

Carter gets tough with Iran

New sanctions ordered, military steps next

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter Thursday banned travel and money transfers to Iran, barred imports of Iranian products and said if such steps do not free the hostages he would take a more drastic sort of military action.

Carter did not say when he might make a military move. But when asked whether the United States would be satisfied if Iran's Revolutionary Council considers the hostage question in July, he replied: "I would think that would be an excessive time for us to wait."

The statement was the strongest the president himself has made publicly on possible military action against

Iran, though administration officials have said repeatedly that a blockade and other steps are being considered.

"If a constructive Iranian response is not forthcoming soon, the United States will proceed with other measures," he said, including a ban on the little food and medicine now exported to Tehran and cutting off Iran's access to international communications facilities.

"If this additional set of sanctions that I have described to you today and the concerted actions of our allies is not successful," Carter said, "then the only next step available that I can see would be some sort of military action which is the prerogative and the right of the United States under these circumstances."

Carter also said he will ask Congress for power to use the $3 billion in Iranian assets America has in its banks to compensate families of the 50 American hostages and pay other claims against Tehran.

For now, Carter told a televised news conference, he is prohibiting all financial transfers from anyone in the United States to anyone in Iran — except for news organizations.

In addition, he said, all imports from Iran will be barred, and American travel to Iran — again except for journalists — will be forbidden.

The president called on the media

"to minimize as severely as possible their presence and activities in Iran."

He said military equipment Iran had ordered will be offered for sale to other buyers.

Administration officials said earlier Carter probably would ban shipments of food and medicine to Iran but after the news conference, they said Secretary of State Cyrus Vance had talked him out of it — arguing such a cutoff would be better as a potential threat.

In February, the latest figures available, the United States shipped no food and only $200,000 worth of military equipment to Iran.

As for the new ban on imports, Americans imported $36.2 million worth of goods from Iran in February, most of it oil shipped before Carter announced cutoff.

Other big imports — all of which will be eliminated under the latest order — include caviar, lamb and goat skins, dried apricots and dates, carpets, turquoise, coins, brassware, antiques and paintings.

Carter said the decision on whether to take military action against Iran would depend on the effectiveness of the current sanctions, how strongly American allies support the sanctions and how Iran reacts to the sanctions.

"I do not feel it appropriate for me to set a specific time schedule for further actions that may include military actions," Carter said.

But he said he has been in close touch with allies and they understand his thinking on the matter. Many of them are scheduled to meet next week to decide what steps they should take to back Carter and he said, "their decisions next week will be colored" by the potential military moves.

If the United States blockades the Persian Gulf or mines Iran's harbors so oil cannot be exported and goods cannot be imported, all the nations that still trade with Tehran would be affected.

The joy of competition

Joy, love and the pride of participation were all in evidence Thursday at Robert Stuart Junior High, as Richard Seveva, left, Brad Mason, center, and Marcus Henkelman congratulated each other after the 10th annual Magic Valley Regional Special Olympics were held. About 150 mentally retarded and physically handicapped athletes from Jerome, Wendell, Gooding, Buhl, Rupert, Burley, Halley and Twin Falls school districts participated in a variety of track and field events. And the afternoon awards ceremony took nearly as long as the morning's competition, because each participant received a ribbon. See story, B1.

$20 million deficit seen by next year

By DAVID MORRISSEY
Times-News writer

BOISE — Idaho may be facing a $20 million deficit within a year.

That gloomy prediction came Thursday from the president of the Assisted-Puppers of Idaho, a private organization which studies government taxation and spending practices.

The potential funding shortage can be traced to actions by both the state and federal governments, Russ Westerberg told local members of the Idaho Association of Commerce and Industry (IACI), a politically active group of Gem State businessmen.

Recent attempts to balance the federal budget have threatened revenue sharing dollars now supplied to Idaho, Westerberg said. If President Carter's budget reduction plans are approved, Idaho could lose $13.2 million in federal funds by fiscal year 1982.

This year's Legislature budgeted for fiscal year 1981. Next year's Legislature budgets for fiscal year 1982.

Complicating that possible loss of federal funds, Westerberg said, was action by the recently-adjoined Legislature to spend unanticipated surplus tax dollars on ongoing state projects. That action left the Legislature with only limited funds to offset possible federal cutbacks, should they occur, Westerberg said.

Those expenditures have also committed Idaho to a level of spending which may be impossible to maintain next year, he added.

Elimination of the surplus, tied to likely federal cutbacks, could mean next year's Legislature will be faced with a $20 million deficit between funds available and funds needed to continue state government programs at their present level, Westerberg said.

The choice legislators would face in such a situation "is either dramatically slashing state programs or dramatically increasing taxes."

An improvement in the Idaho economy might provide sufficient new tax dollars to offset the anticipated loss, Westerberg said. But recent business and industrial plant closures in the state suggest that is unlikely, he added.

With 30 of 35 precincts in Carter narrowly defeats Kennedy

By DAVID MORRISSEY
Times-News writer

BOISE — In a tight race, President Jimmy Carter was defeating Sen. Edward Kennedy in Idaho's Democratic caucus-balling-Thursday night.

With 30 of Idaho's 35 caucus reporting, Carter had captured 157 of 380 total delegates to the state Democratic Convention.

Kennedy, according to the incomplete results, had 101 delegates.

Seventy-one "uncommitted" delegates were also elected, a number larger than was predicted by either Kennedy or Carter supporters.

In the Magic Valley, according to those districts reporting, Kennedy narrowly edged out Carter.

Thursday's caucuses were the key step in determining whether Carter or Kennedy will receive Idaho's 17 votes at the Democratic National Convention.

Caucuses were held in each of Idaho's 35 state legislative districts. The five reporting districts include two caucuses in north Idaho, two in eastern Idaho and District 22, Elmore and Camas counties. The total delegate count in these five districts is not expected to significantly affect the final result.

The state convention delegates elected Thursday night will elect the 17 national convention delegates at the Idaho State Democratic Convention. That gathering is scheduled for June 12 to 16 in Pocatello.

In effect, this means that since Carter won slightly more than 40 percent of the state convention delegates elected at caucuses Thursday he will receive at least seven of the national-convention delegates. Kennedy, who won about a quarter of the state convention delegates, will apparently receive five of those national-convention delegates.

The remaining delegates are now pledged as "uncommitted," although they could endorse either Carter or Kennedy at any time.

Not only will the "uncommitted" delegates play a key role in determining how Idaho's national convention votes are finally cast, but they are a key indicator of the strength of Jimmy Carter in Idaho.

When the Kennedy delegates and uncommitted delegates are added, 45 percent of the Idaho Democrats participating in Thursday's caucuses are on record as refusing to endorse an incumbent president of their own party.

Because of the caucus system used by Democrats, votes for Carter and Kennedy in the May 27 presidential preference primary will have no direct effect on delegate votes at the Democratic State or National Convention.

Conceivably Kennedy, who lost in the state caucuses Thursday, could win the May 27 primary by a landslide, and still receive only a minority of Idaho's national convention votes.

Only Idaho's Republican Party will select most of its national convention delegates apportioned according to the results of the presidential primary.

Twin Falls' Democrats from Legislative Districts 24 and 25 elected a grand total of 20 delegates to the state convention.

Kennedy won in both districts. Elected from District 24 as Kennedy delegates were Ross Kinsey, Joe Bravo, Jerry Marantonia, Joe Hernandez and Monica Holander, all of Twin Falls.

District 24 Carter delegates chosen were A.K. Reed and Rex Reed of Filer.

Uncommitted delegates are Bill

'Pooh Bear' acquitted

SANTA ANA, Calif. (UPI) — A jury asked to choose between a 9-year-old girl and Winnie the Pooh had little trouble making its decision.

After deliberating for less than half an hour, the panel acquitted the big furry bear of charges he struck Debbie Lopez with his plastic paw while she was touring the Disneyland amusement park in 1974.

The girl's attorney, Joseph Schambaugh, claimed she suffered a bruise that later turned green, and asked jurors to award her $15,000 in settlement of a negligence suit.

Give us your . . . huddled masses Refugee demand grows, U.S. will get 250,000

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Secretary of State Cyrus Vance said Thursday the United States plans to admit nearly a quarter of a million refugees this year, including 3,500 of the Cubans now jamming the Peruvian Embassy in Havana.

Vance also promised "to accommodate all Soviet Jews who seek admission to the United States," even if it means asking Congress to raise the planned quota of 33,000 Soviet citizens.

Vance and Refugee Coordinator Victor Palmieri appeared before the Senate Judiciary Committee to support a $510 million federal program to admit 231,200 refugees from all corners of the globe. About 2,500 political exiles included in the total are already in the United States.

Palmieri said there are 1,200 pending applications by Iranians for political asylum in the United States. "A final determination will be made once conditions in Iran become more settled," he said.

"The rush to the Peruvian Embassy compound in Havana nearly two weeks ago by some 10,000 Cubans seeking asylum is stark evidence of the oppressive conditions under which Cubans live," Vance said.

He said the fact many of them want to resettle in the United States "where there already are about 800,000 Cubans who have fled the Castro regime — 'is vivid proof that the United States remains a strong symbol of freedom and safe haven."

Of the 15,000 Cubans in this year's refugee quota, up to 3,500 places are kept for those now at the Peruvian Embassy, or who have been airlifted to Costa Rica.

Vance also told the committee that once Soviet authorities ease current restrictions on Jewish emigration, the administration is prepared to ask Congress for higher quotas and funds.

He said the department also expects Soviet Armenians and other Soviet Christians, as well as other Eastern Europeans, to seek admission to the United States this year.

In a statement distributed on behalf of absent committee Chairman Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., the senator said there now are over 11 million refugees around the world.

"If massive human tragedies are to be avoided," Kennedy's statement said, "the American people and others in the international community must understand what more we can and must do to help."

A refugee flown from Cuba this week kisses the ground in appreciation for his safety. Many will come to the U.S.

Navy plane hits Samoan hotel

PAGO PAGO, American Samoa (UPI) — A U.S. Navy plane dropping skydivers over Pago Pago harbor clipped a tramway line and smashed into American Samoa's main luxury hotel Tuesday, killing at least seven persons, ablazing the plane but, missing a crowd of 5,000 gathered to watch a skydiving exhibition.

Early reports from the scene said at least one person on the ground was injured at the Rainmaker Hotel, at the base of a hill below the governor's mansion.

The dead included the plane's entire crew.

One 90-room wing of the 200-room hotel, formerly known as the Inter-Continental and Americana, burned for two hours after the midmorning crash witnessed by many of the crowd of thousands that circled the harbor for the annual Flag Day celebration.

The plane, a Navy P3 Orion from Moffett Naval Air Station in Mountain View, Calif., was taking part in Samoa's biggest holiday of the year, commemorating the date in 1900 that the U.S. flag was raised over the tiny island territory 2,300 miles south of Hawaii.

In the seconds before the explosion, one crewman jumped free of the wreckage; his body aflame. Shafter said bystanders rushed to extinguish the flames and he was taken to a hospital by ambulance.

The tramway stretches across Pago Pago Harbor, one of the finest in the Pacific and once a major U.S. Navy base, to the top of the mountain where Samoa's television transmitters are located.

MasterCard announces $12 card fee

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The Bank of America announced Thursday that it will impose a $12 annual fee on the 5.1 million holders of its Visa and MasterCard credit cards, effective June 5.

Although some other credit card systems have required fees, the Bank of America had not previously done so.

Eugene B. Moranville, a vice president, said that since 1958, costs of the service have increased.

"In the last several months the scale of these increases has been unprecedented and unpredictable," he said. "This condition, coupled with the Federal Reserve Board's credit restraint program, has caused us to charge this fee."

Imposing fees was an alternative to boosting the current 18 percent interest rate on credit card accounts, he said.

Moranville said the fee will show on customers' bills, and those who do not wish to pay it should stop using their cards.

MasterCard is the same as MasterCard. The name was changed six weeks ago, although most customers involved still have cards called MasterCard.

Mt. St. Helens rumbles less

VANCOUVER, Wash. (UPI) — Mount St. Helens entered its fourth week of volcanic activity Thursday, erupting with less gusto, U.S. Geological Survey scientists said.

"The decrease in both eruptive and seismic activity noted at Mount St. Helens ... has continued," said a statement from the volcano watch center. "Eruptive activity occurred in the past 24 hours, a midmorning statement said."

"Most of them however, were small steam eruptions lasting only about one minute."

"Tilt" meters at the base of the 9,677-foot cone indicated the mountain was stabilized for the time being, neither bulging from inward pressures nor sinking inward, as it has done in the past, the USGS said.

The volcano, shuddering from rolling earthquakes occurring too fast to count, woke from a 12-year sleep on March 27 with a mighty boom that could be heard for miles. It spewed tons of steam and grit as much as four miles into the sky during the height of its activity.

Scientists watching the volcano are fearful that the inferno beneath the jagged 2,000-foot wide, 1,000-foot deep crater atop Mount St. Helens' peak may bring spewing fire and lava, but they cannot say when, if ever, it will occur.

While they are in agreement that the volcano has settled into a definite "plateau" of activity, none could say exactly what the lull means.

Mideast peace seeds more likely

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter said Thursday his two days of talks with Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin have made the obstacles to an Israeli-Egyptian settlement on Palestinian autonomy "much less formidable."

The main result of the talks was a decision to start a new round of marathon negotiations in about 10 days. The plan, suggested by Begin and approved by Egypt, calls for meetings in Herzliya, Israel followed by an equal number of days meeting in Egypt before May 26, the target date for an agreement.

In an afternoon press conference, Carter said the negotiations are focusing on some "basic" questions — how much authority the Palestinian self-governing council should have, exactly how it will be composed, and how it will be chosen.

He said these questions must be solved before Israel withdraws its military government and turns over some authority to the Palestinians, as agreed in the Camp David accords.

And once that is accomplished, Carter said, other "difficult questions" now under discussion, such as control of Jerusalem in the area and talks of land and water usage, could be negotiated "without delay."

Begin, before leaving for home, told Israeli reporters he gave Carter a new four-point "document" outlining "the essence of Israel's position on the autonomy talks, including 'very important' points on Israel's security needs.

Begin's coalition begins to crack

TEL AVIV, Israel (UPI) — Prime Minister Menachem Begin's troubled government, stung by a call for new leadership from Defense Minister Ezer Weizman, faced another potential blow with the disclosure Thursday that opposition leader Shimon Peres would meet soon with President Carter.

Officials in Washington and Tel Aviv confirmed that Peres would go to the White House April 24, the first such meeting between a U.S. president and an Israeli prime minister. Peres' popularity has slipped consistently in the public opinion polls — only 21 percent favored Begin in the most recent one — and the government has been under attack because of its policy of widespread Jewish settlement of the occupied West Bank.

Weizman and the Labor party oppose the policy. Moshe Dayan resigned as foreign minister in October in part because of it.

Weizman several times has threatened to resign but he never has gone so far as to thwart Begin publicly by calling for the dissolution of the government.

Peres described Weizman as "courageous and patriotic" for placing the welfare of the state before partisan politics at a time of founding negotiations on the future of the Palestinians and triple-digit inflation that has been crippling the economy.

But Weizman's colleagues within Begin's ruling Likud bloc were less than pleased with the statement by the temperamental former air force commander. Weizman is a member of Begin's Herut party, the core of the Likud.

Begin came to power on a plurality vote in May, 1977. The next national election was scheduled for November, 1981. Weizman said he did not think the troubled Begin government could survive until then.

Those same public opinion polls indicate Weizman is the most popular politician in Israel, where politics under a parliamentary democracy often is a free-for-all. They also have shown Labor would win a solid majority of parliament in a new election.

Draft funding OK'd

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House Appropriations Committee Thursday approved $12.3 million to fund President Carter's draft registration plan for young men, giving the controversial measure a new push.

The bill, which now goes to the House floor, had been stalled for more than a month due to congressional budget problems. Backers feared the delay would give opponents time to build their case.

Carter already has power to register men for the draft, but has put off issuing the order until Congress provides money to implement the process.

The vote in the Appropriations Committee was close — 25-23 — and the bill is expected to encounter strong opposition on the House floor.

The Senate is waiting for the House to act on the bill before taking any action.

Carter announced plans for draft registration on Feb. 8, saying it was needed in light of the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan.

He proposed that young women also be registered, but the Appropriations Committee bill provides only enough money to register men.

Under Carter's plan, 19- and 20-year-old men would be required to fill out registration cards at their local post offices and mail them to the Selective Service. Registration would provide a pool of 4 million men, from which military officials could draft the estimated 650,000 needed during a national emergency.

Carter also wants to begin registration of 18-year-olds next year.

Although he has power to register men, Congress would have to approve an actual draft.

Opposition to the full funding plan was led by Rep. Lawrence Coughlin, R-Pa., who said registration could be accomplished quickly enough in an actual emergency.

"We should be able — as we did in World War II — to register millions of men in a single day," he said.

Would pay for 100,000 homes

Mortgage subsidy plan proposed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The administration Thursday announced plans to help the sagging housing industry by making some middle-income buyers eligible for mortgage subsidies and by easing financing burdens of home builders.

One administration source said housing starts — hit hard by inflation and tight money policies — should turn upward by late summer with the help of the new package. But a housing industry source called it only "a limited initiative" that is "not going to do the trick."

