Start intact in the future."

"We face difficult times in controlling inflation," he added, "but Head Start will be protected and I will ask Congress to continue the program five more years."

"The president said the program had helped 7.5 million disadvantaged children to overcome nutritional, cultural and educational handicaps." "It has not been a frozen, dormant or stagnant program," he added.

Carter said he had worked with the program in his home state of Georgia and as "a tough, conservative young man, I came home with tears in my eyes. My wife will vouch for it. This program touched my life."

Fraternity to bicycle for Boise facility

BOISE (UPI) — Members of a University of Idaho fraternity will spend part of their spring vacation bicycling 350 miles from Moscow to Boise to promote the Mountain States Tumor Institute in Boise.

Gov. John Evans, Boise Mayor Dick Bardley, MSTI medical director Dr. Charles E. Smith and other MSTI representatives will meet the bike-a-thon participants of the Delta Sigma Phi fraternity when their journey ends at the Statehouse about 2:30 p.m. Tuesday.

About 50 fraternity members will alternate the peddling duties on a tandem bicycle during the trip. The bike-a-thon group will spend a short time in each of the 19 communities along the route to hand out literature and information on MSTI.

The benefit ride is a bi-yearly event for MSTI by the fraternity.

Dear Abby

His idea of humor is more than slightly cruel

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
The Chicago Tribune
© N.Y. News Syndicate, Inc.

DEAR ABBY: You recently published a letter from the mother of a Mongoloid child in which she refers to him as "exceptional" and "special." I must thank you for printing such letters, since they always give me a good laugh.

I can hardly wait for a SWAT team to discover that their "special" weapons are slingshots, or to hear of the shock of a teacher who has been refused tenure as a result of his or her "exceptional" work in the field of education.

WILLIAM G. ANDERSON, JR.
DEAR MR. ANDERSON: My Webster's New Collegiate Dictionary defines "exceptional" as "forming an exception; rare." Also, "better than average," and "BELOW average." And "special" is defined as "that which is distinguished by some unusual quality; being other than usual; unique."

I am always pleased when a reader "gets a good laugh" from something in my column, but the letter I published about (please, not "Mongoloid") child was not meant to be amusing. Furthermore, what gives you a good laugh strikes me as being FUNNY — meaning "different from the ordinary." And more than a little cruel.

DEAR ABBY: My daughter is engaged to marry a young man she went with all through high school. (She is 21 and he is 22.) He went overseas, but was sent home before his hitch was up because he had been having "blacksouts." He spent several months in the hospital under observation, and was then discharged, but he still sees a psychiatrist once a month at the VA hospital here.

My daughter told me he has struck her several times lately. She said last night he slapped her hard across the mouth because she disagreed with him on some small thing. He cried and apologized afterward so she forgave him.

What worries me is that after they are married they will be living in another state and I am afraid of what he may do to her.

How can I get her to postpone her wedding until I am sure he is all right? Or should I just leave well enough alone and hope for the best? She says she loves him, but at times she's afraid of him.

I don't like to interfere, but I can't let my daughter make what could be a serious mistake. Should I contact the boy's doctor and ask him some questions? Please give me some advice.

DEAR CONCERNED: Your daughter should postpone her marriage. She should ask to accompany her fiancé on his next visit to the doctor, and together they should get a complete report on his condition and the prognosis. No girl should marry a man she is afraid of.

DEAR ABBY: After 27 years with me, my wife, Phyllis, is reasonably able to cope with "weirdos" of any stripe. She recently had an encounter with a flasher here at our railroad station in Connecticut, and I'd like to pass on her solution to the confrontation as a sort of primer for future victims.

Confronted by our Westport flasher, raincoat agape, my fashion-conscious wife glanced briefly at the man, then whispered to him, "Sorry, Shorty, I can't read the label on the coat," whereupon he angrily buttoned up and stunk off in a snit.

Do you hate to write letters of condolences, congratulations, and thanks? It's not difficult when you let Abby guide you in her booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Send $1 and a long, stamped (28 cents), self-addressed envelope to Abby: 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

Youth get advice

BOISE (UPI) — Gov. John Evans Thursday night urged young people to become involved in elections to assure "honest and responsive government" that would lead to improvements.

