

10° gas 'conservation fee'

Carter fires new weapons at inflation

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In response to a nation "aroused" by ravaging inflation, President Carter Friday asked Congress to balance the budget for the first time in 12 years.

He also announced he will impose a dime a gallon gasoline conservation fee.

Carter said $13 billion to $14 billion in federal spending must be eliminated from the fiscal 1981 budget, which will mean an end to what he termed "good worthwhile programs, programs I support very strongly."

In a companion action, the Federal Reserve Board — at Carter's request clamped tighter restrictions on consumer credit card use and on business borrowing.

The Fed also announced it would take steps to discourage big banks from borrowing money in an effort to force them to reduce lending — something the president sees as a major cause of the nation's economic problems.

Carter said he was "certain" the United States will experience a "substantial reduction in inflation later this year" because of the "drastic" new policies, although he said prices will continue to accelerate for the next few months.

He also predicted an inflation rate "under double digit" in 1981, compared with the January level of 18 percent.

Carter also beefed up his voluntary wage-price guidelines and sought congressional approval for the government to withhold taxes on interest and dividends in order to raise $3 billion.

He said he was freezing 20,000 government jobs for a saving of $7 million, would veto budget-busting legislation and would ask Congress for "additional power" if all else failed. He did not say what these powers would be.

But the president flatly ruled out mandatory wage-price controls and said there will be no cuts in the defense budget. He gave little indication where the major spending

Church faults plan, backs budget cuts

By MARTY TRILLHAASE
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Sen. Frank Church Friday labeled President Carter's anti-inflation measures as insufficient, but added he would support federal budget cuts.

Church, who formally announced Wednesday he would seek a fifth term in an interview with the Times-News, continued his strategy of hammering away at major oil companies and increased oil prices as a major source of inflation.

Carter's policy aims at a balanced budget in 1981, the first balanced U.S. budget since 1969, as well as a $4.62 per barrel fee on imported oil. That fee is expected to translate into a price increase of 10 cents a gallon at the gas pump.

"When you ask the question, is the President's program sufficient, I would have to say no. It does not deal with the principle cause of today's inflation," Church said.

Church — noted — petroleum — prices have doubled since 1979, adding those increased costs filter down into increased costs for other products.

"It's a gouge on the western world. The OPEC cartel has now increased prices by 1,000 percent, since October, 1973. Everyone recognizes that this price has no relationship to its economic value. The major oil companies are wedded to the cartel," Church said.

Although the U.S. can do little to control OPEC prices, domestic gas prices can and should be controlled, Church added. He said he would support re-imposing price controls on domestic supplies of petroleum. Those controls are set to expire next year under deregulation.

Although he said he would support an estimated $14 billion in spending cuts necessary to balance the federal budget, Church said he did not believe that action alone would solve the inflation problem.

"Any politician who says that's the answer to inflation is not telling the truth," Church said. He added the $15 billion in budget cuts are minuscule in a $200 billion economy and as such would contribute to, at most, a 5 of a percentage point reduction in the rate of inflation, now at 18 percent.

But he said, a balanced budget may provide some psychological benefits, and would put the government in a position to present a good example.

"That may give people the belief that inflation is going to be brought under control and acting on that belief, they'll be less inclined to gouge," he said.

Reducing federal spending ignores several other inflationary factors, such as the influx of "Euro-dollars" into the country, competing for and pushing up the price of goods and services.

Church also repeated his opposition to the Federal Reserve Board's action to hike interest rates. High interest rates are now part of the inflationary cycle rather than a factor that would counter inflation, he said.

"To rely on rising interest rates for so long has been a serious mistake," Church said, adding that tactic was akin to "stopping a rhinoceros with a twig."

Church said he would not rule out wage and price controls if Carter's methods do not temper inflation substantially.

"It is the action of last resort. But there have been times where we have had to do it in the past and we may have to do it again to regain some measure of stability," Church said.

"We have to do something to bring it down to a livable level."

President tells news conference Iran failed to keep promises

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter said Friday Iran's leaders "obviously do not have the authority" to carry out their own solemn promises.

But he did hope the situation may change once a new parliament is elected.

Carter, in a nationally televised news conference, offered no new developments in the continuing effort to free 50 Americans who have been held hostage in Iran since November.

But he said he hoped chances for winning the freedom would improve once Iran finishes electing a parliament, a process that began Friday.

"The past few days have been characterized by bitter disappointments because in effect the commitments that have been made by the newly elected president and the administration of Iran were not honored," he said.

"Prior to these parliamentary elections, they obviously do not have the authority to speak and carry out their own commitments."

Carter referred to the failure of the U.N. commission that traveled to Iran with the understanding the hostages would be freed once the panel began investigating Tehran's grievances against Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi.

Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini overruled the pledge. U.N. officials said from Iran's elected leaders and the commission left empty-handed.

Carter said the elections may strengthen the hands of Iranian President Abolhasan Bani-Sadr and his aides but "whether they will have that authority after the elections are completed I don't know. I certainly hope so."

On other topics, Carter said:

- He would violate provisions of SALT II if he thought it was in America's best interests, but currently has no intention of taking such a step. Carter said he will not ask the Senate to ratify the treaty while feelings against the Soviets are running high.
- "I'm the one who sets policy" on Israel and he takes overall responsibility for the mix up at the United Nations, where the United States voted in favor of a resolution against Israel and later changed its mind. "It was an honest breakdown in communications between me and the United Nations," he said.

- "I believe that we will have peace in the Middle East." He predicted the current negotiations between Israel and Egypt would ultimately be successful, and that the Palestinian issue would be resolved.
- Iranians are being allowed to enter the United States despite the hostage crisis because many are "trying to escape circumstances in their homeland. Carter characterized the policy as humane and said, "I believe it's in the best interests of our own country" to admit them.
- He is not ready to declare Sen. Edward Kennedy a loser in the race for the Democratic presidential nomination. "The acknowledgment of defeat is a judgment to be made completely by my opponents and not by me," he said, adding there is no indication Kennedy plans to drop out of the race.
- While black groups may oppose his plans to balance the budget, poor blacks will be among the chief beneficiaries of inflation control. "The best thing I could do about the people for whom I am deeply concerned (the poor) ... is to control inflation."

Wreckage of the Polish airliner flying from Montreal that crashed near the Warsaw airport Friday

No survivors in Polish jetliner U.S. boxers among 87 crash deaths

WARSAW, Poland (UPI) — Eighty-seven people were killed Friday in the crash of a Soviet-built Polish jetliner, crippled by engine trouble minutes from a landing in Warsaw.

The dead included 22 members of a United States amateur boxing team.

Seven other Americans were also killed, a spokesman for LOT Polish Airlines in New York said. There were no survivors.

The LOT Ilyushin 62 jet, on a scheduled 3,700-mile flight from New York, was attempting to make an emergency landing on a foam-covered runway at Warsaw's domestic airport after reporting trouble in one of its four engines.

It fell two miles short — plummeting into the sprawling grounds of a century-old fortress surrounded by 25-foot-high earthen walls at 11 a.m. (5 a.m. EST) and exploding on impact.

"I saw the plane coming down and it dived abruptly to the ground," one witness said.

"It was in smithereens," said a Polish boxing official who was waiting to greet the Americans and rushed immediately to the crash site.

"There were some fragments of the tail and wings but that's all."

The wreckage and debris was spread over a large area of fields, the spokesman said.

15-inch-thick ice into a deep pond in the middle of the fortress area.

The fuselage was under 12 to 24 feet of water and frogmen were working to recover bodies.

Among the dead were 14 boxers — some of them teenagers as young as 16 — from a U.S. Amateur Athletic Union boxing team and eight team officials and aides. The AAU team had been scheduled to compete against the Polish national team at Katowice and Krakow March 16 and 18.

President Carter Friday expressed his grief over the tragedy.

"The people of our country were saddened by the airline tragedy which took place today near Warsaw," Carter said in a statement. "We are saddened by the awful loss of life, and share the grief of those who knew the victims."

"I wish to particularly express the condolences of the American people to the families and friends of those killed in the crash who were members of the U.S. amateur boxing team and those who accompanied them."

"The spirit and determination of these fine American athletes, and those who coached and assisted them, reflected what is best about our country. They represented our nation well, and will be sorely missed."

Polish authorities said 10 Canadians were also among the victims, but the LOT office in New York said later there were no Canadians among the 77 passengers and 10 crewmen.

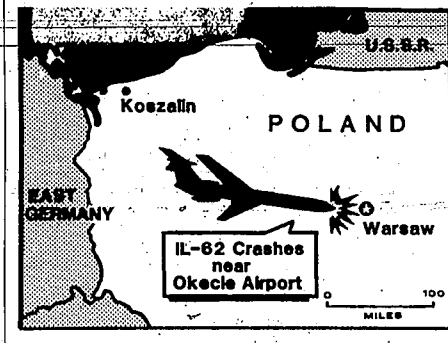

Another victim was identified as Polish pop singer Anna Jantar, who was returning home after touring Polish communities in the United States.

Rescue officials said identification of the apparently dead was "very difficult because everything is completely in pieces, there is nothing else."

It was the worst foreign air disaster for American athletes since the entire 17-member U.S. figure skating team died in a 1961 crash in Belgium.

Several of the American boxers originally scheduled to make the flight did not go. Ronnie Shields was at home in Houston with the flu and Israel Acosta stayed in Milwaukee to compete in the Wisconsin Golden Gloves finals.

Airport sources said the plane — which had been delayed three hours before taking off from New York Kennedy's Airport Thursday night — apparently developed engine trouble as it approached Warsaw and was attempting an emergency landing at the domestic airport instead of trying to reach the Okęcie international airport 20 miles from Warsaw.

Idaho boxer misses death by skipping Polish fights

BLAOKFOOT, Idaho (UPI) — Ernie Chavez's bouts against two East German boxers left him tired and somewhat depressed after the U.S. boxing team's defeat.

So he decided to skip this week's fights in Poland and fly home to rest.

Friday morning, the flight Chavez would have been scheduled to take to Poland crashed at a Warsaw airport, killing 22 members of the U.S. amateur boxing team.

Early reports had Chavez confused with another boxer and Chavez began receiving curious phone calls from the media and friends early Friday.

Chavez said he was left depressed by the news of the deaths of his comrades.

"I knew quite a few of the guys that made that flight," Chavez said. "I'm glad I decided to come home."

He said his family also was shocked by the news of the crash.

"But everyone in the small community of Blackfoot seems relieved that Chavez decided not to take that fatal flight."

The bantam-weight boxer said, however, he is now rather hesitant about flying in another plane.

"I have to do some flying next week again. It's going to be scary."

Senate panel approves Silver Creek flows

By DAVID MORRISSEY
Times-News writer

BOISE — Creation of two minimum flows on Silver Creek came one step closer to approval Friday.

On a unanimous vote, the Senate Resources and Environment Committee stamped its approval on the two flows, proposed earlier this year by the Water Resources Board.

The move came after Buhl fish farmer Ken Ellis withdrew his request with the Idaho Department of Water Resources that he be allowed to build two fish hatcheries on one segment of the famous Blaine County trout stream.

The committee action means House Concurrent Resolution 82 will come up for a final Senate vote within a week.

That measure passed the House of Representatives on a 63-4 vote earlier this month.

If approved by the Senate, the resolution would create two separate minimum — or in-stream — flows on Silver Creek.

The first would designate a flow of 99 cubic feet per second (cfs) from the confluence of Grove Creek and Stalker Creek to the Picabo Bridge.

The second would set a flow of 74 cfs from the Picabo Bridge downstream to where Silver Creek intersects with U.S. Highway 83.

Establishment of a minimum-flow is creation of a new water right. In this case, the two minimum flows were proposed to preserve the water quality and fisheries of Silver Creek.

As new water rights, the two flows would be subservient to any earlier water rights established on Silver Creek, but would have precedence over any later water rights established on that body of water.

Friday's committee vote came after limited testimony.

A letter from Ellis was read to legislators, in which he said that any further opposition on his part to HCR 42 "would only further spread misinformation and half-truths that would damage my company, the trout industry in general, and the U.S. Trout Farmers Association, of which I am currently national president."

Ellis, the president of Valley Trout Farms Inc. of Buhl had said his two hatcheries proposed for Silver Creek could raise as much as 3 million pounds of fish a year.

Senators endorse local land use elections

BOISE (UPI) — A rousing speech on Americans' basic rights and freedoms fueled passage in the Idaho Senate Friday of a bill allowing cities and counties to vote on the establishment of local planning and zoning laws.

"Every man has his vote as long as it's the right vote," Carter said. The Legislature had already decided that planning and zoning was good and was using "loophole-laghat" protected individuals from themselves.

"When you remove from a man the power to vote wrong, you remove from the man the power to vote right," Carter said.

He said by robbing people of their responsibility, people would eventually be robbed of their "common sense and wisdom."

But Sen. Reese Verner, R-Nampa, said the bill was broad.

"It's an all or nothing situation," Verner said.

He said a minority could oppose a particular zoning regulation and could kill all zoning and planning in an area.