The housing bill, which is subject to congressional action, would raise the maximum subsidized mortgage from about $36,000 to $50,000. And families in high cost areas could get a $50,000 mortgage.

It would lift the income-eligibility ceiling on families who qualify for 11 percent mortgages from 95 percent of the median income — or about $16,000 to 150 percent, or about $27,000.

The housing bill liberates $160 million in existing funds to finance the program, the administration sources said. It will have no effect on the fiscal 1980 budget and will cost the government $75 million next fiscal year, although Congress would be expected to offset the cost with other budgetary savings, they said.

The sources estimated the program would finance subsidized mortgages for about 100,000 homes — in addition to the 10,000 units expected to be funded under the existing program.

The available mortgage money should stimulate construction, although some of the $160 million may be used to finance existing unsold homes.

Under the second part of the program, HUD will allow home builders to acquire permanent financing for unsold homes at 14 percent interest — considerably below the temporary financing they now are forced to carry on unsold properties.

Once a prospective buyer secures a mortgage for his new home, a builder can relinquish his temporary financing. But, with mortgage interest rates so high and buyers so few, builders are required to carry their own financing — now running from 18 to 20 percent.

Merrill Butler, president of the National Association of Home Builders, welcomed the administration's action. But, he said, "it is simply a step in the right direction. We have much further to go."

Even with the housing initiatives, Butler predicted housing construction will fall to 965,000 units this year — a post war record low.

Defense boost urged

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A group of Senators and retired generals, decriing what they said was a steady deterioration of America's defense posture, called Thursday for a genuine effort to redress the military balance with the Soviet Union.

The group, discussing the "serious decline in U.S. air power" at a news conference included Republican Sens. Jake Garn and Orrin Hatch of Utah and Jesse Helms of North Carolina, and retired Gen. David Winn, former commander of the North American Defense Command at Cheyenne Mountain, Colo., and Lewis Walt, former assistant commander of the Marine Corps.

They presented a 112-page, alternative defense budget call for a total expenditure of $200.89 billion in fiscal 1981 — $39.12 billion more than President Carter's revised budget — and an increase of $55.9 billion over a five year period through fiscal 1985.

"War and the preparation for war are inherently wasteful," the draft report conceded, "but the alternative is defeat or dependence."

The alternative budget envisaged revival of the B-1 supersonic bomber project; rapid deployment of the MX missile; reinstitution of an anti-ballistic missile defense; development of an orbital laser space weapon; deployment of more Minuteman III missiles; mass production of the new XM-1 tank; formation of four additional aircraft carrier task groups; strengthening U.S. forces in Europe; an increase of five divisions; expanded submarine cruise missile production and replacements for B-52 bombers and fighters produced in the late 1950s and 1960s.

"We have 140 F-106s to defend the whole continent," Winn said. "Most of them are older than the men flying them."

"America's defenses are woefully inadequate to provide for the security of the American people," Helms said. "In no small measure, the recent acceleration of Soviet aggression against our interests worldwide can be attributed to a perceived weakened American defense."

Evidence may support Haller's claim of rape

WESTHAMPTON, N.Y. (UPI) — Evidence found at a Long Island mansion appears to confirm actress-model Melonie Haller's story that she was raped there last weekend while other guests tried to film the assault, sources said Thursday.

Miss Haller told Suffolk County detectives that a camera was used to record her alleged rape in the home of theatrical producer Roy Radn, and that she damaged the camera when she fought off her attackers, the sources said.

Pieces of a camera were found in one of the oceanfront mansion's 72 rooms, along with some blood-stained sheets.

U.S. redeploys fleet ships

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United States will withdraw some U.S. ships from the Mediterranean and Pacific so it can maintain its fleet near vital Persian Gulf shipping lanes, a top Pentagon official said Thursday.

The disclosure by Deputy Defense Secretary Graham, Clayton was aimed, in part, at getting NATO allies accustomed to the idea they will have to do more for the defense of Western Europe in the months ahead.

HUNGER'S FOE

Joan Baez acted up $1,000 Wednesday to renew her campaign on behalf of starving Cambodians who face yet "another full-fledged famine." Said she, at a gathering including San Francisco Mayor Dianne Feinstein, "There is one nation on earth that is facing extinction and that is the nation of Cambodia. We really have to keep on shelling out even though it gets tiresome and boring. It's not tiresome and boring for one child that you may keep alive."

Van met singer's order, customizer declares

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (UPI) — The owner of a firm that customized a $15,000 van for Barry Manilow says it was built the way it was ordered, even though the singer is suing the company.

Nicholas Cua, owner of Nilo Auto and Van Interiors of Syracuse, says "we built it the way they told us to build it. I told them I didn't design it. I just built it the way you wanted it."

Cua said the van, designed to carry five people and musical equipment, "has everything under the sun on it. But it's got too much for a van. You would need a bus."

A trial is scheduled to begin May 5 in state Supreme Court.

TED GIANNOULAS 'free at last'

Chicken case sent 'to nest'

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — The chicken's face will be all over the place — the legal squawking is finally over.

A Superior Court Judge looked down on the original San Diego Chicken Wednesday and said he was going to "put this case to rest once and for all," laying an egg on radio station KGB's plans to roast the popular poultry.

Ted Giannoulas, 25, whose clucks inside the nationally recognized symbol got him lots of bucks, was granted court permission to continue performing in his funny suit in San Diego.

"Ted said let's put this case to rest once and for all," Judge Raul Rosado proclaimed. "I'll say, let's put this case to rest once and for all."

Giannoulas, who wore his chicken costume during the two-day hearing to fight a possible contempt of court citation requested by his former employer, radio station KGB, was happier than a rooster in a hen house.

The chicken immediately jumped from his roost alongside the judge and let out a sigh. He flapped his wings, wriggled his huge orange beak and shook his tail feathers.

Station KGB fired Giannoulas as its mascot last year and put someone else in the suit. Giannoulas, meanwhile, developed a new chicken outfit and won lucrative contracts to perform at nationally televised sporting events.

The radio station had sought to prevent Giannoulas from wearing the costume in San Diego, claiming the outfit was "substantially similar" to its own.

"We'll divorce Ted Giannoulas with the KGB chicken," the judge said. "I rule that the two suits are not substantially similar and dismiss the contempt complaint."

A packed courtroom of well-wishers rushed up to the chicken after the verdict was announced, clapping their hands and cheering.

"Whew! Whew!" Giannoulas said afterward. "Free at last, free at last, God Almighty, free at last. I feel like a free bird. You don't know what a relief it is."

"I think I'll go to the Padres game and pop open a few bottles of champagne."

Those who packed the courtroom and waited outside to congratulate the chicken included many youngsters.

"I feel great. The chicken is No. 1," said Todd Villalob, 10. "I'm really happy. He's the ultimate, he's the greatest."

Prince Charles, left, and Lord Soames, last British governor of Rhodesia, salute as the British flag is lowered for the last time

. . . as Britain gives up control of former colony

SALISBURY, Zimbabwe (UPI) — Britain brought down the Union Jack in Salisbury Thursday night, handing over to black rulers an independent Zimbabwe, the last outpost of a colonial empire which once covered half of Africa. New Marxist Premier Robert Mugabe said he loved the whites and called for "a perfect peace."

The midnight (1 p.m. MST) ceremonies marked the end of the last European colony in black Africa. Absent from the ceremonies was former Premier Ian Smith, who declared white-ruled Rhodesia independent of Britain 14 years ago — an action leading to a seven-year guerrilla bush war that cost 28,000 lives. He was in South Africa on a lecture tour.

In a stiffly ceremonial farewell at government house, home for a succession of colonial governors, Britain's Prince Charles watched a police honor guard lower the British flag to the lawn for the last time as a long black bugler played "The Last Post."

A noisy celebration by 30,000 blacks at Rufaro Stadium climaxed at midnight when the new red, green and black Zimbabwe standard floated to the top of the flagstaff, watched by British and Zimbabwe leaders and delegations from almost 100 countries. Mugabe set the tone for the new nation born in the blood and bitterness of war with a call for "a perfect peace" and national reconciliation devoid of racism.

To the whites, the Marxist guerrilla leader said: "If yesterday I fought you as an enemy, today you have become a friend and ally with the same national interest, loyalty, rights and duties as myself."

"If yesterday you hated me, today you cannot avoid the love that binds you to me and me to you."

Mugabe praised the British for the way they handled the transfer of power to the black majority and credited Lord Soames as the guiding force behind the success.

"I was one of those who originally never trusted him, yet I have now ended up not only implicitly trusting but fondly loving him as well," he said.

Soames was known to have been pleasantly surprised by the tribute and the intensity of Mugabe's appeal for national reconciliation, which went further than the British expected.

"An evil remains an evil whether perpetrated by white against black or by black against white," he said. "Our majority rule could easily turn into inhuman rule if we oppressed, persecuted or harassed those who do not look or think like the majority of us."

Student's body fuels protest

TEHRAN, Iran (UPI) — Thousands of Iranians carried the body of an Iranian who died in the United States to the gates of the U.S. Embassy Thursday to protest what they claimed was America's "savage treatment" of Iranian students.

At the embassy Thursday, several thousand screaming Iranians demonstrated and marched to the compound's front-gates with a coffin containing the body of an Iranian student who died in a Lincoln, Neb., institution where he was undergoing court-ordered psychiatric tests.

The student, 26-year-old Bijan Ash-tiani, had been detained in Nebraska on charges of assaulting his landlord with a knife. Nebraska authorities said he died of heart failure following an "epileptic-like seizure" April 6.

The militants who carried his body through the streets of Tehran charged that he was killed by police. They said "the successive massacres and genocides of the ruling body of the U.S., their crimes and interference add 'also their savage treatment' of Iranian students."

Blockade welcomed by Iraq

Copenhagen (UPI) — Visiting Iraqi Foreign Minister Saoudun Hammadi hinted that Iraq, which appears to be on the brink of war with Iran, would not object to an American naval blockade of Iran's ports in the Persian Gulf.

Iraq, which disputes Iran's claim to three strategic islands in the Gulf, would not concern itself with the American-Iranian crisis even if it leads to a naval blockade, Hammadi said.

Iranian President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr added more fuel to the fire of Iran's conflict with Iraq Thursday when he returned from a tour of the tense border and reiterated the Islamic regime's intention of overthrowing Iraqi President Saddam Hussein.

Bani-Sadr said that not only would Iran topple the Iraqi regime, but would help "liberate other areas of the world from domination" when it becomes militarily strong.

Firing squads executed four persons accused of blowing up oil pipelines near the Iraq border and of acting as agents of "the Baathist puppet government of Iraq and its master, criminal America," Tehran Radio announced.

No ransom so town shelled

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Israeli-backed Christian militias Thursday shelled the village of At Tiri in the U.N.-controlled zone of south Lebanon.

Turkish ambassador wounded

ROME (UPI) — Armenian terrorists waiting in ambush Thursday shot and wounded the Turkish ambassador to the Vatican and his bodyguard. Ambassador Yecel Tuercel, 63, hit in the shoulder and chest, was reported in satisfactory condition at the city's Policlinico hospital. The bodyguard, Gungven Tahsin, 32, was shot in the face and listed in serious condition.

It was the ninth attack by the Armenian group in the capital this year and came as leftist bombs demolished a suburban Communist Party office, damaged a state police building and wounded a passerby and a policeman near a leftist magazine office.

Armenian groups have carried out eight previous attacks in the city this year, including the bombing of a Turkish Airlines office March 10 in which two people were killed and a dozen others wounded.

Three years ago Tuercel's predecessor as Turkish ambassador to the Vatican, Taha Curim, was killed by Armenian gunmen.

Armenian urban guerrillas have been striking Turkish targets throughout Europe, claiming the right to an independent homeland in what is now Turkey following the massacre of an estimated 2 million Armenians by the Ottoman sultans who ruled Turkey until 1915.

Iranian official shot in Beirut

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Iran's charge d'affaires in Lebanon was shot and wounded by pro-Iraqi Palestinian gunmen in front of the Iranian Embassy in Beirut Thursday.

Officials said the diplomat was in good condition but his bodyguard was seriously wounded in the incident.

The shooting came amid a third day of battles between pro-Iraqi Palestinian guerrillas and Muslim Shiite irregulars in Beirut's southern suburbs.

The fighting erupted as an outgrowth of the tension between Iraq and Iran and accusations by Iran's powerful Shiite clergy that a Shiite theologian in Iraq was arrested and killed by the Baghdad regime.

In Beirut, police sources said a cease-fire between pro-Iraqi gunmen and the Shites, reached late Wednesday in the southern suburbs of Shiyah and Bourj Al barajneh, was "violated several times today (Thursday)."

Beirut's state-run radio said renegade Maj. Saad Haddad's militia shelled the village of At Tiri, five miles north of the Israeli border, where a U.N. Irish contingent is based, after an ultimatum Haddad issued expired.

The renegade Lebanese army major threatened to shell At Tiri if the villagers did not deliver to him "40,000 Lebanese pounds ($13,000) in cash or the bodies of two Irish soldiers."

A U.N. spokesman in Beirut said the militia was demanding the cash or the bodies "in compensation for one of their comrades, killed in At-Tiri during a clash with the Irish soldiers of the U.N. peace-keeping force in Lebanon Saturday."

Beirut radio reported no casualties but said three buildings were damaged in the shelling.

What's what

'No-name cheese' goes into sandwiches today

Eighty percent of all cheese now goes into sandwiches. That's a statistical fact. Did you ever live on a farm? In the mid-1930s was too expensive. Cheese wasn't. Hardly anything tasted better than a dish of macaroni and that rubbery stringy no-name cheese. It found its way into sandwiches, too, then. But not 80 percent of it. Call it rat cheese. Consider yourself a Seasoned Citizen. If you can come up with four meatless main dishes featuring that cheese.

Say the trunk of the sequoia tree is about 30 feet in diameter. What a root system supports it! If all those root strands were stretched out end to end in one long line, it would reach almost around the world. Or so a tree authority contends.

The farmer knows he can keep his pond water clear by putting a bale of hay in it.

MUSIC

Musical comes and goes. It was in 1932 that Dr. Forde McLoughlin of Toronto introduced his musical composition "Influenza, a Tone Poem." You don't hear it much anymore. But then it was not as large a work as that of Dr. Herman M. Paris of Philadelphia. His 10 movement suite called "The Hospital" offered a melodic interpretation of an appendectomy.

You've read repeatedly that President Calvin Coolidge was not really downcast in complexion. To the lengthy list of anecdotes about this notorious characteristic of his, please add another: A young lady reporter quite conscious of her charm said to him, "Mr. President, I bet my editor I could make you speak more than two words." Coolidge said, "You lose."

SPORTS

Sports are classified either as "spectator" or "participant" by the statisticians who count heads. And they list the top spectator sports in this country, in descending order: as horse racing, auto racing and major league baseball. THE TOP PARTICIPANT SPORTS, THEY SAY, ARE SWIMMING, CYCLING AND FISHING.

Layoffs, shutdowns labeled signs of growing recession

By United Press International
Layoffs and temporary plant closings affecting nearly 30,000 workers are evidence a recession is accelerating, a prominent economist says.

"I think the decline is accelerating and becoming more widespread," said Gordon B. Pyle, economist for Irving Trust Co. of New York. "We're now seeing layoffs occurring in more industries or at least they aren't showing the (employment) increases we've seen before."

Pyle, who believes a recession started in March, said he expects the jobless rate to climb to about 7.7 percent this year, an increase about half as steep as that during the 1974-75 recession.

Signal Cos. said Wednesday it will close three major Mack Truck plants with 16,000 workers for two weeks. General Motors Corp. placed 12,000 hourly employees on indefinite layoff. The No. 1 automaker already had furloughed 80,000 workers.

Smaller work-force reductions also were disclosed by several other companies. None of the Wednesday cutbacks was as drastic as Ford Motor Co.'s announcement Tuesday that it will close three plants permanently and drop 15,000 hourly and salaried workers.

Unemployment climbed to 6.2 percent in March from 6 percent in February. Until recently much of this year's jobless increase has been confined to the construction and auto industries and related areas such as tire making.

Now, some economists see signs the unemployment wave is seeping into other sectors as the economy dips into recession.

If there is a bright side to layoffs in economists' thinking, it is that they show companies continue to hold a tight rein against buildups in their inventories. That could avoid the enormous buildup of goods with no buyers that worsened the 1974-75 recession, the severest for the United States since the 1930s.

Signal Cos. cited inventory adjustments for the two-week shutdown of Mack Truck plants at Allentown, Pa.; Hagerstown, Md., and Hayward, Calif. The closing dates are the weeks of April 21 and May 23.

GM said it will eliminate work shifts later this month and next at plants in Detroit, Leeds, Mo.; Janesville, Wis., and Norwood, Ohio.

In addition, assembly line speeds will be reduced at plants in Lansing, Mich.; Linden, N.J., and Lordstown, Ohio.

GM said the actions were being taken "to further balance production with current market conditions." With domestic car sales this year lagging 15.2 percent behind the same period last year, indefinite layoffs of blue-collar workers in the battered U.S. auto industry now stand at more than 163,000.