During a speech at Boise State University, Evans said single interest groups have become influential in recent years and some of the groups have been able to control elections because fewer voters are going to the polls.

CAROLYN JESSER

Kimberly girl going to Europe

KIMBERLY — Carolyn Jesser of Kimberly has been selected to participate in the International 4-H Youth Exchange Program in Switzerland.

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Jesser of Kimberly and was selected as one of three delegates from the United States to participate in this program.

The IYVE program is an in-depth experience for persons 19-25 designed to assist with world peace and understanding by delegates living with host families in one of 30 countries on 6 continents.

For six months, starting in April, Jesser will become a family member and participate in all family activities, including career work as well as leisure interests. She will also work with youth programs similar to 4-H in the United States and have an opportunity to improve her language skills and pursue special interests.

Programs are based on two-way exchanges, whereby states help to host similar participants from other countries. Two-thirds of the program funding for the exchange is sponsored by the National 4-H Council and private donors. The other one-third of the support funding must be raised by the participant in community and county where the exchange lives.

After returning home in October, Jesser plans to complete her master's degree and pursue her career as a 4-H youth extension agent.

Miss Regal pageant set

TWIN FALLS — The Idaho State Our Miss Regal Girl Pageant will be held in Twin Falls March 28-29 at the Littletree Inn.

Girls from all over Idaho will compete in talent and modeling activities and personal interviews and will be vying for the opportunity of representing Idaho at the Miss Regal National Finals to be held in Las Vegas in June.

Competition events are broken into age categories, ranging from the Darling Division age 2-9 years old up to the Debutante Division for the 17-21 year olds.

The event will be hosted by Kristi Allen of Heyburn, the reigning Our Miss Regal Girl Talent USA for 1979. Allen, the daughter of Charles and Leah Allen of Heyburn, won her title in 1979 at the Miss Regal Finals held in Arlington, Texas. She will be competing in Twin Falls for other titles and awards offered by the pageant system.

The public is invited to attend the pageant competition events all day March 29, and to participate in the buffet luncheon at noon. The finals will be held at 7:30 p.m. March 29 and will feature the top talent winners of the pageant as well as guest talent.

Miss Andrea Costantino of Choyenne, Wyo., will present word numbers which have won her the title of Our Miss Regal Debutante at Wyoming preliminaries. The finale will be the crowning of the Idaho State Miss Regal Girls and presentation of awards and gifts.

A special feature this year will be the Mr. Regal competition for boys and the Groups and Lines division.

Our Miss Regal Girl Pageant is a scholarship pageant system and operates activities in ten states. Further information may be obtained by calling Leah Allen in Heyburn at 678-4389 or the Miss Regal offices at 307-856-4613.

Arts group to meet

BOISE (UPI) — The Idaho Commission on the Arts will meet in Blackfoot Friday to review an artists-in-schools-and-communities grant.

Then, the commission meets in Boise March 21-22 to review guidelines and policies for 1982. During the Blackfoot meeting, the commission also will discuss revising application procedures for the artists-in-schools-and-communities grant.

Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag

Unusual spacy play wins

When he looked at dummy, South saw that even five diamonds was in jeopardy. He might lose two hearts and a club. ... West led another club. South took his ace and played the ace of trumps and a low trump to dummy's queen. ...

By Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag
South really wanted to bid six diamonds. But after North doubled four spades, South decided to settle for game.

Samuel Barber at 70: feted

By BYRON BELT
Newhouse News Service

CHICAGO — Composer Samuel Barber's 70 Sunday, at the Curtis Institute, where the musician received much of his training, a celebration will be broadcast live (8:30 EST) by Public National Radio.

Among the performers — who are closely associated with the school and Barber — will be pianist Ruth Laredo, soprano Rose Bampton, violinist Jaime Laredo, baritone Theodore Uppman, the Curtis orchestra and others.