"Development can go rampant with no control on development," Verner said. "That's what would happen."

Sen. Ken Robison, D-Boise, said he believed a majority of Idahoans did not want unregulated development.

Robison said if communities revoked their planning and zoning laws they would have no authority to decide if they wanted adult bookstores, nuclear power plants or their farmland turned into subdivisions.

Sen. Richard Egbert, D-Tetonan, said when the Legislature enacted the local land-use planning act in 1975, it did not give communities any choice but to impose their own land-use plans.

Egbert said the proposal would give counties and cities that choice.

Family conference controversy arises

By DAVID MORRISSEY Times-News writer

BOISE — If the delegate selection process for the White House Conference on Families is any indication of what will happen in July, the conclave will be stormy indeed.

In Idaho and other states, battles have already broken out between various groups with opposing philosophies on who should attend that conference and how delegates should be elected.

Friday, the House State Affairs Committee failed to endorse House Concurrent Resolution 50 after three separate tie votes. That measure requests the calling of a statewide election to select delegates to the conference.

But committee members agreed to give the resolution another chance on Monday.

The call for an election has been opposed by Gov. John Evans, who is now charged by the White House with selecting Idaho's delegates to the gathering.

Last week Evans appointed a committee to nominate possible delegates. From the list of nominees, Evans said, he would select the final Idaho delegates to attend the conference.

In the meantime, conservative groups have argued that advocates of liberal causes will try to pack the convention with their supporters. Liberals have levied the same charges against conservative organizations.

According to the White House, the purpose of the conference is to "examine the strength of American families, the difficulties they face, and the ways in which family life is affected by public policies."

License not required

Senate approves trucking deregulation

BOISE (UPI) — The Idaho Senate Friday passed 23-12 a measure deregulating the intrastate trucking of agricultural products, livestock, sand and gravel, and transferring truck safety regulation to the Department of Law Enforcement.

A similar bill died in the Legislature last session. Supporters of the measure said it would allow more small truckers to enter the marketplace, but opponents argued it would drive existing small operators out of business.

Bill sponsor, Sen. Kermit Kelbert, D-Idaho, said the proposal would allow "free entry into the marketplace" without obtaining a license from the Idaho Public Utilities Commission.

But Sen. C.E. Bilyeu, D-Pocatello, said the president of the PUC told him presently "anybody who applies can get a license."

Sen. Walter Yarbrough, R-Grandview, said that might be true but it would cost $2,500 to get one, which kept a lot of would-be truckers who could not afford it from applying.

Bilyeu also criticized the bill because it "did not touch the big operator."

He said smaller trucking businesses could not survive the "cutthroat competition" of larger operations without the protection of the state.

Sen. Dean Abraham, R-Caldwell, agreed.

He said a local farmer who operated three trucks and had six sons to help was afraid he would be undercut by the "big boys" and driven out of business.

But Yarbrough said "there is no way a big trucker who has to pay union wages is going to put a man with six sons working for him out of business."

Bilyeu also complained that deregulation of the airline industry had driven small airlines out of Pocatello and said he feared deregulation of the trucking industry also might create a shortage of service.

"I don't think we should force someone to go to Pocatello if they can't make a profit," Kelbert said.

The proposal also would eliminate four PUC staff employees, in charge of enforcing safety regulations and transfer that responsibility along with two positions to the Department of Law Enforcement.

Kelbert said the move would save the state about $173,000 annually.

Nampa's ammonia output bill no trouble

BOISE (UPI) — The Idaho Senate Friday passed a measure designed to save the city of Nampa about $3 million by increasing the amount of ammonia allowable for discharge into Indian Creek near Nampa from the city's sewage facilities.

Task force, auditor disagree on plan

BOISE (UPI) — Governor's Management Task Force members said Thursday the state auditor must be stripped of some duties to save money, but the auditor's office said this would cost too much.

After listening to more than an hour of testimony from both sides, the House Appropriations Committee put off a decision on who to believe.

Committee members said they would give the auditor's office and the task force one more day to work out their differences.

ammonia now discharged into the creek — just make it legal.

He said the increase would not hurt salmonid fish in the creek, because there were none in the stream.

Sen. Ken Robison, D-Boise, said he found little fault with the proposal, but asked if the ammonia would still be toxic when it reached the Boise River. Swenson said the ammonia was no longer toxic by the time it reached the river because it would be diluted by waste irrigation water which dumps into the creek.

Evans won't take Olmstead's fuel offer

BOISE (UPI) — Indicating the partisan feud about the state Office of Energy is far from over, Gov. John Evans turned a cold shoulder Friday on the latest Republican proposal to fund the emergency fuel allocation service.

He suggested he might throw in the towel and turn responsibility for the fuel service completely over to the federal government.

House Speaker Ralph Olmstead, R-Twin Falls, who recently bannished the governor's recommended $43,900 Supplemental Appropriation for the Ways and Means Committee, said Thursday he might support a $25,000 appropriation.

The speaker said he would withdraw his plan if the Senate does not pass a bill approved by the House Thursday on a conservation program from the Office of Energy to the Permanent Building Fund Council.

But Evans said Friday the smaller amount would be "most inadequate," the fuel program's ability to operate would be "most inadequate," and he was "most reluctant" to support such an appropriation.

Evans, who repeatedly has locked horns with Olmstead and other GOP leaders on the Office of Energy issue, said he thought the speaker "is probably misinformed more than anything."

The governor was referring to Olmstead's comment that it would be "ridiculous" to fully fund the fuel allocation service, because Olmstead said he had learned from oil company officials that there is no fuel shortage at this time in Idaho.

Evans said this was false because the fuel allocation office had handled 40 calls in the first 11 days of March from farmers and other fuel users who were having trouble getting oil or gasoline.

Olmstead has said many getting oil at the only worthwhile part of the Office of Energy is the fuel allocation service. Best funding for the fuel allocation, the Twin Falls Republican does not want to give one cent to fund the other arms of the office.

Following Olmstead's move to send the governor's recommended appropriation bill to his doom in the seldom-convened Ways and Means Committee, Evans lashed out against the "highly unusual" strategy.

Evans said the $43,900 was needed to keep the fuel office operating past March 31 to the end of the fiscal year, June 30.

The Democratic governor said he would just as soon not have any funds for the fuel allocation service if $25,000 was the only amount the Legislature was willing to part with. "There would be a substantial reduction," Evans said. "We would have less than half the resources we have now. It would be most inadequate. If we have and inadequate program, as I would probably advise to transfer the program (over to the federal government) and let them handle it."

Evans said the lesser appropriation proposed by the House speaker would be enough to pay the salaries of Chris Smith, director of the fuel service, "and a couple of secretaries."

"It would be a terrible reflection" on state government if the program was "underfunded," the chief executive added.

He hinted Olmstead had been stubborn, saying he had directed Smith long ago to make himself available to the legislators to explain the operation and needs of the fuel service.

Referendum would repeal 1% bills New taxpayer revolt discounted

BOISE (UPI) — Threats by Idaho property tax rebels of a referendum to repeal legislative action on the 1 percent law are being taken lightly by some officials and seriously by others.

The 1 percent Initiative of the Idaho Property Owners Association, Inc. — Don Chance, Cal Williams and Werner Brammer — have been attacking the Legislature for promoting bills that would further delay implementation of the 1 percent.

Williams, IPOA president, said Thursday that if the Legislature approved a bill putting off full implementation of the people-passed law, the group would ignite a referendum drive to repeal the new legislation.

Chance, leader of the 1 percent effort in 1978, has vowed to help defeat the re-election efforts of legislators who voted for 1 percent delaying legislation.

Brammer prows "the Statehouse daily, sounding warnings to reporters and lawmakers that the people will stand for further delays."

This band of tax foes has picked up several sympathizers in the Legislature, including Republican Senate President Pro-Tem Reed Budge of Soda Springs.

Budge said Friday a referendum would get a lot of support from the public — even as much as the 1 percent got in its 1978 general election campaign.

However, two influential Statehouse occupants — Democratic Gov. John

Evans and House 1 percent subcommittee chief Rep. Morgan Munger, R-Ola — Friday said they thought a referendum would not succeed.

Budge said the House Revenue and Taxation Committee was to blame for the IPOA's uprising.

"Their whole intent from the start this year was to circumvent the 1 percent," Budge said of the committee.

Chance, who has been ridiculed by many legislators and others in the Statehouse, would not hurt a referendum drive if he was active in it, Budge added.

"I think Chance has been a voice of the taxpayers of Idaho," the pro-tem said. "The attitude of the people hasn't changed. I see no reason why a referendum wouldn't be accepted by the people. They know there's no way to satisfy government's appetite for money, so it needs to be cut off."

Munger had a different view. He said the people "have realized what a mess it (the 1 percent) has turned out to be."

"My personal opinion is that they (the IPOA) won't have the support they had in 1978. And I'm not so sure they're held in as high a regard as they once were."

Evans said he could not speculate on whether Chance's reputation would help or hinder a referendum drive, saying he felt a referendum would fail on its own merit.

"I think they're going to have difficulty convincing the people the 1 percent initiative has been beneficial," the governor said.

Evans said the homeowners who supported the 1 percent initiative have found that owners of commercial property, not the homeowners, have received tax relief as a result of the property tax limit.

1% bill expected Monday

BOISE (UPI) — Tax lawmakers in the House Friday decided to change parts of their approach to implementation of the 1 percent initiative as a result of objections by their Senate counterparts. But the representatives soon encountered problems in the new compromise bill.

The House taxation subcommittee's first 1 percent bill encountered harsh opposition early in March, so the subcommittee was directed to draft another proposal that would satisfy more legislators.

Not without significant dissent, members of the subcommittee agreed Friday morning to draft a new bill with various compromise changes.

Later, while going over the draft, the committee changed its mind again and indicated it had better remove the 2 percent property valuation increase limit from the measure, despite the danger of tough sledding if the bill got to the Senate.

The subcommittee hoped to have the wrinkles out of the fresh bill in time for introduction to the House Revenue and Taxation Committee Monday.

The major change agreed upon Friday morning was to allow local governments a 1 percent budget increase above the freeze on property tax charges, not 8 percent as outlined in the first bill. — Senators had advocated a 4 percent allowance.

Scarsdale murder

Headmistress says wanted to be shot

HARRISON, N.Y. (UPI)—The woman charged with murdering "Scarsdale Diet" author Herman Tarnower told authorities she went to his home to have him kill her and the doctor was shot to death in a struggle, police testified Friday.

Harrison—Town—Police Officer Daniel O'Sullivan said Mrs. Jean Harris, 57, headmistress of a girls' school in Virginia, told him on the night of the shooting that she had gone to Tarnower's home "with the intention of having Dr. Tarnower kill her. She said she had no intention of going back to Virginia alive."

O'Sullivan, who responded to a call from the Tarnower house Monday night, made his comments at a felony hearing in Harrison Town Court.

O'Sullivan said he and Det. Arthur Scilliano arrived at Tarnower's Purchase N.Y. estate a few minutes after 11 p.m. and saw Mrs. Harris standing inside the front door.

In response to a question, O'Sullivan said, "She stated to myself and Detective Scilliano that Dr. Tarnower had been shot in the bedroom upstairs. She said, 'I shot him. I did it.'"

"When asked where the gun was," O'Sullivan said, the woman replied that "it was in her car." The officers accompanied Mrs. Harris to her vehicle in the driveway and found a handgun on the front seat.

"They went back into house," O'Sullivan testified, "and Mrs. Harris stated that she had driven up from Virginia with the weapon in her car with the intention of having Dr. Tarnower kill her."

"She stated she had left notes at her home in Virginia indicating what action she planned to take in New York. She said there was an argument in the bedroom and that Dr. Tarnower pushed her and said, 'Get out of here. You're crazy.'"

O'Sullivan said she told him a struggle ensued and several shots were fired.

He said Scilliano asked who fired the shots and "She said she didn't know."

Earlier, police said Mrs. Harris, headmistress of the exclusive Madeira school for girls in Greenway, Va., owned the pistol used to kill Tarnower and prosecutors sought access to a letter she wrote him on the day of his death.

A Harrison Town police spokesman said Mrs. Harris, a longtime close friend of the 69-year-old cardiologist, owned the .32 caliber Harrison and Richards revolver found in her car.

Ballistics tests showed that bullets taken from Dr. Tarnower's body were fired from the gun, police said.

Westchester County District Attorney Carl Vergari said he had issued a subpoena to Joel Aurnou, Mrs. Harris' lawyer, demanding that he turn over by March 21 a letter she wrote to Tarnower postmarked March 10, the day the doctor was found shot four times in the bedroom of his Japanese-style home.

Iranian students miss court

MONROE, La. (UPI)—Forty-eight Iranian students, most of them unidentified, skipped court Friday prior to their trials for disrupting an appearance by an official of the deposed shah's government.

City Court Judge Larry Lolley issued arrest warrants for the Iranians, whose disappearance snarled court proceedings—scheduled to assure light security and unusual precautions.

Several dozen Iranians stood outside the court building at 9 a.m. when the trials were to begin. But defense motions, including attempts to dismiss the indictments and overturn the rule barring spectators, caused a delay.

