

The president took full responsibility for canceling the rescue effort in a speech to the nation Thursday night.

Boise man died on mission

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Air Force Capt. Charles F. McMillan II, 28, of Boise, was among the eight servicemen reported killed and left behind during the abortive-rescue attempt Thursday night.

The eight servicemen were on the helicopter and the C-130 plane, and they died in the crash, Defense Secretary Harold Brown indicated.

"The bodies have not yet been returned," he told a nationally televised news conference. "During the extraction it was judged that the mission would be jeopardized if an attempt would be made to recover them."

"But other efforts are being made diplomatic efforts are under way — to get them."

Beside McMillan, the official Pentagon list of the American servicemen listed as missing and presumed dead include:

- Marine Corps Staff Sgt. Dewey L. Johnson, Jacksonville, N.C., born May 26, 1948.
- Sgt. John D. Harvey, Jacksonville, N.C., born May 30, 1938.
- Cpl. George N. Holmes Jr., Pine Bluff, Ark., born July 20, 1957.
- Air Force Capt. Richard L. Bakke, Long Beach, Calif., born May 13, 1946.
- Capt. Lynn D. McIntosh, Valdosta, Ga., born Oct. 11, 1946.
- Tech. Sgt. Joel C. Mayo, Bonifay, Fla., born Oct. 25, 1945.

Also listed as injured was Marine Corps Major James H. Schaeffer Jr., 36, of Los Angeles, Calif.

Brown said all the others taking part in the mission — including four who suffered burns — had been "extracted from Iran and are being brought back."

According to a list issued by the Pentagon, the injured included: Marine Major Leslie B. Petty, 34, of Jacksonville, N.C.; Air Force 1st Lt. Jeffrey B. Harrison, 26, of Warren, Ohio, and Air Force Staff Sgt. Joseph J. Beyers III, 37, of Charleston, S.C.

Reactions to failure vary

By the Times-News staff and contributing wire services

WASHINGTON — The unsuccessful attempt to free American hostages in Iran was criticized Friday by three Idaho congressmen, but Rep. Steve Symms called the operation "courageous."

All four congressmen agreed that speculation on the aborted attempt's propriety should be curbed until all the facts are known.

"This is a time of sensitivity and danger for the 53 hostages in Iran," Sen. Frank Church said Friday.

"Without knowing all the details, I cannot pass judgment on the wisdom of the mission," Church said.

Church, who serves as chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said that "at the appropriate time, the committee will investigate the facts surrounding the President's action and the basis upon which it was taken."

"However, I do regret that the President failed to consult Congressional leaders prior to making a final decision," he said.

According to Church, President Carter may have violated the War Powers Act by not informing Congress of the rescue plan.

"I was not advised. To my knowledge, no member of Congress was advised," Church said.

Church noted that Section 3 of the War Powers Act stipulates that the President should, in every possible instance, consult the Congress before introducing U.S. armed forces into hostile situations.

"Section 4 of the act requires the President to submit to the Congress a report on military action taken abroad within 48 hours," Church said.

"The President has assured me that he will submit such a report."

Had Carter talked to Congress, Church said, "I think he would have been dissuaded because of the high risks of such a mission and the ominous consequences of failure."

"I don't understand the timing of such a military operation because our allies were backing up our economic sanctions — presumably on the assumption that these would force loose military actions," Church said.

Regarding notification of Congress, Sen. James McClure said he could see no legal reason why President Carter should have notified Congress prior to the rescue attempt.

"Absolute secrecy was obviously a necessity in this instance," he said.

The gamble

Secretary of Defense tells nation what went wrong in rescue attempt

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Defense Secretary Harold Brown said Friday three of the eight helicopters used in the rescue attempt in Iran crashed out from the rigors of a 500-mile flight, leaving the operation one short of what was needed.

It was at that point — about 2:45 p.m. MST Thursday or 2 a.m. Iran time — that President Carter decided to cancel the mission.

Brown said the 190 men involved were leaving a remote salt desert, where they had refueled in preparation for a 250-mile trip to Tehran, when an RH-53 helicopter collided in the dark with one of the six accompanying C-130 transports.

Eight men were killed in the crash. Others were lifted out to safety and flown to the USS Nimitz as the mission ended after three hours on the ground. Four rescuers suffered burns.

"The bodies have not been returned," Brown said. "During the extraction it was judged the mission would be jeopardized if an attempt would be made to recover them."

He said the United States will try to get the bodies through diplomatic means.

Brown said the United States began preparing the raid shortly after Iranian militants seized the U.S. Embassy Nov. 4.

About that time, the Navy was observed flying a half dozen RH-53 helicopters from Atlantic Fleet headquarters at Norfolk, Va. These were stored temporarily on the Indian Ocean island of Diego Garcia before being transferred to the USS Nimitz.

Detailed training exercises, meantime, involved members of all four military services in the salt flats of the southwestern United States, Brown said, an area similar in terrain to the corner of Iran where the mission began.

Iran rejoices

Warns hostages will die if tried again

© 1980, The Washington Post
TEHRAN, Iran — Yashollah Ruhollah Khomeini, reacting angrily to news of an abortive U.S. mission to rescue the American hostages, Friday claimed that dozens of Americans had died or been left behind in the operation.

He went on to warn that any such action in the future would endanger the captives' lives and the world's oil supply.

Khomeini also said that the mission, which was abandoned in flames in a desert about 300 miles southeast of here, proved that President Carter had "lost his mind" and his ability to govern the United States.

The militant Muslim students who have been occupying the U.S. Embassy here for nearly six months warned that they would kill their 50 American hostages if the United States attempted any further military action. But there was no immediate indication that any of the captives would be harmed as a result of the aborted rescue effort.

Despite statements by the Iranian armed forces that its fighter planes had caused the crash of two American aircraft involved in the mission, it was apparent that the rescue attempt had caught the Iranians completely by surprise.

Various Iranian officials and government organizations issued conflicting reports on what actually

Spring forward

Daylight savings goes into effect at 2 a.m. Sunday

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Daylight Savings Time goes into effect this weekend, requiring most Americans to set their clocks forward one hour.

The official change will occur Sunday morning at 2 a.m. local time, which will automatically become 3 a.m.

Most people find it convenient to account for the change by setting their timepieces forward one hour before retiring Saturday night.

146 die in fiery plane crash

TENERIFE, Canary Islands (UPI) — A chartered British 727 jetliner crashed into a desolate mountainous area just minutes before landing in Spain's Canary Islands Friday.

All 146 people aboard were killed, authorities said. The civil guard in the town of La Laguna said the red and white Dan-Air jet, on a flight from Manchester, England, went down about 12 1/2 miles south of Los Rodeos Airport in a rugged, unpopulated area of the island of Tenerife.

Helicopters were used for rescuers to reach the scene. They reported finding bodies were caught in the trees. Others, apparently trapped in the wreckage, were charred.

The rescue teams — supported by 300 troops and 10 helicopters — "reported that it appeared there are no survivors," a communique from civil aviation authorities said. Before suspending operations for the night, rescue workers recovered more than 30 bodies, authorities said. The cause of the crash was unknown.

A spokesman for Dan-Air in London said its charter plane carried 138 passengers, including three infants, and eight crew members.

Municipal police in the town of Tequeste in the same area told aviation officials that they heard the sound of the plane approaching and then "a distortion."

The Dan-Air plane made its last radio call at 8:19 a.m. EST from an altitude of 2,000 feet to ask permission to approach for its scheduled landing at 8:25 a.m. EST, air traffic controllers said. The controllers said the crew gave no indication of trouble. Los Rodeos was the scene on March 27, 1977 of a ground collision between two jumbo jets which killed more than 500 people. It was the last airline accident on Spanish territory and the worst airline disaster in history.