Barber is expected to attend, as he is in May when the superb William Ferris Choral of Chicago will honor the composer with seminars and a choral-orchestral program of his music. I will lead the Chicago conference, and soprano Eleanor Steber, who commissioned one of Barber's greatest works — "Knoxville: Summer of 1915" — will participate and sing the marvelous James Agee-Barber work for soprano and orchestra.

Miss Steber was also the protagonist in Barber's finest opera, "Vanessa," which was given its premiere at the Metropolitan Opera in 1958. The current management has missed a major opportunity to bring "Vanessa" back into repertory to honor this composer's birthday, but RCA has wisely re-issued its stellar recording, and the Gian Carlo Menotti text and Barber's gorgeous music may be enjoyed on ARL2-2094.

Among other recordings of Barber's music, several are of greatest importance. The Schubert recordings (one on STAN and the other on Columbia) are alas no longer listed in the Schwann catalog.

The last Columbia Records release of "Knoxville" is coupled with another of Steber's greatest recordings, "Les Nuits d'Été" of Hector Berlioz, and NY 5943 is well worth searching for as an authentic collector's item.

"Knoxville" appears on another of the "must" Barber recordings, but its performance by Leonard Price is a disaster. On the other hand, Miss Price's recording with the New Philharmonia and Thomas Schippers is worth any cost, because she sings Cleopatra's two great monologues from Barber's 1966-67ated Opera opening "Antony and Cleopatra." These two arias are "absolutely gorgeous, and Price has never been in such sumptuous voice. The Zeffirelli production destroyed the Met's premiere, but the music itself is now coming into its own.

One orchestral recording is absolutely essential, although performances of the concert for violin and cello should be looked into as well. For a brief orchestral survey, Columbia Record's Odyssey release Y-3230 provides stunning performances of Barber's most popular work, the "Adagio for Strings," the "Overture," "The School for Scandal," the "Second Essay for Orchestra" and "Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance."

The late Thomas Schippers leads the New York Philharmonic in the orchestral numbers. Barber was always fortunate in the artists who introduced his works. Steber commissioned and introduced "Knoxville" in 1948 with Serge Koussevitzky and the Boston Symphony, and starred in "Vanessa" under Dimitri Mitropoulos. Miss Price gave the premiere of Barber's "Hornet Songs" in 1953, and joined Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony to introduce the composer's "Prayer of Kierkegaard," then starred in the opening of the New Lincoln Center Metropolitan Opera House in "Antony and Cleopatra."

Such noted enthusiasts of non-contemporary music as Arturo Toscanini and Bruno Walter led the "Adagio for Strings" (lifted from a splendid string quartet) and the "Second Essay for Orchestra." Barber's essential romanticism, his superb feeling for vocal writing, his lush orchestration and splendid expressiveness make his music appealing for performers and public alike.

Samuel Barber has served American music and musicians magnificently. It is entirely proper that we repay a portion of our debt to him during this gala 70th birthday celebration.

Idaho art award nominations due

BOISE — The Idaho Commission on the Arts will accept nominations for the Sixth Biennial Governor's Awards in the Arts to March 20.

The awards will be presented by Gov. John V. Evans in October to recognize Excellence in the Arts in Idaho, and for exemplary Support of the Arts in Idaho.

Excellence in the Arts awards will be given to either individuals or arts organizations. Nominees will be judged on excellence, impact on the state, and other recognition received.

Awards for Support of the Arts may be made to individuals, corporations, communities or organizations. Criteria used in judging will be the history of support, type of support, quality of the projects supported and impact on the public.

Nominees must be residents of Idaho, who, through distinguished service or creative accomplishment, have made a significant contribution to the life of the state and to the arts. Former recipients are not eligible for nomination in the same category.

All nominees will be reviewed by special panels designated by the commission and recommendations will be made to the governor. For more information, or to obtain nomination forms, contact the Idaho Commission on the Arts, 304 W. State St., Boise, Idaho 83720; telephone 334-3119.

Idaho poets, send them your gems

BOISE — The Idaho State Poetry Society is sponsoring two poetry contests — one for students and the other for all poets.

