

Senate adjourns, House refuses

Legislature torn in half

By DAVID MORRISSEY
Times-News writer

BOISE — Amidst shouted insults, parliamentary backdoor actions, political strong-arming and just plain chaos, the Idaho Senate adjourned early Thursday afternoon.

Within hours, however, the Idaho House of Representatives voted 69-0 to reject the Senate action and vowed to stay in session, finish their work and force the Senate to return.

House members blasted the Senate for being irresponsible in adjourning without resolving several pressing issues, including implementation of the 1 percent initiative, funding for Health and Welfare programs and funding for the state Office of Energy.

Quickly dragged into the parliamentary fist fight between the two lawmaking chambers was Attorney General David Leroy. In a hastily called press conference held within minutes of the Senate's adjournment, Leroy concluded both Houses must accept the Senate's action.

Leroy said, however, if the House remains in session for another three days, the Senate action is invalid, no Senate adjournment exists, and the Senate must return to Boise.

Leroy admitted he did not know if it would be possible to compel senators to return to the Legislature.

"The courts generally cannot issue any effective mandate against a branch of a Legislature which has adjourned," he said in an informal written opinion. "Thus it may be difficult or impossible for House leadership or a majority of that body to seek relief in the Idaho courts for potential violations by the Senate."

Meanwhile, Gov. John Evans threatened to immediately call the Legislature back into a special session if they adjourned without resolving the major issues he said were still unresolved.

This would be Idaho's first special session since 1971.

Senate leaders insisted their action had been proper and responsible. All major issues, they said, had been adequately and openly resolved.

Asked what would be done if the House remains in Boise for an additional three days, Senate Majority Leader James Risch, R-Boise, only smiled and commented, "We'll cross that bridge when we come to it."

Nine in presidential beauty contest in May

BOISE (UPI) — The names of nine presidential candidates from four political parties will be on Idaho's first combined presidential preference and state primary on May 27.

Secretary of State Pete Cenarrusa announced Thursday Idaho's ballot will list Republicans John Anderson, George Bush, Ronald Reagan and Phillip Crane; Democrats Jimmy Carter, Edward Kennedy and Edmund Brown, Jr.; American Party candidate John H. Rarick; and Libertarian Ed Clark.

He said the decision to place Crane on the ballot was made early Wednesday after calling Crane's campaign headquarters. He said although Crane has told his campaign workers to throw their support to Reagan, he plans on going to the convention in the case of Reagan's absence.

Crane also is a vice presidential candidate.

Last year, the Legislature combined the presidential preference primary and state primary.

Cenarrusa said there has been a continuing debate in the Legislature whether or not Idaho needs a presidential preference primary. In 1978 and 1979, the House passed legislation which would have abolished the presidential primary, but the Senate voted down both bills.

Census kicks off today

Great American headcount begins

TWIN FALLS — Residents of Twin Falls County, like those in all other areas of the United States, will be receiving some important mail today.

Questionnaires which will be sent to collect information for the 1980 census will be received by most area residents today.

The Bureau of the Census, part of the U.S. Department of Commerce, is asking that all residents fill out the questionnaires and mail them back as soon as possible. In more populated areas, the questionnaires are to be mailed back and in some more rural communities they should be held for collection by the census worker.

Individuals will be advised which procedure to follow by the instructions accompanying the census questionnaire.

The individuals being counted in the 10-year census may answer the questions in the privacy of their homes, confident information offered will not be revealed to anyone. The questionnaires are confidential and once the material is placed on microfilm, the original forms are shredded and destroyed.

Census workers in Idaho say virtually every household will receive a questionnaire by mail today. There are even provisions for counting of transient persons who may have no permanent mailing address or are in the process of moving.

A transient night enumeration is set for March 31 with cooperation of hotels, motels, campgrounds, YMCAs and YWCAs. Census workers will personally visit nursing homes, hospitals, schools, college dormitories and boarding houses.

Census Day is April 1, and persons who are instructed to mail their questionnaires should do so by that day. Census workers will begin picking them up in other areas on March 31.

Law requires that the new census figures be complete by Jan. 1, 1981, and the Bureau of Census will spend the remainder of the year compiling and printing the statistics.

Local governmental officials have urged every person to complete the questionnaires and mail them in or hand them over to the census taker.

Census figures are collected only once each 10 years unless a special count is required in some specific area. The figures serve during the 10-year period as a basis for many government funding programs and other benefits.

Volcano wakes up after sleeping 100 years

SPRIT LAKE, Wash. (UPI) — The picturesque Mount St. Helens volcano, dormant for more than a century, erupted with a tremendous boom Thursday.

As it spewed ashes 35 miles away and puffed steam, evacuation from the mountain and surrounding townlands was ordered.

The north and northwest portions of the volcano's cone collapsed inward. There were no reports of lava or fire shooting from the new fissure, but there were thunderous snow avalanches on the sides of the mountain.

Venting of the heat near the top of the 9,671-foot mountain in the majestic Cascade range melted the snow, exposing the black rock beneath.

Volcano ashes spread as far away as 35 miles to the northwest in the southwestern Washington town of Toledo, a spokesman for the state Department of Emergency Services said.

It was the first volcanic eruption in the 48 contiguous states since California's Mount Lassen erupted in 1914. Mount St. Helens last erupted in 1857.

Evacuation was ordered for all of the estimated 60 remaining residents in the Swift Creek, Spirit Lake areas by Gifford-Pinchot National Forest authorities. The Weyerhaeuser Co. ordered its 300 employees out of logging sites 15 to 35 miles away at the request of the Coville County Sheriff's office, which closed all roads to sightseers.

An hour and 20 minutes after the volcano erupted, the largest in a 7-day string of earthquakes rattled the mountain, registering 4.6 on the open-ended Richter scale.

After that, geologists reported the volcano stopped spewing gases and ashes, but it continued to vent steam.

Gov. Dixy Lee Ray spent about 15 minutes circling the volcano in a Washington State Patrol airplane.

"As volcanic eruptions go, this was probably a minor one," she said. "But it was terribly exciting to see a geological event right in our own backyard."

About 250,000 people live in the three counties surrounding the mountain, but most are 20 miles or more from the summit.

After flying over the peak, one scientist, David Johnson, of the U.S. Geological Survey, said the volcano had not technically erupted, but "this is a steam explosion."

One Forest Service ranger reported, "It has been heating very good. There is some magma (molten rock) visible."

"The main thing is not to panic," said Dr. Leonard Palmer, a Portland State University geophysicist who predicted two days ago that the volcano was about to erupt. "This is a normal way for this mountain to operate." "There is no danger of chain reaction with other mountains in the area."

"I was sleeping on my couch and it (the volcano's loud boom) woke me up," said Marian Simmons, a resident of Cougar, (pop. 150) 10 miles southwest of the summit. "I guess it was past due."

Gene Mortensen, operator of an Inn in Cougar, said the road was blocked off two miles out of town going up the hill toward the crater, but residents were ignoring suggestions that they evacuate. Most of volcanic action was on the northwestern side of the crater, they pointed out.

Officials were fearful that the melting snow would trigger mud slides into the Lewis River, north of the volcano, plugging up the river and sending rubble against dams. However, Pacific Power & Light Co. officials said there was no immediate danger and they could bring the reservoir water levels down in a hurry if necessary.

$228 billion, 10-year bonanza

Congress sends Carter windfall profits tax

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate Thursday gave overwhelming final congressional approval to the $227.7 billion oil windfall profits tax.

It was nearly a year after President Carter had asked for it. The Senate ended a long and bitter debate with its 66-31 vote sending the bill to the White House, where Carter promised to sign it with gusto.

Idaho's senators voted on opposite sides. Frank Church, Democrat, voted for the bill, and James McClure, Republican, voted against it.

Carter called reporters into the Oval Office to watch him telephone his thanks to Senate Democratic leader Robert Byrd and chairman Russell Long, D-La., of the Senate Finance Committee.

"I think this is good news not only for the country but for the whole world," Carter said. "This will set the tone in our country that hasn't been adequate so far to resolve the long-range energy problem."

The tax will capture for public use about 23 percent of the extra $1 trillion Treasury officials estimate oil companies will make this decade because of Carter's decision to decontrol domestic oil prices.

It sets the marks $227.7 billion for potential tax cuts, energy and transportation programs, and to help poor families pay their soaring fuel bills.

The House approved the tax earlier this month, 302-107.

Sen. Henry Bellmon, R-Okla., told colleagues the tax would close down hundreds of small stripper oil wells,

"miss the big oil companies with most of their production overseas, and cost consumers dearly."

"Once Congress gets hooked on these revenues it is virtually certain they will never be repealed."

But Long called the tax "the price we have to pay in order to have decontrol."

Carter called for the windfall tax when he ordered decontrol April 5, 1979. He envisioned revenues that would be used to help low-income families pay higher fuel bills and finance public transportation construction and development of alternate energy sources.

But in nearly a year of wrangling, Congress did not give him the more than $300 billion in taxes he wanted, or financial support for all his requested programs.

North Sea oil rig capsizes; 70 men lost

STAVANGER, Norway (UPI) — A giant "floating hotel" platform in the North Sea carrying 225 oil rig workers flipped over Thursday night in near-hurricane winds.

Killed were at least seven men and scores of others were trapped more than 70 feet beneath the frigid waters.

A spokesman at the chief North Sea rescue center in Sola, Norway, said 116 people were missing from the rig Alexander Kjeland, called a "floater."

Experts said the accident could become the deadliest disaster in the history of offshore exploration.

One hundred and two men were picked from the black waters and seven bodies were recovered.

An urgent call for scuba divers was issued by the platform's operators, Phillips Petroleum, to check whether 50 workers believed to have been in the platform's movie theater when the accident occurred were still trapped in it, now upside down under 70 feet of 41-degree water.

"One helicopter spotted a lifeboat in the water with 26 people aboard," a British rescue spokesman said. "It directed a rescue vessel to the lifeboat and they were saved."

But 14-foot waves and clouds as low as 70 feet hampered rescue operations and forced helicopters to abandon the search for the night. The weather forecast was for clearing skies and calmer seas by morning. Even if the missing men did not drown, British Coast guard officials said chances of survival in the cold water were minimal.

"In 41-degree water, a very fit person could last up to 45 minutes, and has a 50-50 chance after two and a half hours," a coast guard spokesman in Scotland said.

"After that, absolutely zilch, nothing."

The Stavanger rescue center said preliminary figures showed the rig carried at least 170 Norwegians, 35 Britons, three Finns, one Spaniard and one Portuguese. A breakdown of casualties was unavailable.

There was still no definite word if there were any Americans aboard.

The rig was leased by Phillips Petroleum from Stavanger Drilling Co., a Norwegian firm, and was linked to several nearby drilling platforms with steel bridges. The bridges snapped when one of the Alexander Kjeland's five legs gave way about dusk.

Kissinger disavows role in sending shah to Egypt

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Henry Kissinger said Thursday he had nothing to do with the shah's decision to leave Panama and indicated he thinks the White House is conducting a "campaign of outright lies" against him on the matter.

Kissinger, who was secretary of state under Richard Nixon, and Gerald Ford, said that while he took no part in the shah's move, he still thinks America has an obligation to let the ailing man "die in peace somewhere."

But in an interview on the NBC-TV "Today" show, Kissinger made clear he resents reports from Panama and Iran that he and New York banker David Rockefeller prompted Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi to move from Panama to Egypt.

"I have not been involved in any way whatsoever, and whoever is putting out those stories ought to be ashamed of themselves," Kissinger said. "I have not been in touch with the shah or his entourage since they reached Panama."

"I have not been in touch with anyone in the Panamanian government, in the Egyptian government or the U.S. government — directly or indirectly."

Asked who is behind the stories, Kissinger said, "I think it is people who are trying to avoid responsibility."

"And I must say I find it passing strange that this happened after the visit of Mr. Jordan (Hamilton Jordan, White House chief of staff) to Panama; that Panamanian officials with whom I've had nothing to do for three years on any subject — should put out these stories."

Burns criticizes anti-inflation policy

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Arthur Burns, former chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, sharply criticized the president's new anti-inflation policy Thursday and called for repeal of the "stupid" law that lets the board clamp down on credit.

"My own feelings are that nothing really constructive in regard to our inflation problem has been accomplished by the president's plan," the white-haired scholar said in testimony before Congress' Joint-Economics Committee.

He said the anti-inflation policy announced March 14 by the administration did nothing that will stimulate productivity, dismantle burdensome government regulations or modify regulations in the health, safety and environment areas that have been running up costs and prices.

"In short," said Burns, now resident scholar of the American Enterprise Institute, "the president contributed nothing to structural proposals needed to fight inflation."

Burns also made an urgent plea to the congressional panel for repeal of the Credit Control Act — the law that gives the Fed its current power to crack down on bank loans and consumer credit.

"It's a stupid piece of legislation, a demagogic piece of legislation potentially destructive of our economic institutions," he said.

By enacting the statute, Burns said, "Congress put dictatorial power in the hands of — the Federal Reserve — power that no government agency should have."

Jury finds multimillionaire guilty of bank fraud scheme

NEW YORK (UPI) — Multimillionaire Michele Sindona, a shadowy financier called "The Iceman," was convicted Thursday of masterminding a fraudulent scheme that led to the biggest bank failure in U.S. history.

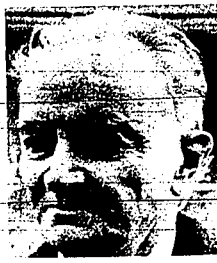

Sindona, a director and controlling stockholder in the Franklin National Bank when it collapsed in 1974, faces up to five years in prison and a $50,000 fine. Sentencing was set for May 6.

Sindona's mysterious disappearance last year — he claimed to have been kidnapped — became a major issue during the complex trial when the government said it could prove he was not kidnapped at all but was in Europe in disguise using a false name and passport.