Carter finds few fully endorse attempt

"Congressmen have had troubles keeping quiet in the past. However, we're agreed with Church that the rescue attempt's failure moves the hostage crisis into a 'dangerous period.'"

McClure, recuperating at his home following minor surgery, said "Any attempt like this had better be successful. Failure of this type leads to a dangerous period ahead."

McClure said that stronger action should have been taken in the hostage situation much earlier.

"For the administration to undertake such a rescue attempt at this time indicates that they must be very gloomy about prospects to get the hostages released through negotiations," McClure said.

McClure expressed sorrow for the families of the eight military personnel killed in the action, but he said the United States "had and continues to have every right to attempt a rescue of its embassy personnel."

He said it was "terribly irresponsible" to allow the parents of one of the hostages to visit Iran at the time of the rescue operations.

Hansen also said the Iranians usually try to exploit the rescue attempt before all facts are known would be unwise.

Rep. George Hansen, who twice traveled to Iran for meetings with officials and militants, said Carter should have acted sooner with a rescue attempt.

among our allies, Japan and Western Europe, and now this kind of thing certainly can't help but be seriously disruptive," Hansen said.

Symms also agreed that any discussion of the attempted rescue would not all the facts would not serve the best interest of the hostages.

He said it was to extend my deepest sympathy to the families of the eight servicemen who died," Symms said Friday.

"For years, I have advocated a policy of strength in dealing with terrorists that will command respect from our adversaries and repair the confidence of our allies," Symms said.

Throughout Washington a stumped and wary Congress failed to rally instantly around the president, instead dividing sharply in its reaction to the aborted commando raid to rescue American hostages in Tehran.

Generally, President Carter got more support from conservative and hawkish members, usually his foreign policy critics, than he did from liberals and moderates who have tended to be supporters in the past.

"Congressional leaders indicated a cautious arms-length willingness to go along with Carter at least temporarily, but many members expressed deep skepticism and even opposition to the Iran operation."

Rep. Henry Reuss, D-Wis., demanded Carter drop his campaign for re-election and just "quietly serve out his term without any more impulsive actions."

"The president would have been a hero if it had worked," said assistant Senate Democratic leader Alan Cranston of California.

"I think he should be supported," Cranston said he accepted Carter's definition of the rescue effort as "a humanitarian action" rather than a military one.

Statements of unqualified support for Carter were rare. One of the strongest came from the Senate minority leader, Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., who said:

"The plan was well-conceived, well-planned and a well-guarded secret." Baker said, "I'm convinced it was a sound plan worth doing. I'm sorry it failed. The only question I have with the president was that he should have done it a long time ago."

Some of the estimated 200 Americans remaining in Iran were said to be concerned but not panicky about their fate after the aborted rescue mission.

A few called journalist friends to ask for details of the operation, but said they had no immediate plans to leave the country.

About a dozen American correspondents remain in Tehran.

A crowd of more than 10,000 people converged on the occupied U.S. Embassy Friday afternoon after news of the rescue attempt was broadcast here and chanted such slogans as "Death to Am'ricans" and "Islam is victorious. America is destroyed; Khomeini is victorious, Carter is destroyed."

Some members of the crowd at times became hostile to Western journalists present, but no injuries were reported.

According to Iranian reports, the American aircraft involved in the rescue effort landed at about 2:30 a.m. Friday near a dirt road in the vicinity of the village of Rabat-e-Khan in Khorasan Province about 100 miles southwest of the desert town of Tabas, which was destroyed by an earthquake in 1978.

Passengers who were detained briefly by the commandos told an Iranian radio interviewer that several of the commandos spoke Farsi, the Iranian language.

Passengers said that the soldiers debated at one point whether to kill them or put them on board one of the aircraft. The passengers said they fled when one of the planes exploded and caught fire.

Several passengers gave differing accounts of how many aircraft were involved. Iranian government officials, including President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr, who overtook the landing site Friday afternoon, said that two U.S. transport planes and five helicopters were left behind.

A truck driver who came down the road after the rescue team had left said he saw five helicopters, one burning, plus a jeep and two motorcycles at the site.

Later in the day, however, after Iranian radio reported the U.S. statement for the first time on its 2 p.m. news program, the official Pars News Agency quoted Shadmehr's office as saying, "Two American military aircraft which crashed in eastern Iran Friday morning were apparently carrying CIA agents and U.S. Marines. The Marines and CIA agents had the mission of a surprise landing in the U.S. Embassy in Tehran to burn the building."

The two planes crashed and caught fire near the town of Tabas in eastern Iran when they were being chased by the Iranian air force.

Foreign Minister Ghotbzadeh told American television correspondents Friday afternoon that the Iranian air force was "involved" in the incident and that "there may have been contact between the Iranian and U.S. forces."

Class survey's reaction to Iran rescue attempt

By BRUCE HAMMOND

GOODING — A random survey of Magic Valley residents conducted by Gooding High School government students Friday found that more than half of those responding approved of the attempted rescue of the hostages in Iran.

The survey also found that the failure of the attempted rescue has had little effect on the popularity of President Carter in the Magic Valley.

The students, all members of senior government classes, contacted at random 100 residents in 10 Magic Valley communities.

"We've had a phone installed in our room for interviews with state and national officials, so we just used it to conduct this public opinion survey," said U.S. government instructor David Hocklander at Gooding High School.

The first of two questions asked was: "How do you stand on President Carter's decision to rescue the hostages?"

Of the 100 people polled, 54 percent approved of the rescue attempt, 21 percent disapproved and 25 percent said they had no opinion.

The second question was: "How does the attempted rescue and its subsequent failure affect your opinion of President Carter?"

A large majority, 70 percent, said that the incident had no effect on their opinion of Carter. Another 12 percent said Carter's action raised their opinion of him, while 18 percent said their opinion of Carter had decreased following the aborted rescue attempt.

Hocklander's three sections of seniors were on the phone throughout Friday making the 100 random calls, he said.

The phone in Hocklander's room is usually used by his 75 students to receive calls from public officials, including the Secretary of the Treasury and the U.S. Postmaster.

"The kids mailed letters to all state leaders and to many national figures, requesting them to call our number during class hours," Hocklander explained.

"It's worked out terrific." The program is titled Project CALL, for Calling American Leaders.

Conducting the opinion poll Friday was an unexpected deviation in the interviewing program, Hocklander said.

High is 'Statesman'

POCATELLO (UPI) — Sen. Richard High, R-Twin Falls, was formally named Idaho Statesman of the Year at a ceremony at Idaho State University Friday night.

Speaking emotionally, High said he was "extremely grateful to receive the award" from the Pi Sigma Alpha honorary political science society at ISU.

High, a smile never leaving his face for the full two-hour dinner and ceremony, was called a fine teacher, a superb financial expert and "the ideal legislator."

During the last session, High chaired the Senate Judiciary and Rules Committee. He announced in March he would not seek another term in the Senate.

He has been called by many legislators the single most influential legislator in the development of that committee.

Crane collapses

NEW YORK (UPI) — A crane collapsed Friday at a construction site in midtown Manhattan, crashing into the side of a building and showering Lexington Avenue with debris. At least one person was injured.

Police said the horizontal crane had been fixed atop a building under construction when it broke loose in its mooring, teetered briefly and crashed point-first into about the 25th floor of the American Bank Building across the street.

IBM talks continue

WASHINGTON (UPI) — International Business Machines Corp. and the Justice Department broke an impasse Friday and resumed preliminary talks aimed at settling the longest antitrust case in history.

The months-old discussions broke off April 9, when IBM said it would negotiate further until the government dropped its "public precondition" that any out-of-court settlement must require the computer giant to be broken up.

At a news conference April 17, Attorney General Benjamin Civiletti said IBM appears to have a "misconception" about the department's position, and that its only condition is that each side enter the talks with a "bona fide open mind."

