Kellwood hosiery plant will close down

By STEVE LIPSON
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Kellwood hosiery plant here will be closed permanently within six months because of the company's poor sales.

Kellwood has been one of Twin Falls' largest employers since it opened its plant here in 1970. It now employs about 370 people and has an annual payroll of $3.4 million, according to plant manager Charles McManaman.

A few people have been laid off recently, he said, but those layoffs were planned before the decision was made to close the plant.

Other layoffs have not been scheduled yet, he said. They will probably start in two or three weeks.

George Rooney, president of the Kellwood Co.'s women's apparel group, made the announcement in St. Louis and said production will be phased out over the next six months.

He said the hosiery division has suffered significant losses during the last year because of reduced sales. Kellwood's hosiery division makes pantyhose for Sears and also sells pantyhose under a variety of brand names. The hosiery division operates four other plants, all in North Carolina.

McManaman said the company will try to find another manufacturer that can take over the factory and replace the jobs that will be lost.

Mayor Hank Woodall said the plant closing will have "grave economic impact" on Twin Falls. "It will have ripple effects all across town," he said.

Craig Hobday, Twin Falls labor market analyst for the state Department of Employment, said the plant closing will cause a substantial loss of income in the community. "It was a labor intensive industry, one of the few we have," he said.

Economists estimate that each payroll dollar is spent between two times and five times before it leaves a community.

Hobday said retail and fast food sales will probably be the first areas to feel the impact of the plant's closing.

Curtis Eaton, president and chairman of the Twin Falls Bank and Trust, said, "You can't take a payroll that size out of a community our size without it having a detrimental effect."

"It's a very sad moment for our community," he said.

Kellwood's sales problems began in 1978. According to Kellwood's annual report, Sears, which buys almost 80 percent of Kellwood's production, changed marketing strategies and reduced the amount of merchandise it bought from Kellwood.

For the year ending April 30, 1979, Kellwood's sales were only slightly higher than sales the previous year, and earnings were down 67 percent to $4.4 million.

Last July, the long-time head of the hosiery division was replaced. Robert McKinley had been president of the hosiery division and a member of Kellwood's board of directors since 1969. The company gave no reason for replacing him.

Then, in its latest financial reporting period, Kellwood reported a loss of $159,000 for the quarter ending January 31.

Teachers turn down initial salary offer

By LARRY SWISHER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Teacher negotiators rejected the Twin Falls School District's first salary offer of this year's bargaining talks Thursday night.

They said the offer favored beginning teachers.

After discussing the offer with a rally of 100 teachers outside the building where negotiations were being conducted, chief teacher negotiator Al Ware said he would "ask for something else."

After four hours of discussions, teacher and district negotiators agreed to meet again at 1 p.m. Saturday.

The rally of teachers was to show support for the Twin Falls Education Association's bargaining team, which has charged the district's team with stalling progress.

After the first half-hour of Thursday's talks, however, the teachers broke into applause when Ware appeared and announced, "There is movement happening at the table."

After another half hour, the two sides reached agreement on two issues, guidelines for sick leave use and medical insurance coverage changes. It was the first agreement in several sessions.

About salary increases and step-pay changes, a subject chosen by the teachers' team for discussion Thursday, Ware said the district's offer amounted to about a 14 percent increase in dollars over last year's budget.

He said the district proposed to increase base pay, from which salaries are calculated according to experience and education, from $10,000 to $11,200. Ware characterized the district's plan as "the extreme opposite" of the teachers' proposal.

Iran refuses to negotiate with London embassy gunmen

LONDON (UPI) — Three gunmen holed up in the Iranian Embassy Thursday renewed their threat to kill themselves and at least 16 Iranian hostages unless Iran freed 91 Arab prisoners.

Iran warned it would retaliate by killing any prisoner for every hostage who died.

But the gunmen, who identified themselves as ethnic Arabs from southern Iran, let set several deadlines against the lives of their captives, pass and police played down the threat that they would be killed.