Sindona's $3 million bail was revoked at the start of the trial two months ago because of the government's charges that he had fled. He will stay behind bars at least until an appeal of Thursday's verdict is decided.

Sindona, once one of Italy's wealthiest men and a former financial adviser to the Vatican, showed no emotion when the verdict was announced on the sixth day of deliberations.

A mysterious figure, Sindona, tall

Financier Michele Sindona and slender, always pale and on occasion referred to as "The Iceman," has often been connected by Italian authorities to the Mafia.

By Congress' intent, old oil bears brunt of windfall taxes

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Old oil will bear the brunt of the $22.7 billion oil windfall profits tax bill the Senate passed and sent to the White House Thursday.

That is not accidental, Congress intended that way, reasoning that the biggest "windfall" — unexpected earnings due to President Carter's decision to phase out federal controls and let the price of domestic crude gradually rise to world levels — would be realized on oil produced from wells discovered before 1979.

About two-thirds of the oil currently being produced in the United States falls in the old oil category.

The lawmakers decided to tax any price increase for old oil due to decontrol, figuring the increase from a $13 per barrel base price.

To encourage the search for new oil, Congress decided to tax the windfall on newly discovered oil and crude from wells found in 1979 at a 30 percent tax rate. The windfall would be figured from a base rate of about $16.55 per barrel.

A 50 percent tax rate would be applied on price increases over a $15.30 base price for stripper oil, which is crude from wells producing 10 barrels or less per day.

Recognizing that independent oil producers traditionally have discovered most of the new American oil and gas fields, Congress agreed to enact smaller windfall tax rates on them than on the major oil companies.

They also exempted from the tax all oil owned by state and local governments. This is important to the states of Louisiana, Texas, Oklahoma, and California, which use the proceeds from such oil to fund public education and for other public purposes.

Also exempt is all oil owned by Indian tribes, medical and educational charitable institutions, and Alaskan crude from wells north of the Aleutian mountains and within a 75 mile radius of the Alaska pipeline. But the windfall on oil from the Sadlerochit reservoir on the Alaskan north slope would be taxed at a 70 percent rate.

Because it is an excise tax, the administration expects the windfall profits tax will be borne by the oil producers. But critics of the tax believe it will be passed on to consumers somehow.

Major issues in tax bill

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Following is an outline of major issues in the $22.7 billion oil windfall profits tax bill passed by the Senate and sent to the White House.

TAX CUTS

Although President Carter did not seek any, the bill makes 50 percent — or about $137 billion — of the oil windfall profits tax revenues available for tax cuts for individuals and businesses over the next decade. But the recommendation is not binding. Congress would have to pass other legislation to put any tax cuts into effect. Some of the $137 billion also could be used for home heating aid tax credits for middle income Americans.

HOME FUEL BILL AID:

The bill provides $3.1 billion for fiscal 1981, which begins Oct. 1, for a program of block grants to states to help households below the poverty line pay the cost of rising heating and cooling bills. It also recommends that $57 billion be used by future Congresses between fiscal 1982 and 1990 for similar aid to lower income households, but the recommendation is not binding and must be enacted by other legislation.

SMALL SAVERS:

The bill provides an estimated $4.3 billion tax break for small savers by exempting from the federal income tax $200 in combined interest and dividends for individuals and $400 for married couples. It does not apply to federal income taxes now being filed. Instead, it is effective Jan. 1, 1981 for a two year period.

RESIDENTIAL ENERGY TAX CREDITS:

The bill provides $500 million in tax credits for certain energy conservation improvements to residences. The biggest change is an increase from $2,200 to a new $4,000 maximum tax credit for installation of solar, wind, and geothermal equipment.

BUSINESS ENERGY TAX INCENTIVES:

The bill provides $6 billion in tax credits for businesses making energy-related investments in such things as solar, wind, geothermal or ocean equipment, biomass, and Intercity buses.

INHERITANCE:

The bill repeals a provision in the 1976 Tax Reform Act that would have required an inheritor to pay the entire capital gains tax on property from the date the decedent purchased the property to the date the inheritor sold it. Congress never allowed the provision to go into effect.

EXEMPTIONS:

All oil owned by state and local governments is exempt. This is considered vital to Louisiana, Texas, Oklahoma and California which use proceeds from such oil to fund their education systems. Oil owned by Indian tribes, medical and educational charities also is exempt, as is Alaskan oil from wells north of the Aleutian mountains and within a 75 mile radius of the Alaska pipeline.

THE TAX:

The president asked Congress last April for a windfall profits tax. Although considerably different than the one he sought, the tax as passed by Congress would recover $22.7 billion by 1990, or about 23 percent of the more than $1 trillion Treasury officials estimate oil producers will make in unanticipated profits this decade from Carter's decision to phase out federal price controls on domestic oil production.

 "Apocalypse Now" director Francis Ford Coppola is back again — this time in Madison, Wis., with California Gov. Jerry Brown as the star. Coppola calls the campaign special "an act of desperation" in Brown's ongoing drive for the presidency. Says he, "We've chosen Wisconsin because the governor realizes this may be his last stand... It's going to be a media event the likes of which has never been seen before. It's going to be the only live Francis Coppola film in existence."

 Expenses are mighty expensive, and Norman Mailer has four of them, so even though he still writes best-sellers, it's all he can do to keep body, soul and alimony together. He's been ordered by Barnstable, Mass. Probate Judge Shirley R. Lewis to pay Beverly Bently Mailer $775 a week in alimony and child support for the next seven years. Mailer says that's going to be tough. During testimony, he claimed he's $300,000 in debt.

KILLER CONWAY
 At least it looked good at the press conference, but in real life it's not too likely that Tim Conway could meet ex-heavyweight champ Jimmy Ellis in the ring and survive — let alone knock him out. But it was all for a good cause Tuesday in Hollywood.

University given newsreel library

COLUMBIA, S.C. (UPI) — The Movietone newsreel, consisting of millions of feet of newsreel film valued at as much as $100 million, will be donated to the University of South Carolina, officials announced Thursday.

The library, owned by Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corp., is headquartered in New York. It will be transferred to the university over the next several years.

Movietone was the largest of the American newsreels, which declined with the advent of television. At its peak in the 1930s, 500 Movietone cameramen recorded international events and the newsreels were distributed to more than 50 countries in 47 languages.

 Twenty-nine years ago, Olivia de Havilland starred on the Newport, R.I., stage in George Bernard Shaw's "Candida." Saturday, she'll be back for the first time since then to narrate something of an autobiography for her fans. She's doing the show as a benefit for restoration of the Jane Pickens Theater for the Performing Arts.

It will be a switch. Most of her previous roles have been in Danish porn flicks.

Rep. Ron Beitelspacher, D-Grangeville, ponders a bill at his desk behind sign put up by neighbor Rep. Steve Scanlin, D-Caldwell

Tempers displayed, arms twisted as GOP forces Senate to adjourn

The move for the early Senate adjournment was apparently a product of several factors. Key among those was the Senate's reluctance to accept a House version of a bill that would gradually implement the 1 percent initiative.

Forcing an adjournment, several Senate Democrats argued the initiative into effect more rapidly, thus giving the voters what they voted for in 1978.

Senators also appeared reluctant to accept additional funding tacked onto three senate bills by the House to appropriate monies to the state department of Health and Welfare.

House members had argued the programs were of vital concern and were significantly underfunded. The additional funds would have gone to the Idaho State School and Hospital at Nampa; to child development centers, to community mental health service programs and to developmental disability service programs.

Sen. Larry Craig of Midvale was absent because he was campaigning for the Republican nomination in the 1st District Congress race. Mark Ricks of Rexburg was absent because of a trip to his home.

Sen. Reese Verner, R-Nampa, then joined the 16 Democrats in opposing the House version of the initiative. The 1-vote edge over the Republicans.

Verner argued it wasn't proper to adjourn "and leave so many things hanging like this."

Verner's defection triggered an explosion of tempers. For his vote switch, Verner was publicly and sharply criticized by Sen. Reed Budge, R-Soda Springs, the Senate pro tem.

Verner was then ordered to a Republican caucus. Verner emerged from that closed-door meeting with tears in his eyes.

On the third try at adjournment, and after the second caucus, Verner changed his vote and supported the Republican leadership, giving them the single vote needed for adjournment. Verner said he changed his vote because Senate Republicans convinced him adjournment would not harm state programs, but he acknowledged his "vote-switch," which facilitated adjournment, might trigger a special session.

House adjournment at 11:30 a.m. meets for regular business early this morning.

Optional land use bill killed

Group talks recall over Evans' veto

BOISE (UPI) — Several Idahoans angered by Gov. John Evans' veto of a bill said Thursday they might vent their frustration through a petition drive to recall the chief executive.

The hostility was generated when Evans rejected a bill Wednesday that he said would allow a small number of voters to abolish land-use planning at the local level. The vetoed measure set forth procedures by which the electorate could reject planning and zoning rules established by county commissions.

Secretary of State Pete Cenarrusa said his office received calls Wednesday morning from five persons wanting to know how to go about removing Evans from office.

The governor's office said dozens of calls were received about the land-use bill after Evans threatened to veto it last week, but a recall was mentioned only once.

A Meridian woman angered by the veto has urged the Idaho Property Owners Association to coordinate the proposed recall effort.

Cal Williams, IPOA president, said he would submit a request by Doris Olason, Meridian, to present the recall idea to the IPOA board at an upcoming meeting.

"The Idaho Property Owners Association has always been strong on the people's right to vote on planning and zoning," Williams said, adding that he disapproved of the governor's veto.

Williams declined to say whether he would endorse an Evans recall drive. Two of those who called the secretary of state were from Idaho Falls, two were from Meridian, and the fifth was from Grangeville.

George Vasil of Meridian said there were dozens of people in his area upset about the veto, and planning and zoning in general.

He said most of the ill will was centered on the Ada County Commission because that body allegedly acts on every whim of Boise, but ignores Meridian.

Vasil acknowledged that the large-scale recall process would have little chance of success, but that it might serve to make people aware of the feelings of some landowners in rural Ada County.

"It may not do any good to recall," Vasil said. "We're just unhappy." He said he and several other landowners are in a "no man's land" as a result of the Ada County Commission "dictators" whose planning policies have slowed development in the area.

The Meridian landowners also are "unhappy about the 1 percent deal," and Evans' opposition to immediate implementation of the people-passed property tax initiative, Vasil said.

"I think the main reason for a recall would be to bring attention to show how we feel," Vasil said. "We sent letters to the governor but he ignored them."

Ms. Olason said there would be a statewide recall effort against Evans. She said the vetoed bill "came from the little people all over Idaho."

She also said there would be a statewide effort "to replace these liberal legislators with good people who consider the property rights of the people."

"The people are angry about the (land-use) controls put on them," she said, adding that the bill would have given people the right to vote on these controls.

Wayne James, a Grangeville rancher, said he had discussed the veto with several people in Idaho County and "we just called to get some information from the secretary of state."

"We have no direct plans at this time," James said. "We might use it now later."

James complained that Idaho County residents have been fighting the county commissioners since the statewide land-use planning law took effect in 1975.

"I don't think the majority of the people like it," he said. "It should be up to the people rather than the state. It should come when the people ask for it."

He said the recall idea "just popped into our heads."

Many people around the state disapprove of the land-use veto, but there is no coordinated design to get the governor, James said. He said, however, there is "some thought" of forming a coalition.

The Idaho House tried but failed to override the veto Wednesday afternoon. The leading spokesman for those wanting to save the bill, Rep. Lyman Winchester, R-Kuna, said the people have been "robbed" by Evans "in their quest to determine their own best interests."

To throw Evans, a Democrat, out of office, an exact, demanding process must be followed, Cenarrusa said.

The petition's organizers would have to submit their document for examination, then would have 60 days to acquire the signatures of 20 percent of the voters who were registered for the 1978 general election — 165,251.

If the required number was collected, the secretary of state would certify the signatures and if a sufficient number were rejected, the petitioners would have 30 more days to make up the difference with new signatures.

After final certification, Cenarrusa would call a special recall election unless Evans resigned within five days following certification of the petition.

In the special election, 169,540 or more votes would be needed to throw Evans out of office. That's the number he got when elected in November 1978.

Maine growers dump potatoes at border crossing to blockade Canadian potatoes from entering U.S.

Irate potato farmers block border

MADAWASKA, Maine (UPI) — Angry farmers Thursday dumped tons of potatoes on roadways to blockade nine Canadian border crossings in protest against the U.S. government's refusal to stop Canadian export imports.

All traffic over the international line was choked off at the nine points. Crossings outside the state's huge northern farming area were not affected.

The farmers dumped piles of potatoes on the roadways in the state's rural northeastern section and then parked their empty trucks across the travel lanes.

U.S. and Canadian customs agents said the blockade caused backups of up to 50 cars and trucks on both sides of the international line. About 75 Canadians had to abandon their cars and walk across the border to get to work at the Fraser Paper Mill in Madawaska.

"We'll stay here until we hear something good from the Commerce Department," said potato farmer Danny LeBrie of St. Agatha.

The blockades began about 5 a.m. in Port Kent, Madawaska, Van Buren, Hamlin, Limestone, Fort Fairfield, Bridgewater, Monticello and Houlton. State and local police made no attempt to break up the blockades, although Gov. Joseph E. Brennan said arrests could come later if the protest reached a point "where it is no longer reasonable."

"They've got trucks, tractors, pickups, and a whole mess of stuff out there," said Madawaska policeman David Cowie. "And they dumped a couple loads of potatoes on the roadway. They're very well organized."

"We support the blockade, and we'll let them stay there as long as there's no trouble," said Cowie. "We aren't expecting any."

Canadian Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan called the farmers' action "unfortunate. We have the same tariff going both ways," he said.

The farmers demanded that the U.S. Commerce Department ban the import of Canadian potatoes, which they said were flooding the East Coast market and forcing already low prices downward.