An IBM spokesman in New York said Friday the company believed the Justice Department had "removed the public precondition" based on Mr. Civiletti's statement. He said IBM lawyers approached the government last Tuesday about further meetings.

Diamond gets top $

NEW YORK (UPI) — A blue diamond has been bought for $165,000 at auction, setting a record price per carat for blue diamonds, Sotheby Park Bernet said Friday.

Purchased by an anonymous Manhattan dealer Thursday, the unmounted, emerald-cut, 3.59-carat diamond went for a record $46,000 per carat.

Police seek body

WEST HEMPSTEAD, L.I. (UPI) — Nassau County police said Friday they would continue over the weekend to dig up the backyard of a home where the body of a 1-year-old girl was reported to have been buried in 1976.

Two days of digging by detectives has failed to turn up any definite evidence of a body, although some soil samples have been sent to a police laboratory for analysis.

Detective Ed Kane said three of the 12 children of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond C. Gonzales of West Hempstead told police their parents buried the child.

The children are now in two foster homes because of alleged neglect by their parents and police learned of the alleged burial of the infant girl through the foster parents.

Gonzales and his wife, Mary, denied they ever had a child who would now be 5 years old.

Sub launching set

GROTON, Conn. (UPI) — The nation's second Trident submarine — a huge $1.2 billion underwater fortress capable of launching 408 nuclear missiles — will be launched Saturday.

Opponents of nuclear weapons began in Groton Friday for a nighttime candlelight vigil and made final preparations for a demonstration outside the launching ceremony at General Dynamics Electric Boat shipyard.

Pan evaporation indicates 22 both today and Sunday. The 4-inch soil temperatures call for no change in the maximum today and minimum tonight from the 1 degree up Friday night.

Field preparation Monday through Wednesday calls for increasing chance of wetting rains by Monday evening, then continuing Tuesday. Turning showery and dryer Wednesday. Temperatures ranging around the seasonal normal.

The highest temperature reported in Idaho Friday was 72 degrees at Salmon, and the lowest was 28 at McCall.

Boise motel cancels white supremacy meet

By United Press International
The "Aryan Nations" group suffered setbacks Thursday in its plans to stage white-supremacy, membership-paddling events at Boise and Jerome.

Managers of the Red Lion Motor Inn-Downtown in Boise cancelled an agreement they had made to rent a banquet room to the Aryan Nations group.

Also, an American Legion Hall at Jerome denied permission to a Hayden Lake man who planned to give an Aryan Nations speech Sunday.

The Boise meeting was scheduled for 7:30 p.m. Saturday, but hotel general manager George Schweitzer said he cancelled the room reservation because he feared a violent clash between anti-Nazis and the Aryan Nations people.

Aryan Nations, a militant right-wing group with chapters in north Idaho and Weiser, has begun a membership drive in the Treasure Valley and in the Jerome area in south-central Idaho.

Told of the motel's decision, the group's leader, Richard Butler of Hayden Lake, vowed that a meeting would be held Saturday somewhere in Boise.

Butler also promised to improvise as a result of the cancellation of his appointment to speak at Jerome's American Legion post. He said he planned to speak, but did not know where.

A coalition of civil rights, church and liberal groups took shape Thursday and its spokesmen said they would make a "show of strength" if the Aryan Nations group staged a Boise meeting.

The Aryan Nations group, which also calls itself the Church of Jesus Christ-Christian, had announced the meeting in posters that were put up around Boise last weekend.

"Attention!" the posters said. "Are you concerned about what's happening to the white race? Come to the Aryan Nations Meeting. If you are white, unite to fight."

Butler said he and the members of Aryan Nations favored anti-Semitic, white-supremacy actions taken four decades ago by Germany's Adolf Hitler.

"Hitler was right, definitely," Butler said. "Remember, it was the Jews who declared war on Germany, and whatever happened to the Jews in the war, they were the ones who declared it. But I don't blame a Jew for being a Jew, much as I don't blame a rattlesnake for being a rattlesnake."

Bob Helms, commanding officer of the post, said he was unwary the hall had been rented to the group until reading a story about Butler's plans in the Twin Falls Times-News.

Use of the hall was denied, Helms said, to prevent anyone from thinking the Legion endorsed the beliefs of the Aryan Nations organization.

Fort Hall work begins

FORT HALL (UPI) — A chemical-industry emergency team made initial preparations Friday to transport hazardous waste from the southeastern Idaho Indian reservation to a hazardous waste dump site.

Bingham County Disaster Services Director Ed Barrus said a team of experts from Union Carbide Corp., which produced many chemicals at the Russell Chemical Co. plant in Fort Hall, was waiting for the burned area to cool down before removing the hazardous chemicals to the disposal site operated by Weston Corp. south of Boise near the Snake River.

Health and Welfare Department officials said non-hazardous wastes would be transported to a Bannock County landfill south of Pocatello. They said the hazardous wastes either would be transported in covered trucks or in drums in compliance with U.S. Transportation Department regulations when clean-up operations began.

The state officials said they did not know when clean-up would begin but said that removal of the hazardous wastes was slowed by the threat of re-igniting the fire and the continuing investigation into the cause of the blaze. Fire officials have said they suspect arson.

Utahns jeer missile proponents

SALT LAKE CITY — The Utah crowd jeered loudly when Air Force Undersecretary Antonio Handler explained their support for the proposal during a nationally-televised debate.

But the thousands of spectators who jammed Symphony Hall Thursday night did not stop Handler from explaining the military view that the nuclear weapons system is vital to U.S. defense and will not seriously damage the quality of life in the project area.

"Despite your jeers, let me explain what I mean," he said. "We can plan growth. If the states and the local communities join with the federal government, in planning for the MX, the benefits will not be exported, the size of the economic boom can be controlled."

"We are talking about numbers that are not that staggering," he said. And Chaves added there are many people in the impact area which support construction of the MX.

"We've talked with many people in the deployment area who say 'We welcome the MX because it will provide economic opportunities for our children and will allow them to stay,'" he said.

David L. Aaron, presidential advisor for national security affairs, said the Carter Administration is not trying to ram MX down the throats of Utahns and Nevadans. But he said the president is concerned about the military imbalance between the United States and the Soviet Union, and sees the system as one solid way to avoid a nuclear confrontation with the Russians.

"He came to this decision reluctantly," Aaron said. "He knows the American people have not learned to love the bomb. And he hopes the American people never learn to love the bomb."

"But he's counting on their good sense to recognize that in order to deter a nuclear war, he is able to negotiate real reductions, we have to be able to protect ourselves as well."

Dr. Herbert Scoville, former deputy director of the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency, said the deterrence factor is pressing the reason MX should be scrapped. The Soviet Union will undoubtedly perceive the system as an offensive weapon, and will be frightened into boosting their own nuclear stockpile, Scoville said.

He said the chances of nuclear war become greater as both nations enlarge their weapons systems and increasingly rely on computers to run those systems.

The Air Force proposal entails the construction of 4,600 concrete launch sites in the Great Basin of Utah and Nevada. Two hundred nuclear missiles would be rotated among the sites in a giant shell game designed to prevent enemy detection of any specific missile location.

The debate was moderated by Bill Moyers, and was broadcast on public television and radio networks.

William R. VanCleave, professor of international relations at the University of Southern California, said many Americans are concerned about President Carter's intentions to finish the ten-year project.

"We now see a growth of political opposition to the proposal which we cannot ignore," VanCleave said.

Canyon burros will be shot if adoption efforts fizzle

GRAND CANYON, Ariz. (UPI) — Wild burros that have roamed the Grand Canyon since being abandoned in the 1800s by gold prospectors will be shot under a National Park Service plan if adoption efforts fail.

Under a proposal currently being considered by the U.S. Department of Interior, individuals would have up to 60 days to adopt a burro and remove it, by whatever means, at their own expense.

