

Olmstead says special session may be needed

BOISE (UPI) — Idaho's top two Republican leaders were not in complete agreement Tuesday over the necessity of a special session of the Legislature.

Senate President Pro-Tem Reed Budge, R-Soda Springs, said absolutely, yes, but House Speaker Ralph Olmstead, R-Twin Falls, was not as positive.

Olmstead said a recent court ruling on the Medicaid program has changed things in the Department of Health and Welfare funding and should be addressed.

He said if Gov. John Evans, who is considering calling an extraordinary session to tackle Health and Welfare funding as well as possible funding in some other areas, thinks Medicaid is a problem, he is "justified in calling a brief session."

Olmstead referred to a 4th District Court ruling that held the state must pay full, reasonable funding for nursing home care, which the Health and Welfare Department said would cost an additional $4 million.

Budge and Olmstead held a two-hour-long news conference in Boise to counter charges that the recent legislative session was not productive and "rotten."

"The people of Idaho have been very well served by the recent session of the Idaho Legislature," he said. "The Legislature's accomplishments have been positive. It was a long session, but the benefits are such that we can all be proud of these achievements."

The majority leaders pointed out that education was funded higher than requested by the governor, a 1 percent measure was passed in response to the people's desire to cut government expansion and cost, higher funding for drug abuse enforcement was adopted and a modest maintenance budget for highways was passed.

And, they added, there was modest tax relief with the passage of the homestead exemption, which will exempt a limited amount of the value of residential improvements from property taxation during 1980.

Budge and Olmstead said the GOP-controlled Legislature was determined to hold the line on spending in the light of severe economic uncertainty for the state's farmers and timber industries "and practically every other segment of Idaho's economy."

The governor's position was one of "spending all of the available revenue," Budge said, adding "the Legislature was concerned with the taxpayer while the governor's concern was more towards the tax spenders."

"If the governor does call a special session," the Soda Springs lawmaker said, "I would like the governor to point out the taxes he wants increased in order to meet his funding requests."

Budge said he could "see nothing accomplished" by a special session. But Olmstead said one "was justified in the district court decision on Medicaid, although he said, he could not see the governor putting in his special session 'call' other items already considered by the Legislature.

"The Twin Falls Republican said he would rather see support lowered than raising taxes for all the state's residents."

Both senators agreed that even with lower support, welfare recipients would not go hungry. "They said the Idaho produces enough food to take care of the need."

"We can put together the mechanism to take care of them," said Olmstead.

Budge also noted that local governments have the responsibility of taking care of the needs of their residents.

Using those standards, Jones' total income and investments are valued at being at least $1,067,111. The value of those could exceed $1,648,504 because he lists several holdings in the highest category, which includes investments valued at $250,000 or more.

Jones reported earning $96,000 in legal fees from his law practice during 1979 and 1980 up to the present. His remaining income, ranging between $23,004 and $20,000, came from rentals and capital gains and interest from land sales in the Magic Valley.

Much of Jones' investments are in his cattle business and a livestock feeding company. The holdings are valued between $935,000 and $1,480,000 or more.

Jones' debts were reported as being at least $195,000 and at most $300,000. The debts include bank loans on "Jones' residence in Idaho," a purchase contract for property in Bellevue.

Under that act, congressmen and candidates are required to file yearly disclosures with the Committee on Standards of Official Conduct. Hansen's disclosure is expected to be filed shortly.

The official disclosure form does not require candidates to specify just how much their assets and investments, or debts, amount to. Instead, the amounts are reported by category, listing the value as being more than one amount and less than a second.

TWIN FALLS — Jim Jones of Jerome enters his bid for Congress with over $1 million in assets and debts between one-quarter and one-half million dollars.

Jones, who is challenging Congressman George Hansen in the May 27 Republican primary election, today filed a financial disclosure statement as required by the Ethics in Government Act.

Under that act, congressmen and candidates are required to file yearly disclosures with the Committee on Standards of Official Conduct. Hansen's disclosure is expected to be filed shortly.

Jones contributes $30,000

BOISE (UPI) — In his effort to unseat Rep. George Hansen, Republican congressional challenger Jim Jones collected $3,215 in individual contributions during the first quarter of 1980, but spent $33,290.

An expense and contribution report filed in the secretary of State's office today indicated Jones contributed $10,000 of his own cash to the campaign and he "cleaned" his campaign committee an additional $20,000 to make up the rest of the difference between contributions and expenditures.

Because of that, this year's Democratic activities will to some degree slight the House in favor of the Senate, a fact Democrats don't like talking about publicly, but privately admit.

To date, Sen. Ron Twilgar, D-Boise, Sen. Mike Black, D-Craigmont, and Sen. Mike Mitchell, D-Lewiston, have formed the "Senate Campaign Committee." This group, Twilgar

At that meeting, candidates were presented with campaign strategies for their primary elections — whether they faced primary opposition or not. According to the plan, most each

Cops will enforce drug law

By MARTY TRILLHAASE

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls law enforcement officials say they will enforce Idaho's new law banning the distribution, sale, and possession of drug paraphernalia.

The law, which goes into effect July 1, is intended to force stores to stop selling paraphernalia. The sole store selling paraphernalia in Twin Falls, Budget Tapes and Records, has made no plans to eliminate its paraphernalia sideline as yet.

The decision by Sheriff James Munn and Police Chief Tim Qualls to enforce the new law in this area takes on special significance because Idaho Department of Law Enforcement director Kelly Pearce has said the department will not strictly enforce the new law.

Department public information officer John Rooney said the department, with 21 narcotics officers, simply lacks the manpower to pursue the Legislative funding cutbacks will mean the loss of two or three narcotics positions by this summer, he added. "These officers will be used to continue the department's efforts against major drug traffickers."

Qualls said he doesn't have the option to pick and choose which laws he will enforce.

"That's not our decision to make," he said. Qualls added he believes he has the necessary manpower to enforce the law.

Both Munn and Qualls say they will attempt to notify local paraphernalia dealers of their intentions before the law takes effect.

Munn said he will arrest individuals, or simple paraphernalia possessors, and file charges through the prosecuting attorney's office. Prosecutor Jeff Stoker said he will prosecute the cases.

Budget Tapes manager Ray Graves is taking a wait-and-see approach, although he said he will liquidate his stock if it appears the law will be enforced.

"At this point, we're just watching to see how seriously the bill is taken," Graves said. He added the law's definition of what constitutes paraphernalia is so vague that it may not survive a court challenge.

"They could bust someone for having an apple. It leaves too many spaces," he said.

Idaho's law defines paraphernalia as items used or intended for use "in planting, propagating, cultivating, growing, harvesting, manufacturing, compounding, converting, producing, processing, preparing, testing, analyzing, packaging, repacking, storing, containing, concealing, injecting, in-dusting, inhaling or otherwise introducing into the human body a controlled substance."

This includes virtually anything, and the law takes special pains to identify items that are considered paraphernalia, including balloons, sugar, scales and balances, sifters, blenders, spoons, as well as items usually associated with the drug culture such as water pipes, hypodermic syringes, roach clips and smoking masks. It also includes kits marijuana users purchase, to test the drug for possible contamination.

The law also provides prison sentences and fines for conviction of violators which include a maximum one-year prison term and $1,000 fine or both for possession or advertising paraphernalia for sale; one year and/or a $25,000 fine for selling paraphernalia to a minor; and nine years and/or $30,000 for sale and distribution of paraphernalia.

The key element in obtaining a conviction on the charge is the intent, and proving that a suspect planned to use the items for drug usage would be difficult, Stoker said.

"If there is nothing distinctive about it for drug use, then it's not going to be effective. You've got to have some factor that distinguishes it," Stoker said.

Still, the law may prove a boon for local drug investigators, because they will now be able to obtain a search warrant solely on the basis of the observation of paraphernalia, Stoker said.

And once inside a house, with the search warrant, police would be free to search for drugs, he said. Both Munn and Qualls said the law is significant in that respect.

Stoker said the law would also allow police to search a person without getting paraphernalia—without proof that illegal substances are being used and without a search warrant. For instance, police would be able to search a person observed smoking a pipe.

Just how much mileage police get out of that will depend on the courts. Judges in New York, New Jersey, Illinois, and California have either ruled laws banning or regulating paraphernalia invalid or issued injunctions on the grounds that paraphernalia definitions have been inadequate.

One paraphernalia dealer in Boise says he plans to remain open on July 1 and challenge the law.

Al Pieper, owner of the Boise-based Red-Eye-Lit, says he plans to challenge the law, adding he has joined in a cooperative effort with two other Boise paraphernalia-dealers.

Pieper's situation is unique because he deals exclusively in paraphernalia, a business he said is capable of generating up to $100,000 each year.

"It's unconstitutional for them to come against me," Pieper said. "I don't feel somebody can come in here and tell me I don't like what you're doing so I'm going to shut you down."

Pieper said he is receiving donations for the effort from local people as well as national paraphernalia manufacturers, and believes he has a broad range of support from people who perceive the law as ridiculous.

Byrd balks at balanced budget bill

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Citing opposition to high defense figures and deep cuts in domestic programs, Sen. Democratic leader Robert Byrd Tuesday postponed action on the 1981 spending bill proposed by the Senate Budget Committee.

Meeting reporters on Congress' first day back from the Easter recess, Byrd said Senate leaders need more time to talk about the budget and "see where the consensus lies."

He met during the afternoon with the other leaders, including budget chairman Edmund Muskie, D-Maine, assistant Democratic leader Alan Cranston of California, Armed Services Committee chairman John Stennis, D-Miss., and Foreign Relations Committee chairman Frank Church, D-Idaho.

"I think we need more time to have discussions," Byrd said. "I'm having some conversations with the House people. I want to see what kind of rule they will get and whether there are going to be changes."

The House Rules Committee is expected to decide Thursday when, and under what rules, it will consider the budget committee's version of the bill.

The full Senate had been scheduled to take up the budget bill Tuesday, but members seeking to restore some of the money the committee cut from domestic programs requested more time.

Democrats see best chance in 20 years for majority

By DAVID MORRISSEY
Times-News Writer

BOISE — It's been one of the major causes of his return among Idaho Democrats.

In each of the last three elections, the party's candidate for governor has drawn overwhelming support.

But in these same elections, in a statewide burst of "irresponsible," Idahoans have also voted into office a Legislature with a lopsided Republican majority.

Democratic Gov. John Evans today watches a House of Representatives where 20 Democrats face a tiny band of 20 Democrats.

In the 35-member Senate, the 16 Democrats are outnumbered and regularly outvoted by the 19 Republicans.

All that's going to change this year. At least, that's the scenario now painted by Democratic leaders.

And while they've been saying this is the year, for 20 years (when the Democrats last controlled the Legislature), initial indicators suggest the Democrats could capture the Senate.

Idaho's Democratic leaders are planning a major effort to take over the Senate. They point out that capturing just two seats in that 35 member body would give their party a one-vote margin.

Because of that, this year's Democratic activities will to some degree slight the House in favor of the Senate, a fact Democrats don't like talking about publicly, but privately admit.

He met during the afternoon with the other leaders, including budget chairman Edmund Muskie, D-Maine, assistant Democratic leader Alan

Olmstead says special session may be needed

BOISE (UPI) — Idaho's two top Republican leaders were not in complete agreement Tuesday over the necessity of a special session of the Legislature.

Senate President Pro-Tem Reed Budge, R-Soda Springs, said absolutely not, but House Speaker Ralph Olmstead, R-Twin Falls, was not as positive.

Olmstead said a recent court ruling on the Medicaid program has changed things in the Department of Health and Welfare funding and should be addressed.

He said if Gov. John Evans, who is considering calling an extraordinary session to tackle Health and Welfare funding as well as possible funding in some other areas, thinks Medicaid is problem, he is "justified in calling a brief session."

Olmstead referred to a 4th District Court ruling that held the state must pay full, reasonable funding for nursing home care, which the Health and Welfare Department said would cost an additional $4 million.

Budge and Olmstead held an hour-long news conference in Boise to counter charges that the recent legislative session was not productive and "rotten."

"...the people of Idaho have been very well served by the recent session of the Idaho Legislature," he said. "The Legislature's accomplishments have been positive. It was a long session, but the benefits are such that we can all be proud of these achievements."

The majority leaders pointed out that education was funded higher than requested by the governor, a percent measure was passed in response to the people's desire to cut government expansion and cost, higher funding for drug abuse enforcement was adopted and a modest maintenance budget for highways was passed.

And, they added, there was modest tax relief with the passage of the homestead exemption, which will be extended and the value of residential improvements from property taxation during 1980.

Budge and Olmstead said the GOP-controlled Legislature was determined to hold the line on spending in the light of severe economic uncertainty for the state's farmers and timber industries "and practically every other segment of Idaho's economy."

The governor's position was one of "spending all of the available revenue," Budge said, adding "the Legislature was concerned with the taxpayer while the governor's concern was more towards the tax spenders."

Budge said in light of present economic indicators, if the governor called a special session and his funding requests were met, "we would almost certainly be faced with an increase in taxes in the next session."

"If the governor does call a special session," the Soda Springs lawmaker said, "I would like the governor to point out the taxes he wants increased in order to meet his funding requests."

Budge said he could "see nothing accomplished" by a special session.

But Olmstead said one was "justified" by the district court decision on Medicaid, although he said he could not see the governor putting in his special session "call" other items already considered by the Legislature.

Asked where the money would be available to take care of the Medicaid problem, Olmstead noted that there should be $4 million left in the general account to take care of the problem.

He also said that programs could be tightened with lower levels of support being provided.

The Twin Falls Republican said he would rather see support lowered than raising taxes for all the state's residents.

Both solons agreed that even with lower support, certain recipients would not go hungry. They said the Idaho produces enough food to take care of the needy.

"We can put together the mechanism to take care of them," said Olmstead.

Budge also noted that local governments have the responsibility of taking care of the needs of their residents.

Cops will enforce drug law

By MARTY TRILLHAASE Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls law enforcement officials say they will enforce Idaho's new law banning the distribution, sale, and possession of drug paraphernalia. The law, which goes into effect July 1, is intended to force stores to stop selling paraphernalia. The sole store selling paraphernalia in Twin Falls, Budget Tapes and Records, has made no plans to eliminate its paraphernalia sideline as yet.

The decision by Sheriff James Munn and Police Chief Tim Qualls to enforce the new law in this area takes on special significance because Idaho Department of Law Enforcement director Kelly Pearce has said the department will not strictly enforce the new law.

Department public information officer John Rooney said the department with 21 narcotics officers, simply lacks the manpower to pursue it. "They could bust someone for having an apple. It leaves too many spaces."

Idaho's law defines paraphernalia as items used or intended for use "in planting, propagating, cultivating, growing, harvesting, manufacturing, compounding, converting, producing, processing, preparing, testing, analyzing, packaging, repacking, storing, containing, concealing, injecting, ingesting, inhaling, or otherwise introducing into the human body a controlled substance."

sugar, scales and balances, sifters, blenders, spoons, as well as items usually associated with the drug culture such as water pipes, hypodermic syringes, roach clips and smoking masks. It also includes kites, marijuana users purchase to test the drug for possible contamination.

The law also provides prison sentences and fines for conviction of violators which include a maximum one-year prison term and $1,000 fine or both for possession or advertising paraphernalia for sale; one year and/or a $25,000 fine for selling paraphernalia to a minor; and nine years and/or $30,000 for sale and distribution of paraphernalia.

Jones' disclosure report lists $1 million in assets

By MARTY TRILLHAASE Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Jim Jones of Jerome enters his bid for Congress with over $1 million in assets and debts between one-quarter and one-half million dollars.

Jones, who is challenging Congressman George Hansen in the May 27 Republican primary election, today filed a financial disclosure statement as required by the Ethics in Government Act.

Under that act, congressmen and candidates are required to file yearly disclosures with the Committee on Standards of Official Conduct. Hansen's disclosure is expected to be filed shortly.

The official disclosure form does not require candidates to specify just how much their assets and investments, or debts, amount to. Instead, the amounts are reported by category, listing the value as being more than one amount and less than a second.

Using those standards, Jones' total income and investments are valued at being at least $1,067,111. The value of those debts exceeded $1,649,504 but he lists several holdings in the highest category, which includes investments valued at $250,000 or more.

Jones reported earning $36,000 in income from his real practice during 1979 and 1980 up to the present. His remaining income, ranging between $26,000 and $82,500, came from rentals and capital gains and interest from land sales in the Magic Valley.

Much of Jones' investments are in his cattle business and a livestock feeding company. The holdings are valued between $55,000 and $1,480,000 or more.

Jones' debts were reported as being at least $195,000 and at most $500,000. The debts include bank loans — on Jones' residence — in Jerome and a purchase contract for property in Bellevue.

Jones contributes $30,000

Democratic Gov. John Evans today watches a House of Representatives where 50 Republicans face a tiny band of 20 Democrats.

In the 35-member Senate, the 16 Democrats are outnumbered and regularly outvoted by the 19 Republicans.

All that's going to change this year. At least, that's the scenario nov-eloped by Democratic leaders. And while they've been saying this for the year for 20 years (when the Democrats last controlled the Legislature), initial indicators suggest the Democrats could capture the Senate in 1980.

Idaho's Democratic leaders are planning a major effort to take over the Senate. They point out that capturing just two seats in that 35 member body would give their party a one-vote margin.

Because of that, this year's Democratic activities will to some degree align the House in favor of the Senate, a fact Democrats don't like talking about publicly, but privately admit.

To doable, Sen. Ron Twilgar, D-Boise, Sen. Mike Black, D-Craigmont, and Sen. Mike Mitchell, D-Lewiston have formed the "Senate Campaign Committee." This group, Twilgar

Byrd balks at balanced budget bill

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Citing opposition to high defense figures and deep cuts in domestic programs, Senate Democratic leader Robert Byrd Tuesday postponed action on the 1981 spending bill proposed by the Senate Budget Committee.

Meeting reporters on Congress' first day back from the Easter recess, Byrd said Senate leaders need more time to talk about the budget and "see where the consensus lies."

He met during the afternoon with the other leaders, including budget chairman Edmund Muskie, D-Maine, assistant Democratic leader Alan Cranston of California, Armed Services Committee chairman John Stennis, D-Miss., and Foreign Relations Committee chairman Frank Church, D-Idaho.

"I think we need more time to have discussions," Byrd said. "I'm having some conversations with the House people. I want to see what kind of rule they will get and whether there are going to be changes."

The House Rules Committee is expected to decide Thursday when, and under what rules, it will consider the budget committee's version of the bill.

The full Senate had been scheduled to take up the budget bill Tuesday, but members seeking to restore some of the money the committee cut from domestic programs requested more time.

Democrats see best chance in 20 years for majority

By DAVID MORRISSEY Times-News writer

BOISE — It's been one of the major causes of heartburn among Idaho Democrats.

In each of the last three elections, their party's candidate for governor has drawn overwhelming support. But in those same elections, in a statewide burst of intractability, Idahoans have also voted into office a Legislature with a lopsided Republican majority.

Democratic Gov. John Evans today watches a House of Representatives where 50 Republicans face a tiny band of 20 Democrats.

In the 35-member Senate, the 16 Democrats are outnumbered and regularly outvoted by the 19 Republicans.

toled the Times-News, will encourage and financially support Democratic senatorial candidates.

Twilgar says the committee has drafted a tentative budget that calls for placing an almost unbelievable (in Idaho political terms) $162,500 behind the 35 Democratic senatorial candidates.

That money hasn't been formally raised yet, he said, but some $65,000 has been pledged, and the governor has committed himself to raising another $40,000.

This week Twilgar and other veteran Democrats met with their party's Senate candidates for "an intense campaign strategy meeting."

At that meeting, candidates were presented with campaign strategies for their primary elections — whether they faced primary opposition or not. Adhering to the plan will cost each candidate $750 in advertising and other expenses, Twilgar said.

"That initial money must be raised by each candidate he added, creating an intentional "weeding out" process to separate the serious from the less-than-serious contenders.

Candidates who contribute their own money or who actively raise funds for their campaigns, will be given top priority for the party funds available for the general election," Twilgar said.

Capturing the Senate would be rewarded in itself, Twilgar said. But he and other Democrats place additional importance on next year's session because of this year's census.

The 1981 Legislature will redraw legislative district lines according to Idaho's population growth since 1970. If Democrats control one of the two houses of the Legislature, their party gains leverage in determining where those lines will be drawn.

Democrats have complained consistently during the last 10 years that the Republican-controlled legislature of 1971—"gerrymandered"—district lines to help keep the GOP in power.

Those districts have contributed in no small part to the success of Republican legislative candidates, Democrats argue.

Fears of a repeat performance, coupled with a desire to do a little gerrymandering of their own, will likely be powerful factors motivating Democrats this year.

The Democrats won't be unopposed, of course. Republicans enjoy being the majority party — as a position they will surrender only unwillingly.

"This sounds just like what they've said before," said Sen. Pro Tem Reed Budge, R-Soda Springs, commenting on the Democratic "victory plans."

"They say they'll raise a lot of money and work real hard. But they'll still probably lose. We're going to work hard, too, and we have some excellent candidates," he said.

Budge said the GOP is considering sending full-time organizers traveling the state to train local Republican candidates. A similar plan in 1976 produced sizable Republican legislative gains.

"We didn't get a majority by being lazy," Budge commented.

But both Budge and Twilgar agree on one item: may state senate races could be hard fought, with the outcome in doubt until November.

Conversations with these two Senate leaders and other key Democrats and Republicans indicate as Supporters of Puerto Rican separatism demonstrate outside the courtroom where 11 members of the FALN terrorist group were arraigned Tuesday.

FALN terrorists arraigned

CHICAGO (UPI) — A Cook County grand jury has indicted 10 suspected FALN members on weapons, armed robbery and armed violence charges.

Assistant State's Attorney Michael A. Ficara said the charges stem from the April 4 arrest in suburban Evanston of 11 suspected Puerto Rican terrorists.

The 11th suspected member of the terrorist group is to be picked up here Tuesday by federal authorities in connection with the bombing of a New York office building, Ficara said. She is Maria Haydee Torres, whose husband, Carlos Alberto Torres, was on the Federal Bureau of Investigation's most-wanted list.

Carlos Torres and nine others were scheduled to be arraigned on the charges Tuesday before Richard J. Fitzgerald, presiding judge of the Cook County Criminal Court.

Fitzgerald has said that he will have the defendants brought into the courtroom one at a time, and will employ other security precautions to prevent an occurrence of the uproar that took place when the group made its first court appearance April 7 in Evanston.

Several of them had to be dragged out of the courtroom. They contended then and have maintained since that they are "prisoners of war" and have refused to recognize the jurisdiction of the courts.

The underground FALN group seeks independence for Puerto Rico and has claimed responsibility for more than 100 bombings in major U.S. cities.

Ficara indicated that a massive federal investigation is continuing in relation to the 11 FALN suspects and may result in more federal indictments.

