

Evans calls special session in May

BOISE (UPI) — Idaho legislative leaders see little to be gained by a special session of the Legislature.

Further, they feel it may cause problems for lawmakers seeking reelection in the May primary election.

Gov. John Evans announced Monday morning that he will call the 45th Idaho Legislature back into an extraordinary session between May 12 and May 19 to solve funding problems for the state departments of Health and Welfare and Transportation.

Evans said it was "imperative" that these problems be taken care of for the people of Idaho and his administration. He said he had little choice but to call the lawmakers back in May to handle the problems not adequately dealt with during the regular session, which adjourned sine die on the 85th legislative day March 31, making it the third longest session in the state's history.

The governor gave no definite date for a special session but said it probably would be May 12. He said that date is the earliest he could call a special session and May 19 is the latest.

Senate Majority Leader James Risch, R-Boise, said "Frankly, I have some serious reservations," when asked his feeling about a special legislative session.

He said he doubted the Legislature would "show more money" into health and welfare programs and questioned whether the Legislature would be asked to "keep coming back until they are passed."

In addition to saying he would call the Legislature into a special session to consider funding for Aid to Dependent Children and Medicaid programs, Evans also said he would ask for additional funding for the state's roads.

Risch said the Legislature already has addressed the funding for the Department of Transportation, referring to bills boosting the ton-mile tax and adding two more cents in tax on a gallon of gasoline. The bills passed the House and in the Senate.

The Senate Republican leader also said that he felt the Medicaid problem that resulted when 4th District Court in Boise ruled that nursing-home operators had to be reimbursed at full and reasonable fees for welfare cases.

Evans and health and welfare officials said the state would be out several million dollars to comply with the court decisions.

But Risch said the court decision was only "an opinion" that would be likely reversed for some time and could be resolved at the next legislative session.

He said the health and welfare problems should be resolved "we before start-taking about a special session."

Risch and other leaders also expressed concern that the state had no money to budget for additional funds.

"I don't think the money is there," said Senate Minority Leader Cy Chase, D-S. Maries, adding the "economy is not going to produce any money."

Chase said the state currently was in "bad economic shape," citing the

Different April showers

Jason Reeder, 8, and Matt Stosch, 7, tried out a different type of April shower Monday afternoon. Just for fun, they rode their bicycles through the streams of water from the spraying system at their school, Sawtooth Elementary in Twin Falls. Despite predictions of showers, only a few clouds developed on an otherwise mild spring day.

'Lean' postage boost to 20 cents proposed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Postal Service said Monday it must raise the price of a first-class stamp by a nickel to 20 cents early next year to keep up with rising inflation.

It was called the "leanest, trimmest" possible.

The proposal, filed with the independent Postal-Rate Commission, calls for a broad range of postage increases averaging 20 percent, to begin in February or March.

In unveiling the package at a news conference, Postmaster General William Bolger stressed the proposed hikes were based on "the most conservative estimates" of postal costs during the next 12 years.

"In short, this is the leanest, trimmest rate package we could devise in these inflationary times," he said.

Calling inflation "the villain" that forced the rate jump, Bolger noted that February rises in the Consumer Price Index alone added $110 million to postal payroll costs — because of a contract requirement awarding postal employees the same young rate as other employees and because of rising oil and every time gasoline rises a dime, as it has recently, $30 million are added to our annual fuel bill."

Bolger emphasized the Postal Service "made good on its commitment" to raise the price of first-class stamps for 21 years from its last increase, from 13 cents to 15 cents in May, 1978.

"Had inflation not shot up since May, 1978... but instead stayed at the level of that time, we would not today be seeking new rates," he said. "In fact, we would have been able to keep the current rates in effect until 1982."

He said the proposed rate package is innovative, because it expands incentives for businesses and other organizations that pre-sort their mail. For example, it would permit first-class bulk mailers to pay 17 cents, instead of 20 cents, if they presort by zip codes and 16 cents if they sort by letter carrier route.

Bolger also said he will aim to provide a 2-cent break during the Christmas season for those who mail holiday greeting cards early.

Bolger said the overall postage increase would be "a young rate" that would keep the postal service out of the red for most of a 2 1/2-year period.

He said the proposed rate package "has nothing to do with" proposals in Congress to eliminate the Postal Service's public service subsidy, including $500 million used to cover the costs of Saturday mail delivery.

Under the proposal:

•First class postage rates would rise to 20 cents for the first ounce and 17 cents for each additional ounce.

•Second class rates for newspapers and magazines would be adjusted in varying degrees, with mass circulation publications facing a rise of 1.9 percent. But newspapers delivered within the county of publication would get a 15.2 percent rate decrease.

•Rates for nonprofit, third class bulk mail such as fund-raising appeals and newsletters would be reduced 5.7 percent, but third class advertising mail would increase 17.7 percent for bulk mail and 9.8 percent for single-piece mail.

•Fourth class mail, including books, records and audio tapes would be increased an average of 0.6 percent. Parcel post rates would rise by an average of 8.4 percent.

Youth have their say

Communications bridge desired

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A group of 25 of America's young people said in a report Monday "there is an immense communication gap" between adults and youth and called for creation of a national Chamber of Youth.

The Children's Advisory Panel to the U.S. National Commission on the International Year of the Child presented its findings in a report to President Carter.

The youths, aged 10 to 18, met twice in Washington to discuss problems facing America's youth.

The report, "No Time For Mud Pies," said the children's panel "feels that there is an immense communications gap between adults and youth."

"This gap contributes to problems of adolescent pregnancy, alcoholism and drug abuse. In family-community apathy, to rebellion-and-suicide, to child abuse and neglect, to youth's feelings of poor self-worth," the report said.

"Don't judge this book by its cover, because it contains serious issues," said Coral Watt, 18, of Detroit, a student at Georgetown University in Washington.

Among the concerns facing youth, the panel said, is fear and violence, including going to war, physical and mental abuse, the future and nuclear war, growing imperfections, bad habits, media distortion of evil and good groups, that teach violence and hatred.

The panel urged the creation of "an ongoing national Chamber of Youth" that would be a "youth-selected body" that would represent children from across the nation, monitor children's opinions and act as advocates for children and youth.

The panel urged the president and Congress to "require student representation on those education and government bodies where decisions are made affecting them."

The panel also said:

•Education is most meaningful when supported by joint school and family effort.

•School academic programs must be widened and varied to include special needs, education for gifted and talented, and career, bilingual and multicultural education.

•Media and education agencies must combine forces to combat drug and alcohol abuse.

•Develop a Family Life Curriculum to deal with human sexuality, divorce and teen-age pregnancy, and make it easier for teens to obtain contraceptives and information concerning teen-age pregnancy.

Tax incentives examined again

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Inflation fighter Alfred Kahn said Monday the administration is "re-exploring" the possibility of tax incentives to encourage compliance with its voluntary wage-price guidelines.

In testimony to the Senate Banking Committee, Kahn hastened to add that President Carter believes the federal budget must be balanced before this or any other kind of tax incentives are considered.

And he said he is not optimistic Congress is ready to approve such a plan.

Intense campaign winds up

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Late polls showing tight races in Tuesday's Pennsylvania primary sparked intense last-minute campaigning Monday by Sen. Edward Kennedy, George Bush, Ronald Reagan and President Carter's stand-in, Walter Mondale.

The Reagan and Carter camps figure the 1980 contests will be over if they win in Pennsylvania. The challengers agree they must win to keep their campaigns alive.

The contest is most important for Kennedy, who has campaigned almost nonstop in Pennsylvania for two weeks and hopes to portray a win here into a victory in the Michigan caucuses Saturday.

Such a one-two punch, Kennedy aides say, would show Carter in serious trouble in major industrial states where effects of the predicted recession already are evident.

But nobody was predicting victory on the eve of what looked like an extremely tight primary contest.

"We could win or we could lose," said one top Kennedy adviser. "I'll tell you the truth, I just can't read this damn thing."

Kennedy and Reagan are favored to carry Philadelphia — the state's largest city, but the battleground that could decide how the state goes is Pittsburgh, where the economy and other issues have sparked a much more lively campaign.

Queen turns 54 amid meetings, little ceremony

LONDON (UPI) — Queen Elizabeth celebrated her 54th birthday Monday at Windsor Castle with a round of meetings and little ceremony.

Prince Charles saw his mother only briefly before leaving for northern Scotland for a trip on a fishing trawler. Prince Philip and Princess Anne also had official engagements during the day.

The queen was holding a meeting of the Privy Council, a gathering of ministers who advise her on state affairs, and entertaining them at lunch.

The younger members of the royal family, Prince Andrew and Prince Edward, were also at Windsor and the Queen Mother, 79, was recovering from a weekend cold but was also expected to join in the celebrations.

Minor miracle achieved

Mother, hostage son hold hands in embassy

TEHRAN, Iran (UPI) — Wisconsin housewife Barbara Timm held hands with her marine son, Kevin, for 45 minutes Monday.

It was the first family visit allowed for the 50 American hostages and she reported he was strong, healthy and hasn't lost faith.

"I think I achieved a minor miracle today," she said of her visit with her son, Marine Sgt. Kevin Hermeening, 20, on the 17th day of the hostages' captivity in the besieged U.S. Embassy.

"The visit went hardly noticed in Tehran where political focus shifted from the beleaguered U.S. Embassy to intense battling between left-wing and Moslem students at Tehran University where scores were injured.

Unrest also was reported in Hermshtah in western Iran where students marched in the streets and Tabriz, where Moslem students took over the central building.

Mrs. Timm, who met with her son in a room in the embassy with a couch and a long wooden table, said he was "strong and in excellent physical condition."

"He never lost faith," she said. "He has a deeper religious feeling," Mrs. Timm, a Roman Catholic from Oak Creek, Wis., said.

"We never quit holding hands — it was as if we had a permanent attachment to one another," she said.

It was the first time the militants allowed a relative to meet with any of the hostages.

During their talk, several students remained "but they never once interrupted us," Mrs. Timm said.

"We never discussed the other hostages nor did I see them."

In Pueblo, Colo., the parents of marine hostage Richard Gallegos said they would mortgage their home if necessary to follow Mrs. Timm's lead.

At the same time, Islamic Judge Sheikh Saadeh Khalili, the self-proclaimed head of Iran's revolutionary corps, called for Hermeening's release "to show our good-will toward the American people."

Altogether, Mrs. Timm spent 6 hours in the embassy buildings "talking, talking and talking," and then the students gave her a gift.

Her husband, Kenneth Timm, who accompanied his wife to the embassy, was not permitted to see Kevin, his step-son.

Mrs. Timm said, contrary to what she had been reading, Kevin had actually put on weight. "He has gained two pounds," she said.

She said he was familiar with all the sporting events "back home" but was "vitaly interested in the local baseball team."

"There were no tears. He was surprised and overjoyed that I had traveled across the globe to see him."

"He told me he was now spending his days with several other hostages, reading and playing cards — he said he was the best of the gin rummy players."

She said Kevin told her the first thing he was going to do when he was released was "to buy a car — definitely a car."

"We mostly talked about the others. He wanted to know everything about the other members of the family. I had to fill him in on five months happening on each member in 45 minutes," Mrs. Timm said.

Before the meeting, the Timms were taken by the militants on a tour of Tehran cemeteries to see the graves of those killed in the Iranian revolution.

In Washington, the State Department said families of the hostages would not be exempt from a ban on travel to Iran. The Timms were already en route to Tehran before the law took effect.

Norman Forer, a University of Kansas professor who helped arrange several trips by Americans to Tehran, said three other families have contacted him about arranging a visit. He declined to name the families.

High ranking defectors may be among refugees

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (UPI) — High-ranking defectors from the Cuban government may be among the 1,400 refugees still at the Peruvian embassy in Havana, a top diplomatic source said Monday.

The source, who declined to be identified, also said Peru has refused to accept about 300 Cuban refugees already in Costa Rica because they are "anti-social elements, common criminals, bad people."

These were among refugees reaching Key West

Two Cuban exile ships that took part in the first nautical evacuation of refugees at the Peruvian Embassy in Havana arrived in Key West Monday with 40 refugees aboard, the U.S. Coast Guard in Miami said.

Earlier in the day, the Cuban government said the two ships, as well as other private vessels reported in the waters near Cuba, would be allowed to pick up some of the people seeking asylum at the Peruvian Embassy.

However, Gramma, the official Cuban newspaper, said nautical transportation was not expected to replace the "freedom flights" that resumed Monday.

In a later dispatch, Gramma said Cuba had "virtually approved" the exit of the Cubans from the Peruvian embassy.

In Washington, the State Department said that after years of preoccupation with Africa, the Fidel Castro regime has moved to actively exploit with some success "targets of opportunity" in Central America and the Caribbean.

"Cuba has shown it can move quickly to take advantage of targets of opportunity," said Cuban Affairs director Myles Frechette in a statement.

A high Costa Rican official warned his country may break diplomatic relations with Cuba if its offer to take in 10,000 anti-Castro refugees, seeking political exile is rejected by the Castro government.

"The issue hasn't come up officially, but in my personal opinion there could be a break in relations" with Havana, said the official, who asked to remain anonymous.

Costa Rica has offered to accept all the dissidents after Havana decided they must fly directly to their country of final destination rather than to San Jose for later resettlement in other nations as has been done until Friday.

OAS panel visit OK'd

BOGOTA, Colombia (UPI) — Colombian authorities Monday authorized a visit by the OAS human rights commission to the barricaded Dominican Embassy for talks with the M-19 guerrillas and their 17 diplomatic hostages, a source close to the government said.

The decision came as Colombia rejected a proposal by the leftists to call a truce and meet in Panama for a May 1 summit to settle the crisis at the embassy where U.S. Ambassador Diego Asencio and 16 other diplomats have been held since Feb. 27.

Judge blasts 'arrogance'

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — A federal judge Monday accused federal anti-crime strike force attorneys of "arrogance" for attempting to justify public remarks made by the Nevada head of the FBI about reputed Chicago crime figure Anthony Spilotro.

U.S. District Judge Roger Foley was asked to hold FBI Special Agent Joseph Yablonski in contempt for comments he made at a Feb. 6 news conference about Spilotro, who is the subject of a grand jury investigation.

The exchange came in the first of three hearings concerning the existence of the strike force grand jury and tactics used by strike force attorneys.

Ballerina seeks asylum

MELBOURNE, Australia (UPI) — An East German ballerina, who defected from the Berlin Komische Opera Ballet, has applied for political asylum in Australia, officials said Monday.