Cash prizes will be awarded and all entries will be considered for publication in "Poet-Poetry" magazine or a future anthology.

The theme of the student contest is "America in the 80s." All students up through seniors in high school are eligible to compete. Entry fee is $1 per person.

"The Joy of Living" is the theme for a Winter Poetry Contest in which all poets are eligible. Entry fee is $1 per poem.

Rules of entry for both contests are as follows:

- Each entry must be typed double spaced, using one side paper only, and should not exceed 35 lines.

- The title should appear on each page, but the author's name should not.

- Each entry may contain up to three poems and shall be placed in a sealed envelope with one card for each poem stating poem's title, author's name, address and phone number, and the entry fee.

- There are no restrictions on form.

- Previously-published poems are not eligible.

- Entries must be postmarked by midnight, March 31 and will not be returned.

Mail entries to ISPS Student Contest/Winter Contest, Jack Hoffman, Contest Chairman, 2972 Innis St., Boise, Idaho 83703.

Prizes are $30, $20, $15 and two Honorable Mentions of $5 each.

McAdams' bronze visions

Lynn Israel/Times-News

Earl McAdams shapes a doe from a petroleum-based wax used especially for casting bronze sculptures. His wife Norma (in the background) said they searched for, and found, a "better way of preserving" his work than in clay.

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES

TWIN FALLS— Even when Earl McAdams was a small boy, he could take a piece of paper and cut out a perfectly proportioned horse fresh and without a mark on the paper.

He can still do it. But he has greatly expanded his artistic ability.

"When we were kids, my mother taught us to do this. Some of us could do it pretty well and some couldn't. But I guess I am the only one who learned about art in this way," he says.

Now retired from his work with the city fire department, McAdams devotes most of his spare time to art. From his paper cut-outs, he has graduated to a rare talent in carving horses and entire western scenes from wax which are turned into beautiful detailed bronze works of art. He has a small workshop at the side of the family home in Twin Falls, where he develops some imaginative ideas into wax for bronzing.

McAdams' work is being featured this month at the Lightworks Gallery in Burley and will be on public display through April 16.

John and Elaine Horels, who operate the gallery, and Sidney Rehn, their assistant, say they are especially excited about the McAdams display.

"We have never had anything like this beautiful bronze work. In fact, I don't know of anyone else in this entire area who does it," Rehn said.

bronze and wax by McAdams will be displayed, showing a sampling of the types of work he does. An invitation-only reception will be held March 29 with the artist present to meet art enthusiasts.

"It's really a hobby and I want to keep it a hobby," McAdams says. "I wouldn't be able to enjoy it anymore if it became a business or a job. I work at it when I want to but I take time for other things I enjoy, too."

His art evolved over a period of many years. McAdams began by making figurines, again mostly horses and other animals, from the sticky Kentucky clay. At first he fired his own, but he says, "One day I burned up a whole batch. I wasn't very good at firing them."

He would make the figures, have them fired and then add the paint. "The legs were always breaking off and they were pretty fragile," says his wife, Norma. "We wanted to find a better way of preserving Earl's work so that our children and grandchildren could enjoy them."

One day he heard about the wax and decided to try this. He didn't know where to get the wax or what kind to use. The McAdamses went to Wendell and bought about 50 pounds of beeswax from a prominent beekeeper.

However, he never used it, because he heard about a bronzing foundry in Arizona and decided to go there and see how the work was done.

There he was introduced to the special wax used for bronze sculpture. It is a petroleum product that is easy to work with and can be preserved at various temperatures.

It also lasts for years even if the sculpture is not bronzed. McAdams has a number of wax works in his basement that he made while still at work in the old fire station. One is a historical work still in the wax stage.