Ms. Grygell said she had used the project with different classes for more than one year and never spent more than one class period on it.

Miss Howell, however, appealed that ruling and, on Monday, the University Grade Appeals Committee notified her that they had upheld her action against the students who handed in identical homework assignments.

Professor Donna Howell's decision to flunk the three students finally was upheld Monday by the University Grade Appeals Committee, but it was a long battle and it cost Miss Howell her job.

When the students — two men and a woman — initially appealed their failing grades in Miss Howell's biology lab science class, the grade appeals committee in the School of Science elevated their "Fs" to "Cs."

Assignment: write a ransom note

DIXON, Ill. (UPI) — A third grade class at Jefferson School is learning how to write ransom notes.

"I'm really concerned about the quality of education our children are getting," Susan Buccola, mother of one of the children, said Tuesday.

For more than a year, teacher Nancy Grygell has given her students the assignment of writing a ransom note using visual aids.

A typical note reads: "I have your daughter. I will give her back for $2,000. If you want her back, drop it in Jefferson School's garbage can. If you call the cops, I will kill your daughter."

For visual aids, the child drew a knife for the word "kill," an eyeball for the word "I," and a garbage can and a little girl.

"One boy's note said, 'I have the president's wife.' Another child said he had someone's dog," Mrs. Buccola said.

Ms. Grygell said she intended the project as "a pretend sort of thing," but said she now realizes it probably was not appropriate due to increased violence and the situation with the American hostages in Iran.

She said she got the idea for the project from a textbook using magazine pictures instead of drawing objects.

"It was to teach the children that communications have to be specific," she said.

Ms. Grygell said she did not suggest to the children that they use the word

Teacher wins 'cheater' appeal

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. (UPI) — A Purdue University professor said Tuesday that the outcome of her battle to flunk three students for cheating probably shows that cheaters have a good chance of winning.

Professor Donna Howell's decision to flunk the three students finally was upheld Monday by the University Grade Appeals Committee, but it was a long battle and it cost Miss Howell her job.

When the students — two men and a woman — initially appealed their failing grades in Miss Howell's biology lab science class, the grade appeals committee in the School of Science elevated their "Fs" to "Cs."

and argued that it would disenfranchise voters who marked his line in the belief they were voting for delegates pledged to a candidate.

Anthony Miller, lawyer for Ms. Fu, said supporters of Sen. Edward Kennedy had urged that Brown's name be removed on the assumption that any votes cast for Brown would go to Massachusetts senator otherwise.

But J. Anthony Kline, Brown's state-paid legal affairs adviser, insisted in court "we are not doing this to advance the candidacy of Senator Kennedy, President Carter or anyone else."

Brown must run in home state, court decides

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — A Superior Court judge Tuesday rejected Gov. Edmund Brown Jr.'s bid to remove his name from the June 3 California Democratic primary ballot and thus avoid political embarrassment in his home state.

Judge Fred W. Marler said changing the ballot now would disrupt legal deadline for mailing of sample ballots and applications for absence ballots.

Brown withdrew from the presidential race April 1 after a crushing defeat in Wisconsin and petitioned the court to order Secretary of State March Fong Eu to remove his name

Firms charged unpaid tax

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The country's 100 largest power companies billed their customers in 1978 for $2.7 billion in phantom-taxes they never actually paid to the federal government, an environmental group charged Tuesday.

An Environmental Action Foundation survey found the massive overcharge, sanctioned by federal tax laws partly inspired by utility lobbyists, cost each of the utilities' customers an average of $14 in 1978.

"While the rest of us are sweating over our tax returns, the utilities are cashing in on a bonanza of tax loopholes," said Richard Morgan, the foundation director.

Tax return cheaters growing

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A new study commissioned by the Internal Revenue Service indicates at least 26 percent of U.S. taxpayers may have cheated on their returns in the past, Rep. Benjamin Rosenthal, D-N.Y., said Tuesday.

"The data strongly suggests that Americans are exhibiting a growing willingness to engage in tax evasion schemes because they are increasingly cynical about the evenhandedness of our tax laws," Rosenthal said.

The study, prepared by CSR Inc. of Washington, D.C., was based on interviews with 4,888 individuals representing a sample of all households in the country.

The study was furnished to the commerce, consumer and monetary affairs subcommittee chaired by Rosenthal.

"There are strong indications that at least 26 percent of the taxpayers have purposely engaged in 'tax cheating' sometime in the past, the report said.

Various tax evasion activities such as "understating income and overstating medical expenses appeared to be at least somewhat acceptable to almost 50 percent of respondents," it said.

About 55 percent of those responding agreed with the statement that "almost every taxpayer would cheat to some extent if he thought he could get away with it," the report said.

The survey, based on 1978 tax data the 100 privately owned utilities filed with the Energy Department, found the utilities charged customers $3.5 billion for federal income taxes, yet paid less than $800 million to the government.

It also found that 29 power companies paid no taxes at all. But the same companies were eligible for $144 million in tax refunds, the foundation said.

"Worst of all, these 29 companies changed their customers as if they'd paid $698 million in income taxes," said Morgan.

The phantom taxes are the result of a clause in federal tax laws letting utilities keep two sets of books — one for tax purposes and another to calculate rates they charge customers, Morgan said. The consumer is caught in the middle.

The survey found: "Chicago's Commonwealth Edison kept $157 million of the $177 million it collected in 1978.

"Georgia Power charged customers $100 million, but paid no income taxes in 1978 when it received a $47 million refund.

"Minnesota Power and Light customers bore the greatest burden, each paying an average $132 in 1978 for taxes their utility never paid.

Morgan said the country's private power companies are currently holding more than $15 billion billed to customers for taxes they have not paid.

"It is the largest tax overcharge in the history of the electric utility industry," said Morgan.

He blamed the phantom tax overcharges on legal loopholes and accounting gimmicks. Two of the most common are accelerated plant depreciation and investment tax credits, which Morgan said encouraged utilities to plow the phantom tax money into new nuclear plants.

If governing bodies make zoning decisions based on law and reasonable regulations, they can avoid legal entanglements. If those decisions, however, are based on frivolous, self-serving and half-baked thoughts, then elected officials should expect to be legally challenged.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter, despite growing signs of a world oil surplus, Tuesday extended for nine months his unpopular emergency thermostat restrictions on heating and air conditioning for nearly 3 million public buildings.

The rule limiting air conditioning to 78 degrees in summer and heating to 65 degrees in winter were to expire at midnight Tuesday. But Sawhill said Carter justified the extension to Jan. 16, 1981, with a new declaration of energy emergency.

Carter imposed the energy-saving restrictions last July 16, during the gasoline crisis, by invoking his emergency authority under a 1975 law. But the law seems to limit such programs to nine months unless the president seeks new congressional authority and shows an energy emergency exists.

Sawhill, who said the president was justified in acting without consulting Congress, credited the program with saving 30 million barrels of oil in the past nine months — the equivalent of a $1 billion import bill.

Death Angel case? Witnesses claim hearing wish for patient's death

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — Witnesses at a grand jury hearing in the "Death Angel" case of a nurse charged with the death of a hospital patient testified that she turned down the oxygen flow to his respirator after commenting, "Why don't you just die, you've suffered enough."

"Why don't you just die, you've suffered enough." Another nurse testified he followed Mrs. Adams into Fraser's room and saw her turn down the oxygen flow of the respirator. He testified that about 45 minutes later, he noticed the patient's heartbeat and breathing slowing.

The testimony, given by several hospital employees before the Clark County panel investigating charges that nurse Jan Adams killed patient Vincent Fraser March 3, was released Monday.

He said when Fraser's monitor started to "straight line" — indicating he was approaching death — Mrs. Adams told him to go into the room and pretend to do heart massage.

"You just don't know how to kill patients off," one nurse quoted Mrs. Adams as saying. "I'm going to take this patient (Fraser) tonight."

Mrs. Adams, who appeared before the grand jury by invitation, denied touching any of the controls on Fraser's respirator.

Unpopular thermostat law renewed

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Sen. Edward Kennedy won the key endorsement Tuesday of Philadelphia Mayor William Green, who said the citizens of his city have suffered at President Carter's hands.

As Kennedy headed into the stretch drive for support in next Tuesday's Pennsylvania primary, he also picked up the backing of two large, influential unions.

"I believe the citizens of Philadelphia have already suffered by the actions of this administration." He noted the $40 million to $50 million in cutbacks to the financially troubled city as evidence for his claim.

Kennedy said he believed Green's decision was a reflection of the significant cutbacks in financial aid the president has proposed as a way to fight inflation.

She said Mrs. Adams spoke to the monitor registering Fraser's vital signs, saying, "Die, die, die."

She was asked if she had ever referred to herself as the "Angel of Death."

Adam, Eve out again

DALLAS (UPI) — Just as the Biblical Adam and Eve were removed from the Garden of Eden, city officials have banished a contemporary nude sculpture of the pair.

Steve Rosen, manager of special events for City Hall, said he had the table-top sculpture removed because the "anatomically accurate" nature of the Adam and Eve figures might offend citizens.

The work, entitled "Early Morning," depicts Eve wading in a pool and Adam emerging from a television set and is part of an exhibit sponsored by the Texas Fine Arts Association.

Artist Martin Delabano, who had won $200 for the sculpture, was outraged Monday when he learned his work had been banished.

"Why did you move my work?" he asked Rosen.

Deaf can now call dial-a-prayer

HOLYOKE, MASS (UPI) — Dial-a-Prayer for the deaf may sound like a cruel joke, but for the hearing-impaired, it's more of a godsend.

Programmer Wendy O'Rourke says the "GraceLine" — (413) 534-7223 — is the only place in the nation deaf people can call for a short message and prayer by way of a teletype machine.

The last five digits of the number spells G-R-A-C-E.

"On any show we do, we have the right to reject what's pertinent in regard to the community standards," Rosen responded. "I personally didn't have any problem with your work. This is not any censorship measure. But it's pretty graphic. There's nothing abstract."

"Para Faucetts," a ceramic sculpture of a nude female with faucets instead of breasts, was not removed from the exhibit because it was "more abstract," Rosen said.

U.S. tells NATO allies to stiffen own defenses due to mideast needs

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United States has urged its Western European allies to strengthen their own defenses while America concentrates on the Soviet threat in the Persian Gulf area, the Pentagon disclosed Tuesday.

The administration's message was delivered to NATO members in Brussels by Robert Komer, undersecretary of defense for policy. Komer is in the Belgian capital to prepare for a May meeting of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization defense ministers.

The U.S. message to NATO underlines President Carter's pleas to the allies to support his sanctions against Iran and boycott the Moscow Summer Olympics as a protest against the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan.

Pentagon spokesman Thomas Ross said Komer urged the allies to put more effort into reserve mobilization planning, stockpiling sufficient war supplies, improving airlift capabilities and other measures, and generally improving NATO's existing facilities.

However, the spokesman said the United States is "not in any way" urging NATO to expand its defense area to include the Persian Gulf.

"We are basically asking that NATO do more. We would not do less," he said.

Ross said the United States may find it necessary to earmark some U.S. troops, now designated for NATO contingencies, for possible Middle East duty.

The NATO allies adopted a long term defense program in 1978, estimated to cost about $80 billion, to improve joint defenses over the next 10 years.

However, political problems as well as rampant inflation have cut into the allies' success in boosting their annual defense budgets by 3 percent a year.

"We are not reducing our efforts," the Pentagon spokesman said.

"But we will have to project a substantial force to the Persian Gulf and the NATO allies are being asked to pick up the slack."

In the Persian Gulf, Ross indicated, France, West Germany and Britain may supply some support to the United States Navy force of 26 ships.

France has maintained about a dozen ships in the Indian Ocean for years, and both Britain and West Germany are planning to send some vessels there soon.

The Pentagon disclosed Tuesday the Soviets have now deployed their new amphibious assault ship Ivan Rogov into the Indian Ocean.

The Rogov is believed to be carrying about 400 naval infantry troops.

The Marine Corps has deployed 1,800 Marines on several amphibious ships in the armada in the Arabian Sea.

Red Cross: Hostages in good shape

GENEVA, Switzerland (UPI) — The Swiss physician who visited the 50 American hostages in Tehran said Tuesday they are generally in "good condition" and receive adequate food and medical care, but their living conditions in the U.S. Embassy should be improved.

Dr. Bernard Liebeskind flew back to Geneva after seeing the hostages Monday on behalf of the neutral, all-Swiss International Committee of the Red Cross.

Liebeskind said the hostages "generally are in good health, and there are no problems of nutrition."

He said that while he spoke to each hostage, he did not conduct any physical examinations "because none of them had any particular complaint."

Tehran Radio quoted Liebeskind as saying, "In general they felt very well mentally as well; only one was a little bit anxious, and two others, in my opinion, were a bit depressed."

Dr. Liebeskind said "the atmosphere (in the embassy) was good and we had no difficulties to make this visit."

He reiterated that he could not supply details on detention conditions and would report in confidence only to the ICRC and to Iranian authorities.

An Iranian doctor-in-charge makes daily visits, Liebeskind said, and a Tehran specialist is available if any serious medical problem arises.

The Swiss specialist in internal medicine indicated, however, that he was concerned about the conditions of detention in the occupied embassy.

"I have made some suggestions to the doctor in charge," he said.

Kissinger says accept shah responsibility

NEW YORK (UPI) — Former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger said Monday the Carter Administration should admit it was responsible for bringing the ailing Shah of Iran to the United States last year.

"Our behavior has been disgraceful," Kissinger told a news conference. "The government ought to take responsibility" for the action.

Kissinger discounted his own influence in bringing the shah to New York for cancer treatment as only that of "a private citizen."

"I don't believe my influence is that great," he said, explaining that he recommended the deposed shah, Mohammed Reza Pahlavi, be allowed into the country between April and July 1979. He noted that the Carter administration admitted him in October.

Kissinger's recommendation, he said, was made with a suspicion that Iranian radicals would be "motivated" if the shah came to this country, although he said, "It was not inevitable that hostages be taken."

Asked if his own public and political credibility had suffered with the Iranian situation, Kissinger said, "Why should it affect my credibility. Don't be ridiculous. I think we should have let the shah in from the beginning."

But, Kissinger said, "They (the Carter administration) have ignored me on many other problems."

When asked to comment on alleged killings that took place under the shah's government, Kissinger said it is necessary to "compare the shah by the standards of that area. By those standards, he would hold up very well."

In Washington, however, State Department spokesman Hodding Carter said the administration was

Militants may allow more observers

TEHRAN, Iran (UPI) — Amnesty International and other human rights groups will be permitted to visit the 50 American hostages, Muslim militants at the U.S. Embassy said Tuesday.

The new offer, however, was accompanied by a militant warning that no hostage would be allowed to leave the embassy to receive medical treatment.

Iranian religious leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini leveled a new blast at the United States Tuesday.

Responding to a letter from Pope John Paul II, in which the pontiff expressed concern over the break in relations between Washington and Tehran, Khomeini said, "In view of your holiness' moral influence upon the Christian nation, I would like you to warn the U.S. government against the stupidity and consequences of its unjust and arbitrary action."

"I would like your holiness to advise Mr. Carter, who is facing his final defeat, to deal in a humane manner with nations aspiring to independence and non-subservience to any power, and to follow the teachings of Christ, so as not to expose himself and the U.S. government to further scandal."

In London, Amnesty International said it has appealed to Iranian authorities to release the hostages but has not asked to see them. "We have not raised the matter, nor have the Iranian authorities," they said.

Business sources in Tehran said Tuesday Iranian authorities had been telling European companies that Iranian government debts worth several billions of dollars would be paid shortly.

Polar bear meat full of trichinosis larvae

The larvae of trichinosis in meat can make you sick. Pain in the muscles. Short of breath. Fever. Swollen tissues. Undercooked pork is most frequently blamed. But there's another sort of meat that's even more dangerously trichinosis. And invariable so. It's polar bear. If you're going to eat polar bear, cut it into small pieces and boil. For a long time. Until the odor begins to let up a little.

Q. Aren't people's backside getting bigger with every passing generation?

The law

Warrantless searches axed by Supreme Court

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court ruled 6-3 Tuesday that the Constitution requires police to obtain a warrant before entering a felony suspect's home to arrest him.

The decision overturned a New York statute which allowed warrantless entries for an arrest, and reversed the convictions of two men who challenged the law.

The court has long held the individual's right to privacy bars warrantless entries for searches and seizures. Tuesday, for the first time, it extended that principle to arrests, thus settling conflicting decisions in lower courts.

"In terms that apply equally to seizures of property and seizures of persons, the Fourth Amendment has drawn a firm line at the entrance to the home," Justice John Paul Stevens wrote for the court majority.

"Absent exigent circumstances, that threshold may not reasonably be crossed without a warrant."

In the New York case, the majority opinion rejected the reasoning of the state appeals court, holding that differences in "intrusiveness" between police entries to search and those to arrest "are merely ones of degree rather than kind."

The two share "a fundamental characteristic: the breach of the entrance to an individual's home," Stevens wrote.

"The Fourth Amendment protects the individual's privacy in a variety of settings. In none is the zone of privacy more clearly defined than when bounded by the unambiguous physical dimensions of an individual's home."

However, the opinion drew distinctions between arrests without a warrant in public places — which they upheld in a 1976 ruling — and those in homes.

Currently, 24 states allow warrantless entries for arrests under any circumstances. But 15 states prohibit them, and 11 have no position on the question, the opinion said.

Byron White wrote for his fellow dissenters. Chief Justice Warren Burger and Justice William J. Brennan, Jr., the majority opinion creates a "hard-and-fast" rule that has "little or no support in the common law or in the text and history of the Fourth Amendment."

Campaign limit upheld

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court has upheld the federal law that places strict limits on the amount presidential candidates can spend on their campaigns.

In a one-line order, the justices rejected a challenge by the Republican National Committee, which had argued that the spending limit — $25.4 million this year — violates the Constitution's free speech guarantees.

Under federal law, presidential candidates nominated by the two major parties may finance their general election campaigns in one of two ways.

They may accept private contributions, limited to $1,000 for individuals and $5,000 for political committees, or they may accept federal funds of $5 million, adjusted for inflation.

Candidates who accept private funds are not limited in their total campaign spending, but those using taxpayers' money must agree to abide by the federal ceiling.

Those who accept the federal money are not permitted to accept private contributions. Candidates are required to decide whether they will accept federal funds or use private contributions.

The justices rejected as "without merit" the argument that a candidate's agreement to forgo private contributions is a violation of the constitutional rights of individuals who wish to make campaign contributions.

In her action after a two-week recess, the court:

• Ruled 8-1 that a sentencing judge may consider a defendant's failure to cooperate with authorities in imposing a longer jail term.

• Upheld the conviction and sentence of a District of Columbia man for unlawful use of a telephone to facilitate heroin distribution.

• Ruled 5-3 that the Quinault Indians in Washington State, who claim the federal government mismanaged their forested lands, may not sue for money damages under an 1887 act.

• Cleared the way for former Maryland Gov. Marvin Mandel to begin a four-year prison term for political corruption. Without comment, the justices refused to hear challenges to his 1977 convictions on bribery and racketeering charges stemming from racketeer legislation.

• Rejected an appeal by Illinois Attorney General William J. Scott, convicted last month of income tax fraud, in which he argued that the prosecutor in his trial, U.S. Attorney John P. Sullivan, should have been disqualified.

• Turned aside efforts to reinstate three Amtrak trains discontinued in last year's reorganization of the country's rail passenger service. The court rejected an appeal by Minnesota seeking to revive the Chicago-Houston, Lone Star, the Chicago-Seattle North Coast Hiawatha and the Chicago-Miami Floridian.

• Refused to reconsider an earlier ruling that former CIA officer Frank Snepp must pay the government up to $125,000 in royalties he received for a controversial book he published about the intelligence agency.

• Refused to strike down as racially biased against whites the University of Washington medical school's admissions policy. Frederick McDonald, a white turned down by the medical school in 1976, asked the justices to rule that the admissions policy, extended beyond the affirmative action standards enunciated in their Bakke decision of 1978.

GOP leaders use Tax Day to attack Demo spending

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Choosing "Tax Day" for the occasion, House and Senate Republicans Tuesday blamed President Carter and Democratic members of Congress for soaring inflation and higher taxes.

Tuesday was the deadline for filing federal income tax returns.

But by April 4, roughly two-thirds of the 93-million American taxpayers expected to file already had done so, and the overwhelming majority received refunds — averaging $590.51, up $100 from a year ago.

Sen. Bill Roth of Delaware, joining a round of Republican criticism, said Carter's budget for fiscal 1981 would raise taxes to the highest level ever.

"America is losing its shirt to Jimmy Carter's high taxes and the big spending Congress," he said.

Roth said the average American household paid more than $6,100 in federal taxes for 1979 and will pay $7,800 under the new Carter budget.

Sen. Jack Danforth, R-Mo., said Carter is taking "a narrow-minded approach" to economic policy and the administration "will regret its shortsighted economic approach next November."

Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., said Americans filing their tax returns are being told of a tax reduction, but because of inflation, they will pay about $11.5 billion more in 1979 taxes.

In the House, Republican leader John Rhodes of Arizona said Democrats in Congress must take responsibility for higher spending and taxes because they are the majority.

"Just during the years of the Carter administration, the Democrats who run Congress have increased taxes by $76 billion — an average of $1,000 per taxpaying household," Rhodes said.

"In 1980, taxes will increase by another $66 billion. And in 1981, the tax bite will worsen by a staggering $96 billion — unless the American people finally stand up and stop they've had enough."

At a news conference held by The Conservative Caucus, Rep. Samuel Devine, R-Ohio, said he found during last week's congressional recess that people in his district were "actually outraged" by higher taxes.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The National Taxpayers Union Tuesday gave below average marks to three presidential aspirants in a survey of congressional votes on spending measures.

The union also labeled 15 of the 29 senators up for re-election this year as big spenders.

The union released a survey "that analyzed every vote that affected the amount of federal spending" that included 187 Senate and 250 House roll call votes.

"The average score was a dismal 36 in the Senate and 37 in the House, out of a possible 100," the union said.

The group said high scores went to Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., who voted to reduce spending 83 percent of the time, and Rep. Ron Paul, R-Texas, who voted to reduce spending 91 percent of the time.

Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., scored 17, while Rep. John Anderson, R-Ill., scored 29. Rep. Philip Crane, R-Ill., who is campaigning for the Republican nomination despite poor showings, received a score of 85, second to Paul.

"The biggest spenders in the Senate were Sens. Daniel Inouye, D-Hawaii, and Henry Jackson, D-Wash., who both scored a 12," the group said.

Rep. Henry Gonzalez, D-Texas, scored 11 for the congressional low.

The group said if President Carter had actually voted on the congressional spending issues he took a position on, his spending score would have been 21 percent in the House and 18 percent in the Senate, "which would have qualified him as a 'Big Spender.'"