A department of immigration statement said Heidi Geirsch, 20, made her application in Melbourne when she and her lawyer met with foreign affairs and immigration officials for 90 minutes.

Single term proposed

HOUSTON (UPI) — Former Watergate prosecutor Leon Jaworski Monday urged a Constitutional Amendment to limit American presidents to one 4-year term and now laws exclude campaign political aides from the White House.

Jaworski also told The Financial Analysts Federation that Congress should stop investigating its own corruption and turn the job over to a citizens' commission.

Tito's condition worsens

BEograd, Yugoslavia (UPI) — Doctors treating President Josip Broz Tito, 87, issued their most ominous medical bulletin to date Monday, saying the Yugoslav leader was in "exceptionally grave" condition and that his life was in danger.

The doctors left little doubt that the end was near for the man who has guided Yugoslavia for nearly four decades. He has been in the hospital for 100 straight days.

Marcos defends regime

HONOLULU (UPI) — President Ferdinand Marcos said Monday he will consider lifting nearly eight years of martial law in the Philippines within the year.

Marcos, heavily criticized by the Western world and accused of political torture and imprisonment, staunchly defended his administration before the annual convention of the American Newspaper Publishers Association.

Marcos, 62, considered "in some quarters" a spokesman for third world countries, said he is concerned about a confrontation between the U.S. and the Soviet Union.

Lance jury starts work

ATLANTA (UPI) — With a warning from the presiding judge not to consider public opinion or sympathy, the federal jury in the Bert Lance bank fraud trial began deliberations Monday, but broke for the night without reaching a verdict.

It was learned that the jurors elected Samuel Latham, 43, an auto worker from Marietta, Ga., as their foreman. He had told attorneys when the jury was being selected 14 weeks ago that he admired Lance but felt he could judge the case fairly.

Deliberations lasted two hours and 30 minutes before jurors recessed for the night without reaching a decision.

Mobil cuts off credit cards

NEW YORK (UPI) — Mobil Corp., the nation's second largest oil company, said Monday it is no longer issuing new credit cards and will increase monthly payments on revolving charge accounts this summer.

A Mobil spokesman said the company stopped accepting new credit card applications on April 1 in response to President Carter's program to curb the growth of consumer debts. He said Mobil will review its decision periodically.

layoffs in the lumber industry and other areas the state depended on for its tax base.

"There's no question about it — we're hard put for revenue," the St. Maries Democrat said.

Chase said he discussed a special session with the governor and informed him there was no use to call one "unless you've talked to the majority and they're willing to sit down and take care of these problems."

Except for House Speaker Ralph Olmstead, R-Twin Falls, the majority leadership has indicated they see no reason for a special session.

In announcing the special session, Evans said he talked to Olmstead and that the Speaker agreed the governor had no other choice because of the district court ruling in favor of nursing-home operators.

Olmstead was not available for comment after Evans' announcement but he said at a leadership conference in Boise last week that this was the only item he felt justified a special call.

The Speaker said he saw no reason to cover items already considered during the regular session.

The leaders also agreed that calling a special session this week or two before the Idaho primary election May 27 could have an adverse effect on the outcome of races where incumbents were seeking reelection.

"It could end in pretty hard that close to an election" Chase said, adding he thought it would be better to have the special session after the primary.

"It will have an effect, depending on how long the session lasts," the Senate Democrat said. "Although the governor has indicated it will only last couple of days, it will take a little time to get organized and probably will end up running four or five days or a week."

Risch predicted there would be grumbling on both sides of aisle by the governor's decision.

"It will not hurt the legislators in the Boise area, but it will hurt those out of town," Risch said.

Sen. Dave Little, R-Emmett, co-chairman of the Joint Finance

Appropriations Committee, said it "definitely will make a difference" for those legislators having primary races, although he wasn't certain whether the incumbent would gain more "knocking on doors or being in the Legislature."

"It's not the greatest boost for early elections," he said.

Little also has been in contact with the governor's staff about adding additional items in the special session call to take care of the legislative staff appropriation vetoed by the governor and give a little more money to the chief executive's executive budget.

"We're trying to work out a compromise," he said.

Little also said more money for health and welfare programs would "overextend" the budget.

Penn primary today

There are 83 Republican and 185 Democratic delegates at stake, while the Democratic popular votes determine the delegate division, there are two GOP races — one a statewide popular vote and one a delegate election by districts.

Early public opinion polls showed Carter leading Kennedy, but the president's pollster Patrick Caddell said his sampling gave the edge to the senator.

On the Republican side, polls show Reagan still leading — but Bush closing in.

Reagan has declined to predict victory in the popular vote, but says he will get a majority of the delegates since many well-known state political leaders are running as delegates under Bush's banner.

While the popular contests may be close — and while Bush and Kennedy could pull out victories — Reagan and Carter still will get another big pile of delegates to push them closer to nomination.

Going into Pennsylvania, Carter had 560 delegates, well over half the 1,666 he needs for renomination, while Kennedy had 486.5. On the GOP side, Reagan had 547 — also over half the 998 he needs — while Bush was far behind with 96 and Rep. John Anderson, who is not on the Pennsylvania ballot, had 56.

While Carter continued campaigning from the White House, Mondale was up early in Pittsburgh, telling commuters on the steps of city hall the president wanted their "all out support" because "it's going to be close."

Kennedy and Bush swept across the state, both conducting an 11th hour blitz in search of votes.

Sounds like kite flying might be in season

Twin Falls, Burley-Rupert, Jerome-Gooding areas:

Partly cloudy through Wednesday. Windy at times. Highs in the 70s. Lows 40 to 45 degrees.

Camas Prairie, Halley, Wood River valley:

Partly cloudy and windy at times through Wednesday. Highs 65 to 70. Lows 35 to 40.

Northern sections of Utah and Nevada:

Partly cloudy with chance of isolated showers in Utah today. Decreasing chance of showers over Nevada today. Partly cloudy both states on Wednesday. Gusty winds at times. Highs in the 60s with lows in the 40s in Utah and near freezing in Nevada.

Synopsis:

Partly cloudy skies and brisk breezes covered southern Idaho Monday, but no appreciable moisture resulted.

A few light showers developed over northern Idaho. The clouds over southern Idaho came from a storm system which produced rain over Nevada, Oregon and Washington.

Wind velocities were generally 10 to 15 miles an hour although Pocatello again had gusts of 40 mph.

Monday afternoon temperatures were slightly cooler than Sunday, with most in the 60 to middle 70 degree range. The warmest reading was 85 at Salmon while Stanley had the low of 24 Monday morning.

The evening forecast for the Magic Valley calls for winds of 5 to 10 mph this morning. Pan evaporation is forecast at .24 inch today and .25 inch Wednesday. The maximum 4 inch soil temperature today will be down a degree with the low tonight down a degree.

The field preparation outlook for Thursday through Saturday calls for a chance of showers through the period with highs mostly in the 70s and lows in the 40s.

Elsewhere in the nation Monday, the warmest temperature was 100 degrees at Fargo and Grand Forks in North Dakota while Glens Falls, N.Y., had the coldest reading, 27.

Hostages' families hope visit doesn't complicate matters

By United Press International
Families of American hostages held in Iran expressed reservations — but no hostility — toward a Marine's mother who cut through Washington and Tehran resistance Monday to pay a four-hour-long visit to her son.

The visit by Barbara Timm was the first of any hostage relative but others will follow in the near future, said a University of Kansas professor who helped arrange several trips by Americans to Tehran.

Judy Ehlenchek, sister of Marine Sgt. Rodney "Rocky" Sickmann of Krakow, Mo., questioned the long-term benefits of Mrs. Timm's visit, made contrary to Carter administration policy.

"I sometimes wonder if it's the best thing for the boys. We (the family) talked last night and we couldn't see where it would do that much good for Rocky to see us," she said. "I just don't think holding his hand for a couple of hours would make matters any better."

"If she is happy by doing this, then good for her. I just hope she doesn't screw up anything for the rest of us and that nobody suffers any repercussions."

Mrs. Timm got into the American Embassy to visit her son, Marine Sgt. Kevin Hermenegildo, 20, Oak Creek, Wis., the youngest of the hostages held since last Nov. 4.

Norman Forer, a University of Kansas professor and chairman of the Committee for American-Iranian Crisis Resolution, said three other families have contacted him about arranging a visit. He declined to name the families.

"We had a recent conversation three days ago with the students, and we don't anticipate any problems," said Forer, who assisted Mrs. Timm in her visit. "We're just moving ahead, we see no problems with the trip."

Johnny McKeel Sr., father of Marine Sgt. Johnny McKeel Jr. of Dallas, said he would take a wait-see posture, but would be inclined to make the trip if he thought it would hasten the release of the hostages.

"I'm going to wait and see how it comes out," he said. "I'm a little leery of those people (the militants). As far as I know right now, I don't have any plans to go, but if the thing goes on, I might change my mind."

"If I could go over there and it would help get them out, I might do it," he added.

Troy Kirtley of Little Rock, Ark., father of Marine Cpl. Steven W. Kirtley, said visiting his son would do little good.

"I felt like it would do us more harm than good," said Kirtley, a retired cab driver. "I couldn't get him to come back with me, so what good would it do?"

Jackie Persinger, mother of Marine guard Gregory A. Persinger of Seaford, Del., agreed a visit would be painful.

"Carter says nobody can go, but I wanted to go I'd go. But I don't want to go," she said. "I couldn't go over there and see him and then have to leave him. I'd have to stay with him."

Andrew Appel, spokesman and lawyer for the family of Lt. Gene Gillette, 23, a naval communications expert, said he talked with Gillette's mother in Philadelphia about the possibility of a visit.

"She has no intention of going to Iran or to make any effort to visit her son as long as it is our national policy not to make contact," Appel said.

Carter labels Iran situation critical

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter said Monday he does not know "how much longer we can sit here" while the American hostages are held captive in Tehran and the political situation in Iran deteriorates.

Carter said in a television interview he considers the 53 American hostages "in jeopardy now."

"There is a volatile political situation in Iran," the president said. "I think the structure of the government, the social structure and the economic structure lately is deteriorating fairly rapidly."

"I constantly worry about and think about and pray about the safety of those hostages," Carter told CBS-TV anchorman Walter Cronkite. "I don't know how much longer we can sit here and see them kept captive while the situation around (them) does deteriorate."

Carter apparently referred to the outbreak of strife in Iran between student factions as the government attempted to close down headquarters of the leftist groups on the campuses.

Japan searches for oil

The Washington Post
TOKYO — With its Iranian oil supplies being choked off, Japan Monday began groping for other oil sources and was considering asking the United States for help.

Angry that Japan won't go along with a price increase, Iran's national oil company shut off supplies to one major Japanese importer and was reported preparing to cut off the others.

Japan became the second country, after Portugal, to be punished with an Iranian oil cutoff after acting in part to support American efforts to pressure Iran to release U.S. Embassy hostages in Tehran.

Even before confirmation of the cutoff reached Tokyo Monday night, chief cabinet secretary Masayoshi Ito said Japan would possibly ask major American oil companies to sell more oil here.

Europe nearer sanctions

LUXEMBOURG (UPI) — America's European allies moved closer Monday to coordinated sanctions against Iran in line with President Carter's "free-the-hostages" offensive, with Britain proposing an all-out trade embargo and reduced diplomatic relations.

Diplomatic sources said it appeared increasingly certain that foreign ministers of the nine-nation European Economic Community would agree on some kind of action to aid Carter.

Details of sanctions that may be imposed would be worked out today, diplomatic sources said. But these sanctions might require ratification at an EEC summit in Luxembourg next weekend.

Theyself and with Japanese Foreign Minister Saburo Okita.

Methodists send word

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — Delegates to the United Methodist Church's quadrennial General Conference Monday overwhelmingly approved sending a message to Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, allying the church with Iran's "cries for freedom from foreign domination."

But the delegates turned back a statement that would have voiced the "regret" of the 9.5 million member denomination for "any complexity of the American people in the crimes and injustices brought on the Iranian people by the Shah."

The resolution that passed had been carefully crafted over the weekend and was already translated into Iran's Farsi language — an argument used to turn back amendments from the floor that would have either strengthened or weakened the message to Khomeini.

and compassion" to the families of the 50 American hostages.

As passed, the message to Khomeini, Iranian President Abolhassan Bani Sadr and the Iranian people said the General Conference, in its concern for the "poor and oppressed in the United States and the world... hear the agonies of your people; we hear their cries for freedom from foreign domination, from cultural imperialism, from economic exploitation."

"We long for that time when our people may dwell together in peace," it said.

In an indirect reference to the holding of U.S. hostages at the embassy in Tehran, the message said: "In the words of Moses, the liberator, let us say to each other, 'Let my people go.' And let us begin to walk together down the long, hard road toward reconciliation."

Nixon favors use of force

PARIS (UPI) — Former President Richard Nixon said Monday military force should be used to solve the Iranian hostage crisis if U.S. allies refuse to join economic sanctions against Iran.

Interviewed on the French television network Antenne 2, Nixon criticized President Carter for "making threats and then doing nothing."

From the beginning of the crisis 170 days ago, Nixon said the United States "should have made clear it would not rule out military measures."

"We missed that chance," he said. The former president said if the allies refused to support U.S. sanctions against Iran, there only remained "the choice of military measures."

Nixon arrived in Paris Friday to promote his new book, "The Real War." His visit has been given wide attention in the French media, which has sought his opinion on current world affairs rather than about his past.

It should be Earth Day every day

Earth Day 1980 — what can you do today to commemorate this decade-old observance? First, as you're out and around, stop for five minutes and reflect on the good earth; marvel at the mountains, bask in the sunshine or take note of the flowers and trees budding forth in response to spring's call.

Second, become more knowledgeable about the earth and its problems. You can do this by reading an article, book or simply by engaging your neighbor in a conversation about the environment. Maybe you could even do something that would momentarily take the strain off Mother Earth — by riding a bike or walking to work.

It would help, you see, if all of us were just a little more concerned and sensitive about the planet we live on.

There are numerous organized activities being held today throughout the nation to commemorate Earth Day and even the government is pitching in with some special displays and exhibits.

To people who have moved here from the concrete jungles of cities and suburbia, Idaho is an environmental haven. The state's natural resources and its weather are prized highly by natives and nomads alike. Talk of encroachment on these jewels brings about an uproar of disapproval and opposition.

Elected officials who hold Idaho's trust also recognize her beauty and potential. Only last week the House of Representatives voted to preserve 2.2 million acres of land known as the River of No Return Wilderness.