Deere & Co. said it will lay off about 300 employees during the next 30 days, with the number divided equally between its Plow and Planter Works in Moline, Ill., and its Horizon, Wis., factory for lawn and garden equipment, snow throwers and snowmobiles.

Another 40 workers will be laid off

Friday at the John Deere foundry in East Moline and the company said it may announce additional cutbacks in May and June.

In a strike-related layoff, United Technologies' Sikorsky Aircraft division in Stamford, Conn., said 250 recently hired workers will be let go.

Nissan plans U.S. plant for pickups

WASHINGTON (UPI) — At a time when domestic automakers are closing plants and laying off thousands of workers, Japan's Nissan-Motor-Co. announced Thursday it will build a $300 million U.S. assembly plant where 10,000 pickup trucks will be produced annually.

The No. 2 Japanese automaker, producer of Datsun cars and trucks, said 2,000 workers will be

Home building skids

By United Press International
Construction of new homes fell nearly 22 percent in March, the largest monthly drop in 20 years.

Economists said the economic indicators spell recession: retail and auto sales are slumping; factory utilization and output are down; unemployment is up.

Jay Janis, chairman of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, told the Joint Economic Committee Wednesday things are going to get worse before they get better.

Construction industry representatives reacted with gloom and anger to the housing figures, and the United Auto Workers said it send

Buying power lack squelches rallies

NEW YORK (UPI) — The stock market yanked its rally several times Thursday but lacked the buying power to sustain it.

As a result, prices fell for the third consecutive session amid investor concern about the recession.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which plunged 12.11 points Wednesday, fell 2.39 points to 788.86. It had been ahead by about a point at times during the day.

The New York Stock Exchange ended skewed 0.26 to 57.45 and the price of a share eased 13 cents to 63.1, among the 1,902 issues traded in 4 p.m. EST.

Big Board volume totaled 32,770,000 shares, down from the 39,730,000 traded Wednesday. Many investors stayed on the sidelines until President Carter held a 4 p.m. EST news conference, which was after the NYSE closed.

Analysts said the slower trading also indicated investors have become concerned about the depth of the recession that the nation appears to have entered.

Composite volume of NYSE issues listed on all 115 exchanges and over the counter at 4 p.m. totaled 34,712,208 shares, down from the 42,770,600 Wednesday.

The American Stock Exchange ended shed 3.01 to 235.19 and the price of a share eased 20 cents. The National Association of Securities Dealers

NASDAQ index of OTC stocks lost 1.21 to 134.55.

At 4 p.m., IBM, which reported that quarterly earnings a week ago, was the most active NYSE-listed issue, unchanged at 51 1/4.

Pullman Inc., which plunged 4 1/4 points Wednesday, was second, dropping 2 1/4 to 19 1/4. The company Wednesday cut its quarterly dividend payout after reporting sharply lower first quarter earnings.

International Telephone & Telegraph was the third most active NYSE-listed issue, up 1/4 to 25 1/4 in trading that included a block of 200,000 shares at 25 1/4.

Southern Pacific fell 1/4 to 34 in trading that included a block of 167,000 shares at 34. The company said its first-quarter earnings yielded to 33 cents a share from 31.25 a year ago primarily because of reduced shipments of materials and products related to housing and the auto industry.

Union Pacific lost 3 1/4 to 73 1/4 after a block of 600 shares at 72 1/2. LITON Industries shed 1 1/2 to 46 in active trading. The company raised its dividend payout to 30 cents a share from 25 cents.

Memorex surrendered 1 1/4 to 11 1/4 after the company reported its first quarter net earnings of 2 cents a share from 1.97 a year ago.

Bendix dropped 2 1/4 to 39 1/4. The company Wednesday reported second quarter earnings of 2 1/4 cents a share versus 1 1/4 a year ago.

Big steel, union sign new contract

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — The United Steelworkers of America and the nation's nine major steel companies signed a new three-year labor contract Thursday.

The agreement takes effect Aug. 1. It will eventually cover 450,000 USW members at the "Big 9" firms and several smaller steelmakers. The smaller, "me too" companies are expected to follow the pattern set by the major firms.

The contract, accepted Tuesday by a 335-42 vote of local union leaders, was signed prior to a news conference called to discuss the pact.

Head industry bargainer J. Bruce Johnston of U.S. Steel Corp. told reporters the pact gives the USW members a total wage and fringe benefit boost of 30 to 37 percent over the life of the contract. The exact figure depends on the inflation rate and other variables.

Johnston said the contract, including cost-of-living increments, will meet the president's anti-inflationary guidelines, but declined to discuss the specific hourly increase over the life of the pact.

However, it had been estimated that the hourly boost over the three years ranged from $2.84 up to $3.44 and could increase the average steelworker's annual salary above $25,000 by 1983.

Under the agreement, based on the assumption of 11 percent inflation, workers will get basic increases of 25 cents an hour the first year, 20 cents the next and 15 cents the final year, plus cost-of-living boosts.

Joseph Odorcich, USW vice president of administration, joined Johnston at the news conference, and echoed industry comments that the pact was a good one.

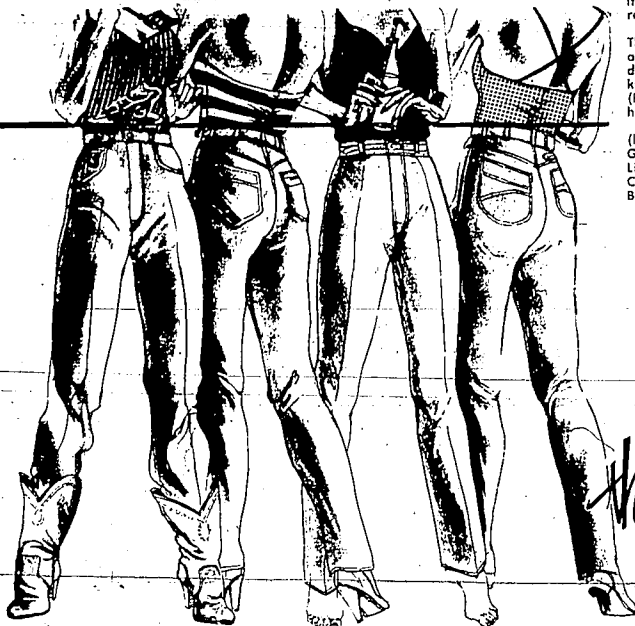

Other parts of the contract give the union 90 days' advance notice in the

Fed tries to ease loan bind

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Federal Reserve Board Thursday announced a program to make more loan money available to small business and agriculture.

Those two areas have been hard hit by the central bank's tight credit policy.

Board Vice Chairman Fredrick Schultz told a House small business subcommittee the Federal Reserve will make approximately $1 billion to $3 billion available to about 6,000 banks for loans exclusively to small business and agricultural borrowers.

Schultz said the Federal Reserve would lend money to banks at 13 percent interest. The banks in turn could lend money to small businessmen and farmers at 15 to 17 percent interest — still well below current interest rates.

Schultz said the program would be geared towards banks with assets less than $100 million or banks with assets of more than $100 million if they have heavy seasonal lending needs such as those in predominantly farming regions.

The central bank will grant credit lines of up to 70 percent of the local bank's increased lending needs. The new loan aid program can finance up to 5 percent of eligible banks' total loan portfolio.

Gas exports price frozen

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Canada is freezing the price of its natural gas exports to the United States at $4.47 per 1,000 cubic feet until Oct. 1, the Canadian Embassy said Thursday.

The price freeze was imposed by Marc Lalonde, minister of energy, mines and resources, based on advice from gas producing and exporting interests that price increases could have an adverse effect on financing for the proposed Alaska gas pipeline. In announcing the delay, Lalonde said it did not indicate any change in Canada's policy linking gas export prices to the country's oil import costs.

The current price is based on oil imports in January.

Under an agreement between Lalonde and U.S. Energy Secretary Charles Duncanson, gas export prices were to be adjusted on a monthly basis — with a three-month lag time before new prices took effect.

The first adjustment was to have come on April 1, with a corresponding increase on July 1. Lalonde's postponement will mean the first adjustment will not be announced until July 1.

Louisiana-Pacific earnings decline

PORTLAND, ORE. (UPI) — Louisiana-Pacific Corp., the forest products firm, had a 21 percent drop in earnings for the first quarter, which it blamed on the slumping construction industry.

Although paper and pulp sales were up, the gains were far offset by declines in sales of lumber and plywood.

Net income fell to $18.79 million or 63 cents a share on total sales of $386.3 million from $23.81 million or 80 cents a share a year ago on sales of $269.02 million.

Proud Herb Turner displays blue ribbon

It was a special day of fun and joy for 150 competitors

Softball thrower Sharon Coats was one of 150 Special Olympic participants who enjoyed a sunny day of athletic competition at Stuart Junior High

They're all Winners

TWIN FALLS — It was a day filled with joy, love and the self-esteem borne not of winning, but simply of participating.

Athletes smiled and pouted at their performances, raised clenched fists into the air and waved sixth-place award ribbons under the noses of complete strangers.

It was a day to be remembered by snapshots in a family photo album and by the sweat of an honest effort.

Robert Stuart Junior High School was the site Thursday and the 10th annual Magic Valley Regional Special Olympics was the occasion.

About 150 mentally retarded and physically handicapped athletes, 8 to 60 years of age, dribbled and shot basketballs, ran foot races, threw softballs, lunged and jumped and raced in wheelchairs.

All of those activities, conducted in heats based on participants' ages, took place in the morning under a bright blue sky and temperatures in the upper 70s. They were followed by a mass brown-bag lunch and an afternoon gymnastics exhibition and awards ceremony.

The awards ceremony, by the way, took nearly as long to complete as the morning's competition, and with good reason: In the Special Olympics every participant, from the winner of a 100-meter dash heat to the person who finishes last by 10 of 20 seconds, receives a ribbon in recognition of his or her effort.

In keeping with its Olympic theme, the day wasn't without a measure of pomp and circumstance.

There was an opening procession in which athletes from Jerome, Wendell, Gooding, Buhl, Rupert, Burley, Hailey and Twin Falls school districts marched along the junior high school's outdoor cinder track behind American and Special Olympics flags.

There was a ceremonial lighting of an Olympic "flame," which saw a construction-paper torch was run by relay around the track and then touched to a flame that consisted of orange and red paper taped to the rim of a red, white and blue cardboard trash can.

There was a group recital of the Special Olympic oath, which bears repeating as a standard sportspeople of all degrees of mental and physical health might consider adopting: "Let me win. But if I cannot win, let me be brave in the attempt."

There was Diana Rackham, Miss Rodeo Idaho of 1979-80, mingling with the crowd and aiding in the awards ceremony, all the while looking resplendent in a blue 10-gallon hat, blue pants suit and blue cowboy boots.

And there were dozens of parents and volunteers in attendance, to watch and cheer their children on and to serve as coaches, judges, timekeepers and "huggers."

One of the parents was Nindra Fry of Twin Falls, who showed up with three of her nine children in tow to watch a fourth, 15-year-old Nathan, compete in the fun-dribble-and-shoot basketball competition in a gym at the junior high.

"I think it's fantastic," she said of the Special Olympics, in which Nathan competed Thursday for the sixth year. "It makes the kids feel so good about themselves—it's something they don't get to feel very often in the everyday world."

Two of the volunteers were Allan and Merrilee Stevenson, a husband and wife team from Wendell who are both nursing assistants at Magic Valley Memorial Hospital and students at the College of Southern Idaho.

"We enjoy it and we always try to help every year. My brother has cerebral palsy," said Allan, 25, by way of explaining his interest in the Special Olympics.

"And my sister's retarded," said Merrilee, 20. "It's fantastic for what it does for the kids. It builds such good friendships. They don't quarrel and fight like 'normal' people."

"It's a sportsmanship thing; we can all learn from," Allan added.

When the last ribbon had been awarded and most of the participants and their support people had driven off in school buses, cars and vans, Kevin McDonough put down a megaphone and caught his breath.

"This was the smoothest area games I've seen in the three years I've been here, and not just because I planned it," he said with a laugh. McDonough, a special education teacher at the junior high school, was for the second consecutive year area coordinator of the regional games.

"We didn't have as many events as we've had in the past, plus we had a good group of volunteers who knew what they were doing."

And a group of athletes who knew, and enjoyed, what they were doing, too.

Olympians launch counterattack

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — The Association of National Olympic Committees lashed out at President Carter Thursday for the Moscow Games boycott and called for punishing the Americans, perhaps by cancelling the Los Angeles games in 1984.

Association officials said their written statement was important because the U.S. Olympic Committee's decision Saturday to boycott the Moscow Games had begun the battle over the boycott "in earnest."

The statement, signed by Association President Mario Vazquez Rana, appeared to signal the start of a major campaign to pressure Olympic committees around the world into rejecting the boycott.

"I urge all the presidents of National Olympic committees to carry out their duties, begging, asking... their governments to give them the freedom to decide whether they will participate in the 1980 Moscow Games," he said.

"After the decision of the U.S. Olympic Committee... I wish to express my great preoccupation as president of the Association of National Olympic Committees."

"Everyone knows that the decision of the U.S. Olympic Committee was made under political pressure from that country," said Vazquez Rana, whose association encompasses all 144 National Olympic committees around the world.

Olympic cagers get alternate series

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A five-game series pitting the U.S. Olympic basketball team against NBA players, the first alternate participation for American athletes hurt by the boycott of the Moscow Olympics, will be played in June under the sponsorship of Olympic basketball officials, the NBA and the NBA Players Association.

Plans announced Thursday by U.S. Olympic Coach Dave Gavitt, NBA Commissioner Lawrence O'Brien, Larry Fleisher, general counsel for the NBAPA, and Chuck Neinas, chairman of the Amateur Basketball Association of the U.S., and Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.J., call for selecting the Olympic team under the same process that would have been used in the 1980 Olympics.

The games are scheduled for June 16 in Los Angeles, June 18 in Phoenix, June 20 in Seattle, June 22 in New York and June 23 in Indianapolis.

Neinas said another game is planned in Greensboro, N.C., pitting the 1976 U.S. Olympic team, which won the gold medal at Montreal, against the 1980 team. North Carolina Coach Dean Smith will coach the 1976 Olympic team again.

Trudeau hides Canada's position

OTTAWA (UPI) — Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau said Thursday Canada would not boycott the Moscow Olympics if the protest against the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan was "just for the sake of symbolism."

Conservative MP Chris Speyer, whose party has been attacking Trudeau's delay in announcing the Canadian policy on the U.S.-sponsored boycott, asked the prime minister to follow Washington's lead.

"I wonder if the prime minister appreciates the symbolism to our people of a strong stand with respect to the Olympic boycott independent of other countries and independent even of the effect that it might have on the Russians," the Ontario MP asked.

Trudeau, who has maintained that Canada will join only if a sufficiently large number of countries participate to effect the Soviet Union, would not announce his position.

BBC cancels Olympic coverage

LONDON (UPI) — The British Broadcasting Corp. and Independent Television announced jointly Thursday that they were both giving up full live coverage of the Moscow Olympics.

A spokesman for the BBC and ITV said their coverage would be greatly reduced but added "there will be some live TV coverage."

The decision to cut back on Olympic viewing followed strong pressure on both television organizations from the British government, which is a firm supporter of President Carter's Olympic boycott.

Bowerman felt games sinking

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — Retired University of Oregon track coach Bill Bowerman, never timid to speak about Olympic shortcomings when he coached the U.S. track team at the Munich Games, says the Olympic movement may be in jeopardy because of Russia's invasion of Afghanistan.

But, he suggests perhaps that isn't all that great a loss.

"There is no perfect situation," he said in an interview with Oregon Journal sports editor George Pasero about the present plight of the Moscow Games and the U.S. boycott.

"The imperfections in the way the Olympics operate have become too much," he said. "Maybe we don't need it."

"The Olympics have gotten so damn big that problems are multiplied."

"You know, a sociologist once said if you get 100 people together, you get 2 to 10 percent thieves. Now, you get 20,000 people and you get 2,000 thieves and thus."

Stones expects IOC to relax rules

GUNNISON, Colo. (UPI) — Former high jump world record holder Dwight Stones says he believes the International Olympic Committee will try to offset the effects of an American-led boycott of the Summer Olympics by allowing individual entries.

"I think the IOC will make it possible for everyone to compete," said Stones. "Lord Killanin, president of the IOC, will want to have as large a representation as possible. He has tunnel vision just like most Olympic officials do."

"At present, no athlete can compete in the Olympics without the sponsorship of the National Olympic Committee in his or her country."

The IOC meets this weekend in Switzerland, and Stones said Wednesday the Olympics governing body may vote to change its bylaws to allow for individual entries.

Celtics, 76ers to open NBA playoff tonight

By United Press International
 Will Dr. J. or the Bird fly higher in Boston tonight when the Philadelphia Sixers and Celtics open their best-of-seven Eastern Conference playoff finals?
 Julius Erving scaled the heights in chasing the Hawks from Atlanta in a conference semifinal that Philadelphia swept 4-1. Erving's soaring, scoring and rebounding convinced some observers Philadelphia can take it in six from Boston.
 Bird, practically a shoe-in for rookie of the year honors in the National Basketball Association after his 21.3 scoring average this season, sees it differently.