The group said 25 senators running for re-election who scored below average are: Richard Stone, D-Fla., 35; Robert Packwood, R-Ore., 33; Gaylord Nelson, D-Wis., 32; Ernest Hollings, D-Ga., 31; Thomas Eagleton, D-Mo., 31; Gary Hart, D-Colo., 31; Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., 29; Russell Long, D-La., 28; Frank Church, D-Idaho, 28.

Of the other senators receiving below average scores, the group said the following scored in the "big spender" category: Wendell Ford, D-Ky., 27; Donald Stewart, D-Ala., 26; Alan Cranston, D-Calif., 26; Dale Bumpers, D-Ark., 26; Robert Morgan, D.N.C., 25; John Glenn, D-Ohio, 24; George McGovern, D-S.D., 22; Warren Magnuson, D-Wash., 20; John C. Culver, D-Iowa, 20; Birch Bayh, D-Ind., 20; John Durkin, D-N.H., 19; Charles Mathias, R-Md., 18.

Report: nation's waters contaminated

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A government study of toxic chemicals released Tuesday listed a score of rivers and lakes walled by pollution and details endangered freshwater supplies for millions of Americans.

that "irreplaceable and invaluable natural resources ... are being contaminated, perhaps irreversibly." As examples of groundwater contamination, the report cited the closing of a well field in the San Gabriel Valley in California, which supplied drinking water to 400,000 persons, and the discovery of small amounts of DBCP — a now-banned pesticide — in one-third of the wells in the San Joaquin Valley. In the Great Lakes, "commercial fishing of salmon, lake trout and carp has been severely curtailed," the study said. "The impacts vary from area to area, but it is estimated that overall commercial fishing has been limited by 50 percent." Toxic substances found in one or more of the Great Lakes, according to the study, include PCBs, the pesticides mirex and DDT, mercury, dibenzofurans (PCDF) and asbestos.

and historic and invaluable resources — the Hudson, the Connecticut, the Delaware, the Susquehanna, and the James River, to name a few, are injured," it said. The report also said pollution chemicals have hurt the commercial and recreational fishing industries in the Great Lakes.

Science has found a use for the foreskins from 8-day-old circumcised males — cell tissue needed for producing interferon, an experimental drug that may prove useful in combating cancer, a spokesman for the Weizmann Institute of Science said Tuesday.

Interferon is found in the body in only tiny quantities and its use on a large scale has been prohibitive because the agent can be "grown" only in human body cells. Enough interferon to treat one patient costs $15,000.

Mass production is designed to lower the cost of interferon, although the institute's short-term plans call for keeping most of the drug for scientific research and not for general use by the medical profession, the spokesman said. The number of foreskins needed will be small because the cell tissue multiplies under laboratory conditions.

"The method was not discovered here, but I suppose there are more foreskins around here," the spokesman said. Jewish males are circumcised at the age of 8 days as part of a religious custom dictated by hygiene.

ERA forces to target Illinois

CHICAGO (UPI) — Equal Rights Amendment supporters formally announced Tuesday they will direct a massive lobbying campaign at Illinois legislators this spring in another effort to win the state's ratification. Illinois is the only major northern industrial state which has not ratified a proposed amendment to the U.S. Constitution. Thirty-five states have ratified and three more are needed before the June 30, 1982, deadline to add ERA to the U.S. Constitution.

ERA forces to target Illinois. "We cannot believe that a handful of responsible elected public officials in Illinois will thwart the wishes of a majority of Americans," Eleanormeal, president of the National Organization for Women, said at a news conference. The campaign will include a "massive" march in Chicago May 10, a conference of labor union supporters in Chicago April 26 and various effort days and lobbying days in Springfield, Chicago and the suburbs.

Our challenge is to demonstrate the overwhelming majority that support ERA in this nation and in this state," Ms. Smeal said. She said the lobbying will include individuals and groups from all over the country because "the issue in Springfield is not whether Illinois ratifies. It is whether or not females from all over this nation will have an equal chance."

The Illinois ratification effort has won a majority every time it has come to a vote in Springfield, but legislative leaders have ruled that ratification of a constitutional amendment requires a three-fifths majority in each house. ERA supporters have not been able to win either that margin or a change in the rules.

The issue last came to a vote in the House June 22, 1978, and got 105 of the 107 votes required. Even sponsors of the proposal admitted at the time, however, that there was little chance of passage in the Senate.

The amendment would state: "Equality of rights under the law shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or by any state on account of sex." It would give Congress power to enforce that statement by "appropriate legislation."

Social security extension to fed employees urged. WASHINGTON (UPI) — Congress should end a long dispute and extend Social Security coverage to all federal, state and local government workers and employees of non-profit organizations, the head of an administration study group said Tuesday.

Joseph Bartlett, chairman of the Universal Social Security Coverage Study Group, said such action is feasible and most workers would benefit from it. "This issue has been before the Congress on eight separate occasions since 1938," Bartlett reminded members of a House post office and civil service subcommittee. "Until coverage is extended to public workers, it will continue to be raised again and again."

"There will continue to be taxpayers who will want to know how the Congress can vote on Social Security taxes without being subject to that tax. "There will continue to be workers who want to know why the people who run Social Security are exempt from it. It is in everyone's best interest to put this issue to rest once and for all."

Bartlett said those arguing against such an extension are "ill-informed." "There are many workers who would receive much better protection from a coordinated pension system than they receive from their existing systems," he said. "Women and minority groups who have salary levels lower than public employees" in general would benefit especially from expanded coverage.

"All things considered, the average non-covered worker would be as well off or better off if he or she participated in a retirement system in which Social Security and a staff pension were combined."

Warrantless searches axed by Supreme Court

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court ruled 6-3 Tuesday that the Constitution requires police to obtain a warrant before entering a felony suspect's home to arrest him.

The decision overturned a New York statute which allowed warrantless entries for an arrest, and reversed the convictions of two men who challenged the law.

The court has long held the individual's right to privacy bars warrantless entries for searches and seizures. Tuesday, for the first time, it extended that principle to arrests, thus settling conflicting decisions in lower courts.

"In terms that apply equally to seizure of property and seizures of persons, the Fourth Amendment has drawn a firm line at the entrance to the house," Justice John Paul Stevens wrote for the court majority.

Absent exigent circumstances, that threshold may not reasonably be crossed without a warrant."

In a New York case, the majority opinion rejected the reasoning of the state appeals court, holding that differences in "intrusiveness" between police entries to search and those to arrest "are merely ones of degree rather than kind."

The two share "a fundamental characteristic: the breach of the entrance to an individual's home," Stevens wrote.

The Fourth Amendment protects the individual's privacy in a variety of settings. In none is the zone of privacy more clearly defined than when bounded by the unambiguous physical dimensions of an individual's home.

However, the opinion drew distinctions between arrests without a warrant in public places — which they upheld in a 1976 ruling — and those in homes.

Currently, 24 states allow warrantless entries for arrests under any circumstances. But 15 states prohibit them, and 11 have no position on the question, the opinion said.

Justice Byron White wrote, for his fellow conservatives, Chief Justice Warren Burger and Justice William J. Brennan, that the majority opinion creates a "hard and fast" rule that has "little or no support in the common law or in the text or history of the Fourth Amendment."

Campaign limit upheld

© 1980 Chicago Sun-Times

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court has upheld the federal law that places strict limits on the amount presidential candidates can spend on their campaigns.

In a one-line order, the justices rejected a challenge by the Republican National Committee, which had argued that the spending limit — $20.4 million this year — violates the Constitution's "free speech" guarantee.

Under federal law, presidential contenders nominated by the two major parties may finance their general election campaigns in one of two ways.

They may accept private contributions, limited to $1,000 for individuals and $5,000 for political committees, or they may accept federal funds of $20 million, adjusted for inflation.

Candidates who accept private funds are not limited in their total campaign spending, but those using taxpayers' money must agree to abide by the federal ceiling.

Those who accept the federal money are not permitted to accept private contributions. Candidates are required to decide whether they will accept federal funds or use private contributions.

The justices rejected as "without merit" the argument that a candidate's agreement to forgo private contributions is a violation of the constitutional rights of individuals who wish to make campaign contributions.

In other action after a two-week recess, the court:

• Ruled 8-1 that a sentencing judge may consider a defendant's failure to cooperate with authorities in imposing a longer jail term.

phone to facilitate heroin distribution.

• Ruled 5-3 that the Quinault Indians in Washington State, who claim the federal government mismanaged their forested trust lands, may not sue for money damages under an 1887 act.

• Cleared the way for former Maryland Gov. Marvin Mandel to begin a four-year prison term for polluting a stream. Without comment, the justices refused to hear challenges to his 1977 convictions on bribery and racketeering charges stemming from racketeer legislation.

• Rejected an appeal by Illinois Attorney General William J. Scott, convicted last month of income tax fraud, in which he argued that the prosecutor, in his trial, U.S. Attorney Thomas P. Sullivan, should have been disqualified.

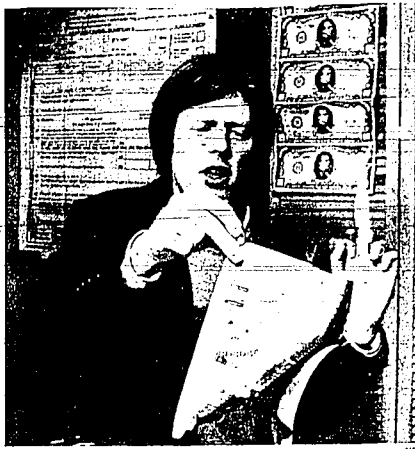

• Turned aside efforts to reinstate three Amtrak trains discontinued in last year's reorganization of the country's rail passenger service.

Report: nation's waters contaminated

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A government report released Tuesday lists a litany of rivers and lakes wounded by pollution and details endangered groundwater supplies for millions of Americans.

"Groundwaters on which millions depend for drinking water are contaminated," said the study, prepared by the Library of Congress.

"Historic and invaluable waterways — the Hudson, the Shenandoah, the Delaware, the Susquehanna, and the James River, to name but five, are injured," it said.

The report also said poison chemicals have hurt the commercial and sportfishing industries in the Great Lakes.

The study, covering lakes, rivers and groundwaters, was prepared at the request of Sens. Edmund Muskie, D-Maine, and Robert Stafford, R-Vt., the chairman and ranking Republican on the Senate environment subcommittee.

Muskie said the report was a "staggering account of what the careless use of toxic chemicals can do to our natural resources and economy."

Stafford called the study a survey of "dark and bloody ground" and added that "irreplaceable and invaluable natural resources ... are being contaminated, perhaps irreversibly."

As examples of groundwater contamination, the report cited the closing of a well field in the San Gabriel Valley in California, which supplied drinking water to 400,000 persons, and the discovery of small amounts of DDEP — a now-banned pesticide — one-third of the wells in the San Joaquin Valley.

In the Great Lakes, "commercial fishing of salmon, lake trout and carp has been severely curtailed," the study said. "The impacts vary from area to area, but it is estimated that overall commercial fishing has been limited by 50 percent."

Toxic substances found in one or more of the Great Lakes, according to the study, include PCBs, the pesticides mirex and DDT, mercury, dibenzofurans (PCDF) and asbestos.

The number of forefins needed will be small because the cell tissue multiplies under laboratory conditions.

"The method was not discovered here, but I suppose there are more forefins around here," the spokesman said.

use by the medical profession, the spokesman said.

Interferon is found in the body in only tiny quantities and its use on a large scale has been prohibitive because the agent can be "grown" only in human body cells. Enough interferon to treat one patient costs $15,000.

Mass production is designed to lower the cost of interferon, although the institute's short-term plans call for keeping most of the drug for scientific research and not for general

Largest star in sky found

LONDON (UPI) — Astronomers have located what may be the largest object in the universe — a quasar (radio star) with a diameter at least (trillion miles across).

Earth has a diameter of approximately 8,000 miles.

According to the magazine New Scientist radio astronomers found the quasar named "3C 345" while using the largest fully-steerable radio telescope in the world — at Effelsberg near Bonn in Germany to study large radio-emitting galaxies and quasars. Quasars are distant celestial bodies that emit powerful radio waves.

"3C 345" is 5 billion light years away in space. A light year is the distance light travels in a year at 186,000 miles a second — approximately 6 trillion miles.

Unusual interferon source found

REHOVOTH, Israel (UPI) — Science has found a use for the foreskins from 8-day-old circumcised males — cell tissue needed for producing interferon, an experimental drug that may prove useful in combating cancer, a spokesman for the Weizmann Institute of Science said Tuesday.

The institute plans to mass produce the suspected anti-viral agent from the foreskins at a $1 million pilot plant that is to go into operation June 1, the spokesman said.

Repairman 'trips' reactor

ATHENS, Ala. (UPI) — An instrument mechanic doing routine service work on Unit 2 at the Browns Ferry Nuclear Plant tripped the reactor today, causing the Unit 1 reactor at the facility to drop to half power, a TVA spokesman said.

Lois Gwin said a transformer overheated at the same time, setting off the fire control system.

Gwin said officials were not sure the tripping of the plant and the problem with the transformer were related. "We just don't know what happened at the moment," he said.

ERA forces to target Illinois

CHICAGO (UPI) — Equal Rights Amendment supporters formally announced Tuesday they will direct a "massive" lobbying campaign at Illinois legislators this spring in another effort to win the state's ratification.

Illinois is the only major northern industrial state which has not ratified the proposed amendment to the U.S. Constitution. Thirty-five states have ratified and three more are needed before the June 30, 1982, deadline to add ERA to the U.S. Constitution.

"We cannot believe that a handful of responsible elected public officials in Illinois will thwart the wishes of the majority of Americans," Eleanor Smeal, president of the National Organization for Women, said at a news conference.

The campaign will include a "massive" march in Chicago May 10, a conference of labor union supporters in Chicago April 26 and various leaflet days and lobbying days in Springfield, Chicago and the suburbs.

"Our challenge is to demonstrate the overwhelming majority that support ERA in this nation and in this state," Ms. Smeal said.

She said the lobbying will include individuals and groups from all over the country because "the issue in Springfield is not whether Illinois ratifies. It is whether or not females from all over this nation will have an equal chance."

The Illinois ratification effort has won a majority every time it has come to a vote in Springfield but legislative leaders have ruled ratification of a constitutional amendment requires a three-fifths majority in each house. ERA supporters have not been able to win either that margin or a change in the rules.

The issue last came to a vote in the House June 22, 1978, and got 105 of the 107 votes required. Even sponsors of the proposal admitted at the time, however, that there was little chance of passage in the Senate.

The amendment would state: "Equality of rights under the law shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or by any state on account of sex." It would give Congress power to enforce that statement by "appropriate legislation."

Social security extension to fed employees urged

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Congress should end a 30-year dispute and extend Social Security coverage to all federal, state and local government workers and employees of non-profit organizations, the head of an administration study group said Tuesday.

Joseph Bartlett, chairman of the Universal Social Security Coverage Study Group, said such action is feasible and most workers would benefit from it.

"This issue has been before the Congress on eight separate occasions since 1938," Bartlett reminded members of the House post office and civil service subcommittee. "Until coverage is extended to public workers, it will continue to be raised again and again."

"There will continue to be taxpayers who will want to know how the Congress can vote on Social Security taxes without being subject to that tax."

"There will continue to be workers who want to know why the people who run Social Security are exempt from it. It is everyone's best interest to put this issue to rest once and for all."

Bartlett said those arguing against such an extension are "ill-informed."

"There are many workers who would receive much better protection than they receive from their existing systems," he said.

"Women and minority groups who have salary levels lower than public employees in general would benefit especially from expanded coverage."

"All things considered, the average non-covered worker would be as well off or better off if he or she participated in a retirement system in which Social Security and a staff pension were combined."

Industrial production slumps during March

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Industrial production slumped badly in March with sagging output recorded in virtually every sector, the government said Tuesday.

March's 0.8 percent decline, the largest drop since last August, gave more weight to the belief that the long-anticipated recession is finally taking hold.

GM, Ford protest aid to competitors

WASHINGTON (UPI) — General Motors and the Ford Motor Co. Tuesday protested congressional proposals to help Volkswagen and American Motors meet future U.S. fuel economy standards.

A proposed "Volkswagen amendment" to the 1975 Energy Policy and Conservation Act would allow companies that began U.S. production after 1975 — as Volkswagen did — to use the average efficiency of their domestic and imported fleets.

Scout camp jobs for paint workers

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI) — When its product inventories swelled, Porter Paint Co. of Louisville decided to send 17 production workers to Boy Scout camp rather than lay them off indefinitely.

Porter Paint, while keeping the 17 on the company payroll, decided to donate three weeks of their work time to a Boy Scout camp south of Louisville, according to Roy D. Krueger, personnel director of the firm.

revised its February industrial production figure. Instead of rising 0.2 percent in February, the nation's central bank now says industrial production actually fell 0.2 percent.

"Should industrial production continue its downward trend in the months ahead, economists believe, it is safe to assume a good many American workers will lose their jobs."

Union Pacific lists gains

NEW YORK (UPI) — Union Pacific Corp., the railroad and fuel combine, earned $2.13 a share in the first quarter, up from $1.77 a year earlier as sales rose to $1.53 billion from $901.77 million.

Net income climbed to $102.03 million from $84.1 million. The Champlin Petroleum division had the best profit gain to $52.8 million, an increase of $10 million from $45.3 million a year ago on sales of $456.7 million.

signified "widespread" downturns in the combined output of the nation's factories, mines and utilities with "significant reductions in both durable goods and nondurable goods."

The Fed said March's industrial production index stood at 151.2 percent of the 1967 average. Last year at this time, the industrial production index was 153 percent, 1.8 percent higher.

Potlatch sales up, earnings off

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Potlatch Corp. has reported record sales but sharply lower earnings for the first quarter of 1980.

The plummeting home building market, combined with increases in operating costs, had negative effects on some business segments, the company said.

Production of durable goods — those products which last for more than three months — dropped 1.4 percent, with declines in the output of both home goods and automobile products.

Home goods production, primarily appliances, carpeting and furniture, dropped 1.7 percent in March.

Spring selling season sour for auto makers

DETROIT (UPI) — The normally upbeat spring selling season is turning sour for U.S. automakers.

The gloomy report meant the industry's year-long slump is continuing without letup.

Output of materials declined 0.6 percent, with nondurable materials like textiles and paper, falling 0.7 percent, and durable materials, such as metals, decreasing a full percentage point.

Production of business equipment, which has shown strength during the past year, remained unchanged in March.

Producer arrested on assault charge

EAST PATCHOGUE, N.Y. (UPI) — Theatrical producer Roy Radin — accused by the mother of "Welcome Back Kotter" star Melonie Hoffer of raping, beating and kicking her daughter in his 72-room Long Island mansion — was arrested Monday night on a weapons charge, police said Tuesday.

A Suffolk County police spokesman said Radin, 30, was arrested at his home in Southampton's "Millionaires' Row" section about 11 p.m. He was charged with fourth-degree weapons possession.

The spokesman, Sgt. Theodore Evania, declined to say what kind of weapon police found in Radin's home.

Evania also would not say if the producer was freed on bail or was being detained.

MELONIE HALLER former 'Sweathog'

"She told me that she was fighting back, and she was beaten, kicked and stepped on," Mrs. Haller said. "She said they locked her in a room and put chains on her when she tried to get out."

"She said she was scared, but she couldn't run away, because she didn't know where she was."

Reached at her Manhattan apartment, Mrs. Haller said she visited her 22-year-old daughter for two hours Sunday at Brookhaven Memorial Hospital where she was reported in fair condition.

Suffolk County police also interviewed Miss Haller, a New Orleans native who grew up in Ridgely, Conn., at the hospital Monday afternoon.

Police spokesman William McKeon said Miss Haller told them she had been "raped," but detectives declined to disclose who she said had attacked her.

"She also alleges that she was beaten by a number of people in the mansion and that use of drugs was going on," McKeon said.

Detectives are now going out to interview persons who were in the mansion with Miss Haller," McKeon said. "She has bruises over her entire body."

Miss Haller, the first female "sweathog" on ABC's "Welcome Back Kotter" series starting Gate-Kaplan, was found bruised and incoherent on a Long Island Rail Road train near Patchogue Sunday morning.

Mrs. Haller said Dr. Ahmed Bora phoned her and stated her daughter sustained multiple bruises, a concussion, fractured ribs and possible internal bleeding.

She said her daughter, who has posed for Playboy magazine, went to Radin's ocean-side mansion Friday at THE BIRTHDAY OF ROBERT-McKEAGUE IV of Manhattan, who she met about three weeks ago at the Xenon discotheque.

Contacted at his Ridgely office, Lawrence Hirsch, Radin's lawyer, said the actress-model was found by a butler early Sunday morning at the foot of a stairway leading to the second floor of the mansion.

"The butler helped her up and called Mr. McKeage," Hirsch said.

"Miss Haller apparently fell down the stairs," the lawyer said. "She said she was not feeling well, and Mr. McKeage wanted to get her to a doctor."

Bill Murphy, weight 600 pounds, waits for either surgery or death.

Friends collecting funds for surgery

ORLANDO, Fla. (UPI) — Bill Murphy's friends are trying to collect enough money to finance stomach-stapling surgery for the 600-pound man.

"I just don't know how to come up with $5,000," Murphy said Monday. "I just don't know. Maybe my friends will think of something."

He says he will die without surgery because of the strain his heart bears.

Just talking on the telephone takes his breath away. A walk to the mailbox to collect his monthly $239 disability payment leaves Murphy huffing for 10 minutes.

But even the indignity of bathing in the backyard with a garden hose because he can't fit into the tub has not motivated Murphy to keep from gaining another — "I just don't have no will power."

"The whole thing in a nutshell is I don't have no activity. I don't have nothing to turn to because no one will hire me. I say to myself, why not enjoy food while I still can," he said.

"The way the doctor talked, it wouldn't be very long before it would get the best of me, all this fat," Murphy, a bachelor, said. "In other words, I'm like a walking time bomb. My heart could go any time."

He says the only solution is an operation to close off his stomach so it holds no more than 2 ounces of food.

Doctors tell him he will lose 60 pounds in three months after the stomach stapling surgery and 30 percent more of his weight in the next year and a half. A team of surgeons have offered their services for free.

Now Murphy is trying to finance a $6,000, two-week stay at Shands Teaching Hospital in Gainesville by the end of July.

Because he has no job and no medical insurance, the hospital requires the money be paid before admission. "Without any insurance, we need to have the money up front," said Lisa Stewart, a spokeswoman for Shands.

A total of $1,129 has been donated to a Southeast Bank trust fund in his name since the Orlando Sentinel Star printed a story about Murphy three months ago. This weekend he and a benefactor, Lou Goff, failed to persuade hospital officials to collect their money in monthly or weekly installments.