Earth Day has come a long way in 10 years, but in many ways the battle is just beginning. Those who have fought to maintain the environment have won important reprieves for earth. But as man continues his progress and expansion, the globe loses a little more each year to concrete and asphalt. It is shocked time and again by man's inability to safely manage his chemical wonders; it is despoiled by carelessness and threatened by new enemies.

Challenges to the environment will become more intense and more complex. Man must learn to anticipate those challenges as well as the impact of his actions. Building larger and larger supertankers to ship oil by sea, for instance, was marveled at until the first massive oil spill.

Likewise nuclear power was hailed as the power source of the future, but man is struggling with the problem of disposing of radioactive waste. It cannot simply be buried and forgotten like yesterday's garbage.

Caring for the earth should be a daily responsibility. Respect for the land, the air and water and using these resources wisely will allow us to continue to stop and smell the roses.

The answer man

© Los Angeles Times Syndicate
WASHINGTON — Every presidential candidate has a style uniquely his own.

Ronald Reagan is now developing a reputation for getting all his facts wrong. One of his more recent misstatements was that Vietnam veterans were not eligible for the GI Bill of Rights with regards to education or anything.

Mr. Reagan is very angry about the press reporting on his factual flubs and claims the media seem preoccupied with his mistakes.

I believe the only way he can fight this is by holding a weekly radio and TV show, along the lines of "The Answer Man," where people could call in and ask him questions so that his answers would not be filtered through the people who are covering him.

It would go something like this. "Governor, could you tell us how you would resolve the energy crisis?"

There is more oil under Three Mile Island than in all of Saudi Arabia. But because of bureaucratic toupous in the Department of Energy and the EPA, our oil companies have not been given permission to drill even a test well.

"Mr. Reagan, do you think the United States is in a strong defense posture at this time?"

"I certainly do not. When the Chinese bombed Pearl Harbor, this country was unprepared to go to war. I believe we are in the same position now as we were then. This nation has to say to the Kaiser of Germany, if you go one step further in trying to dominate the world, we will blockade Cuba."

"Mr. Reagan, you've taken a strong stand against the government getting involved in the lives of its citizens. Can you give us a specific example of how it is doing this?"

"Yes. When this country was founded, if someone was sick, that person could go to any barber, and he would bleed you with leeches. But now, HEW has ruled that barbers have to be licensed before they can do it. Most barbers refuse to fill out the paperwork required of them, and instead of the American people getting better medical care, it's costing them $5 billion more a year."

"Governor, what would you do about farm parity?"

"I would let the farmers raise their own parity, rather than have Washington tell them what crops they can, or cannot, grow. Nancy and I both like parity, particularly as a dip with potato chips. Some people hate parity with anything. But in a free economic society, I don't want some pencil-pusher in the Department of Agriculture telling me what I am allowed to eat."

"Mr. Reagan, I'd like to ask you a question about the MX missile. Do you think the United States should build it?"

"Yes, I do. There are 6,000,512 people who would rather take their welfare checks from the government than figure out how to make the MX missile work. I say we should tell them either get a job in research and development on the MX program, or forfeit their welfare payments."

"Governor, are you for the boycott of the Moscow Olympics?"

"Yes, I am, providing our American athletes are permitted to participate in them. We must tell Khrushchev know that we mean business."

Sheer, unmitigated waste

© Universal Press Syndicate
WASHINGTON — In the end, after all the aspects of a federal budget have been explored, it is the waste that finally gets to you — the sheer, unmitigated waste of money taken from the people by federal taxation.

The folly goes on, and on, and on. Waste continues in Washington despite the best efforts of good men to stop it.

Jimmy Carter, to start at the top, surely is no friend to waste; he has struggled manfully to squeeze fat out of the budget. Various committees of the House and Senate regularly go over departmental requests, line by line, looking suspiciously for concealed padding. The General Accounting Office constantly inveighs against mismanagement. Nothing halts the spending drain.

In his newly published book, "The Escalation of America," Wisconsin's Sen. William Proxmire pulls together hundreds of examples of how our tax money uselessly evaporates. Seven principal causes emerge from his angry report: incompetence, greed, arrogance, misjudgment, buck-passing, and plain dishonesty.

The causes often overlap. The Federal Highway Administration once wasted $22 million of the taxpayer's money on an idiotic questionnaire about drivers' attitudes toward trucks. Motorists were asked if they consider that large trucks contribute to traffic congestion, to block a driver's vision, c) travel too fast on highways, and so forth. These questions, as Proxmire comments, "that any fool could answer."

This particular folly was justified on the grounds that previous research had focused on aerodynamic and human factors. The thrust had been on the physics of interaction and the psychophysical performance of drivers.

Obviously, the cognitive or mentally evaluated dimensions of such vehicular interactions or potential interactions was lost in error variance or not considered at all in formulations of aerodynamic functions and driver performance factors.

And there went $22 million — incompetence? Greed? Honest misjudgment of the value of a useless questionnaire? All of the above?

Millions of dollars get frittered away through the insouciance of office. Proxmire cites the wretched example of former energy czar Frank Zarb, who used to travel around in a four-engine Air Force jet to make speeches to local audiences on the need to conserve gasoline. The Navy burned up 347,000 gallons of fuel in order to fly ex-pilots to a reunion in Las Vegas. The Air Force took several "Brazilian military representatives" to lunch at a posh French restaurant in Washington — and there went $35 down the drain.

In the great game of grantsmanship, the buck never stops. Many of the most flagrant examples of waste have come recently from outlays under the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA). Why was a CETA grant given for a count of Samoans in Orange County, Calif.? It was because the outlay was locally approved. Why was it locally approved? Because the project reflected policies set in Washington.

Proxmire is not the only conscientious member of Congress to specialize in fighting waste. Tennessee's freshman Sen. Jim Sasser is waging war upon the monumental waste of federal grant-in-aid programs. Sen. Bill Roth of Delaware attacks the budget with a pencil-holding tirade at both ends. He can't add items, he can only delete them.

Rep. Robert H. Michel of Illinois is crusading against the folly by which cash payments are made to poor people in Hawaii to help them meet belt-tightening bills. The Republican Study committee, without comment, reports a $102,000 research grant to determine "whether fish getting drunk on tequila are more aggressive than fish getting drunk on gin and tonics."

Well, we are told, such items are petty cash in a $600 billion budget. It is said that money is used in private businesses also. Such prerequisites as limousines and chauffeurs and snails for lunch are customary amenities for top brass. But these bland justifications have a hollow ring. Frugality ought to be the absolute, unvarying rule in the disbursement of public funds. In today's Washington, the rule is violated every hour of every day.

Scopes, origins

Editor, Times-News:

I would like to respond to the article written by Ellen Goodman, "Another Scopes Trial."

I object to a number of generalizations and statements made by Ms. Goodman, as I find her contentions to be biased, unfair, and without much substance.

In comparing with some of her statements, I realize that I am contending with a great number of scientists who do believe in the evolutionary account of origins, but I contend that they, too, are biased and have stepped out of the realm of true science and have defended a belief system. That is not good science. I would like to state several basic observations which must be considered when comparing the Biblical account of origins with the Darwinian hypothesis of origins.

First, for those who do believe in God, but waffle on the question of origins and therefore straddle the fence as "theistic evolutionists," I would ask them why an omnipotent God would take eons of time to create the earth, man, and various organisms. Is it not logical to assume that God could have created the earth as a mature earth, with an appearance of age, that being consistent with Him creating man as an adult, not as a baby? If one does not take the Bible as the divinely inspired word of God, that says what it means, then that individual is an apostate and an unbeliever, and that is not just my opinion, the scripture identifies him as such.

Secondly, let us consider the other approach, that of the person who does not believe in God but does want to be a good scientist. Ms. Goodman's contention that Genesis is "bad biology" prompts the question, "What is good biology?" Let me go one step further, and ask, "what is good science?"

There is the basic question, "What is science?" and is evolution or creation science? Science is not endorsement psychology, neither is it a belief system, but it is restricted to the careful analysis, the qualitative and quantitative measuring of phenomena which can be tested, repeated, observed and can show its cause and effect relationships. Also, some phenomena can be predicted, certain effects can be extrapolated, because they are measurable, they occur regularly, they are established by good scientific procedures.

What about origins? We can only speculate. The proofs of origins are taught as facts in many schools, and most textbooks and many biologists, I am sorry to say, teach it this way, and that is what the creationists, fundamentalists, and an increasingly growing number of scientists are objecting to. The supposed evidences of radioactive dating, fossil remains, structural, physiological and

Support growing for overhaul of U.S. electoral system

By CLAYTON FRITCHEY
© 1980 Newday
WASHINGTON — One of the unexpected, but fortunate, side effects of the presidential race is that it has suddenly focused long-overdue attention on the way the professional politicians have rigged the ballot against third parties.

No other democratic country in the world makes it so difficult for a new national party to emerge. In the United States, only the two major parties have automatic access to the presidential ballot. All others must overcome a 50-state obstacle course, effectively designed to discourage any new political movements.

Although this has been going on for a long time, it hasn't been attracted any passing notice. This time around, however, there has been a surprising burst of interest, undoubtedly favored by the prospect of a significant third party effort to capitalize on the independent appeal of Rep. John Anderson. Unlike most such movements, this one is being taken seriously, for it could in various ways be a telling factor in the November election.

It is, of course, too late for any reform this year of the anti-third party rules, but they surely will get some attention in the next Congress, which will be confronted with growing demands for a general overhaul of the U.S. electoral system.

Every presidential election inspires fresh interest in such sorely needed reforms. Hopes were momentarily raised by Jimmy Carter in March 1977 when the newly elected president, in a special message to Congress, proposed sweeping voting changes at both federal and state levels. He called for a constitutional amendment to abolish the Electoral College in favor of electing the president by a simple majority of the popular vote.

He also proposed elimination of restrictive state laws on voting registration and strongly endorsed the movement to legislate federal campaign funds for Senate and House candidates.

Howard Baker, the Senate Republican leader, not only endorsed the easy-registration idea, but proposed broadening the legislation by making Election Day a national holiday, along with keeping the polls open for 24 hours. Rep. John Rhodes, the House minority leader, predicted the legislation would pass "with a lot of Republican support, including my own."

Alas, it was not to be. When the Republicans began having second thoughts, Carter, no longer assured of an easy success, turned his attention elsewhere, and so the changes have remained in limbo; not forgotten, but waiting for a more propitious moment like early 1981 — when there will also be a flock of new bills to reform the chaotic, man-killing presidential

The Times-News welcomes letters to the editor but will reject those it considers libelous or in bad taste. Each letter must be signed and should include the writer's mailing address. Letters of more than 400 words may be edited for length.

primary system.

Meanwhile, it is not likely that the problem of getting on the ballot — difficult as it is — will keep John Anderson from running as a third-party candidate, for, as George Wallace proved, the obstacles can be overcome by a determined, nationally organized effort.

In 1968, the former Alabama governor, as a third party candidate for president, managed to qualify for the ballot in 49 out of 50 states. He also got 9,906,000 votes (13.6 percent), more than twice what is now needed for federal reimbursement of minority campaign expenses.

He ended up winning 46 electoral votes, almost as many as Sen. Barry Goldwater got as the Republican presidential candidate in 1964. More important, his vote almost threw the election into the House of Representatives when Richard Nixon and Hubert Humphrey finished in a virtual dead heat, Nixon won by less than 1 percent of the popular vote, which gave him the necessary majority in the Electoral College by a narrow margin.

Few doubt that John Anderson, with his demonstrated appeal to independents, as well as dissidents of the major parties, would run much stronger than Wallace and could well force the election of the next president into the House, even if he ran behind both the Democratic and Republican nominees.

What the house might do staggers the imagination. First of all, the decision would be made not by the present Democratic-controlled House, but the one to be elected in November, composition unknown. By a quirk of the Constitution, the next president could be elected by a minority of the House, for each state (regardless of population) has just one vote, determined by a majority of each state's House delegation.

The rub is that the five largest states (with more than 70 million people and 154 congressmen) would have no more power to elect the next president than the five smallest states, with about 1,700,000 people and only five congressmen. The small states, in short, would have over 30 times the voting power of the big ones.

One of the little known peculiarities of the Constitution is that a candidate, in order to be elected by the House, must get an absolute majority of the states, which means at least 26. The Constitution anticipated this might produce a prolonged deadlock, in which event the Senate is empowered to elect by majority vote an acting president. But it is limited to choosing between the two candidates who got the greatest electoral vote for vice president. It sounds more like Ruben Goldberg than the Founding Fathers, but that's the loony way it is.

Court accepts TV trial coverage case

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court agreed Monday to consider whether television coverage of criminal trials is constitutional. The case promises to be a new testing ground for fair trial-free press issues.

The case accepted for argument in the court's new term starting this fall comes from Florida, which has pioneered electronic coverage of courtrooms.

It arose when two former policemen contested their burglary convictions on grounds they were denied a fair trial by the presence of still and television cameras.

It is likely the court will use the case as a vehicle to clear up conflicts between a criminal defendant's right to a fair, impartial trial and the First Amendment rights of the media to cover the news.

The outcome will be affected by the court's ruling, expected by June, on whether a trial judge may bar the press and public from trials.

In addition to Florida, 22 states allow electronic coverage in the courtroom on some basis.

In other actions Monday, the high court:

- Agreed to decide whether Delta Airlines must pay court costs for a race discrimination suit even though it won the case.

- Let stand a federal court injunction against enforcement of a New York county's abortion notification statute.
- Ordered courts to reconsider a ruling that a New York county was immune from suit for its now invalidated policy of strip-searching everyone arrested.
- Set aside a Pennsylvania court ruling that a juvenile accused of a crime must consult with an interested adult before his right to remain silent is waived.
- Left intact the invalidation of a New York law giving preferential treatment to state residents for public works jobs.

In the court-coverage case, the Florida Supreme Court held in April 1979 that such coverage is not unconstitutional. In September it refused to review the appeals of the two former Miami Beach policemen on grounds its April ruling left the case without legal controversy.

After a one-year experiment started in July 1977, Florida's top court gave final approval of permanent coverage with its April 1979 ruling.

The challenge the Supreme Court agreed to hear arose from the convictions of Noel Chandler and Robert Granger for a burglary at Picciolo's Restaurant in Miami Beach in May 1977.

Since they were officers at the time of their arrests, there was extensive coverage of their trial where testimony was introduced that Chandler had investigated a burglary of the same restaurant a few days before.

Job ruling stands

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court Monday refused to review a ruling that declared unconstitutional a New York law that state residents must be given preference for jobs on public works projects.

Without comment, the justices let stand a ruling that the preferential hiring law violated the Constitution.