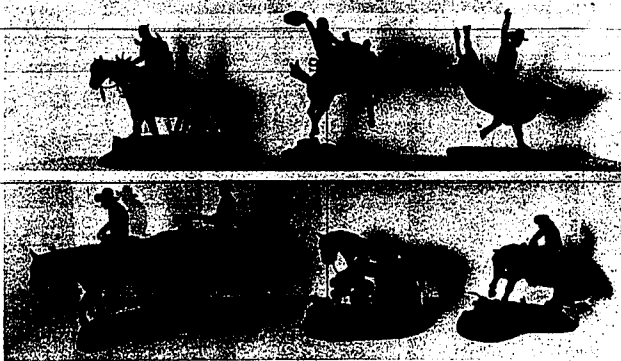

"The firemen said if I'd make it they would help me get it bronzed, but I guess it was too expensive," he says.

The sculpture is of an antique fire wagon pulled by horses and complete with a fire crew and the dogs that usually followed along.

Like all of his work, it features every detail of the harness, spoked wheels and old-time siren. It stands about a foot tall and 18 inches long. To have it bronzed would probably cost several thousand dollars, McAdams says.

He sends the wax carvings to the foundry in New Mexico, where a mold is made around his original wax work. His wax model is removed and another wax poured into it. This is sent to him in pieces and he puts it together, works it over to refine the details and returns it to the foundry. A final glass mold is made and the wax destroyed. From this, more bronze sculptures can be made.

McAdams says he never permits more than 10 or so to be made from each of his works and sometimes only one or two. If just one is to be made, it isn't necessary to pour the second wax model, as the original can be used and then destroyed.

Lynn Israel/Times-News

Rehn said about 11 pieces of Cowboys and horses: McAdams captures their kinetic relationship. Above, finished bronzes.

McAdams' sculptures show his lifetime love of horses

McAdams grew up with horses and has always liked them, so it was natural the horse would be his favorite subject. His horses are detail — down to the chestnut on the front legs and the fine hair of the mane and tail. Many of his sculptures also include buffalo, elk, deer, dogs, Indians and cowboys.

Lightworks Gallery features a special artist each month and maintains a display and offering of paintings, pottery, stained glass and other forms of art at all times.

The gallery is located at 1222 Oakley Ave. in Burley and is open Tuesday through Saturday from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Modern silversmithing in Jensen showcase exhibit

By SARA BOOTH CONROY

WASHINGTON — Count Sigvard Bernadotte, whose father was the king of Sweden and whose sister is the queen mother of Denmark, is a designer who could be expected to know what would be fit for a king.

The sterling silver leaf-water jug, designed by Bernadotte in 1952, is fit not only for a king but a god.

The pitcher, shaped by a master hand, has no ornament nor needs one. The 6½-inch-tall shape is almost like a heart, with a black handle set in the indentation. The lid's hinge is in the middle, so carefully made that it seems a part of the lid. A strainer is set into the point, the back lifts for filling. When you pour from it, you would expect mead at the very least.

Bernadotte is one of the 77 artists who have designed for Georg Jensen, the Danish silversmith who was a pioneer in popularizing modern silver design. Works of all 77 are included in a show at the Renwick Gallery in Washington through July 6.

The catalogue accompanying the show is also being published as a book — "Georg Jensen Silversmith: 77 Artists, 75 Years" by the Smithsonian Institution Press (both in hard and paperback). The catalogue includes a foreword by Lloyd Herman, director of the Renwick; an essay by Erik Lassen, director of the Danish Museum of Decorative Art; biographies of the designers, and full notes on each object in the show.

Bernadotte was born in 1907. He studied at the Royal Swedish Academy of Fine Arts in 1929, to the surprise of many people who didn't think of king's sons as working people. He was 23 when he went to work in 1930 for Georg Jensen, a collaboration that lasted a quarter of a century.

He was not the only member of the royal family to be artist. His mother, the crown Princess Margareta, was known as a painter, and his great uncle, Eugen, was called the "Painter Prince."

His first work as a designer came when, according to the catalogue, he was chosen as the designer of a line of modern silverware to be sold by a Swedish firm. The eldest son of Georg Jensen, Jorgen, who was living and working in Stockholm, was chosen to execute Bernadotte's design.