"The hospital doesn't want to dig up an inch," Murphy said. "I guess they're short on nurses and they need the money. If someone came to me that desperate, and could come up with $4,000 — even $4,500 — I think that would be fair. But there was no compromise."

Caviar

Tennessee paddlefish poaching blamed on Iran

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — Tennessee wildlife officials have a new problem to worry about — paddlefish poachers.

"They can blame it on the Iranian revolution..."

Among the more esoteric effects of the upheaval in the Mideast country is the sudden demand for the roe of the prehistoric paddlefish, apparently a poor substitute — but at least an available one — for Iranian sturgeon caviar.

As a result of the increasing trouble in Iran, and finally the cutoff of trade, the price of paddlefish roe is up from $2 a pound in 1978 to $23 a pound and more than 30 people have been arrested in recent weeks for illegal commercial fishing.

"The man who catches the fish sells the eggs for $23 a pound and the man that buys it resells it for $30 a pound in New York," one official said. A "good-sized" female paddlefish of about 60 pounds will carry 15-18 pounds of eggs, he said.

Reid Tatum, Tennessee Wildlife Resources Agency regional manager in Crossville, said Monday, "We are making more arrests and our enforcement has probably stepped up some."

The 32 wildlife officers in Tatum's jurisdiction patrol the lakes at night when most of the violations occur.

Swindle could net Soviet officials execution

LONDON (UPI) — A group of Soviet fishery officials could face the death penalty in a multimillion-dollar caviar swindle that involved sending the expensive delicacy out of Russia labeled as "smoked, seasoned herring," a prestigious British newspaper says.

Once outside the Soviet Union, the product was sold on the world market at the going price for the gourmet appetizer.

The Fishery Ministry employees, who took an enormous rake-off in the scam and stashed their profits in Swiss banks, went undetected for 10 years, the Financial Times said.

The newspaper said more than 200 employees of the Fisheries Ministry were arrested, and more than 150 of them may face the death penalty for "economic crimes involving foreign currency."

In what was described as one of the "most serious economic crimes in Soviet history," ministry officials struck a secret and illegal deal with an unnamed Western firm to export caviar labeled as "smoked, seasoned herring," the newspaper said.

Economic crimes involving foreign currency are punishable by death in the Soviet Union if big enough, and such executions took place during the rule of Nikita Khrushchev 20 years ago.

Soft ground? Now's the time to plant onion sets

Chicago Sun-Times
This is the time of the year that browsing through the seed catalogs becomes required reading for the home gardener.

What one vegetable is of really great importance? Well, the onion set of course. Onion sets, along with asparagus and rhubarb, really signal the approach of spring for me.

Growing onions from sets is the surest and easiest method of producing green onions and large dry onion bulbs. One advantage of growing from sets is that initial growth is rapid; so the crop matures before blight or thrips (two common crop diseases) can cause much injury. For all of us home gardeners, the use of onion sets is a sure means of obtaining a satisfactory crop.

Set growing in the second stage is a three-year cycle—from seed to consumer. Seed is produced the first year from onion bulbs planted for that purpose. A portion of the seed is purchased by set growers in various parts of the country. The second year the seed is planted thickly, about 50 pounds to an acre.

Using this method of close planting stunts the seeds' growth and provides the grower with a small mature bulb called an onion set. These are, in turn planted the next year by home gardeners, truck farmers and commercial onion growers.

The largest buyers of onion sets are the home gardener. Sets can be purchased by the pound, quart or bag. Just about all produce departments stock sets. Hardware stores also carry sets for home gardens.

Onion sets come in a choice of colors. There are white, yellow and red sets. The full-grown bulb will of course reflect the color onion you have planted.

This is one vegetable that can be planted as soon as the ground is warm as soon as you can dig the ground and you can have green onions in three to four weeks. This is something children can plant in any type of container.

When purchasing your onion sets look for firm, dormant sets, before they begin growth in heated salesrooms. Buy the sets before planting. Large sets—larger than a dime in diameter—are best used for green onions. If allowed to grow too long, these sets may "bolt" and form flower stalks. Sets that are smaller than a dime produce the best bulbs for large, dry onions.

The saying "big oaks from little acorns grow" also applies to the onion set— from these little sets large onions grow.

Fruit dip and baked rhubarb herald springtime

NEW YORK — Dessert is an anticipated finale for everyday and special occasion dinners alike.

These days, the tendency is toward lighter sweets. And fresh fruit, with its range of refreshing, lively flavors, has a universal appeal.

In England, lemon curd, a pudding-like mixture similar in flavor to our meringue pie filling, is a standard tea time treat. It's popular for tart shell fillings, as a preserve to spread on toast, and a dip for fresh fruits.

Fresh Fruit Orange Dip is similar to the British curd, but far simpler to make. All the ingredients are whipped together in the blender, then just heated through, until the mixture thickens. Fresh orange juice and rind lend a bright, sunny color to the tangy dip. Surrounded by an array of pineapple, orange, apple and banana wedges, it makes an elegant finale to any meal.

When buying fresh pineapple, you'll want to pick out a sweet fruit because it won't ripen further at home. There's a simple criterion for judging ripeness, but the United Fresh Fruit and Vegetable Association does give us some tips. Look for large, fragrant, plump fruit with deep green leaves on the crown and no soft or discolored spots. Contrary to popular belief, leaves which pull out easily are not necessarily a sign of ripeness. Store whole or cut pineapple in a plastic bag in the refrigerator — it will keep for several days.

"Many of our honey, all-American favorite desserts are made with fresh fruits. One of them, the cobbler, is the basis for Fresh Batter Baked Rhubarb. A pancake-like batter is whipped in the blender, then poured into a shallow dish and sprinkled with fresh rhubarb pieces. As it bakes, the mixture rises up and surrounds the fruit. This tart is delicious served warm from the oven or at room temperature.

Rhubarb is actually a vegetable, but because of its high acidity and flavor, it's used mainly as a fruit. The pink variety has a milder flavor than the ruby-red. Good quality rhubarb is in season from February through June, and has fairly thick, firm, crisp stalks. Fresh looking leaves are also a good sign, but only the stalks should be eaten. It should keep for about two to four weeks in the refrigerator, if wrapped well. Rhubarb is a low calorie source of potassium, magnesium, and fiber.

FRESH FRUIT ORANGE DIP

4 EGGS
1/2 cup butter or margarine, at room temperature
1/4 cup sugar
4 teaspoons grated fresh orange rind
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/2 cup freshly squeezed orange juice
1 tablespoon freshly squeezed lemon juice
1 small pineapple peeled and cut in fingers
2 medium apples cored and cut in wedges
2 medium oranges, peeled, cut in slices
2 medium bananas, sliced

In jar of electric blender, combine eggs, butter, sugar, orange rind and salt. Blend 1 minute. While blender is running, add orange juice and lemon juice. Pour mixture into top of double boiler; stir constantly over simmering water until mixture thickens, about 10 minutes. Cover. Chill. Serve with cut up fresh fruits. Makes 8 to 10 servings.

FRESH BATTER BAKED RHUBARB

1 cup milk
1/2 cup flour
2/3 cup sugar, divided
3 eggs
2 teaspoons vanilla
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon ground cinnamon
1/2 teaspoon ground cloves
2 cups fresh rhubarb, cut in 1-inch slices
Confectioner's sugar

In blender jar or food processor, combine milk, flour, 1/2 cup sugar, eggs, vanilla and salt; cover, process until smooth. Pour 1/4 inch batter into a buttered 8-inch round or 9-inch square baking pan; bake in 400 degree oven for 5 minutes, or until set. Meanwhile, combine remaining 1/2 cup sugar, cinnamon and cloves. Remove baking dish from oven; sprinkle with 1 tablespoon sugar mixture. Spread rhubarb in dish; sprinkle with remaining sugar mixture. Pour remaining batter over all. Bake 25 to 30 minutes longer, or until batter is puffed and golden. Cool on rack. Sprinkle with confectioner's sugar, if desired. Makes six servings.

New book explains Europeans' vegetable passion

By NANCY NEWMAN
Chicago Sun-Times

When a cookbook author is a fine cook, a journalist, and totally familiar with the subject of the book, the results are usually outstanding.

Such is the case with Vera Gewanter's "A Passion for Vegetables: Recipes from European Kitchens" (Viking Press, $12.95).

Gewanter is European by birth, a journalist by profession and a vegetarian by choice. Thus, vegetables are no strangers to her cuisine, she can write about them, she knows how they are prepared in Europe, and finally, she is a good cook.

Like many good books about vegetables by vegetarians, this does not require the user to be a vegetarian. All the recipes are exceptional additions to anyone's culinary repertoire. And the recipes are authentic.

Gewanter opens her book, not so much with a discussion of the pros and cons of vegetarianism, but on the subject of the various methods used in European kitchens (notice the word is kitchens, not restaurants).

She says many travelers to Europe get a false impression of a country's true cuisine for a number of reasons. First, most Europeans eat at home, rather than eating out as much as we do. Second, when they go to a restaurant, they like to order what they don't get at home. And third, food habits vary from region to region, sometimes even from town to town within a region.

She also says eating vegetables, in place of meat, is a European tradition that goes back many centuries, mostly due to the cost of meat, poultry (and sometimes fish), the difficulty in getting these ingredients fresh, and the abundance of produce and dairy products. Because the European cook was both thrifty and careful, everything that could be used from homegrown products was.

And since the chicken was more valuable for its eggs and the cow for its milk, these two animals were rarely eaten.

Things have changed in Europe today, with products more readily available and meat and fowl less expensive (except in certain countries), but the vegetable-eating tradition remains.

Also in the author's introduction is a section that covers the more uncommon vegetables in the recipes or those that require special care in cooking.

Kebobs — elegant ways for rationing meat, poultry, fish

Times-News writer
En brochette, yakimono, suvliakia, shashlik, sasages, antichukos, szaszlyk. What do these words have in common?
If you think they are terms for ethnic-forms-of-skewered-cooking, you're right! But, do you know their nationalities?
Give whatever name you want to this clever but elegant method for rationing expensive foods while making a complete and nourishing meal.

With the crunch of high costs, we've got to find ways to get our required nourishment the best ways we can. Kebobs, as they are called in the U.S.A., are a splendid way to do just that.

The nice thing about skewer cooking is that your fire may be a fireplace, inside or outside grill, an outdoor or indoor hibachi, inside range, rotisserie or campfire. You can use almost any kind of food such as meat, poultry, fish, game, fruit, or vegetables, alone or in combinations. Ten or more skewered servings can be made from one pound of marinated, sauce-brushed, or oiled meat, poultry or fish by alternating chunks of them with chunks of fruits and vegetables. Following are a few different recipes for making delicious foods so long way.

MIDDLE EASTERN-STYLE MEATBALLS AND EGGPLANT KEBOBS

2 pounds ground lamb
2 teaspoons salt
1 medium-sized cube garlic, peeled and crushed
1/4 cup finely chopped parsley
1/4 teaspoon black pepper
2 eggs
1/2 cup dry bread crumbs
1/2 cup pine nuts, chopped
1 large eggplant, cubed with skin on, into bite-sized pieces vegetable-oil-to-brush-on-for-cooking

In mixing-bowl, combine ground lamb, salt, garlic, parsley, black pepper, eggs, bread crumbs, chopped pine nuts; mix thoroughly. Form into bite-sized meatballs. Alternate meatballs on skewers with cubed eggplant. Brush skewered foods generously with vegetable oil. Grill until meat is cooked. Makes enough for 14 to 16 ten-inch skewers.

OTHER SKEWER COMBINATIONS
Combo 1

Bite-sized raw chicken cubes
Whole Sugar Snap snap peas or squares fresh green pepper
Bite-sized chunks fresh pineapple
Japanese teriyaki sauce
Alternate chicken cubes, Sugar Snaps or green pepper squares, pineapple chunks. Brush generously with teriyaki sauce and let stand at least 30 minutes before grilling. Brush chunks with teriyaki sauce again before serving.

JAPANESE TERIYAKI SAUCE

1/2 cup soy sauce
1/4 cup sweet white wine
1/4 cup sake (Japanese rice wine)
1 teaspoon sugar
pinch cayenne pepper
1 large clove garlic, peeled and crushed

1 inch piece of fresh ginger root or 1/2 teaspoon ground ginger
In small saucepan, combine soy sauce, sweet white wine, sake, sugar, cayenne pepper, crushed garlic, ginger root or ground ginger. Bring to a boil; simmer 3 minutes. Let stand until cool; strain out garlic and discard. Use as marinade or baste for grilled or sauteed foods. Makes about 1 cup.

Combo II
Bite-sized cubes of beef
Mushroom caps (fresher canned)
Small peeled onions, parboiled to tenderize just slightly Argentinian chimichurri (Argentinian vinegar sauce)

ARGENTINIAN CHIMICHURRI

1/2 cup vegetable oil
1 cup wine vinegar
1 to 3 tablespoons cayenne pepper (go easy on this because it is very hot)

3 large cloves garlic, peeled and mashed 12 cracked peppercorns
1 teaspoon crushed oregano
1 small bay leaf
pinch salt
In saucepan, combine oil, vinegar, cayenne pepper, garlic, peppercorns, oregano, bay leaf and salt; bring to a boil. Remove from heat immediately and let cool. May use sauce directly now but it's best if refrigerated covered for at least 2 days to allow flavors to blend more. Makes 1 1/2 cups.

Combo III
Bacon-wrapped chicken livers
Water chestnuts
Pineapple chunks
Soy sauce baste

Combo IV
Cleaned jumbo shrimp brushed with curry-seasoned and garlic powder-seasoned melted margarine or butter
Squares green pepper
Wedges of tomato or whole cherry tomatoes

THIS WEEK'S BEST MARKET BUYS: Weather changes warrant plenty supply stock-ups. If you do so now, you will save some money later on when they get scarce. Look for the best-plainte-supply-savings-in-the-generic-sections-of-your-markets. Pork is still the best meat buy. Parts of the week are great buys. Slice your own cold cuts and save.

Note: The nationalities of kebobs in the first paragraph are, in order: French, Japanese, Greek, Russian, South-African, Latin-American and Polish.

Skewered meals cooked on a hibachi make for table-top drama. From left, chicken, shrimp, beef and lamb thread with colorful fruits and vegetables on skewers

Dear Abby

Secret rites are not valid

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
© Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I feel so ashamed of myself I can hardly write this letter, but I need your advice.

At age 65 I have never in all my life been in such a state of confusion. I lost my husband in death three years ago, after a good marriage of 40 years and raising five fine children. My only excuse for what I did is that I was a lonely widow.

Abby, I got a crush on a local minister after listening to his sermons on the radio. I joined his church, and finally met him in person. He was a widower, two years older than I. He said he had been married and divorced. (I later learned he had been married and divorced four times!)

From the day we met, he was so kind and so much fun. I fell head over heels in love with him. After two months he started talking marriage. I was walking on air. Then he suggested a "secret" marriage in which we would recite the marriage vows together and consummate our marriage by sexual intercourse. He said he wanted a "secret" marriage because the gossip from his last divorce hadn't died down yet, but as soon as it did, we would go across the state line and get married in the eyes of the society — but we would already be married in the eyes of God. Being foolish and in love, I agreed.

I was blissfully happy for the next four months. Then he grew tired of me and suggested we stop seeing each other. I asked, "What about our marriage?" He said in all our sexual relations he had never reached climax, so in the eyes of God, it wouldn't be considered sexual intercourse, and our marriage was never consummated. Then he said it is not a legal marriage either unless both parties reach a climax.

I feel so ashamed and confused.

Abby, please ask a lawyer if what he says is true. And ask a minister if we are married in the eyes of God.

You are welcome to use any part of this, as a warning to other widows, only please don't use my name.

TAKEN IN
DEAR TAKEN IN: My legal and theological consultants say that it doesn't matter if one, both or neither party reaches a climax during the sex act. It is still considered sexual intercourse.

Furthermore, it is the opinion of all consultants that your "marriage" was not valid in the eyes of God OR society. So, if that tin-horn Casanova is an ordained minister of a legitimate church, he should be reported to his superior and reprimanded for his disgraceful conduct.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I rented a basement to a female student. Everything was fine — until she started joining us for breakfast in her bra and underwear.

She comes upstairs half-naked every morning, sits down to eat with us and thinks nothing of it. I spoke to my husband about it, and he said, "Let her do what she wants; she rented our basement and feels like she's in her own home." Meanwhile, he's getting an eyeful.

What should I do?

EMBARRASSED
DEAR EMBARRASSED: Tell her to please wear a robe, as overexposure would be damaging to her health and your marriage.

CONFIDENTIAL TO YOUNG PHILOSOPHER IN TUCSON: You are on the right track. Tape this on your mirror: "Time is the coin of your life. It is the only coin you have, and only you can determine how it will be spent. Be careful — lest you let others spend it for you" (Carl Sandburg).

Americans have cut many diseases through more healthful life

ENGLEWOOD CLIFFS, N.J. — America deserves a pat on the back. As we turn the corner into a new decade, many Americans are becoming healthier people by taking steps to help prevent such illnesses as heart disease, cancer and stroke. In years past, disease prevention revolved around improvements in immunization programs, sanitation and, more recently, nutrition—in the 1980s, with dread diseases such as tuberculosis and typhoid fever under control, disease prevention and health promotion will become important goals with Americans taking the initiative by making significant changes in their approach to exercise and diet. The importance of the increasing interest in exercise and diet is underscored by the startling realization that 50 percent of all deaths in men over 40 is due to coronary heart disease. Experts point out that premature deaths from heart disease can be prevented. Studies continue to show that, for most individuals, diet has a significant influence on blood cholesterol levels. With a new decade just beginning, it's time to look into the future of food and its relation to heart health. Although 1984 is only four years away, predictions that an all-purpose pill would be the "food for the future" have not yet materialized, and probably never will. With no pill to fall back on, it will be more important than ever that individuals be aware of the proper approach to diet. And, since trends indicate that one-third of all households will be single person units by 1990, more and more individuals will bear the sole responsibility of providing for their nutritional needs, underscoring the importance of nutrition education. The Surgeon General's report, "Healthy People," a lay document on health promotion and disease prevention, offers a good starting point for a "heart healthy" diet and makes the following dietary recommendations. A person should consume only sufficient calories to meet body needs; less saturated fat and cholesterol; less salt; less sugar; relatively more complex carbohydrates (whole grains); less red meat and relatively more fish, poultry, and legumes. As more Americans adopt these dietary recommendations, health experts predict a greater demand for dairy, meat and baked goods with less fat and cholesterol; less highly salted products; less-sweet sweets and less use of egg yolk formulations. To start off right in the decade ahead, evaluate your diet and try to incorporate some of the recommendations from the Surgeon General's report. Include polyunsaturated oils in your diet, select fish and poultry more often for the main dish and include some form of aerobic exercise, such as walking or running, in your routine.

Give spring desserts that professional touch

CHICAGO — Sumptuous desserts, brimming with the sweet and tingly taste of strawberries, are irresistible for spring celebrations.

It's a timely season to honor brides-to-be, new graduates, and to celebrate those "little triumphs" in the family that deserve a sweet and thoughtful treat. Now your spring celebration desserts can have the extra fruit flavor and shimmering sparkle of those created by a professional chef. If you've shied away from fruit glaze recipes, thinking they're far too complex and time-consuming, Strawberry Super Glaze provides dessert-glazing expertise for even the beginner cook. Marketed in produce sections, above the strawberries, each full package of strawberry glaze mix makes about 2 cups when combined with sugar and water, an ample amount to glaze a 9-inch fresh strawberry pie, following the easy package recipe. No cooking's required and the suggested 3/4 cup of sugar to be added when preparing quick Super Glaze can be reduced in any amount down to 1/2 cup, for those who prefer a less sweet, more tart flavor.

July-ripe glazed strawberries crown an impressive, party size Strawberry Festival Dessert. The crisp scalloped cookie-dough crust, topped with creamy vanilla pudding is a fine flavor base for the fresh fruits of spring. Let your creativity reign when arranging the bite size fruits atop this festive dessert. Your strawberry supply can be easily extended with bananas or other sliced fruits when the strawberry season begins to wane.

Swirled Strawberries 'n Cream brings fresh-from-the-berry patch flavor to your table in sophisticated style. For this strawberry celebration, vanilla ice cream and creamy lemon sherbet are swirled with strawberry glaze in stemmed glasses. Here's an all family favorite that takes mere minutes to make and lets you enjoy strawberry season all year 'round.

Create a tempting Berry-Glazed Ribbon Cake with packaged pound cake, strawberry glaze, walnuts or coconut and brick ice cream. This make-ahead dessert un-hurries hosting as it awaits the party, chilling in your freezer. Garnish this springtime specialty with red ripe strawberries in season.

Desserts such as these fairly sing with sunny flavors; so have a bite of spring — it's strawberry time!

SWIRLED STRAWBERRIES 'N CREAM

- 1 package (1.2 ounce) strawberry glaze mix
  - 3/4 cup sugar
  - 1 1/2 cups hot water
  - Vanilla ice cream
  - Lemon or lime sherbet
- In medium bowl, combine glaze mix and sugar; gradually add water, stirring until smooth; let stand until cool. Individual wine glasses or dessert dishes, pour 2 tablespoons glaze; add layers of ice cream, sherbet and remaining glaze. Freeze until serving; garnish, if desired, with sliced lemon and strawberries. Yields about 6 servings.

STRAWBERRY FESTIVAL DESSERT

- 1 package (15 ounce) sugar cookie mix
- 1 egg
- 1 tablespoon shortening
- 1 package (3 1/2 ounces) instant vanilla pudding
- 2 cups milk
- 4 cups sliced fresh fruit
- 1 package (1.2 ounce) strawberry glaze mix
- 1/2 cup plus 1 tablespoon sugar
- 1 1/2 cups hot water

Preheat oven to 375 degrees. Prepare sugar cookie mix according to package directions using egg and shortening. On ungreased cookie sheet using floured rolling pin, shape dough into 11-inch circle. Scalloped edges with small sharp knife, if desired. Bake 15 to 17 minutes; cool completely. Carefully remove cookie to serving platter or roll-covered cutting board. Prepare pudding according to package directions; let stand 5 minutes. Spread pudding over cookie-crust leaving 1-inch border; arrange fruit slices around edge of pudding, angling to form rim (do not lie flat). In bowl, combine glaze mix and sugar; gradually add water, stirring until smooth. Pour glaze into center of pudding; arrange additional fruit in glaze. Carefully cover and chill at least 3 hours or overnight. To serve, slice into wedges. Yields 10 to 16 servings.