 "We're the best team in the NBA, until we're proven otherwise," said Bird after the Celtics fazed the Rockets.
 Bird led Boston to a 4-0 shutout over Houston in the conference semis, climaxing his effort with a game-high 34 points against the Rockets.
 The Milwaukee Bucks can arrest Seattle's bid for back-to-back championships by stopping the visiting Sonics tonight and closing out that series 4-2. If a seventh game is necessary, it will be played in Seattle Sunday afternoon.

 The series survivor faces the Los Angeles Lakers in the Western Conference final. Los Angeles erased the Phoenix Suns in five games.
 While the Celtics toppled Houston with ease, Cedrick Maxwell cautions against over-optimism in the Philadelphia series.
 "It's possible we could have a low when the first thing goes wrong against Philadelphia," says Maxwell. "We could realize that we thought we were on top of our game against the Rockets when we weren't."

 That's certainly an overstatement in light of Boston's winning margins of 17, 18, 19 and 20 points in the four games.
 It would be ironic if both Boston, which had the best record in the NBA this season, and Milwaukee reach the playoff finals. Neither made it to the playoffs last year.

Walton takes up bicycle racing

By United Press International
 Management of the San Diego Clippers couldn't believe it when told that their 37-million-dollar, fragile-footed center Bill Walton was out racing bicycles.
 "We'll get this straightened out soon," Clipper owner Irv Levin vowed.

BILL WALTON

Walton, who participated in only 14 games in the past National Basketball Association season because of aggravations of a fractured bone in his left foot, showed up Tuesday night in helmet and shorts aboard his racing bike and participated in the inaugural competition of the 1980 racing season at Morley Field Velodrome.
 "Who's that big guy?" U. S. National Team coach Eddie Borysewicz of Poland, asked, indicating the big red-head with a nod of his head.

Told that the 6-foot-11-inch man hunched over the bike was a basketball player of some note named Bill Walton, Borysewicz said, "Never heard of him."

Walton, one of 51 opening night competitors including many hopefuls for the U.S. Olympic Cycling Team trials, was eliminated in an early event and said he'd be back next week.

Walton said he planned to race every Tuesday night "as long as they call my name." He indicated he considers the risky sport part of his continuing rehabilitation program.

AMERICAN TENNIS fans get their first look at the "new" Chris Evert Lloyd in a special "Love Doubles" match she will play with her English husband, John, on May 19, in London.

The Lloyds face Swedish ace Bjorn Borg and his fiancée, Marilena Simionescu of Romania, in a best-of-three sets confrontation that will be televised the same evening in the United States by ABC on delayed tape.

A $20,000 first prize awaits the winners, while the losers collect $60,000.

JIM CRAIG, goaltending hero of the U.S. gold-medal-winning Olympic hockey team who is now playing with the Atlanta Flames, will be the color commentator for Saturday's nationwide telecast of the Stanley Cup playoff game between Chicago and Buffalo.

The game will be seen in many major markets at 6:30 p.m. MST over the Hughes Television Network.

BILL YOUNG has been named acting athletic director at the University of Wyoming by UW President Edward Jennings, effective immediately.

A UW spokesman said Wednesday that Young, formerly assistant athletic director, will serve until officials select a permanent replacement for George McCarty, who resigned to become director of the University of New Mexico Lobo Club. McCarty will take over his new job Friday.

ROMAN GABRIEL, one of the NFL's most prolific quarterbacks during his 16 years with the Los Angeles Rams and Philadelphia Eagles, was named Thursday as head football coach at Cal Poly Pomona, an "NCAA Division II school."

"The things I bring to this position are my experience, discipline and dedication to hard work," said Gabriel, who worked for the past two seasons as an assistant coach at the College of the Desert in Palm Desert, Calif.

THREE SCREWS were removed from the left leg of Portland Trail Blazers forward-center Mychal Thompson Thursday and team physician Dr. Robert Cook said, "The bone looks fine."

Thompson missed the entire 1979-80 NBA season as a result of a broken leg, suffered in a pickup basketball game with the Bahamian national team near his home in the Bahamas last July 31.

NASCAR readies for race

NORTH WILKESBORO, N.C. (UPI) - Qualifying begins today for the Northwestern 400 stock car race at North Wilkesboro Speedway with 37 drivers, including the top 20 in the Grand National point standings, vying for the pole position.

Bobby Allison, Benny Parsons, Richard Petty, Darrell Waltrip and Cale Yarborough, all former winners at the track, as well as point standings leader Dale Earnhardt are among the favorites to take the number one starting position.

Unlike the other tracks on the Grand National circuit where the pole winner is determined on the first day of qualifying, the first eight starting berths for the 30-car field will be decided by averaging the two days of trials.

Parsons earned the pole last year at the five-eighths mile track with a speed of 108.136 mph, but it was Allison who went home with the win. The Hueytown, Ala., driver was forced to walk to victory lane after the suspension on his car broke as he crossed the finish line.

Earnhardt set a track qualifying record last October for the Grand National division with a speed of 112.783.

Petty, however, possesses the most victories at the speedway - 13. Eight of those wins have come in the spring race.

Yarborough and Waltrip also have won more than one race at the speedway. Waltrip was victorious in the Wilkes 400 in 1977 and the spring race the next year. Yarborough has gone home the winner five times.

Six of the drivers competing for a starting berth are rookies. Jody Ridley, who leads the rookie standings, will be making his first start at the speedway. The other rookies are Bill Elswick, Tommy Houston, Kyle Petty, son of seven-time Grand National driving champion Richard Petty; Slick Johnson and Junior Miller.

HUNT — Mr. and Mrs. Wells L. Brady of High announce the engagement of their daughter, Louise, to Robert Stewart. Stewart is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred R. Stewart of Hunt. Miss Brady is a graduate of Iticks College and Brigham Young University, where she majored in home economics, German and English. She served a mission for the LDS church in Zurich, Switzerland. She is employed at the BYU Law School. Stewart served a mission to Stockholm, Sweden. He is a student at Brigham Young University, majoring in civil engineering. They will exchange vows April 25 in the Idaho Falls LDS Temple. A reception will follow that evening in the First Ward Cultural Hall. An open house will be held April 29 in the LDS Hunt Ward Church.

Debra Harwood

JEROME — Mr. and Mrs. Farrell Harwood of Jerome announce the engagement of their daughter, Debra Dee, to Patrick O'Toole. O'Toole is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald O'Toole of Jerome. Miss Harwood is a 1978 graduate of Jerome High School and attended one year at the College of Southern Idaho. She is employed at Penny Wise Drug as a pharmacy technician. O'Toole graduated from Jerome High School in 1977 and will graduate in May from the College of Southern Idaho with an associate of applied science degree in consumer electronics technology. The couple have set a June 7 wedding date in the Jerome Nazarene Church.

Carrie Durham

TWIN FALLS — Mr. and Mrs. Berry N. Durham of Twin Falls announce the engagement of their daughter, Carrie Lynn, to Allen Dale Yaden. Yaden is the son of Rev. and Mrs. Haskell D. Yaden of Twin Falls. Miss Durham is a 1978 graduate of Twin Falls High School. She works at Idaho Frozen Foods and attends the College of Southern Idaho. Yaden received most of his education in South America while his parents were on a mission for the United Pentecostal Church. He also attended the College of Southern Idaho and is employed by Ropers. The couple is planning a September wedding.

15th anniversary fete

TWIN FALLS — The Desert Gold CowBellees will celebrate their 15th anniversary Saturday. The annual spring business meeting and luncheon will be held at the Turf Club beginning with the business meeting at 10 a.m. A social punch bowl will follow the meeting at noon and the luncheon will begin at 12:30 p.m. The courtesy committee, consisting of Marlene Armes of Buhl, chairman, and Sharon Denton and Arlene Thornton, both of Twin Falls, have planned an entertaining luncheon with the Homestead presenting stained glass techniques and a fabric demonstration by Sew-Ciety. According to President Vee Barton of Three Creek, state CowBellee officers are expected to attend and some honorary membership certificates will be given.

Kathy Elliott

Laura Kreppek

Girls' State delegates

FILER — Kathy Elliott and Laura Kreppek of Filer have been named delegates to Girls' State June 15-19 at Northwest Nazarene College. Miss Elliott, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bill Elliott of Filer, was a member of the Motor varsity and varsity basketball team and a lifeguard and swimming instructor at the Filer city pool. She has been active in Future Farmers of America, YMCA youth government member, Filer YMCA youth government lobbyist for 1980 in Boise and chairman of the congressional campaign in Filer High School. She is a youth chairman for the Twin Falls County Republican Committee, United Methodist Youth Fellowship president, youth representative for the Methodist Church pastor-parish relations committee, chairman of the Filer-Methodist social sciences committee and member of the church choir. Miss Kreppek, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Kreppek of Filer, is vice-president of Debouillon, secretary-treasurer of the high school Rodeo Club, assistant leader of the Filer Junior Riding Club and a 4-H club member. She is a past president of the Music Club and a member of the Idaho Quarter Horse Association. She was student body president and a representative to student government, teen leader, Idaho Hunter Association, member of girls' basketball and volleyball teams, entered the oratorical contest and participated in several queen contests. Jayne Tows was named alternate delegate. Other girls trying out for Girls' State were Cecilia Showers, Lori Ochsner, Cheryl Fiscus and Jamie Wiedmeier.

Atkin is scholarship winner

TWIN FALLS — James N. Atkin of Twin Falls competed against more than a million other high school students in winning a four-year college scholarship. Atkin, a senior at Twin Falls High School, learned recently he is one of some 4,500 college-bound students who will be awarded National Merit Scholarships this year. The first batch of 1,500 winners was announced April 10 by the National Merit Scholarship Corp. Each receives an amount based on need and costs for four years to the college of his choice. The minimum stipend is $250 per year, but the amounts are confidential and the maximum can range from $1,500 to $4,000 a year. In announcing the winners, National Merit said more than a million high school students entered the 1980 competition as Juniors last year. Atkin said the scholarship, coupled with a four-year, full-tuition scholarship from Brigham Young University, will mean being able to complete his college education without having to interrupt it to work and save more money. "BYU is a really good school for the things I'm thinking about — psychology and pre-med," Atkin said. He plans to attend college for one semester then go on a mission for the Mormon Church for two years. "When I get back, I should have a pretty good idea what I want to do," he said. Atkin said his activities at high school center around the music department. He is the accompanist for the choir and madrigal choir and was the accompanist this year for the Idaho All-State Choir. He is the son of John D. and Mary

5 pounds daily

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The average American teenage boy puts away 5.3 pounds of food a day, according to the National Geographic Society's children's atlas, "Our Fifty States." That's nearly a ton — 1,927 pounds — every 12 months. The average teenage girl eats about 200 pounds less. Counting together men, women, and children, the average per American person is 1,500 pounds of food per year.

Dear Abby

Readers defend bull fights

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
© Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: This is in protest of your ignorant evaluation of a time-honored art which you labeled "the brutal and bloody business of torturing and killing animals for sport and entertainment — bullfighting."

What an outrageously ethnocentric remark! Bullfighting first appeared as early as 2,000 years before Christ. Since then it has flourished in Spain, Portugal and Latin America. For centuries, kings and noblemen as well as commoners have involved themselves in that sport. It is not, as you, as a foreigner, it is unfair for you to criticize the customs of another country — in Spain, bullfighting is considered an art, not merely a sport. When you say the animals are "tortured," it shows that you don't know anything about bullfighting.

The bulls used in the arena are bred especially for their ferocity to kill men! It takes enormous skill and courage for a 175-pound man armed with only a cape and sword to face a wild bull weighing 2,000 pounds. And when the time comes to kill the animal, the men often kill the bull with a single thrust of the sword! (Tell me that chasing a fox with a pack of trained dogs, riding a horse while using guns to kill is more sporting! The same can be said of your hunting birds and animals.)

In conclusion, I wish to inform you that in most cases the meat of the bulls killed in the arena is sold cheap to the city's poor or given to orphanages.

the entire class to write to me to protest my answer and defend the "art" of bullfighting.

Read on more about the controversy:

DEAR ABBY: What have you against bullfighting? OK, so it's outlawed in the U.S. But how about the brutal and bloody sport that's making millions of dollars, called boxing? Those in the ring are not animals, they are human beings, and they are in there to kill each other for sport, entertainment — and money! And when you get right down to it, ice hockey is a "brutal and bloody business," too. And so is football. Think about it, Abby.

NORTH DAKOTA FAN
DEAR FAN: I've thought about it, and I still disapprove of any sport (spectator or contact) in which blood (animal or human) is spilled.

DEAR ABBY: I must commend you for speaking out against bullfighting. Unfortunately, there are people in the world who believe it is good entertainment to watch dogfights, cockfights, etc. There are even people who condone using live rabbits for training greyhounds (for dog racing). The rabbits are not only the treated with no chance of escaping, and although exhausted, the terrified creatures run until they are caught and torn to shreds!

There is absolutely no justification for these barbaric acts against animals. They demoralize human beings and lower us to the days of the gladiators when animals were pitted against each other as the crowd roared in excitement and amusement. Keep up the good work, Abby. The world needs more people like you.

MS. JERI ZUPANCIC

DEAR ABBY: I don't see anything wrong with bullfighting. They feed the bulls well, let them live for years and then put them in the ring where they are killed instantly. I think putting animals in a zoo is more cruel.

— SPANISH STUDENT

DEAR ABBY: In your country you fatten up your bulls, run them up a chute at the stockyards and hit them over the head with an ax before they become hamburger or steaks. Your bulls have no chance to fight for their lives. Ours have. OLE!

— MAD IN MEXICO

Parents of Karen Quinlan have found peace

By PETER J. SAMPSON
LANDING, N.J. (UPI) — Five years after Karen Anne Quinlan slipped into a coma that sparked a worldwide debate over the rights of hopeless patients, her parents have found their peace.

On the anniversary of the day Karen last spoke — April 15, 1975 — Joe and Julia Quinlan are opening a new chapter in their lives. They will travel to Newton Memorial Hospital, where their daughter was first treated, to start a hospice program to allow terminally ill patients spend their final months in their own homes.

In an interview at their home, the Quinlans recalled the trying moments of the past five years and details of the relationship they maintain with their 26-year-old comatose daughter, Karen Anne.

"We visit her daily in the (Morris View) nursing home," says Julia. "We talk to her. She has a radio in her room. We play recordings of her favorite songs. We pray for her. We treat her as you would any terminally ill patient who is unable to respond."

"And that's the most difficult part, that she can't respond. There's no communication," Julia laments. "But she is still alive."

Sitting next to his wife on their living room sofa, Joe said he visits Karen twice a day on his way to and from work at a nearby pharmaceutical firm.

He often combs Karen's hair, which is now cut short, and massages the back of her neck to relax the tension in her contorted, 68-pound body.

Sometimes Karen is asleep. Other times "her eyes are wide open and she is looking all around, but she can't see," Julia says.

Joe recalls that while Karen was still at St. Clare's Hospital, where she was transferred nine days into the coma, "The doctors explained to us... the fact... that she started on this sleep-awake cycle was due to brain damage. And this is the way she'll stay."

The family has given up hope of ever learning whether it was a dose of tranquilizers mixed with alcohol, a sugar condition, exposure to lead at work or a hard fall on concrete steps two weeks earlier that induced the coma.

Karen Anne became the focus of international attention when her parents, who adopted her as an infant, filed a petition in Superior Court in Morristown to remove the respirator that kept her alive.

"Now I think that people understand a lot better than they did five years ago," says Julia, recalling the first newspaper headlines that proclaimed, "Father Asks for Right To Kill His Gravely Ill Daughter."

"I think that was until they understood what the story was really about. Many people were confused. They probably thought that we were asking for our daughter to die. But now I think they understand; they have a better concept of what it is all about, that we were just asking for her to be removed from the respirator."

Pat Armstrong, the Quinlans' lawyer, says the publicity has made Americans aware of their right to privacy in facing death. Soon after the Quinlan case, California became the first state to adopt living will legislation. "About 17 states have since passed similar laws and about 20 others are considering them."

Armstrong has helped people in Massachusetts, Florida, California, New York and about 50 families in New Jersey to resolve cases like the Quinlans' without the "palm and anguish" of a public trial.

"It's difficult enough for a family to have to go through the loss of a loved one without the additional burden of having to go through the judicial process," Armstrong says. "That's the one evil I would like to avoid."

Julia adds, "I think it helps to know that we have helped other people. We've made it easier for other families."

Armstrong says, "This privacy principle... has been vindicated by every court in the nation that has since wrestled with the problem. So there has been that contribution which this simple family has made in trying to help their daughter."

Joe Quinlan remembers the "first rush" of photographers, TV and newspaper reporters who stormed their home and the "riot" they created the day the story broke.

"We've gotten used to that. We never minded the press at all," he says.

But the strain of the court proceeding and living in the midst of a controversy was a strain for the family.

"We never dreamed it would be blown up like that," Joe says. "Our lawyer, Paul Armstrong, told us right off the bat that there's no case in New Jersey that he knows of. And it turned out to be in the whole country."

"It was difficult because I had never been in a courtroom in my life and, you know, we're just very quiet, average people," Julia adds.

While the trial was a painful experience for both, they have no regrets.