Bernadotte at the beginning turned up his nose at the current crop of Jensen silver. The Swedish taste was much more clean lined than what Jensen was making in the '30s. Bernadotte's work, like the pitcher cited, is composed of lines so pure yet sensuous that you have to hold your hands behind your back to keep from stroking it. (There are guides at the Renwick to help you resist the impulse.)

Bernadotte's elegant cylinders, spheres and funnels, sometimes with soldered parallel fluting, were an immediate hit in the Art Moderne high-style centers of taste in London and New York. Bernadotte can be credited with moving Jensen into the modern period.

Georg Jensen guided the silversmithery from 1904, when he opened shop, to 1935. The designers, though often strong and opinionated, still had to work within his lines. Not till Bernadotte came to the company did a break with Jensen's style come to pass.

FINE PRINT: Starting with "Star Trek," The Motion Picture, Paramount has instituted a tight security policy governing all screenings of its important films when held outside the confines of its New York headquarters. The company now makes it a practice to hire an armed guard, who rides beside the print in a special truck as it is driven to the theater for previews. Once there, the guard unlocks the vehicle and stays with the precious print in the projection room; after the screening is finished, he rides back to Paramount's offices to lock up the film. All these precautions are necessary in order to forestall any "borrowing" of the print to make illegal copies (a racket which has been growing at an alarming speed).

Q: We keep hearing about all those gigantic salaries actors are getting these days but what about actresses—are they also getting top dollar? — A.A. of Grand Rapids, Mich.

A: The women are getting there. Barbra Streisand, of course, either owns her films or demands and gets a whopping percentage. And Jane Fonda recently negotiated a $2 million fee for a proposed movie, "Her Brother's Keeper," believed to be the largest sum ever paid to an American actress.

Q: What's this about Julie Andrews going backstage in her next movie? Has the marvelous "Mary Poppins" actress decided to take on more sexy parts? — J.B. of Milwaukee.

A: Julie Andrews has been playing sophisticated parts for some time now, like "10" where she appeared in a see-through blouse, partially to promote the persistent wholesomeness of the "Poppins" image. Yes, Julie will go what is termed "semi-nude" in her next film, "S.O.B." in which she plays a family film star whose boxoffice popularity has hit the skids. Not to worry, though. The whole thing will be done—we're assured, under the watchful eye of Julie's husband, director Blake Edwards. William Holden co-stars.

Q: Has actor Rod Steiger ever recovered from the heart attack he suffered three years ago? — B.K. of Atlanta.

A: Yes, but Rod's heart condition and other problems did take their toll. He tells reporters that he didn't actually suffer an attack but doctors ordered coronary bypass surgery upon discovery of his weak ticker in a routine examination. The operation's effects, on top of a divorce from his third wife, Sherry Nelson, sent him to a psychiatrist. But things are definitely picking up. You'll be seeing him soon in several films, including "The Lucky Star" with Louise Fletcher.

BOB DYLAN

... who gets the ring?

Q: There was nothing in a big national magazine story on Peter Sellers about his hot and cold relationship with his fourth wife Lynne Frederick. Do you know anything about it? — J.D. of Austin, Texas.

A: Yes, but it's hard to keep up with the relationship. Here's the latest: The marriage went kaput again when Peter, 54, stormed out of a Paris nightclub because Lynne, 25, was dancing a little too cheek-to-cheek with a member of the crew of Sellers' next film, "The Fiendish Plot of Dr. Fu Manchu." But by the time you read this they may have gotten back together for the umpteenth time.

NO PAYMENT: Ben Bagley, producer of the recent album "Cole Porter Revisited," tells this one about Jackie Onassis. After he was introduced to Jackie at an art gallery opening, she asked him to send her a copy of the Porter album. Later, Bagley "forgotten" enclosing a bill. A couple of weeks later she dashed off a sweet note saying how much she loved the album, but completely overlooked the payment.

WEDDING BELL: The big question in the record industry this week is whether born again Christian Bob Dylan is planning to get married again. What's definitely known at the moment is that Dylan has purchased a $25,000 ring that's been described as "definitely an engagement ring." The only trouble is that the lucky girl is being kept under wraps. No one in the Dylan entourage will admit they know anything about an engagement.