If the measure fails to clear the Grand Canyon of the estimated 400 wild burros, rangers will be dispatched to shoot the animals.

"They are not native to the grounds; they were first introduced in the 1800s by prospectors," said Roger Giddings, management assistant for Grand Canyon National Park. "They compete with native wildlife for food and habitat and deposit watering holes used by wildlife and hikers."

He said the animals have also damaged rare archaeological sites in the area.

"They like to roll in them and use them as dusting beds," he explained. "They defecate and urinate around the areas so they not only come to look like a burrow, but they smell like it too."

He said the number of burros still in the canyon is down from several thousand in previous years. He said between 1924 and 1969 nearly 3,000 were shot.

DHW planning tough special session stance

BOISE (UPI) — State Health and Welfare Director Milton Klein said Friday his department would take an aggressive stance during the upcoming special legislative session and hope the lawmakers would be receptive.

"This tactic was necessary, he said, because nursing home residents and dependent children would face severe conditions unless emergency funding was granted.

Gov. John Evans has announced plans to call a special session to address at least two health and welfare issues and additional funding for highway construction and maintenance.

Klein outlined the multi-million-dollar financial pinch that might unfold during the final months of fiscal year 1980 — and the entire 1981 fiscal year.

He said his department would ask the Legislature for $450,000 to $500,000 in a supplemental appropriation for the first three weeks of 1980 for the Aid to Dependent Children program.

A second major health and welfare need, he said, would be additional funding for the state's part of the Medicaid nursing home reimbursement program. This emergency — Klein said the shortfall figure for the rest of 1980 could end up from $1.5 million to $4 million — came as a result of a judge's opinion invalidating the state's department's reimbursement formula.

Shortly after the regular legislative session concluded March 31, 4th District Judge Robert Newhouse issued an opinion in favor of nursing home lobbyists who had contended that the state's Medicaid formula did not pay its share of the "full reasonable costs" of the nursing home operations.

"The court thing is still rattling around," Klein said. "But we do know the shortfall will be appreciable."

Along with a request for supplemental Medicaid money, the department would pursue passage of a bill to remove the threat of further shortfalls, Klein said.

Newhouse, who has yet to issue a formal order on the Medicaid funding dispute, said in his early April opinion that the department's rules and regulations implemented to contain Medicaid costs were more restrictive than state law permitted.

Klein said "a lot hinges on that" order and that the department would order and that the department would make the rules fit statutory requirements. He said the rules already conformed to the federal law.

Swindle suspect still in jail

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — Flamboyant banker-promoter Kevin Barry Crown failed to raise $210,000 in bail Friday.

He will spend the weekend in the Salt Lake County jail while federal officials in New York seek his removal to testify before a grand jury.

Crown was being held on a Utah federal grand jury indictment charging him with wire fraud and interstate transportation of stolen securities, and on an FBI warrant from Oklahoma alleging additional fraud charges.

In an arraignment Thursday, Acting Federal Magistrate Paul Badger set Crown's bail on the Utah indictment at $100,000. But Badger said the New York City native could be freed if he posts $10,000 in cash.

However, Badger refused to reduce the $200,000 recommended bail on the Oklahoma arrest warrant, meaning Crown would have to post $210,000 in cash to gain his freedom while he is awaiting trial, if he pays only the $10,000 cash in Utah, federal marshals would take him to Oklahoma to face the charges in that state.

Crown claimed Thursday he is a model citizen. The 37-year-old suspect told the court he was one of the first freedom riders, that he was a speech writer in the 1960s for numerous politicians including the late Sen. Hubert Humphrey, and that he discovered folk singer Bob Dylan.

But Justice Department lawyers say Crown's banking activities from the back room of a British West Indies souvenir shop resulted in the federal indictment in Utah and a more lengthy charge against him by a Colorado federal grand jury.

Federal prosecutors say Crown's bank — the First London Bank and Trust Co., Ltd., of Kingston, St. Vincent, British West Indies — sold bogus cashiers checks and letters of credit totalling at least $100 million to other men involved in the swindle.

Crown is identified as the alleged mastermind in the nationwide phony cashiers check swindle.

4 survive California plane crash

SEQUOIA NATIONAL PARK, Calif. (UPI) — Four people aboard a light plane that crashed Sunday on a flight from Las Vegas to Fresno were found alive Friday in the rugged mountains near Cottonwood Peak.

A spokeswoman for the National Park Service said all four people were in good condition. The only reported injury was a cut foot suffered by one woman. The victims were taken to Valley Medical Center in Fresno for observation.

Shortly before the crash, pilot Hiro

Kobzai, 19, of Oakland, radioed he was running low on fuel. Bad weather prevented an air search from starting until Wednesday morning. About one foot of snow fell in the area during the crash, officials noted.

Names of the other three crash victims were not released.

The victims were spotted at 11 a.m. and air lifted two at a time to Sequoia National Park headquarters at Ash Mountain. "It is a miracle anyone survived," the NPS spokeswoman said.

REALLY BIG SHOW
 Johnny Carson, who's laying out $103 million for the Aladdin Hotel in Las Vegas, really plans to jazz up the image of the place. Says the maker of the "Tonight Show," "We are going to improve the hotel, seek new directions. We are trying to get the 1984 Olympics for the theater, or we could put World War III in there. We have enough room." Whatever the overhaul, the name will change. It will be "Johnny Carson's Aladdin Hotel" from now on.

CHEER LEADER
 Charlie Daniels says he is "fed up with a growing wave at home of anti-Americanism," so he's planning on introducing a new, unrecorded song called "In America" at the 15th annual Academy of Country Music Awards special, airing live on NBC-TV May 1. Daniels decided to sing the new song on the awards show in order to make what he feels is a "much-needed pro-American statement" in times that seem to grow harder every day.

GLAD, GLAD, GLAD
 Nobody has asked David Wolper, Stan Margulies or John Erman to apologize. "Moviola" — a three-part series they're producing and directing for a May 18 debut on NBC-TV — should be a pretty good show. It's based on the novel by Garson Kanin, and they gave it a private showing this week at Wolper's Los Angeles home. All three showed up as though ready to man the barricades against criticism. Their lookalike T-shirts proclaimed, "I'm Glad I Made Moviola."

TWO LEFT FEET
 Dick Van Dyke is first and last a hooter — but no one can say "like father, like son," and Barry Van Dyke is the first to admit it. He's featured in ABC-TV's ongoing space opera "Galactica 1980," and an upcoming segment requires that he and costar Ken McCord hide in a Broadway chorus line when pursued by alien blackhats. Says he, "It's a good thing Galacticans can't dance" — and he

OBJECTIVITY
 Other critics may have been in the audience, but Jamie Bernstein was interested only in one, and his credentials were about as impressive as credentials can get. The 27-year-old daughter of Leonard Bernstein made her singing debut this week at New York's Reno Sweeney nightclub. Her famous father was there to applaud — and to dance with her when the show was over. His review? She's the greatest — but the maestro may have been just a shade biased.

FIGHTIN' WORDS
 Omar Sharif doesn't care what the signs of the times may say. He isn't yielding a centimeter of what he still calls "the fair sex." Says he — between takes of "The Pleasure Palace" in Las Vegas — "Deep down every woman loves the idea of a sheik carrying her off on his white horse and raping her in his tent. It's a basic feminine instinct." Watch out Omar. The feminists are looking for you — and they don't want your autograph.

Officer follows law to the letter

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (UPI) — R.T. Logan is the law just east of the Mississippi.
 Patrolman Logan, something of a legend among his fellow officers, struck again Wednesday night. He arrested John Leon Andrews, a street sweeper driver for the city sanitation department, and charged him with driving his sweeper the wrong way on a one-way street.