BERRY-GLAZED ICE CREAM RIBBON CAKE

- 1 package (1.2 ounce) strawberry glaze mix
- 3/4 cup sugar
- 1 1/2 cups hot water
- 1 frozen pound cake (10 3/4 ounce) thawed 10 minutes
- Vanilla ice cream, brick shape (about 1 pint)
- 3 tablespoons chopped walnuts
- 3 tablespoons flaked coconut

In medium bowl, combine glaze mix and sugar; gradually add water, stirring until smooth. Slice cake horizontally into 3 layers. Cut ice cream into slices 1/2-inch thick; trim to size of cake. To assemble cake: On serving platter, arrange a layer of ice cream on bottom cake layer; gently press half the nuts and half the coconut into the ice cream. Repeat procedure with middle cake layer and remaining ice cream, nuts and coconut. Top with remaining cake. Gently pour 3/4 cup glaze down center of cake allowing glaze to drip down sides; reserve remaining glaze. Cover and freeze cake at least 1 hour. Just before serving, garnish cake with strawberries and additional coconut. Heat remaining glaze. Slice cake and top with hot glaze. Yields about 10 servings.

Whole wheat said good source of iron, minerals

ANAHEIM, Calif. (UPI) — Government scientists have just added whole wheat to the list of foods containing important amounts of iron and other minerals in digestible form. "Until now," says research chemist Eugene R. Morris, "it was reported they were unavailable nutritionally because they were linked to a substance called phytate."

The U.S. Department of Agriculture scientist says phytate is a food chemical found in plants. It's in cereal bran or husks at higher levels than in most other foods, he says. A 30-day study involving 10 men in a USDA nutrition laboratory proved earlier reports incorrect, Morris said in a speech at the annual meeting of the Federation of American Societies for Experimental Biology in Anaheim.

When the volunteers ate whole wheat in normal amounts as part of their daily diet, Morris said, "the whole wheat actually contributed to the body's absorption of minerals rather than subtracting from it."

Now's the time for asparagus, parsnips

Weddings

ALEXANDRIA, Va. — There are two schools of thought on asparagus thickness!

While some authorities say thicker is better because of higher pulp to fiber ratio, others believe slender spears are best. If you purchase asparagus of medium thickness, you're bound to be satisfied!

Actually, two tips for successful asparagus preparation are to select spears of the same thickness (to insure all spears cook evenly) and proper cooking methods. Brief cooking is essential to conserve the nutrients in asparagus and to obtain crisp-tender texture. After trimming spears, the several together in bundles and stand in the bottom of a double boiler in 1½ inches of water. Add 1 teaspoon salt and invert top of double boiler to cover top of spears. Firmer stalks will cook in boiling water while tender tips are steamed. Cook until crisp-tender, about 15 minutes.

To select fresh asparagus, choose firm, fresh-looking stalks with closed, compact tips. Look for stalks with large amounts of green since the white bases are tough and should be removed before cooking. Keep fresh asparagus cold and humid and use as soon as possible.

Sift-Fry Asparagus
2 pounds fresh asparagus
½ cup butter or margarine
½ teaspoon salt

¼ teaspoon pepper
½ teaspoon dried leaf thyme

Wash asparagus. Snap off ends as far down as they break easily. Cut into diagonal 2-inch pieces. Melt butter in large skillet. Add asparagus and sprinkle with seasonings. Cover and cook over medium high heat about 5 minutes, stirring occasionally until lower part of stalk is just crisp-tender. Makes 4-6 servings.

Parsnips:
Parsnips look something like carrots but are lighter-in-color. Good quality parsnips should be smooth, firm and well-shaped. The unique flavor of parsnips is nutty-sweet with a spicy tang. Parsnips are nutritious, too, containing vitamin C and iron.

Parsnips are best cooked by blanching first. Soak them with skins on for about 20 minutes or until tender, cool slightly and remove skins. Then they may be frozen for storage, or sliced, diced, shredded or mashed and prepared any number of ways. Parsnips can be glazed like sweet potatoes, creamed, mashed with carrots or stir-fried with apples for a great new side dish. Try these parsnip recipes and you'll become a regular parsnip purchaser!

Fresh Parsnip Patties
2 cups mashed cooked parsnips
1½ teaspoons salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
1 teaspoon sugar
1 teaspoon paprika
1 teaspoon fresh lemon juice
1 egg
½ cup fine dry bread crumbs
Flour

Combine mashed parsnips, salt, pepper, sugar, paprika, lemon juice, egg and bread crumbs. Mix well. Shape into 2½-inch patties ½-inch thick. Dip in flour. Cook in butter or bacon drippings in skillet, turning to brown both sides. Serve hot with beef, ham, pork or lamb. Makes 4-5 servings.

English Parsnip Pie
1 9-inch prebaked pastry shell
2 pounds fresh parsnips (2 cups chopped cooked parsnips)
1 teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons honey
Pinch of ginger
¼ teaspoon cinnamon
1 tablespoon fresh orange juice
2 teaspoons grated fresh orange rind

2 eggs, slightly beaten

To prepare parsnips, place parsnips in large saucepan with water to cover. Bring to a boil, cover and simmer 20-25 minutes or until tender. Drain and cut slightly. Peel and chop finely. Combine in a bowl with salt, honey, ginger, cinnamon, orange juice, orange rind and eggs; mix well. Turn into prebaked pastry shell and bake in 375 degree oven for 30 minutes. Serve with meat or poultry.

Onions:
Here are two suggestions to try if peeling onions causes you to cry. Peeling onions under running water will often help. So will cutting all but the root part of the onion. Cutting into the root causes irritating fumes to be released, so slice the root end last.

Classic Fresh Onion Soup
¼ cup butter or margarine
5 cups thinly sliced yellow onions (about 1½ lbs.)
1 teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons flour
2 quarts beef bouillon
Salt and pepper to taste
8 slices French bread, ½-inch thick
Grated Parmesan cheese

Melt butter in large heavy saucepan. Add onions and cook covered for 15 minutes over low heat. Uncover, increase to moderate heat, and cook about 30 minutes, stirring frequently and scraping bottom of pan, until onions are deep golden brown. Sprinkle with salt and flour and stir 3 minutes. Remove from heat and stir in broth. Simmer, partially covered, about 30 minutes, skimming occasionally. Set aside or refrigerate until ready to serve, then heat to a simmer. Toast French bread slices. Pour soup into individual bowls, pour soup over toast and sprinkle with cheese. Makes 6-8 servings.

MR. AND MRS. LEWIS RENDON

Downs-Rendon

TWIN FALLS — Patrice Downs and Lewis Rendon, both of Twin Falls, exchanged wedding vows Feb. 21.

The ceremony was performed at the LDS Tenth Ward Chapel in Twin Falls with Bishop William M. Stover officiating.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George W. Downs Junior of Gilbert, Ariz., and the bridegroom is the son of Manuel Rendon of King City, Calif., and Crescencia Rendon of Twin Falls.

The bride wore her mother's wedding dress. The floor length gown was of white eyelet over taffeta with a Peter Pan collar, gathered waist and full length pointed sleeves. A diamond heart necklace accented the gown. Her two-tiered fingertip veil, trimmed in yellow and blue flowers and pearls, was made by her mother and sister.

Andrea Phillips, sister of the bride, served as matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Susan Down and Elizabeth Fernandez.

Mark Bean served as best man. Greg Winkle and Dave Henningson were groomsmen. Mark Downs, the bride's brother, was usher.

Shirley McKay, aunt of the bride, was the pianist. A musical number was presented by Shirene McKay, Cathy McKay, Rebecca McKay and Sharonette Seamon, accompanied by Maryann McKay on the flute. All are cousins of the bride.

A reception followed the ceremony in the church's cultural hall. Betty Winkle was in charge of the guest book.

The gift table attendants were Pat and Ed Henningson.

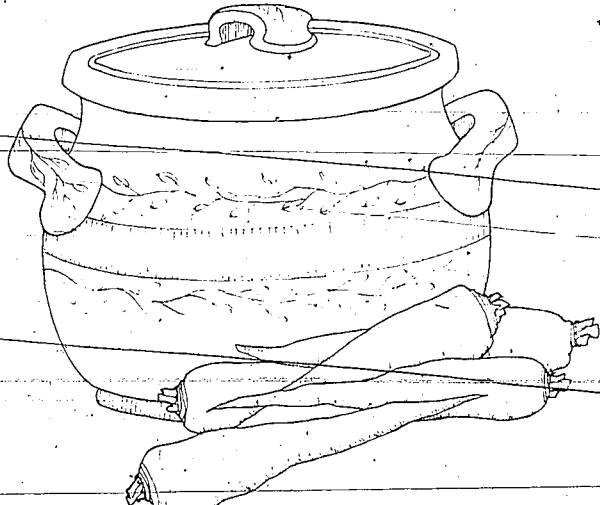

Hilda Truitt, sister-in-law of the bridegroom, Karen Thomason and Rosalie Goble served refreshments.

Quinn G. McKay, uncle of the bride, served as master of ceremony.

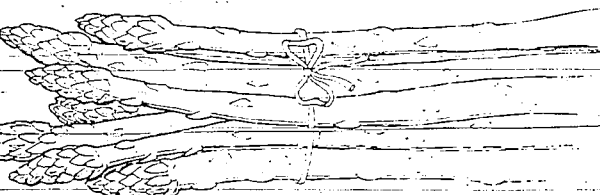

Musical numbers were performed especially for the bride and bridegroom by a trio composed of Ann Downs, mother of the bride; Andrea Phillips, sister of the bride, and Willie Richardson, aunt of the bride, accompanied by Shirley McKay; a quartet, Sharonette Seamon, Shirene, Cathy and Rebecca McKay, accompanied by Maryann McKay on flute and Shirley McKay on piano; and soloist, Mark Downs, brother of the bride, accompanying himself on the guitar.

An open house was held in the new couple's honor March 20 at the bride's parents' home in Gilbert, Ariz. They now reside in Twin Falls.

Jogging, cycling hazards cited

RUPERT — Joggers and cyclists may be creating a hazard to their own health.

According to the president of the Idaho Optometric Association, Dr. John H. Head, Rupert, persons who jog or cycle on streets and roads could end up accident victims if they don't make themselves highly visible to drivers.

"The name of the game is contrast," says Dr. Head. "Joggers and cyclists need to put themselves in sharp contrast to their surroundings, so that drivers will spot them at safe distances."

Joggers and cyclists should avoid such things as dark clothing at night, gray clothing on a hazy or foggy day and green clothing on a road lined with green fields, trees or shrubs.

"During the day, joggers and cyclists should wear a daylight fluorescent orange vest, shirt or pants," he said. "Tests have shown this is the only color safely visible in daylight and at dawn or dusk."

At night, Dr. Head said joggers and cyclists should trim clothing, shoes and bikes with retro-reflective material. He noted that late model bicycles have retro-reflective trim on the pedals but "for safety, the cyclist should be highly visible as well."

According to studies at Indiana University's School of Optometry, only retro-reflective material is safely visible at all speeds to drivers at night.

"Being able to see sharply and clearly and to judge the distance of approaching motor vehicles is essential to jogging and cycling safely," Dr. Head concluded.

Caldo Gallego is broth rich with beans, pork, turnip greens

NEW YORK, N.Y. — Except for popular paella, most of us are quite unfamiliar with the nuances of Spain's cuisine.

Fortunately, we don't have to take a trip to the Mediterranean to discover the wonders of that Spanish cookery. Although the various regions of the country differ considerably, the emphasis is always on fresh ingredients combined to please the eye and palate. The food is simple and hearty, with a pleasant quality that makes it both satisfying and economical.

Northernmost Spain known once as Galicia was originally settled by Celts, who are proud of their ability to withstand living in rugged mountain ranges that are deluged by heavy rains. The cuisine of these people reflects the wholesome, nourishing foods necessary to their survival.

Among the most traditional dishes of Galicia is Caldo Gallego, a broth rich with wholesome beans, sausages, ham and greens. To be strictly authentic, the soup should be made with turnip greens, which grow abundantly in the humid climate and cured pork shoulder. Usually a piece of "lomo" (very aged salt pork) is added, which makes the soup so salty, it will bring tears to the eyes. Our "lamed" version, is nevertheless appealingly robust.

Catalonia, bordering on France and the sunny Mediterranean, is very different in character from Galicia. Seafood and seasonal fresh produce are well prepared in this region, where thrill in the kitchen is a rule. Minestra de Veduras (vegetable soup) is a delightful example of the cooking of this area. Fresh spinach, green beans, carrots and potatoes are combined in a well-seasoned beef broth.

Caldo Gallego
 4 cups chicken broth
 2 cups water
 1 cup Great Northern beans (use dry, white beans that do not require soaking)
 1/2 pound smoked ham, cut into 1/2-inch cubes
 2 ounces salt pork, rind removed
 1/2 cup chopped onion
 1 teaspoon flavor enhancer
 1 pound link pork sausage
 2 small potatoes, peeled and diced
 1/2 pound fresh spinach

In a 3-quart covered saucepan, combine chicken broth, water, beans, ham, salt pork, onion and flavor enhancer; bring to a boil over high heat. Reduce heat, simmer partially covered, 1 hour. Add sausage and potatoes. Continue cooking 30 minutes or until potatoes and beans are tender. Add spinach, simmer 5 minutes longer. Remove sausage and cut into 1/2-inch slices; return to saucepan. Remove salt pork and discard. Makes 6 servings (8 cups).

Minestra De Veduras
 Spanish Vegetable Soup
 2 tablespoons olive oil
 2 medium potatoes, pared and diced
 1/2 cup chopped onion
 4 cups beef broth
 1 can (1 1/2-pound) whole tomatoes, chopped
 1 package (10 ounce) frozen green beans, thawed
 2 carrots, pared and sliced
 1/2 cup chopped green pepper
 1 clove garlic, minced

1 teaspoon flavor enhancer
 1/2 teaspoon cumin
 1/2 teaspoon dried leaf basil
 1/2 pound fresh spinach
 1 hard cooked egg yolk
 1 tablespoon water

In a 3-quart covered saucepan, heat oil; add potatoes and onion. Sauté until onions are golden brown. Stir in beef broth, tomatoes, green beans, carrots, green pepper, garlic, flavor enhancer, cumin and basil. Simmer 15 to 20 minutes; until vegetables are tender. Wash and coarsely chop spinach. Mash egg yolk with water. Add spinach and egg yolk to soup, simmer 10 minutes longer. Makes 6 servings (8 cups).

From Spanish Galicia comes soul-warming Caldo Gallego, a hearty pork and vegetable soup.

Arthroscopic surgery aids arthritic pain

CHICAGO — A surgical procedure using an instrument the size of a common drinking straw to peer inside the knee is drawing encouraging results in easing arthritic pain.

The procedure, known as arthroscopic surgery, was tried initially two or three years ago on football players with knee problems.

More recently, it has been applied to osteoarthritis patients by Dr. S. David Stulberg, an orthopedic surgeon at the University of Chicago, who combined his roles as director of the university's sports medicine clinic and co-director of its arthritis clinic.

The advantage of the procedure is that, in selected cases, it allows removal of torn fragments in the knee without the ordeal and expense of full-scale surgery.

Stulberg reports "quite encouraging" progress with the first 25 to 30 patients.

"They have all shown improvement to different degrees," he said. "The real issue is how long this improvement will last, and whether the degree of improvement is substantial. So far, we think it has been."

Osteoarthritis, a degenerative wear and tear of the joints, is the most common type of arthritis, afflicting an estimated 16 million Americans. The condition is not life-threatening but is painful and can be debilitating.

Ross J. Elson Jr., 59, was one of its victims. A military service injury to his right knee remained dormant for 23 years, but developed into osteoarthritis in 1976.

It got progressively worse. By early this year, he couldn't walk for more than 45 minutes without having to stop and rest. "Carpenter" jigsaws or his frequent job-related trips became a strain. "The pain was with me all the time," he said. "It was very distressing."

On March 13, Elson underwent arthroscopic surgery. He was under spinal anesthesia and was able to watch the entire operation on a TV monitor.

The key to the procedure is the arthroscope, a telescopic device about the thickness of a link and nine inches long. It is inserted in the knee through a nick in the skin, giving the surgeon a peek at the inner workings of the knee.

Some arthroscopies permit the surgeon to insert other instruments to scrape and remove arthritic tissue, along with loose fragments in the knee. Others require a second nick.

Stulberg noted that the procedure "doesn't make arthritis go away."

"What it may do," he said, "is minimize the symptoms."

Prospector discovers barite near Jackpot

By STEVE LIPSON
Times-News writer

JACKPOT — After spending seven years working on a barite claim near Jackpot, W.R. Chambers may be ready to cash in.

Chambers, who lives in Rigby, said there's no doubt that he has found barite, perhaps as much as 100,000 to 200,000 tons, which is used in oil drilling equipment.

But in these days of mechanized mining and red tape, finding a deposit does not necessarily mean profits.

First Chambers needs to build a road to the site and bring in a piece of earth-moving equipment. To find out how big the deposit is.

Before he can proceed, the U.S. Forest Service must prepare an environmental assessment of his exploration plan. The claim site is on Camp Creek, about 20 miles southwest of Jackpot, just inside the boundary of the Humboldt National Forest. Public comments are being sought and the deadline for comment is Friday.

Comments should be sent to the District Ranger at Buhl or the Forest Supervisor at Elko.

Bob Easton, district ranger at Buhl, said he doesn't think the proposal presents serious environmental problems. It calls for construction of a pioneer road about two miles long and exploration that will disturb a maximum of 20 acres.

"We got some comments from the Sierra Club. They didn't oppose it. They just wanted to know more about it," Easton said. Other comments came from cattlemen concerned about the effect on grazing in the area, which would be a problem, Easton said.

The environmental assessment could be completed and survey work for a road done by early May, Easton said. If further exploration shows a deposit that would be economically feasible to mine, a mining plan would be prepared and the Forest Service would conduct an environmental assessment on that plan.

Chambers said he is a prospector, not a miner. "Prospecting is my business. I want someone else to do the mining." If the claim looks promising, he'll sell the rights to develop the site.

Chambers has invested seven years in his barite claim. He has used pack horses to take equipment to the site and helicopters to bring in crews and heavier equipment. He needs to bring in an earth mover and a fuel truck to find out how deep the barite deposit is. He can't bring them in across open country without a road because there are too many steep slopes and deep canyons.

The entire operation "just can't help but cost money," Chambers said. "It's a gamble, but I'm retired and I get Social Security. I can always use that for groceries."

Chambers does most of his prospecting in northern Nevada and central Idaho. In the last few years, he has searched for uranium, copper, gold, silver, lead, zinc and, of course, barite. He said he has high hopes that he will make enough on this barite discovery to pay for his investment in that site as well as in some that haven't worked out.

Chambers said he has people who are interested in developing the site. "There's a big demand for barite. It looks good," he said.

School funding loophole fades

By LARRY SWISHER
Times-News writer

BOISE — Idaho school districts cannot count on a few extra dollars from a possible loophole in the 1 percent law.

That's the message being given by the state Department of Education and the Attorney General's office following a meeting in Boise Tuesday morning to discuss how to interpret ambiguous wording in the law.

State's attorneys knew what their legislation will probably be but are not revealing it until early next week after research and writing is completed.

Meanwhile, many school districts have been waiting for the education department to announce the amount of state funding they can plan on receiving next school year. Depending on how the law is interpreted, schools will get either $21,836 or $21,954 for budget planning for each classroom unit in Idaho.

"We are going to apprise districts to plan their budgets fiscally in a conservative sense," Reed Bishop, associate state superintendent for finance and administration, said Tuesday afternoon. Bishop said the message will be mailed to districts by today.

Under this year's 1 percent legislation, known as House Bill 795, the property tax revenue for local governments is frozen at 1979 amounts in counties where taxes exceed the 1 percent limit. In counties where property taxes do not exceed 1 percent of market value, the law allows budgets to grow up to 1 percent over last year's. In 1979, all budgets were frozen at 1978 amounts.

Deputy Attorney General Larry Harvey said his office is trying to determine whether language in HB 795 means local units of government this year can base their budgets only on the amount they collected in regular property taxes in 1979 or can also include override levy amounts.

He said there is "some ambiguity" in the law as written, although state officials agree the intent of the Legislature was to exclude override levies. Those levies, also called supplemental levies, must be approved by voters and are applied for only a single year.

The law's ambiguity directly affects 48 of Idaho's 111 school districts and a few other local units of government where voters approved override levies in 1979.

"If they had an override last year, that money will be included in determining the amount of money that can be collected this year," Steve Steward, aide to Gov. John Evans, said about one interpretation of HB 795. He added that local governments still could not exceed statutory limits put on their levying powers.

The amount of state money a school district receives is based partly on how much can be raised through local property taxes. The 48 school districts which had override levies last year will tend to require more state money.

If they must exclude the overrides in determining the amount of property tax revenue available this year.

"Our informal practical advice is that there's enough doubt about the interpretation that taxing districts, for sound fiscal planning practices, should proceed as if the override amount is not included," Harvey said.

The Department of Education will also tell school districts to use the slightly lower projection of state support.

This will mean "a few less dollars for everybody and would even include those districts that had overrides," Tom Vapa, chief of the department's Bureau of Finance, said. He roughly estimates the dollars involved statewide to be "in excess of $500,000."

Bishop said, "The overall effect might be minimal. It may put a bit of a pinch on a given school district." But he said, compared to the estimated general fund spending by all school districts next year of some $274 million, the $500,000 involved is relatively minimal.

Twin Falls School District Superintendent James Sawin said it will be close to June before he knows how this one factor will "shake down" through the budget.

Teacher recreates past, students dig it

By LARRY SWISHER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A group of fifth- and sixth-grade students are digging into the past, both in textbooks and in the ground.

A combined class of 24 youngsters at Immanuel Lutheran School in Twin Falls will soon finish excavating the mock remains of a prehistoric American Indian lodge on the school grounds.

The archeological site is authentic in almost every detail, but was actually constructed by the students' teacher, Marvin Munster. Using an abandoned high jumping pit, Munster duplicated the way the people who lived here before the white man left their traces in the dirt.

He placed authentic Indian tools and materials in the ground, then buried them for his students to discover using archeological techniques. Munster also created the remains of lodge post holes, cache pits and fire places.

He got the idea for the learning project last summer while teaching his brother-in-law, who teaches high school science, on an archeological dig in Nebraska.

"I could see the excitement and how much the kids were learning," Munster said. "I thought I would try something similar with younger students."

He said his students have "learned quite a bit about mapping, being able to identify different types of artifacts, understanding different cultures and what it was like for the Indians."

Munster deposited arrowheads, pottery shards, other tools, shells and bone on the "floor" of the mock Indian lodge and covered them with a layer of earth. He also faked campfires using burned wood and ash and post holes by filling them in with different colored soil.

The Immanuel Lutheran fifth and sixth graders were carefully prepared before they started excavating last fall. They learned about early cultures and how they fed, clothed and sheltered themselves.

Munster showed the students samples of what they would be finding in the mock archeological site.

Feeders who used DES threatened with jail

WASHINGTON (UPI) — HEW Secretary Patricia Harris said Tuesday the government may seek prison terms for feedlot operators who used the banned growth hormone DES after it was outlawed as a carcinogen last fall.