In other business-related cases the court:

- Set aside a ruling that blocked federal financing of low-income housing on Staten Island, N.Y., because an agency failed to evaluate whether the project would "tip" the racial balance of the neighborhood.

The justices told a lower court to reconsider the case in light of its Jan. 7 ruling that a court may review an agency's actions only to make sure it followed procedural requirements.

- Turned down a challenge by a Tennessee sand and gravel company which maintained that warrantless safety inspections allowed under a federal mining law violated its rights.
- Let stand dismissal of a lawsuit by 38 veterans who charged McDonnell Douglas Corp. failed to promote them when they returned from military service.

Abortion amendment argued before court

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Congressional restrictions on federal financing of abortions result in protection of fetal life at the expense of the lives and health of poor women, a pro-abortion lawyer told the Supreme Court Monday.

Under the Constitution, "the preference for fetal life over maternal health is not rational," argued Rhonda Copeland, attorney for the Center for Constitutional Rights.

The nine justices heard oral arguments on two challenges to Congress' Hyde Amendment, named after sponsor Rep. Henry Hyde, R-Ill., which curbs in Illinois and New York struck down as denying impoverished women's right to equal protection of the law.

Hundreds of people lined up to hear the arguments, and abortion advocates demonstrated outside. The cases, to be decided later by written opinion, may be the most significant on the issue since the high court's 1973 ruling that a woman has a constitutionally protected right to abortion.

At issue this time is use of federal funds to assist this right — an issue the court addressed in 1977 when it held Medicaid funds could be withheld for elective abortions since the state had a legitimate interest in "encouraging normal childbirth."

Under challenge is the four-year-old amendment under which federal Medicaid funds may be used only for abortions to save a woman's life or, under certain circumstances, as a remedy for rape or incest.

Defending the amendment, U.S. Solicitor General Wade McCree argued it "is rationally related to the legitimate government interest of preserving potential human life and encouraging childbirth."

Suspect in attack quizzed by police

RIVERHEAD, N.Y. (UPI) — The lawyer for Robert B. McKeage IV said Monday his client did not treat or rape a visit to the Long Island mansion of theatrical producer Roy Radin.

"Mr. McKeage has no knowledge of any beatings or alleged rapes, and he has no knowledge of any drug use at the house," said attorney Walter Lesnevich.

LIFE AND LILIAN
President Carter's 81-year-old mother was well prepared for her visit in Jerusalem with Israeli President Yitzhak Navon Monday. In addition to a letter from her son — restating the United States' commitment to Israel — Miss Lillian wore a "Chal" necklace she says was given to her five years ago by a rabbi. Said she of the Jewish symbol for life, "I never take it off."

FREEDOM FAST
Dick Gregory says when it comes to freeing the hostages in Tehran, President Carter is too slow, so he's decided to fast. And to make sure the Ayatollah Khomeini doesn't miss the point, he's doing his fasting in Tehran. Gregory's wife, Lillian, says her activist husband flew to Tehran Saturday and will go without food until Khomeini sees him. Says she, "I think it's wonderful that my husband went. He's a man of peace and he feels he can do something for the hostages."

ARTS AND FLOWERS
Joan Mondale will take a break from partisan politics Thursday and Friday to join New York Post drama critic Clive Barnes at the annual arts festival of the Association of Teachers of Independent Schools. Faculty member Ari Kramer says the springtime festival will be the largest ever held by private schools in the New York area. It will involve more than 500 students — kindergarten through 12th grade — performing in music, theater, dance and visual arts.

WITHDRAWAL
A Purdue University physical education specialist says the obese stand to lose more than pounds through exercise. A.H. Ismail says in the May issue of Omni magazine chuckles may be on the line as well. According to Ismail, the obese really do tend to be gregarious, but muscle training tends to alter the body's biochemistry. The result — conversion, in many cases, of the heavy extrovert into the skinny introvert. But at least the cholesterol level goes down too.

HELP WANTED
Somewhere amid the new influx of refugees from Cuba there is a lucky man. Whoever he is, he's a tailor skilled in the art of traditional Cuban shirtmaking, able to turn out made-to-order Guayabera shirts of the sort Ernest Hemingway used to wear. Italian designer Jacques Bellini is reviving the "Old Havana" look this summer at his New York salon, and he has a cushy job for the right Cuban. He says he's conveyed the job offer to refugee agencies.

TENNIS EVERYONE?
Few spiritual leaders are as physically active as Sri Chinmoy who conducts meditation sessions at the United Nations. So far he's written more than 400 spiritual books, painted about 140,000 mystical canvasses and composed 3,000 devotional songs. He also runs in marathons, but he's toned up a two-week celebration of his 16th year in the United States Sunday with four straight hours of tennis against four pros. The guru won 48 of 101 games.

No hangovers develop from beer on carrier

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Navy Secretary Edward Hidalgo said Monday morale is high among the 20,000 U.S. sailors on duty off Iran — with no hangovers from the beer party that marked the 100th day at sea for the carrier USS Nimitz.

In an interview, Hidalgo gave an upbeat report of his visit to the carriers USS Coral Sea and Nimitz earlier this month. Defense Secretary Harold Brown is expected to visit the fleet next month.

The deployment of 25 U.S. Navy ships to the Arabian Sea has not been trouble-free and has strained the Navy's materiel resources over the last five months.

Six flyers in two planes have been lost during maneuvers, and one Marine, Pfc Bradley L. Johnson of Extra, Iowa, apparently shot himself. But Hidalgo brought back an enthusiastic report on the Indian Ocean armada.

It was the Navy's top admiral, Chief of Naval Operations Thomas Hayward, who suggested a break with the no alcohol at sea tradition to allow the 5,000 men aboard the Nimitz to consume two cans of beer each during their 100th day at sea — April 12.

Since World War II, no U.S. sailor is believed to have been at sea for such an extended period. Most vessels usually schedule shore leave every three weeks or so.

"I applauded it without hesitation," said Hidalgo, who served on the USS Enterprise during World War II.

"I was not the originator (of the beer idea) but certainly the strong second," he said. "To me the idea was so natural, plausible, it gave us the opportunity to give a little change of pace to the lives of those men. It was sort of a 'well done' to them."

"I don't know anyone who agonized over that one."

Fire claims life of school inmate

LYNCHBURG, Va. (UPI) — A 68-year-old man who spent most of his life in the nation's largest facility for the mentally retarded died in a fire Sunday that also injured four patients relaxing with him in a solarium.

Staff members evacuated 51 mentally-retarded residents, all of whom were confined to wheelchairs or had difficulty walking, but the smoke proved to be too much for five of seven men who were sitting on the small enclosed porch. The fire began on the second floor of a four-story building.

Clarence McDaniel, an Albemarle County native who was admitted to the facility in 1925, was a smoke inhalant at a hospital 3 1/2 hours after the fire, the cause of which was under investigation Monday.

Even worst among films bring in crowds

NEW YORK (UPI) — In the same week "Kramer vs. Kramer" won an Oscar for best film of the year, movie fans flocked to a Manhattan theater for the world's worst film festival.

"Mehra," "Creeping Terror" and "Plan 9 from Outer Space" — cinematic masterpieces not even mentioned in the Academy Award presentations — were cheered and applauded at a weeklong celebration of bad taste that concluded Sunday.

"There's a whole subculture of bad film buffs out there," said Mike Medved, who joined his brother Harry in choosing 25 films for the festival from a lengthy list of worst movies to which they have bestowed the coveted "Golden Turkey" awards.

As Medved spoke in the lobby of the Beacon Theater, an audience roared with laughter to "Dos and Don'ts of Dating," a 1950s "how-to" hygiene-class short for boys that applauds the merits of good-night handshakes and soft drinks.

"Dos and Don'ts" was followed by a full-length motion picture called the "Creeping Terror," a flop from the mid-'60s.

"They advertised this film in the trade papers as having a full-scale 30-foot-long monster 'Attacking people,'" Medved said. "The monster turned out to be a 30-foot-long carpet draped over some college kids."

There was some disagreement in the audience on whether the monster was deep pile or shag.

The killer carpet was followed by the deadly vegetables of "Attack of the Killer Tomatoes."

"Attack" doesn't really belong in this genre," Medved claimed. "It was made bad on purpose, but we got so many requests for the film that we had to include it."

Besides "Attack," "Terror" and "Do's and Don'ts," fans of bad taste got "Terror of Tiny Town," and "Plan 9 from Outer Space" for their $12 admission fee Sunday.

Curry installed as new ruler of Elks lodge

TWIN FALLS — William E. Curry was installed as exalted ruler of the Twin Falls Elks Lodge 1183.

Curry succeeds Vern Bybee, who has served as exalted ruler since April, 1979. Curry is a sales representative for the Gem State Paper Co. Other officers installed include Paul Montgomery, leading knight; David F. Winter, loyal knight; Dennis L. Ward, lecturing knight; Richard Greenwood, treasurer; Edward Gough, Iller; Muel Miller, esquire; Mark Miller, chaplain, and Scott Bybee, inner guard.

Holdover trustees are Stan Detweiler, Ben Ledbetter, Duke Stimpson and Norman Fillmore.

The installation ceremony was conducted by Lloyd Reed, past district deputy, grand exalted ruler, Idaho central. He was assisted by Henry L. Willis, Doner Berisch, Donald McKinster, Hoy Russell, Colton Crumbless, John Leinen, Clyde Lewis and Vern Bybee. All participants are past exalted rulers of the Twin Falls lodge.

During the ceremony, Bybee was presented an Elks ring by Curry from the Twin Falls Lodge members in appreciation of his services as an officer for the past five years.

Plaques were presented to Donald L. McKinster, outgoing chairman of the board of trustees, and to Joe Cerva, who had served as treasurer during the past five years.

The installation service was followed by a social hour, hosted by the lodge officers and wives, and by an inaugural "Get Acquainted With Your New Officers" dance.

William Curry, left, was installed Elks Lodge exalted ruler by Lloyd Reed and Vern Bybee, right.

BEDWETTER?

LET THEM HAVE A DRY BED

The greatest gift you can give a bedwetter and the rest of the family, too, is an end to this serious problem, and make no mistake, bedwetting is serious. It can cause complicated psychological problems that last a lifetime. It's so needless because bedwetting, when not caused by organic defect or disease, can be ended. Send for our free brochure, "Bedwetting — What It's All About and How To End It." A report by two medical doctors. No obligation.

Dear Abby

Children should be heard before seen

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
© Universal Press Syndicate
DEAR ABBY: This is the second marriage for both of us. All our children are grown and live away from home.

Now for my problem: My children never call and ask if we have plans for the weekend, holidays or whatever, they just call and say, "We will be there on a certain day." Occasionally, they don't even call, they just come. Sometimes we've made plans to visit friends, or we've invited my children to visit us, and we can't accommodate just so many houseguests.

When his children are here, they call up their friends and invite them over for dinner without asking us first. If they're moving from one place to another, are out of work or had a fight with a spouse, they bring their furniture, clothes, etc., to store at our house without asking permission.

My husband says this is their house, too, and they can come and go as they please.

Abby, I agree we should want our children to feel at home, but just how far should they go?

My children and I have an understanding that we never visit each other's homes without first being invited. How do you draw the line between making your children feel at home and letting them use you?

NEEDS ADVICE
DEAR NEEDS: The line is (or should be) clearly drawn when a child is grown and leaves home. Should he return for a day, a week or a month, he returns as a guest. This means he should not come without an invitation. If he's between jobs, or marriages, and needs a roof over his head, the chances are he will not be refused, but he should always ask first. And inviting others to one's parents' home, and storing furniture, clothes, etc., without permission is also out of line.

DEAR ABBY: I'm new here and have a problem with a co-worker. I'm right out of college and she is an older woman. She never misses an opportunity to put her hands on me. Body contact doesn't normally bother me — most of my friends greet me with hugs and kisses — but this woman's touch is not that kind. It's a lingering, caressing feeling that makes me uncomfortable. Whenever she passes my desk she'll stroke my hair or playfully massage my neck and shoulder. I think you get my point.

I don't want to make an enemy of her, but I don't want to hold still for this either.

Got any ideas?
UNCOMFORTABLE
DEAR UNCOMFORTABLE: Why not lay it on the line in a friendly, non-offensive way. Try this: "Please don't touch me — I'm ticklish."

DEAR ABBY: This is for women who loudly insist that housewives are also working women. Turn it around and you have the true picture — working women are also housewives.

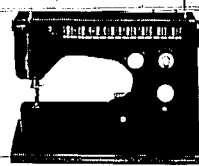

I have worked for 20 years; I work because we need my income. I do not have a maid, nor do most working women. We have jobs, not careers. The luxury of indulging in a hobby like needlework, painting or tennis is a dream to most of us. What housewives have all week to do, we do before 8 a.m. or after 5 p.m. I clean the house, do the shopping, cook meals and try to do all the other things necessary to keep a home going after I put in eight hours on my office job. Oh, yes, I do windows on weekends.

Tell it like it is, ladies. How come you are all up on the afternoon soaps, when you're so busy being working women?

She spent $5,000 and still no answer

By LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.
(Newspaper Enterprise, Association)
Dear Dr. Lamb,

I've got more than one problem. I just spent $5,000 to get some answers and still don't have any.

I'm a 48-year-old female, 5-foot-6 1/2, and 130 pounds. I'm troubled with hard pounding and speeding up of the heart. I've had this for 20 years. I've been on every medicine you can mention and still I have at least two very bad attacks a year.

I smoke six to eight cigarettes a day, don't drink alcohol but I do drink six to eight cups of coffee a day.

One night while at work (I'm a bartender), I had a terrific pain in the base of the skull — so bad that it buckled my knees. I was weak for a few minutes and then it went away. As I had an appointment with the doctor the next week anyway, I told him then about what had happened. The subsequent events included consultations and X-rays, brain scans, you name it,

I had it, and nothing of significance was found. I was afraid I had had a stroke.

What really bothers me: In the test where they put the dye in the artery in your leg to visualize the arteries in your brain they had trouble with the injections, and they only got three pictures instead of the five they wanted. Could they have missed something?

More recently the doctor said he hadn't been too worried about my attacks until the last one which he said was approaching the lower chambers, but I don't know what that means. And he also said something about malignancy. Can you shed any light on all of this?

Dear Reader, I won't be able to solve your total problem but there are two things that would be helpful.

First, you need to stop drinking all that coffee. I'd like you to quit smoking, too, but the coffee may be more important in your case. Both of these habits tend to stimulate irritable spots in the heart that can trigger irregular beats and the kinds of attacks you're complaining about. I think you ought to quit the coffee immediately.