It was, however, not his best. The best might have been the time a magazine salesman knocked at his door and Logan arrested him for peddling subscriptions without a permit.

"Or it might have been the time he turned in a supervisor for betting 50 cents on a football pool. This month he stuck parking tickets on cars belonging to members of the Memphis Police Association bargaining team while they were negotiating a new contract."

Not even Elvis Presley could get past Logan. He once ticketed the late King of Rock 'n' Roll for riding a three-wheel motorcycle without license plates or proper registration.

His wife kept his copy of the ticket as a souvenir and the court threw out the case against Presley, the town's most famous citizen and a man known to give away Cadillacs at the slightest whim.

"He ain't no different than anybody else," Logan said. "Needless to say, other officers asked me, 'What did you do that for?' You could have got a Cadillac."

The 11-year veteran of the Memphis

Police Department believes the law applies to everybody, no matter who they are. He considers himself on duty 24 hours a day.

"You know on Sundays some cops won't issue tickets because it's the Lord's Day," he said. "I'm a strong Christian and on that day of the week people should be even more careful to obey the law. I'll write them a ticket on Sunday if they deserve it."

 "He believes in the letter of the law," one high-ranking officer said. "I've heard he writes his neighbors tickets, and I wouldn't doubt it. He doesn't care who it is. If they're breaking the law he'll write them a ticket."

Mame facing eviction

NEW YORK (UPI) — The real life Auntie Mame and almost 200 other seniors may soon be out in the street if their Greenwich Village nursing home complies with a federal request to renovate its building.
 The Village Nursing Home has been offered $5 million by the Department of Housing and Urban Development to make renovations that are required if administrators want to retain essential Medicaid and Medicare funding.
 To renovate the building on a $5 million budget, however, would mean residents would have to find some where else to live — and officials say

Marion Tanner, 75, the model for the fictional Auntie Mame, and 156 others have nowhere to go.

"The problem is, there's no place for them to go in the metropolitan area," the Rev. Robert Lott, president of the nursing home's board, said Thursday.

Auntie Mame was created by Mrs. Tanner's nephew, Edward Everett III, under the pen name Patrick Dennis, in 1955. The book was adopted for Broadway in 1956 and a movie in 1958, and the character was used again in "Around the World with Auntie Mame" in 1958.

Will draft response

Iran abort rocks Methodists

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — Shooked delegates to the United Methodist Church's General Conference Friday asked delegates to draft a response to the aborted military action to free U.S. hostages in Iran.

Bishop Roy C. Nichols, president of the 9.6 million-member denomination's council of bishops and one of the eight delegates sent to visit Carter urged the General Conference to "make no instant formulations in response" to the incident.

"Most of us are still trying to absorb the significance and the shock," he said.

On Wednesday, the eight-member delegation visited Carter and Iranian ambassador to the United Nations

Mansour Farhang to urge Carter to resist military intervention and to deliver to the Iranians a plea to free the hostages. On Thursday, Carter sent a message to the 1,000 delegates saying "the United States has explored every avenue to find a peaceful solution to the crisis."

Bishop C. Dale White, spokesman for the delegation and leader of the church's effort to play a role in resolving the hostage crisis, said the delegation would have no comment on the new situation until after the General Conference has had a chance to reflect on the recent developments.

"If we make a response," Nichols said, "it will be a well-considered, mature one. We want to respond to this major happening that affects us all in a mature way."

Earlier, the delegates heard a message from President Carter in which he implicitly rejected their course of restraint in the Iranian crisis, saying "the United States has explored every avenue to find a peaceful solution" to the hostage crisis.

A delegation of United Methodist leaders flew to Washington Wednesday to personally deliver the General Conference's message to Carter. The delegation then went to New York to meet with Iranian United Nations Ambassador Mansour Farhang, asking him to transmit to Ayatollah Khomeini the church's hope the U.S. hostages would soon be freed.

House Democratic leader Jim Wright, D-Texas, said the dead of night operation was "rehearsed as many as 20 times."

But Carter made the actual decision to proceed only two weeks ago, officials said. Just as the United States was pressuring European allies to enforce a series of economic and diplomatic sanctions against Iran.

Brown said the president moved because all diplomatic efforts to free the hostages had failed.

Aside from the bleak diplomatic outlook, he said, with the onset of spring, temperatures in the Iranian desert were rising and night hours were diminishing to the point they could compromise the mission.

Despite rigorous planning, Brown said, the mission ran into mechanical troubles early on.

One helicopter, flying 500 miles from the USS Nimitz in the Arabian Sea in the staging base, encountered a sandstorm and had to return to the ship.

A second disabled helicopter landed in the Iranian desert, and its crew was rescued by another helicopter.

A third helicopter conked out from a severe hydraulic malfunction, Brown said.

Each of the helicopters can hold up to 55 people and fly more than four hours at speeds of 200 miles an hour. But since six were needed for the actual rescue attempt and three had broken down, Brown said, Carter called off the mission.

The Plan

Hide in desert, race to embassy at night

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The abortive American rescue mission to Tehran planned to land its helicopters outside the city and hide during the day before racing in trucks to the U.S. Embassy compound the following night to seize the hostages, it was reported Saturday.

Once the militants were disarmed or subdued — possibly with nonlethal chemical agents — the helicopters would lift off and descend to the embassy compound to pick up the 50 hostages, the Washington Post reported.

The newspaper said this was the final stage of the plan that was canceled Friday.

The Post said Pentagon and White House sources hinted the United States had help from inside Tehran in planning the rescue mission. The sources said the plan rested on "absolutely reliable intelligence information" that called for the rescue force to hit the embassy compound at night, presumably when the hostages were under a light guard.

The Post said once the helicopter force had been refueled in the desert, it was to go to a base near the outskirts of Iran. The force of 90 volunteers was to hide in the helicopters until the following night, then go through darkened streets of Tehran to the embassy.

The Post said the Americans had nonlethal gas to incapacitate the militants holding the hostages.

The newspaper said the Joint Chiefs of Staff several months ago rejected an unworkable plan for the rescue team to land directly inside the compound.

The revised plan calling for the troops to move on the embassy in the vehicles was the same tactic used in a unsuccessful American mission to rescue American POWs at a North Vietnamese prison camp in 1970. The Americans arrived to find the prisoners had been moved.

The newspaper's sources said vehicles had been covertly deployed near a base far outside Tehran for the drive on the embassy. There were indications other friendly forces were deployed in advance around the base to assist the rescue party, the newspaper reported.

Why now?

Lack of response and short days triggered go order

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Defense Secretary Harold Brown said Friday there were both practical and diplomatic reasons behind the decision to stage a rescue attempt in Iran at this time.

"All diplomatic efforts so far had failed and this had been going on for six months," he said. "There was no reason to believe that the hostages would be released any time in the near future."

In addition, he said, "There was a danger posed to the hostages by the deteriorating security situation in Iran." He cited the weak government, fighting among various Iranian factions and hostilities between Iran and Iraq.

But why not wait to see if the new sanctions the allies promised to impose against Iran helped the situation?

"The answer to that is largely operational," Vance said, noting it becomes very hot in the remote Iranian desert as summer approaches and the nights grow short. The mission needed darkness to succeed, and men cannot work efficiently in desert temperatures that climb above 120 degrees.

"All that made it necessary to move relatively quickly if we were going to move at all," he said.

President Carter offered a similar explanation.

"This rescue attempt had to await my judgment that the Iranian authorities could not or would not resolve this crisis on their own initiative," the president said.

This RH-53 D helicopter is similar to those involved in the abortive rescue attempt Thursday.

Military knew choppers were plan's weakest link

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — For all the bright hopes for the mission, things soon went awry for the eight U.S. helicopters that roared aloft from the deck of the aircraft carrier USS Nimitz.

From the start, Pentagon planners seemed to view the helicopters as the weakest link in the plan. They were right. It was a fatal weakness.