Q: My favorite actress is Sally Struthers, who played Archie Bunker's pretty daughter on CBS-TV's "All in the Family." Now that the show is no longer on the air, what's Sally doing, and does she miss the old Bunker household? — S.M. of Santa Barbara, Calif.

A: Sally doesn't regret leaving the show before it finally bit the dust, but she admits her career would be just about nowhere without the "All in the Family" exposure. But look for Sally in a forthcoming CBS-TV movie titled "Me On the Radio," in which she appears as a Betty Grable-type radio personality — complete with an upswept, 1940s hairdo. It's quite a getup and should be quite a film. If the movie does well in the ratings, word is that she will be seriously considered. Meanwhile, Sally is looking at some potential TV and movie projects but so far nothing definite.

Q: We haven't heard much lately about one of the classiest singers of the 40s and 50s, Dick Haymes. Is he still active as an entertainer? — A:

A: Dick, 61, has been singing on and off now for many years, and is planning to write a book about his extensive show-biz experiences, including his marriage to Rita Hayworth. But Dick has other things to cope with now: he recently revealed to friends that he has lung cancer and has been undergoing chemotherapy. The good news is that his doctors caught it early, and chances for a complete cure are excellent.

Q: Is Dinah Shore bitter about the fact that Burt Reynolds and Sally Field are having such a long-lasting romance? — A.T. of Toledo.

A: If she is, Dinah is an expert at hiding it. Fact is that she and Burt are still very good friends as well as occasional working partners. Burt not only co-hosted a week's worth of Dinah's TV show in Florida recently but got himself involved in a pro-celebrity exhibition "Dinah taped" for her show. Interestingly enough, Burt found out singing with Dinah, doing a rendition of "You Don't Bring Me Flowers."

Q: Are those stories true that Christina Onassis' third husband is practically suicidal with grief because she has insisted on a divorce? — M.G. of Boston.

A: Anyone who has seen Sergei Kouzov says he looks quite cheerful probably because he'll undoubtedly get a "substantial" settlement from his ex-wife when the final papers are signed. Sergei claims that Christina asked him to marry her although he does say he liked her.

Q: We know Ryan O'Neal and Farrah Fawcett have been going together for some time. But what ever happened to his romance with singer-actress Diana Ross? — I.P. of White Plains.

A: Ryan's fling with Diana commenced when both were thinking of making a movie together about a pop singing idol and her bodyguard. The project fell through as did the romance because soon after Ryan tied up with Farrah. Feelings die a bit harder because patrons of a New York restaurant were recently treated to the sight of Diana charging for the exit shortly after she spotted Ryan escorting Farrah to a nearby table. Q: Took my daughter to see the line old ballet movie "Red Shoes" and we both want to know if Moira Shearer ever dances anymore? — L.T. of Westport, Conn.

A: Moira, who is now 54, hasn't danced in 20 years. She gave up her

Gere's 'just a gigolo,' and nothing more

Times-News Writer
Hollywood has finally liberated the American male!

First there was "Starting Over," the trials and tribulations of a divorced man facing the dilemma of unwanted freedom. Then we had "Kismet" vs. "Kismet," a moving story of a man left by his wife to fend for himself and their six-year-old son. Both films were refreshing, well-written and explored in some depth the personal trauma of the protagonists.

Now we have what some may consider the most shocking example of role reversal — "American Gigolo" — the story of a male prostitute. Starring Richard Gere, the film nicely documents the lifestyle of a man who makes his living by satisfying frustrated women. What the film doesn't do is provide any insight into his character or relationships.

Phil Schrader, who wrote and directed the film, devotes much time to showing us Julian's (Richard Gere) post apartment and his extensive wardrobe. The exterior is quite apparent, but the interior man remains a mystery. We never develop an understanding of the young man or what motivates his behavior.