"It was difficult. But we had to. We would certainly do it over again," Julia says.

When families go to court now it's a formality to be appointed legal guardian, Joe says, and convince a judge "they don't have any ulterior motive but are truly interested in the person's welfare. There's no long trial like we had. It's been simplified."

"At least there are avenues open to doctors now," Julia adds.

Doctors at St. Clare's at first had refused to "pull the plug" on Karen's respirator for fear of prosecution.

Experts who testified at the trial argued she was not dead because brain activity had not ceased.

In its landmark ruling, the state Supreme Court said the respirator could be removed if a medical ethics committee determined there was "no reasonable possibility" of Karen's recovery.

Doctors gradually weaned her from the respirator in May 1976 and a month later she was moved to the nursing home in Morristown.

"We've seen a lot of good come out of this whole case. That's why we feel God is using Karen," Joe says.

"I do feel her life is serving a purpose," says Julia. "I feel that she symbolized the care that terminally ill patients should receive. By us asking for the removal of the respirator, we showed a respect for life."

Julia says she does not like the expression "right to die."

"Actually it's the right to live. It's the right to live as peacefully and as comfortably (as possible) until we die," she says.

"It's the same with the hospice," she says. "You're not treating the person like he's going to die tomorrow. You're treating him in a way that you want to make him live to his fullest for whatever time he has left."

The Quinlans say it is not strange they are devoting a great deal of time and effort to the terminally ill.

"We can sympathize now," Joe says. "It's easier for us now to understand what other people are going through because we've gone through the same things ourselves," he says.

Funded with the proceeds of magazine articles, a best-seller published in five languages and a TV movie, the hospice is called the Karen Anne Quinlan Center of Hope. It already has 32 trained volunteers to provide around-the-clock home care and support for the families of terminally ill patients in the area.

The Quinlans have no idea how long their daughter can survive.

"As one doctor said, she's fooled everyone so far," Julia says, breaking into a smile.

Joe recalls most of the doctors who testified at their trial said Karen would die after she was taken off the respirator.

The Quinlans say they have tried their best to prepare themselves and their two college-age children for Karen's death.

"It's difficult," Julia says. "We talk about it. It isn't anything that we brush under the rug. We have discussions with the children and we know what we're going to do. I think we're prepared as best as we can be. Of course, when the time comes, we'll have to make adjustments again, as we did five years ago."

"It will still be a shock," Joe interjects.

"Our lives will be changed again," Julia adds.

Author Harriet Stratemyer Adams, 87, creator of Nancy Drew, worked at her desk Wednesday.

Author has 50th anniversary

NEW YORK (UPI) — In 50 years, Nancy Drew has changed her hairstyle, traded in her roadster for a new car — and had only two birthdays.

To honor her golden anniversary this week, Simon and Schuster, publishers of the popular adventure series for girls, honored author Harriet Stratemyer Adams at a "celebration" party Wednesday night.

In her 50 years, the adventurous Miss Drew has changed from "independent" to "liberated," her publishers say, and she's still "a heroine worth emulating."

Mrs. Adams, 87, began writing about Nancy Drew in 1930 and this month will introduce the 50th Nancy Drew Mystery Series book — "The Flying Saucer Mystery." In a switch from tradition and in deference to publishing trends, however, the new book will be a paperback.

Mrs. Adams — the mother of three, grandmother of 10 and great-grandmother of two in real life — said Nancy is "like a daughter who is very close to me. I guess we have grown closer as the years have gone along."

Over the years, 70 million Nancy Drew books have been sold in the United States. They have been translated into more than a dozen languages, including Japanese, Malay and Icelandic.

The heroine, who has become contemporary if not mod, no longer wears frocks. She's also changed her hair — instead of blonde, it's tawny — to satisfy an illustrator. And instead of spinning around in a blue roadster, her car is an unidentified modern model.

In five decades, she has aged just two years — from 16 to 18 — only to suit plot lines allowing her to drive in all 50 states.

Nancy's boyfriend, Ned Nickerson, has evolved from what critics used to call an "ineffectual partner" to one who is allowed to rescue her in the nick of time. He even gets to sneak in a kiss now and then.

"Being a fictional daughter, she does exactly what I tell her to, or rather let her do," Mrs. Adams said. "She never disagrees, and together we get the job done and the mystery solved."

Mrs. Adams, a resident of Maplewood, N.J., is senior partner in the Stratemyer Syndicate responsible for the Dana Girls, Bobsey Twins, Hardy Boys, Tom-Swift Jr. and Honeybunch.

In addition, she is now writing her 50th Nancy Drew volume.

Camp Fire plans presentation about camping

TWIN FALLS — To promote their summer camp program, Camp Fire will present special displays at Blue Lakes Mall Saturday.

A Camp Fire representative will answer any questions and Camp Fire members will entertain with camp songs and an outdoor display. There will be a continuous slide show and camping brochures and handouts will be available.

The camping program is offered to boys and girls ages 6 to 16.

This summer Camp Fire will offer a week long Day Camp running from June 16 to June 23. Resident camp sessions will begin on July 14 and run continuously during the month ending on Aug. 2.

On June 2 there will be a bus trip to Boise to visit the zoo and other points of interest. For adventurous teenagers — a trip to Leaman Caves in Nevada is planned.

For further information on any summer program offered to the Magic Valley youth, call the Ma Tre Val Council of Camp Fire at 733-6214.

Widening boulevard is delayed

By MARTY TRILLHAASE

Times-News writer
TWIN FALLS — State and federal highway spending cuts mean Blue Lakes Boulevard North won't be widened this summer as anticipated. (Was it actually going to be widened this summer, or was an intersection going to be repaired, with widening to follow?)
The cuts will also delay seal-coating several recently completed highway projects within the city, the lack of which could lead to a more rapid deterioration of those streets.
The two projects are among $23 million worth of state projects which have been postponed by the Idaho Transportation Board. The board took that action last week because the Legislature failed to provide increased highway maintenance funds and because federal funds are being held back.
Transportation officials said they would have $13 million less than anticipated in state money due to the Legislature's decision not to increase gasoline taxes and ton-mile taxes paid by truckers. Just how solid those figures depends on what action, if any, the Legislature takes if it is called back into special session.
The department may also lose about $15 million in federal funds because of the Carter Administration's anti-inflation cuts.
Shoshone District Engineer Howard Johnson said that of those two projects the postponement of about $3 million in local highway projects planned for this summer. Those include:
• A $600,000 widening of the Blue Lakes Boulevard North and Falls Avenue intersection.
• A $35,000 seal coating project at West Five Points, Addison Avenue, Shoshone Street, and both Second Avenues.
• A $1.7 million resurfacing of State Highway 75, scheduled from Stanley to Clayton.
• A $60,000 bridge construction project on State Highway 75 at Trail Creek.
The delay in the Falls Avenue-Blue Lakes Boulevard North widening project will probably mean yet another year delay in a widening of the intersection of Filer Avenue and Blue Lakes Boulevard North. Depending on that, the state would mean the widening project was ready to go in 1980, officials planned to complete the second in 1981.
"Although those projects would not widen the entire street, city officials in January indicated the State Board agreed to widen an additional 1,190-foot length of Blue Lakes between the two intersections. The city officials want at least one more lane on the street for a left-turn bay.
Blue Lakes is ranked among the state's most hazardous streets, with 253 accidents reported in 1979. That's a decrease from 337 in 1978, but city officials point out the decrease was linked to their efforts to force developers to widen the street under the city's requirements.
City Engineer Gary Young said the postponement will likely mean more accidents and a greater inconvenience to drivers than would have been the case had the projects been completed this year.
But the postponement relieves pressure to conclude right of way acquisitions, which were to have been completed by July 1, Young said.
Complaints had been contemplated in some cases where negotiations had promised to last beyond that deadline, he said.
Young said he will pursue other funding options for the project, but said that will be no easy matter.

Skyview-Hazeldele Manor Administrator Richard Drake and wife Melody, left, and employees listen to NLRB representative Barbara Laners count union election votes

Outcome not final because of contested votes

Skyview workers for union, 52-51

By STEPHANIE SCHOROW

Times-News writer
TWIN FALLS — The union election at the Skyview-Hazeldele Manor ended in an unresolved cliffhanger Thursday.
The results may remain undecided for months, according to union and management representatives.
Nursing home employees voted 52 to 51 in favor of joining the Idaho Service Employees Union.
But eight sealed "challenge" ballots were cast, enough to affect the union's one-vote majority. These eight votes may determine the final tally.
In a separate vote, however, registered nurses voted 6 to 2 not to join the union even if it eventually is approved by the other employees.
The National Labor Relations Board will now investigate the eight challenge ballots, which were cast by persons whom either the management or the union say are ineligible to vote because they are not presently major employees or they were hired after the eligibility cutoff date.
If any of the eight persons are determined to be eligible — if, for example, they are found to have been illegally fired — their vote will be counted. A simple majority of all votes cast is needed to approve a union.
In case of a tie, the employer wins, according to Barbara Laners, an NLRB representative from Seattle who conducted the election.
Of the eight contested votes, seven were challenged by the union, and one was challenged by the union, one was challenged by the union.
"This indicates that seven of the eight favor the union, according to Warren Lundquist, the union's state director.
However, the results will not be known until the NLRB finishes its investigation. Laners

Employee Pam Mison and nurse Beth Mitchell anxiously await vote results said it could take as long as six months to a year.

In the union rejection by the registered nurses, a separate vote was required because registered nurses legally have a "professional" status. They voted on specially-colored ballots as to whether they would form a separate bargaining unit within the union chapter.
The tally was 6 to 2 against the union. There were two challenge votes, which were not enough to change the outcome and Laners legally certified the results.

This means that even if the union wins final approval, registered nurses will not be a part of the organization. Licensed practical nurses, nurses-aides and all other employees would.
Thursday's ballot count attracted a crowd of interested employees, who perished from the hot temperatures and the tense situation. Administrator Richard Drake and his wife also attended.
One observer compared the lengthy counting to opening a Christmas package with never-ending wrapping paper.
Of 127 eligible voters — not including RNs 103 voted, according to Laners.
Both sides appeared to receive the announced tally with more apprehension than jubilation. Almost immediately Laners said that "the challenges were sufficient to affect the outcome" and would decide the election. The election was deemed "uncertified" until the NLRB investigates.
Lundquist and Elbert Shaw, a representative of the Idaho Employers Council, which has represented Drake in the labor dispute, say all they can do now is wait for results of the NLRB investigation.
Lundquist said the union has filed charges of unfair labor practices concerning nine former major employees — including the seven who cast challenge ballots — with the NLRB. He said that by resolving the labor charges, the voting eligibility of the seven persons would be determined. He said he had "no idea" how long that would take.
Shaw predicted the investigation would take at least 60 days.
Lundquist said in order for management to win, all seven of its challenges must be upheld, disqualifying these voters, and the union must lose its challenge against one person.
Then, if that person votes against the union, the tally would be 52 to 52, and the management would win.
If none of the challenges are upheld, the union would win, as it has a simple majority of those voting.
The drive for a union first surfaced in February when Drake, grandson of the original owner, took over management of the nursing home from J & P Enterprises.

Top statesman award to High

POCATELLO — Retiring State Sen. Richard High, of Twin Falls, has been honored as Idaho's "Statesman of the Year."
"It's the first in what will be an annual awards banquet," said Jim Rodgers, president of the Idaho State University honors fraternity sponsoring the April 25 dinner and presentation ceremony.
Nominations were solicited from numerous Idahoans, Rodgers said. High was selected on the basis of the outstanding legislative record.
"We wanted to recognize someone who has had a career of public service to the State of Idaho as well as a measurable impact on public policy," Rodgers said. High was a clear choice for the award.
High served 14 years in the Idaho Senate. During 10 of those years he co-chaired the powerful Joint Finance-Appropriations Committee. During that decade on the key legislative budget committee, High is widely credited with having made significant changes in state monetary and budgetary procedures, changes which resulted in sizable tax dollar savings.
The award will be presented in Pocatello by the members of Pi Sigma Alpha, an honors fraternity of ISU undergraduate and graduate government students. The ceremony and dinner are scheduled for the Student Union Building dining room.

Region 4 board allots funds

Buhl heads contenders with request to develop comprehensive plan, zoning and subdivision ordinances
By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer
TWIN FALLS — The city of Buhl received top consideration Thursday for funding under the 701 program for 1980 in Region 4.
Region 4 Development Association advisory board members heard proposals from cities and counties for 10 projects totaling $41,500. The region this year has only $14,500 to allocate to 701 planning projects in the Magic Valley region.
The advisory board voted to divide funds available this year between the city of Buhl, Blaine County, Minidoka County and the cities of Hansen and Shoshone.
Buhl will receive $14,000 of the $5,000 requested; Blaine County, $4,000 of the $5,000 requested; Minidoka County, $3,000 of the requested $3,000 and Shoshone and Hansen will receive $1,500 each. These two towns each requested $5,000.

Buhl City Engineer John Priestler told the advisory Board he is attempting to again set up a zoning commission to begin preparing a comprehensive plan. The city must also update the zoning ordinance, part of which goes back as far as 1910. He said part of the planning money would go for development of a much needed subdivision ordinance for the city.
Tom Flemming, executive director for Region 4, said the funds are granted on a matching basis and are designed to help communities and counties with planning projects, but are not meant to pay for the entire project.

Blaine County Planner Gary Slette said the county needs funds for an evaluation of the rapid growth in the county. He said the development in the county has brought a great deal of concern from individuals and communities. Because there is no central sewer system in outlying areas, he said, numerous septic tanks and drain fields are being installed, which could be endangering an aquifer running the length of the county. He said this feeds Wood River and is in places replenished by the river. They are interchangeable, he said, and plans are to monitor the river as well as municipal and private wells.

He said there is a major concern among residents depending on well water for domestic sources because of the many sub-surface sewage systems. They feel these could contaminate the aquifer and leave them with unuseable wells.
Mayor Emory Dietrich of Hailey, attending the meeting to speak on behalf of a request for funding for a comprehensive plan in Hailey, also expressed support for the county-wide development-limits study. He said the Hailey city water supply is one that may be endangered by the excessive growth.
Minidoka County's request is for money to help update the "Title" use inventory in the county. Other phases of the planning project would be to complete a county comprehensive plan, update a zoning ordinance and finalize the subdivision ordinance.

In Hansen, City Attorney William Hoffield said, services of a professional planner are needed to coordinate and direct the volunteer citizen planning efforts. Much of the work has been done by volunteers, he said, but proper direction is now needed.
City Councilman Frank Carothers of Shoshone said his city now has no planning or zoning regulations or guidelines. His town, he said, is

News briefs

Scout-O-Rama Saturday
FILER — The Snake River Council of the Boy Scouts of America will hold its Scout-O-Rama Saturday.
Several hundred area cub-scouts and boy scouts will be participating in the many events planned for the day at the Filer Fairgrounds.
The grounds will be open for the scouts to set up their displays at 9 a.m.

Those participating in the parade should assemble at Filer Elementary School at noon. The parade will go down Main Street in Filer beginning at 12:30 p.m.
The ticket-price booth will open at 1 p.m. and the opening ceremony will be at the fairground flagpole at 1:30 p.m. Tickets are $1.
A pinewood derby for the Cub Scouts will begin with registration at 2 p.m., elimination heats at 2:30 and the finals at 4 p.m.

Other events include the "Great Elapjack Flip" and the "Olympic Team Good Turn." There will also be canoe rides and other Scouting displays.
The program will close at 5 p.m.
Recruiters at arm
TWIN FALLS — Armed forces recruiters will be out in force this weekend at the Blue Lakes Mall.

Recruiters from the Army, Navy, Air Force, Marine Corps, National Guard and Coast Guard will set up displays today through Sunday. Personnel from each service will be on hand to answer questions.
In the back parking lot the National Guard will have its "Operation Match Up" mobile unit display. Persons will be invited to test their marksmanship at the display, which consists of five shots with a .22 caliber carbine CO2 pellet rifle.

Lease disagreement leads to $1.44 million lawsuit

TWIN FALLS — A damage suit against owners of Woodstone Retirement Center is among several filed in 5th District Court here this week.

Medical Management Services brought suit against Woodstone Retirement Center, Dr. R.A. Drake, Bernard Skoretz and Douglas Schmechel, charging the defendants have failed and refused to fulfill a lease agreement.

Medical Management Services says it signed a lease with the owners of the retirement center last July 1.

Since that time, the plaintiffs say, numerous oral and written requests have been made to put the lease into operation. The complaint alleges the owners of the center have refused to allow Medical Management Services to occupy the property, and as a result the plaintiff has lost considerable time and money.

The plaintiff asks $1.44 million in general damages and $6,000 per month plus interest in loss of profits since the lease was to have become effective.

In another case, a Twin Falls County man is being sued as a result of an automobile accident at Boise last December. David and Corzette Draper of Boise are asking $30,000 general damages for him and $50,000 for his plus other expenses and costs. The Boise couple charges Dwight Galvin with causing an accident Dec. 20 in which the couple suffered injuries.

The complaint charges Galvin was drunk when the accident occurred and failed to exercise care. His 1961 vehicle collided with the one driven by Draper. The couple also seeks $600 for damages to their vehicle.