Three feedlots in Idaho used the banned chemical, Burley Butte in Burley, Hays Idaho Inc. in Blackfoot and Hot Springs Ranch in Gooding.

Continued use of the chemical, she said, demonstrated "the height of cynicism and contempt for public safety that our society cannot tolerate."

The Food and Drug Administration and the Agriculture Department estimate as many as 300,000 heads of beef cattle were fattened with DES after the procedure became illegal last November.

In a speech prepared for a conference of U.S. attorneys, Mrs. Harris said the DES episode demonstrated a "widespread pattern" of abuse. She said, "The use of the hormone was calculated and premeditated."

She said the FDA would ask the Justice Department and prosecutors to seek "swift, strong penalties."

If convictions result, she said, HEW will seek assistance from the prosecutors in convincing judges that "prison sentences are both appropriate and imperative."

DES (Diethylstilbestrol) had been used since 1954 in cattle and sheep to make the animals grow faster on less feed.

Another PUD approved in Melon Valley

TWIN FALLS — Approval for a 99-home Planned Unit Development (PUD) in Melon Valley has been announced by the Twin Falls county commissioners.

Commissioners took the request under advisement earlier this month following an appeals hearing requested by opponents of the project. The County Planning and Zoning Commission had recommended approval of the project, but ranchers in Melon Valley and Marjorie Fletcher, who charged the project was in direct conflict with the county comprehensive plan, appealed that recommendation.

The project involves 260 acres of land in Melon Valley which has been purchased by Collin Crest Development Inc. Allen Collins, president of the development firm, said he plans cluster housing, leaving many of the present pastures and open areas as they are, with homes on hillsides and view areas or along streams. He said the PUD would also provide lakes, improved streams and other beautification and wildlife habitat areas.

Strong opponents of the proposal included Slotten and Roy and Doris Couch, Melon Valley ranchers. The Couches owned the area as a farm and ranch area and too many homes have already been built for the safety of water sources used by existing ranchers.

Slotten said the proposed development is five miles from other housing and violates the zoning ordinance and provisions of the county Comprehensive Land Use Plan.

Jerome flight plan changed

JEROME — County officials have abandoned a grant request to repair the Jerome airport runway in favor of acquiring land to build a new runway.

In a meeting Tuesday with Federal Aviation Administration officials, the county agreed to alter its grant application to drop resurfacing plans and purchase the purchase of 11.5 acres of the airport.

Other airport improvements, including tie downs and work on the access road, will remain a part of the proposed grant, said Marva Walters, airport fixed base operator.

The acquired land will not be needed to construct the first phase of a new landing strip, consulting engineer Dale Riedesel said. J-U-B Engineers of Twin Falls told the Jerome County Commission Monday.

But the land would be needed to enable future expansion of the airport, Riedesel said, and the FAA is reluctant to fund construction projects until land for all phases has been secured.

The revised project calls for construction of a 3,800-foot landing strip parallel to the present runway, with work done in stages as money is available.

TF board allows band to travel

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls junior-high school orchestra students will have the opportunity to travel out-of-state after all.

School board members Tuesday night approved exchanging visits with orchestra students at the Clearfield, Utah, high school. But the board made clear their approval "does not set a precedent for other out-of-state, overnight trips by students younger than high school age."

Also, approval was given because the students had been to believe all year the trip was going to take place and had raised money for it.

Clearfield students tentatively will visit here May 6.

Nursing home employees set to decide union question

By STEPHANIE SCHORER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The controversy at the Skyview-Hazelde Manor culminates tomorrow when employees decide if they will unionize.

Thursday's union election climaxes more than two months of charges, working schedules, hiring, firing and patient care at the 165-bed nursing home.

Employees will cast secret ballots in two voting periods at the manor, from 7:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. and from 2:30 p.m. to 5:30 p.m.

Barbara Lamers, National Labor Relations Board representative from Seattle, will oversee the voting. Only those employees who appear on an approved list of employees hired before March 20 may vote. Lamers said about 137 names were on the list, compiled by management and submitted to the union. The list may be modified at today's pre-election conference for representatives of both sides.

The ballots will be counted immediately after the voting ends. A simple majority of those voting will determine the result.

If the union is defeated, union representatives are required to refrain from activity at the manor for a year. If the union wins, negotiations for a contract will begin.

The drive for a union began when Richard Drake, grandson of the manor's original owner, took over the administration from J. & P. Enterprises on Feb. 1.

Employees charge that Drake fired competent staff, cut wages and working schedules and skimmed on patient care for monetary returns.

Drake maintains, and other employees agree, that he has attempted to correct patient care problems led him by the previous administration. He cites an August Department of Health and Welfare survey that pinpointed serious problems at the home.

In March, the DfW announced that a February follow-up survey found "serious deficiencies" at the manor and recommended that a license not be issued to Drake. A hearing will hold May 23 and 25 on the matter.

"The union is the only way to improve the quality of patient care," said Pam Monson, spokesman for pro-union employees. "That has been forgotten by the town as a whole. They think the employees are out for themselves."

Drake had said he was informed of the union drive a scant few weeks after he had taken over. He has repeatedly said he knows the manor has patient care problems but all he wants is a chance to correct them, which pro-union employees haven't given him.

Monson was fired last month from the home. Drake contends it was for insubordination. Monson contends it stemmed from her pro-union activities.

She and others not on the approved employees list who feel they were wrongly fired may cast challenge votes in Thursday's election. If the vote is close, either the union or the management may ask the NLRB to hold an investigation in order to count the challenge ballots. Monson said 11 to 15 such ballots will be cast.

The union the employees seek to join is the Idaho Service Employees Union, Local 687, in Boise. This union is a chapter of the Service Employees International Union (SEIU), which has 838 contracts throughout the country, mostly on the west coast and the Midwest.

To represent him in the labor dispute, Drake has joined the Idaho Employers Council (IEC), which represents about 350 businesses, school districts and counties in the state.

Those two organizations have become the two forces vying for the support of employees.

Both sides expressed optimism about the election. However, Tom Hazzard, IEC executive secretary, predicted a close vote.

The Idaho Service Employees Union is relatively new to Idaho, as it was organized here last July, according to Warren Lundquist, state director. He said Skyview-Hazelde employees contacted the union in February. Thursday's election is the Idaho union's first NLRB election.

Lundquist said the union local now has five chapters of state or public employees, but those chapters handle grievances rather than engage in collective bargaining. They include the city of Boise, state employees in Boise and in Blackfoot, the Ada County Highway District and the Idaho School and Hospital in Nampa.

Lundquist said the union has two hired employees.

The union's affiliate, the SEIU, was first organized in 1921 by the American Federation of Labor for janitor workers. It now includes workers at hospitals, nursing homes, schools and industrial plants and represents more than 250,000 health care workers, according to the SEIU. Lundquist said employees at a Good Hope nursing home have joined the SEIU's Seattle local.

If approved, this union requires $6 per month dues. Lundquist said negotiations will determine other union stipulations such as requiring all employees to join the union 30 days after being hired.

Lundquist said negotiations could also determine wage and benefits, working conditions and patient care standards.

The Idaho Employers Council was first formed in 1958. It now has 21 hired employees and represents companies with 25,000 workers. Hazzard said most of the council's resources are directed toward the development of employee programs and communication techniques.

The IEC's standard fee for a company with 151 to 200 employees is $550 a year plus travel expenses. Hazzard said — Union spokesman — charge employees pay these fees merely to get a "union buster."

"We're not so much anti-union as pro-employee," Hazzard responded. "We're an alternative for employees to unionization. We understand why they look at us in this way, (as union busters) but it's not true."

Hazzard said the council's program is based on communication, "not confrontation." He claims only 50 percent of union elections actually result in a contract.

Nevada geothermal plans progressing

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — Geothermal energy still isn't as cheap as uranium for producing electricity, but it is far less expensive than oil, says a scientist for Phillips Petroleum Co.

Phillips is currently developing naturally occurring steam energy at Roosevelt Hot Springs near Milford, Utah, for commercial electricity production. The company is also exploring other possible geothermal sites in Nevada.

But the initial cost of developing steam energy has slowed negotiations with power companies that might build a generating plant at Milford, said Dr. William Berge, a geologist who heads up Phillips' geothermal branch based in Salt Lake City.

"At this point we are trying to sell our steam," he said. "We are negotiating with Utah Power and Light Co. and four or five municipal power companies."

"For the first 120 megawatts, it's not going to be cheaper than UP&L's coal costs for power generation," said Berge. "But it is a lot cheaper than West Coast costs for oil and gas to generate electricity."

California may prove to be the best market for geothermal power, he said. Another possible market would be the Air Force, which is going to need considerable power for the proposed MX missile system, if it is deployed across Utah and Nevada.

Phillips has talked to the Air Force about the use of steam energy, but prefers to have a utility company develop the plant, Berge said.

In a few years, Berge added, the cost of geothermal power should be cheaper than coal. The price of coal will continue to go up as the cost of labor and transportation increases. But the cost of steam from the natural wells should remain nearly constant.

"With geothermal power, there are no underground mines to operate, no large labor force to be paid," he said. "It's also environmentally better than coal."

Phillips has spent $10 million developing the wells at Roosevelt Hot Springs. It hopes to have a 20 megawatt power plant in operation near Milford within two years. By 1985, the steam wells could support two additional 50 megawatt power plants for a total capacity of 120 megawatts — enough power to serve a city of 120,000 people.

A 120 megawatt geothermal power plant would save about 1.8 million barrels of oil per year, Berge said.

The scientist said Phillips is conducting tests near Desert Peak, Humboldt House and Steamboat Springs areas of western Nevada in addition to the site in southern Utah.

He estimated that geothermal energy sources in the western United States could be producing 2,000 megawatts of electricity by 1990, enough to save 30 million barrels of oil annually. By comparison, the proposed Intermountain Power Project in western Utah — which would be the largest coal-fired power plant in the United States — would generate 3,000 megawatts.

The trick to geothermal power generation is to find a large reservoir of extremely hot underground water, said Berge. The well water at Roosevelt Hot Springs is about 500 degrees — so hot it turns into steam when brought to the surface. The steam can be used to directly turn electric generators.

If tires squeal in a gentle turn, that means they're underinflated. When that happens, your car uses more gas and tires wear out quicker. Keep them inflated to the maximum recommended by the manufacturer.

Dinky the cat, treed by volcano, dies

YALE, Wash. (UPI) — Dinky, the cat that hustled up a tall fir tree and refused to budge on March 27, the day Mount St. Helens first erupted, is dead.

The three-year-old cat stayed in that tree for nine days while the mountain that towers 10 miles from Yale continued to spew out steam and ash.

Dinky became the object of national attention as word spread of his plight. People from as far away as New York wrote and called with advice and encouragement.

Finally logger Dwight Carpenter used spikes to climb to the cat's hideout 65 feet up the tree. It took Carpenter two hours to lure Dinky to him. He stuffed the cat in a cloth bag and used a rope to lower it to the ground.

Dinky seemed all right but his owners, the Dennis Huesties family, shipped him off to Mrs. Huesties' mother in Vancouver, Wash., for a rest.

"The veterinarian who checked him said that cats have finely tuned senses, and that the volcano made his Jumpy," said Mrs. Huesties. "We thought a vacation away from the mountain would do him good."

Marjory Mack, Mrs. Huesties' mother, took Dinky to the animal hospital Thursday when he became ill. The veterinarian said Dinky had symptoms of distemper, even though he had been vaccinated, and that his resistance had been lowered by his traumatic experience, making him vulnerable to illness.

Dinky died Friday night and was buried during the weekend.

Disputed MX memo called out of date

CARSON CITY (UPI) — Air Force officials have told Nevada Gov. Robert List that a memo suggesting ways of making sure the MX Missile System is built in Nevada and Utah is outdated and no longer in effect.

List aide Bill Phillips said the memo is "a cause to keep our guard up." But he said the Secretary of the Air Force staff told Nevada officials the memo should be discarded.

The memo by Air Force Undersecretary Antonia Chaves proposed the military first examine weaknesses of alternative MX sites so they could be rejected in favor of the Nevada-Utah site.

Phillips said Tuesday an Air Force staff official assured List's office the memo is not being followed and that other sites in West Texas and New Mexico are being fully examined.

Utah Gov. Scott Matheson and List have called on the Air Force to study other locations for the $56 billion project.

Arizona edges back to Rebellion

PHOENIX (UPI) — The House voted today to override Gov. Bruce Babbitt's veto of legislation that would involve Arizona in the so-called "Sagebrush Rebellion."

The 46-3 vote in the House came the day after the Senate voted to override the veto and marked the first time in 29 vetoes that the Legislature has voted to override Babbitt.

Five Senate Democrats whose legislative districts are composed of largely rural areas, joined 16 Republicans in voting to override the veto. They included Sens. Polly Getzwiller of Casa Grande, Ed Sawyer of Safford, Bill Hardt of Globe, Bill Swink of San Manuel and Jones Osborn of Yuma.

Sawyer said he voted to override the veto because the bill was supported by his constituents but he warned it would "take the second biggest employers in Safford — the Bureau of Land Management — and eliminate it."

The bill would declare the state owned 12.6 million acres of BLM land in Arizona and would provide the attorney general's office with $60,000 to join the State of Nevada in a lawsuit against the federal government.

"This bill was a bad bill when we voted on it the first time and it's still a bad bill," said Sen. Morris Parr, D-Tucson.

Parr said that if the lawsuit is successful and the state does take over the lands, they won't be managed properly due to a lack of state revenues or taxes will have to be increased significantly.

Mrs. Getzwiller said she felt "the people of Arizona are better able to manage the lands in this state than the people in Washington."

Sen. Jim Mack, R-Tucson, said the federal government controls a major portion of Arizona's land area and said, "I can't help but think of how nice it would be to have Texas where the federal government owns less than 6 percent of the land."

Moon endorses Kennedy

BOISE (UPI) — State Treasurer Marjorie Ruth Moon Tuesday endorsed Sen. Edward Kennedy's bill for the Democratic presidential nomination, urging Idaho's Democrats to do the same.

"I join with the people of Idaho in their alarm over our deteriorating national economy," said Miss Moon, a Democrat. "As state treasurer, I have had a first-hand look at what 20 percent inflation and interest rates are doing to our state's most vital industries, including farming, logging, construction and food processing."

"I can no longer stand silent to the failure of the Carter Administration to address the real results of inflation."

Symms observes tax increase day

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Republican Rep. Steve Symms said Tuesday Congress should recognize April 15 as "Federal Tax Increase Observance Day."

He said the "liberal majority" in Congress should be given the "credit they so richly deserve for 26 years of deficit spending, increased taxes and a massive national debt."

Symms, R-Idaho, said the Democrats have blocked scores of bills that would have provided tax relief to the people.

Eagles try to recoup

By IRWIN CURTIN
Times-News sports writer
TWIN FALLS — "I refuse to give up on it. I think it's here," Jim Walker, ever-optimistic College of Southern Idaho baseball coach, said Tuesday afternoon.

"It's a winning formula for the Golden Eagles. 'It' consists of the proper mix of reliable fielding, consistent pitching and timely hitting that's been conspicuously absent in recent weeks as CSI's dropped six consecutive games on the way to a 9-11 record.

Hoping to find "it," Walker this week has introduced a new wrinkle into the Golden Eagles' scrimmages at Frontier Park, where they will host Treasure Valley Community College for doubleheaders Friday and Saturday.

The new wrinkle? When a player makes what Walker judges to be a mental or physical mistake, said off-center Walker, run five times between the corner of the rightfield fence and the corner of the leftfield fence.

Offenders who received that punishment Tuesday included a catcher who dropped a routine pop fly in front of home plate and a pitcher who threw wildly in the dirt on a pick-off attempt to first base.

What effect does the eminent psychologist, who obviously adheres to the theory that a winning team practices in a winning manner, think his behavior modification program will have?

"I don't know what it's going to do," Walker said, squinting out into the sun as gusting winds took his spit of tobacco juice five feet downwind. "I guess it's double reinforcement. Instead of making a mistake and getting abuse from me, they're making a mistake, getting abuse and paying for it. Nobody likes to run just because they've made a mistake."

One Golden Eagle who didn't have a chance to practice Tuesday, and, if you're a cynic, to make a mistake, was Wayne Hackulich.

The 19-year-old sophomore from Reno, Nev., CSI's starting third baseman, limped around the dugout and field with a splint and soft cast on his right knee. He may be limping for six weeks because of stretched medial ligaments.

In last Saturday's second game of a doubleheader with the Brigham Young University junior varsity, Hackulich fielded a grounder hit by the Cougars' leadoff batter in the first inning. As he straightened up to throw to first, his right knee buckled. He recovered, threw late to first and then collapsed on the infield dirt in agony.

"I went down for that ground ball and saw stars," Hackulich recalled Tuesday. "I know I passed out. The next thing I knew, they carried me off the field."

And into the dugout for ice and then gingerly into a pickup truck for a trip to the emergency room of Magic Valley Memorial Hospital. Hackulich will see a Twin Falls orthopedic surgeon today and find out if surgery is necessary.

"I'm not the greatest baseball player, but I've been having a good year," said Hackulich. "I feel like I could get it to the point where I could play with a little pain in two weeks. But I don't know if the coach will let me."

"I'm going to have to at least try to play again. If I'm ever going to do anything in baseball, this is no good on the bench. This team needs help."

No arguments on that.

Bruins go on the road for meet

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls tracksters begin their only double meet week of the season today by traveling to Pocatello.

The Bruins, welcoming two sprinters back from an injured list, will take on Highland and Blackfoot at the Highland track this afternoon. They wind up their week by battling heads with most of the state's best Saturday afternoon and evening in the Boise Relay.

Coach Jerry Kleinkopf and his Bruins have seen Blackfoot before but this will be their first look at Highland.

Blackfoot, which participated in an early-season meet in Twin Falls, wasn't overpowering at all, although the Broncos did have a good sprinter.

Highland has been beating most of its competition in Eastern Idaho but in a dual with Pocatello — a team that defeated Twin Falls — Coach Rick Nell's Rams lost about a 40-point decision.

Twin Falls will have sprinter Greg Klitzberg and Troy Campbell available back to help lead the Bruins into the second of the season with muscle pulls or stress fractures.

"Klitzberg will be in the 440-yard relay only for a couple of weeks and the doctors have told us we have to keep a special eye on Troy," Kleinkopf said.

A Special kind of Olympics

Coach Kraft shouts encouragement to Olympic participants

By IRWIN CURTIN
Times-News sports writer
TWIN FALLS — Olympic competition comes to town this week, and there's no chance of a boycott.

Nearly 200 mentally retarded and physically handicapped athletes of both sexes will compete Thursday in the 10th annual Magic Valley regional Special Olympic Games.

Competitors in the games, which start at 10 a.m. at Robert Stuart Junior High School, will participate in a variety of track and field events including 100- and 200-meter dashes, 400-meter relay, 25-meter wheelchair race, long jump, softball throw and a run-dribble-and-shoot basketball contest.

There will also be a gymnastics demonstration by girls from Gooding, and Jerome immediately before the awards ceremony.

The regional games are a prelude to the State Special Olympic Games, expected to attract about 2,000 athletes, at Boise State University May 27-30.

Magic Valley school districts that will be represented Thursday by athletes eight to 19 years of age include Wendell Gooding, Jerome, Buhl, Hatley, Burley, Rupert and Twin Falls. Additionally, adults 21 and over from Rupert and Twin Falls will be competing.

All participating athletes, who are limited to competing in two events, will be awarded ribbons.

"The meet's shaping up real well," said Kevin McDonough late last week. McDonough, a special education teacher at the junior high school, is for the second consecutive year area coordinator for the regional games.

Volunteers from the Gooding

Optimist Club, the Twin Falls Torch Club and from among the parents of participants will serve as coaches, chaperones, "huggers," judges and timekeepers, he said.

"They know the area games are coming. They're really excited," McDonough said of the nearly 20 student athletes at the junior high school who've been practicing for about 90 minutes twice a week since January and will compete Thursday. "They don't really have a sense of competition, but they know the meet is coming. Some of them are so excited they want to start packing for the state games in Boise."

There are so many benefits for participants in the Special Olympics that they're hard to put into words, said Virginia Kraft, a speech therapist at Stuart who's been helping coach the athletes.

"You can see the kids grow just by participating and doing something they're proud. You can see it in their eyes," she said, adding that the major benefits center around socialization.

"They learn to get along with other kids and with adults," Kraft said. "And they learn that winning isn't everything, that you've just got to try your best."

Results of the regional games will be tabulated by volunteer computer programmers who work with businesses in Boise that have contracted with the Special Olympics to provide volunteer services.

But regional results will have no bearing on an athlete's participation in the state games. Any athlete who participates in the regional competition may, if he or she wishes, compete in the state games.

Rockets to mold new club

HOUSTON (UPI) — Rick Barry, one of six Houston Rockets whose contracts expired Tuesday and one of four who may be encouraged to seek employment elsewhere before next season.

The team finished the regular season 41-41, won a three-game playoff series against San Antonio and then were beaten in four straight games by the Boston Celtics.

Their season at an end Monday, Calvin Murphy said, "I'm not downhearted about our team. Only eight teams came this far. We were one of them."

First-year Coach Del Harris, who reportedly will be asked back next season, said, "Our fans have got to remember there were 14 other teams watching on television yesterday while we were still playing."

"It's funny, isn't it? A week ago we were the toast of the town after beating San Antonio. Today, I guess we aren't much of anything."

Barry, 36, made $1 million the past two seasons since jumping from the Golden State Warriors and said he might seek a job as a player-coach for the new Dallas NBA franchise.

Rudy Tomjanovich, 31, also became a free agent after Monday night's playoff loss to Boston. In the four games against Boston, he scored 26 points.

Both Tomjanovich and Barry reportedly will be offered non-guaranteed contracts by the Rockets.

Owner George Mlooff, General Manager Ray Patterson and Harris will meet next week in Houston.

It is known that the Rockets will make an effort to retain third-year forward Robert Reid and rookie guard Allen Leavell, two free agents. Reid has a one-year option to remain with the club and Leavell is a free agent.

Two reserves who became free agents — Major Jones and Alonzo Bradley, will be available to the Dallas team when it selects its players off the bottom of NBA rosters.

Earlier this season, Barry said he would not be interested in a coaching job.

"I would like to continue to play," he said Monday. "It all depends on what the doctor says about my knees. I said I would never coach, but..."

The former ABA and NBA all-star said he had re-evaluated his future and might consider an offer to coach the Dallas team.

"It might not be a bad situation. It could be fun, with a hungry group of guys. And along with it, maybe I could play. I see no reason why that can't be done. It would certainly create some fan interest in Dallas," he said.

Barry clashed with Harris over coaching tactics this season and said Monday if Harris returned as coach he probably would not return.