At the beginning of the film, Julian seems quite content. He believes that lovemaking is his only talent, and that pleasing older women is both a challenge and worthwhile endeavor. Occasionally, he engages in kinky sex, but this is definitely not his preference. All in all, we are led to believe, Julian is not a bad fellow. Two things happen to alter his carefree existence. He meets and gradually falls for the beautiful wife (Lauren Hutton) of a prominent senator, and he is framed for the murder of one of his clients.

Both affairs are hopelessly vague. Michelle Stratten (Lauren Hutton) tries in vain to get to know him. When asked where he comes from, Julian replies that he comes from nowhere, or if she wishes, from the bed in which they are lying. The film hints at his insecurity, his need for the support of wealthy, benevolent women. Yet, we never learn anything about his past or what makes him so dependent.

Nevertheless, Michelle falls madly in love with him. Her character is equally nebulous. She is the attractive possession of a successful man, which is supposed to tell us everything. Unfortunately, this knowledge reveals nothing more than a cliché, a stereotyped image we have of politicians' wives. Who she is underneath, what she believes or wants for herself, and what she sees in Julian aside from his one obvious talent, are never made clear. The murder rap is also muddled. Julian's arrogant attitude has alienated many of his associates, but framing him seems more of a convenience than a vendetta. Actually, the murder charge is a script contrivance Schrader needed to strengthen the bond between Julian and Michelle. What could be better for bringing people together than the threat of imprisonment and scandal?

"American Gigolo" could have been an intriguing study of an unusual lifestyle. Instead, it is a glossy, superficial movie about glossy, superficial people. Gere and Hutton are visually appealing but framing him seems more of an unusual lifestyle. Instead, it is a glossy, superficial movie about glossy, superficial people. Gere and Hutton are visually appealing but framing him seems more of an unusual lifestyle. Instead, it is a glossy, superficial movie about glossy, superficial people.

Once the initial shock has subsided, the interest in "American Gigolo" sharply declines. If the film proves anything, it may be that we are not so liberated after all. Audiences would hardly react if the central figure were a woman. Even the title is a euphemism. Ever heard of an American gigolette?

Phil Donahue's own story reveals stardom's traumas

By VICTOR WILSON
Newhouse News Service
NEW YORK — Phil Donahue may be the hottest personality extant in the talk show television biz, but there is an humble side to him too.

"I am beginning to understand the special neuroses of famous people," he confesses. "I believe my tolerance level is dropping. 'I am impatient in lines — whether for taxis, airplane tickets, restaurant tables, license plates. I, the slow learner, am beginning to understand what being spoiled means, and I am determined to keep it under control.'"

Writing in "Donahue: My Own Story" Simon & Schuster, $11.95, he confesses, "Unless you're Sinatra or Hope or Carson, you are going to have to deal with a nagging feature of semi-stardom — the fan who can't think of your name."

It happens to him "all the time," and he admits, "I am not sure why I resent it. He's an infantile, and feels 'very anxious indeed' when he realizes it may not last."

Phil, who signs his book "By Phil Donahue & Co.," was born Phillip John Donahue Dec. 21, 1925, in Cleveland's St. John's Hospital. He attended local Catholic schools and graduated from Notre Dame University.

During that period he suffered an early trauma, he relates, when he fell for a girl, a cute coed, danced cheek-to-cheek with her, discovered she wore "a soft bra," but also that she was entering a convent.

"Competing with Jesus was more than I could handle," he reports.

His start in television came with South Bend, Ind.'s WNDT-TV, "The Notre Dame NBC Station." "The Phil Donahue Show" made its debut Nov. 6, 1967, at 10:30 a.m., with atheist Madalyn Murray O'Hair as guest speaker.

"It was like calling for a return of polio," Phil remembers.

A nerve-racking week, he recalls, and he and his staff wondered if their show was good enough to succeed locally. Twelve years later, "Donahue" would air in 200 markets, including Alaska, Hawaii and Puerto Rico.

"We would move into the No. 1 position in America's syndicated talk show," Phil writes. The cast who "began the race in a cold sweat from a wrestler's dressing room in Dayton, Ohio, would wonder why it had taken us so long to get there."