Rangan Inc. of Buhl has filed suit against its insurance carrier, charging it refused to pay a claim which comes under provisions of the coverage

Rangan has purchased and paid premiums for over a period of time. Rangan Inc. is suing Greg McDonald, insurance agent, Tabor Insurance Co. of Twin Falls, St. Paul Fire and Marine Insurance Co., and Curt Duggan.

Rangan asks $100,000 punitive damages and $32,277.89 for loss it had covered that has been unable to reclaim from the insurance policy.

Rangan Inc. charges it had a contract with Duggan Oct. 19, 1979, for fertilizing farm land. Duncan was using anhydrous ammonia on a field and vented the vapors from the application machine into an irrigation ditch. Water drained from the ditch into water that flows into trout farms owned by the Paulson Fish Farms, killing a number of fish. Since Paulson demanded payment and threatened suit, Rangan Inc. states, it paid the $32,277 loss to the fish farmer, but has been unable to collect on insurance coverage.

Kindergarten registration set

TWIN FALLS — Registration for kindergarten and for some first grade students begins April 28 and lasts through May 2 in Twin Falls.

Parents in the Twin Falls School District may register their children between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m. at the school the child will be attending. To be eligible, children must be 5 years old or older on Oct. 15.

Parents must come in person and "show" birth certificates and health immunization records. If a child did not attend kindergarten this school year but will be starting first grade next fall, he should also be registered at the school he will be attending during the same period as kindergarten. First graders must be 6 years old or older on Oct. 15.

Parents needing information about their school zones can call the school district office at 733-6900.

Clean-up day May 3 in Twin Falls County

TWIN FALLS — Volunteer organizations and individuals are mobilizing for the annual Johnny Horizon Day in Twin Falls County May 3.

Darrell Heider, director of sanitation for Twin Falls County, said several hundred individuals, armed with plastic bags, will be marching on roadsides, parks and other public areas for the once-a-year spring cleaning.

William Chancey, former county commissioner and one of the originators of the event, said the idea started 11 years ago by the county and Bureau of Land Management with an aim of making Twin Falls County one of the most attractive and cleanest in Idaho.

He said county-wide cooperation has always been available and this year is expected to be as good or better. Chancey is chairman of the Twin Falls Lions Club participation. He said the club will serve lunch to all workers. The main lunch will be at the Filer Fairgrounds at noon with others provided at Murtaugh and Castleford.

"We have a lot of organizations that have helped us for all 11 years. They just call in and say they will take the same area as usual. Organization is pretty easy now," Chancey said.

A meeting to finalize plans will be held at 8 p.m. April 29 in the county judicial building. Unassigned areas will be assigned and agencies and organizations with trucks and other equipment will be given work areas. Heider said workers will meet at their assigned areas at 8 a.m. May 3 or those without assignments will be asked to be at the old hospital building at 8 a.m. to be taken to work areas.

These gathering aluminum cans may turn in their cans for cash at the various recycling centers.

Recycling firms have urged workers to separate the aluminum cans from the steel cans and turn in only aluminum.

Ronald Wall, who is associated with a Buhl recycling center, said youngsters bring in several pounds of cans only to find about half of them are steel and cannot be accepted. He said the recyclers have to sort them and then cart the steel cans off to the mills which is an added effort and cost.

Because of this, he said Johnny Horizon Day is not a favorite day for the recycling center operators.

Buhl City officials will be holding a city-wide cleanup May 2 and will ask the county commissioners to waive the landfill fees for one day to encourage cooperation by residents. Lawrence Fawcett, public works director, said with landfill fees it is difficult for the city to provide free collection of fresh-tree clippings and other unusual spring collections.

Filer readies summer recreation plan

FILER — The Filer Recreation Department is preparing for summer.

Bob Parent has been hired as director of summer recreation activities and Phyllis Lindholm will be in charge of swimming activities.

Registration blanks will be available in the schools and students are urged to pick them up and fill them out if they plan to participate in summer recreation.

Kaye Anne Edwards is secretary-treasurer for the organization and directors are Bill Brake, Lori Bruesch and Bob Blastock.

growing—and must have some assistance in formulating development guidelines. He said the city has budgeted small amounts for this purpose for several years but has lacked ability to put the money to work. Carlhers said he believes a comprehensive plan and zoning ordinances could be completed in two years with some financial assistance. The board also heard requests from Camas county for assistance on an airport layout plan; a comprehensive plan for the city of Halley; assistance for preparing a plan for non-white car-pooling paths in the city of Ketchum; a culinary water system plan for the town of Malta, and a study in the city of Twin Falls to determine a cost-benefit ratio for annexation into the future; guide for city council in annexing and in providing out-of-city services.

Dr. James Taylor suggested the Malta needs might be met by funds available under federal impacted areas. He suggested withdrawal of this request and said he would be willing to check into the availability of the state's funding for Malta.

The board will decide on priorities for projects to come under the Natural Resource Development Strategy system during the May meeting.

John Yates, Region 4 planning specialist, said those projects which meet the requirements under this system should be prioritized for Region 4 support. Those given board favor will become work projects for the Region 4 staff in submitting them to proper agencies for funding and following through on the applications.

Among proposals for Region 4 would work during the year, based on the board's priorities are the calf production industry through the College of Southern Idaho, South Jerome sewer extension, Rupert sewer extension, Ketchum business district water system, Twin Falls parking garage, Burley area industrial parksite, Twin Falls industrial park and Twin Falls airport industrial parksite.

Hansen honored

WASHINGTON — Congressman George Hansen Sunday received the New Hampshire Conservative Union's annual Horatio Binney Award.

Hansen, R-Idaho, was addressed at Manchester and presided at a gathering of New Hampshire conservative leaders.

In making the award, the Conservative Union applauded Hansen's efforts to preserve "freedom, justice, and individual rights," under the constitution.

Blue Lakes

"If we do have options, we'll certainly be exploring them. But at this point, I can't imagine how we're going to scrape money out of thin air," he said.

By deferring seal coating the city streets, the department is risking considerably more expensive repairs in the future, Young said.

Seal coating is a process used to prevent moisture penetration and thereby protecting the road surface from weathering.

Engineers usually seal coat a project within one or two years of its completion, Young said. Once deterioration begins, the street would require patching and resurfacing, something that would cost about four times more than seal coating, he said. "I think after the third or fourth year, in this particular part of the country, I would say you're getting into a dangerous situation. You start seeing situations developing that aren't sealable."

Projects at Shoshone Street and both Second Avenue are about two years old. Work at West Five Points and Addison Avenue was completed last year.

RUPERT — Elsie Mae Clark, 84, of Rupert, died Thursday at the Mindoka Memorial Hospital.
She was born Aug. 5, 1895, at Stillwell, Okla., and attended school there before moving to Tulsa, where she received her nurse's training at Morningglade Hospital. She married Earl Guy Clark in 1922, at Tulsa. She lived at Baxter Springs, Kan., then moved to Idaho Falls, where she was employed by the Riverside Hospital. She moved to Rupert in 1962, and had resided here since. She was employed by the Mindoka Memorial Hospital and was a member of the National Nurses Association, and the Christian Church. Survivors include a daughter, Mrs. William (Mary Frances) Creason of Rupert; two grandchildren; two great-grandchildren; and a brother, Clifford Leon Foster of Seneca, Mo. She was preceded in death by her husband, four brothers and five sisters. Graveside services will be held on Saturday in the Rose Hill Cemetery at Idaho Falls with the Rev. Walter J. Mitchell officiating. Arrangements are under direction of Hansen Mortuary of Rupert.

Larry, an 11-month-old, 160-pound tiger, went for a stroll with owners Doug and Rick Fees in Denver one afternoon earlier this week. The walk caused at least one passerby to take a second look. Larry's handlers run Rocky Mountain Studio Animals in Evergreen, Colo., outside of Denver and made the trek so the tiger could "get used to people."

Sunshine files unfair labor suit

BOISE (UPI) — Sunshine Mine Co. Thursday filed an unfair labor practices complaint with the National Labor Relations Board in Seattle, alleging the Kellogg mine workers union has not bargained in good faith. Members of Local Union 5089 of the United Steelworkers have been on strike at the mine for nearly five weeks. E. Viet Howard, executive vice president of the company, said Thursday in a telephone interview, the complaint was filed because union members have consistently appeared at contract negotiations to "rehash" previous strike demands and have "repudiated certain items, which had been jointly agreed and signed off on."

Howard said the union has failed to "get down to substantive issues." "The continued restatement of their original position and the continuing addition of new items is not very substantive," Howard said. Howard said he was not sure why the union was striking. "That is precisely our problem," he said. "We have never been able to get the bargaining committee to define what they feel is important, what the strike is about. We feel this has been a strike in search of an issue for quite some time." But union president Rick Jacobs of Pinchurst charged that Howard did not know why the union was striking because he did not attend negotiations.

"If he (Howard) wants to understand why we're striking, he should come to the negotiations and sit in on them," Jacobs said. Jacobs said the company has not given the union "any indication" it wants to settle the strike. "Ever since we've started, they haven't been doing anything," Jacobs said. "We've brought our demands down considerably and they still haven't answered any of them." "Yesterday, (Wednesday) we gave them our demands again. We did all the talking — they didn't say much of anything. They haven't given us any indication they want to settle the strike yet."

Coin collector satisfies dream by buying penny worth $50,000

YAKIMA, Wash. (UPI) — Ron Chott stood behind the counter nonchalantly flipping a $50,000 penny into the air. "There are only five other places in the world a coin like this could be," he said. "And that's neat." Chott owns a 1943 S copper penny, one of half a dozen mistakenly stamped at the federal mint in San Francisco during World War II. Buying the coin was a once in a lifetime adventure, said Chott, owner of Ross's Coin and Stamp Center. Like so many children in the '50s, Chott was smitten with those comic book ads that claimed in deep red ink: "We'll pay you $15,000 for this Lincoln penny." "I went through jobs of pennies in search of that coin," he said. "Well, Ho, ho, this is it." Chott first came across the coin at a show in Las Vegas in March and when it showed up again in Tacoma, the temptation was too great. "I couldn't control myself," he admits. "I just wanted one. I have since I was 10-years old." "The price he paid remains a secret." "I got a reasonable deal," he says. "I probably had more money than sense, but I've always wanted this one." But now that he's got it, it is for sale — to anyone with $50,000. "I've wanted one all my life, now that I own it, I can sell it," Chott said. "I don't really want to see it go, but in my business I can't keep everything I want to keep," he said, slipping the penny back into its plastic case. "But, isn't it neat? Isn't it cool?"

Northwest natural gas rates highest in nation

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Idaho Sen. James McClure said Thursday natural gas consumers in the Pacific Northwest are paying the highest prices in the nation, while potential discoveries in the Overthrust Belt may be shipped east. The Overthrust Belt is located in Idaho, Montana and Wyoming. During hearings of the Senate Energy Committee and in a letter to members of the Pacific Northwest's congressional delegation, McClure said he fears current government policies will: —Force Pacific Northwest natural gas consumers to continue to rely on Canadian supplies, which is the highest price natural gas sold to U.S. consumers. —Force many industrial users to switch from high-priced natural gas to lower-cost residual fuel oil, adding to U.S. foreign oil dependence. —Force residential and industrial consumers to use cheaper electrical energy for space heating, adding to electrical shortages. McClure said he is further concerned because three applications for construction on natural gas pipelines indicate the lines would transport gas from the Overthrust Belt to the Midwest. "It would be tragic if Idaho, Washington and Oregon consumers are forced to pay the extremely high prices for Canadian natural gas, when lower priced domestic gas from the Overthrust Belt, in our own backyard, will be sent east," McClure said.

Evans loses support, critic says

BOISE (UPI) — Gov. John Evans lost much of his political support as a result of the way he handled the selection of Idaho's delegates to the White House Conference on Families, a critic of the conference said Thursday. "Governor Evans has offended and ostracized a great degree of his supporters," said Buddy Hoffman, pastor of the Treasure Valley Baptist Church and a co-leader of an effort to thwart Idaho's participation in the conference. Hoffman said Evans and his staff "mismanaged" the process, through which he selected Idaho's 12 delegates. Evans has not yet named his choices for the conference, which will take place this summer at Las Angeles. The pastor said at an Idaho Press Club luncheon that the pressure his "pro-family" coalition put on Evans forced the governor to appoint an advisory committee to make recommendations for the delegate selection. "I was a good move, but it was not enough," Hoffman said, adding that the chances of Idaho boycotting the conference as he and his allies had advocated were "zero."

EPA favors drilling monitor wells

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency has endorsed the drilling of about 15 additional monitoring wells at the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory, said Sen. James McClure Thursday. "Recent announcements from the Department of Energy indicate that current funds will be re-allocated to begin the well drilling program immediately," McClure said.

The Idaho Republican said he was ready to request an additional $600,000 appropriation for the wells and related monitoring activity, but that additional funding may not be necessary. "There is no immediate danger to public safety or health from present practices at INEL," McClure said. "However, I am committed to stopping the injection of long-lived radioactive wastes into the aquifer."

Environmental damage from heavy coal use is feared

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — Heavy reliance on coal to solve the U.S. energy crisis could damage the climate of the entire world, says the chairman of the U.S. Council on Environmental Quality.

Gus Speth said Thursday that when coal burns it spews carbon dioxide into the atmosphere. "And he said many scientists are convinced that a sizeable increase in atmospheric carbon dioxide levels will raise temperatures throughout the world, drastically changing the Earth's climate and damaging crops and farm land."

"Wind direction and speed, ocean currents and precipitation patterns could be altered," Speth told a conference on energy and public lands.

"Farming regions might warm up, dry out and become less productive. Dust bowls could rise due to the melting of polar ice, possible flooding coastal areas where millions of people now live."

Carbon dioxide in the atmosphere acts like the glass in a greenhouse — preventing accumulated solar heat from dissipating.

Speth said the higher temperature increase resulting from the additional solar heat trapped by increased carbon dioxide in the atmosphere "would take the world's climate outside the range that has prevailed for the last several hundred thousand years — a change which could have very serious consequences for the world's environment and economy."

In addition, pollutants released by burned coal could trigger "acid rains" throughout the world, said Speth.

Other energy alternatives, such as production of synthetic fuels from oil shale and tar sands and increased nuclear power, also have serious environmental drawbacks, he said. Speth called for the use of all available energy sources while at the same time emphasizing energy conservation in order to lessen environmental damage caused by each power source.

He also said converting coal to synthetic fuels, such as methane to replace natural gas, and extracting petroleum from oil shale to produce other "synthetic" fuels could have a serious impact on the environment of western states.

Increased coal mining and development of oil shale resources are currently popular ideas in Utah and other states with large deposits. But among the drawbacks to a massive coal and oil shale development outlined by Speth were:

—About 500 square miles of coal-rich land in the west could be strip mined over the next 30 years. And an additional 200 square miles of land could be required for mining oil shale and disposing of spent shale and other wastes.

About 245,000 acre-feet of water per year could be needed for mining coal and shale, for providing hydrogen for coal conversion and oil shale reaction processes, and for a variety of other purposes. He said the synthetic-fuel industry could use enough water to irrigate about 100,000 acres of agricultural land each year. —Synthetic fuel plants would discharge such pollutants as trace metals and hydrocarbons into the atmosphere, while wastes from mines and plants could taint nearby water with dangerous chemicals. Speth said some of the pollutants produced by synthetic fuel plants would be deadly to fish, plants and animals, and some are suspected of causing cancer in humans.

Speth said the major drawback of nuclear power — the risk of radioactive contamination of the environment — was made obvious to everyone by the accident at the Three Mile Island plant in Harrisburg, Penn.

"For the nuclear industry, nothing will be the same after Three Mile Island," he said. "Above all, the Harrisburg incident demonstrated that serious nuclear accidents can happen, and that we did not do enough in the past to prevent or prepare to cope with them."

However, Speth said a "low-growth" energy program, which would emphasize conservation, would lessen the environmental impact of energy production while not seriously affecting the American standard of living.

"One recent study estimated that conservation policies over the next two decades could lower energy demand in the year 2000 by 22 percent with a loss of only 4 percent in the projected gross national product for that year," he said. "Despite this small loss, the gross national product would still almost double between 1977 and 2000."

"In short, increasing reliance on energy conservation and enhanced energy productivity makes sense, because it provides the most energy at the least cost — economically, environmentally, and socially," Speth said.

Hydrogen causes leaks to containers

TUCSON (UPI) — Radioactive tritium is leaking from 55-gallon drums stored at an Army depot near Flagstaff because hydrogen is deteriorating the container seals, according to a state Atomic Energy Commission official.

Darrell Warren, AEC health physicist, said tritium leakage from the bunker is minute, registering only slightly over background levels.

"Tritium is hydrogen and hydrogen makes the seals brittle," he said.

The storage drums are not approved containers for radioactive materials and are leaking the radioactive gas, he said.

Guards who stand duty less than 20 feet from the bunker's fence have shown no traces of radiation in urine samples, Warren said in an interview published Thursday by The Arizona Daily Wildcat, the student-operated newspaper at the University of Arizona.

The radioactive inventory, valued at $451,000 and including some 430,000 grams of tritium, was stolen by the state last fall from Tucson's now-closed American Atomic Corp. plant. Gov. Bruce Babbitt ordered the seizure after laboratory tests revealed excessive levels of tritium radiation in food, water and water samples taken from the neighborhood around the plant.