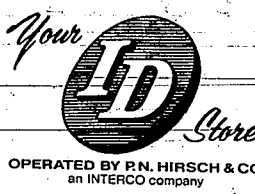

The crowd dwindled by the time the first defendant, John Doe No. 34, was called. The bailiff made 48 trips outside court to call the defendants, who were charged with trespassing and resisting arrest, but none responded.

The Iranians were arrested March 6 for interrupting a speech by Feroz-doun Hoveyda—a former official in the government of ousted shah Reza Pahlavi—at Northeast Louisiana University. Most were jailed and they fasted for seven days until an anonymous "good Samaritan" posted $2,000 bond Thursday for their release.

Most of the Iranians were known to authorities and attorneys only as John or Jane Doe because they refused to give their names to police.

Lolley told defense attorneys Marion White and Pam Bayer they were responsible for having the Iranians in court.

Iran votes for parliament; U.N. panel quits

United Press International
Iranians began electing their new parliament Friday and President Abolhasan Bani-Sadr said he would personally ask the new legislature to order the release of the American Embassy hostages when it convenes in May.

Bani-Sadr toured polling booths in Tehran to supervise the first of two rounds of voting which he said was marred by instances of coercion, fraud and other election irregularities.

In a series of interviews published Friday, the president announced he would ask the new parliament to free the hostages and said he "personally" favored a government commitment not to execute the deposed shah if that was the price Iran must pay to win his extradition from Panama.

Bani-Sadr made the latter comment in an interview with the Washington Post. In other interviews with Japanese and French newspapers, he reiterated his view that Iran should free the 50 Americans, held hostage in the U.S. Embassy for 123 days.

But he also conceded he had no authority over that issue, which Iranian ruler Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini has charged the new parliament with deciding after it convenes in May.

At the United Nations in New York, the five-member U.N. commission on Iran ended three days of consultations with Secretary General Kurt Waldheim and disbanded to await a more "favorable climate" in Tehran.

The secretary-general insisted no report on the findings would be published until the panel's work was completed.

The five international law experts spent 17 days in Tehran investigating Iran's grievances but its mission was aborted when the embassy militants, with Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's backing, overruled Bani-Sadr's government and denied the panel permission to visit the hostages.

As the first round of voting for the 270-member assembly began, the president himself ran around Tehran in an effort to catch ballot-box cheaters.

Tehran Radio said Bani-Sadr found a number of instances where "certain parties" were either forging or tricking illiterate voters into casting ballots for specific candidates.

The radio did not identify the "parties" involved but the election was being contested broadly by hard-line candidates supported by Iran's Islamic clergy on one side and candidates who, like Bani-Sadr, appear to represent more moderate views.

"The president stressed that people were free to vote as they chose and no one had the right to coerce them," the radio said.

"For me, the detention of the hostages is not an asset for Iran," Bani-Sadr told the French newspaper Le Figaro. "It is in fact a weakness since it prevents us from acting on the international scene to pursue an independent national policy."

In an interview with the Japanese newspaper Mainichi Shimbun, he added that, while parliament must pass "a final judgment" on the hostages' fate, he would go before the legislature to "express my view on the issue."

Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh, whose authority has also been successfully challenged by the embassy militants, suggested that the best way out of the crisis now would be for the ailing shah to die on the operating table.

If the shah died, Ghotbzadeh told reporters, "the center of the controversy would be eliminated and then obviously that helps the situation to be resolved much faster."

Right riots in Rome

ROME, Italy (UPI) — Right-wing gangs hurling firebombs and swinging hammers rampaged through one of Rome's most fashionable piazzas Friday, setting cars ablaze and trapping hundreds of tourists in the middle of a battle with police.

Officials said 13 policemen were injured in the fighting — five of them by a firebomb hurled into their armored car in the Piazza di Spagna in central Rome.

Two civilians were also injured, including a state television employee who was attacked and badly beaten by right-wing thugs.

The melee started after youthful gangs broke away from a crowd of 4,000 right-wingers attending the funeral of Angelo Mancio, 27, a neo-fascist shot to death Wednesday by left-wing terrorists.

As the funeral services ended, the youths hurled firebombs at several police armored cars parked nearby. Riot police fought back with tear gas, chasing the youths into the nearby Piazza di Spagna area, site of Rome's most exclusive shops such as Gucci, Fendi and Bulgari and the fashionable Cafe Greco.

In the square at the foot of the Spanish Steps, one of the city's most popular tourist sites, the youths turned on a normally peaceful street, setting off a chain of events that set two others aflame with firebombs.

They also hijacked a passing bus at gunpoint, ordered its driver and passengers off, and then drove it wildly down a normally busy street.

Via Fratelli, causing hundreds of screaming tourists to dive for cover.

Other youths turned over and burned another 25 or so cars in adjacent streets, smashing windows of other cars with hammers.

Several passing cars were burned after their drivers were ordered out at gunpoint.

Rebels claim province

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (UPI) — Afghan Moslem guerrillas have seized control of a province close to the Russian border and killed at least 50 Soviet soldiers in an ambush, rebel leaders based in Pakistan said Friday.

A spokesman for the Hizbi Islami (Islamic Front) said the rebels surprised a Soviet patrol searching for weapons in the Baghlan provincial town of Abkul, killing 50 soldiers and forcing the remaining troops to retreat.

The insurgent spokesman said about 100 rebels were killed in the fighting. He said Baghlan province, near Afghanistan's northern border with the Soviet Union, is now in the hands of the rebels.

"The Russians are in a few pockets in the province but they are surrounded by the Mujahedeen (guerrillas)," said the spokesman.

Baghlan, which stretches across 150 miles of largely agricultural land, is one of 29 provinces that make up Afghanistan.

Another rebel report from the Pakistani town of Peshawar said guerrillas also took control of the region of Kohsar in the north-western Herat province near the Iranian and Soviet borders.

A spokesman for the Jamiat Islami (Islamic Society) said 60 Afghan government troops defected during the takeover of Kohsar Tuesday, bringing with them their Soviet-made AK-47 assault rifles and 30,000 rounds of ammunition.

Another 20 government troops defected to the rebels during an insurgent attack at Islam Qala, on the border with Iran, he said.

Humans top 4.5 billion

WASHINGTON (UPI) — At 12:42 p.m. MST Friday the world's population hit the 4.5 billion mark.

The Environmental Fund, which keeps track of estimated births and deaths with an electronic "clock" on the side of a building in downtown Washington, said the earth's inhabitants are increasing by 7.5 million per month — 90 million per year.

The group said it took more than a million years for the Earth's population to reach the 1 billion mark, 120 years to hit 2 billion, 32 years to reach 3 billion and only 14 years to strike the 4 billion plateau.

The group said it will take 11 years to reach the 5 billion mark.

Colombia issues decree

Cuba offers to mediate

BOGOTA, Colombia (UPI) — Cuba Friday offered political asylum to leftist guerrillas holding 20 diplomats in the Dominican Republic embassy in Bogota, Colombia, after the deadlocked 17-day-old siege, a Colombian spokesman said.

Cuban Ambassador Francisco Ravelo delivered a note from the Cuban government to President Julio Cesar Turbay at the presidential palace in Bogota Friday afternoon.

On leaving the palace, the Cuban ambassador told reporters the note "proposed a formula for mediating" the embassy standoff which was in its 17th day.

He declined to say whether it was a personal note from Cuban President Fidel Castro and said it was up to the Colombian government to disclose any further details.

A Colombian palace spokesman later said "political asylum has been offered to the guerrillas."

The April 19 Movement guerrillas are believed to include various Marxist elements with Castro ad-herents among them, but no evidence has been presented of direct links with Cuba.

The group grew out of the youth movement of the National People's Alliance, a populist party of vague ideology founded by former military dictator Gustavo Rojas Pinilla.

Shortly before the Cuban initiative, Colombia ordered court martial for accused subversives spotted up in an attempt to salvage the deadlocked ransom talks with the guerrillas.

The occupiers of the Dominican Embassy, members of the April 19 Movement, are demanding the government release up to 31 political prisoners and pay a ransom of up to $50 million.

President Turbay and all 13 cabinet ministers signed the decree that was expected to reduce the length of military trials for some of the hundreds of civilian defendants accused under terms of the 1978 National Security Statute.

TIME OUT

They just don't have time at Fort Recovery, Ohio, High School. Time magazine, that is. Answering a request for it, principal Charles Eakins told the school board the magazine was banned a few years back — that "As everybody knows, Time magazine is on the far left and U.S. News is on the right and Newsweek is somewhere in the middle — so we subscribe to Newsweek." Said Superintendent John O'Donnell, "OK, the ban remains." It's a case of better dead than read.

JAY ANSON
...chiller hot seller

'Horror' reporter dies at 58

PALO ALTO, Calif. (UPI) — Jay Anson, 58, whose chilling "Amityville Horror" became an instant best-seller, has died at the Stanford Medical Center.

A hospital spokesman said Thursday night that Anson was admitted to the center on Monday after suffering a heart attack. The author underwent surgery the next day and died Wednesday of heart failure.

Anson, who maintained a regular exercise regimen because of heart trouble, had walked 40 blocks a day on doctor's orders.

The "Amityville Horror" was published by Frenck Hall in 1977 and went through 13 printings. There were 155,000 hardback copies sold and more than 2 million paperbacks. The book was made into a movie.

"My doing the 'Amityville Horror' was a fluke," Anson told an interviewer in Sardi's bar in Manhattan late last year. "I listened to the tale and thought it was a helluva good story."

The work detailed the strange experiences of the Lutzes who said they were terrorized by a demon that possessed their house in Amityville on Long Island.

The Lutzes moved into the house after Ronald DeLoe shot and killed his parents and four brothers and sisters there in November 1974.

Anson related that the Lutzes were terrorized by a green slime and other ugly creatures that tried to drive them out of the house. They finally moved out in 1977.

A couple who moved into the house after the Lutzes refuted the claims. The Cromatys said there were no demons in the house and took reporters on a tour of the house to prove it.

The Cromatys couple were driven curiously to the house, they fled to the house for a glimpse of the unearthly.

Before World War II, Anson was a reporter for the New York Herald Tribune. After the war, he got a job in Hollywood for a movie studio and for the last 15 years worked at a firm that produces featurettes. He wrote some 500 of them.

Anson wrote the feature film "The Great Adventure" which starred Jack Palance.

A New Yorker, he was building a house on Mallorca for himself and his wife, Lesia.

Cutting 'ouches' intent of device

SEATTLE (UPI) — Faculty members of the University of Washington School of Dentistry have invented a device designed to help reduce the "ouches" among dental patients.

The device is a simulated stainless steel mouth that can be used to determine the ability of dental students to use their hands and dental tools in tight and delicate spaces, namely the patient's mouth.

In tests, the dental student uses tweezers to insert metal pins in the sockets of the artificial mouth and then removes them. Each time the tweezers touch any part of the mouth, an automatic counter registers an "ouch."

Students are tested both as to speed and agility.

YOU SCREAM...

When Queen Sirikit of Thailand came to lunch and asked for ice cream, Lower Bell was more embarrassed than the average host would have been. He didn't have any says he never keeps ice cream at his Cohasset, Mass., home where he'd invited the queen to dine because "my wife has a tendency to think that I eat too much." But he made up for it next day, giving the queen a big container of eight flavors put out by Howard Johnson's — of which Bell is a vice president.

TRYING AGAIN

Norman Mailer braved the bitterest snowstorm of the season Thursday night to see the off-Broadway resurrection of the only play he ever wrote. His stage version of "The Deer Park" opened at New York's Westside Mainstage Theater, with Peter Henry Schroeder — late of "The Seduction of Joe Tynan" — costarring with B.J. Camden, Elba Kenney and Ann Hoyt. Mailer killed the Broadway version in 1967 after a short run because he disliked the way it was being handled.

NEW ESPORT

The heir to the Kaiser Industrial empire is an American no longer. Edgar F. Kaiser Jr. — the 37-year-old chief executive of Kaiser Steel Corp., Oakland, Calif. — is marrying a Canadian citizen. A spokesman for the firm confirms the "switch," but declines to give a reason — says it's "a private matter." Kaiser won't have to go far to get to work. He's also chief exec of Kaiser Resources Ltd., which is based in Vancouver, B.C.

ANOTHER

Alan Ladd biographer Beverly Linet picked the fifth anniversary of the death of Susan Hayward Friday to announce her next literary project — Miss Hayward's life and times in Hollywood, which she's writing for "Antheum" publishers. Miss Linet wrote the best-seller, "Ladd, the Life,

SNOWED OUT: There was no room at the Inn Thursday night — not even for the director, of sales. Pat Kiss canceled plans for the evening and headed home for West New York, N.J., when the blizzard hit. She usually stays at the Holiday Inn, but like just about every other hostelry in the Big Apple, it was jammed by the late winter onslaught.

Desert war games end, troops back to bases

FORT IRWIN, Calif. (UPI) — About 25,000 members of the U.S. Marine Corps, Army and Air Force ended a readiness exercise called "Gallant Eagle" Friday and made their way back to their home bases.