You might want to taper off the coffee to prevent having a severe headache from the withdrawal symptoms you'll have from your addiction to caffeine. I'm sending you The Health Letter number 144, Controversial Beverages — Coffee, Tea, Cola and Chocolate. Other readers who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

The second thing that might help would be a better understanding of your irregular heartbeats. For that reason, I'm sending you The Health Letter, number 512, Heart Irregularities, Skipped Beats and Tachycardias. None of the conditions you described have anything to do with a malignancy. Having had a picture of the arteries to your brain, even if they only got three films, pretty well rules out any blockage in the arteries to the brain itself.

The doctor who talked about the lower chambers was referring to the location of the irritable spots in your heart that causes the attacks of rapid heart action. You can have such a spot in the top part of the heart (the atrial chambers), or you can have such a spot in the lower part of the heart (the ventricular chambers).

Indian directory

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A new directory of Indian-owned and-operated arts and crafts businesses has been issued by the General Services Administration for distribution through the government's Consumer Information Center.

It lists more than 150 places in 34 states and the District of Columbia, where you can buy authentic Indian arts and crafts. Some also sell by mail.

Among the listings are the Indian Craft Shop, in room 1023, in the main building of the U.S. Department of the Interior, in Washington, D.C.; Blackbear's Ltd. in Wichita, Kansas, whose president, Blackbear Bosin, is a Comanche-Kiowa artist; and Naranjo's American Indian Arts in Houston, Texas.

Palace coup ousts S. Yemen leader

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Marxist South Yemen's President Abdel Fattah Ismail, who negotiated his country's friendship treaty with the Soviet Union, lost his job Monday in a bloodless "palace coup," Western and Arab diplomatic sources said.

An Aden radio broadcast said Ismail resigned for "health reasons" and was replaced by the man who two years ago helped him overthrow the government in a violent coup, Prime Minister Ali Nasser Mohammed.

But Western political sources and Arab diplomats alike described the change as a "palace coup" that could foreshadow a move by South Yemen, the lone Marxist Arab state, toward a lighter shade of red.

Ismail only last year negotiated a 20-year friendship treaty with Moscow — a pact that has worried other, more conservative Arab states, particularly Saudi Arabia and North Yemen.

One Western political expert said Nasser Mohammed, although himself a committed leftist, is considered "more flexible, more pragmatic, less doctrinaire."

There had been no previous report that Ismail, 41, and son of peasants from North Yemen, was in bad health, although one knowledgeable Arab political journalist said, "We were not sure of his political health."

—Nasser Mohammed, a one-time headmaster and an underground guerrilla fighter in the war of independence from Britain, is acknowledged by diplomats to be a skilled administrator and an advocate of improved relations with neighboring Saudi Arabia.

Assam rioters defy curfew

NEW DELHI, India (UPI) — Thousands of demonstrators Monday defied a shoot-to-kill curfew and clashed with police for the third day in renewed attempts to disrupt the vital oil industry in India's Assam State.

The Press Trust of India said police hurried tear gas and swung stout canes to prevent protesters from reaching the pipeline that carries the northeastern state's oil to the rest of the country.

Ambulances carried away at least 50 injured demonstrators, many of them bloodied, the agency said.

The turmoil began as an attempt by ethnic Assamese to push out Bengalis and other "outsiders" who had migrated to the region. But it mushroomed into a confrontation between the Indian government and the people of Assam for control of the state.

State officials warned that "secessionist tendencies are developing."

Turmoil in village mars day

JERUSALEM (UPI) — Israel entered its 33rd year Monday with a clash between troops and Palestinian villagers in the occupied West Bank where tens of thousands of religious Jews marched through the hills to dramatize their claim to the region.

Three soldiers shot and wounded two residents of the Arab village of Beit Assal, south of Jerusalem, and two of the troopers sustained light injuries in the worst incident of its kind in 13 months, a West Bank military spokesman said.

Police arrested 16 villagers and the army imposed a curfew on the village. The incident at dawn marred the 32nd anniversary of Israel's birth, observed at the political level with receptions hosted by President

Vitach Avnon and Jerusalem Mayor Teddy Kolek and attended by President Carter's mother, Miss Lillian. "I love it," she said of Jerusalem.

Most Israelis observed the founding of the Jewish state with a day's outing but violence erupted on the West Bank, the area Palestinians seek as a homeland but ruled by Israel for 13 years.

In Beit Assal, villagers attacked a small civilian truck carrying three hitchhiking soldiers as it entered the village, hurling a shower of stones at it in the belief the vehicle belonged to Bedouin marauders, the spokesman said.

"When the soldiers saw they could do nothing, they shot in the air at first," he said. "They saw that didn't help, so they shot at the legs." One villager was "wounded seriously" another lightly, he said.

The driver of a local bus drove his vehicle into the truck, destroying it and injuring two of the soldiers, the spokesman said. An Israeli patrol quickly dispersed the villagers.

Soviets spy on radar net

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Soviet spy planes reportedly are trying to monitor the frequencies of new radar installations in Japan, Aviation Week and Space Technology said Monday.

"About 40 percent of all the targets intercepted in fiscal 1979 by Japan's Air Self Defense Force were confirmed as Soviet aircraft," the weekly said. The aircraft were mainly Tupolev Tu-95s and Ilyushin Il-38s and Il-14s.

"The (Japanese) service is confident that nearly all of the remaining targets were Russian military aircraft," it said. "Also, the Japanese think the Soviets are checking frequencies and other key data of new, three-dimension radars being deployed on Japanese sites."

Aviation week said on four occasions last month, two Tu-95s flew 6 to 10 hour operations on a 600-mile-long straight course over the Sea of Japan.

"They were intercepted by a total of 108 Japanese aircraft," it said.

Newspaper union seizes building

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (UPI) — The pro-government labor union at the opposition La Prensa newspaper seized the building to protest the appointment of a government critic to the paper's board of directors, officials said Monday.

Directors of the newspaper, which did not publish Monday, issued a statement blaming the strike and building takeover Sunday night on a contract dispute with the Union of La Prensa Workers.

Hospital hires firm to manage renovation

By STEPHANIE SCHOROW
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Magic Valley Memorial Hospital's renovation program will be handled under a management contract, just as the hospital's administration is now handled.

In Monday's board meeting, the hospital board voted to grant a management contract for the hospital's building program to the Hospital Affiliates Development Corporation (HADC), a part of Hospital Affiliates International, the hospital's Nashville-based management company.

HADC will now perform such duties as hiring architects and contractors.

subject to the board's approval. The cost to the hospital will be about $500,000 over three years, according to William Burns, hospital administrator. Total building costs are running over $17 million, increased from the originally projected $15 million, due to more precise estimations, according to Steve Fisher, assistant administrator.

In other business, the board approved new admissions policies and a new employee sick leave plan. The new business office policy classifies patients into "routine, urgent or emergency admissions" and stipulates they meet "the appropriate financial policies" to be admitted. This means that routine or urgent (non-emergency) admissions of persons who cannot present proof of insurance or monetary resources can be deferred with the mutual consent of the hospital administrator and the admitting physician.

Controller Scott Richardson said all patients will be admitted if, in the physician's opinion, the patient's well-being will be jeopardized.

The policy also stipulated all socio-economic and insurance data be collected by hospital prior to admission.

The policy established new debt write-off rules. Patient accounts are turned over to collection agencies when they are 120 days past due and the balance is $50 or less, or when accounts are 180 days past due, the balance is more than $50 and no payment was made for two months.

The new sick leave policy sets guidelines on when an employee is eligible for sick leave and a "cash-in" procedure for accumulated days.

Presently full-time hospital employees are entitled to one day a month sick leave, after a three-month probationary period.

The new policy states employees must accumulate 15 days, or work 15 months, to receive sick leave compensation.

Sick leave will be paid, regardless of days accrued, for hospitalization or if illness extends beyond four consecutive working days.

Employees who accumulate more than 35 days sick leave after five years may "cash in" some or all of them at "50 percent of the value" to get additional paid vacation or salary. After 10 years, days can be cashed in for full value.

The board approved the policy, but left its implementation to Burns. Personnel manager Bob Jones recommended the policy not go into effect until June or July, citing an employee "stress factor."

The policy was formed to help alleviate the high number of employees' absences, administrators indicated. Diane Snodgrass, nursing services director, said 66 calls had to be made last weekend to get enough personnel to staff an unusually crowded hospital.

The board also allocated $112,683 to purchase a new General Electric Gamma Camera, used in nuclear medicine. Fisher said the new camera, which replaces a seven-year-old model, could generate up to $10,000 more a year in revenues from increased services. Otherwise the hospital would cut back on such services as the old camera was unreliable.

Council listens to mall interests, delays decision

By MARTY TRILLIARISE
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls City Council members Monday delayed a final decision on a proposed 63-acre shopping mall on Blue Lakes Boulevard-North.

The action followed an hour-long public hearing over a zone change requested by the developers of the proposed mall. The mall, which is being proposed by Woodbury Corp. of Salt Lake City, would be located in the southwest corner of the Pole Line Road and Blue Lakes Boulevard North intersection.

The hearing climaxed a period of more than a month since the proposal was first rejected by the city Planning and Zoning Commission.

Woodbury wants the council to rezone the 63-acre mall site, owned by John Breckenridge of Twin Falls, for commercial use. The land is now divided into commercial and residential zones. Accompanying the zone change request is an application for annexation.

The council's decision will not determine whether a mall is built in Twin Falls. A mall proposed by General Growth Development Inc. of Des Moines, Iowa, is being planned on what was formerly the Oren Boone property, located east of Blue Lakes Boulevard North on the Canyon Rim. General Growth has obtained the necessary commercial zoning for the project site.

The council's decision is crucial because both developers maintain Twin Falls will support only one mall. That means the key to success is building first and that depends on which developer can line up major department stores. Those stores will not sign unless the project already has the necessary zoning.

Unlike the planning commission hearing in which local citizens argued their concerns over another mall, only the two firms testified before the council. Woodbury representatives argued the city would receive more benefits and asked the council to allow them to compete. But General Growth representatives argued the city's zoning ordinances mandated the council to protect property values within the city, including their project.

Breckenridge said his land, which has remained agricultural, is located in a growing commercial area and that development of his land is inevitable.

"I'm not prepared to speak on what effect a regional mall would have on downtown Twin Falls," he said. "If that's going to hurt Twin Falls, then Twin Falls has already been hurt. That's my opinion," he said.

Twin Falls Attorney Leon Smith, representing Woodbury, said the Breckenridge site offered several advantages over the Boone site. In remarks before the council, during the hearing and at an earlier work session, Smith said the project would offer an extension of North College Road to Blue Lakes, a widening of Highway Department plans, and an orderly traffic entrance/exit system.

Twin Falls Attorney Kent Taylor, representing General Growth, argued that the city's zoning laws were designed to protect property values within the city.

Referring to the Local Planning Act of 1975, the bylaws of the city planning commission, and the city's zoning ordinances and comprehensive plan, Taylor said the policy of the city is to protect and enhance local property values, and ensure the economy of localities.

He added his company's position did not violate the basics of free enterprise anymore than the patent system or trademark rights.

"I don't believe in time, first in right is un-American," he said.

CSI near bid stage on new building

By LARRY SWISHER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The College of Southern Idaho is nearly ready to call for bids on a new, geothermally-heated $2.4 million vocational-education building.

The advisory council for the Idaho Department of Public Works Monday morning approved the final proposal for the facility, CSI President James Taylor told the college's board of trustees at their April meeting Monday evening.

He said one other clearance, from the regional office of the Economic Development Administration, remains before CSI can finalize specifications and advertise for bids from contractors. That clearance may come today.

EDA has agreed to allow the college to apply the costs of a geothermal well, already drilled on the east side of the campus, toward its share of a 50/50 matching federal grant, Taylor also announced.

The new building, to be located on the northwest part of the campus, will be heated by 105-degree underground hot water. Since the facility will not have a backup heating system, Taylor said, it will be necessary to drill a second well closer than the first.

"This makes sense economically, too," he said, noting that the cost to extend hot water pipes throughout the college's buildings would probably be more expensive than drilling a second well.

CSI has applied to the U.S. Department of Energy for a $1.2 million grant to retrofit its buildings for geothermal heating. Taylor said a DOE delegation will visit the campus May 15 to examine the college's geothermal project and plans for "energizing the whole campus."

Taylor said the college has estimated it could cut $100,000 per year from its electric bill. A recent 26 percent rate increase granted to Idaho Power Co. would probably raise that estimate.

Although the college hoped to strike 130-degree hot water, the flow and temperature are enough so that "we won't have to pump or heat the water," Taylor said.

The new vocational class building will contain a computer center and facilities for training in diesel, recreation, vehicle and farm machinery mechanics; general maintenance; food service; and business occupations.

Construction will cost approximately $1.6 million and the building will contain about $600,000 worth of equipment, Taylor said.

Union vote outcome hinges on challenges

By STEPHANIE SCHOROW
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The results of the union election at the Skyview-Hazeldel Manor will not be known for at least another month, according to the National Labor Relations Board.

Although nursing home employees voted 52 to 51 in favor of joining the Idaho Service Employees Union last week, eight challenge votes were cast enough to change the outcome.

The NLRB will now send an agent to Twin Falls within the month to investigate the eight voters involved, according to Rudy Hurtado, Seattle based agent. If they are determined to be eligible, their votes will be counted. But Hurtado did not know how long the investigation will take.

Both union and management expressed optimism about the final result.

"We feel we have an excellent chance," said Richard Drake, administrator. "We're not, in any sense of the word, giving up."

Warren Lundquist, state director of the Idaho union, feels the union will "definitely" maintain its lead. He noted that employees have begun working on a list of bargaining items, with job security as the main priority.

The NLRB waits five days after any union election to allow the parties to file objections as to the conduct of the balloting. Hurtado said both the union and the employers told the Times-News they would not file any objections.

"An agent will then be assigned to the case, and he or she will visit Twin Falls to determine through documentation and interviews if the eight voters are eligible.

The agent is asked to report findings within 30 days to Charles Henderson, regional director, who makes the final decision.

Either party may appeal the decision to the NLRB's national office in Washington, and the case could wind up in court, Hurtado said.

Until the results are decided, restrictions on management imposed by a union drive, such as limitations of wage and benefit changes, remain in force.

GEORGE ANTHONY
"I have a good chance"

Anthony, Chisholm want nomination

By LARRY SWISHER
Times-News writer

BUHL — George Anthony and Bill Chisholm are planning very different strategies in their campaigns to unseat Republican State Rep. Noy Brackett this year.