"If he is back, more than likely he would want to have other people here," Barry said.

"Tomjanovich said 'I believe in what Del has to say' but that he would 'talk it over with my family' before considering any offers. He has spent his 10-year NBA career with the Rockets."

Bama coach quits job

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. (UPI) — Alabama basketball Coach C.M. Newton resigned today to take a job with the Southeastern Conference.

Newton, who coached the Crimson Tide for the past 12 years, will join the SEC as an assistant commissioner and administrator. He also will include supervising the conference's basketball program.

His resignation was announced by Sam "Bubba" Bailey, assistant athletic director at Alabama.

Named to succeed Newton was Winfrey "Wimp" Sanderson, Newton's longtime assistant coach.

Canadians shoot for fifth NHL title

MONTREAL (UPI) — Veteran superstar Guy Lafleur and four other regulars will be missing tonight when the Montreal Canadiens, shooting for their fifth straight Stanley Cup, host the Minnesota North Stars in the opening game of the NHL Stanley Cup quarterfinal playoffs.

Lafleur suffered a knee injury Friday night when he was kneed by Pat Boutette as the Canadiens took their preliminary elimination series from the Hartford Whalers in three straight games.

The Minnesota North Stars pulled off a three-game sweep over the North Stars are faced with a stiff schedule of four games in five nights.

The first two games will be held today and Thursday before moving to Minnesota Saturday and Sunday nights.

If a fifth game, in the best-of-seven series is necessary, it will be played in Montreal Tuesday.

During the regular season, the Canadiens posted a 3-1 record against Minnesota.

Lafleur missed action late in the season, when he injured his knee against the Washington Capitals.

Oddly enough that was the last time the Canadiens suffered a defeat. Since Feb. 19 Montreal has gone 24 straight games without a loss, and that includes the final 21 games of the regular season.

"I wasn't sure if I had seriously injured myself," said Lafleur. "In fact, my injury was going very fast and it was too late when I saw Boutette coming at me."

"He got a penalty, we started our powerplay and it was about 30 seconds until I realized I couldn't stand on my leg."

foot) Guy Lapointe (injured ankle) forward Doug Risebrough (injured shoulder) Pierre Mondou (injured groin).

"We can't do anything about the injuries," said Montreal coach Claude Ruel.

"We are going into a big series against a tough club and we will have to play our very best with what we have."

Ruel refused to reveal who will start at goal, although Dennis Herron owns two of the three wins against Hartford, was expected to get the nod.

Quarterfinal NHL action opens tonight

By United Press International
Intending to keep the honor of Canada intact after Minnesota knocked off Toronto in a preliminary round, Montreal takes on the visiting North Stars tonight in opening quarterfinal action of the National Hockey League playoffs.

In this Goltsh-David confrontation, the Montreal Canadiens seek their 21st Stanley Cup trophy since 1926. They pushed past the opening round with three straight victories over the Hartford Whalers, a spurt matched by Minnesota in its preliminary skirmish with Toronto.

But whereas the Canadiens are seasoned skaters in playoff competition, Minnesota's farthest playoff penetration has been to the semifinals twice, where the North Stars lost to Montreal and St. Louis.

Best-of-seven series open on three other fronts: New York Rangers at Philadelphia, New York Islanders at Boston and Chicago at Buffalo.

Montreal hurts a bit with the temporary loss of its top scorer Guy Lafleur for the first two games because of a swollen left knee. Lafleur, the NHL's third leading scorer during the regular season, suffered stretched ligaments in a Feb. 19 game and aggravated the injury when hit by Pat Boutette of Hartford in the Whaler series.

"From what they tell me, Guy won't be able to play in the first two games," said Canadiens coach Claude Ruel. "So we will have to do our best with what we have."

Mark Napier, who had two goals and four assists while filling in for Lafleur in late February and early March, has been reinstated on a line with Pierre Larouche and Steve Shutt.

"The last time Guy got hurt, I was skating with the puck more, trying to control it more," says Napier of his new opportunity. "Guy tries to do that a lot when he plays. I tried it the last time and it worked well, so I'll try to do it again."

Boston also had an injury problem as it went up against the tough Islanders. Jean Ratelle, the Bruins third leading scorer during the regular season, has a bad back and was not expected to see action against New York.

The Islanders-Bruins confrontation is the first for the teams in "post-season" play. Boston was extended to five games before beating Pittsburgh in a preliminary series, an unexpected struggle for the Stanley Cup, hopeful Bruins.

"We made it harder on ourselves by underestimating Pittsburgh," says right-winger Terry O'Reilly. "We won't underestimate the Islanders. If we do, we'll be gone."

Billy Martin gets ejected from game

By United Press International
Billy Martin was ejected from a game for the first time as manager of the Oakland A's during the second inning of Monday night's contest with the Seattle Mariners at Oakland.

Martin was removed after arguing with first base umpire Larry McCoy. After he was thrown out, Martin kicked dirt five times on McCoy as they stood near first base.

Martin has managed the A's for five games.

With Seattle leading 5-1 in the second, Martin came to the mound to remove starter Steve McCarty Wyoming last week. He was 5 for 10 at the plate, including a double and a home run, for five runs batted in scoring three times.

Gwynn was awarded the weekly title for the Southern Division. He was 6 for 8 for six RBI's as the Aztecs swept four games from Texas-El Paso. His performance included a double, a home run and three stolen bases.

MARVIN HAGLER, top middleweight boxing contender, fights a rematch Sunday with one of only two men to beat him.

Hagler, of Brockton, Mass., will meet Bobby "Boogaloo" Watts of Philadelphia, who scored a decision over Hagler in a 10-rounder at the Spectrum in Philadelphia in January 1976, part of a special bicentennial card.

"I've been trying to get him back in the ring for four years," Hagler said of Watts. "I don't think he'll be boogalooing much on Sunday."

and continued to first base to confront McCoy. Five batters earlier, McCoy upheld an appeal call that denied Oakland an innitending double play.

LAMAR JOHNSON, who hit .600 and had a 1.067 slugging percentage for the Chicago White Sox, has been named the American League's first player of the week of the new season.

During the April 9-12 first week of the season, Johnson went 9-for-15 with a double, two homers and 16 total bases. Johnson, who batted .309 last season, also knocked in seven runs.

GARRY MADDOX, Philadelphia Phillies' outfielder, has signed a new "multi-year" contract with the franchise. Maddox' agent Jerry Kapstein announced Tuesday.

"Garry has signed a multi-year contract with the Phillies after 15 months of negotiation between Ruly Carpenter and myself," Kapstein said. "Both Garry and the Phillies believe the contract is a fair one."

Maddox, who was traded to the Phillies during the 1975 season, has a lifetime .291 batting average in eight major league seasons. The feet-footed centerfielder was awarded his fifth consecutive Golden Glove award after last year.

CRAIG GRAVES of Utah and Tony Gwynn of San Diego State were named Western Athletic Conference baseball players of the week Tuesday.

Graves won the honor for the Northern Division for his performance in Utah's two wins over and continued to coach both men and women swimmers on the U.S. Olympic team, said Monday he had softened a bit in his support for a boycott of the Moscow Olympics.

"When the talk of a boycott started, I was one hundred percent in favor of what the President said," Haines told an audience attending the 50th anniversary of the Huntington-Wright building where he learned to swim. "I thought we had to make a stand."

DAVE GALLAGHER, defensive tackle has notified the Detroit Lions he is retiring from football to work full time toward obtaining his medical degree from the University of Michigan.

The former Michigan star cited nagging injury problems that have hampered him for the past two seasons as the chief reasons he wants to devote full attention to his studies.

"His intelligence, sense of humor and ability to handle either tackle or end all made it good to have Dave around," Coach Monte Clark of the Lions said. "We'll miss him and we wish him well as he completes his studies in medicine."

THE LOS ANGELES Rams Tuesday traded veteran running back Lawrence McCutcheon, the club's all-time leading rusher, to the Denver Broncos for an undisclosed future draft choice.

McCutcheon, 29, a third round draft choice out of Colorado State in 1972, gained a total of 6,186 yards in 1,435 carries during his seven years with the Rams.

He also set the club record for most rushing yards in a single season in 1977, when he gained 1,238 yards.

MARK SPITZ, winner of seven gold medals in the 1972 Olympics, say U.S. athletes should protest Soviet aggression in Afghanistan by staging a demonstration at the Moscow Olympics, not by boycotting the Olympiad.

"I would take away the inspiration for the future from the youth of the United States," Spitz said Monday.

Murphy claims title for NCAA scoring

MISSION, Kan. (UPI) — It was a rough way for Loren Lloyd of Drake to finish the 1979 college basketball season, but it was a finish any player in the country would have traded him for.

Lloyd finished as a double bridesmaid in the final NCAA Division I statistics released Tuesday, coming in second to Tony Murphy of Southern University in the scoring race and second to Larry Smith of Alcorn State in rebounding.

Murphy was declared the NCAA scoring champion with an average of 32.1 points, topping Lloyd by a margin of 1.9 points. They were the only players to average better than 30 points per game this season.

Smith was crowned the rebounding champion with an average of 16.1 per game, again topping runnerup Lloyd by a margin of .1 per game. Smith and Lloyd were the only players to average better than 15 rebounds per game this season.

In other individual categories, Steve Johnson of Oregon State set an NCAA record in finishing as the field goal percentage leader and Brian Mitchell of Georgetown captured the free-throw percentage title at 92.9 percent (79-of-85).

Superintendent Bud Ainsworth, foreground, watches as rainbow trout are vaccinated against ERM

F&G to fight back against ERM strain

By LARRY HOVY
Times-News sports writer
HAGERMAN — Enteric redmouth disease may no longer be a bane-to-area trout fishermen.

The disease, called ERM, Hagerman strain, in the trade, has been responsible for mortality loss at all state fish hatcheries over the years. Sometimes the loss is negligible but in the worst conditions it can amount to 15 percent of a year's crop. But the Idaho Fish and Game Department has started fighting back against the disease.

Bud Ainsworth, second in a family line of superintendents at the department's largest trout factory, and his crew began administering a vaccine recently.

In the process, the fish are scooped out of the rearing raceways and run through a special tank. It takes two to five seconds for the fish, abetted by a minor flow of water, to escape through the outlet vent. By then they have been subjected to a fine spray of vaccine mist which they absorb through the gills and also through the skin.

It isn't anything new to the trout-raising business.

"The commercial hatcheries have been using this for a while now but we just haven't had the money," he said. "I've talked to commercial producers and they say they would never think about raising a crop of fish without running them through this vaccination procedure."

ERM is a bacteria-caused disease which proves fatal and seems largely bent toward trout and toward penned up trout. The vaccine is considered strong enough to immunize the fish until they reach the 11-12-inch range and the chances of throwing off the disease are greater.

It is a matter of the more fish around, the more likely to be infected. "Commercial hatchery loss to ERM sometimes is several percentage points more than ours because they have more fish in a raceway than we normally carry," Ainsworth said.

He said the disease occurs among wild fish, noting it might be this side of rare to find a spring-race species afflicted. Ainsworth said the vaccination process would now become an annual part of the hatchery's budget, both in manpower and monetarily.

Current estimates are it costs about four-tenths of a cent per fish for the vaccinations.

"But there are several side effects that you can't figure into that," Ainsworth said. "First, you can't judge how many fish you've saved because every year the incidence of the disease is different. But by vaccinating them, the fish can turn their vigor into growth rate rather than fighting the disease and that's a side effect. When you've eliminated ERM, it means the fish will have more strength to fight any other type of disease that might attack them."

He noted a reduction in mortality results in the department spending less money for eggs and transportation of eggs to the hatchery. It also reduces the amount of money spent on feed that ERM might leave belly-up in the raceway. It also could result in the requirement for fewer fish to be raised, which amounts to a major share of the department's budget annually.

Ainsworth said it was possible that continued treatment for ERM could virtually eliminate the disease as a factor.

"That would take several years because I'm sure the entire drainage (that provides water to the hatchery) is infected with it. But over a number of years, it could be reduced as any kind of a major threat — like pollution. Once the vaccine was available, the incidence of the disease dropped to little or nothing even among the people who weren't immunized."

Ainsworth said the benefit to fishermen would be immediate. Whether slated for catch-and-release or fingerling-plantings, more trout will be available for Magic Valley waters and the fishermen's creel.

Negotiations now reaching a crucial stage

NEW YORK (UPI) — Kenneth Moffett, the federal mediator in the dispute between the baseball players and owners, said Tuesday the negotiations will next turn to the crucial issue of player compensation.

Emerging from a meeting in which all three parties — Moffett, Marvin Miller, executive director of the Players Association, and Ray Grebey, negotiator for the owners — agreed that nothing of substance was discussed, Moffett predicted that the negotiations could become more interesting.

"It's a one issue negotiation, let's face it," Moffett said. "We're going to address compensation tomorrow. We may have some excitement."

The issue of compensation represents the most serious difference between the parties in trying to reach a new agreement. The owners are asking more compensation than is presently provided for a team that loses a free agent while players want to restrict any such compensation.

The players have said that they will strike beginning May 23 if a new agreement can not be reached. When asked if he believed there would be a strike, Moffett refused to make a prediction.

"I think we're a long way from expiration," he said, referring to the period that still remains for negotiation. But Miller said he believes that little serious discussion will take place until the last one or two weeks before the deadline which the players set.

"I have yet to see a serious desire for an agreement on their part," Miller said, referring to the owners. "They see no reason why they can't continue to negotiate without having an agreement."

"We'll do this forever" is what the owners seem to be saying," Grebey agreed that the owners hope to continue the season even without a new agreement.

"We feel we can continue to play baseball and continue to negotiate while that happens," he said.

Grebe conceded that the most important issue has yet to be discussed — at length — but insisted that the matters under discussion have an importance to any new agreement.

"Everything is important in the total package," he said. "And everything includes a lot of nuts and bolts."

Nothing's changed much with free agent draft

The Baltimore Evening Sun BALTIMORE — It's been five years since arbitrator Peter Seitz set Catfish Hunter free from Oakland when Charlie Finley fudged on his contract. The start of free agency was upon baseball.

It wasn't finalized until nearly a year later when Andy Messersmith and Dave McNally played out the options on their contracts and the courts said they, too, were free.

Before this happened, however, Finley, sensing what was going to happen, saw an out. He attempted to sell a few of the high-priced stars of his three-time World Champion A's and was rebuffed by Commissioner Bowie Kuhn.

Finley had the Boston Red Sox lined up to take Joe Rudi and Hollie Fingers for more than $1 million apiece and the bidding war on Vida Blue was up to $1.5 million and climbing. The sale of ballplayers had been going on for years — Joe Cronin being sold for $250,000 when money was worth something — but Kuhn insisted the competitive balance of the game would be destroyed if such shenanigans were allowed to proceed unchecked.

Like most of the commissioner's decrees, his decision did not make a lot of sense. It seemed a spiteful move designed to hurt Finley, which it did, and things haven't been the same since.

The change has not been for the worse, though, and in fact nothing really has changed in the game of baseball at all. Prior to the players' winning their freedom after serving their ball club of origin for six years, the owners forcing certain doom for the game.

The Philadelphia Phillies, for example, are drawing huge crowds and commanding more than $5 million in radio-TV rights and this has allowed them to bankroll a starting lineup that looks like this:

- 1B — Pete Rose, $800,000
- 2B — Manny Trillo, $400,000
- SS — Larry Brown, $400,000
- 3B — Mike Schmidt, $560,000
- LF — Greg Luzinski, $350,000
- CF — Garry Maddox, $425,000
- RF — Bake McBride, $400,000
- C — Bob Boone, $600,000
- P — Steve Carlton, $400,000
- Total — $4,410,000

Owner Ruly Carpenter doesn't complain about the above salaries, signing his young stars to lucrative, long-term contracts, to prevent their being tempted to move once they attained free agency.

What is disturbing in his mind is a new owner, such as John McMullen of Houston, raising the ante so spectacularly. McMullen took Nolan Ryan at $1 million per year.

In his own camp, Carpenter has a terrific center fielder in Maddox and he's willing to take his last contract for $425,000 per to $325,000 when it is up, certainly a nice offer. But Maddox, aware of the fact that to players are making in excess of $700,000 a season, has designs on joining them.

The problem? The owners, of course, and it's just not the new kids on the block.

Gussie Busch, the St. Louis Cardinal owner and a traditional skinflint, was a hardliner when all this started, but he just signed shortstop Garry Templeton to a $1 million pact for six years when he was three years short of free agency.

Skater inks pact with pro group

LITTLETON, Colo. (UPI) — Figure skater Charlie Tickner, bronze medalist at the 1960 Winter Olympics and this year's International Championships in Dortmund, West Germany, Tuesday said he had signed a professional contract with the Ice Capades.

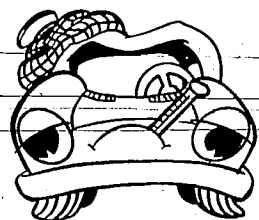

Tickner, 26, made the announcement during a community-wide celebration in his honor. A transplanted Californian, Tickner has trained for seven years at the South Suburban Arena.

Tickner said the one-year contract with the Ice Capades would require him to report for rehearsals July 20 with the Ice Capades West Company in Atlantic City. One provision in the contract will allow his coach and choreographer, Norma Santini, to determine the content of his Ice Capades programs and take part in selection of his music and costume design.

"I see so many skaters go (professionally) who want to be amateur skaters and then kind of let down," he said. "I don't want to do that. You can just see them go downhill so fast, and I'd like to skate for as long as I can."

Tickner, an amateur for 16 years, said he decided to turn pro because there was little left for him to accomplish as an amateur.

No Canadian boycott yet

OTTAWA (UPI) — Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau rejected charges of cowardice Tuesday and said Canada policy will be determined by the number of nations supporting the U.S. call for a boycott of the Moscow Games.

"It doesn't take much courage just to announce that you're going to boycott the Olympics and it wouldn't have much effect either on the presence of the Soviet troops in Afghanistan," Trudeau told the House of Commons.

"It is perhaps a much more difficult policy to insure that this invasion be maintained as large a portion as possible and that is what we're working on."

Trudeau said Canadian policy will be based on the Jan. 14 vote in the United Nations, which said that "evidence was not sufficient to justify the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan."

Conservative MP Arnold Malone had demanded to know when Canada would announce a boycott, saying it was one-time for Canada that "silence may not be golden — it may be just plain yellow."

External Affairs Minister Mark MacGulgan told reporters outside the House that Canada would not be making a decision on the Moscow Games until after he returns from Zimbabwe-Theresa.

MacGulgan, who will be there to attend the inauguration of a black majority government, said he plans to meet with the foreign ministers of Britain and other nations to decide on a potential boycott.

"We hope to make our decision soon," he told reporters. "Obviously, it won't be until I return from Zimbabwe. Part of the work will be the facts that I will ascertain there."

The Canadian Olympic Association has said it expects a final decision from the government before the annual COA meeting in Montreal on April 25. Earlier, COA President Dick Pound said he doubted the Canadian government would be able to withstand American pressure for support for its proposed boycott.

Los Angeles may lose out

MOSCOW, April 15. (UPI) — Vitaly Smirnov, vice president of the Moscow Olympic Organizing Committee, said Tuesday one consequence of the U.S. Olympic boycott might be that the 1984 Games could be taken away from Los Angeles.

Smirnov, who is a member of the International Olympic Committee's executive board, told a news conference that only American athletes and the American public will suffer from President Jimmy Carter's "unprecedented interference" in Olympic affairs.

Asked what the broader consequences of the American action might be, Smirnov quoted IOC President Lord Killanin as saying after the 1976 Olympics in Montreal, which were boycotted by most African countries, that National Olympic Committees which give in to outside pressure would be subject to sanctions, possibly including expulsion from the IOC.

"Following this, it is possible that the 1984 Olympics will not take place in Los Angeles," Smirnov said.

"This could be one possible consequence of this crude and even unprecedented interference in the Olympic movement."

Asked if the Moscow organizers would sponsor individual athletes from boycotting countries, who wanted to take part in the Games in defiance of their National Olympic Committees, Smirnov recoiled that under the present Olympic Charter athletes can only be entered for the Games by their NOCs.

"This question cannot be decided by the executive committee, but only by a full session of the IOC because a change in the Charter would be needed," Smirnov said.

"Another rule says that the Olympics must be held under the rules which apply on the day the Games are awarded to a particular city."

"This would mean two rule changes would be needed."

A Soviet source confirmed that Smirnov's indirect reply to the question indicated that the Soviets would approach with caution any attempt to change the rules at this late stage and especially any change which might remove all athletes including their own — from NOC jurisdiction.

Smirnov added that the Soviet committee would look "with sympathy" at athletes trying to attend the Games in an individual capacity, "but we believe each case should be studied independently."

Asked if any compensation would be forthcoming from the Organizing Committee for companies such as the NBC-TV network which have invested in the Games, Smirnov said, "By not covering the games, NBC is only depriving the American public of the chance to watch the Olympics."

Hand hog defeats self

hand hog: His right bid was two clubs, but he took partner's command and bid two notrump. North raised to three and West opened the chief of spades. South thought a while and finally played—low—from dummy. East played the 10 and South took his king. He had to offer clubs and when West took his ace he was able to lead a spade to give East four spade tricks. "I was sure East held the ace of clubs for his vulnerable overcall," complained South. "If I had played West for that card I would have wrapped up games and rubber. "Tough luck, partner," said winner North and the next hand was dealt. "I wanted to kill the blank," North told us later. "But I still had to finish the rubber with him." As you—readers—can see, if South had bid two clubs North would have bid two notrump and played the notrump game. With North as declarer the chief of spades would cause no problem. North would make of lot tricks—maybe as many as 11, but South had bid the notrump first. (NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.)

Jerome County elected officials granted increase in pay

By RON ZELLAR
Times-News writer
JEROME — Jerome County Commissioners gave the county's elected officials an 8.7 percent pay hike Monday.

The commission also agreed to consider an agreement whereby the Bureau of Land Management would reimburse the county for time sheriff's officers spend patrolling BLM desert lands.

Commission Chairman Mel Grindstaff proposed the salary figure that was ultimately selected by the three-member commission.

The Jerome County assessor, treasurer and county clerk will receive $15,000 a year, up from $13,800 at present. The sheriff, who receives $1,200 for duties supervising the building, will get $16,200.

Grindstaff offered the raises as a compromise. Commissioner Russell

Howell had proposed a $1,300 yearly increase, or just over 9 percent, while Commissioner Henry Schutte suggested keeping any increase below 8 percent.

"I'm up for election this year — 8.7 percent doesn't sound as bad as 9 percent," Schutte said, adding that Gov. John Evans has attempted to hold state raises to about 8 percent.

The Idaho Legislature recently raised commissioners' salaries in the state by 9.2 percent, from $5,500 a year to $6,000 a year. County prosecutors' salaries also are set by the Legislature.