The weeklong drills were carried out under supervision of the U.S.

Readiness Command with headquarters at Fort Irwin, an army base on the Mojave Desert.

The scenario for Gallant Eagle called for a joint response of U.S. forces to a call for help from a friendly nation attacked in theory by an enemy power in a desert setting.

First Lady dons robe, flees blaze in hotel

WICHITA, Kan. (UPI) — First Lady Rosalynn Carter reacted to a small fire in her hotel complex Friday much like anyone else faced with smoke in the hall and people crying fire.

She threw on a blue flowered robe, grabbed her purse and headed for the door.

There was one slight difference. Mrs. Carter had the help of Secret Service agents to get down the eight floors of the Wichita Royale, and was able to send one of them back to her room to secure a copy of a speech she was to give a few hours later.

Unruffled and calm, she later delivered her speech at Wichita State University, and stood on the stage afterward shaking hands with well-wishers.

"Very unflappable" was how an aide, Mary Hoyt, described Mrs. Carter.

Mrs. Hoyt said that once the president's wife learned none of the approximately 175 people who fled the building had been hurt, she called the experience "very exciting."

The 3:45 a.m. knock on her door by Secret Service agents who smelled smoke alerted Mrs. Carter, her aide said. Despite smoke that was beginning to fill the room, Mrs. Hoyt said, Mrs. Carter pounded on an adjoining door of her personal assistant Madeline MacBain and the three women escaped in their bathrobes.

"I wasn't alarmed until I saw the smoke and the firemen," Mrs. Hoyt recalled. "I said, 'It can't be, it can't be.'"

The fire alarm sounded as they were going down the stairs to a waiting government car — that transferred them to another downtown hotel, the Holiday Inn Plaza, Mrs. Hoyt said. Once her safety was assured, the president was notified.

A special lab squad and arson team was called to fire scene, even though fire officials stressed that initial examination showed no indication of arson. The blaze caused an estimated $20,000 damage to the structure and $10,000 to contents.

Flags worn on shoulder

NORTH PERRY, Ohio (UPI) — A firm that fired 13 electricians for refusing to remove American flag decals from their hard hats plans to distribute shoulder flag patches to its workers, an official said Friday.

"We're not anti-flag. We're not anti-American. We just don't want 'em (flags) on the hard hats," said Clinton Musgrove, secretary-manager of the National Electrical Contractors Association.

Buzzards due back in Ohio

HINCKLEY, Ohio (UPI) — Every March 15, a flock of ugly, smelly buzzards flies in from sunny Florida. And every year, thousands of people turn out in buzzard T-shirts, with buzzard mating horns, to welcome the birds home.

This year will be no different, veteran buzzard-watcher Lucille Stokes predicted Thursday.

"They sure are ugly up close, but when you see them fly, they float on the air so beautifully, and we'll be ready when they arrive," she said proudly.

Rangers at Hinckley Reservation — where the buzzards return each spring to nest and lay eggs — expect a crowd of more than 40,000 to greet the birds on Buzzard Day Saturday.

Although the main flock won't arrive for several days afterwards, park rangers say a pilot bird or two, flying ahead, will make it to Hinckley in time for Saturday's festivities.

Sunday, the returning buzzards will be guests of honor at a pancake and sausage breakfast held each year by the Hinckley Chamber of Commerce at Hinckley Elementary School. Close to 5,000 people are expected for it.

Naturalists say the Hinckley flock, numbering close to 75 birds, returns to nest in the treetops and shale cliffs along the Rocky River in the Hinckley Reservation.

This year the honor of official "Buzzard Spotter" goes to Cleveland Metropark Ranger Lt. James French, who will stand his honored vigil at the Buzzard Roost in the park.

Visitors to Hinckley can buy such Buzzard Day necessities as buzzard T-shirts, maps to buzzard roosts and buzzard horns that make a bellowing buzzard mating-call. Hotcakes are the favorite food.

Hinckley residents say the birds, who eat dead animals, are ugly, bad smelling and vermin infested.

Concordia Choir in concert

The Concordia Choir of Portland will participate in the worship service at Immanuel Lutheran Church at 9:30 a.m. Sunday. Idaho students, appearing with the choir are (left to right) Julie Schwartz of Hazelton, Brian Leder of Burley and Anne Leon of Rupert. The 41-voice collegiate ensemble is under the direction of Dale Fisk. Featured in the choir's program are two liturgical pieces, "The Missa Secunda" by Hans Leo Hassler and "The Passion According to St.

John" by Thomas Luis de Victoria. One other major work, a collection of Christmas songs and reading called "Gaudete" by Anders Chrwall, will be performed with an accompanying woodwind trio. A number of shorter anthems, motets and hymn settings, representing a variety of musical styles, complete the program. Most of the choir's program will be simultaneously sung and signed in sign language for the deaf. The public is invited to attend.

WOODROW FLETCHER

Christian Center sponsors estate planning seminar

TWIN FALLS — Rev. Woodrow J. Fletcher will conduct a finance and estate planning seminar at Christian Center of Magic Valley March 16 and 17.

Rev. Fletcher, an ordained minister of the Assemblies of God, is stewardship consultant at Northwest College in Kirkland, Wash.

Subjects discussed will be new estate and income tax laws, personal finances, money management, estate planning through wills, trusts, insurance, probate regulations, tax-wise giving and Christian stewardship.

Rev. Fletcher will conduct a stewardship seminar at the 9:30 a.m. Sunday School March 16. He will speak at the 10:30 a.m. morning worship service on "God's Investment in You." His topic at the 6 p.m. evening worship service will be "Your Money and Your Life."

He will conduct a seminar March 17 at 7 p.m.

Pastor Sheldon Slagel invites the public to attend. There is no charge and personal interviews will be available to those attending.

Manuscripts filmed

In school they are still sometimes called "the Dark Ages," the Medieval or Middle Ages between 476 A.D. and 1450—when education was less esteemed than now. And it fell to the monks of various religious orders to preserve the very foundations of Western culture and civilization.

With painstaking efforts and sometimes exquisite beauty, the Medieval monk-copiers sought to ensure that the important documents, whether sermons from an early bishop or secular letters and treatises were preserved, circulated and handed down from generation to generation.

And now another group of monks, monks out of Saint John's Abbey, Collegeville, Minnesota, is practicing that same kind of preservation—this time using high technology.

It was the Benedictines who did most of the copying and preservation during the Middle Ages.

At the abbey, the largest Benedictine Abbey in the United States, the Hill Monks of the Benedictine Library has been carrying on the task of microfilming of the very manuscripts so painstakingly copied and preserved by the Medieval monastic orders.

The idea for the microfilming project, says the Rev. Julian Plante, director of the project, came from Pope Pius XII, who had already begun the task of microfilming the Vatican manuscript library in 1956.

"Why don't you, in line with your 15th century tradition, go into the hills and valleys, go into the monasteries and small religious communities and do the same thing," Plante quoted the pope as suggesting.

"The problem was twofold, according to Plante.

In the first place, many of the manuscripts that has been preserved in the monastic libraries were disintegrating and threatened to crumble to nothing if handled.

And secondly, there was the problem of access. While the monastic libraries contain extensive documents, scholars do not know what kind of material is in what monastery.

But using the technology of a Xerox Corp. subsidiary, University Microfilms, the monks at the Hill Monastic Manuscript Library have begun filming the rare manuscripts and making them more readily available to scholars.

Plante said the monks only film "handwritten manuscripts that generally predate the invention of printing."

There are exceptions, however, he said and noted that one of the more interesting finds the Library has found are letters from Protestant reformer Martin Luther to the Bishop of Malta.

After carrying out filming projects in Austria, Spain, Malta, Ethiopia, England and Germany, the library has amassed the records of some 60,000 Medieval manuscripts and art pieces, including the monastic copies of works by Aristotle, Thomas Aquinas, Horace and Ovid.

Church of Christ hosts Concert Choir concert

TWIN FALLS — The Concert Choir from Columbia Christian College will perform in concert at the Church of Christ March 22 at 7:30 p.m.

Columbia Christian College is an independent liberal arts college located in Portland, Ore. The 47-voice Concert Choir, directed by Dick Dalzell, is currently on a 12-day tour of eastern Oregon, southern Idaho and Montana. Among the places where they will be performing on this tour are the state capitol rotundas of both Idaho and Montana.

The program will encompass a wide variety of religious music. Featured compositions will be "Ye Were Sometimes Darkness (Walk as Children of Light)" by Randall Thompson; "Make Us One," based on the popular "We Are One in the Spirit" by Paul Christensen, and "In That Great Gettin' Up Morning" by Heinz Werner Zimmerman.

Selections will range from music written in 1586 to 1977, from double choir and antiphonal music to solo and ensemble works. Included in the program will be folk hymns, negro spirituals, Renaissance motets, early New England fuging tunes and concert arrangements of contemporary hymn favorites.

Horoscope

Recreation best bet for Scorpios today; seek advice, Libras

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Make a point to do something good to show your interest and compassion to those who are less fortunate than yourself. Make sure no one tries to pull the wool over your eyes.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) A good time to be in the company of old friends you admire. Go to the right source for valuable information you need.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Take time to study a new project that could give you increased abundance in the days ahead. Engage in favorite hobby.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Put a fine idea to work and gain the support of congenials. Don't do anything that could jeopardize harmony at home.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Take care of chores early in the day so you'll have time for recreation later. Make new acquaintances of worth.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Contract good friends you have not seen in some time and deepen relationships. Avoid one who could give you much trouble.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) A good time to plan for the future. Study your surroundings and make needed repairs. Keep active and be free of boredom.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Ideal day to improve conditions at home. Discuss practical plans with friends and get their advice. Strive for happiness.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Recreation is best for you during the early part of the day. Don't start a new enterprise in the evening and avoid trouble.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Make sure not to react bitterly to remarks made by a careless person. Study a new venture that could be lucrative in the future.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Talking over mutual problems with friends brings right solutions now. Take steps to improve health and appearance.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 18) Make needed repairs to property and possess things that will add to their value. Take no risks with your reputation.

PISCES (Feb. 19 to Mar. 20) Get an early start at your activities and cut down on tensions by working at an even pace. Establish more order around you.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... ...he or she will be one who can comprehend the problems of others and will have the ability to help solve them. Equip with a good education along social service lines for best results. Give good religious training early in life.

What's what

Phony stamp output purchased by society

Few forgers ever pulled off a criminal caper as cunning as the operations of Raul Ch. De Thuin in Mexico. Law there forbade the forging of stamps and "wild" for postage, but not other stamps. So Raul devoted his arduous efforts to collectors' specimens. A conservative estimate puts his take-at-over $3 million. So ruinous was his spread of phony stamps worldwide that the American Philatelic Society reportedly bought him out—dies, etchings, papers, stamp inventory—for a sizable but undisclosed sum.

That twist of orange or lemon peel to taste up a drink originally was known as "zest," and if you look up zest in the dictionary, you'll note it's exactly so defined.

GUARD DOG

In old Rome, a well-trained guard dog was worth more money than a human slave. It got better treatment, too, might add.

Q: What proportion of the prime-time TV commercials now are built around celebrities?
A: Three out of five.

Q: How much is the average new-car payment in this country now?
A: $200.

Was the rule for many years at Mount Holyoke, the academy for girls in New England, that no student could tarry for more than three minutes in front of a mirror.

DENTISTS

Dental schools now teach their students to work while sitting down. At least part of the time. But older dentists, trained otherwise, say it's almost impossible for them to change to sit-down techniques. Regrettably, fairly common among the more seasoned dentists are the foot, leg and back ailments.

Stock market slows to idle

NEW YORK (UPI) — The stock market went into a slow slide Friday while it waited for administration mechanics to fix the throttle on inflation.

The White House announcement of its anti-inflation package, disclosed after the market closed, contained no great surprises for Wall Street. Budget cuts and a crackdown on credit were main elements of the package.

The Dow Jones Industrial average closed with a gain of 2.13 points to 811.69. It finished the week a loser, thanks mainly to its loss of more than 16 points in the previous two sessions.

As the stock market opened Citibank announced a three-quarter point rise in the prime lending rate to 18 1/2 percent. Just 24 hours earlier Chase Manhattan Bank set an 18 percent rate, up a half point.

The Citibank news gave the market an immediate jolt, but predictions have been widespread in Wall Street that a 20 percent prime is not far away.

In another development the Commerce Department said industrial production in February rose 0.2 percent, thanks to a 19 percent surge in white oil refined off Newfoundland and this week a company executive said further work will be done there. Gulf is part of the group.

Third most active was Hughes Tool, off 1 1/2 to 56 1/2. A block of 326,900 moved at 56.

Sun Co. was off 1 1/2 to 74 1/2. The company said it had completed a well in the North Sea Sector.

Water was off 1/2 to 35 1/2. It announced a 2 1/2-cent boost in the quarterly dividend.

ASARCO was off 1/2 to 37. It said it had cut zinc and copper prices.