The two Democrats have both filed for House Seat A, Legislative District 24, the only contest in the May 27 primary among the legislative candidates in traditionally Republican Twin Falls County.

Both men said they will direct their primary campaigns at the issues and the Republicans, not at each other.

Any similarity between their campaign plans ends there.

Anthony plans an attracting GOP voters-to-win-in-November, while

Democrats seek District 24 rematch

Primary 1980

Chisholm will concentrate on trying to get more young people to vote.

Both men have run against Brackett before and lost. In his first try for office, Anthony gathered 3,065 votes (38.1 percent) to the incumbent's 4,979 votes in 1976. Two years later, Chisholm lost 2,146 (32.2 percent) to 4,217. Anthony also went down to defeat in 1978 against State Sen. John Barker.

This time, Anthony believes many people of both parties were dissatisfied with the performance of the Legislature and of Brackett in the 1980 session.

"I expect to obtain a great number of moderate Republican votes if I go into the general election," Anthony said.

Referring to Brackett, he said, "No man can be effective in legislative proceedings when he is gone for a full week on two separate occasions."

Brackett, a three-term member of the House and a rancher, appointed a substitute during his leaves of absence, which he took to attend national caucuses and range-management conventions. He and Republican legislative leaders have defended the trips as beneficial and valuable.

In the primary, Anthony said, "I'm not really running in opposition to Bill Chisholm. I'm running for the position of representative from District 24, for an office I am reasonably confident I have a good chance at even as a Democrat."

Chisholm said he will also direct his primary campaign at the general election.

"I'll campaign on identifying problems and solutions and try to show I am the most viable candidate to deal with these," he said.

"Everything I campaigned on last time, the problems I identified, are worse," he said, citing energy, economics and education. "I felt the combination of these problems and the fact no one was dealing with them that someone had to speak out with possible solutions and new ideas."

"most viable candidate"

Union vote hinges on outcome of challenges

The NLRB will also investigate unfair labor practice charges filed by the union, which involve seven of the eight challenged voters. The same agent may be assigned to investigate both the labor charges and the ballots, which would speed the investigation, Hurtado said.

Generally, if the labor charges are determined to have "merit" under the National Labor Relations Act, the NLRB attempts to settle the case informally. Failing that, a formal hearing will be held, Hurtado said.

However, if the labor charges are determined to have "no merit," the union will be allowed to file a physical therapist at the home. The NLRB must now decide whether this employee is considered a "professional," (like a registered nurse). Professionals vote separately from other employees.

In Thursday's election, registered nurses voted 6 to 2 against forming a separate bargaining unit within the union. The two-challenge votes involved were not enough to change the outcome of that election.

Both sides in the dispute contend they have sold cases as to either the fairness or the unfairness of the seven terminations. To win the election, the management must win all seven challenges and the union must lose its challenge, qualifying that voter.

If that person votes against the union, the vote would be 52-52, and management wins a tie. If the therapist is determined to be in the "non-professional" category, that vote may also become crucial to the final tally.

In an incident that Drake claims is related to the election, a rock was thrown through the front window of a house owned by the Drakes sometime Friday night.

Drake said $300 in damage was done to the plate glass window. There was no one living in the house at the time, although the Drakes eventually plan to move in.

Twin Falls police are investigating.

Chisholm said he will make a strong effort this time, as opposed to 1978, to bring "new blood into the political system." Many decisions being made, particularly about energy, are very critical, he said.

And it's the younger people who will pay for those decisions, he said. "I'm trying to get those people to be involved and be responsible for their own situation, so they don't just inherit it years down the road."

About this election session, Anthony said, "It became clear that the Legislature and its policies are in the hands of a few strong-willed members of the majority party, one of whose hallmarks is never to give a thing for nothing. It is very difficult for it can possibly be avoided. They have in fact tried to take away some of his duties as chief executive officer of the state — all of this to the detriment of meeting the real needs of the voters and the people of Idaho."

Anthony said the state needs legislators who can work with the governor on problems that cut across party lines.

Anthony said he was "quite happy" to see the Legislature pass a homestead exemption for homeowner tax relief, which he said was one of his major campaign positions two years ago. Among other accomplishments of the legislators, he listed a good appropriation for education, "under the circumstances."

Singer kin file $72 million suit against Utah, officials

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — The widow and children of slain playwright John Singer Monday filed a $72 million wrongful death suit against Utah and Summit County officials.

Attorney Gerald Spence of Jackson Hole, Wyo., filed the 48-page suit in U.S. District Court for Utah on behalf of Vicki Singer and her seven children.

Singer was shot to death in January of 1979 outside his Marlon, Utah, home. He allegedly pulled a gun on nine state and Summit County officers who were trying to arrest him.

The arrest attempt culminated a lengthy battle between Singer, who refused to send his children to public schools, and the courts. He said a public education would expose his children to ideas, such as racial equality, which he believed to be wrong.

Singer, who broke with the Mormon Church because the religion no longer practices polygamy, took a second wife a few months before his death.

The suit names Gov. Scott Matheson, Utah Attorney General Robert Hansen, State Public Safety Commissioner Larry Lunnan, Summit County Sheriff Ron Rinsion, and the members of the Summit County Sheriff's department as defendants.

Last year, the U.S. Justice Department cleared the officers involved in the Singer shooting of wrongdoing. Federal investigators said the policemen acted properly because it was reasonable for them to believe that Singer intended to shoot at them.

Andrus issues right-of-way grant

Northern pipeline on track

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Rep. Arlan Stangeland, R-Minn., said Monday Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus has issued a right-of-way grant for construction and operation of the Northern Tier Pipeline across federal public land.

The proposed pipeline is scheduled to bring Alaskan Slope crude oil along a 1,432-mile land route from Port Angeles, Wash., to Clearbrook in northwestern Minnesota.

Stangeland said the Northern Tier Pipeline is important for transporting crude oil to the upper Midwest and its use will help increase energy supplies in Minnesota, an energy deficient state without its own coal or oil reserves.

"I am extremely pleased with this announcement by Secretary Andrus," he said, "because it means we are one step closer to construction and completion of this energy project."

He said the Northern Tier Pipeline is "the best option" for transporting crude oil to Minnesota.

In January President Carter gave Northern Tier Pipeline Co. a year to come up with the financing to construct the line estimated at more than $1 billion. Shift opposition to the pipeline developed in the state of Washington where environmentalists are concerned about oil leakage in the harbor around Port Angeles.

Another proposed pipeline to Minnesota from Wood River, Ill., to the Twin Cities has run into opposition from farmers who oppose the through farmland in southeast Minnesota and eastern Iowa.

Williams Pipeline Co. has submitted the oil line along an alternate route.

Utah group opposes 'rebellion'

WELLSVILLE, Utah (UPI) — The Utah Wildlife Federation has adopted a resolution opposing the so-called "Sagebrush Rebellion Bill" sponsored by Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah.

The federation — made up of Utah fishing, hunting and outdoor organizations — says it is "firmly" opposed to the Senate bill which would transfer control of unreserved public lands from federal agencies to the states.

The resolution adopted Sunday at the federation's annual meeting said it "deplored the pressures being exerted upon federal agencies by many private users of federal lands."

Hatch's bill claims the states could do a better job of managing public lands than the Bureau of Land Management.

The Utah Republican has said, "The federal bureaucrats spend three times as much to earn only one-fourth of the net revenue which have been obtained by the Utah Division of State Lands."

But Tony Dietz, administrative service director for the State Lands Division, says Utah has only four people "directly" involved in managing its 4 million acres of surface rights and 6 million acres of mineral rights.

Dietz has said the state's lands are mostly small blocks scattered throughout the 22 million acres of BLM lands in the state. "The BLM manages those sections for us. We think that's great because they do it for free."

Earlier this year the Utah Legislature passed its version of the Sagebrush Rebellion bill. The measure seeking state ownership of BLM lands, directs the State Attorney General to claim title to the unreserved public lands.

The unreserved lands include only the 22 million acres of public lands in Utah administered by the BLM.

White Pine: No dice on MX planning

RENO (UPI) — State officials have given up trying to get White Pine County to join MX Missile System planning efforts.

Bob Hill, head of the state's MX Management Committee, said White Pine officials will get $45,000, their share of the $225,000 the state allocated for local government MX planning, to conduct their own planning studies.

The state had been trying to get rural counties to join in planning for the impact of MX. But White Pine officials claimed Clark County was trying to control the small counties involved: White Pine, Lincoln and Lander.

Officials led by White Pine Commission Chairman J.R. Jones refused to join the multi-county effort.

Olympics

Soviets pressure West Germans

LAUSANNE, Switzerland (UPI) — The Soviet Union Monday stepped up pressure on West Germany to ignore the U.S. call for an Olympic boycott.

It warned West Germany that its absence from the Moscow Games would seriously affect relations between the two countries.

In Lausanne, where the International Olympic Committee was meeting to try to stave off a boycott, the Soviet message was delivered by Ignati Novikov, president of the Moscow Olympic Committee and a Soviet deputy prime minister, in a private meeting with Willi Daume, president of the West German National Olympic Committee.

Sources at the meeting between Novikov and Daume said the West Germans were left in no doubt as to the threat to relations between the two countries if West Germany bows to U.S. — pressure — and — boycotts — the Moscow Games.

Daume himself had little comment on the meeting other than to say that the subject of Afghanistan was discussed.

According to Olympic leaders, the West Germans hold the balance between the success or failure of a boycott at Moscow and they have been under increasing pressure, first from the United States and now from the Soviet Union.

Daume said the latest public opinion poll in West Germany showed 87 percent now favored a boycott and said that this would be taken into consideration, along with the attitude of the government and Parliament when the West German Olympic Committee votes May 15.

"The German government and German Parliament will make a decision this week and next week, and it will probably be in the form of a recommendation that we follow the United States and do not go to Moscow," Daume said.

Yet another warning to West Germany came from Vladimir Popov, vice-president of the Moscow organizers, in a hard-hitting interview in Moscow with the French newspaper L'Equipe.

Popov said it had taken 30 years to normalize relations between Russia and West Germany and that President Carter's pressure on Bonn to spool everything with a boycott was "a state of mind which smelled of gunpowder."

The strength of the Soviet warnings, coupled with the Russians' recent pressure to have the U.S. expelled from the Olympic movement, have led several Olympic leaders here to suggest that the Soviets are now for the first time seriously worried about the boycott.

"There is a definite change of attitude," said one IOC executive board member. "They are very nervous."

Robert Kane, president of the U.S. Olympic Committee, said that the USOC would strongly resist Soviet pressure to expel them from the Olympics. Kane has been summoned by the IOC to explain why the USOC bowed to political pressure in its boycott decision.

Under IOC rule 24, national Olympic committees must not allow government interference in their affairs.

The amount of pressure the Russians succeed in bringing on the IOC to kick out the United States depends on how many other Western European countries join in, the USOC's position would be much less isolated.

Europe wants ban on flag-waving

LAUSANNE, Switzerland (UPI) — The leaders of four Western European National Olympic Committees Monday told the International Olympic Committee that national flags and anthems should be banned from the Moscow Olympics.

The NOC Presidents of Belgium, Britain, Italy, and Liechtenstein also told the IOC Executive Board that the Russians should not misconstrue the desire of most Western European NOCs to compete in the Moscow Games as a sign of approval of Soviet policy in Afghanistan.

Sir Denis Follows, chairman of the British Olympic Association, said the four-man delegation represented 15 European NOCs which wanted to make sure the Russians understood their position.

"Many of us also feel it is not a good idea for our national flags to be paraded before the Russian population who might think that showed some kind of approval of the Soviet regime," said Sir Denis.

But he added he did not think the IOC would agree to a ban. "I'm not optimistic because there are many countries that set great store by that kind of thing," he said. "But it's time the Olympics reverted back to its ideals and ideals and had less of this nationalistic stuff."

Sir Denis was accompanied by Raoul Mollet of Belgium, Franco Borraro of Italy, and Dr. Peter Ritter of Liechtenstein.

Canadians consider alternatives

OTTAWA (UPI) — The Canadian government is considering hosting international competitions in two or three sports if it decides to boycott the Moscow Olympics, Sports Minister Gerald Regan said Monday.

Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau, under Conservative attack for not announcing a date for revealing Canada's position on joining the U.S.-sponsored boycott, said a single alternative competition had been found impractical.

However, Regan said several countries, including Canada if it joins the protest against the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan, were examining the idea of "holding competitions for single sports at various places."

"Certainly Canada has been considering the possibility of utilizing some of the existing facilities in different regions of this country to stage events in two or three sports," he said. "If that should turn out to be desirable and if the boycott indeed were to take effect,

The sport minister said his department had made a "very careful examination" of what was possible if the Canadian team does not go to the summer Olympics.

Trudeau said he would discuss the situation in Afghanistan and Iran with U.S. Secretary of State Cyrus Vance when he arrives for talks on Wednesday and said he felt no need to state a Canadian position in advance of the meeting.

The prime minister said he considers the meeting of the Canadian Olympic Committee, scheduled for next week, as a more important deadline for announcing his view of the boycott.

"Kareem is a great center," said Sikma, "but Kareem (Abdul-Jabbar) is the best center I have ever played against."

"We can't afford to get behind or lose at home like we did against Milwaukee. Sooner or later it has to hurt you if you have to win on their homecourt."

Seattle forward Lonnie Shelton agreed Abdul-Jabbar could be a key to the series, but said the Sonics should have a rebounding advantage.

"Kareem is an intimidator, a shot blocker," said Shelton. "Lanier takes up space in the middle and if you run into him it takes its toll. Lanier left a lot of sore bodies, a career won't do this or he would get the worst of it."

Merrell hurls Bobcat victory

By GARY ELIASSEN
Times-News sports editor

TWIN FALLS — The Burley Bobcats are streaking.

Counting Monday's 2-1 baseball victory over Twin Falls at Jaycee Park, the Bobcats have won seven of their last eight ball games.

It's something which is bringing smiles to the face of Burley Coach Dean Satterfield these days.

"Maybe it's the warm weather," he laughed after watching Alan Merrell hurl the Bobcats past the powerless Bruins. "All I know is that we have been playing pretty good ball lately."

Satterfield reminded that the last time his Bobcats played Twin Falls it was 40-degrees and his team lost 12-0 on its own field, said he better now. That's the difference, he says.

But in some respects you wouldn't have known it Monday.

Though winning, Burley could only manage four hits, the same as the Bruins. In the contest — and if it hadn't been for a 4-run, fifth inning, the Bobcats would have been going back on the bus a loser.