The Maine Sales Association said the state produced 2.9 billion pounds of potatoes last fall, of which about 1.6 billion pounds were sold as of March 1. Canadian potato imports, meanwhile, increased 18.6 million pounds this year, the group said.

U.S. Commerce Commissioner Peter Klutznick told Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, D-Maine, Thursday he could not take immediate action.

Protest, fear mark TMI milestone

MIDDLETOWN, Pa. (UPI) — Some people like Winnie Hershey who can see the Three Mile Island nuclear power plant from their bedroom windows are tired of the publicity. Others say they are tired of being afraid.

"The people are edgy," said Gov. Dick Thornburgh of the local citizenry who readied for the first anniversary today of the worst nuclear power plant accident in U.S. history.

"I am scared to death," said Mary Enterline of Highspire, who some times breaks down and cries because she fears her two-year-old son may be affected by radiation from the nuclear accident.

But, indicative of the divided opinion in Middletown and in the other small communities in the vicinity of Three Mile Island, Mrs. Hershey is more concerned with threats of this week's anti-nuclear protesters than nuclear reactors.

"You get a mob of people together, and you don't know what's going to happen," said Mrs. Hershey as she romped on her front lawn with her granddaughter, Sacha Crater, 3, and dog, Toby.

People are greeting the nuclear plant accident anniversary with anguish and gallows humor. Some are absolutely frightened. Others have patience or even disregard.

Middletown Mayor Robert Reld suggested local banks install a radiation count along with their digital time-and-temperature clocks. "So I'd know when to run." Local stores sell t-shirts emblazoned: "A Little Nukky Never Hurt Anyone."

Others worry. John Lesniak, 11, a sixth-grader at nearby Elizabethtown Elementary School, confronted federal Nuclear Regulatory Commission officials, demanding:

"What is going to be the future status of kids my age, physically and mentally?"

Nobody knows for sure, but scores of people have uprooted and moved away, frightened of future problems as the four-year process to decommission and rebuild the nuclear plant continues.

Nearly 150,000 people evacuated the area during the crisis last April. According to the state Health Department, three months later more than 100 families, representing some 500 of the 38,000 people in a five-mile radius of the nuclear plant, had moved away, some because of what they felt was a terrifying experience.

Professor shot in classroom

Dean's son held for killing

BIG RAPIDS, Mich. (UPI) — A Ferris State College student who shot and killed his accounting professor before a horrified class of 30 students a day after he failed a test lay in a "near catatonic state" Thursday.

Authorities made arrangements to arraign Thomas D. Kakonis, 20, the son of an associate dean at the college, in a hospital bed in Wednesday's slaying of Robert Brauer, 34, associate professor of accountancy.

"Our information is that he was informed Tuesday by the victim that he failed an accounting exam. We have no other motive than this," Assistant Mecosta County prosecutor George Van Kula said.

Kakonis was taken from the county jail to Mecosta County General Hospital about four hours after the shooting.

"A doctor described him as being in a near catatonic state," Van Kula said. "He's just not responding. I don't know that he's physically capable ... I'm not aware he has said even one word since this has happened."

Van Kula said doctors took blood and urine samples from Kakonis to determine if he had taken any drugs.

"You have to assume that possibility in something as bizarre as this. We're checking everything," he said.

Van Kula said Brauer was shot four times from a six-to-eight-foot range with a 9-millimeter automatic handgun that belonged to Kakonis' father. He said Kakonis had no previous history of violence or known mental disorders.

Citizen stress must be weighed in TMI decision

HARRISBURG, Pa. (UPI) — Three Mile Island should not reopen without consideration of the fears of anxious citizens who experienced the country's worst nuclear mishap a year ago, Gov. Dick Thornburgh said Thursday.

Thornburgh, on the eve of the first anniversary of the March 28, 1979, accident, met with Nuclear Regulatory Commission official Harold DeLeon. The two agreed that psychological stress on people living near the plant must be considered in any decisions about TMI.

"The basic problem that the nuclear industry faces in this decade is far more psychological than it is technological," said Thornburgh, who had been in office 72 days when the accident occurred. "The biggest barrier to those who would call for the further promotion of nuclear energy is a psychological barrier, dealing with anxieties."

Blood tests likely because of eggs

By STEVE LIPSON
Times-News writer

MALTA — Health officials decided Thursday to take blood samples from some of the people in southeastern Idaho who may have eaten contaminated eggs. But the eggs contaminated with the insecticide chlordane, do not appear to present a serious health hazard, according to state and federal officials.

Chlordane is a suspected cancer-causing chemical that has been banned from all uses except termite control since 1976. Federal regulations do not permit any traces of chlordane in food.

Until further tests are completed, the Idaho Department of Agriculture has prohibited the Juniper Valley Poultry Farm, located near the Utah border south of Burley, from selling any of its approximately 350 chickens and 12,000 eggs, which may be contaminated.

About 70 Idaho families purchased eggs from the poultry farm, according to Karen Tolman, environmental health specialist for the South Central District Health Department in Burley. The number of contaminated eggs sold in Idaho is probably no more than 40 dozen, he said. These people have been told not to eat the eggs, he said. And sometime next week blood samples will be taken to determine the extent of the danger to the people who have eaten contaminated eggs.

Dr. Dorrell Brock, director of the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare's Bureau of Laboratories, said the eggs probably don't present an immediate threat to the people who ate them.

None of the chickens contaminated with the insecticide have died, he said. If there is a health problem, it will be from the long term effects of chlordane.

The Juniper Valley Poultry Farm is owned by Bruce Campbell, who could not be reached for comment Thursday.

Officials said that chlordane was apparently put into the water supply of a hen house at the poultry farm during the last week in January. Max Hanson, director of the state Department of Agriculture, said the department is investigating the possibility that state pesticide laws were violated.

Brock said chlordane may have been used in the past to control mites and insects in hen houses, but it was never intended for internal use.

Almost all of the eggs produced at the farm after the contamination occurred were shipped to the Ballard Egg Co. at Logan, Utah. Officials estimate that the number could be 5,000 dozen to 6,000 dozen.

Ballard sold the eggs to the Salt Lake Egg Co. of Salt Lake City, where contamination was first discovered about two weeks ago. It was traced back to the Juniper Valley Poultry Farm, where tests by the Utah Department of Agriculture found eggs containing .56 parts per million of chlordane at the beginning of this week.

The Salt Lake Egg Co. sold eggs to three Utah bakeries, the Dunford and Little Dutch bakeries in Salt Lake City, and Pepperidge Farms Inc. in Richmond.

The FDA has been testing products coming out of the three bakeries and has not detected chlordane, according to Ed Sturgeon, supervisory investigator for the FDA in Salt Lake City. The test equipment cannot detect concentrations below 1 part per million, he said.

Sturgeon said the contaminated eggs only amount to about 200 pounds in 13,000 pounds of liquid eggs. The contaminated eggs are further diluted because eggs make up only 5 to 15 percent of the ingredients in the bakery product being produced.

"The dilution factor is such that we can't find anything," he said.

Sturgeon said that between 160 and 400 dozen contaminated eggs may also have been sold to Eric Campbell, the brother of the owner of the Juniper Valley Poultry Farm. Those eggs are gone and Campbell is contacting people who may have bought them.

"We don't regard this as a serious health hazard since .56 parts per million is the highest concentration we've seen," he said.

Brock said information coming out Thursday indicated that the contamination may not be as serious as was first thought. FDA tests showed only 1 part per million in recently laid eggs, which means that the chlordane is disappearing from the hens, he said.

Recall not popular with Filer council

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

FILER — Three Filer City Council members said Thursday they do not support the move to recall Councilman Lee Alexander.

Councilmen John Glandon and Robert Fort said they do not think the city should have to bear the cost of an election as the result of a personal grudge between two men.

Wanda Shaffer, the only woman on the council, said the city has more important problems to attend to than the recall.

Their opposition, however, will make no difference if the petitions the recall backers turned in Wednesday are found to contain the necessary number of signatures of registered voters.

City Clerk Frances Wells has 10 days from Wednesday in which to determine if the petitions have been signed by 83 registered voters. As of Thursday, she had not begun to check the signatures.

If the clerk determines that enough signatures have been gathered, she must notify Alexander, who then has five days to decide whether to resign. If he does not resign, an election must be held within 30 to 40 days.

Alexander said Thursday he will take his full five days to make up his mind, if necessary.

Glandon, who has joined with Alexander in an attempt to reduce the size of the police department, said he does not feel there is enough evidence against Alexander to warrant a recall.

"It's a personal matter between Crawford (former city councilman Charles Crawford Jr., who has spearheaded the recall drive) and Alexander. I don't think there should be an election to settle a personal matter. Besides this, I believe if people want to call an election to remove a city official, they should have to pay election costs," Glandon said.

LELAND ALEXANDER

Fort said he, too, feels a personal matter should never come to a public vote for settlement. He said Alexander has not committed any deed worthy of a recall move.

Shaffer, in her first year on the council, said, "I think we have a lot of important issues in Filer that need our time and attention. I'm sorry to see this show up at a time like this. This should never have happened."

She said she believes the present council works well together and she has enjoyed working with all of the members.

Mayor Eldon Ryals declined to comment, saying he is not involved in the recall move in any way and he is staying completely out of it.

Alexander said Thursday he feels the issue is the result of a grudge against him by Crawford and Gerald Mullen. Alexander said he voted for the removal of Mullen when he was fire chief.

The recall petition charges Alexander with "malfeasance" while in office and failure to live up to his oath of office as a city official.

The petition lists five specific bases for the recall:

- That Alexander has openly stated his opposition to the Filer Police Department's enforcement of certain city ordinances and state laws;
- That he has stated that enforcement of city ordinances and state laws by the police department constituted harassment and multiple;
- That his opposition of the enforcement of laws is a violation of his oath of office and therefore he cannot fully perform his obligations as a councilman to the best of his ability or best interest of the citizens of Filer;
- That his critical attitude toward police officers has created conflict which makes working conditions for the officers unbearable, and has caused animosity between officers and City Council members;
- That Alexander has allowed himself to become personally involved in certain cases, which is contrary to his oath of office, and that he is biased in these matters.

Twin Falls youth dies in rollover

TWIN FALLS — A 21-year-old Twin Falls man was killed about 6 p.m. Thursday in a pickup truck rollover on the Bell Rapids road.

Twin Falls County Sheriff James Munn said the name of the young man was being withheld Thursday night pending notification of his family.

The sheriff said the man was traveling at a slow speed on the farm project at the time and apparently lost control of the pickup truck.

The sheriff said the vehicle rolled over several times before coming to rest in a borrow pit.

The driver was thrown out and died at the scene, Munn said. Investigation was still under way late Thursday night and the sheriff said it was not known what caused the vehicle to go out of control.

Stoker's deputy announces bid for prosecutor's position

TWIN FALLS — Chief Deputy Prosecutor Thomas Gray Thursday announced his bid for the office of Twin Falls County prosecutor.

Gray hopes to replace Jeff Stoker, who has announced he is not seeking re-election.

Gray said he will file his petition early next week for the Republican nomination.

Gray has served in the Twin Falls office since January 1979, coming from Gooding County, where he worked six months in the prosecuting attorney's office.

A graduate of the University of Tulsa Law School in 1977, Gray says all of his legal experience has been in the field of prosecution and in the state of Idaho.

In his present post, Gray works with a majority of the juvenile cases, handles child support, child abuse and neglect and mental cases for the county. He said he has also worked in the civil matters for the county, including providing legal advice to elected officials.

"I think my two years in the office gives me the best preparation for the office I could have," Gray said. "The Twin Falls County prosecuting attorney position now requires full time, and I am prepared to give it my full time."

Gray said his major concern is with juvenile justice.

"I feel we need to concentrate our efforts here to prevent growing problems in the future. We now have some magistrates and a number of law enforcement officers who are deeply concerned with the juvenile cases, and I think we can do a good job in this area," Gray said.

He said it is important the juveniles get personal involvement through the court system and that people from the community become involved with the court system in directing juveniles away from criminal trends.

He said this was begun with the present prosecutor staff, but a follow-up is needed.

Gray, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Gray of Thompson, Ill., graduated from high school there and says he came to Idaho because he is a backpacking enthusiast. He visited friends who were working in this area for the summer and who introduced him to the Idaho mountain trails, and he decided this was the place for him to live. Gray is unmarried and in addition to his parents, he has six brothers and sisters.

He said he is a Republican, but has not been strongly affiliated with any political party in the past. His main concern, he said, is being able to do a good job as prosecutor.

PUC decisions

Mountain Bell picks up 15.4% rate jump

BOISE (UPI) — Mountain Bell Telephone Co. received a 15.4 percent rate increase from the Idaho Public Utilities Commission Thursday, a hike that will generate more than $7.9 million in additional revenues.

Commissioners said the rate hike adheres to President Carter's wage and price guidelines and will allow the company an opportunity for a 12.5 percent return on stockholder investments.

Services affected are: monthly residence and business rates, residential extension phones and touch-tone line charges.

All exchanges in Idaho are classified into five rate groups. The increase means hikes for residential customers from $5.40 to $6.23 per month for residential charges in the first rate group, which includes Councils; $1.90 to $2.41 in the second rate group, which includes Preston; $6.40 to $7.39 in the third rate group, which includes Jerome; $6.90 to $7.97 in the fourth, Burley; and $7.40 to $8.54 for the fifth, Boise.

Charges in residential extension phones provided by Mountain Bell will increase from $1.00 to $1.15 and all touch-tone line charges will go up from 41 cents to 47 cents per line.

Directory assistance, local pay telephone calls, long-distance calls placed within the state to other Idaho locations and measured residential service are not affected by the increases.

Included in the $7,916,000 increase is $1,111,000 the company paid to smaller telephone companies in February by order of the PUC. This amount helped to equalize revenue collections through the intrastate long-distance pool, commissioners said. The pool includes all telephone companies in Idaho and is administered by Mountain Bell under PUC supervision.