Mining issues, volatile all week, tended lower. McIntyre Mines was off 2 1/2 to 6 1/2. Hecla was off 2 to 31 1/2.

Abbott Laboratories was up 1/2 to 47. The company boosted its quarterly dividend five cents.

At the top was Texaco, unchanged at 57 1/2. Second was Gulf, off 1 1/2 to 43 1/2. Others among the active list included Mobil, off 1 1/2 to 74 1/2, and Exxon, off 1/2 to 60 1/2.

RCA Corp was up 1/4 to 22 1/2. It announced a 1 1/2 percent rise in television sets at the factory level.

Humana was unchanged at 35 1/2. It reported sharply higher earnings for the quarter and half year.

Louisiana Land & Exploration was off 1/4 to 42 1/2. It said it was abandoning the Crown Zellerbach No. 1 well in Cotton Valley, La.

Federated Department stores was off 1/4 to 22 1/2. It said its grocery unit was selling 11 stores in northern California.

Cessna Aircraft was off 1/4 to 21 1/2. The company announced layoffs of 750 workers because of a production cutback.

Oil import fee-unpopular

Congress promises cutbacks

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Democratic leaders in Congress Friday pledged to smooth the way for the spending cuts President Carter proposed in his anti-inflation package and promised a balanced budget in fiscal 1981.

But Carter's plan for a stiff oil import fee — over which Congress has no control — was unpopular.

Republicans said they have wanted a balanced budget for years. Some called Carter's plan a fraud.

House Majority Leader Jim Wright of Texas said the Democratic leadership worked closely with Carter in designing the package.

"We have assured the president that we will work unflinchingly together to produce and hold a balanced budget for the coming fiscal year," he said. "This alone will not stop inflation but it is a necessary beginning."

Sen. Edmund Muskie, D-Maine, chairman of the Senate Budget Committee, said he could "guarantee" his panel would recommend a balanced budget and that he would use all he could to gain its approval.

In Chicago, Sen. Edward Kennedy said Carter is trying to give the impression of "doing something" about inflation. He said the White House budget-balancing plan will accomplish little while hurting many people.

Chairman Warren Magnuson of the Senate Appropriations Committee disagreed with Carter's plan to raise gasoline taxes by 10 cents a gallon. Magnuson, D-Wash., said this would feed inflation and cause the oil producing nations to raise prices.

Magnuson said the Federal Reserve's policy of raising interest rates to slow the economy was "a travesty" killing small businesses and farmers, and making it impossible for young families to buy homes.

Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash., said the oil import fee will not reduce gas consumption as much as Carter estimates. But he said Carter's program was "a very good beginning."

Gas price hike by May 15

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter imposed an oil fee Friday that will cost the American motorist 10 cents a gallon at the gas pump by May 15 and said he will ask Congress to replace it later with a federal gasoline tax.

Administration officials said the decision "will focus the fee on the greatest conservation potential without unduly affecting the economy."

Carter also will ask Congress to increase the federal tax on gasoline and diesel fuel, now 4 cents a gallon, by 10 cents a gallon to 14 cents. The oil import fee will remain in effect until that tax is enacted by Congress.

Either way — with the oil import fee or the higher gasoline taxes — the price at the pumps will be up a dime a gallon.

Administration officials said they hope the new gasoline tax will produce $3 billion in revenues in the current fiscal year and about $10 billion in fiscal 1981 as Carter attempts to balance the budget.

Carter's imposition of the oil fee will cost oil importers $4.62 a barrel at the dock beginning Saturday.

The fee, a key component of Carter's new program to deal with soaring inflation, will have the direct effect of raising consumer prices by a half of one percentage point on an annual basis in 1980. With side effects thrown in, the increase will be about three-quarters of one percentage point.

The president, under the Trade Expansion Act and Emergency Petroleum Allocation Act, imposed a fee of $4.62 a barrel on all imported crude and $4.20 a barrel on imported gasoline beginning Saturday.

Prime rate goes to 18.5

NEW YORK (UPI) — The prime rate for business loans went to 18 1/2 percent Friday, reflecting nervous borrowing by business and the increasing cost and scarcity of funds that banks have available to meet the demand.

Citibank, the nation's second-largest bank, leaptfrogged the half-point increase to 18 1/4 percent by No. 3 Chase Manhattan Thursday, raising the rate for loans to top corporate customers to 18 1/2 percent.

President Carter announces his new plans for fighting inflation

Fed moves to dampen lending to big banks

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In an unprecedented move to bolster President Carter's anti-inflation program, the Federal Reserve Friday announced a steep 3 percent surcharge to discourage large banks from borrowing its money at bargain rates.

It left unchanged at 13 percent the discount rate — the interest it charges these banks — which was set in mid-February.

The effect is that banks would have to borrow from the Fed at 16 percent more in line with other lending rates.

The so-called federal reserve discount "window" is where member banks borrow to maintain assets needed to conduct operations — including lending money.

Because the discount rate is 13 percent — much lower than other interest rates in the economy — member banks previously were able to borrow from the Fed at the lower rate — then lend that money at higher rates to corporate customers.

The 3 percent surcharge will apply to borrowings by banks with deposits of $500 million or more for more than one week in a row or more than four weeks in any calendar quarter.

By making it more expensive, the surcharge is expected to cause banks to curtail this borrowing. That, in turn, could cause them to restrict their own lending — thereby helping reduce inflation.

The federal reserve chose not to increase the discount rate — as it has done five times in the past year — because the first-time such a surcharge has been imposed on the discount rate.

The Federal Reserve Board has come under criticism recently for allowing member banks to borrow its money excessively.

60 million Americans affected

Controls to restrain borrowing

WASHINGTON (UPI) — At President Carter's request, the Federal Reserve Board Friday imposed new controls indirectly limiting the ability of more than 60 million Americans to use their credit cards and take out other forms of consumer credit.

The Federal Reserve also called for voluntary lending restraints by major banks, tightened rules affecting certain large bank holdings and extended its rules to restrain credit by non-member banks and money market mutual funds.

No controls were imposed directly on Americans using credit cards.

The controls apply instead to the banks and financial institutions which issue the cards.

If those institutions increase the total amount of credit they have outstanding, under the new rules they will have to make a deposit with the Federal Reserve equal to 15 percent of that increase.

That will raise their costs and administration officials expect them to respond by rationing credit themselves.

They could do this by not issuing any new cards, withdrawing cards they have issued, requiring higher down payments from customers, faster repayment or other methods.

"Just as our governments have been borrowing to make ends meet," the president said Friday in calling for credit controls, "so have individual Americans. But when we try to beat inflation with borrowed money, we just make the problem worse."

Estimates of the number of credit cards in the hands of Americans range from 600 million to 700 million. According to one estimate, the average American has several.

At the end of 1979, about $55 billion in so-called "revolving" credit loans generally involving credit cards — was outstanding.

The consumer credit controls will apply to credit cards issued by banks, retailers and all companies, overdraft and special check-type credit plans, unsecured loans, loans for which collateral is already owned by the borrower, open account and 30-day credit and credit secured by financial assets when collateral is not purchased with the proceeds of the loan.

Jackson vows protest by poor; Kennedy raps Carter's proposals

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Rev. Jesse Jackson said Friday President Carter's anti-inflation program is a burden to poor people and promised a protest march on Washington of thousands of jobless youths.

"We have no choice but to hit the streets again," Jackson said.

Jackson, head of the Chicago-based Operation Push, was in the White House audience for Carter's announcement of the anti-inflation program.

Jackson said Carter was "fighting inflation with unemployment. It costs more to fight inflation with unemployment, not just in terms of money, but in pride and dignity."

"How can you ask an unemployed person for more discipline? What is he going to do, eat less?" Jackson said. Jackson called for a march of "thousands of unemployed kids from the White House to the Capitol" on May 17.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy said Carter's anti-inflation proposals are "too little, too late and too unfair."

Kennedy, who was campaigning in advance of the March 18 primary election — much of his day prior to Carter's announcement attacking what he expected the president to say.

Once he heard it on television, Kennedy promptly dismissed it.

"The president's address to the nation on inflation is a message which is basically too little, too late and too unfair the American people," Kennedy told a news conference.

He disagreed with Carter's contention that a balanced budget can be realized in 1981.

"I think it is virtually impossible to balance the 1981 budget, although I do believe we can move toward a balanced budget in 1982," he said.

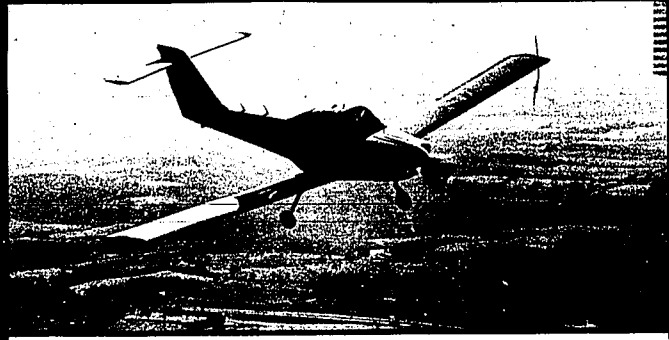

Kennedy said the Carter proposal was "too little" because the president acknowledged it could only lower inflation marginally during the coming months.

It was too late, Kennedy said, because the rate of inflation has already gone from 5 to nearly 20 percent during Carter's presidency.

And it is too unfair, Kennedy said, "because the areas which have been singled out for surgery in the federal budget will fall upon those that are in the greatest need in our society."

He repeated his call for mandatory controls on wages, prices, profits, dividends, interest rates and rents, and said it was the only effective way to deal with the problem.

Death's Angel stalked wards

Hospital workers suspended in probe

DAVID BRANDNESS outlines probe

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — At least five employees of Sunrise Hospital were suspended in an investigation of a nurse nicknamed "Death's Angel."

The nurse so nicknamed allegedly withdrew life support systems from critically ill patients while other staff members placed bets on when they would die, authorities said Friday.

Homicide Lt. John Conners of the Metropolitan Police Department said subpoenas were issued for both persons and records.

"There is an on-going investigation but we are not going to release names, dates, sexes or numbers of the people involved," he said.

However, law enforcement sources told UPI as many as five employees were suspended.

David Brandness, administrator of Sunrise Hospital, Nevada's largest private hospital with 666 beds and 2,000 employees, confirmed he had received three subpoenas for medical records from the hospital.

It was on the graveyard shift—the late evening and early morning hours that "Death's Angel" reportedly stopped life support systems for critically ill patients in a 10-bed unit on the second floor of the hospital.

How many patients died is not yet known. The investigation started when a nurse reportedly went to police after overhearing a conversation about the death of a woman March 1, followed by the death of a man a day later.

She heard two hospital staff members discussing the woman's death, and also heard a remark that life support equipment had to be switched on and off several times before the patient died.

The nurse also overheard the same employees mention the name of the patient who probably would be next on the list of the "Death's Angel."

Sources said the same nurse later observed a significant drop in the vital signs of the patient whose name she heard mentioned. When she reported to the unit supervisor, she was told not to be concerned. But she later learned the patient had died.

Nevada Human Resources Director Ralph DiSibilo dispatched three state officers from Carson City to meet with hospital administrator Brandness.

"This may be an isolated case of a deranged person and does not reflect the management of the hospital," said DiSibilo.

Hospital officials were told by District Attorney Bob Miller that the grand jury would take evidence on the matter next week, according to informed sources.

Law enforcement sources said some personnel at Sunrise Hospital were questioned Friday at the police department.

Meanwhile, fellow employees at the hospital expressed disbelief at the developments.

"We're all shocked," said John Little, chief of the intensive care unit on the graveyard shift. "I don't know what to say. We're all pulling together."

Convicted slayers sue Utah official

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — Summit County near the Silver Creek ranch road in December of 1965, Lance and Kelbach were never charged with the Holtz killing or others the confessed to in the film. They were convicted of a double murder in a bar, and are serving life sentences for that crime.

Hansen said the documentary could make it impossible to find an unbiased jury for the Holtz trial if KUTV were to continue airing the film before jurors are selected.

"It's against the state's interest as well as the defendants' interests to have the film aired before the trial begins," said Hansen. He said additional broadcasts could prevent the state from getting "the prosecution and conviction we think were entitled to."

Third District Court Judge Bryan Croft, who issued the temporary order preventing additional broadcasts of the film, has scheduled a Wednesday hearing on whether the restraining order should be made permanent.

Once the trial starts, however, Hansen plans to use the film as evidence against the pair in court.

The attorney general said the documentary could be used in court without biasing the jury because "defense attorneys would then have chance to present their side of the case."

Utah law struck by appeals court

DENVER (UPI) — The Tenth U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals has struck down Utah law which allowed publicly funded abortions only when a woman's life was in danger.

In its ruling Thursday, the Denver court said the statute is unconstitutional because it is too severe a restriction of public funding for abortions. It overturned a 1977 ruling by Federal District Judge Aldon Anderson in Salt Lake City that the restrictive law was constitutional.

The circuit court said women receiving public assistance must not be "deterred" from having abortions. That category includes abortions performed for a wide variety of medical reasons, including medical problem that do not threaten the pregnant woman's life.