Navy guardsmen conveyed the tritium to the Navajo Ordnance Depot 12 miles west of Flagstaff for temporary storage. But the tritium gas remained in storage for the past 6 months.

The storage drums were envisioned as temporary containers and the seals only were engineered to last three to four months, Warren said.

"It turned out to be a long, drawn-out affair," he said, adding the state still has not decided on ultimate disposition of the tritium.

Warren said Babbitt had considered having the tritium reprocessed, but federal experts determined the plan was impractical.

Although most of American Atomic's tritium was shipped to the Army depot, some remained behind and was locked in the plant's machinery. But Feb. 5 the last of the tritium was extracted from the equipment and was shipped to a U.S. Department of Energy facility at Oak Ridge, Tenn.

American Atomic used tritium in the manufacture of glow-in-the-dark signs and luminous watch faces. The company entered federal bankruptcy proceedings after Babbitt ordered the inventory seizure.

Warren said the company currently lacks sufficient money for a speedy decontamination of its plant site, less than two miles east of downtown Tucson.

Warren, who had been responsible for overseeing the removal of 550,000 curies of tritium from the plant, said decontamination is going "very, very slowly."

"All areas of the plant must be washed or scraped to remove all traces of the hydrogen isotope from the building, he said.

Wyoming rail line draws opposition

TORRINGTON, Wyo. (UPI) — A spokesman for Union Pacific, which has loaned $60 million to another railroad-to-revive-plans-for-a-controversial connection line through southern Wyoming, said landowner opposition to the project is the result of poor communication.

Ed Senebaugh of Cheyenne, in a recent address to the Torrington Chamber of Commerce, said he was currently on a "fact-finding tour" to visit towns and landowners affected by the proposed connector line.

The new route is planned by the Chicago and North Western Railroad and has been bitterly opposed by the Wyoming Landowners Association. Gov. Ed Herscher has also said he does not favor the project.

The Interstate Commerce Commission has scheduled the first of two public hearings on the new line for May 13 in Torrington.

Senebaugh acknowledged that CNW had perhaps gotten off to a bad start in its relationship with southeast Wyoming residents.

"We hope to try to salvage that," he told the businessmen.

Latest Wave Of Smoker Research:

High Tars Taking Back Seat To Merit.

Smokers acclaim low tar MERIT as taste alternative to high tar brands.

MERIT: Proven Long Term Alternative To High Tar Brands.

New national smoker study results prove it.

Proof: The overwhelming majority of MERIT smokers polled feel they didn't sacrifice taste in switching from high tar cigarettes.

Proof: 96% of MERIT smokers don't miss former high tar brands.

Proof: 9 out of 10 enjoy smoking as much since switching to MERIT, are glad they switched, and report MERIT is the best tasting low tar they've ever tried.

Smokers Prefer MERIT 3 To 1!

New taste tests with thousands of smokers prove it.

Proof: A significant majority

Kings: 8 mg "tar," 0.6 mg nicotine—100's Reg: 10 mg "tar," 0.7 mg nicotine—100's Men: 11 mg "tar," 0.8 mg nicotine av. per cigarette, FTC Report Dec. 79 of smokers rate MERIT taste as good as—or better than—leading high tar brands. Even cigarettes having twice the tar!

Warning: The Surgeon General Has Determined That Cigarette Smoking Is Dangerous to Your Health.

Proof: Of the 95% stating a preference, 3 out of 4 smokers chose the MERIT low tar/good taste combination over high tar leaders when tar levels were revealed.

You've read the results. The conclusion is clearer than ever: MERIT delivers a winning combination of taste and low tar.

A combination that's attracting more and more smokers every day and—more importantly—satisfying them long term.

Special Events

Twin Falls

"Potpourri," billed as a "night of entertainment," will be presented tonight at 8 p.m. at O'Leary Junior High School auditorium.

The show includes scenes from plays, musical numbers and the one-act play "The Hanging of Abern Martin" and is being presented by the Twin Falls High School drama department.

Tickets are $2 at the door.

The Single-lites will hold a dance Saturday night at the DAV Hall from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. Music by Floyd White's Band. All single and married people are welcome.

Filer

The Old Time Fiddler's Jamboree will be held Saturday at the Filer High School auditorium.

All proceeds will go to the Ma Tre Val Camp Fire Youth. Tickets are $2, those under 12 will be admitted free.

Tickets may be purchased at Sav-Mor Drug, Camp Fire Office and Day's Monogram Shop, all in Twin Falls; Senior Citizens' centers in Jerome and Twin Falls; and from Camp Fire leaders and members in Burley, Jerome, Filer, Buhl and Gooding.

Boise

The Boise Philharmonic, under the direction of Daniel Stern, will present its final concerts of the 1979-80 season Monday and Tuesday at the Capital High School auditorium.

Erick Friedman, violinist, will be guest soloist. Friedman has studied with Jascha Heifetz, with whom he recorded the Bach "Doubts-Wolin-Concerto." He concertizes world-wide each season. Last December he performed in a sonata recital in New York's Carnegie Hall.

End-of-the-season concerts are traditionally celebrated as "Carnation Nights" and mark the opening of the Philharmonic's annual season-ticket campaign. Tables will be set up in the lobby and volunteers will be taking orders for the 1980-81 season. Only season-ticket holders will be eligible to purchase tickets for the Itzhak Perlman recital in April, 1981.

Concert times are 7:30 p.m. Monday and 8:15 p.m. Tuesday. Single tickets are available at the box office on concert nights or by calling the Philharmonic office, 944-7849. Ticket prices range from $4 to $6 with special discounts available for senior citizens and students.

'The Wiz' kicks off

Diana Ross stars in Universal's glittering musical movie 'The Wiz,' which begins SHOWTIME's April Preview offering this Saturday and Sunday. SHOWTIME offers two full days of free programming to basic cable subscribers, including 'Heaven Can Wait,' 'All the President's Men,' 'Hooper,' 'Oliver's Story,' James Taylor in Concert,' 'The Ben Vereen Show,' and SHOWTIME's award-winning 'Spice on Ice' revue.

Bonnie Henson's art exhibited in Twin Falls

TWIN FALLS — The watercolors and oils of Bonnie Henson are on display at First Security Bank of Idaho's downtown office through April.

The artist will meet the public during an open house reception to be held at the bank April 25 from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Mrs. Henson began drawing as a child in Nebraska, using weathered wood from the family woodpile and rocks as her canvases. Her family couldn't afford art lessons, so she taught herself.

Raised near a Sioux Indian reservation and a game preserve, she began depicting the Indians, wildlife and landscapes around her. Today these themes of Western art are still major in her work.

She moved to Twin Falls in 1957 and since then has painted the Nez Perce, Pend d'Oreille, Navajo, Cree and Blood Indians. The U.S. Department of the Interior has recognized her as being one of the outstanding Indian artists in America. Beside having her autobiography on file, she also obtained a photographic collection of her Indian paintings because of her attention to correct details of traditional dress and customs.

Her Western art also includes cowboys. In 1966 she was commissioned to paint the Kid Curry Montana $10,000 train robbery of the Great Northern No. 3 near Wagner, Mont., on July 3, 1901. Her portrayal in oils has been reproduced as a colored postcard and has proven to be a bestseller.

Mrs. Henson continued working as an artist in Ketchum from 1968 to 1972. She has lived in Twin Falls since 1972. Her current interests lean toward watercolors and wildlife, which predominate in her exhibit at the bank.

"It's been a while since I've shown my work in Twin Falls. I'm hoping to see old friends and make new ones at the reception," the artist said.

This untitled watercolor study of three bunnies is among paintings on display through April

Arthur Miller play at Spoleto U.S.A.

CHARLESTON, S.C. (UPI) — The world premiere of a play by Arthur Miller will be one of the highlights of the 12-day Spoleto Festival USA which opens here May 25.

Miller's "The American Clock," which is set in the 1930s, will be produced by the Harold Clurman Theater of New York under the direction of Jack Gorkin. It is the prize-winning playwright's first play since his 1972 "The Creation of the World."

A Japanese play, "Directions to Servants," a multimedia extravaganza by Shuji Terayama, also will be given its American premiere.

The sprawling festival, which features over 100 events for audiences of all ages, will also feature the U.S. premiere of "Clips and His Dog," a short opera written by Gian Carlo Menotti for the Canadian Opera Company's children's chorus. Other opera offerings will be a two-act Bizet work, "Le Docteur Miracle," of Fenbach's "Monsieur Fleur," Conrad Susa's "Transformations," and Bellini's "La Sonnambula," starring the Metropolitan Opera's Gianni Roldani.

Dance attractions will include Alexander Godunov, the Soviet defector, in two dance galas, the Alvin Nikolais Dance Theater, Joyce Trisler's Dancecompany, and the Maria Goulez-Estampa Flamenco. The Spoleto Festival Orchestra and the Westminster Choir will perform the Verdi Requiem, and chamber music concerts will be directed by flutist Paula Robinson and violinist Scott Nickrenz.

Buhl student publishes in BSU 'the cold-drill'

BUHL — Sally Thomas of Buhl will be featured in the 1979-80 edition of Boise State University's literary magazine "the cold-drill."

Thomas is the author of three works published in this year's BSU student-magazine. Included is her short story, "In the Beginning"; a poem, "From Idaho With Love," and an untitled emblem poem written in an ancient style that uses pictures.

Her poem, "From Idaho With Love," is found in a special section of poems written by Idahoans about Idaho and printed on handmade paper that contains potato and syringa fiber.

It was also Thomas' idea to use the graphic reproduction of a specialized Idaho license plate "CID DRL" as the magazine cover.

A senior English major at BSU, Thomas is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gene Thomas of Piler. She graduated from Buhl High School in 1956.

The 1977-78 edition of "the cold-drill" won first place in a national competition sponsored by the Coordinating Council of Literary Magazines in New York City and last year's edition was awarded a gold medal by the Columbia Scholastic Press Association, Columbia University, New York City. It is published annually by the BSU English Department and printed by the BSU Printing and Graphics Center.

The 1979-80 edition of "the cold-drill" is now on sale at the BSU bookstore for $3, with special editions that include the Idaho poems selling for $5.

CSI student learns

Directing: only for the jack-of-all-arts

By SHELLY KINZEL
Times-News writer

Acting is undoubtedly a challenging endeavor, but it is relatively simple when compared with the multi-faceted task of directing.

The director of any production must have knowledge of acting technique, staging, set design, costuming, lighting and make-up. Moreover, he must be able to combine all of these aspects into a unified conception of another person's work. If this were not difficult enough, the director must also contend with the personalities and sometimes delicate egos of actors, technical directors and countless crew members.

This is no easy job, yet the experience is extremely rewarding. No one would agree more than Laine Steel, a graduate of the College of Southern Idaho, who is now studying the art of directing. His goal is to direct productions for children and to teach at the university level.

Although Steel graduated from CSI with an associate of arts degree in music, he became very involved with many of the theatrical productions presented by the drama department. These experiences and a year at Brigham Young University inspired him to change his major and specialize in children's theater. While at BYU, he took several directing courses and directed some 25 productions. Now back at CSI to catch up on some drama courses, he is continuing to build his directing expertise.

Currently, Steel is directing a portion of the CSI drama department's final spring production. Entitled "A Laughing Matter," the presentation is, according to Steel, "a potpourri of humor," a collection of campus and domestic humor taken from writers such as Jean Kerr, James Thurber, Richard Armour, Erma Bombeck and many other satirists. This Readers' Theater production, compiled by Fran Tanner, CSI professor of speech and drama, will be performed on April 24-26 at 8:15 p.m. in Theater 119 of the Fine Arts Center.

"Steel is directing the campus humor section appropriately titled 'Campus Candids.'"

"I am particularly appreciative," he said, "that Mrs. Tanner has given me the opportunity to take over and run this section of the show as I feel it should be. She gives me a lot of good suggestions without being directive, which is really valuable."

Collaborating is obviously more difficult than running the show yourself. There are bound to be differences in opinion and styles of directing. Steel admits that directing is definitely a statement of one's personality and that two people working together do not always agree on what is valid. The important thing is mutual respect and open discussion. Tanner agrees completely. "If something isn't working, we discuss why she said, 'and if something is effective, we also discuss why so that we can reinforce it.'"

Despite occasional differences, "I've really enjoyed working with these particular students, and I've especially enjoyed the freedoms which Mrs. Tanner has allowed me. We learn by our mistakes, and she's allowing me to make those mistakes." Of course, in the theater, the proof is in the pudding, and the audience is the final judge.

both Tanner and Steel are reaping the benefits of working together. As an educator, Tanner feels that it is important for drama students to direct. "They need to develop an audience's eye and ear." Several times this year, students in her Reader's theater class were given the opportunity. Teresa Jones and Steve Brophy directed productions which were then toured to local grade schools. "Theater is such an amalgam of the arts," Tanner affirmed, "that you have to experience each aspect in order to focus on your speciality."

Steel believes that working closely with an experienced director has been an excellent way to observe different techniques. He is already beginning to develop his own style. "I try to allow actors as much creative freedom as possible, to act as their outside eye, so that they can see what they're doing." His purpose is to achieve ensemble playing by making the actors feel that each one is an integral part of the show. Directors, as well as educators, he feels, should always be open to suggestion.

Right now, Steel is putting the finishing touches on his section. "I've really enjoyed working with these particular students, and I've especially enjoyed the freedoms which Mrs. Tanner has allowed me. We learn by our mistakes, and she's allowing me to make those mistakes." Of course, in the theater, the proof is in the pudding, and the audience is the final judge.

Baryshnikov lives his Broadway fantasy, on TV

By BOB MICKLIN

On Tuesday

Ever since he was a boy in his native Riga, Latvia, Mikhail Baryshnikov has been enthralled by American movies.

He'd stand in line to see Hollywood films, contacted by the Russians after World War II, films that the Nazis had collected for their own entertainment.

Now, at 32, the superstar ballet dancer has finally gotten the chance to display his prowess in show-biz, American style. The vehicle is an hour-long TV special to be broadcast Thursday night on ABC.

It's called "IBM Presents Baryshnikov on Broadway," and it's a colorful, snappy salute to some of the most famous Broadway musicals of the last 40 years. Of course, Baryshnikov has already made his American movie debut in "The Turning Point," carrying an Academy Award nomination in a film that traced a vague line between soap opera and glimpses of the supposedly "real" dance world. But "Baryshnikov on Broadway" is less pretentious and far more satisfying.

The TV show presents him in bits and pieces culled and adapted from such Broadway hits as "Oklahoma!" "The King and I," "Kiss Me, Kate," "Where's Charley?," "Ain't Misbehavin'," "Fiddler on the Roof," "The Boy Friend," "Guys and Dolls" and "A Chorus Line," among others.

Although he dances, sings and even plays some piano, he doesn't carry the entire show alone. As he moves from ballet to Broadway, from jete lepis to jazz dance, he has the considerable assistance of Liza Minnelli, Neil Carter (of "Ain't Misbehavin'") and the national company of "A Chorus Line."

During a recent interview in his apartment on Manhattan's upper Park Avenue, Baryshnikov said that his working introduction to contemporary dance came from choreographer Twyla Tharp, who made "Push Comes to Shove" and "Once More Frank" for him.

"Twyla was the first serious experience at jazz dance for me," he said. "Her work is a reflection of jazz, black dance and Broadway. Her style crystallized all these things, the twist of the body and the rhythms. Then worked with Alvin Alley on his 'Pas de Duke,' with Judith Jamison. Jazz dancing is a different approach from ballet—the exercises, the training. You should really be born to have that natural twist in your body."

The TV special, he added, came about through conversations with Minnelli, his good friend. "We've gone to many shows together," he said, "and we've talked about what's good, what's bad, how and why certain dances are made for Broadway. She's a wonderful dancer—could be even better if that was her career. She finally said, 'Don't ask so many questions. Try it yourself.' So, I did."

The basic concept of this show is to exhibit both Baryshnikov's virtuosity and versatility. The program opens at night with Minnelli walking alone down Schubert Alley in the heart of the theater district. As the camera captures her, first above, we also see Baryshnikov, in practice clothes, rehearsing ballet steps in the sleek, glass-walled dance studio of the Minskoff Theater.

"She enters the studio, and the two friends chat about their show-biz ambitions. She's brought him coffee and a hot pastrami sandwich. 'Russian dressing?'" he asks.

"What else?" she replies. The "innuendo" scenes slip into a fantasy as they magically step through a mirror to enter a world of misty theatricality—and fast-moving production numbers. These were taped last January on Los Angeles sound stages.

As a result, the program often has the look of a bright Hollywood musical from the 1940s or '50s. Crisp editing techniques nostalgically recall the dream-sequence routines of those films, complete with studio orchestras that mysteriously start playing from apparently nowhere.

Baryshnikov loved the effects. "In Latvia, and later when I was with the Kirov Ballet in Leningrad, we had to see the MGM musicals with Gene Kelly," he said. "But you would be surprised. I was also seeing Garbo, Chaplin and Tarzan movies. Fred Astaire was my hero, absolutely yes, but the funny way, I knew about James Cagney and Chaplin before I knew of Astaire."