Aluminum recycling firm closing

TWIN FALLS — The Reynolds Aluminum Recycling Co. will close its Twin Falls recycling station Saturday.

Reynolds has arranged for Hamilton Manufacturing and Distributing to accept aluminum for recycling beginning Monday.

In a news release announcing the closing, Peter Whited, Reynolds district recycling manager, said, "We have been disappointed in the results we have obtained in the Twin Falls area for the last year and we felt it is no longer economically feasible to operate."

The recycling plant has been operated by Reynolds since 1974, when the company took it over from the Jaycoes.

Gene Hamilton, of Hamilton Manufacturing, said his company already accepts newspaper and cardboard for recycling so he will continue to collect aluminum more efficiently than Reynolds. He won't have to hire any new people or rent additional space to handle the aluminum.

It will also be more convenient for people who have recyclable material to come to Hamilton where they can drop off aluminum and paper at the same time, he said.

Reynolds will continue to operate its mobile recycling center in Burley. The center stops at Albertson's on Tuesday and Friday, from 10 a.m. to noon, and Saturday, from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Idaho Power gets 26% temporary hike

BOISE (UPI) — Idaho Power Co. has been granted a 26 percent temporary rate increase by the Idaho Public Utilities Commission.

The increase could raise $3.2 million a year for the utility and could boost the monthly bill for a residential customer using 1,000 kilowatt hours a month to about $31 from the current $24.97.

At the same time, the commission agreed to follow PUC's recommendation to delay issuing a final order on the case until it decides Idaho Power's 85 percent rate increase request for PUC Co.'s Pocatello plant. PUC's plant used about 14 percent of the electricity generated by the company in 1979.

The decision on the Electric Control Board's rate increases are applied to all of the company's 247,836 customers in Idaho, eastern Oregon and northern Nevada, said commissioner Ralph Wickberg Wednesday.

Wickberg said the order was designed to help Idaho Power President James Bruce and Senior Vice President Robert Klump in their meetings in New York City Wednesday with bond-rating analysts from Moody's and Standard and Poor's.

The company now has an "A" bond rating from both rating services. If the rating drops, the cost of financing improvements to the company's system could go up substantially as investors demand a greater return on their investment.

An increase in financing costs could cause greater rate hikes later on, Wickberg said.

Tax commission chairman cites new computer, training

State tax return snafu won't be repeated

BOISE (UPI) — The chairman of the Idaho Tax Commission said last year's state tax return processing fluro was not repeated this year. For the past two years, computer problems caused by undeveloped computer programs delayed the processing of state tax returns, said commission chairman Jenkin Palmer. "We just simply didn't have the programming done adequately," Palmer said. He said last year, the commission was limited to a certain time period in which it could use the state's central computer in the auditor's office and if the programs would not run, the programmers would have to wait until the commission's scheduled time period the next day. Palmer said the commission did not have the access to the computer it needed. Palmer said the main reason operations were running more smoothly this year was due to the purchase of a mini-computer to complement the department's use of the auditor's computer. "We were aware the auditor was moving to an new office building and we didn't want to have that problem again," Palmer said. He said the new computer speeds processing up by allowing programmers to run a new program immediately if one fails, rather than waiting a day or before. The year before, the department experimented with the Nebraska income tax system, which is predicated on a percentage of federal taxes, Palmer said. He said by the time the department figured out that Nebraska's program would not adapt to Idaho's and began to develop its own program, "we were way behind." This year, however, Palmer said the department is operating much more efficiently. He said it processed 15,000 returns last week and has processed 50,000 to date. That's 24,000 more than the department had processed last year at this time, he said. He said the department already had sent back more than $5 million in refunds. "Everything is go. We've not had any breakdowns." Palmer said the Governor's Management Task Force also had recommended the department revamp its entire processing system from the time the returns are delivered until they are processed. An architect was hired to design a system which Palmer said, "has enhanced processing considerably." He said the new system is "more or less a direct line," compared to the system the department used while housed at its old location on Fort Street in Boise, where operations "were scattered here and there." Palmer said the department also trained employees last fall on the operation of the mini-computer. He said all the state tax returns would be processed by June 1. "If we're lucky," but said it would probably be closer to the middle of the month.

Draft plan on Salmon River nears release

BOISE (UPI) — A spokesman for the U.S. Forest Service said Wednesday the agency will complete in two or three weeks a draft interim management plan which will try to control public use of the Salmon River below North Fork. Richard Bacon, North Fork District ranger, said the plan will cover two miles of the river, the recreational portion from North Fork to Cort Creek and the wild section from Cort Creek to Vinegar Creek. Bacon said management of the recreational section will be for little control, although there will be voluntary registration to determine use. He said the plan proposes to control the wild river section by allocating permits for commercial outfitters. "We need to see the public's needs are being met, but there will be no large increase in the number of outfitters," Bacon said. He said the plan also proposes to maintain power boat use at 1978 levels.

Bacon said the Forest Service is concerned about future increases in use of the river. "We are looking at an 8,000 figure for visitors in the river corridor, then we will re-evaluate the carrying capacity," he said. He said the plan also will address what will be done with old cabins along the river, trails and signs. Bacon said he does not foresee any large expenditures along the river for such facilities as boat ramps and camping areas.

4 potato grower groups hold meeting in Caldwell

CALDWELL (UPI) — Four Idaho potato grower groups met in Caldwell Wednesday to unite in an effort to improve prices and sales of the state's best known, but economically troubled crop. In the wake of two poor price and sales years, the leadership of the Idaho Farm Bureau Federation, the National Farmers Organization and two smaller organizations called together their members Wednesday and urged them to back a cooperative marketing program. However, the Potato Growers of Idaho, the state's largest group with 1,600 members, did not join the movement. "For the first time the leadership is agreeing and they are working together to improve prices," Carl Reynolds, executive secretary of the Boise-based Western Potato Growers, told the meeting of 35 growers in Caldwell. But he warned the new coalition will have to attract "a majority, a significant percentage of all potato growers," and urged those attending the meeting to recruit other growers.

Leaders of the fourth participative group—the Independent Potato Growers, based in Burley, and leaders of the NFO were not at the meeting. Representatives of the Farm Bureau and Western Potato Growers outlined three goals for the marketing effort: "Develop a marketing program for all potato growers to ensure a reasonable rate of return on investment. "Balance supply and demand. "Develop contract programs for fresh, or open market, and seed potatoes. Other ideas proposed by the groups are to establish an insurance program utilizing grower contributions to buy up excess supplies from the market, establishing sliding price contracts with buyers so prices would drop as supplies increase, require processors to give the organizations priority in signing contracts, and marketing Idaho potatoes as a premium product.

Air Force crash victims identified

MOUNTAIN HOME (UPI) — The crash of an F-111A jet fighter 30 miles south of Mountain Home Air Force Base killed two airmen, one from Minneapolis and the other from Overland Park, Kan. Capt. George Titus, base information officer, said the pilot was Maj. Joseph Baker, 37, Minneapolis. The weapons system officer was Capt. Larry Honza, 33, Overland Park, Kan. Both were members of the 390th Tactical Fighter Squadron and were on a one-plane routine training mission. They were at 10,000 to 15,000 feet over the Saylor-Creek gunnery and bombing range and were doing what Titus termed "aircraft handling maneuvers." Titus said a range officer who witnessed the crash said that as the plane was about to crash, someone activated the ejection capsule. But the capsule was too close to the ground and crashed before its parachute opened. He said the cause of the crash, which occurred about 11:15 a.m. Wednesday, was not known. A board of investigating officers was appointed Wednesday and an advance party was at the crash site, Titus said.

Wyoming phone firm told to trim rates, fire manager

CHEYENNE, Wyo. (UPI) — Valley Telephone Co. of Baggs, Wyo., could find itself in trouble with the state attorney general if it fails to replace its manager and lower rates within three weeks, the Public Service Commission reports.

In a statement made public Monday, the state regulatory agency declared a "clear and imperative public emergency" and ordered Valley to replace current Manager James F. Munter and reduce rates in the amount of his salary until his replacement is hired.

The commission said if the company, which serves about 400 subscribers, fails to replace Munter within three weeks of receipt of an order dated March 21 the case will be referred to the attorney general's office.

"Valley has not shown the disposition or ability to maintain its facilities adequately, and such continuing deterioration of service into the future is diametrically contrary to the interests of persons served by it," the PSC said.

The result of referring the case to the attorney general, the commission said, would be "whatever penalties the state courts might assess" and the placing of Valley Telephone in receivership. Munter's replacement must be approved by the commission.

The March 21 order followed a process which began last year. In June, the PSC convened a two-day public hearing and heard numerous subscribers' detail complaints of service inadequacies, failures and lack of repairs. In August, the commission ordered the firm to correct the problems.

In its latest order, the commission said continued written and telephone complaints, plus commission staff investigations, revealed that corrective work was not performed.

The company is independently owned and financed by the Rural Electrification Administration, and serves subscribers in the southern Wyoming communities of Baggs, Dixon, and Savery and the northern Colorado town of Slater.

The PSC's order declared a "clear and imperative public emergency" in this case, requiring stringent measures to provide basic telephone service required for the safety and welfare of the rural public.

"The PSC ordered Valley to reduce its local service rates in the amount of the present manager's salary until he is replaced."

to provide safe, adequate and efficient service in its total service area under its filed tariffs as required by law. Based upon its failure to provide service in its Savery and other similarly situated areas for in excess of 10 years as shown by the record, all Valley's certificate authority is subject to cancellation," the PSC said.

37-year wait for citation rewarded

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (UPI) — Sam Parks got his Bronze Star citation and he only had to wait 37 years — to the day — from the World War II battle that earned him the commendation for bravery.

Parks, who was wounded in Tunisia Feb. 19, 1943, while directing artillery fire against German tanks, had heard he was to be cited for bravery, but he never received a medal.

He attempted to confirm the report after he retired from the Army in 1961.

"Around 1965, my children started harassing me, asking about the medal," he said Monday. "So I started writing letters to everybody I could think of."
"One day, a Bronze Star came in the mail — nothing else," he said. "I would have been content to put it up on the wall, but my children said I should get the citation, too."

Human French fry' dips in

LAURETTE, La. (UPI) — Rip Howell bills himself as the "Human French Fry." He is sitting in a tub of ketchup today hoping to establish a world record.

"I'm totally insane," the University of Southwestern Louisiana geology student said Tuesday in a telephone interview.

He was sitting in a bathtub filled with 31 gallons of ketchup in which he hoped to remain until 6 p.m. today. "I'm just crazy enough to do it," he said.

Howell, 23, of Pineville, La., said there is no record for the ketchup squat in the Guinness Book of records. He was shooting for 34 consecutive hours, with five-minute breaks for necessities.

"It smells like ketchup, but after a while you don't notice it," Howell said. "I got the idea from a person over in Alabama who sat in a tub of chocolate pudding for 28 hours. This was done on real short notice."

Howell took his seat at 8 a.m. Tuesday in the giant tub, squatting in his shorts. The tub was covered by his body up to his waist. For added protection, Howell covered the submerged parts of his body in petroleum jelly.

"There's been no itching so far," Howell said. "The doctors said it may stain my skin a bit but it should only last for a week or two. It probably won't be permanent. But who knows? There's no precedent for this."

Juveniles in adult jails criticized

© The Los Angeles Times

DENVER — Half a million juveniles, many of them runaways or truants who have committed no crime, are locked up in adult jails each year.

Their incarceration results in a heavy toll of emotional and physical injury to the youngsters, researchers reported at a national seminar Wednesday.

Social workers and officials from 31 states attending a "Children in Jails" conference there were urged to mount a national effort to eliminate the practice of detaining juveniles in adult jails.

"The problem of children in adult jails has been talked about for years. The time for change is here," said Rosemary Ahmann, a Minnesota county commissioner who heads the criminal justice committee of the National Association of Counties.

Her plea was supported by Ira M. Schwartz, administrator of the Department of Justice's office of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention. He reported that the Carter administration has proposed that Congress "absolutely prohibit the detention and confinement of juveniles in any institution in which adults, whether convicted or awaiting trial, are confined."

Others at the conference cited a 1976 study by the Children's Defense Fund, which found frequent instances in which juveniles "are placed in cells with adults charged with violent crime." The cases included:

- A 15-year-old girl who was confined with a 35-year-old woman charged with murder.
- A 15-year-old boy, arrested for shuffling, who was placed in the same cell with a man charged with shooting another man.

A 14-year-old girl confined in the same cell with two women charged with drug use, women who cut themselves with pieces of glass several times.

Sometimes, in an attempt to protect juveniles from attacks by adult prisoners, jail officials keep the youngsters in solitary confinement. This, too, can have adverse effects, researchers said.

They cited the case of a 16-year-old Florida youth, arrested for purse-snatching, who spent 201 days in an adult maximum security facility, much of it in solitary confinement. He became increasingly disturbed, they said, and finally set fire to his urethane mattress. The resulting smoky blast killed one of 10 prisoners, including the boy himself.

Buhl woman gets post

BOISE — Sally Thomas, Buhl High School graduate, has been elected Associated Student Body president at Boise State University.

Thomas is the first woman since 1963 to be elected to the highest student government office at the university.

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gene Thomas of Filer. She grew up in the Buhl area where she was active in the First Christian Church and a member of the national honor society in high school.

A 41-year-old senior English major, the new president-elect brings to office a diversified background in student leadership and participation in campus activities. Besides 2 1/2 years' experience as editor of the university's newspaper, "The Arbiter,"

Thomas has been chairman of the BSU Core Curriculum Revision Committee and a member of the Arts and Humanities Building and the Morrison Center Project Core committees. She also served this year as vice-president of the selection committee for BSU's academic honorary Phi Kappa Phi.

One of Thomas' major campaign issues was her support for a student-run Public Interest Research Group (PIRG) at Boise State. PIRG is a national lobbying and consumer research organization that students have been trying to organize at BSU.

Thomas also said during the campaign that students should have a voice in the future operation of the new BSU Pavilion.