"It is apparent that short of life endangering circumstances, there are many other and different and severe conditions which have a direct bearing on what may be the proper medical solution," said the court.

However, the court said Utah can legally fund "non-therapeutic" abortions, which are performed simply because a woman does not want to have a child.

Assistant Utah Attorney General Paul Tinker said the state will appeal the ruling to the U.S. Supreme Court. Tinker said he was surprised the circuit court ruled on the public funding issue because the Supreme Court has already agreed to review a restrictive statute similar to the Utah law.

And Tinker said the circuit court's action won't have much impact on state funding. "There are not that many abortions in Utah," he said.

"The battle over the Utah statute began in 1977 when a woman identified only as "D.R." filed a federal court suit claiming the statute was unconstitutional.

On July 6, Anderson ruled against D.R. He said the law did not prevent women from getting abortions, it simply limited the type of abortions Utah would pay for. D.R. appealed to the circuit court.

But the appeals court said Utah must comply with constitutional guidelines on abortion when deciding what type of abortions it will pay for.

"One thing started down the road to provide health care for indigent persons, it came with the constitutional restrictions as to how it must be done," said the court.

UPI challenges closing of court

UKIAH, Calif. (UPI) — United Press International, challenging a California law used to exclude the press and public from preliminary hearings, Friday petitioned a judge to open the courtroom to closed proceedings against accused kidnapper Kenneth E. Parnell.

"Parnell, 48, is charged in the abductions of two boys, Steven Stayner, 13, who lived with him for seven years, and Timmy White, 5, kidnapped one month ago. Both boys are now back home.

Parnell was in court Thursday for a preliminary hearing to determine if there was enough evidence to hold him for trial in the seizing of Timmy."

When Parnell's court-appointed defense attorney asked Ukiah Justice Court Judge Jerome Luther to clear the courtroom of press and public, UPI reporter Steven A. Capps objected and asked to remain in the room.

Luther denied the request and cleared the courtroom.

UPI general counsel Bruce W. Sanford said in Cleveland, Ohio, "We intend to seek an appeal for what we consider a discriminatory and preposterous courtroom closing."

The UPI attorney handling the case, Edwin A. Heafey, Friday asked Luther to reconsider Thursday's decision and requested a hearing Monday, the day before Parnell's preliminary hearing is to resume.

A state law passed in 1972 gives defendants the right to close preliminary hearings at their request.

In recent years the law has been declared unconstitutional in California municipal courts, including several instances in Alameda County in the San Francisco Bay Area. But superior court judges have refused to overturn the law.

Heafey, who has a similar challenge pending before a state appellate court, said he will again challenge the law as unconstitutional. Because 97 percent of all felony cases in California last year were decided before ever going to trial, Heafey said it is imperative that pre-trial hearings be open to public scrutiny.

In San Francisco the preliminary hearing last year for Dan White, the killer of Mayor George Moscone and Supervisor Harvey Milk, was closed at his lawyer's request. The media protested in vain.

The most notable recent closures in southern California occurred in the case of defendants belonging to the Synanon organization who are accused of using a rattlesnake in an attack against a lawyer and in an organized crime murder case.

Gulf, union adjourn latest strike talks

HOUSTON (UPI) — Gulf Oil Corp. and the striking Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers union have adjourned their latest talks toward ending the 10-week-old nationwide refinery strike.

The union president has returned to his Denver headquarters, spokesman said Friday.

"The meetings they were having yesterday adjourned late last night," Gulf spokesman said. "Face-to-face discussions at this level have adjourned. The company and the union expected to be together by telephone sometime (today) to further discuss what steps might be appropriate."

Neither side had released any details about results of the two-day talks at a secret location in Houston. A union spokesman confirmed that OCAW President Robert Goss had returned to Denver but Goss and other union spokesmen were unavailable for comment.

Officials had indicated the union and Gulf made the latest attempt to end the strike because Gulf has been an industry leader in previous settlements and has negotiated a preliminary meeting separately with OCAW on two other occasions.

The last Gulf offer was rejected Feb. 23 by the union, which wants increased pay and health insurance coverage. The strike began after negotiations failed under a clause allowing renegotiation of pay and benefits in its second year of the current 2-year contract.

OCAW has settled nationally with 19 smaller oil companies but has reached no agreement with a major company that could set the pattern for an industrywide end to the walkout by an estimated 60,000 workers.

The strike started Jan. 8 and has been marred by the shooting of a Chalmette, La., refinery supervisor. A striker was charged with murder. There also was a knitting at a Port Arthur, Texas, refinery, and minor violence elsewhere.

Study shows Idaho tops Northwest growth

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — Bonneville Power Administrator Sterling Munro said Friday that Idaho was the fastest growing state in the Pacific Northwest in the last decade. Munro said a newly-completed BPA study shows the state's growth will continue to exceed Oregon and Washington in the 1980s. "Idaho population is expected to increase by 21.1 percent in the 1980-90 decade, as compared to 17 percent for Washington and 16.6 percent for Oregon," Munro said. "High birth rates have been and will continue to be a contributing factor in Idaho's higher rate of growth, but the diversified expansion of the Idaho economy has played an important role as well," he said. The study is prepared by the BPA staff every three years. It is an important part of economic studies used by utility-planners as well as those in the public and private sectors, BPA said. Munro said the new Idaho study indicates that lumber and food processing, the traditional mainstays of Idaho's manufacturing sector, will remain the largest single industries. But he said they are expected to decline in relative importance in coming years as the electronics industry, including heavy machinery, asserts a major role in the state's economic development. "As in the past, Ada and Kootenai counties will be the leaders in population growth among the larger counties," Munro said. "But as a group, nearly all of the counties in the southeastern corner of the state will exceed the rate of growth of the state as a whole during the 1980-90 decade. Munro said that due to mining development in the area, "Custer will be the fastest growing county in the state during the 1980's, according to the study." He added that what is unique about the study is that projections of population growth are based on employment projections. "We assume that people aren't going to come to the Northwest unless jobs are available," he said. Similar studies were conducted for Washington and Oregon earlier. A study encompassing the 12 counties in Western Montana will be finished in April.

Jones says he would introduce bill allowing use of 'alien' labor

ST. ANTHONY (UPI) — Republican 2nd Congressional District candidate Jim Jones today said he would introduce legislation to allow farmers to legally use alien labor for his district. While campaigning in the St. Anthony area, Jones said "this type of legislation is needed in order to ensure that the farmer has an adequate labor supply." The Jerome attorney said that legislation he proposes would require the U.S. Labor Department to issue work permits to alien farm workers when domestic labor cannot be found. He said the measure would not take jobs away from domestic farm workers, but would provide jobs to alien laborers when domestic workers can't or won't accept the employment. "Such a program would merely legalize the presently existing situation," Jones said. "Many farmers in southern Idaho do have to utilize the services of illegal aliens because they cannot get domestic help and they always run the risk of having their farm workers gathered up during a critical migration period. The candidate said that the work permits would be available only for agricultural labor. He said the proposed legislation would allow an alien to stay in the country as long as he was actually holding down a job and the measure would not allow aliens to become eligible for domestic welfare programs.

News briefs

Bianco gets suspended sentence, Salvation Army time

BOISE (UPI) — U.S. District Judge Marion Callister Friday gave Joseph Bianco a one-year suspended sentence and 30 days in the custody of the Salvation Army here for filing a false income tax return. Bianco, a former Bank of Idaho official, had been charged with two counts of subscribing to false income tax returns — one for Western Bank Corp. for 1972 and the other for his 1973 individual return. In handing down the sentence, Callister also requires Bianco to pay a $5,000 fine and serve a one-year probationary period. Callister also dismissed count one of the indictment against Bianco, which had accused him of assisting in the preparation of a false tax return for the Bank of Idaho. That charge accused him of falsely claiming a $5,000 business deduction for the bank, an amount that allegedly was a political contribution. Bianco had pleaded no contest to count two, which accused him of signing a false personal income tax return for 1973. The government charged him with reporting wages of $70,000, of dividends of $100 and interest of $1,181.92 and other income totaling $28,473.66. The indictment also accused him of gaining $20,558 from the sale of a house which the government claimed Bianco had falsely claimed as his personal residence. The government said Bianco had received $21,729 in furniture and merchandise from R. Alan Brown and lumber from James Brown, Jr. and a 1970 Lincoln from the Bank of Idaho all of which he did not claim on his 1973 return.

PUC may get help on phone hike request

BOISE (UPI) — Residents of Brunau may help the Idaho Public Utilities Commission decide if their telephone rates should be increased in order to enlarge their telephone system exchange. The commissioners proposed to deny the petition to expand service to include toll-free calls to Mountain Home unless residents show a strong interest in the proposal and a willingness to pay higher phone rates. Gem State Utilities Co., serving the Brunau area, would have to be compensated for its loss of revenues and the expense of putting in new trunk lines to hook up the community to Mountain Bell Telephone Co.'s system in Mountain Home if commissioners approve the expanded system. Gem State would increase the current one-party residential rate from $10 to $22 an hour while the one-party business rate from $18 to $40 if the system were expanded. The commission staff has surveyed residents and the results indicated that 79 percent of those participating are opposed to the higher rates that would result from an enlarged system. Information supplied by the phone company also indicates that 16.8 percent of Gem State's 196 Brunau customers made no calls to Mountain Home, that 50.5 percent of the customers made three or fewer calls and that 80.1 percent made 10 or fewer calls. The company's data also showed that one-half of the customers placed only eight percent of the calls and that 10 percent of the customers placed 40 percent of the calls.

Utah Power says it isn't selling Gem State holdings

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — Officials at Utah Power and Light Company say several news outlets in Idaho are reportedly spreading erroneous information that the utility will sell its holdings in the Gem State. While declining to name the news agencies involved, UP&L spokesman Grant-Pendleton-Friday said. The power company wants to "put a stamp" on reports that the firm will divest itself of its Idaho assets. Those assets constitute about 20 percent of UP&L's system. "We have no intention of selling our Idaho system," Pendleton said. "And we believe that the Utah Public Service Commission lacks the jurisdiction to order us to sell our Idaho holdings." Earlier this month, the PSC told the electric company and the State Division of Public Utilities to prepare reports on the ramifications of UP&L divestment of its assets in Idaho. Some Utah consumer groups have alleged that Utah ratepayers are subsidizing electric service in Idaho. They claimed that forcing UP&L to discontinue service in the Gem State would reduce rates for Utah customers.

Pendleton said those claims are partly true. "Utah has been coming nearer to paying its own way than has Idaho," the utility spokesman said. "The Idaho commission has not granted the company enough revenues to keep that operation even." But he denied that Utahns are required to pay part of the electric bill for Idaho residents. "It is not that Utah is subsidizing Idaho customers," Pendleton said. "That would clearly be illegal."

Human impact on environment pushing birds this way

MOSCOW (UPI) — The impact of human beings on the environment, in both beneficial and detrimental ways, has pushed birds from the eastern United States into the Northwest, says a University of Idaho scientist. Earl J. Larrison, associate professor of zoology, says increases in both the kinds and numbers of eastern birds found in the West have accelerated since 1950. This includes the blue jay, barred owl, some warblers and vireos, he said.

Larrison theorizes that the movement has been prompted "about 50-50" by human development of Canada's prairie provinces and destructive alterations of the birds' normal habitat. "Through planting of orchards and windbreaks along the region where the northern prairies meet the coniferous forests, man has created a natural bridge over which the birds can move," he said. Many eastern birds previously were stopped in their migrations west by either the evergreen forests of the North or the vast treeless prairies of mid-continent, he said. The deciduous trees planted by settlers, however, have expanded the cover needed by the birds. Larrison will present his theory explaining the influx of birds at a joint meeting of the Northwest Scientific Association and Pacific Northwest Bird and Mammal Society scheduled for later this month in Moscow.

Glenns Ferry man charged with burning ex-wife's house

GLENN'S FERRY (UPI) — A 24-year-old man charged with first-degree arson after his ex-wife's house burned was arraigned in magistrates court Thursday and was bound over for trial next week. Charlie Owings, 54, and his wife Mary were divorced at 9 a.m. on Jan.

24 and at 11:42 that morning, the house in Glenns Ferry that Mary was awarded in the case caught fire and burned. Owings was charged with first-degree arson by Elmore County Prosecutor Alan D. Wilson. During Thursday's hearing, Wilson said one witness, Mrs. Joe Crandall, who with her husband runs a service station in Glenns Ferry, testified that she sold Owings five gallons of gasoline that she pumped into a can about 10 minutes before the fire was reported.

QUESTION... Following my husband's death the Government paid his G.I. insurance to my mother-in-law. Why wasn't it paid to me as his wife?

ANSWER...

Your mother-in-law was obviously the beneficiary of the policy which was issued to your husband while he was in service and which he kept in force after his discharge. Although veterans' death benefits are paid to eligible widows, insurance is not a government benefit and is paid to a beneficiary named by the insured. The Veterans Administration is continually warning veterans that they will not accept a beneficiary named in a will or power of attorney or any other document. At death they will pay the insurance to the beneficiary endorsed on the policy.