The game was a pitchers' dual all the way.

Alan Merrell had the Bruins

Sophs win No. 14

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls sophomore baseball set a new school record by scoring its 14th win of the season Monday.

The Bruins, now 14-9 after whipping Burley 5-0, erased the old mark of 13 wins, according to Coach Rich Milward.

Brook Brodeen won his seventh victory of the season and hurled a one-hitter in leading the talented sophomores to the triumph.

Though getting only six hits, the Bruins took good advantage of them, getting on in the first, two in the third and two in the fourth. The two teams played only five innings.

Brodeen collected a single, Frank Easley a triple and single, and catcher Kirk Trefman went 3-3 including one double.

The Bruins now face a crucial Friday doubleheader with Nampa beginning at 1 p.m. on the high school field. It will be the first game played on the diamond.

fooled with a mixture of speedy fastballs and curves, while the Bruins' Kerry Brown was keeping the ball low and doing some dandy change of pace himself.

The Bruins jumped on top 1-0 in the fourth inning.

Greg Habel got on base on an error, and then advanced to third when Lynn Thorpe hit a slow roller to the Burley first baseman who somehow let it go between his legs and go out to shallow right field.

With one out, that put runners at first and third with Pat King at the plate, and then came what turned out to be one of the key plays of the game.

Habel, on a fake steal by Thorpe to second, was picked off, third base by the pitcher to make it two outs. Thorpe then stole second, and scored on a single by King up the middle.

The Bruins couldn't mount a threat after that lining; in fact, they weren't able to get a ball out of the infield.

"This is the fifth one run game we have lost," said Coach Ron Watson after the game, still mulling over how to get his club back on the winning track. "But we'll come back. The team morale is still high, and these guys know they can win."

Burley's winning runs came in the fifth inning when Joe Martineau singled, Craig Jones sacrificed him to second, and Kyle Carpenter doubled Martineau home. Following two more walks, Frank Heckenrood singled home another run.

About his winning pitcher, Merrell, who is now 6-2 on the season, Satterfield said, "He had them off stride today. I can't say enough about the job he did."

But Satterfield also had praise for Burley pitcher, Brown.

"He beat us down at Burley 12-0. He's a good pitcher," he said.

Getting the other hits for Twin Falls were Brown, a double in the first; Bill Burton, a single in the third; and Habel, a single in the fourth.

Both teams have important games coming up this week.

Twin Falls will host Nampa in a doubleheader at 1 p.m. Friday. Burley, now 13-7, hosts Minico Thursday at 3 p.m.

Sikma holds key in Lakers' series

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (UPI) — The defending NBA champion Seattle SuperSonics pushed to the limit in their series against Milwaukee, take on the well-rested Los Angeles Lakers tonight in the opening game of the best-of-seven Western Conference series at the Forum.

Seattle advanced to the Western finals Sunday with a 98-94 victory over the Bucks in the seventh game of the series. The Lakers haven't played in a week after eliminating the Phoenix Suns in five games.

Seattle Coach Lenny Wilkens said the pressure-packed series against Milwaukee shouldn't bother his club.

"I'm not worried about the lack of rest," he said. "We've been getting nine or ten people in the game. Our bench has given the starters rest and the team should have more poise in the next series."

Milwaukee center Bob Lanier scored 19 points in Sunday's game, but Seattle center Jack Sikma said the real test for him will come against the Lakers.

"Lanier is a great center," said Sikma, "but Kareem (Abdul-Jabbar) is the best center I have ever played against."

"We can't afford to get behind or lose at home like we did against Milwaukee. Sooner or later it has to hurt you if you have to win on their homecourt."

Seattle forward Lonnie Shelton agreed Abdul-Jabbar could be a key to the series, but said the Sonics should have a rebounding advantage.

"Kareem is an intimidator, a shot blocker," said Shelton. "Lanier takes up space in the middle and if you run into him it takes its toll. Lanier left a lot of sore bodies, a career won't do this or he would get the worst of it."

Jack Sikma says he must outplay Lakers' Kareem Abdul-Jabbar.

Gerulaitis, Solomon open with victories

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — Vitas Gerulaitis ousted Adriano Panatta in straight sets and Harold Solomon was pushed to the limit in defeating John Alexander — to highlight Monday's second round of a $300,000 tennis tournament.

Gerulaitis, the No. 3 seed, scored a 6-2, 6-1 victory over Panatta of Italy and the sixth-seeded Solomon advanced with a 6-3, 4-6, 7-6 (7-4) victory over Alexander of Australia.

Today, top-seeded Bjorn Borg plays Hank Pfister and second-seeded John McEnroe meets Stan Smith.

The winner of the tournament, which ends Sunday, will receive $30,000.

Gerulaitis, who was beaten in straight sets in the finals of a tournament three weeks ago and hadn't played since, said he played a "half-steady game" and made "a few good passing shots."

Solomon, a baseline specialist, took advantage of the slow artificial surface. Alexander, known for his powerful serve and volley game, managed to stay close, matching Solomon with effective ground strokes. But Solomon gained control during the tiebreaker en route to the 7-4 victory in the final set.

"It's been so long since I've won that I had almost forgotten how to do it," said Solomon. "The last three tournaments I've lost in the first and second rounds. I started hitting some decent serves towards the end of the match today."

In other matches, eighth-seeded Ivan Lendl rebounded from a second-set loss to defeat Kevin Curran 7-6, 3-6, 6-2; Poland's Wojtek Fibak defeated Brian Gottfried 6-4, 6-1; Tim Gullikson defeated Vijay Amritraj 6-4, 6-3; Dick Stockton knocked off Jaime Filio 6-3, 6-3; Bob Lutz defeated Vince Van Patten 6-1, 1-6, 6-4; and Bruce McNamee defeated Van Winitsky 6-4, 6-4.

Thomas' home run lifts Milwaukee

MILWAUKEE (UPI) — Gorman Thomas belted a two-run homer with none out in the 11th inning Monday night, lifting the Milwaukee Brewers to a 7-5 victory over the Cleveland Indians.

Losing reliever Victor Cruz, 0-2, hit rookie Mark Brouhard with a pitch to start the Brewers' 11th and Thomas, after attempting to sacrifice on the first pitch, then hit his third homer of the year to give reliever Bob McClure, 1-0, the victory.

The Brewers tied the score with two runs in the bottom of the ninth. Pinc-hitter Charlie Moore started the rally with a single-off starter Bob Ojwinski and Paul Morrell greeted rookie reliever Mike Stanton with a single. Robin Yount sacrificed the runner to second and third before Sid Monge came on and gave up a two-run single to pinch-hitter Cecil Cooper.

Mike Hargrave put the Indians ahead 4-3 with a solo homer in the eighth inning and Cleveland added another run in the eighth on a sacrifice fly by Ron Fruitt.

Rangers 3, Tigers 2
ARLINGTON, Texas (UPI) — Jon Matlack turned in his third straight strong pitching performance Monday night, allowing only six hits in a 1-3-inning-and-striking-out-eight-inning performance that led the Texas Rangers to a 3-2 victory over the Detroit Tigers.

Foster goes 5-5 in leading Cincinnati

HOUSTON (UPI) — George Foster went five-for-five with four singles and his fourth home run of the year and Mike LaCoss won his third game Monday night in leading the Cincinnati Reds to a 6-5 victory over the Houston Astros.

The Reds scored their six runs in the first five innings primarily on Foster's best hitting performance of the season. He drove in the Reds' first run with a single in the first and belted a home run in the fifth inning.

The Reds also scored in the second on Junior Kennedy's sacrifice fly for a 2-0 lead and they added three more runs in the fourth on a run-scoring single by Cesar Geronimo and a two-run double by Ken Griffey to chase loser Vern Riffe, 0-1.

LaCoss, who had pitched complete games in his previous two starts, needed relief help from four relievers. Mario Stoia struck out Jeff Leonard with the bases loaded in the sixth inning to end a rally and reliever Doug Bair stopped an Astros' rally in the seventh by getting Enos Cabell to ground into a double play and striking out Art Howe.

In the eighth, Tom Hume got Dennis Walling to fly out with two men on base.

Mets 3, Phillies 0
PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Ray Burris and Neil Allen combined on a five-hitter Monday night in pitching the New York Mets to a 3-0 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies.

Burris gained his second victory against one loss before leaving with one out in the eighth. Allen came on to gain his fourth save — he has saved each of the four Mel victories.

In the eighth, Tom Hume got Dennis Walling to fly out with two men on base.

Yankees 3, Orioles 2
NEW YORK (UPI) — Rupert Jones drove in the winning run with an eighth-inning single and Tommy John allowed only three hits in 8 2/3 innings Monday night to lead the New York Yankees to a 3-2 victory over the Baltimore Orioles.

Rick Cerone led off the eighth with a single off loser Mike Flanagan, 1-2, and was sacrificed to second by Rocky Dent. One out later, Jones rolled a weak grounder between first and second to score Cerone.

A third-inning homer by Nettles gave the Yankees a 1-0 lead but the Orioles tied the score in the fifth — on an RBI — grounder.

Red Sox 9, White Sox 8
BOSTON (UPI) — Dwight Evans doubled home the winning run in the eighth inning. Monday and Jim Rice and Carlton Fisk each had two-run homers earlier in the game to rally to Boston Red Sox to a 9-8 victory over the Chicago White Sox.

With Boston trailing 8-6 in the eighth, Tony Perez and Fisk singled and Jerry Remy sacrificed Perez and pinch-runner Jim Dwyer to second and third. Jack Brohamer singled both runners home to tie the score of Chicago reliever Randy Scarberry, 0-1, before Evans laced his double into left field.

Bruins cut Islanders lead in NHL playoffs

UNIONDALE, N.Y. (UPI) — Terry O'Reilly scored with 2:47 remaining in the first overtime Monday night to give the Boston Bruins a 4-3 victory over the New York Islanders, cutting the Islanders' lead to 3-1 in their best-of-seven NHL quarterfinal playoff series.

Peter McNab stole the puck in the Islanders' end, sent it into the slot and O'Reilly beat goalie Billy Smith with a 15-foot wrist shot to keep the Bruins alive. It was O'Reilly's third goal of the playoffs and the teams return to Boston for Game 2 Tuesday night.

Rick Middleton sent the game into overtime with just 20 seconds remaining in the third period when he knocked a loose puck out of a crowd in front of Islanders goaltender Billy Smith and banged it past Smith's right side. O'Reilly and Brad Park received assists.

The Bruins pulled goalie Gerry Cheevers with one minute left and kept the puck in the Islanders' end. O'Reilly threw the puck in front and Middleton poked it in.

Clark Gillies had given the Islanders a 3-2 lead with 6:30 remaining with his third playoff goal when he deflected a perfect pass from Butch Goring past Cheevers. Dave Langevin also received an assist.

The Bruins tied it 2-2 at the end of the third period. O'Reilly skated in on Smith and fired from 10 feet out. Smith blocked the shot but Peter McNab pushed in the rebound for his seventh playoff goal.

Mike Bossy gave the Islanders a 2-1 lead on a power play at 8:18 of the second period.

Eagles to travel to Snow College

By MIKE PRATER
TWIN FALLS — The College of Southern Idaho's next three baseball games could prove to be the turning point of the season for the 11-13 Eagles.

The golden birds will travel to Snow College for one game today and a doubleheader Wednesday before returning home for key district games this weekend at Rexburg's Ricks College.

"I've only heard hearsay, but I know that Snow has one good pitcher, Nelson Page, and he's hot as last year. So if he's on, we could be in trouble," said Eagles' Coach Jim Walker Monday night.

"Other than that I don't know too much about them. I know they are having an off year, but they are a good club with some pitching power." To counteract Page's arm, Walker is going with sophomore Rick Eckelberry for the Eagles' pitching duties.

Walker feels the next two days are very important for the Eagles' future plans.

"We play four district games this weekend and in the future. But it will go into this weekend's games and it will help us."

"I'm starting to see signs of consistency on the team and our pitching is coming through," said Walker. "We got a couple of wins without hurt" and the kids are confident they can do it, and so am I."

Bruins cut Islanders lead in NHL playoffs

UNIONDALE, N.Y. (UPI) — Terry O'Reilly scored with 2:47 remaining in the first overtime Monday night to give the Boston Bruins a 4-3 victory over the New York Islanders, cutting the Islanders' lead to 3-1 in their best-of-seven NHL quarterfinal playoff series.

Rodgers whips Boston field for third straight victory

BOSTON (UPI) — Bill Rodgers, completely overwhelming his opposition as never before despite uncomfortably warm running conditions, Monday became only the second man to win three consecutive Boston Marathons.

He posted a smashing 69-second victory in the world's most famous long-distance foot race.

The 32-year-old Rodgers, who finished in 2:12:11 for his slowest winning time in Boston, joined Clarence DeMar and Glard Cote as the only four-time winners of the prestigious Patriots Day race.

Rodgers, who also won in 1975, joined DeMar in becoming the second man to post three straight wins in Boston. DeMar won seven marathons, three straight from 1922 to 1924.

But while Rodgers' win was utterly convincing, the women's contest was tainted by controversy.

Rosie Ruiz of New York apparently smashed the women's world and Boston record in a stunning upset, finishing in 2:31:56 in only her second marathon. Her finish was more than four seconds faster than any woman had previously run in Boston.

But shortly after the race, Marathon Director Will Cloney said he would look into questions raised by other women-runners about Ruiz' finish.

Both Jacqueline Gareau of Montreal, who finished second, and Patti Lyons of Quincy, Mass., who finished third, said they had not seen Ruiz pass them on the course and were stunned to learn of her win when they crossed the finish line.

"There is obviously a problem in the determination of the women's winner. At this moment we have no proof to cause us to reverse the decision," said Cloney.

"We'll do everything possible to effect whether there was discrepancy and if there was we'll invalidate the final results and adjust the positions," he said.

"I haven't talked to the young lady in question. I have no reason to accuse her of anything. We do have grave doubts. We'll view every possible film, but we won't have a decision for a minimum of one week and possibly two weeks.

"I think it's disgraceful that this should happen in an amateur event. If that's what this race is coming to, it's deplorable," said Cloney.

Racquetball deadline today

TWIN FALLS — Deadline to enter this weekend's Magic Valley Racquetball Championships is today.

The tournament, which is expected to draw about 75 competitors from throughout the Twin Falls-Burley-Ketchum area, will be held at Canyon Walls Racquet Club Saturday and Sunday.