She will take office in mid-April, according to university officials.

While some parents ignored, others have too much togetherness

By MAUREEN EARLY
©Newsday

"All of our friends' children are gone. Where have we gone wrong?"

An elderly mother is talking about her grown children. Complaints of being ignored and treated with hostility by their adult offspring are common among parents, but psychologist Howard Halpern has found that for some, like this woman, the problem, is too much contact.

In researching his book, "No Strings Attached: A Guide to a Better Relationship with Your Grown-Up Child" (Simon and Schuster, $9.95), Halpern discovered, to his surprise, that "a great many parents complained of too much contact."

Such complaints are based, he said, on divorced children returning to their parental homes, often with a youngster or two of their own in tow; on grown children who fear to leave a safe haven to establish a home of their own, or on offspring who are emotionally ready to leave, but who, for economic reasons, cannot afford to set up housekeeping on their own.

Such situations a new way of living has to be formulated between the generations. And there will be clashes, Halpern said. "There are always clashes when arbitrary circumstances prevent the separateness that should be taking place at that age."

Living at home, however, does not necessarily mean that a child is stuck in his development, Halpern said. "Some children live at home with parents, and they get along very well as separate people. Problems occur when parents become too intrusive and the kids don't apply common courtesy."

On the other hand, parents may become so afraid their child is staying home because "he is afraid of the world out there. He is afraid to be self-supporting." When this happens, said Halpern, the adult child either gets depressed or becomes abusive, regarding his parents as jailers, while knowing full well that his refuge is a prison of his own making.

What can parents with grown children at home do?

Halpern, a former president of the American Academy of Psychotherapists who practices in New York City, had this to say:

"First, check out your own motives. Do you inwardly want to maintain the situation because you like control and fear abandonment? Often, parents don't want to face their own loneliness. Both may be afraid that without the child, there is no real basis for their relationship anymore. "If you do have these negative needs, they will come out in subtle ways that are in collusion with the child's needs. "If you truly want to correct the situation, you must approach the child, saying something like this:

"The situation is just not good for either of us. I'm not throwing you out right now, but we do need to think of a way in which you can be self-sufficient as soon as possible."

• Explore the constructive steps you can take. It may be locating good professional training for the child. It may be a brief period of supporting the child outside the home alone. It might be underwriting professional counseling. The idea is to get the growth process starting again.

"Whatever, you must serve notice that this situation cannot go on forever. You must reassure the child you are not rejecting him but are helping to launch him."

• Is there ever a time when you can stop parenting? There is no sudden cut-off point, said Halpern, just a slow developmental process to a point when your services are not truly needed. He advises encouraging independence at each fork in the road to adulthood.

"You are the parent until the day you die," Halpern said. "But giving and nurturing has to be redefined. Parents who are giving and nurturing in terms appropriate to when their children were young, who continue that same kind of nurturing, are not doing themselves and their child any good. After the very early years the parents' job is to help their children become separate, strong, and independent individuals."

Dear Abby

Mom advised to suffer in silence over ruined mattress

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
Dear Abby: Here's the situation: Last weekend my 12-year-old son, Danny, asked if he could invite his 13-year-old friend, Steve, to sleep over. Steve had just moved into the neighborhood and Danny was the only friend he had.

over, but the next morning when he discovered he had had an "accident," he begged Danny not to tell me or his mother about it. What can I do, Abby? Should I tell Steve's mother (whom I haven't met) and hope she offers to buy me a new mattress? STEAMED DOWN SOUTH. DEAR STEAMED: I wouldn't. The poor kid probably has suffered enough humiliation as it is. But to tell Danny to tell Steve that since such an "accident" can happen, if he plans to sleep over anywhere, he should bring his own bedding, plus a rubber sheet.

DEAR ABBY: What is this world coming to? Yesterday I received a birth announcement, proudly announcing the birth of a baby girl. The mother is 21, the father is 40. He is married, but is separated from his wife of nearly 20 years! This man's wife and legitimate children live in the city and are well-known. To top it off, the proud parents signed themselves, "Gator Guy" and "Wooly Woman" — some clan, sect or gang name. We were really stunned. My question is: Is a gift in order for an illegitimate child? TOO OLD TO COPE DEAR T.O.T.C.: There are no "illegitimate children" — just illegitimate parents. Don't penalize an innocent child because of the circumstances of his birth. DEAR ABBY: For quite some time I've wanted to ask your opinion regarding the practice of some people who turn their left hand backward in a so-called "friendly" handshake, rather than extend their right hand in the conventional manner. I vaguely recall having read somewhere that this is a "taken" handshake which says, "I don't care for you, but nevertheless here's my left hand to indicate to folks nearby that we know each other." (It's just a cut above a snub.) I would prefer to be ignored rather than "accept" this flimsy left-hand handshake. How do you feel about it? RIGHT HAND, PLEASE. DEAR RIGHT: On occasion I've been offered a left hand to shake and I shook it; I'm sure there were times when I have offered MY left hand, too. Why look for some hidden meaning? It simply could indicate that one's right hand is otherwise occupied, that the left hand is the handier or the right hand is wearing a large ring which invariably cuts into the flesh when grasped too tightly. Or some reason other than a putdown. (Are there questions you can't ask your parents? Get Abby's new booklet: WHAT TEEN-AGERS OUGHT TO KNOW. Drugs, sex and alcohol are plainly discussed. Send $2 and a long, stamped (28 cents) self-addressed envelope to Abby, 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.)

Health

Stroke possible even for the healthy

By LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.
Newspaper Enterprise Association
Dear Dr. Lamb: I'm writing to you about my daughter who is 65 years old. She went to town with her cousin. She came home 10 minutes after she had left and said she felt funny and couldn't stand on her feet. She went to the bathroom, so I put my arm around her, but before we got there she went down with no feeling in her left foot and all her left side. We called the doctor, and he said she had a stroke. He put her in the hospital but two weeks have passed and there has not been any improvement. She gets two therapies treatments a day, but her hand and foot are useless. She has a good mind and has never had high blood pressure and didn't smoke. Why would something strike her just like that? Will she ever get better? Her doctor tells her it will take time. I really need her and miss her so much. Dear Reader, Of course, you miss her. It's always a shock when you see someone who appears to be perfectly healthy develop some sudden severe illness such as a stroke or heart attack. It's true that smoking cigarettes, having high blood pressure, eating high cholesterol levels all increase your risk of having either a stroke or a heart attack. The fact that you don't have any of these risk factors doesn't guarantee that you won't have one. It just decreases the risk. By the time a woman reaches 65 years of age in our society, she frequently has quite a few fatty cholesterol deposits in her arteries to the brain, to the heart and elsewhere in the body just like men. That's why the rates of heart attacks for men and women become equal at about that age. At earlier ages, they are more common in men.

Strokes are sometimes confusing to people because they can produce such a wide variety of symptoms. Almost all of our visible body functions are passed through the brain. Moving your feet, hands and body all depend on going through the central switchboard of the brain itself. The same applies to speaking, swallowing and various facial movements. A stroke involves damage to an area of the brain. If it happens to be an area that controls the left arm and left leg, they may be paralyzed as in your daughter's case. A different area might involve the right arm and right leg and they would be paralyzed. Still a different area might affect the speech. To give you a better idea of what strokes are and what can be done about them, I am sending you The Health Letter number 26, Strokes, Cerebral Vascular Accident — Cerebral Thrombosis. Other readers who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019. To prevent strokes you should do about the same things you do to try to prevent heart attacks. Stay lean, stay on a lowfat, low-cholesterol diet, stay physically active and don't smoke cigarettes. The same measures are important after a stroke has occurred to avoid a second one. Certain medicines are also important. Many patients can be significantly improved by early therapy. The fact that your daughter is in the hospital and getting therapy is in her favor. Such early therapy often will help a person regain his speech more rapidly (it is possible or regain better muscle function.)

Feeling guilty said no longer fashionable

By DIANE WHITE
Boston Globe
Feeling guilty doesn't seem to be as fashionable as it used to be. People these days are alarmingly honest about doing all sorts of things that ought to be guilt-provoking but don't seem to be. It doesn't make much sense, which may be why it remains a source of inspiration for stand-up comedians and sensitive novelists. A friend who lives in a high-rise building is in the habit of stealing newspapers from his neighbors. He's a considerate thief. He takes the elevator to different floors and is careful not to take the same person's paper too frequently. Sometimes he steals only the sports and news, thoughtfully leaving the rest of the newspaper for the lucky subscriber. He doesn't feel at all guilty about his thievery because he doesn't think of it as that. He wouldn't be caught dead shoplifting, but he doesn't see what's wrong with lifting his co-tenants' newspapers. It's just part of his daily routine, cheaper than a subscription of his own, and less trouble than walking to the corner newsstand. Stealing newspapers isn't in the same league as cheating on one's husband or wife, or even cheating on one's income tax, still it's dishonest, to say nothing of inconsiderate. Yet my friend, who is, I think, basically honest, doesn't feel even a twinge of remorse. I've noticed a certain devaluation of guilt in my own life. One day recently I was searching for a parking space downtown, driving through the crowded streets behind a small white car whose driver appeared to have a similar objective. The white car drove about two car lengths past a vacant parking space, then it stopped and began backing up. By the time it's back lights were on, my car was parked in the space. The driver, a young blonde woman, jumped out of the car and screamed, "Don't you feel terrible stealing that space?" I heard myself yell back, "No. Why should I?" I couldn't believe I said it. The tone of my voice was disgustingly smug. I might as well have added, "Nyah, nyah!" I sounded like a New Yorker. Maybe there's something about surviving the game of life that reduces one's guilt in certain situations. It's a process of rationalization, of selectivity, of choosing what to feel guilty about and what not to feel guilty about. I wouldn't steal my neighbor's newspaper, but I felt no compunctions, and in fact some satisfaction, about stealing that parking space right out from under that woman's rear end. It was a small thing, but rotten. And I should have felt bad about it. But I didn't. And I still don't. A woman I know won't steal from the corner grocery store but, thinks nothing of shoplifting items from chain supermarkets. Rational is that chain anyone, that the company marks up goods to cover shoplifting losses that she's almost obligated to steal a few things in the scheme of things. She doesn't feel guilty about shoplifting, which is obvious in the candid way she talks about it. She's never been caught. It would be interesting to see if her attitude would change if she were.

gully by other and curious things, among them her habit, when alone, of eating out of pots on the stove instead of bothering to use a plate. She knows her mother wouldn't approve. Perhaps her mother has no strong opinions about shoplifting. Another woman has invented a bad back. At least twice a year, when she feels she can no longer face the intense pressure of her job, her back kicks up. She spends two or three days in bed, reading novels and restoring her mental health. She is scrupulously honest in every other way, the sort of person who feels guilty about tearing the "Do Not Remove" tags off mattress and pillows.

But she doesn't feel guilty about lying to her employer. She believes she has a right to take a few days off under false pretenses. As she sees it, it's a matter of survival. She's certainly not the only one who thinks that way these days. Maybe guilt isn't becoming less fashionable, only more expedient.

No left-hander should forget the observation of Montreal Expos pitcher Bill Lee, a southpaw: "You have blemishes in your brain... a left and right. # Gas from new Utah wells enters lines

DENVER (UPI) — A Denver-based oil exploration company has opened up the pipeline for the first shipments of natural gas from three wells in northeastern Utah's Anschutz Ranch field.

The field is located in the petroleum-rich Overthrust Belt.

Industry sources said Wednesday production from the first well, drilled by the Anschutz Corp. of Denver, began flowing to markets March 19 and two other wells were hooked on a few days later.

The Overthrust Belt, a complex geological formation stretching from Canada to southern Arizona, has been the scene of increased exploration since the mid-1970s. Some geologists say the formation may be the most significant petroleum find since Prudhoe Bay in Alaska.

At a gathering in Dallas earlier this month, an Amoco spokesman said two large fields in southwest Wyoming and northeast Utah — the Whitney Canyon and Carter Creek fields — are yielding 24,000 barrels of oil and 60 million cubic feet of natural gas a day.

In the Anschutz field of Summit County, Utah, a half-dozen successful wells have been drilled in an exploration program financed by a group of Midwestern utilities. The Denver company discovered the field in 1977. Unlike many fields in the Overthrust, Anschutz Ranch is yielding "sweet" — or pipeline-quality — gas which needs no processing. Most of the other natural gas being produced in the region carries hydrogen sulfide, a highly toxic substance which must be removed before the gas can be delivered to consumers.

The first Anschutz well to go on-line for production was drilled in 1977. It yielded nearly 35 million cubic feet of gas daily in tests at depths between 6,881 and 7,677 feet.

The exploration program is financed by a Midwestern utilities served by Natural Gas Pipeline Co. of America, a subsidiary of Peoples Energy Corp. The utilities include People Gas Light and Coke Co. and North Shore Gas Co., Northern Indiana Public Service Co., Northern Illinois Gas Co., Iowa Illinois Gas & Electric Co. and 19 other wholesalers served by Natural Gas Pipeline.

In a related development, the Petroleum Information Corp. in Denver said Amoco was testing a well on the Kliff Ranch anticline in Meagher County, Mont. — about 50 miles from existing production.

Vandals open fire hydrants

OGDEN, Utah (UPI) — Vandals who turned on seven fire hydrants have caused more than $10,000 in property damage, says the superintendent of Ogden's waterworks.

James Robinson said vandals opened the hydrants during the early morning hours.

The gushing streams swept away part of a sidewalk and gutter, and washed out a Pine View Irrigation line, he said.

The hydrants were turned on in the 800-East-Block at about 4:00 South.

Robinson said some homes in the area were also damaged.

Judge denies student Bundy's bid for new trial

LAKE CITY, Fla. (UPI) — Circuit Judge Wallace Jopling has denied a motion for a new trial for convicted murderer Theodore Bundy in the death of 12-year-old Kimberly Leach.