Since he defected to the West in 1974—the former Kirov star has become close friends with Cagney. Although often thought of as the quintessential movie tough guy, Cagney was also a superb song-and-dance man. "Astaire had an impossible perfection," Baryshnikov said. "He was untouchable. But Cagney was so real that you wanted to identify yourself with him, to imitate him."

Which is precisely what Baryshnikov does in one of the longer segments of the show—a collage of numbers from "Guys and Dolls." Wearing a city-slicker and pin-striped suit, sporting a snap-brim fedora, he puts a definite Cagney imprint on the Sky Masterson role. His dancing is natty and cool, and there's a fine and funny scene in a Havana nightclub, which he dances with a talented and pretty girl named Ravah Daley.

The "Guys and Dolls" montage exemplifies the approach that Baryshnikov and Field has taken to all the exercises. Each number has been totally re-choreographed, and in most cases Field has set his dances to music that was not used for dance numbers in the original shows. The choreography is in the style of the shows," Baryshnikov explained, "but can you imagine if you tried to actually recreate so many shows? It would be impossible, time-wise. We have done a fantasy about those shows."

In the style of "Where's Charley?," Baryshnikov pays tribute to Ray Bolger's "Once-in-Love-With-My" dance. From "The Boy Friend," he and Minnelli romp through a bit called "Charleston." They team up in "Big Spender," "I'm So Glad," and again in a production number called "Show Stoppers," composed for them by John Kander and Fred Ebb, who wrote "Cabaret." Ebb also wrote the script for the TV show.

Minnelli sings "It's Its Music That Makes Me Dance," and there's a nifty shot of Baryshnikov seated at a piano, chin in hand, simply watching her work. His own singing will never win any voice awards, but he has a pleasant baritone and a good feeling for music that he reveals in a saucy duet with Neil Carter on the "Fais Watter Lunc." Honeyuckle Rose." Later, he and Minnelli spar in a four-minute, high-energy number from "Kiss Me, Kate" called "Too Darn Hot." The peripatetic Liza gets to show off her long legs in this one.

Last—but well, almost last—comes the "One" routine from "A Chorus Line," Baryshnikov joining the strutting dancers from that show in Michael Bennett's high-stepping finale. He kicks like a veteran chorus boy, and the gold costumes, the mirrored backdrop and colored lights are classic Broadway stuff.

Yet the true finale is just as effective in its own, modest way. Minnelli and Baryshnikov are back in Manhattan, strolling down Schubert Alley while he casually sings "Give My Regards to Broadway." It's a neat take-away, especially because it was James Cagney who did that number in "Yankee Doodle Dandy," the movie biography of the late George M. Cohan.

American films, which he watched as a child in Russia, introduced Baryshnikov to the thrills of Broadway dancing. Here he dances a la James Cagney, one of his heroes, with guest star Liza Minnelli, on the ABC-TV special "IBM Presents Baryshnikov on Broadway."

Drama in education stressed by theater congress

TWIN FALLS — "Theater process is as important as theater product (a play)," said Fran Tanner, describing one of the resolutions passed by the International Amateur Theater Association.

Tanner recently returned from the association's fourth annual international congress held this year in Villach, Austria, April 7-12. Focus of the convention was on drama in education and the training of drama teachers.

"Theater as process can be used in schools with all age groups. Here in the U.S., we'd call it creative dramatics. Drama as process helps strengthen imagination, observation and concentration, as well as socialization," Tanner explained.

Attending were delegates from 19 countries, including Hungary, Yugoslavia, Czechoslovakia, and Poland. They also passed a resolution reinforcing the importance of drama in education, no matter what the political or economic pressures.

Held in a fine arts center with the Alps as a backdrop, the congress was conducted in English and German simultaneously. Special booths housed interpreters trained in theater jargon. Those unable to understand the language, in use simply put on a battery-operated headset for the translation, Tanner said.

The group worked together as a whole and in small groups. Model theater workshops were presented by Germany, the Netherlands, Great Britain and the U.S. Three extra workshops were given to amplify the experience of the 45 Austrian delegates. To her surprise, Tanner was invited to do a workshop. She chose improvisational theater and theater games, a "rather new technique," she added.

Tanner cites Britain as world leader in using drama in education, with the idea of working with values to explore the idea of values. She said they emphasize that role conflict should be understood and practiced in relation to the social context. Because exploration of issues and creation of meaning is stressed, drama in Great Britain is interdependent study.

Ironically for a country with such a brilliant theater tradition, only a few years ago Cambridge University offered drama studies only as an extracurricular activity. Now Cambridge confers a drama degree, which Tanner said is "a step in the right direction."

Formal resolutions will be issued by the international group soon. Each country has a job to do using the information gained in the best way possible — be it bringing it before boards of education and curriculum planners or publishing it in theater/education journals.

Although she has not made specific plans for sharing her experiences, Tanner hopes to encourage regional education conferences to refocus the importance of drama in the schools.

DEBBIE HARRY
... they need glasses

Q: When will All MacGraw marry husband No. 4, that young actor Peter Weller who was with Ali in the movie "Just Tell Me What You Want!"? — S.W. of Chicago.

A: Friends doubt that All and Peter will ever get married. The way the relationship is right now suits her fine. Peter visits her in California from time to time. And right now she's in New York seeing him. The truth is that Steve McQueen was really the love of her life and she still hasn't gotten over the divorce and subsequent re-marrriage to model Barbara Minty.

Q: We read that Mary Martin hasn't ever seen Sandy Ducean's Broadway musical, "Peter Pan."

A: Unfair. Mary, who now lives in California and who starred as "Peter Pan" in 1954, visits New York infrequently nowadays and hasn't yet had the opportunity to catch Sandy's version. When the show opened, Mary did phone Sandy to wish her well and tell her that she has every intention of seeing her performance... It's as simple as that.

Q: I was so surprised to hear some of the foul language coming out of Natalie Wood's mouth in her new movie, "The Last Married Couple in America." Couldn't she have toned down some of her rough lines? — U.M. of Louisville.

A: Natalie felt the rough talk was totally in character for her part as the wife of maritally itchy George Segal. Critics apparently agree since Natalie's performance has been highly praised even though the movie as a whole hasn't. Besides, Natalie personally wasn't affronted by her lines, and even brought her mother to the adult Hollywood screening of the adult comedy before it opened.

Q: We were so impressed with Richard Gere's performance in the movie "American Gigolo," we found ourselves completely taken aback by the reviews. How did Richard react to the film critics' criticisms? — B.O.C. of Denver.

A: He was reportedly upset by the reviews. The star-instructed his publicists to cancel several already-scheduled press-interviews because he didn't want to have to defend the film, while curtailing others to a brief half-hour. In a few instances, Gere pleaded the flu — though he did continue to go on nightly in his Broadway stage play "Rent."

Q: Now that she's married to U.S. Sen. John Warner, hasn't Elizabeth Taylor pretty much given up on her film career? Do you think she'll ever make another movie? — B.K. of Scarsdale, N.Y.

A: Later this month Liz will begin filming "The Mirror Crack'd," an Agatha Crispy mystery with Angela Lansbury as Miss Marple. Liz' last films were "A Little Night Music," and "Winter Kills." We heard that inactivity was getting to Liz so she was quick to get back into action.

TRUTHFUL ADAGE: As they say, it takes money to make money. The famed Pan Am building in Manhattan is being put up for sale for $20 million. That's not too surprising. What's intriguing is that the small-offering brochure used by the realtors is costing $30,000 although only 100 copies are being printed and only 25 will ever be distributed. That's $3,200 per copy.

TWO-WAY BARGAIN. Among other things, Mick Jagger is known for watching his dollars and here's an example: He walked into a luggage shop in Manhattan, and asked to be shown an inexpensive fiberboard suitcase. After scanning the merchandise and finally selecting the one he wanted, Mick asked the young clerk, "Any possibility of giving me a little break on the price?" The startled fellow looked Jagger squarely in the eye and replied "Sure, Mick — if you let me have your autograph!" Mick smiled, "It's a deal."

MICK JAGGER
... traded his name

Q: I like Debbie Harry of the Blondie rock group but was surprised to hear that she's being compared to Marilyn Monroe and Jayne Mansfield. Does she take all that talk seriously? — H.J. of Saddle Brook, N.J.

A: Debbie is indeed a looker. She's a bit shorter than either Marilyn or Jayne, but in many sophisticated eyes — including those of photographer Richard Avedon — a facial resemblance is there. Debbie takes such talk with customary good humor. She thinks those who make the comparisons are either crazy or need glasses, or both.

Q: Marilyn Sheen is undoubtedly a talented actor, yet he comes through as a rather cold personality. Is he this remote off-camera? — A.S. of Seattle.

A: This "should" change your perception of Sheen. While seated in a great room waiting to be interviewed for a "Good Morning, America" segment, the actor watched Ralph Heard, an extremely brave 11-year-old Atlanta kid tell the audience how he'd been severely burned while rescuing his mother from a fire. Later, when Sheen received a $450 check for his appearance, he phoned the "Good Morning, America" staff, instructing them that the money be quietly turned over to the young hero, with the clear understanding that there was to be no fanfare whatever for his private gesture.

Q: It seems every Jane Fonda film these days has a message. Is this something Jane does deliberately when she's selecting scripts? — H.V. of Nashville.

A: Definitely. With her enormous clout in Hollywood, Jane has a say and right now is insisting on serious subjects. Her current movie is "Nine to Five," about the lives of three secretaries (Lily Tomlin and Dolly Parton are the other two), reflecting Jane's interest in the growing work force of women. Her next film, as yet untitled, is expected to be set in a minimum-security prison with Jane portraying a divorced woman caught up in prison reform. And this summer Jane will start filming "On Golden Pond" with father Henry and Katharine Hepburn.

TRY IT AGAIN, Joe: That acclaimed TV commercial with "Mean Joe Greene" of the Pittsburgh Steelers promoting the soft drink looks like it was turned out quickly. Right? Wrong. Joe is not an actor. Actual production time for the commercial was 12 hours and 125 takes at a cost of more than $100,000. That's a lot of

Marcel Marceau doffs whiteface to speak of art

By SYLVIE DRAKE
©The Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES — Marcel Marceau stood in the middle of his hotel suite, a study in brown, in white, suit, shirt open at the collar, slightly disheveled brown hair, astonished brown eyes.

"Size has nothing to do with it," he said, talking about the various theaters where he was scheduled to appear as the familiar Bip, in white face, black hair, and a simple red flower. "I've seen Bogviva play guitar in very large halls, but the greatness of the sound comes from intensity, not loudness. It's the same with mime. We deal with space. We sculpture space. Look at the ground I covered — from the Theatre de Poche to tiny Paris theater where Marceau began practicing mime) to the Champs Elysees to the Sarah Bernhardt. My art grew with the size of the theater. Intimacy has nothing to do with it."

The French master of silence spoke in a tumble of articulate English words brushed with French accent and occasionally punctuated by French phrases. The rainy Tuesday afternoon encouraged reminiscence. Marceau recalled his first American tour (1955), the artists he met, the friendships he made — with Harpo Marx ("he took me to his house and played harp for two hours") and Stan Laurel ("he wasn't bitter even when he was broke, we would chat like good English middle-class friends over tea or coffee"), and the Hollywood greats like Charles Laughton, Ginger Rogers and Fred Astaire who saw to it that his presence would not go unnoticed.

"I was invited to do 30 minutes on my own on (Maureen) Chevalier's show in 1955 and won my first Emmy in 1958 I saw my second big tour of the United States and played colleges for the first time. And in 1961 I met (Carl) Sandburg. He was 86, bent like a tree, but unbent — you know? He had such mastery. How can we at the Huntington Hartford. 'Young man,' he said, 'you brought me wonder!' Everyone worried about him because he stayed up until 2 a.m. drinking champagne. But I knew why he loved mime so much. He was the first to write an essay about Chaplin calling him a dramatic, not a comic actor."

Charlie Chaplin, Buster Keaton, Red Skelton all are esteemed by Marceau. ("Dostoevsky said 'Nous sortons tous fu mime maitreau' we all come from the same overcoat.") Marceau did three TV specials with Skelton in 1965 and '66 which, he claims, first exposed him to large audiences.

"It shows," he said, "becoming popular then, too," he added, "and I began to talk about mime. It started a lot of young people going to Paris to study with me or with (Etienne) Decroux, because they knew I was a student of Decroux. I opened a mime school in 1969 with 100 pupils. Fifty of them were American. I think I was the first flower child."

Marceau began his work in the theater with director-actors Charles Dullin and Jean-Louis Barrault. With Barrault, he made the unforgettable "Children of paradise," a film biography of the poet-actor, the French mime Deburcau. He studied with Decroux and created his Bip character in 1937. A year later, Decroux asked him to leave.

"I was a born-mime," he explained. "A creator, not just a pupil. With Barrault, we established a grammar of mime. Decroux opened doors, but I had concepts. Chaplin, Keaton, Skelton created a stylized mime, closer to Grimaldi. Decroux went back to statutory mime. One cannot say I'm a technical mime, because I would have had to take my mime from tradition and I did not. I already had my own pieces when I started with Decroux. I wanted to create a company and my own melodramas, which is why Decroux asked me to leave. He was strictly 'laboratoire.' I was theater. Yet when I came to America, Decroux meant something. And a pupil who has not had a master will never be a master."

"Young mimes start by imitating, but they should stick to re-grammar — what Marceau or Decroux have taught them — and then they will find their own personality. The language of Marceau is different from that of Chaplin. It's theatrical. In film, Chaplin skated on real ice. In theater, we stylize and abstract the world. And yet there's a part of Chaplin in me until my death. Like musicians who share the ethics of music, we share the ethics of mime."

"Pupils will have the opportunity to create their own concepts. Marceau shouldn't paralyze them, he should free them. In another 10 years, America will have a great mime age. And it has all happened since I introduced mime to this country. Not Decroux. He was never here."

"The Marceau style is impressionistic. It's a question of musicality, the silent musicality of gestures. You have to move in space like fish in water. There's a way of breathing and singing a movement. Catching an essence..."

Marceau sees the lack of tradition in America as an advantage.

He remembers with affection and respect talented American pupils, such as Hayward Coleman.

"Mime is so old and so young," he reflected. "The danger is wanting to grow too fast without matching technique with depth, without learning to dwell in the silence, to swim in the musicality of the movements. That's what counts. The rest just follows. It has something to do with poetry and spirituality. Clapping and mime must remain pure or go down to the level of mere entertainment."

These concerns notwithstanding, Marceau has no objection to the addition of narration of other disruptions of silence.

"Mime should not be imprisoned by form," he explained. "Well-done narration need not be disturbing at all. Mime must explore form as music explores. The important thing is to make the invisible visible. A real mime is the greatest magician of all. He creates out of thin air."

"And the wonderful thing about a really good mime school is that it will teach such a strong vocabulary of mime that it will free the artist to do anything," he added, getting up to demonstrate.

"Immobility often speaks louder than mobility. Remember Chaplin in 'The Gold Rush'?" A Chaplinesque gesture. "The density is all. I caught the essence of the depth of Chaplin. Young mimes must look for the depth."

not the gesture — of Marceau and Bip. They must understand the perception and the grammar and they will become themselves...

"I like to give out my secrets, which is why I have my school. If you don't do that, your secrets die with you. I love America because it is the embodiment of the acceptance of synthesis. It is a land of pioneers and I am a pioneer. Everything is possible here, sometimes good, sometimes bad, but possible. Louis Jouvet (French actor and director) said man invented the ater to explain to himself the mysteries of his life. Walter Kerr wrote that 'Marceau explains to us why we love the theater, where it comes from and why it's going to last for a long time.'"

"Marceau paused in the deepening twilight. "It seems much talk in few time," he said, suddenly self-conscious, "but how do you explain a 2,000-year-old art in two hours? One must not be afraid to recognize a great master. It is a proof of liberty."

NBC won't telecast Olympics; big bucks vanish

By ROBERT A. McLEAN
@Boise Globe

NBC won't be telecasting the summer Olympics in Moscow, but isn't admitting it as it attempts to salvage some of the network's multimillion-dollar advertising games plan.

"NBC has repeatedly said it would be guided by the policies of the United States government, and we affirm that," a network spokesman said Wednesday. "We are discussing alternative advertising plans with our Olympics sponsors." He declined further comment.

The U.S. Olympic Committee decision to boycott the Moscow games could cost NBC $15 million in profits, plus a super showcase for its fall network lineup promotions—and that's just for openers.

The "alternate" advertising plans" for the 50 major firms, which NBC had signed up for an estimated $170 million in Olympic sponsorship—that's about $165,000 for each commercial minute during the 152 hours of planned coverage—will be another source of lost dollars. Few, if any, of those who paid top money to get aboard the Games' sponsor handwagon will sit still for other kinds of programming at those prices.

Big spenders among the advertisers signed up include the Miller Brewing Co. with $12 million earmarked, Coca Cola and Toyota, with $10 million apiece, and Levi Strauss, with $8 million. Advertisers with some $5 million each to spend include Gillette, McDonald and Burger King fast food chains and IBM.

Gillette, for example, will get more TV ads for its money buying time on the alternate programming, which NBC described as "an adequate inventory" of mixed TV fare.