Divisions include men's and women's A, B, C and novice singles; men's and women's doubles; and junior 16-under combined boys and girls.

Entry fee is $12 for the first event and $6 for the second. There will be a consolation round.

Tournament directors are Brett Staples and Ed Huckfeldt, Jr. Entries can be submitted to Canyon Walls.

Three more enter Indy race

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — Three more valid entries were received Monday for this year's Indianapolis 500, bringing the field to 99, one short of the record 100 entries last year.

One of the final three entries was a third car for driver Danny Ongals of the Interscope team.

The other two were for first-year drivers at Indianapolis, bringing the rookie field to record 21.

Ross Davis, Grand Junction, Colo., entered one of the cars and named himself as driver. The other was entered by Cliff Menard Racing of Eau Claire, Wis., which named Norm Johnson as driver. Johnson also is from Eau Claire.

Bochte top American Leaguer

NEW YORK (UPI) — Seattle Mariner Bruce Bochte, who was responsible for the winning run in three of four Seattle victories this past week, Monday was named the American League's Player of the Week.

The 29-year-old infielder, who ranked third in the league in game-winning RBIs with 15 last year, was credited with two last week. He did not receive credit for his third, a double to right field, as the ball was bobbled by the rightfielder.

Bochte hit .423 last week in going 11-for-26 and amassed 22 bases including three doubles, a triple and two home runs. He scored seven runs and drove in 14 with an on-base percentage of .531.

Reno vaulter receives honor

BOISE (UPI) — University of Nevada-Reno decathlete pole vaulter Lane Maestretti and Weber State stepple chaser Doug Freidli were named Monday as the Big Sky Conference track and field athletes for last week.

Maestretti, a junior from Austin, Nev., established a new U.S. record for the pole vault event in the decathlon, with a vault of 17-3 at the Mount San Antonio College relays last week.

He finished ninth in the event with 7,558 points. Both mark were school and individual records and his leap in the pole vault also qualified him for the NCAA championships in that event.

Freidli, a senior from Hooper, Utah, won the university division in stepple chase at the meet with a time of 8:49.6. It was the best time for the 3,000-meter event in the Big Sky and it just missed the NCAA qualifying standard by .6 of a second.

NCAA investigates Hampton

HAMPTON, Va. (UPI) — The NCAA has told Hampton Institute it will announce by May 9 its findings of an investigation into alleged violations by the college's powerful tennis program, a school spokesman said Monday.

Michael Ballweg, an HI sports information officer, said the NCAA has told the college it is examining charges of improper recruiting and financial support. Ballweg declined comment on the validity of charges, but noted this is the third time in the past few years the tennis program has come under NCAA scrutiny.

Dionne top NHL player

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Los Angeles Kings center Marcel Dionne Monday was named 1979-80 National Hockey Player of the Year by The Sporting News.

Dionne, who scored 53 goals for the Kings, received 128 of 348 votes cast by NHL players in the annual poll by the weekly publication. He edged out Wayne Gretzky of the Edmonton Oilers by just one vote.

Bears won't re-sign Richards

LAKE FOREST, Ill. (UPI) — The Chicago Bears announced Monday they will not resign free agent wide receiver Golden Richards for the 1980 football season.

Richards, who became a free agent with the expiration of his Bear contract after the 1979 season, started 19 games for Chicago over the past two seasons.

He was traded to the Bears from Dallas in September 1978 and enjoyed the best of his seven years as a pro that season with Chicago, catching 28 passes for 341 yards.

Richards, 29, had only five receptions last year. Although he started the club's first five games, he spent November and December on the injured reserve list.

Richards, who set four NCAA punt and kickoff return records at Brigham Young University before transferring to Hawaii, was a second-round draft pick of the Cowboys.

Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag

Dandy defense beats odds

He shifts to the eight of spades. South wins and has to attack trumps. He can afford just one trump loser. He can afford just one trump loser. He can afford just one trump loser.

By Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag. Here is a hand that is worth a lot of study. As a starter, there are lots of ways for North and South to get to four trump which is its lead pipe climb, but they land in four hearts.

West leads his king of clubs and continues with the ace and East drops the five. East completes the echo with the king, but West declines to give his partner a ruff since South will overruff.

Spurs offer Gervin $8 million for 40 years

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (UPI) — The San Antonio Spurs Monday offered George Gervin $8.75 million over the next 40 years — but the offer is "not even close" to what he wants.

"It looks like five million dollars over a million years," said Gervin, referring to the long-term conditions of the contract and the unstable nature of the economy.

"At this point, until I find out more about it, I have nothing to say. The way inflation in the economy is going, there's no telling what this works out to be."

The "guaranteed" portion of the contract totals $5.1 million for five years of service, including a $100,000 signing bonus, $400,000 a year for five years, plus $100,000 a year for 30 years beginning in 1990 when Gervin likely will be retired.

He could earn the other $3.75 million during the second five years on optional one-year "make-good" contracts starting at $625,000 in 1985-86 and increasing to $900,000 by 1989-90.

Pat Healy, the Tacoma, Wash., attorney who represents Gervin, said in a telephone interview that he was "shocked" that Spurs president Angelo Drossos called reporters together and spelled out the terms of the offer. Drossos said he did so to show the rest of the nation that the Spurs were not "some kind of poor boy operation."

"My first impression was total shock that a private negotiation, which is of a sensitive nature, would be thrust into the media," Healy said. "At no time have I ever disclosed terms of any negotiation."

But Healy contends Gervin is the best, most consistent basketball player in the NBA on the basis of him being the runner-up or MVP the past three years and winning the scoring championship the past three years.

Healy said the Spurs' offer would still leave Gervin about fifth in the pay category behind other superstars in the league, and that the total emoluments — with the 30-year pension payments worked in — amounts to $452,000 a year during the first five years of the contract.

"I can't even talk money. It's not fair," the agent said. "The cash money is not even close."

Gervin reportedly makes about $390,000 now, including incentives, while Houston's Moses Malone earns around $1 million a year.

Healy indicated that talks with Drossos that began when San Antonio lost to Houston in the first round of the playoffs had stalled.

"I have not talked to Angelo since I called him and told him we're so far apart there wasn't anything to say," Healy said. "I don't think it (publicizing the offer) was very professional for what every reason it is. I don't know whether he (Drossos) is worried about his own job or what. He's almost destroyed any chance to accomplish anything."

Healy was asked what Gervin, who still has three years left on a five-year contract renegotiated in 1978, would do if an agreement was not reached with Gervin and San Antonio refused to trade him.

"If they want him they're going to have to pay him for being who he is, and that is the most consistent player in basketball the past three years. The only thing I can say is we'll have to handle that when it comes."

Knicks ink pact with Carter

NEW YORK (UPI) — Reggie Carter, who became the newest New York Knick Monday, believes in extra schooling.

"I had five years of college and I believe the extra year helped me a lot," Carter said Monday after signing a multi-year contract with the NBA club.

Carter, 6-foot-3 and 165 pounds, averaged 15.1 points during a college career which began at the University of Hawaii in 1975-76 and finished at St. John's this past year. Last season, Carter led the Redmen to a 24-5 record and was a second-team All-American choice by UPI.

The 22-year-old Carter totalled 1,510 points in 100 collegiate games, added 429 assists, 453 rebounds and shot nearly 82 percent from the free throw line.

The Knicks made the Brookville, N.Y. native a second-round draft choice in June, 1979, but Carter, then a junior-eligible at St. John's, elected to finish his career at the New York school.

"I hope to contribute backcourt strength to the Knicks next season," said Carter. "I will try to stay in shape in the summer playing in a league in Los Angeles if that works out. I hope to play the point guard, backing up Michael Ray Richardson. I'm in a no-pressure situation — a learning situation."

"The Knicks have made good strides in the past couple of years," he added. "People like Bill Cartwright, Michael Ray Richardson and Toby Knight are what you need. I think all they lack is playing together a little longer."

Canadiens back in it

MONTREAL (UPI) — The Montreal Canadiens, who were on the verge of being eliminated last week, now find themselves on the verge of winning their NHL series.

The Canadiens mauled the Minnesota North Stars in two straight games this weekend to seize the home-ice advantage and throw their best-of-seven Stanley Cup playoff series into a tie at two games each. Game 5 will be played in the forum tonight and the sixth game will go back to Minnesota Thursday.

"We have to score the first goal," said 30-year-old Montreal veteran Rejean Houle. "In the playoffs, it's tough for a team to come from behind."

Houle discounted the legend of home-ice advantage.

"I've been in hockey too long to believe that the home team always wins," Houle said. "Since I've been with the Canadiens, we've won a lot of Stanley Cups on the road."

Despite the fact that the Canadiens are rated clear favorites to win this series and advance to the semi-finals, Montreal's hard-checking forward Doug Jarvis says the North Stars can't be taken lightly.

"Minnesota is a hard-working team," said Jarvis, not usually known for his scoring but who has three goals so far in the playoffs. "The North Stars skate well and any team that skates like they do is hard to check."

Bunny Larocque, who was superb in Montreal's two road victories, Tuesday will start his first game in the playoffs on Forum ice since 1974.

Larfleur and Pierre Mondou, two forwards who have missed the series so far because of injuries, were still doubtful for tonight's game. Larfleur, a 50-goal scorer for the past six years, suffered a knee injury while Mondou had a groin injury in the preliminary round against the Hartford Whalers.

Also out of the Montreal lineup are veterans Serge Savard, Guy Lapointe and Doug Risebrough.

Although he knows the series is far from over, Minnesota coach Glen Sonmor thinks his club should not be counted out.

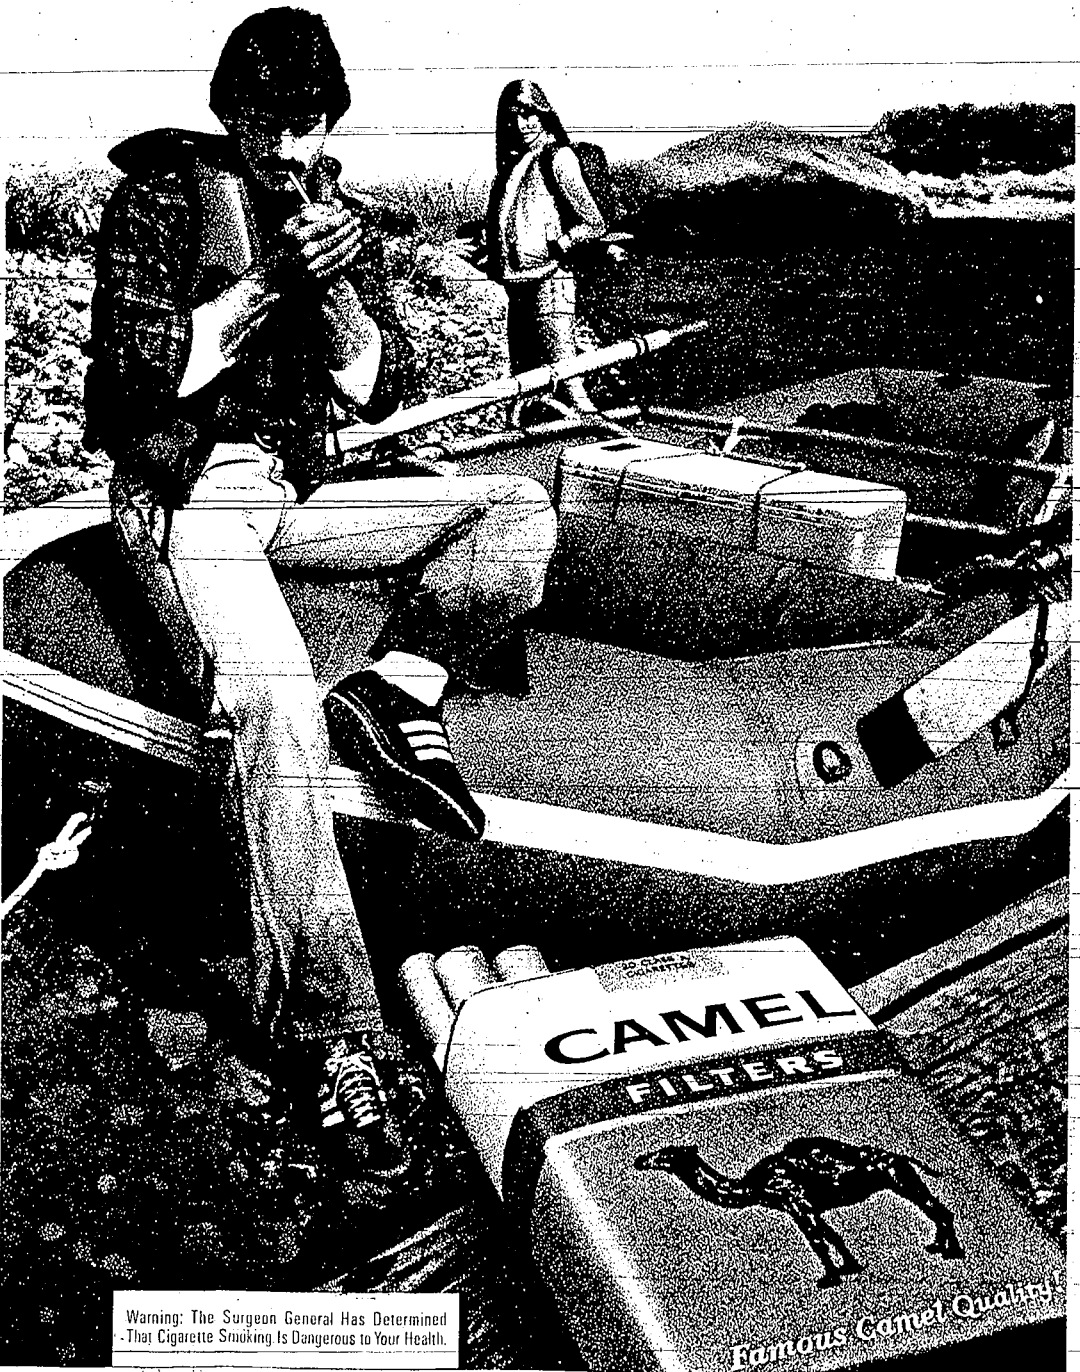

"We had a lot of chances in our two games in Montreal and we took advantage of them," Sonmor said. "We'll just have to do it again."

Sonmor said his team is still hoping to use its manpower advantage to wear down the injured Habs.

"It becomes a bit of an endurance contest now," said Sonmor. "The playoff schedule is heavy, we're playing in a short period of time. We must keep the tempo of the games as high as possible to take advantage of our manpower advantage."