LSU to meet Louisville for midwest crown

By MIKE RAUBIN
UPI Sports Writer

HOUSTON (UPI) — Second-ranked Louisiana State, running a delay offense for the final 13 minutes of the game, relied on the power and bulk of Durand Macklin and Dewayne Scates to overcome 14th-ranked Missouri Friday night 68-63 and move into the finals of the Midwest Regional against four other teams.

The LSU Tigers advanced to the regional championship with a 66-55 overtime victory over 18th-ranked Texas A&M. Darrell Griffith, who missed a would-be winning shot at the end of regulation, scored 6 points in the overtime to pace Louisville.

The LSU Tigers, doing little except shooting long-range jumpers during the first half, fell behind at intermission 40-39 but quickly jumped in front.

Then, leading by 2 at 32-30 with just over 13 minutes to play, the Tigers chose to use their play tactics and it was successful enough to bring them their 25 victory of the year against five defeats.

With 13:06 to play, Macklin made a stiff shot and was fouled by Missouri's 6-11 center, Steve Stipanovich. It was Stipanovich's fourth foul and he had to leave the game.

Macklin made the free throw to complete a three-point play and paced LSU in front by 5 points. Scates and Macklin then combined for LSU's next 5 points and the Tigers ran their lead to 7.

Missouri cut its deficit to 2 points before Greg Cook made two free throws with 36 second left that effectively put the game out of reach.

Scates led LSU with 17 points while Macklin had 16. Missouri's Mark Dressler, who scored 31 points in his learn's upset of Notre Dame last weekend, stored 20 and Larry Drew added 16 for the Tigers, who finished the season with a 25-6 record.

Griffith, Louisville's All-America guard, scored his team's first 10 points and the Cardinals threatened to destroy the Aggies in the early going. But after trailing by 10, Texas A&M nibbled its way back into the game and was behind by only two at the half, 35-33.

The Aggies then ran up a four point lead with nine minutes to play before two baskets and two free throws by Willie Brown put Louisville back in front.

Texas A&M's David Britton led the game at 53-53 with two minutes to play and Louisville ran off the remaining time in hopes of coming up with the winning points.

Griffith, who scored only four points in the second half, took the shot from the top of the key, but it banged off back of the rim and the game went into overtime.

After Britton missed a layup try to start the extra period, Griffith made one of two free throw opportunities and following a basket by the Cardinals' Roger Buckman, Griffith made another free throw to put his club in front by four.

Moments later Griffith, who finished with 24 points, made two more free shots and then made a basket as the Cardinals turned the overtime period into a runaway.

Brown chipped in 15 for Louisville, which can make it to the final four for the fourth time in history with a win on Sunday. The Aggies, who had survived two tough games early in the tournament, including an overtime victory over North Carolina, was following an Iowa basket.

Griffith had 12 for the Southwest Conference champions, who finished the year at 26-8.

Iowa, Georgetown reach east NCAA finals

By JOE JULIANO
UPI Sports Writer

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Guards Eric Floyd and John Duren burned Maryland from the outside for 18 and 14 points respectively Friday night to carry 10th-ranked Georgetown to a 74-68 victory over an eight-seeded Texas in the NCAA East Regional semifinal.

The Hoyas, who won their 15th consecutive game, will now meet unranked Iowa Sunday for a berth in the national semifinals. The Hawkeyes used 53 points from their front line of Vince Brooks, Kevin Boyce and Steve Krafcsin to upset sixth-ranked Syracuse, 88-77, in the first game of Friday night's double-header.

Floyd, a 6-foot sophomore guard, and forward Al Dutch helped the Hoyas, 26-5, recover from a five-point deficit early in the second half. Trailing 45-40 Dutch hit two baskets and Ed Sprague ran a free throw to move Georgetown into a tie at 45. Floyd then hit the first of three straight baskets to give the Hoyas the lead for good at 51-49 with 15:25 to play.

The Hoyas, who played more than 13 minutes of the second half without Craig Shelton, their No. 2 scorer who was shackled by foul trouble, later lengthened their lead to seven, 61-54, on Sprague's layup with 12:12 to play and then took a 65-58 advantage on a Floyd jumper with 8:59 remaining as Maryland's offense began to sputter.

The Terps, 24-7, went a period of 4:40 when they made just one field goal. The Hoyas went into a stall with about six minutes to play and Maryland was forced to foul. Eric Smith sank the Hoyas' last six points from the free throw line in the final 3:02 and the Terps never were able to get closer than six.

Georgetown started quickly, running off seven points in a row to take a 14-6 lead on Shelton's three-point play just 3:01 into the game. The Hoyas advantage reached 10 points, 22-12, at the 10:43 mark before Maryland started to chip away.

The Terps went on a 7-0 run with Greg Manning hitting two baskets and a free throw to move within 24-21 before Georgetown regained a nine-point advantage. But Buck Williams scored seven points in a 13-4 spurt that enabled Maryland to tie the game at 34 on a Dutch Morley basket with 2:57 left in the first half.

Maryland took its first lead of the game when Albert King hit a three-point play with 2:28 left and the Terps led 38-38 at halftime.

Manning led Maryland with 19 points, Williams added 18 and King 15.

Brookins scored 21 points for the Hawkeyes, 22-8, while Boyle added 18 and Krafcsin 14 as Iowa took advantage of foul trouble sustained by Syracuse's 6-foot-11 center Roosevelt Bouie. Bouie played only 18 minutes of the game and scored 18 points before fouling out with 5:25 remaining.

Iowa trailed by six, 57-51, on a Louie Orr dunk — two of his game-high 27 points — with 8:30 to play but came back for nine points in a row. Five of them after the Syracuse bench was hit with a technical foul. Brookins sank a one-and-one and one shot of the two-shot technical, and Krafcsin sank a basket on Iowa's possession to give the Hawkeyes a 60-57 lead with 7:00 remaining.

The Orangemen twice cut the lead to one point but Krafcsin hit a basket and Steve Waite sank two free throws after Bouie fouled out to give Iowa a 66-61 advantage.

Syracuse was never able to get inside of five points, the final time on an Eddie Moss basket that made the score 76-71 with 1:58 remaining. But Boyle and Brookins, who had 15 of his points in the second half, each sank a pair of free throws to give Iowa an 80-71 lead with 1:05 to play and ice the game for the Hawkeyes.

The Orangemen, the No. 1 seed in the east who completed their season at 25-4, trailed 40-33 at the half after being down by as many as 12 but came out smoking in the second half. Following an Iowa basket, Syracuse scored 10 straight points and took its first lead of the game when Fernon Bouie dunked Orr's 10th pass with 16:01 left to play.

Iowa didn't take long to get its running game in gear, scoring nine straight points to take a 15-6 lead on Ronnie Lester's layup just 5:56 into the game. A Dan Schayes free throw moved Syracuse within four but the Orangemen were hurt when Bouie picked up his third foul with 9:06 remaining and left the game.

The Hawkeyes then started to work on their lead again, scoring up 27-18 on Boyle's jumper with 6:30 left in the half and later by 30-18 when Lester netted a free throw at 5:38.

But the shooting of Orr then brought Syracuse back into the game. The skinny senior forward completed a three-point play to launch the Orangemen on a 12-2 tear that ended when he drove home a jumper to pull Syracuse within 32-30 with 2:12 left.

On the slopes Zany ski races mark St. Patrick's day

By KAREN LITTLE PRESSMAN

Irish legend says, "When a touch of green on St. Patrick's day, everyone can be a little Irish on the saint's day. However, the people in Ketchum will be adding a wee bit more to the Irish custom.

While traditional parades in New York City, Chicago and Boston celebrate the Emerald holiday with tin snare bands and brass bands, "When Irish Eyes are Smiling" and "My Wild Irish Rose," Ketchumites will celebrate the day with zany Shamrock Relay Races.

The relays, a traditional event at the resort town during the sixties and early seventies, have been resurrected this year by the Ketchum/Sun Valley Road and Ski Association.

A bunch of people got together and decided it would be a fun thing to have," said Jed Gray, executive director of the association.

A total of 280 people have signed up for the crazy races which will start at Elkhorn and end with a party at Atkinson Park, where a live band and green-colored brew will be available to race participants and spectators.

"Spectators are welcome to join the fun," Gray said. Since streets along the race route will be blocked to auto traffic, Gray suggests spectators park their cars and find a spot at the beginning or end of the race or along Sun Valley Road for the best viewing.

The relays will begin at 1 p.m. Sunday with a downhill inertube race on the Elkhorn side of Dollar Mountain. Tubers, dressed in crash helmets and tennis shoes, will run a course from the top to the bottom of Elkhorn run.

From there, a cross country skier will race on nordic skis to the top of Saddle Road, where the baton will be handed to a sprinter who will run down to the Sun Valley City Hall in alpine ski boots.

The relay will proceed with a bike race from city hall to the Sun Valley spotlight, with only one-speed bicycles allowed.

A "Devil Derby" from the Sun Valley spotlight to the Ketchum A-1 right will follow. Derbyists, working in pairs, will use homemade devices which one person can push or pull someone else in. Devices may not be bicycles, horses or self-propelled in any way.

Roller skaters will complete the last leg of the relay, skating their way to Hemingway Elementary School.

The race will be awarded to the two fastest teams, the 10 best teams, the best women's team and the best team costume.

Pocattello, Bruins take track openers

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls girls and Pocattello boys posted team victories in the seasoopening track meet at Laurel Stadium Friday.

Pocattello, showing strong talent on the track from the 200-meter dash through convincing distance victories, scored 78½ points to leave the Bruin boys in second at 59.

"The Twin Falls girls showed the strength expected and despite disqualifying out of one relay, overpowered its division with 89 points.

"I felt we definitely showed we were young but we saw some good things," Coach Jerry Kleinkopf said of his male troops.

"I thought (Mark) Libert looked good in the sprint. He won the 100 and he ran with the two kids from Pocattello we know are good 200-meter dash me. I was really pleased with (Eric) McManaman's winning the halfmile and I thought his time was good for the time of year. But I think the win will help his confidence more."

The Bruin inexperience showed most in the relays where there was a "little of resurfacing due to injuries and a couple instances of poor work in the exchange zones.

"We hoped it wouldn't be that bad (in the exchange zones)," Coach Kleinkopf said "but that's what comes from inexperience in the first meet. We had to shuffle (personnel in) three of the relays and that hurt but more than that it showed us just how young and thin (in bodies) we are."

One thing that had the coach going, however, was a pair of career bests from his charges in the pole vault. Seniors Mitch King and Steve's previous competitive best was 14-0, scored 14-6 and Junior Dave Routh made his maiden voyage over 13 feet.

"It was my best by six inches but I went 14-6 (in practice) yesterday," Mingo said.

Routh suggested "I'll go 13-6 next week" with a big smile on his face.

High jumper Kenny Slagmeyer rebounded with the season with a good 6-8½ effort, one-quarter inch under his all-time best.

"I hit the bar when I jumped 6-8, cleared 6-9 than when I jumped 6-9, that was the jump I liked and it (the crossbar) quivered up and down and fell off. I ducked my head into the bar on both jumps. If I hadn't ducked, my head I would have made 6-9 easy."

The Crow sisters, senior Cindy and junior Tammy, picked up first places in the distances — Tammy also helping out on a couple of relay teams — and sophomore Julie Jergensen chased Cindy down in both the 1600 and 3200-meter runs.

"I thought it was a very important day for (Sophomore Dina) Libert too," Coach Kleinkopf said. "That win (at 400 meters) should prove to her that she can run with the big girls in high school."

Jerome distance ace Jerry Lettinger who was undefeated in cross country last fall, didn't have a big senior debut, getting second in the 800 and fourth in the 1600.

"He's still got too-much-basketball left in him," Coach Tim Dunne said. "He's had a little trouble getting himself mentally ready for the kind of work he needs to the frivolity won't end with Ketchum's relay races.

Soldier Mountain in Fairfield is hosting its own weekend March 22-23 with two season ski passes up for grabs.

"It's going to be a fun race with the emphasis on people having a good time," said Claude Hinkle, general manager at Soldier Mountain.

Saturday's event, to begin at 11 a.m. on the "bar" hill, will be an obstacle race where skiers will negotiate turns around a course of slalom poles.

"The race is not for speed," Hinkle noted.

All participants will have their names put into a box and after the race, the name drawn will win a season pass.

"That way everybody who enters, regardless of skiing ability, has a chance to win," Hinkle said.

Sunday is costume day, with "springtime" as the theme.

"People are to use their imagination in creating their outfits," Hinkle said. "The person judged to have the best costume wins a season ski pass to Soldier Mountain for 1981."

Also on Sunday, Soldier Mountain will host races for the newspaper, television and radio media.

The three-member teams will run an obstacle course as well as a slalom course. The team recording the fastest time will be awarded a traveling trophy and $100 to be donated to its favorite charity.

Last weekend, about 220 skiers from Utah, Wyoming and Idaho competed in the pee wee, novice and intermediate championships at Soldier Mountain.