Jopling denied the motion Wednesday by defense attorney Victor Africano, who had contended that a state rebuttal witness may have hypnotized the jury.

The motion had been filed two weeks ago supplementary to another 49-point motion for a new trial which was denied at that time.

It was revealed then a graduate law student notified the judge that Dr. Raymond LaScola, a Los Angeles hypnotist, had bragged after the trial that he mesmerized the jury during his testimony by waving a cheap ring on his hand.

LaScola testified for the state concerning the hypnotic techniques used with certain state witnesses to help them recall facts in the case.

Jopling said Wednesday he found no merit in the argument that LaScola had put the jury into a trance.

The Leach girl was kidnapped Feb. 9, 1978, from Lake City Junior High School, and found murdered two months later.

A circuit court jury in Orlando found Bundy, already under death sentences for the beating and strangulation murders of two Florida State University coeds, guilty last Feb. 7. He was given a third death sentence.

New power plant project delayed

SPOKANE (UPI) — Washington Water Power Co., officials announced construction has been delayed until 1981 at the utility's Kettle Falls wood waste electric generation plant.

Officials said a combination of factors, including low water levels, the expense of purchasing power and record high interest rates, contributed to the delay.

The company said it is looking at other construction projects with an eye towards cutting back until economic conditions improve.

Federal mediator invited into baseball talks

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (UPI) — The Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service was invited Thursday to enter the current baseball negotiations between owners and the Major League Players Association bargaining for a new basic agreement and benefit plan.

Ray Grebey, head of the Major League Baseball Players Relations Committee, said the FMCS has agreed to enter the talks. FMCS Deputy Director Kenneth E. Moffett announced in Washington that a meeting with both sides has been scheduled for March 30 in Palm Springs, Calif. Grebey, official spokesman for the 26 big league teams in the negotiations, said the mediation service was asked to participate "in an effort to continue the collective bargaining now proceeding and to avoid the work stoppage threatened by the players' association."

Negotiations have been in progress since a basic contractual agreement expired on Dec. 31, 1979. There is a strong support from the rank and file for major league baseball's first player strike since the walkout that crippled the start of the 1972 season. Some teams lost eight games because of the labor dispute that year.

Grebey counseled that "there is no reason for interrupting collective bargaining sessions" and called for the opening of the 1980 major league season on schedule while talks continue.

"There is no reason for a strike in the absence of a signed agreement," he said, "especially in the light of high player salaries and the benefits offered the players in the current negotiations."

"It has been pointed out before that in 1976 baseball played half a season without a signed agreement, basketball is currently playing without one and football—once went three seasons without one. In all cases, a settlement was reached without interruption of their seasons."

The Players Association carried strike authorization from two more teams Thursday into the second day of the latest round of negotiations with owners.

Marvin Miller, the association's executive director, visited Phoenix

Municipal Stadium to meet with the Cleveland Indians and San Francisco Giants Wednesday. The players voted 70-0 to authorize a strike if agreement cannot be reached on a new four-year basic contract.

Miller, who met earlier with players from the teams holding spring training in Florida, said the vote was "800-something-to-one now" in favor of a strike.

The major issues of disagreement reportedly include compensation for free agents and minimum pay. The owners want a player in return for losing a free agent; the players claim that would drastically reduce their earning potential.

The players want the minimum pay, currently $21,000, increased to $37,500. The owners have offered $25,000 for the first two years, and $28,500 for the last two years of the contract.

Team representatives to the Players Association had been scheduled to meet in Dallas April 1 to set a strike deadline.

G.F. and Wendell set meets

GLENN'S FERRY — Weather permitting, several Magic Valley high schools will start their track seasons this afternoon.

Wendell and Glenn's Ferry will have their tracks in operation for the first time. The Trojans will play host to Castleford, Hagerman, and Valley while Glenn's Ferry will be home to Gooding, Declo, Shoshone and Kimberly.

The meets are the openers for half of the schools, Castleford, Hagerman, Declo and Shoshone getting out for the first time.

Among the others, some things already have been pointed up. In the sprints each side will probably be dominated by Australian exchange student Stewart Mead. Running for Wendell, while senior John Traugher should prove hard to catch at Glenn's Ferry.

Right now those two appear to be the class of the A-3 sprinters — if not more — and they definitely will have to meet sometime in the future. Mead is going in all three dashes while, thus far, Traugher has been in the short sprints and relays.

Alton Huyser, the A-3 state's best a year ago, will lead Shoshone out. Huyser is a possible double winner in the weights at Glenn's Ferry. The shutout is his for the

For the most part, these inter- and intra-conference things will serve the purpose of giving coaches a chance to home-in on strengths and weaknesses and event shuffling by individuals. For fans, it is a chance to start sorting out the talent for the conference and district championships just a month away.

Playground competition

When it's vacation time, very little can keep the energetic indoors. A neighborhood softball game sprang up at Sawtooth Elementary School Thursday despite cold and windy weather. Brian Howard takes a healthy swing at the ball while catcher Myrde Wildman evidently doesn't expect she'll have to catch this pitch. The scene multiplies with the temperature throughout Twin Falls as youths and adults prepare for a full-season of outdoor recreation, including slowpitch softball.

O'Leary outlaw basketball tourney begins Saturday

TWIN FALLS — The championship of the O'Leary Outlaw Basketball tournament won't be played until Monday but there could be some blood letting well in advance of that.

The tournament kicks off at 1 p.m. Saturday and the entire first-round will be played by 9 p.m. Action resumes at 9 a.m. Sunday and runs through 12 consecutive hours. That will set things up for the consolation finals in the single-elimination tournament at 7 p.m. Monday with the championship game at 8 p.m.

The luck of the draw appears to have the strength in the upper bracket, although the exact roster and lineups of all the teams aren't known. The one that has had the most success in these competitions in recent years are Beans, Inc. of Twin Falls; Quality Title of Twin Falls, and Gooding Lumber.

Still with the unknown quantity and quality of several of the teams, there could be a powerhouse standing in the wings.

1 p.m. Saturday — Mallory Coal and Trucking of Burley vs. Quality Title of Twin Falls.

2 p.m. — St. Edward's of Twin Falls vs. Carpet Shoppe of Twin Falls.

3 p.m. — Beans, Inc. of Twin Falls vs. Tom Hamilton CPA of Twin Falls.

Quarterback changes

AFC west coaches foresee no change

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — The arrival of quarterbacks Dan Pastorini and Matt Robinson isn't likely to disrupt the power structure of the AFC West. It isn't even likely to disrupt the respective offensive schemes of their new employers.

Pastorini was acquired by the Oakland Raiders from the Houston Oilers in exchange for disgruntled quarterback Ken "The Snake" Stabler. Robinson was picked up by the Denver Broncos from the New York Jets in exchange for a Nos. 1 and 2 draft choice in 1980 plus reserve quarterback Craig Penrose.

Pastorini has been the starting quarterback for the Oilers since his rookie season in 1971 and took Houston to the playoffs each of the last two years. Stabler, at 34, is going to the Denver Broncos. "I don't think Oakland is going to change its offense any," said Kansas City Coach Marv Levy this week at the AFC West coaching seminar. "They've run it too long. It'll be the same playbook. How quickly Pastorini develops will make the difference. They may lose four months but I'm sure they feel they've bought four years."

"We won't change our style," added Oakland Coach Tom Flores. "We'll make a few adjustments because Dan has a stronger arm than Snake. We'll probably put the ball downfield a little more. But how much more I don't know yet."

"There's going to be an adjustment by the other players to a new general on the field. Just like when Stabler took over for (Daryle) Lamonia. Just like when Lamonia took over for me. The trainer system never changed. All we changed was the quarterback. We still went on and won."

Robinson went through a three-year struggle with Richard Todd for the starting quarterback job with the Jets. When injuries sent Todd down in 1978, Robinson went on to become the first Jet quarterback since Joe Namath to pass for 2,000 yards. He directed New York to a 6-5 record in 11 starts that year.

Robinson then beat out Todd for the No. 1 spot in 1979 but started only one game, passing for 191 yards in a season-opening overtime loss to the Cleveland Browns, before departing from the lineup with a thumb injury.

"I scored the whole league for the guys I thought might be available," said Miller of his quest for a young quarterback. "We had a list of eight names. When I started, I was higher than a couple of other guys but the more I saw of Robinson on film, the more I liked him."

"We wanted a guy who, with a good quick release. Two with the ability to come up with the big play. Three, with the ability to avoid the rush and throw on the run. And four, with enough power in the arm to throw it on the line when he had to.

"Another thing that I like about him, which I couldn't see on film, are his leadership abilities. I saw that just week when we had the quarterbacks in."

Miller said Robinson will enter another competitive situation in Denver where incumbent Craig Morton awaits his challenge. But it is clear which quarterback Miller expects to be in Denver's opening day line-up.

"How in the hell can you expect a guy to be No. 1 when he has never even thrown a ball for you?" said Miller of Robinson. "But in the same breath, how can you trade a 1 and a 2 for a guy if you don't expect him to play?"

Denver finished the 1979 season with a 10-6 record and Oakland with a 9-7 mark.

Jones wins lip battle in promoting match

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — World Boxing Council champion Larry Holmes and challenger Leroy Jones exchanged barbs at news conference Thursday with the No. 2-ranked contender getting the best of the verbal exchanges.

The two square off for the crown Monday night in a nationally televised bout scheduled for 15 rounds at Caesars Palace. A second title bout on the card will also be televised with top-ranked contender Marvin Camel of Montana fighting No. 2 ranked Mate Parlov of Yugoslavia for the vacant WBC Cruiserweight title.

The normally soft-spoken Jones came to life and dominated the 1 1/2-hour news conference, concentrating on their lone common opponent, Mike Weaver. Holmes was pushed to the limit before scoring a 12th-round technical knockout over Weaver in Madison Square Garden last July while Jones took an easy 12-round unanimous decision over Weaver in Las Vegas in August of 1978.

Weaver is fighting World Boxing Association champion John Tate for that of the heavyweight title Monday night in Knoxville, Tenn. "That boy that I beat so easy almost killed you," said Jones, of Denver, Colo. "I spanked him."

The unbeaten Jones (24-0-1) didn't predict a round that Holmes would fall, but was confident he'd win.

"You're gonna feel bad when this fat man jumps on you," the 250-pound Jones told Holmes. "I'm gonna make your head fat. I'm gonna kick you from one side of the ring to the other and hit you so many times you'll think I'm using my feet."

"I'm gonna be on your head, I'm gonna be on your body and I'm gonna be on you like ugly on an ape."

Holmes, also unbeaten (33-0), from Enston, Pa., predicted he'd stop Jones within five rounds.

"Jones is gonna get paid and he's gonna get knocked out so he better be satisfied with that," said Holmes.

Bobby Lewis, Jones' manager and trainer, said he considered both fighters "excellent boxers who move well." Jones still has noticeable rolls of fat around his midsection and Lewis fielded questions about his fighter's weight.

"Leroy had a cakewalk over Weaver at 270 pounds," Lewis said. "I let him fight at his strength. I don't try to take him down in weight to make him look like Hercules or the Incredible Hulk."

King claims Leonard won't risk title against Duran

LAS VEGAS (UPI) — Fight promoter Don King suggested Thursday the World Boxing Council welterweight champion Sugar Ray Leonard would never fight No. 1 contender Roberto Duran and instead would allow himself to be stripped of the title.

King assailed Leonard's attorney and advisor Mike Trainer for giving the champion improper advice.

"I don't think Leonard will ever fight Duran," said King. "I think Leonard will abdicate instead. I can't believe Leonard would give it up on his own. I think he's getting bad advice from Trainer."

The WBC had ordered Leonard to make his next title defense against Duran, but so far the champion has not agreed with any promoter to take the fight. The WBC has the authority to strip any champion who does not meet a No. 1 contender in a mandatory defense within a prescribed time limit.

Leonard won the title by beating Wilfred Benitez last Nov. 30. A gold medalist at the 1976 Montreal Olympics, Leonard meets No. 10 contender David "Boy" Green of Britain this Monday in Landover, Md., in his first title defense. The bout is an optional defense in which a champion is allowed to meet a lesser ranked challenger in preparation for a defense against the top contender.

King blames Trainer for preventing Leonard from signing to meet Duran.

"Sugar Ray will fight anyone, any place, any time, but he's following Trainer with blind obedience," said King. "Trainer is going to ruin a great fighter."

King, in Las Vegas, for two title bouts he is promoting, has been trying to sign the undefeated Leonard for several months. On Jan. 12, King signed up Duran, the Panamanian former world lightweight champ turned welterweight, for a reported $2 million in anticipation of a title bout with Leonard.

King said he offered Trainer and Leonard $2 million to meet Duran, but that they rejected the offer. He also said Trainer made a counter proposal that he release Duran from his contractual obligations for $500,000.

Henderson would like to discuss strengths

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (UPI) — Steve Henderson knows all about his weaknesses. He just wishes people would pay some attention to his strengths.

"I know what Steve Henderson can do," the New York Mets' center fielder said. "I think I'm a lot better defensive player than people think."

"I know that I don't have as strong an arm as the average player but I make up for it with accuracy and speed in getting to the ball. I know I'm capable of playing the outfield."

Henderson inherited a difficult position when he arrived from the Cincinnati Reds in 1977. Not only was he part of the Tom Seaver trade — which placed pressure on him — but he also was expected to be one of those young batters the Reds' organization develops so well.

The only trouble was, Henderson's talents ran in different areas. Rather than a power hitter, he was a spray biter with good speed.

He also showed a weak arm and a tendency to misjudge flyballs. Each mistake, each shortcoming, drew attention. Still he believes his three-year career with the Mets has been fairly successful.

"I think they were decent years," he said. "Even though I didn't play as much as I would have liked, they look good to me."

Off to a good start in 1977, when he joined the Mets in midseason and played regularly to the end of the season, Henderson has never put in a full year with the Mets.