In other business, Jack Durham, Bennett Hills area BLM manager, urged the commissioner to approve a contract to patrol BLM property to reduce dumping and other resource damage.

In past years, Jerome County sheriff's officers received reimbursement for patrolling trouble spots in their off-duty hours. However, Sheriff Eliza Hall said his men were reluctant to continue the practice using their own vehicles due to rising fuel prices.

Hall advised the commissioners against making any commitments to spend a fixed amount of time patrolling BLM trouble spots, saying his officers are spread thin when accidents or staff illnesses occur.

Durham said the agreement is worded loosely enough to allow for variations in the amount of time spent patrolling the desert. And he said the contract enables counties to recover some of the costs they incur covering reparable damage to the land.

The BLM contract reimburses counties at the rate of $7.50 an hour for time logged on the agency's land. The maximum reimbursement for Jerome County would be $1,350.

Music teacher personification of patience

Teacher Deloris Robinson goes over keyboard exercise with pupil Michael Gibson, 9, during lesson

GOODING — Sunlight filtered through the room's single window, throwing shadows across sheet music propped on an old piano.

Michael, 9, can't see.

He halts at an unfamiliar passage, and music teacher Deloris Robinson says firmly, "A, Michael, that's the third finger."

Schutte said, adding that Gov. John Evans has attempted to hold state raises to about 8 percent.

The Idaho Legislature recently raised commissioners' salaries in the state by 9.2 percent, from $5,500 a year to $6,000 a year. County prosecutors' salaries also are set by the Legislature.

Boards ponder voting

NORTH VALLEY — Trustee elections for nine northside school districts were discussed during regular board meetings Monday night.

One of the two incumbents in at least two of the districts will not seek re-election, while other trustees are circulating petitions for candidacy or have not announced their intentions.

Candidates from all districts must submit petitions at district offices no later than May 2. All positions to be elected in the May 20 election are for three-year terms.

In the Jerome School District, Jack Thompson of the Sugarfoot area will not seek re-election to the Zone 5 position. Alvin Chojnacki, the incumbent in Zone 1, said Tuesday he will seek another term.

District incumbents Jim Moresby and Wallace Vingham have not announced their intentions. Superintendent Wayne Perron said Tuesday.

Incumbents Maxine Sturton and Chuck Erwin both indicated petitions to retain their posts in the Richfield School District, according to Superintendent A. Jay Jones.

Valley School District board chairman Roy Coulson said Monday he will seek another term.

In Blaine County, Zone 3 trustee Frank Roland of Halley has announced he will seek another term, while Zone 1 trustee Ross Peck of Carey said recently he is undecided.

In Camas County, District board member Lowell Ruby of Hill City has announced he will not seek another term from district Zone 1.

Two school board positions, representing Zones 2 and 3, will be up for election in the Hagerman School District.

Louis Koopman serves Zone 2, comprising the area northeast of Hagerman. Kitty Jones represents Zone 3, which includes most of Hagerman's city limits. Neither Koopman or Jones have announced for re-election to the three-year terms.

In the Shoshone School District, board members Ivan Hopkins and Bernie Webb both face possible re-election campaigns next month. Both Hopkins and Webb refused to commit themselves to whether they will seek re-election.

Hopkins serves Zone 2 comprising the southwest section of the district while Webb serves the Zone 3, an area between the Big and Little Wood rivers.

Wendell School District also has two open seats and no candidates.

No official re-election announcement has come from either board member, Clayton Pope or Ken Kober. Pope serves Zone 5, the southeast portion of the district, and Kober represents Zone 1, the northeast part of the Wendell district.

Both openings are for three-year terms.

SHOSHONE — The Shoshone School Board Monday issued contracts for storm window installation and an energy audit, plus set a date for the school budget public hearing.

J.B. McMillan was awarded a $2,240 contract to install 28 aluminum-framed windows in Lincoln Elementary School, announced district superintendent Ken Crothers.

Crothers said the present steel-framed windows leak rain water and offer no thermal insulation. Arcatillian will install the pre-purchased windows this summer.

In another energy conservation project, the board approved a contract with Ener-con Inc. of Pocatello for an energy audit of all district buildings. The $9,000 contract also includes technical assistance in filing grant applications for Department of Energy funding for school district retro-fitting.

"We're hopeful that a lot of this contract cost will be offset by DOE matching funds," Crothers said. "We should receive at least 50 percent in matching funds, but I don't know if that will happen."

June 9 was selected for a school budget hearing on next year's proposal. Shoshone School Board members decided during their regular meeting Monday.

Letters of intent were sent out Tuesday, according to Crothers, and negotiations with the Shoshone Education Association will continue as soon as a drafted budget is finished.

"We haven't gotten to the raise part yet, because the State Department of Education has given us two figures of what we might expect in funding," Crothers said. "We have to get that cleared up first before a budget and salaries can be proposed."

Coach offered contract

FAIRFIELD — The Camas County School Board Monday offered a one-year contract to a new coach for the high school football and basketball teams.

Selected for the post was Edward Blankenship, who will also teach seventh grade in the district.

The board also looked at some preliminary figures for a 1980-81 budget. Superintendent Harold Stroud said, but decided to postpone any decisions until state tax revenues are more clearly understood.

Camas County voters approved a 4 mill override levy last year in the district.

Snow machine request delayed year

SUN VALLEY — Sun Valley Company has agreed to postpone for one year the request to place snow-making equipment on Dollar Mountain.

Mayor Dick Heckmann said the resort company was unable to arrange a noise test this month to enable the request to go to the Sun Valley City Council.

Advice sought on computer

GOODING — Advice from the State Tax Commission is being sought by Gooding County Commissioners on whether or not to buy a county computer system.

The commissioners met with Tax Commission representative Rodette Fry Monday to coordinate a study of the county's computer needs.

"We've been looking at being inundated by state pitches from IBM and Burroughs representatives on what we need in a computer system," explained Gooding County Commissioner Fredrick Braliford. "We need a study to determine if we need a system at all, and if so, how big of a system. The Tax Commission will do that as a service to the counties."

Braliford said the need study should be finished by the commissioners' regular May meeting.

"The study should tell us if we need it and how big the system would have to be, including the number of printers and attachments needed," Braliford said. "It will also indicate if (the Gooding County Memorial Hospital) needs to be linked into the computer too."

Braliford claimed the county's business and tax information could probably be done by hand as in the past if it were not for time limitations placed by the State Legislature and the 1 percent law.

"I have mixed feelings about the whole thing," he said. "If the system were probably wouldn't need this system; but with this 1 percent thing and a possible two-week deadline to get every parcel of land in the county reassessed, we're kind of getting pushed into it."

In other action, Gooding County Commissioners granted an 8 percent raise to four elected county officials.

The county's assessor, treasurer, sheriff and clerk all will receive $100 per month raises for fiscal year 1980-81. All of these officers will be paid $16,200 next year.

The Commissioners also asked Idaho Association of Counties representative Bob Rivett to conduct an audit of county insurance coverage. It is hoped that a package can be developed to cover all insurance needs while saving county funds.

According to Braliford, bids for the county insurance contract will be opened sometime in early June.

Bid evaluation sought

HAILEY — Blaine County Commissioners voted Monday to ask the State Tax Commission to evaluate four bids for a new county computer.

The commissioners received four bids from area computer representatives, but decided they needed outside expertise in order to weigh the advantages and costs of each bid, said county clerk Marjorie.

International Business Machines, Burroughs, Aris Information Systems and Idaho Computer Service of Twin Falls presented bids on a system which will be used to speed up county functions such as car registrations and property tax bills.

At least three of the firms have made similar proposals to officials in Jerome and Gooding counties.

Blaine County is the first government entity in the Magic Valley to convert its bookkeeping functions to computers. Both Cassia and Twin Falls counties purchased equipment from IBM.

Blaine County is moving now on the market to conventional forms and language that can be easily learned by employees in all departments, said Richard Langford, sales representative for IBM.

Jerome County commissioners said Monday they would give the matter more thought before joining the trend toward computerization.

Speedy Tigers face tough Boise Relays

By MIKE PRATER
Times-News sports writer
JEROME — Fresh from impressive victories at its own J-Club Invitational last week, the Jerome track team will run up against some tough competition Saturday at the Boise Relays.

The Tigers last week blitzed the opposition in both the boys and girls divisions. The girls scored 104 points to second place Blackfoot's 27 and the boys had 107 to Bob's 19. This Saturday's meet at Boise State University, has been known to attract high schools of all sizes from Oregon and Idaho. It'll be a tough assignment for the Tigers.

The thought of running up against powerhouses such as Doran and Capital, and a state contender Bishop Kelly, doesn't bother Jerome coaches one bit — they like it.

"First of all it gives our kids a chance to get a look and a feel of the track used for the state championship," said girls' Coach Skip Struww. "Then we also can get a good look at state competition and see where we stand. Even though it is set up for fun, the meet is a very important one for us."

The meet is a non-scoring meet, used to get tracksters acquainted with opposing competition.

It has a different look, with many of the usual Friday afternoon events not on the agenda.

The 200 meters for boys and girls has been scratched, and the 3200 meters for the boys has been left out for the meet.

To replace the boys' 3200 meters, a collegiate-style sleepchase with hurdles and pools of water has been added for an extra attraction.

Things are starting to look better for Andrew and his crew as they prepare for Saturday.

State sprinter Karen Sabotka and distance runner Marge Marshall are making strong comebacks after suffering injuries.

Sabotka made her first 1980 appearance at the J-Club Invitational Friday afternoon.

"Karen looked real sharp for a first time effort," said an optimistic Andrew. "She will be in fine shape to win the 100 and 200 meters at state in May, and Marge is looking solid again, even though we are bringing her back in with caution. She is still quite tender."

Kristi Peterson is making a slow comeback after living six months in a body cast after a vertebrae operation and is expected to perform with some consistency in the 40, according to Andrew.

Over on the boys' side, Tim Dunne's group is fresh off a victory at the J-Club, and feels his group is coming on with a solid effort.

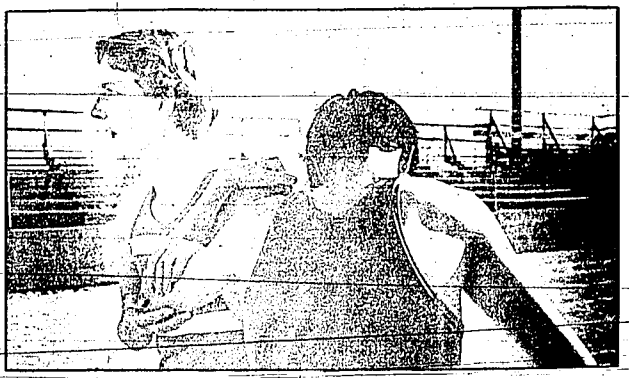

"We'll be in good shape this Saturday, and the kids are real excited about going," he said. "We use this meet as an indicator against some state competition to see what May will bring."

Right now, Dunne feels May will be a good month for his group if they can stay healthy.

"I'm really pleased with some times and distances of our group," he said Monday. "Friday we had some season bests, and the relay teams look pretty solid. Everything is starting to come down time-wise."

"If we can remain healthy, we'll do okay in trying to win state. If we stay in good shape, I think we can do it. The seniors are excited and it's carrying over to the other guys, so I think we'll be okay when we come face to face with the ultimate challenge."

Hulbert's your perfect 'ski bum'

By MIKE PRATER
Times-News sports writer
SUN VALLEY — If somebody were to give an award to the most perfect "ski bum," George Hulbert of Sun Valley would win it hands down.

Because "ski bum" is what Hulbert says describes him best.

He holds a night job at Whiskey-Jacks, a local restaurant and tavern, and this enables him to hit the slopes seven days a week during the entire ski season.

He is the proud owner of a Sun Valley season ski pass and has skipped college to play on the slopes in hopes that someday he will be good enough to become a full-time ski instructor.

In the winter time, when there is no snow on the ground to ski on, he keeps his body in condition for the next season by playing soccer to keep his legs loose, by bicycling and mountain climbing, and by chopping a lot of wood.

And Hulbert received the most perfect skiing award over the weekend, not for being a perfect ski bum, but by being the fastest competitor in his age division at the 12th Annual National Standards Ski Race (NASTAR) finals in Vail, Colo., last Saturday.

"It's definitely the biggest thing I've ever done — in my life," said the 27-year-old California native of his first ever skiing award. "I got a gold plated Schlitz beer cup. Ski Magazine talked to me along with other reporters, and I got to ski with some of the best amateurs in the nation on a great course."

Hulbert competed in the men's 19-29 age division, and defeated his "polebouncing buddy" Steve Hydrick, also of Sun Valley, for the top honors in the one-day competition.

Hydrick placed second behind Hulbert.

Competitors qualified at more than 100 NASTAR ski areas last winter to take part in the races over the weekend, which were divided into eight categories by age and sex. There were 22 states represented on the Vail course.

Going into the races Saturday morning, Hulbert felt he had a chance of winning the overall competition, but knew a few people could give him a race.

"There was this one guy up there and he was supposedly one of the top NASTAR skiers in the world, but he really wasn't that good. The only one who gave me competition was Steve," he said with a mouthful of modesty.

"When I won, it was kind of surprising, but not as much as one might think. I have worked eight long years for this, and I deserve it. I went ready to win."

Hulbert's skiing career got off to a slow start, even though he's made up for it in the eight years he's been inolved with the winter sport.

"When I was a kid, we moved to California and there wasn't much skiing down there, and I really wanted to ski. I don't know why, for sure, but I knew that I would love it. So when the game time for college, I skipped it and headed for one of the greatest skiing places in the world — Sun Valley.

"I don't regret that I skipped college one bit. I'm learning a lot more on the mountain, and one day it will all pay off when I become a coach," he said.

That is Hulbert's only goal right now — to become a ski coach, but before he does it, he wants to be good and ready.

"Before I can coach, it's only logical that I become as good a skier as I can. Before I try and teach somebody else how to, I ought not I don't think I'm ready. Saturday proved to be a big jump in that direction, but I still need some time and some practice," said Hulbert who takes on a summer carpentry job to raise money for his winter hobby, that he admits is expensive.

In trying to reach his "ultimate plateau" of becoming a ski coach, Hulbert is perfectly happy with his present ski bum life, and said that anybody who wants to be a ski bum should get out the snow from the slopes. It's his life, and he loves it. It's the greatest possible thing in the world."

Classes in tennis set

Young, but eager

Tiger tennis team seeks first victory

JEROME — The Jerome Recreation District has some good news and some bad news for the Jerome public.

The good news — for tennis enthusiasts especially — is the district is sponsoring tennis lessons for adults and youngsters in April and June.

The youth lessons will be taught by Robin Thome, and will begin in June for beginner and intermediate students.

Scott Jackson will instruct adult lessons in April and June for beginner and intermediate players also.

The bad news is tonight will be the last night for the weight room at Jerome High School to be open for public use.

For further information on either issue, call the Jerome Recreation District during business hours at 324-3388.

JEROME — Jerome tennis Coach Kenneth Wright is playing a game of checkers with his tennis team.

"My main objective right now is to move the players around so I can find the right combination for some state qualifiers," he said Monday night. "We're improving a touch, but there's still a lot of shuffling to do before we actually threaten anybody on the court."

Though the Tigers haven't threatened anybody on the court yet, they don't fall down and play it safe in its first match of the season against Burley. Jerome came close to clutching victory when it split 12 matches with the Babcocks.

In the Tigers' second match, the Gebomni Senators, led by the powerful individual play of Given Reed and Mike Mann, demolished the Tigers 9-1. Burley came back much stronger in their second meeting and handed the young Tigers a 9-3 defeat (Results at end of story).

"We know we're not going to win that many matches," said Wright. "The team is young (all juniors on the girls) and we're just hoping to gain experience and improve for next year."

John Kiser is improving in small steps, according to Wright, and Rich Cobb, as a freshman, is playing well, but other than that, he can't report any outstanding individual on the boys' side.

In the mixed doubles category, in pinpoints Rick Rogers and Dawn Holland as the two bright spots.

"Nobody is actually playing terrible, same not so good ones, but we just don't have the qualities for a winning team," he said. "Our goal this year is to qualify some people for the state meet, but that's going to be tough to do in which conditions and Wood River have some of the top state material. I think we can qualify a doubles team, but anything past that is extra gravy for our side. I just hope we can find the right combination in time for the district tournament."

Care in burning advised

JEROME — Jerome Fire Chief Lynn Bingham appealed to area residents Tuesday to use extra care in burning fences, debris and irrigation ditches.

City and rural fire departments have responded to a half dozen grass fires in the county during the past 10 days, Bingham said, and all of the runaway fires could have been avoided.

Firemen Monday were called to two grass fires, one of which caused minor damage to the insulation under a mobile home owned by Jerome Mobile Homes on the south edge of the city.

Both blazes were quickly extinguished. Bingham said farmers and other residents conducting backyard burning could prevent the flare-ups in a number of ways.

While keeping a water supply on hand may not be practical, he said, many people try to burn too great an area to keep it under close watch.

Persons conducting burning should also be aware that winds and weather conditions change quickly this time of year, Bingham said.

Large losses resulting from runaway burning have been avoided in recent years, he said, but the potential a barn or home will be destroyed is always present.

Fire officials in Gooding and Shoshone said their areas have been lucky so far this spring, but added that they regularly respond to several grass fires a season.

Lincoln pay scales fixed

SHOSHONE — Lincoln County Commissioners set next year's salary for elected county officials and discussed insurance bids Monday.

Four bids have been received by the commissioners for county insurance packages.

These bids are for a variety of coverages including liability, fire, health and automobile insurance, explained County Clerk Joy McClure. Bids have been received from Larson Associates of Boise, Hamilton Insurance of Twin Falls, Hadden Insurance of Shoshone and the Idaho Association of Counties.

"Discussion of the bids went for a long time," and the commissioners took it under advisement," McClure said.

The commissioners set county official's salaries for fiscal year 1980-81.

Both the Lincoln County sheriff and clerk will receive $13,500 for the year. Assessor and treasurer will be paid $13,000, and the Lincoln County coroner will receive $500.

County commissioner and prosecutor salaries are set by the Legislature.

Sign up ends for session

JEROME — Registration concludes this week for a Jerome Art Guild painting workshop April 21-24 with western artist Larry Milligan.

Daytime classes will be from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. and an evening class will run from 7 to 9 p.m. Both sessions will be held in the Jerome American Legion Hall.

Milligan will teach western scenery as he finds it around his Stanley home, and will include a slide presentation in his workshops. His works have been exhibited throughout the West and Northwest.

Persons interested in painting with Milligan should contact art guild president Janet Watson at 324-4115, or call Correll Photo at 324-2486.

On a related note, Watson said a Jerome City Council member will attend the guild's regular meeting this Friday to discuss the group's request for space in the old railroad depot.

The 2 p.m. meeting will be held at the George Davis home, 821 East B Ave. Davis will show slides taken in Mexico after the business meeting.

Annual carnival slated Saturday

JEROME — Concerned Citizens for the Handicapped will sponsor JHS annual Special Educational Carnival 5-9 p.m. Saturday at the junior high school.

The evening's activities include games, booths, white elephants, a drawing for half a beef, and a short-order menu featuring hamburgers, hot dogs and chili.

Proceeds from the carnival will be used to send area youngsters to the Special Olympics and to help fund summer classes for the handicapped.

Persons who would like to help or desire more information may call 324-5906, 324-8953 or 324-4070.

Candidates on hand

JEROME — The Jerome County Farm Bureau will host a meet-the-candidates night Friday at 7:30 p.m. in Wood Cafe.

A no-host dessert will be available. Candidates for U.S. and state legislative races have been invited to attend and present their views on the issues.

Natural controls used to battle super-skeeters

SALT LAKE CITY—(UPI)—A Michigan State University entomologist says natural predators and genetic controls — rather than chemical pesticides — will soon be the front-line weapons in the worldwide battle to control mosquitoes.

Dr. John Hannah, distinguished professor emeritus at MSU, said "greater stress" is being placed on removing mosquito breeding areas and on the use of genetic controls and such predators as mosquito-fish and microorganisms.

Hannah also said medical scientists are working to find drugs or vaccines that can prevent contraction of mosquito-carried diseases. But, until new means are perfected, chemical poisons must still fill the gap.

"Insecticides have passed their heyday, largely due to resistance problems," Hannah said in his keynote speech to the American Mosquito Control Association's annual five-day conference.

And he said insecticide resistance can be expected to continue, as in the case of DDT and new-generation compounds such as Malathion.

"We must exploit the full variety of suitable compounds for as long as we can," Hannah said, noting that periodic tests can determine any development of mosquito resistance to chemical insecticides.

He said the chemical insecticides had an "unprecedented" success in controlling many life-threatening diseases worldwide since the end of World War II.

"DDT proved its ability to control the insects that transmit the most formidable parasitic diseases of man, namely malaria. It also controlled body lice that transmit typhus and fleas that carried plague," he said.

At the end of the war, Hannah said 300 million new cases of malaria were being reported annually; plus 250 million cases of filariasis, a worm-like parasite that invades the blood and lymphatic systems; and 50 million cases of onchocerciasis, a fly-carried disease that can cause blindness.

"By 1968 malaria was eradicated from all of Europe except in Thrace, from the United States, all of the West Indies except Haiti, Japan, Taiwan, Australia, Israel and Lebanon."

And by 1973 he said the estimated number of world malaria cases, excluding Africa south of the Sahara, was down to 3.4 million. "If we add tropical Africa, however, the global figure becomes nearly 100 million new cases. But that compares with 300 million at the end of World War II."

He also said the number of malaria deaths dropped from 2.5 million per year at the end of the war to less than 1 million in 1968. "The saving each year of more than 1 million lives, mainly those of children in Asia and Latin America, is no small humanitarian achievement to be credited to insecticides."

But he said by 1968 the development of DDT-resistance had been detected in at least 15 sub-species of mosquitoes, and 36 sub-species had acquired dieltrin resistance.

"By 1968 the resistance problem in Central America was even more severe, necessitating a switch to Baygon. But the mosquitoes in El Salvador and Nicaragua quickly developed resistance to Baygon by 1971, and only the chemicals Baytex and Landrin remain unaffected by this multi-resistance."

Hannah said there are other chemical insecticides that can be used as mosquitoes develop resistance to the latest poisons, but scientists are also turning to other means of controlling the pests.

Chemical makers sued by ex-GIs

SEATTLE (UPI)—Four former Washington State servicemen, claiming they were harmed by the defoliant Agent Orange used during the Vietnam War, filed suit in U.S. District Court Monday against five chemical companies.

Plaintiffs in the Seattle suit, all 32 years old, are Army veterans Patrick McGowan of Seattle; David A. Evick of Sumner and Elvin Lee Meeks of Ellensburg, and former Marine John L. Patrick of Tacoma.

Evick's son Timothy, 2, is included as a plaintiff because he was born with birth defects.