Their mission was a one-stop flight to Tehran, to rescue 50 Americans held hostage at the U.S. embassy and three others in "protective custody" at the Iranian Foreign Ministry.

The result: disaster. Only one helicopter returned to the Nimitz. Six others were abandoned. The eighth was left in flaming ruins, along with the C-130 Hercules transport plane it crashed with. Also left behind were eight dead Americans, their bodies exposed to the winds and sands of Iran's Great Kavir Desert.

Many questions remained unanswered, including the identities of the countries that lent base support to the C-130s.

Both Egypt and Bahrain denied that their territory had been used for the start of any part of the operation. Military observers speculated the C-130s, with Saudi permission, swung across Saudi Arabia to refuel at Oman, but there was no immediate comment from either country.

But the reasons for the mission's failure seemed clear. The plan to rescue the hostages was complex because the problems confronting it were complex, not the least of which was Tehran's location — hundreds of miles inland from the only feasible launching spot, the seas around the Arabian peninsula.

The idea was hatched two weeks ago, when President Carter's patience with diplomacy wore out and he authorized a military rescue mission that he had ruled out as early as 48 hours after the hostages were taken.

The scheme finally settled upon involved 50 men — all of them Carter said, volunteers — aboard eight helicopters, flying from the Nimitz to a staging point deep in Iran.

For that staging point planners chose the area of Tabas, in the Great Kavir Desert of north-central Iran 500 miles from the Nimitz but only 250 miles from Tehran.

The desert was the key to a second part of the plan — the C-130s which would ferry extra fuel for the helicopters and then stand by for the helicopters' return with the hostages, waiting to transfer them aboard and on to freedom.

The hard sand of the Kavir was nature's gift of a runway for the rugged, four-engine C-130s.

The location fitted in ideally with the proposed route — a flight path at low altitudes, to fly under radar, north from the Gulf region across the sparsely populated landscape of the Lut Desert region to the barren, desolate Kavir itself.

One possible hitch: the airport, and radar tracking facilities, at Zahedan, along Iran's eastern frontier with Pakistan. The answer: stay low and away.

On Thursday, the Nimitz was in place, at the junction of the Gulf of Oman and Arabian Sea off the coast of Oman.

The weather looked good, save for a south-swinging fringe from a pair of low-pressure areas hovering the region of eastern Europe and Turkey. It was a change. Weather in the Middle East had been unusually stormy of late.

The C-130s, carrying 90 men and vital fuel for the helicopters, were already on their way from secret points of origin when the eight helicopters took off from the deck of the Nimitz.

At that point, the plan began to unravel.

U.S. military officials felt they needed a minimum of six helicopters to get to Tehran. Defense Secretary Harold Brown said two others were added "to insure that we could continue if some of them became unusable."

Within minutes after the helicopters lifted off from the deck of the Nimitz after midnight Thursday, the plan began to unravel.

One had to return to the carrier with mechanical difficulty. Another ran into trouble en route and made a forced landing. Its crew was rescued by one of the remaining aircraft.

The half-dozen craft, the minimal needed for the mission, continued on to Tabas where the C-130s waited.

But at Tabas, one of the helicopters was felled by hydraulic trouble. Five left — one too few. The had news flashed to Washington.

Carter "flashed back" the word to abort.

They quickly followed disaster. One of the helicopters collided with a C-130, both burst into flame — and eight men died.

It is not in U.S. military tradition to abandon the dead, but the commander on-scene decided the lives of the others were at stake. The force already had inadvertently run into a busload of 50 Iranians, which it had to take into temporary custody.

Other Iranians, possibly even the Iranian Air Force, might be on the way. The commander decided to leave the bodies and to abandon the rest of the helicopters.

Brown and serve rolls came from firehouse

The record shows that General Mills came up with the first brown-and-serve rolls. But that's not quite right. Joe Gregor, a baker in Avon Park, Fla., merits that credit. He was a member of the Volunteer Fire Department. The alarm rang. He pulled some half-baked rolls from his oven, and headed out to fight the fire. When he got back, he started to throw away the rolls, then shrugged and put them back in to brown. They turned out not just well, but very well. A General Mills salesman took the small story back to headquarters, and company experts perfected the brown-and-serve process.

Four decades ago, the average citizen of Japan did not expect to live beyond age 50. Life expectancy there now is 72.69 for men, 77.95 for women. This moves Japan ahead of Sweden to become the nation with the highest figures on the longevity tables.

Rare is the critter more difficult to awaken than the small. Those who study such report it can take as long as three or four years for a sleeping snail to come to.

BEARD

Q. If I start letting my beard grow on June 1, 1980, about when will it reach a length of one foot?
A. On approximately June 1, 1982. At the typical growth rate of half an inch a month.

Pollsters asked numerous citizens to designate the one article in the home that was most important. Thirty-two percent listed the television set. Eight percent named the bed.

Q. Everybody knows that Presidents Thomas Jefferson, John Adams and James Monroe died on the Fourth of July. But can you name the President who was born on the Fourth of July?
A. Calvin Coolidge, research reveals.

MOPEDS

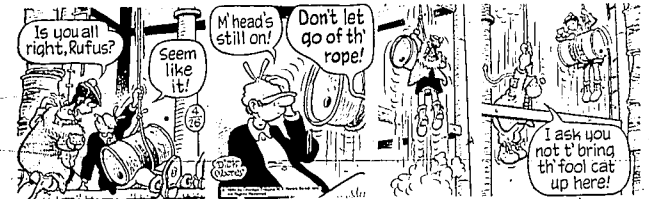

Looks as though those sellers of mopeds are going to make it one way or another. Four years ago, buyers of same told the pollsters they wanted the motorized bicycles for playthings. Today, they say they need them for transportation.

It was 24 years ago that Washington State's Sen. Henry Jackson predicted that the Soviet Union one day would invade Afghanistan.

Sheep producers' hopes fade for good market

TWIN FALLS — The market for lamb and wool has "fallen apart," ending sheep producer's hopes for their first good year in 20 years.

"The market just turned over and died," said Stan Boyd, executive director of the Idaho Wool Growers Association. "It's fallen apart in the last month," he said.

For the last 20 years, the sheep business has been largely unprofitable and herd numbers have declined each year. Last year the decline leveled off.

Sheep numbers were expected to grow this year for the first time in 20 years and producers hoped the year would bring profits to everyone in the business.

But, high interest rates and large supplies of other meats clouded what had been a bright outlook. Sheep producers are "victims" of the economy, Boyd said.

At a meeting of the Wool Growers Association in Twin Falls Wednesday, sheepmen were told to "bite the bullet this year," Boyd said.

Wool is down from about $1 a pound to 77 cents. Less than a month ago, a group of producers in Aberdeen, refused an offer of 65 cents for their wool because they thought the offer was too low, he said. Last week, they put the wool back on the market and accepted 81 cents.

Lambs that were 70 cents a pound last year are only about 51 cents a pound now, he said.

Another problem is that at this time of year, the Wool Growers marketing co-op usually has contracts promising delivery of lambs during the summer at a guaranteed price. In one recent year the co-op had 90,000 head contracted by March, Boyd said.

This year they have no contracts.

Lamb prices are down because markets are awash in record supplies of meat. Large supplies of cheap poultry and pork have pulled down both beef and lamb prices because budget-conscious consumers were filling their shopping carts with the cheaper meats.

Wool prices, on the other hand, have been dampened by high interest rates, Boyd said. Wool demand is strong, but the mills don't want to fill up their warehouses, he said.

They are only buying what they need when they need it, he said. While they empty the warehouses they are buying less, which has brought prices down, Boyd said.

Teacher contract troubles outlined

By STEPHAN SCHOROW
Times-News Writer
TWIN FALLS — Negotiations for next year's Twin Falls School District teacher contracts have apparently snafued on whether items will be resolved by formal, written agreement or by other methods.