Along with the PNI championships, Junior III Olympic qualifiers were determined; nine Sun Valley racers were chosen to compete in the Junior III Olympics, scheduled for March 24-28 at Crystal Mountain in Washington.

Racers selected include Heather Foster, Lles Scherthanner, Hilary Shumway, Donis Doiso, Ashley Snyder, Greg Norman, Jim Grossman, Pee Wee Coyne and Jon Sabala.

The Junior III Olympics will include downhill, giant slalom and slalom events.

"Don't get lazy, it'll snow like crazy," So says the Farmer's Almanac.

It's been snowing in the local ski resorts the last two days and according to the National Weather Service, scattered showers are forecast for the next few days with decreasing trend Sunday and Monday.

Soldier Mountain: Good skiing reported; base 60 inches with five inches of new snow. All lifts operating from 9:30 a.m. to 4 p.m., Wednesday through Sunday. Road conditions reported good.

Sun Valley: Excellent skiing reported; snow depth 85 inches with three inches of new snow. All lifts operating from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. daily. Road conditions good.

Magic Mountain: Good skiing reported with three inches of new snow. All lifts operating from 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., Saturdays and Sundays.

Ponderosa: Good skiing reported with two inches of new snow. Snow depth 83 inches at the lodge. All lifts operating from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m., Monday through Saturday, and from 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Sundays. Roads plowed and sanded.

distance running. But I'm sure he'll be all right."

The Tiger girls also missed senior Karen Sobotta in the sprints and short relays.

"It's my knee," says the surviving half of the strong Tiger sprint duo (Andy Cannedy graduated last spring). "We ran the (Jerome) huts last week and I hurt it somehow. I don't know how or when it happened."

She said the injury had her sidelined the past week and she wasn't overly optimistic about being ready to compete next week.

CSI also joined in the meet, Coach Karl Kleinkopf giving his troops a little workout in front of the crowd. Boise State sent 10 athletes to compete. But it was Glenn Barnes with double hurdle wins and sprint victories by Burley product Greg Burch that highlighted the showing.

Burch steamed easily away in the homestretch to win the metric quarter in an unpressed 51.3. He came back with a personal best 22.5 in claiming the 200-meter dash.

Coach Kleinkopf said the brief showings during the meet would be the only competition for the boys this week. However, the Golden Eagle girls will debut today in a meet at Boise State's Bronco stadium.

Division shuffle not likley

RANCHE MIRAGE, Calif. (UPI) — Commissioner Pete Rozelle all but killed the idea of realigning teams geographically as the NFL ended its annual meetings Friday.

Rozelle appointed a committee to study the possibility of realigning the six divisions but said it was "unlikely it will ever occur." He said only if the federal government established travel would there be a real possibility the NFL would realign.

The current divisions have little regard for geography with, for example, Atlanta in the NFC West and Dallas in the NFC East.

Ed DeBartolo, Jr., owner of the San Francisco 49ers, has campaigned for realignment because of soaring travel costs. But Rozelle said the league would just have to pay the extra costs, and it is obvious the league can afford it—Rozelle revealed—the television networks are offering $3 million per game to increase the package of Sunday and Thursday games from four to six per season. The NFL has turned down the increase because of worries of overexposure on TV.

At two games per year — or $6 million — the NFL is passing up $24 million over the proposed four-year agreement. With the league adding up that kind of money, there is little doubt it can afford extra travel costs.

The league also made a few minor revisions in its complicated tiebreaker system but left net points in the formula. That means coaches will be encouraged to run up the score in runaway games—but coach Dean Shula of Miami said there would be no hard feelings among the coaches because they all understand the situation.

The league also announced it conducted a special Nielsen survey of people who watched the Super Bowl outside their homes at parties or bars. They decided that 3.7 million people watched January 9's Super Bowl XLV outside their homes, bringing the total TV audience to over 101 million, making it the biggest sporting event ever on television.

Salmon notes

Rapid River moved from 'Indian country'

GRANGEVILLE (UPI) — The State of Idaho has jurisdiction over Indian fishing on Rapid River near Riggins. Second District Magistrate George Reinhardt ruled Thursday.

Reinhardt made his ruling before denying a pre-trial motion by the defense to dismiss the fishing violation charge against Nez Perce Indian Roderick Scott of Lapwai, whose trial before a six-person jury begins Friday.

In so ruling, Reinhardt said the Nez Perce Treaty of 1863 "terminated" reservation boundaries of the 1855 treaty, thereby leaving Rapid River outside what the court considers "Indian country" and giving the state jurisdiction.

Scott is charged with fishing for Chinook salmon at Rapid River on June 13, 1979, during an emergency closure imposed by the state.

Reinhardt's ruling is expected to be appealed to the district court level, pending conclusion of Friday's trial.

Reinhardt also denied Thursday a second pre-trial motion to remove himself from hearing the case because of alleged bias.

"There is a feeling in the community of the Nez Perce people that your honor is prejudiced," said defense attorney Lewis Gurwitz of Cambridge, Mass. "The courtroom was filled to capacity with members of the Nez Perce tribe."

Evans names adnomous fish committee

BOISE (UPI) — Gov. John Evans Friday appointed members of his Adnomous Fish Advisory Committee, created to help develop a cooperative fisheries management program among Idaho, the federal government and the Indian treaty tribes.

When he established the committee, Evans said its purpose was to assure a working relationship among the treaty tribes and the government agencies in maintaining the salmon and steelhead runs in Idaho.

Named to the committee were: George Allen, Lapwai, representing the Nez Perce tribe; Chris Carlson, Seattle, representing the U.S. Department of the Interior; Lonnie Racehorse, Boise, representing the Intertribal Council; Norm Gutz, Salmon, citizen at large; Bob Salter, Boise, acting director, Idaho Fish and Game Department; Richard Schwarz, Idaho Falls, chairman, Idaho Fish and Game Commission; and George Tway, Boise, representing Evans. A member of the Shoshone-Bannock Tribe will be named soon.

The first meeting of the board will be held beginning at 9:30 a.m., April 17, in the board room of Evans' office.

Doral open

Thompson catches Valentine

MIAMI (UPI) — Leonard Thompson shot a 4-under-par 68 to tie Tom Watson for the one-shot lead Friday after two rounds of the $250,000 Doral Open golf tournament — while Jack Nicklaus was making a move of his own.

Thompson and Valentine, a first-round leader who shot 69 Friday, were tied at 7-under-par 137 — one shot ahead of Bruce Lietzke and David Eger. Lietzke fired a 4-under-par 68 Friday and Eger carded a 69.

Another two shots back was a group of four golfers headed by Nicklaus, who shot one of the low rounds of the day, 67. Also tied at 139 were Ben Crenshaw — fired a 68 — Englishman Mark James, who had 69, and Danny Edwards with a 68.

Nicklaus is looking for his first victory since 1978. He fell to 71st on the money list last year and has been tinkering with his swing all winter.

All the changes seemed to be paying off as he scored five birdies on his back nine to move into contention.

"I played the back nine first, hit the ball close and two-putted every green," he said. "I played well on the front side, but missed a couple of putts and that gave me a little confidence to make a couple more."

Nicklaus had said after the first round (Thursday) — in which he shot a par 72 — that if he shot 69 Friday he would be "right in the middle of it."

"Generally, if you shoot 69 you are not too far out of it — but the point was I too played well for the 72 yesterday," Nicklaus said.

Valentine said he wasn't surprised to be in the lead, especially since the weather was ideal.

"If the weather was good, I thought I'd be back (among the leaders)," Valentine said. "I've been playing well the last couple of weeks and I felt like if I didn't have to invent shots because of the wind I'd be all right."

Keith Fergus, who shared the first-round lead with Valentine at 68, shot a 1-over-par 73 Friday and went to the locker room at 141.

Thompson, Lietzke and Crenshaw played in the same threesome and all said that was part of the reason they played well.

"When you play with a couple of guys who are playing well, it's contagious," Thompson said. "The way the group played was phenomenal. Today it should be called the birdie brigade."

Thompson made the turn at even-par 36 after a bogey and a birdie, but then he caught the spirit and churned out birdies on the 10th, 11th, 14th and 16th holes. His longest birdie putt was a 12-footer and his shortest was from four feet away.

"About the 11th hole, Leonard said, 'I wish we could have a putting like this every day,' and I agreed," Lietzke said.

Crenshaw said there was no feeling of competitiveness among the trio, who combined for a best-ball score of 13-under-par 59.

"There is no other professional sport where this atmosphere prevails," Crenshaw said. "It is such an individual sport that we pull for each other."

Eugene offers alternate site

EUGENE, Ore. (UPI) — A letter was sent to President Carter Friday saying that the "Track Capital of the World" would gladly accept the responsibility of staging an alternative track and field meet to the summer Olympics in Moscow.

The letter was signed by Gov. Vic Atiyeh, Eugene Mayor Gus Keller, University of Oregon President William Boyd, Oregon Track Club president Eric Larsen and Eugene Area Chamber of Commerce President Tom Hoyt.

The letter suggested that the meet be held in the last week of August following the Olympics which Carter has announced the United States would boycott because of Russia's invasion of Afghanistan.

Hoyt said Eugene would back off on its offer if any other area with sufficient accommodations and game site was to make a bid.

"We definitely don't want to convey the impression that we are greedy," he said, and pointed to the fact that the University of Oregon's Hayward Field would be the scene of the U.S. Olympic trials June 21-29.

"We realize that the American athletes may prefer to have the international competition at a different location than the United States Olympic trials," the letter to Carter said. "If other states or countries are not in a position to accommodate the international track and field competition, then Eugene will gladly accept its responsibility as the "Track Capital of the World" and host the event," the letter said.

Larsen said, however, the offer was "not unconditional." He said it was expected that the U.S. government would help with funding, including possibly paying for additional temporary seating at Hayward to increase the planned Olympic trials seating of 18,000 to up to possibly 25,000.

Larsen said he was aware that a lot of American athletes would prefer that the alternative international meet be held in Europe and if a competing site were offered, Eugene would "definitely not want to compete."

Hoyt said that it would be "a very expensive undertaking" to stage the meet and would cause several problems for this town of about 105,000 population. However, he said he was optimistic that it could be carried out successfully "with the entire cooperation of the metropolitan community."

Bill Rau, manager of the Olympic trials, said May 24 was considered the last date which a decision could be made in time for the alternative meet to be staged in Eugene.

Tiger rookie may be sleeper

By FRED McMANE
UPI Sports Writer

LAKELAND, Fla. (UPI) — Looking for a "sleeper," someone to emerge from the shadows of virtual obscurity and become a full-fledged star in the American league this season?

Get your hands on a mound on Detroit's Lance Parrish.

"He could be a real sleeper this season," said Tiger manager Sparky Anderson after watching the muscular young catcher crunch baseballs over the left field fence at Joker Marchant Stadium during a batting practice session. "He's got the talent to be an outstanding player. All he needs is the experience."

Parrish, 23, maturing as a player considerably last season after being handed the starting catcher's position in spring training. Playing in 143 games, he hit .276 — an increase of 57 points from his rookie year — and belted 19 home runs while driving in 65 runs.

"I think I did a pretty good job, Parrish admits. "I think I proved to everybody that I could handle the job. There are still few places that I should improve upon. I think I had too many passed balls last season to league-leading 21; but I've made a few switches in the way I've handled pitchers so I should cut down on those."

Parrish could turn out to be one of the Tigers' top run producers this season. The team is overloaded with left-handed hitting and Parrish, a right-handed batter with awesome power, should see plenty of left-handed pitching.

"He's really our only right-handed power threat," says infielder Steve Kemp. "But, he hasn't played enough to really have earned total respect. I know that the club respects him because he is powerful but when you have somebody who's been around five or six years and driven in consistently 80, 90 or 100 runs that's when you command total respect."

Parrish believes he is capable of becoming one of the most respected players in the major leagues.

"I think the possibilities are definitely there of my hitting 30 or 35 home runs a year," he says modestly. "I have the potential within myself to hit that many home runs, maybe more. It depends on how well progress and how fast I do. I've been working on a few things to improve my batting stroke."

Because of hitters like himself, Kemp, Jason Thompson, Lou Whitaker, Richie Hebner and Champ Summers, Parrish believes the Tigers will be a real surprise in the American League East this year.

"People really don't think we can finish up there with the Baltimore and the Boston, but we held our own with most of them last year," said Parrish.

Post 81 claims district tie

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls District won the Falls District Explorer Scout basketball championship Friday night, nipping post No. 159 by an 85-82 count.

Clay Meacham, Ron Sayer and Jeff Jardine accounted for just about all the points for the winners, scoring 32, 30 and 14, respectively. Replaying for post 81 were Keith Gordon with 27, Scott Hyman 24 and Greg Scherer 15.

In the third-place playoff, Mark Schaal hit 10 and Dave Davis added 14 as Buhl Post No. 2 edged Twin Falls

Post No. 28 in overtime 63-61. Steve Galt hit 28 and Russ Vergensen 13 for the losers.

The top three teams will advance to the district finals at Rupert next week.