Off to a good start in 1978, the Houston native was hit in the left elbow by a Rick Reuschel pitch on April 11. Last year, after raising his batting average above .300, he sprained his ankle sliding into third base and missed almost seven weeks.

His latest injury came this winter when he suffered a mild shoulder separation diving for a flyball. Not only did it continue his injury list, but it also raised the question of whether his "throwing arm" may now become even weaker.

"I don't feel it's a problem," Henderson said. "It's coming around real good."

Manager Joe Torre expresses no worries on the subject.

"Steve has worked hard, knowing his arm isn't strong," said Torre. "He has learned to do things correctly. He's the kind of kid you take to work with you. I think that says it."

Henderson, whose lifetime average is .285, says he will continue using his closed stance.

Gallery owner Jack Meyer and one of the works to go on auction, "Thoughtful," an oil on canvas by Eung-Van-Ty, which he purchased in Saigon in 1966

Fine Art Gallery schedules unusual silent art auction

KETCHUM — Henry J. Meyer — FINE ART, located at Fourth and Leadville Ave., will conduct a Silent Art Auction April 1-12. According to gallery owner Meyer, a silent auction is a somewhat new idea in the art auction world. During the course of the event, bidders may enter their bidder number, received on registration at no charge, and a bid for any work on auction. Highest bids at the close of the event, April 12, will be declared the winning bids. Over 100 works by 60 artists, valued at more than $22,000, will be offered in a wide variety of styles. Media include watercolor, oil, acrylic, batik, etching, serigraph, monoprint, lithograph, sculpture and embossing. American artists representing Idaho, Montana, Utah, Nevada, Arizona, California, Alaska and several other states are included. Foreign artwork from Japan, Malaysia, Zaire, Sri Lanka and Canada will also be on auction. Among the Idaho artworks are "Salmon River Run," a cast bronze sculpture by Goding artist Julie Epperson; a set of four Rocky Mountain wildflowers by Sun Valley watercolorist Michelllyn; floral bûlks on silk by Jennifer Bellinger of Ketchum and a pencil portrait, "Picasso," by Leslie Best of Ketchum. Also, a watercolor and wash by Bill Hudson, an embossed serigraph by Arnie Skov of Boise State University faculty and a quadripartite in acrylic on canvas, "Shadow," by Sharon Church, all of Boise, will be presented for auction. Opening bids ranging from $10 to $1800 will be as much as 50% below original gallery prices. A preview for prospective bidders will be held March 31 from 3-8 p.m. at the gallery. Wine will be served each day of the event after 3 p.m. Gallery hours are 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. daily.

The Osmonds to perform at ISU

POCATELLO — The Osmonds, starring Donny and Marie, are coming to Pocatello. The internationally famous singing family from Utah will perform in the Idaho State University Mindome on May 10. Net proceeds from the concert will benefit the American Cancer Society (A.C.S.), Bannock County Unit. All seats are reserved for this

"first time ever in Idaho" performance. Tickets will be available only by mail from March 31-April 5, with seat prices of $8 and $10 per person. — Orders with payment should be sent to: Osmond Tickets, I.S.U. Mindome, Campus Box - 8098, Pocatello, 83209. All orders must include a stamped, self-addressed envelope to be valid. No reservations will be taken by telephone. Marilyn Glans, Bannock county spokesman for the A.C.S., stated, "we're so excited about the concert. It's an opportunity for the people of southern Idaho to see highly-acclaimed talent in person, and to help the American Cancer Society get badly needed funds at the same time." Glans stressed that ticket orders should be sent as soon as possible, for seating is limited and will be sold on a first received, first served basis. "We expect a good response," she said. "For the Osmonds' appeal to all ages. They are the kind of entertainment that the entire family can enjoy." The concert, which will begin at 8 p.m., will also feature a pre-show performance as an additional bonus for ticket-holders. Glans and Beverly Wallace are coordinators of the Osmond event. Several Pocatello firms are helping sponsor it and current officers of the Bannock County Unit, A.C.S., are helping organize it. They are Dr. James Kelly, president; Jim Lysirup, vice-president; Priscilla Smith, treasurer; Neola Loeb, secretary and Joe Campbell, crusade chairman.

Hollywood news in brief

Hudson headlines — HOLLYWOOD — (UPI) — Rock Hudson returns to the big screen after a long absence to star in "The Mirror Crack'd," a film version of Agatha Christie's whodunit, for EMI films. Costarring with Hudson on locations in England will be Natalie Wood and Angela Lansbury in the role of Christie's sleuth, Miss Marple. The film is the first of EMI's project series of Miss Marple mystery adventures. Hudson recently starred in the TV miniseries "The Mortal Chronicles."

Veteran trio — HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — The veteran trio of Henry Fonda, Jose Ferrer and John Houseman will star in "Gideon's Trumpet," a Hallmark Hall of Fame, two-hour movie for CBS April 30. Three other long-time performers, Fay Wray, Sam Jaffe and Dean Jagger, comprise the supporting cast of the drama. "Gideon's Trumpet" is based on Anthony Lewis' 1964 non-fiction account of an obscure Florida convict (played by Fonda) who drastically changed the course of American legal history by demanding competent legal representation.

Sinatra film bio planned

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — A feature movie is planned dramatizing Frank Sinatra's personal and professional life from his youth in Hoboken, N.J., to his 1953 Academy Award for best supporting actor in "From Here To Eternity." Sinatra's press agent announced an international search will be initiated for a look-alike actor with blue eyes to portray the singer as a 25-year-old teen-age bobby-sox idol. Sinatra, who will soon star in and co-produce "The First Deadly Sin," announced his film biography will begin production in 1981 on locations in New Jersey, New York and Los Angeles.

Tanner to be international delegate

By SHELLY KINZEL
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A woman's work is never done, especially if the woman also happens to be an educator.

Fran Tanner, professor of speech and drama at the College of Southern Idaho, knows this better than anyone. Her daily program includes teaching courses in drama, interpersonal communication, public speaking and oral interpretation, as well as directing plays and coaching students in competitive forensics. Despite this hectic schedule, she still finds time to learn more about her profession.

On April 7-12, Tanner is looking forward to a rare opportunity. She has been selected as one of ninety delegates from 21 nations to attend an international drama conference in Villach, Austria. Organized by the International Amateur Theater Association, the Fourth International Congress will focus on the training of drama teachers in secondary education.

Germany, the Netherlands, the United Kingdom, and the United States will serve as models. Each of these nations will present demonstration workshops displaying exemplary teacher training. The workshops will emphasize the role of social conditions and the special demands of various school systems.

"The goal of the Congress," Tanner explained, "is to establish priorities and goals in the training of drama teachers. Hopefully, we will come up with a joint statement for world-wide distribution."

Tanner will be one of nine representatives of the United States. She will also present a special lecture-demonstration on Beckett's Theater, a unique theatrical style which she has helped to popularize. Tanner was chosen from many candidates for several reasons.

Her textbooks, "Basic Drama Projects" and "Creative Communication," are used extensively in high schools and teacher training programs throughout the U.S.

These texts are highly successful because they are actively-oriented. "The students readily become involved," Tanner commented, "because they are encouraged to do rather than simply read."

Tanner has also been invited to discuss how the junior college prepares students who wish to enter a four-year program in teaching drama at the secondary school level. Many people, Tanner feels, do not realize the advantages of attending a junior college.

"In many four-year institutions," she explained, "students do not get to act or assume backstage responsibilities until their senior year, while at CSI, students are involved from the very beginning." The small size of the speech and drama department allows for individualized instruction and considerable exposure. "Our students are often more polished and knowledgeable," Tanner said, "than those who have attended the first two years of a four-year institution."

Aside from representing the ideologies and traditions of their native lands, the participants will also be asked to present their personal philosophies. Tanner was very specific about her convictions.

"Exposure is most important," she stated. "We learn to do by doing. If you're going to act, you have to act; if you're going to be a stage technician, you have to build scenery."

Tanner believes that students should be able to participate widely and that drama teachers should build in success for their students. In this way, students are stimulated and motivated to do more.

Her advice to would-be teachers of drama: "Create an empathic response or rapport between the students and faculty so that they feel that they are working towards a creative goal, one which demands a great deal of hard work and discipline, but one which is also pleasurable."

Politics and costs sound sour notes at La Scala

By PHILIP PULLELLA

MILAN, Italy (UPI) — It's nothing but sour notes these days at La Scala, the world's most famous opera house and the crown jewel of Italian culture.

Bureaucracy and politics have reinforced a crippling financial crisis, mocked by the opulent opening nights in the theater's "golden horseshoe" that are a "must" for Europe's social elite.

Prominent figures at La Scala are detecting left and right because of government instability and the slow politicization of the nation's theaters. Private financing, especially corporate support so common in the United States, is frowned upon.

"For seven years La Scala has been in an absurd situation for lack of money and competent personnel," said the celebrated Claudio Abbado when he resigned as musical director. "Few people are willing to continue working there."

Abbado, 46, was one of the few — he stayed on as orchestra director.

Now he has walked out on that job, too.

"Floravante Nanni, La Scala's secretary general and one of Europe's most famous opera entrepreneurs, resigned in a huff last December and took over the Opera Theater of Rome.

"I left La Scala when it started becoming too political," Nanni said. "We want to make theater not play politics. That will mean the death of Italian opera as we know it."

La Scala has had golden moments in the 202 years since Austrian Empress Maria Teresa ordered the building of the theater—the first hearing of music by Verdi, Wagner, Puccini and Mussorgsky and conductors such as Arturo Toscanini.

But observers say La Scala's days as the grand old lady of opera and "the first theater of the world" are numbered.

"La Scala's reputation has declined drastically over the past few years because of its political and financial situation," Nanni said.

"Italian opera in general does not have a very high level of credibility right now. It was harder and harder for me to attract foreign superstars. They prefer not to come to Italy. Some of those who come do so for sentimental reasons."

La Scala's deep financial problems stem from the fact that all Italian theaters are subsidized by the state. But the money is never enough, and the annual amounts are usually uncertain until the 11th hour, a wait-and-hope game which wreaks havoc with future planning.

"The earliest you can book a well-known singer is usually three or four years in advance," Nanni said. "If you don't know what the budget will be, how can you offer good people money?"

Italian union regulations have hampered La Scala's attempts to stretch its budget. Musicians, singers and support staff are paid whether or not they work. From 80 percent to 90 percent of La Scala's average $17 million annual subsidy, Nanni estimates, goes in salaries for full-time staffers.

Box office receipts of $3.5 million a year leave little for maintenance and attracting top singers.

Italy's leftist political parties, which say theater should not be "contaminated" by corporate money, have stymied all serious attempts to attract private financing.

"The purists and some members of the Communist Party think private financing would mean the prima donna running across the stage in Adidas jogging shoes or Coca Cola served in paper cups during intermission," said Maurizio Glammsuso, theater critic for the Milan newspaper Corriere Della Sera.

Italian theatergoing has skyrocketed nearly 400 percent in the past 10 years. But the increased receipts have not been enough. The government must pay about twice each ticket price in subsidy money.

Nanni says he had to turn down offers of help from Italian corporations because they did not go over well politically.

"Corporate financing, which is very normal in the United States, raises suspicious eyebrows here," Nanni said. "If there is a clear division between financing and artistic liberty, I don't think it matters where the money comes from."

"Theaters, La Scala in particular, are great centers of political power because they are state entities and because of the many unionized people they employ," Glammsuso said.

"Before any kind of decision is made, even a small one, representatives of the city, the province, the region, and the central government must have their say."

Italy's three largest political parties, the Christian Democrats, the Communists, and the Socialists, have yet to compromise on their versions of the law.

Like many Italian institutions, La Scala probably will survive on the brink of disaster. The velvet curtain will stay full and rise, gowns will still rustle in the aisles.

Oregon poet to give reading at CSI

Traveling through the Dark

*Traveling through the dark I found a deer dead on the edge of the Wilson River road.
It is usually best to roll them into the canyon;
that road is narrow; to swerve might make more dead.*

*By glow of the tail-light I stumbled back the car and stood by the heap, a doe, a recent killing;
she had stiffened already, almost cold.
I dragged her off; she was large in the belly.*

*My fingers touching her side brought me the reason her side was warm; her fawn lay there waiting,
alive, still, never to be born.
Beside that mountain road I hesitated.*

*The car aimed ahead its lowered parking lights;
under the hood purred the steady engine—
I stood in the glare of the warm exhaust turning red;
around our group I could hear the wilderness listen.*

*I thought hard for us all — my only swerving —
then pushed her over the edge into the river.
(from the poetry collection, "Traveling Through the Dark")*

Other collections published by Harper & Row include "The Rescued Year," "Allegiances," "Someday, Maybe," and his recent "Stories That Could Be True, New and Collected Poems."

Stafford's collections have also been published by Confluence Press, West Coast Poetry Review Press, Perishable Press, Croissant Press and Sceptre Press.

He and his wife live in Lake Oswego, Ore., and have four children. His interests include biking, photography and reading.

The CSI reading is free and the public is welcome.

Closed-captioning for hearing-impaired underway

WASHINGTON, D.C. — First Lady Rosalynn Carter announced the debut of the closed captioned television service at a White House press conference March 19.

The service is designed to make television more enjoyable for the nation's 14 million hearing-impaired persons.

Hearing-impaired viewers whose televisions are equipped with special adapters will be able to have written translations of program dialog presented as captions, or subtitles, on their television screens. The program differs from open captioning, in which captions can be seen on any TV set.

The National Captioning Institute, a non-profit corporation with offices in Falls Church, Va., and Los Angeles, has been charged with captioning television programs for the service. The Institute will caption 16 hours of predominantly prime-time shows to be broadcast by the ABC and NBC Television Networks and the Public Broadcasting Service, Mrs. Carter said. By the end of the year, the institute will be supplying broadcasters with at least 20 hours of captioned programs each week.

"This program is a great breakthrough for our hearing-impaired citizens," Mrs. Carter said. "They are hungry for the information and entertainment that television provides."