At Thursday's session, teacher and board representatives discussed whether some items should become part of the district's master agreement or whether they should be resolved in a "semi-formal" form outside this agreement, according to Superintendent James Sawin, board spokesman.

possible" to ensure enough supplies for next year, but did not wish to put supply standards into writing.

Sawin said that instead of an addition to the master agreement, the district had many "problem-solving techniques" to address concerns. They include the formation of a committee with teacher representatives to study a problem, he said.

For example, Ware said the board offered to set up a committee to study student discipline guidelines, one of the teachers' negotiation concerns, but declined to put anything about guidelines in writing.

Ware also discussed the board did not wish to discuss salary unless the teams reached the table of other items. "He was, however, unsure of what this phrase really meant, but felt it could mean other items must first be discussed before salary can be discussed."

But "that is not the position of the board," Sawin told the Times-News. "All items on the table are of importance and concern to the board of education."

In regards to supplies, another teacher concern, Ware said the board promised to "make every effort to ensure enough supplies for next year, but did not wish to put supply standards into writing."

However, Sawin said, either salary or other items could be decided first, or both issues resolved simultaneously. The board's goal is "to offer the best salary they can within the new dollars available," he said.

Ware said the board had not offered a salary proposal previously as they were waiting to receive projections of state funding for 1980-81.

Twin Falls man dies in rollover in Blaine County

HAILLEY — A 60-year-old Twin Falls man was killed Friday afternoon in a one-car rollover in eastern Blaine County.

She is described as being 5 feet, 4 inches tall and weighing about 150 pounds. She has fairly short hair which has been frosted and is light brown or dark blond.

When last seen, she was wearing a light yellow sweater, blue jeans and tennis shoes.

The Idaho State Police identified the victim as Edwin Hankins Barker, ISP 14. Charles Phelps of the Idaho Falls district, who happened to be on scene just after the accident occurred, conducted the investigation with Blaine County Sheriff's officers.

Members of the family said the pickup truck she was driving was left parked at the Corner Pocket and it was reported she was seen there about 11 to 11:30 p.m. Tuesday.

She was carrying only a small wallet, and the family learned she had made a withdrawal of $25 from the banking with a bank card in a night banking facility.

Barker was traveling west and was alone in the vehicle at the time, Officers said he apparently lost control of his vehicle, which left the highway and rolled three times, throwing the driver out on the final roll.

An armada of small boats plies the Cuba-Florida straits

Defying immigration

900 boats sealift Cubans

KEY WEST, Fla. (UPI) — A ragtag armada of small boats battled high winds and rough seas Friday to bring more refugees from Cuba, where one official said as many as 1,000,000 people might be waiting to escape their communist homeland.

Napoleon Vilaboa, a Bay of Pigs veteran and a leader in the sealift, said he was told Thursday in Cuba by Cmdr. Rene Rodriguez, a high ranking Castro government official, "Anybody who wants to leave the country can leave. Anybody who wants to go can go."

He said Rodriguez told him that could mean between a quarter of a million to a million persons. "Rodriguez told me they do not intend to close the port of Mariel" where sealift boats have been loading, Vilaboa added.

Cuban President Fidel Castro has denounced the asylum-seekers — as — prostitutes — gangsters — and social misfits and said they are free to leave his island whenever they chose.

The State Department in Washington warned, meanwhile, the federal government would fine boat captains $1,000 for every Cuban immigrant they brought into Florida ports, although the immigrants still would be permitted to land.

The new stand was an apparent attempt to preserve federal laws which prohibit bringing in illegal aliens, while at the same time trying to help the refugees escape from communism.

State Department spokesman Tom Reston said 16 boat skippers had been served with the notice of a $1,000 fine for each person being brought into the country — He said those boat captains cooperated with the law enforcement officials, but one other skipper who tried to evade the Coast Guard had his boat seized.

Reston said it was possible a stiffer felony law, providing a $2,000 fine and up to five years in jail to be applied.

The department, Reston said, knew of 1,012 Cubans that had landed by Friday morning.

Bruin girls capture title, boys pull surprise

BOISE — Borah and Twin Falls rather surprised each other Friday night.

As expected, the boys, paced by Randy Holmes' four first places, won the Western Division, SIC, team title, with 149 points but the Bruins, with several individuals posting their best times ever, grabbed second with a surprising 138 points.

Conversely, the Twin Falls girls repeated as team titlist as Borah was slipping at their heels with 147.

The meet basically is run to qualify the best in each event for next week's Southern Idaho Conference championships — the last official act of the dying league in track at Twin Falls' Brum Stadium. The top eight and all relay teams from each event from east and west qualified for the finals.

Holmes, who has signed a football scholarship at Oregon State, won the three sprints and the long jump to pace Borah.

But twice when he looked around, there was Bruin senior Mark Libert running second and his best times. It was rather a surprise to see Holmes winning the 100-meter dash and the 200-meter dash. He also won the 400-meter dash and the 800-meter dash.

The Bruin boys won just two events, Joe Slansell claiming the intermediate hurdles for the lone individual title and Libert turning in a strong 50.5 split to pull the mile relay to first place in a strong 9:28.25.

Libert also took the 400-meter baton from last place to second to cap an impressive day with a surprisingly good 44.8 time.

Coach Bill Ingram praised all the men for their efforts, one of which saw senior Gary Armstrong dent the 10-minute mark in the two-mile for the first time. He also clocked a 4:38 in the mile, another best.

In the high jump duel, Borah's Jake Jacoby, who won the high hurdles, topped rival and pal Ken Stagemeyer of Twin Falls 6-10 to 6-8. Perhaps the only disappointment for the Bruins came in the pole vault, where Mitch Mingo and Bill Routh couldn't get to their bests and settled for third and fourth. Still, as Coach Jerry Kleinkopf pointed out, Bruin pole vaulters seldom do well at Boise historically.

In the girls division, Bruin Laurie Kulien continued to dominate in the weights, getting off her second best throw of 139 in the discus. She took the shot at 40-8.

Ginger Proctor came up with two eyelash victories over teammates to double in the short sprints. She nipped Carrie Jones by three-hundredths of a second in the 100 and Dina Libbert by two-hundredths in the 200.

Libert, a sophomore who stunned defending state champion Heidi Ward in the quarter two weeks ago, found the Borah senior filled with resolve this time. Ward clocked a 57.94 leaving Libert second with a Twin Falls school record of 58.03 and in second place.

Libert got a measure of revenge in the furlong.

The division did a pretty good job of holding Twin Falls' distance strength, taking the mile and half-mile. But sophomore Julie Yergensen won the two-mile and Twin Falls was up three at least in the others.

HAILLEY — The Wood River boys and girls ran off with team honors in a triangular track meet Friday afternoon.

The boys division was highlighted by a strong 10.9 clocking by Gooding senior sprinter John Traugher. He also took the 200-meter dash in a less spectacular 23.1 but was unopposed.

Although Gooding struck heavily in the sprints, the Senators didn't have enough to overcome Wood River. Coach Bob Shy's boys posted 91 points while Gooding had 54 and Declo 39.

In the girls division, Wood River had it even easier, outscoring runner-up Declo 87-39 while Gooding was third at seven.

Watson charges back to tie Green at top

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — Charging Tom Watson, overcoming a pair of early bogeys, rolled in six long-distance birdie putts over the last 12 holes Friday to tie defending champion Hubert Green for the second-round lead in the $250,000 Greater New Orleans Open.

Watson, who started the day tied with Green after both shot opening-round 66s, had difficulty getting started — bogeying his 4th and 5th holes of the day. But the three-time player of the year birdied three of his next four holes with putts of 8, 20 and 45 feet and then dropped in three consecutive birdies from 12, 40 and 35 feet to pull even with Green.