She pointed out that, while hearing-impaired viewers have been unable to appreciate television broadcasts fully until now, they still watch television as frequently as the hearing population.

The adapter units, which enable a viewer to receive closed-captioned programs, are available from Sears, Roebuck and Co. catalog sales.

National Captioning Institute president John Ball presented Mrs. Carter with an inscribed adapter unit in appreciation of the White House's efforts in mobilizing support for the closed-captioning service. Ball called the White House, "one of the strongest proponents of closed-captioning."

Mrs. Carter acknowledged the contributions of the broad coalition of groups involved in the development of the closed-captioning service.

"So many groups, including organizations to the hearing-impaired, members of Congress, federal agencies, television producers, manufacturers and marketers have worked together to put closed-captioning on the air," she said.

Most recently commissioning NCI's services are five commercial TV sponsors, the "Hour of Power," Joe Landis Productions, (11th Annual Senior Olympics), and the National Audiovisual Center and the Department of Education.

The five commercial TV sponsors are Sears, Roebuck and Co., IBM Corporation, American Telephone and Telegraph, Bristol Myers Company and Seiko Time Corporation.

Sears will have all of its television specials as well as all of its commercials closed captioned.

IBM will have closed captioned its special program, "IBM Presents Baryshnikov on Broadway," to air April 24 on ABC.

AT&T, Bristol Myers and Seiko will have their commercials closed captioned by NCI.

"Robert Schuller with the Hour of Power," a syndicated religious program, will be closed captioned in mid-July.

Fellowships offered Idaho teachers

SUN VALLEY — The Institute of the American West, a division of the Sun Valley Center for the Arts and Humanities, announced March 21 that it is offering 100 fellowships to Idaho teachers.

The fellowships, open to art or humanities teachers, will enable them to attend the institute's 5th annual Western conference to be held this year in Ketchum June 18-21. The fellowships will provide housing and two meals (breakfast and lunch) a day at the Absconess Hotel for the four days of the conference.

The conference, entitled "That Awesome Space," will examine the Intermountain landscape and how it has been portrayed in art and literature. The agenda will include addresses, panel discussions, workshops and films.

Funded by the Association for Closed captioned will be ABC's "The ABC Sunday Night Movie," "Barney Miller," "Vegas," "Eight Is Enough" and "Three's Company." NBC's "The NBC Monday Night Movie," "Real People," "Diff'rent Strokes," and "United States" and PBS' "Once Upon a Classic," "Masterpiece Theatre," "3-2-1 Contact," "Mystery!" and "Nova." Two more PBS shows, "Odyssey" and "Over Easy," will be captioned later this spring.

A short program illustrating how closed captioning works, narrated by Rosalynn Carter, will follow the March 20 broadcast of "Jesus of Nazareth" on NBC.

Closed-captioning programming sponsored by the National Audiovisual Center (a part of the U.S. National Archives) and the Department of Education's Division of Educational Technology represents the first use of closed-captioned television as an educational tool in schools.

the Humanities in Idaho and Levi Strauss and Company, the conference will feature such participants as Dr. William H. Goetzmann, author of "Exploration and Empire" and director of American Studies at the University of Texas at Austin; Peter Hassrick, the director of the Buffalo Bill Historical Center; Alvin M. Josephy Jr., author and expert on American Indian history; Bruce Jackson, director of American studies at SUNY-Buffalo; and William K. Everson, distinguished film historian.

The topics to be examined will include: "Organizing - That Awesome Space," or a history of the use of Intermountain land from pre-Columbian times to the present; "What's Western About Western Art?"; "That Awesome Space In Time," the history of artistic and literary perceptions of the Western landscape and "The Altered Landscape," an investigation of the real and created alterations of the Intermountain region.

Graduate credit will be available through the College of Idaho — one credit for attending all functions of the conference and one additional credit for an outside project. The cost of credit will be a minimal $12.50 per credit plus a $10 on-time-only matriculation fee. Those interested should apply to Richard Hart, Director, Institute of the American West, Box 656, Sun Valley, 83333. Applicants should include their name and address, what classes they teach and at what educational level, and if they are interested in taking the conference for credit.

SYLVESTER STALLONE
... happy to pose

SLY BEHAVIOR: Sylvester Stallone has been filming his movie, "Hawks," on various closed-sets and locations around New York City. On a recent Sunday morning, Sly, decked out in his super fur coat, was standing outside the Regency Hotel signing autographs when a young man with a camera asked permission to take a few pictures. Stallone asked if he was an accredited photographer or an amateur. The fellow, shyly admitting that he was just an amateur, was stunned when the star told him that as long as he was not connected with the press he could take pictures. Stallone said he didn't want any photos appearing before the film's release. Then, Sly turned full-faced to the camera and began carefully posing, treating the young man to the Stallone techniques.

Q: Will Princess Grace of Monaco ever again give us a taste of the former Grace Kelly by returning to active show business? J.L., Englewood, N.J.

A: We doubt it. Princess Grace has for many years kept her associations with the entertainment world high-toned and distant. She is, for example, a member of the board of directors of the movie company, Twentieth Century-Fox. Grace has cut a new record album, her first since her true love with Bing Crosby in 1956 on "Duet With Love." The new album isn't likely to hit the chart anytime soon — it consists of Princess Grace regally reading poetry.

LOUISE LASSER
... the pounds look good

Q: Isn't there rivalry developing between Bette Midler and Sally Field now that they're both up for an Oscar as best actress? — P.M., Sarasota, Fla.

A: If there is, it's probably the inspiration of their respective publicity agents. Bette told us recently that she loved Sally's performance in "Norma Rae," and would be delighted — but very surprised — to emerge the winner for her movie, "The Rose." As for Bette's all time favorite actress — hands down, it's Katharine Hepburn.

Q: Since her last two movies didn't do well at the box office, will Audrey Hepburn quietly go into retirement? What a loss if she did. R.P., Tucson, Ariz.

A: No chance of Audrey retiring. Although her last two pictures "Robin and Marian" and "Bloodline" were box-office duds, she's still a sought-after actress. Her next movie will be a romantic comedy, "They All Laughed," for director Peter Bogdanovich, with Ben Gazzara to be followed by another flick in Europe.

Q: That movie "Calgula," made by Penthouse magazine's Bob Guccione, is a real raunchy shocker. What I don't understand is how a fine actor like Sir John Gielgud would act in anything like that? — C.O., Denver.

A: Gielgud, who's only on screen for 10 minutes, did it simply for the money. As he says "nothing shocks me anymore. I don't regret making it because I don't regret anything I have done."

Q: Wasn't George Segal the original choice for Dudley Moore's part in "10?" And now that the movie is such a huge hit, isn't Segal sorry he dropped out of the starring role opposite Bo Derek? — L.W., Lake Forest, Ill.

A: George, indeed, was producer-director Blake Edwards' first choice for the ludicrous part that went to Dudley. George now says he bowed out of "10" at the last minute because he thought the script was too raunchy for his taste so he has no regrets. That's odd since in George's latest movie, "The Last Married Couple in America," his character contracts a case of VD by sleeping with his wife's best friend.

A TALE OF TWO OLIVIAS: Actress Olivia Hussey who shot to stardom in "Romeo and Juliet," has just married Japanese rock singer Akira Fusei. Olivia used to be married to Dean Martin's son Dino. Meanwhile, Olivia Newton-John has broken up with her manager-boyfriend Lee Kramer and is seeing actor Michael Beck. Kramer isn't totally out in the cold, however — he's still managing Olivia's professional career.

Q: Is it true that the Duchess of Windsor spent the Duke's entire fortune and is now on the verge of poverty? — M.J., Wilmington, Del.

A: Not true at all. In addition to the $3 million she inherited from her husband, the Duchess, 83, also has a fortune in jewels including emeralds estimated to be worth $5 million. The question is, who will inherit her fortune? A friend in Paris who visited her says she plans to leave everything to Prince Charles. The Duchess says Charles is the only member of the royal family she cares about. She is grateful that he comes to visit her whenever he's in Paris. And she remembers — the beautiful — condolence letter he wrote when the Duke died.

Q: What's this about Louise Lasser of the "Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman" TV show gaining so much weight that she's cancelled all her future professional engagements? — G.N. of Trenton, N.J.

A: While Louise is no longer the super-skinny actress of her "Mary Hartman" days, she's by no means overweight. Her added poundage is both healthy and attractive. As for her career, Louise is going on the road this spring with a one-person show, "An Evening With Louise Lasser." The Woman Behind the Pigtails, "in which she'll talk about her TV character, herself and, presumably, about her new figure. Right now she's in an Off-Broadway production titled "Marie and Bruce."

Helps us make it through the endless night

Times-News writer Hollywood has a new folk hero — the country western singer.

In the coming months, filmgoers can expect to see a rash of movies about the trials and tribulations of country western performers. The question is, why the sudden interest? What is it about country western that people find so appealing?

In the first place, the music is a purely American phenomenon. It expresses the struggles, dreams and concerns of a large segment of our population. It stresses traditional values, and its simplicity makes it universally understood. In a time of international chaos and domestic despair, Americans may be seeking a new patriotism, a return to our grassroots.

This may explain, at least partially, the enthusiastic reception of "Coal Miner's Daughter," based on the autobiography of Loretta Lynn. One could say that the film is a typical success story, except that it focuses more on the star's beginnings and her relationship with her husband Mooney. We can't help rooting for her. Coming from an impoverished childhood, married at the age of thirteen, and a mother of four by her early twenties, Lynn certainly had her share of obstacles. Her eventual triumph renews our faith in the American dream.

The film is also a love story. The experience of Loretta and Mooney reveals what marriage is really about — a maturation process with continual ups and downs. Mooney is a brash young man who becomes an increasingly tolerant and sensitive husband, Loretta is a naive, insecure child who grows up too quickly, and must then retreat in order to find herself. The marriage could easily have fallen apart — were it not for their basic caring and willingness to work through problems.

Sissy Spacek and Tommy Lee Jones are perfect in the lead roles. Spacek's wide-eyed innocence, warmth and candor create a moving, believable portrait. Her performance is completely natural, without a trace of artifice. Jones, however, is the real discovery. As Mooney Lynn, he combines rugged virility with humor and wisdom. The role, I hope, will afford him many more acting opportunities.

The characters in "Coal Miner's Daughter" are so honest and vital that we become totally caught up in their drama. For this reason, the ending is particularly disappointing. Lynn's dizzying climb to fame results in an inevitable nervous breakdown. The happening is crucial because it marks a turning point in both her professional and personal life. Yet, the screenplay glosses over the event. One moment she is falling apart, the next moment she is back on the stage. We see almost nothing of her struggle to attain a more satisfying identity... to achieve a more fulfilling existence. This is a serious flaw in a film which has thus far paid close attention to detail.

The rest of the feature is so compelling, however, that most viewers will be willing to fill in the missing pieces. "Coal Miner's Daughter" makes us feel optimistic about loving and living — and that ain't bad!

And the walls are tumbling down into one big entertainment industry

©The Los Angeles Times HOLLYWOOD — The walls separating the movie, television, book and recording industries are growing weaker. It's becoming one big Entertainment Business.

That's the case with the film studios. And it can be seen on a smaller scale in publishing.

Book companies are cross-fertilizing. Rather than watch from the sidelines as producers fight for the rights to their properties, they're moving into the picture business themselves.

Bantam Books is stepping in aggressively — and successfully.

The company has more than 30 movie tie-in books and an even longer list for TV. These represent novels, such as "The Formula" and "The Island," set for publication or rerelease with the release of a film. The idea is to cash in on the boom that surrounds the release of a movie or the airing of a television program.

But Bantam's movie association goes deeper than tie-ins, as its editor in chief, Marc Jaffe, explained during a recent trip to Los Angeles.

The company operates a subsidiary, Entertainment Discoveries Inc., headed by Charles Bloch, which is on the lookout for projects that would make good films. Bantam helps with the development of the screenplay has a piece of the film — and a book, the most important element — to Bantam, as Jaffe emphasized.

An EDI production, "The Fog," is one of the hottest films out at the moment. It was initially developed by Bloch and Bantam along with John Carpenter and Debra Hill, who wrote, produced and directed the movie.

EDI and Bantam have another six projects in various stages of development — as well, so you'll probably see more films soon with origins in the publishing world.

Is this a positive trend? Jaffe thinks so. First, because it further strengthens the book business. It is a way to develop more literary material. And it bolsters his company financially.

As for what it does to literature and writers, Jaffe contends it is a good trend here also.

"Films have helped writing," Jaffe said. "The sense of storytelling and the sense of structure that goes into the discipline of film helps in fiction as well. It's a good thing."

Walls of a different kind have been crumbling in another area of the movie business for some time now. These are the walls that kept women out of the executive suites (except as secretaries) or out of key positions in movie production.

Finally, women are beginning to get a chance to direct and produce.

And they're moving into other key technical positions as well.

Brianna Murphy, director of photography on Anne Bancroft's "Fanny" and the TV special "Like Mom, Like Me," has been invited to join the American Society of Cinematographers.

'Big Apple' comes to Buhl

BUHL — The Magic Valley has a new TV channel, WOR-TV of New York City, announced Buhl Cable TV Company manager, Wayne Moberg.

The station has been added to their cable system on a full-line basis. Buhl Cable TV now offers two, 24-hour-a-day, independent channels. WOR-TV is found on cable channel 8 in Buhl. It is listed in the Idaho Weekender TV schedule as an eight on a white TV screen.

According to Moberg, WOR-TV will provide up to 35 movies each week, 250 live sporting events each year and many variety shows. The sports broadcasts will include professional football, basketball, baseball, soccer, hockey and wrestling. On the college level will be broadcasts of Ivy League and Mid-Atlantic Conference games.

"We have entered an era of home...entertainment," said Moberg. "Our company felt that our subscribers were entitled to all the programming that we could put on the system."

With the addition of WOR-TV, Buhl Cable TV offers eight channels to the Buhl area.