Green, who played in the morning before the wind began whipping the 7,000-yard

Lakewood County Club Course with full force, was in the clubhouse with a 36-hole total of 134, 10-under-par.

Watson, coming off an easy victory in last week's Tournament of Champions, said his erratic game was saved by his putting.

"I really felt like it was one of those rare days where you know you are reading your putts right," said Watson, who had nine one-putt greens. "Everything else just happened. I made every putt I looked at. The last two days I shot about the best score I could have shot."

One shot behind the leaders was third-year player Tommy Valentine, who carried a 5-under 67 Friday for a 135 total. Larry Nelson shot a 66 for a 137, three shots behind the leaders. First-round co-leader Chip Beck skied to a 6-over 78 and fell from contention.

Fred for 11th place at the were Lee Trevino, Calvin Peete, Bill Kratzert and Mike Reid with 5-under, 36-hole totals of 138.

Green, a former U.S. Open champion and winner of the New Orleans tournament last year, had four birdies and no bogeys in his round of 66. But he said he would not be able to relax because of Watson's challenge.

"You can't win until Sunday, but all you can do is your best," Green said. "Tomorrow's round is a little more important than today's. Right now I'm 10-under, but I've still got to go out and play."

Green's best previous finish this season has been for fourth place at the Masters. He sank birdie putts of 1 foot, 5 inches, 8 feet and 25 feet during his round. Green has recorded 10 birdies and no bogeys through 36 holes.

"The course is simple if you keep it in the fairway," Green said. "You try to keep it low if you can, but the ball will roll a little more."

Watson, a three-time winner on the tour this year and the PGA's leading money winner, said he was not worried that his tee-to-green game has been erratic this week.

"The fortunate thing has been the putter is going very, very strong," Watson said. "That makes up for a lot of mistakes. I'd like to be able to drive the ball better."

Valentine, who led after two rounds at Doral but faded with a pair of 76s on the last two days, had three consecutive birdies on the front nine to finish with his 67. He said he was not concerned by the windy conditions.

"Believe it or not, I was playing so well I didn't even notice the wind," Valentine said.

Scores were so low on the opening day that tournament officials thought the 36-hole cut might be made at 143, 1-under. But scoring scores in the afternoon placed the cutoff point at 145.

Watson said the course played at least two shots harder Friday because of the 14 mph gusting south winds.

Marathon Ruiz loses New York title

NEW YORK (UPI) — Iosie Ruiz was disqualified Friday as a finisher in last year's New York Marathon, a step that could lead to her losing the medal as the top woman in the Boston Marathon.

After an investigation, the seven-member Games Committee of the New York Marathon ruled that the 26-year-old office worker did not complete the race last October.

"It's sad but true. Iosie did not finish the New York Marathon," said Fred Lebow, president of the New York Road Runners Club, which organized the event.

Miss Ruiz could not be reached for comment.

The decision to invalidate her finishing time of two hours, 56 minutes and 29 seconds was announced at a news conference by Nina Kuscsik, a marathon runner and a member of the committee.

Ms. Kuscsik said the step could lead to Miss Ruiz losing her medal in last Monday's Boston Marathon since she qualified for the event through her time in the New York Marathon.

"This will be instrumental in further helping their decision," she said.

The organizers of the Boston Marathon are investigating charges that Miss Ruiz jumped into the race two miles before the finish line.

A ruling on whether she cheated is expected Monday or Tuesday. So far, race data has failed to show Miss Ruiz among the top women for the first 24 miles.

The Games Committee's decision was based on a review of videotapes of the New York event and the testimony of a Manhattan photographer and another marathon runner.

The videotapes, played at the news conference, did not show Miss Ruiz crossing the finish line.

Photographer Susan Morrow said that on the day of the event, she met Miss Ruiz on a subway and the runner told her she had dropped out of the 10-mile mark because of a sprained ankle.

Rummer Cynthia Wuss, whose finishing time was two seconds less than the time initially recorded for Miss Ruiz, said she never saw the runner.

"She did not pass me and I did not pass her," Ms. Wuss said. "The field wasn't that packed. It's doubtful I could have missed her."

Ms. Morrow said that she and Miss Ruiz got off the subway at 59th Street and walked to the finish line in Central Park.

The photographer and Miss Ruiz walked across the finish line, told attendees she had won, but was injured and was taken to the medical station.

Lebow said that as in the case of all injured runners, a messenger brought her identification tag to race timers, who gave her a finishing time.

"I don't think she intended to cheat," Ms. Kuscsik said. "I think she walked to the finish line, got caught up in the excitement of the race and then decided to finish. It has happened before."

"We understand this sort of thing," said Vincent Chiacchetta, a founder of the New York Marathon. "It has gone on as long as running has gone on."

Ms. Kuscsik said the committee would send Miss Ruiz a letter ordering her to her to return the medal she received for finishing the race.

HARTFORD, Conn. (UPI) — If Ruiz is an impostor, she's already received too much attention, America and she's innocent until proven guilty. And she should be allowed to present her side.

Shorter was involved in a hoax when an impostor entered the London ahead-of-time in the 1978 Munich Olympics. He said if Ruiz's win in the Boston Marathon turned out to be a similar hoax, "they should probably do what they did in ancient Rome — her name is stricken from all records."

He said the guy who came in ahead of me in the Olympic marathon, he did not exist. I defy you to find that guy's name. I think that was a very good way to handle it."

Shorter cautioned that "this is 1972 Olympic marathon gold medalist Frank Shorter said Friday.

Canadians may go 'private'

MONTREAL (UPI) — The Canadian Olympic Association will consider a private fund-raising drive to send a team to the 1980 Moscow Olympics.

It depends on if its membership votes to defy the government's boycott, COA general manager Lee Crowell said Friday.

"We may attempt, on the basis of public opinion, to try our own fund-raising drive to send a team to the 1980 Olympics," Crowell said. "It (the fund raising drive) may not happen, but that is one area we would have to investigate."

Crowell said a decision to seek funds directly from the public was a way of avoiding a confrontation with both the government and the powerful Olympic Trust group — a network of the nation's most powerful businessmen which helps finance Canadian Olympic participation.

The COA's 255 members will vote Saturday afternoon on whether to endorse the boycott announced by the government Tuesday. Both Crowell and COA President Bill Bennett have said the final vote will be close.

The Trust, many of whose members are executives of American-based firms, is responsible for raising 90 percent of the $1.2 million needed to send a team to the Olympics.

"We don't want a confrontation (with the Trust)," said Crowell. "Certainly our own private fund-raising drive would enable us to avoid a confrontation."

Lots of birdies

January-Snead on top of Legends

AUSTIN, Texas (UPI) — The teams of Don January-Snead and Tommy Bolt-Art Wall matched a bucketful of birdies Friday, both groups shooting 10-under-par 68 to share the first-round lead on the $400,000 Legends of Golf.

and DeVicenzo-Boros. Those groupings finished at 5-under 65. Arnold Palmer, also playing in his first seniors event, teamed with Dow Finsterwald to shoot a 4-under 66 — Palmer rolling in a 30-foot putt on the final hole for an eagle.

A bet

$100,000 if Ruiz will run again

BETHESDA, Md. (UPI) — An affidavit from Bethesda, Md. Friday offered a $100,000 challenge to Rosie Ruiz, whose women's section win in the Boston Marathon is being hotly disputed, claiming Ruiz has the money if she beats him in a marathon "anytime, anywhere."

the opinion of these officials as a final judgment on the results in Boston. Buchanan told United Press International Friday he asked for a race in May "for Rosie's benefit. I don't want her to think I want 10 or 12 weeks to improve my condition and then race her: I ran in the Boston Marathon on Monday and she says she did, too. I'm willing to extend the time. She can pick the time and the site."