The hostages were believed to number 19 — 16 Iranians and three others. But a police spokesman said there might be more than that, adding at least two and perhaps three Britons were among them.

Scotland Yard Commissioner Sir David McEneaney told the gunmen, "It is not within our power to

Iranian ambassador says hostage taking illegal

NEW YORK (UPI) — Iran's ambassador admitted Thursday the country was a party to an international treaty that forbids kidnapping and hostage taking.

Responding to questions from Bill Moyers for a nationwide public television broadcast Thursday night, Mansour Esmaili said, "The United States government has recognized the reality of the Iranian revolution event up to the present time."

He said the Islamic regime was "prepared to accept the martyrdom of our brothers in England, but will not submit to blackmail" and release the Arab prisoners.

The Iranian state radio charged in a commentary that British Intelligence and the CIA organized the siege to force Iran to free the 50 U.S. hostages being held by Iranian militants for the 100th day.

Since the embassy seizure Wednesday, Iran has described the gunmen, who identified themselves as Arab Iranians from Khuzestan, as Iraqi agents, CIA agents and now British agents or just plain "enemies" of Iran.

Earlier, the terrorists freed a sick British hostage to show their "humanity" and said they would not take the lives of the remaining non-Iranian hostages who include a British television soundman, a London policeman and a Lebanese journalist.

In Tehran, the official Pars news agency said Iranian Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh spoke to the gunmen during the night from Abu Dhabi, where he is on a visit.

Pars said Ghotbzadeh told the gunmen in the telephone conversation that "if any of the embassy staff members are harmed an equal number of the prisoners will be tried summarily and executed. Then he hung up."

But later, in remarks that appeared to indicate that the regime was still trying to assess its best course of action in the crisis, Ghotbzadeh said that Iran has given Britain "its full backing and authority" to employ every possible means "to end the siege."

House rejects defense increase ending final budget hurdle

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House Thursday turned back a conservative move to raise 1981 defense spending above President Carter's request.

The move thus crushed the last big threat to the Budget Committee's $611.8 billion plan.

The proposal was opposed by Carter, Defense Secretary Harold Brown and House Democratic leaders, but still drew considerable support.

It was defeated 245-164 — not as close a vote as had been expected.

The vote continued the House pattern of rejecting all amendments to the Budget Committee's federal spending plan.

The chamber now has defeated six attempts — both liberal and conservative — to alter the committee proposal, and is scheduled to vote on three others next Tuesday.

The biggest threat among them was the amendment by Reps. Marjorie Holt, R-Md., and Phil Gramm, D-Texas, to take money from domestic spending and foreign aid and use it to raise military spending by $5.1 billion to a total $153 billion.

Carter has supported the House committee's defense figure, although it is slightly lower than his request for $150.5 billion. Both he and Brown sent letters to the House opposing the Holt-Gramm amendment.

Gramm accused both the administration and the Budget Committee of using "phony" estimates of the cost of military programs in drawing up their spending proposals.

He said the proposals would cause the United States to "renege on our commitment to NATO ... further debase our credibility with our allies and ... further erode our national security."

An angry Budget Committee Chairman Robert Gramm, D-Conn., responded, "Nobody wants to short-change our armed services." He criticized Gramm for accusing his committee of "phoniness."

"No one has total knowledge of what the reality is in a $150-billion budget," he said, referring to different cost estimates that result from changing economic projections.

HUD 'slush fund' reported

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A congressional audit Thursday uncovered what one congressman called a multibillion-dollar "slush fund" hidden within the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

The audit by the General Accounting Office, Congress' investigating arm, charged HUD with inflating the amount of money it is actually committed to spend at the end of each fiscal year since 1976.

The discovery was made during a long-term GAO investigation into year-end "buying," a practice by which departments and agencies spend surplus funds in the closing weeks of a fiscal year so they will not have to return any money to the Treasury.

Agency officials often fear if they do not spend the money, their appropriations for the next year will be cut.

Rep. Herbert Harris, D-Va., who provided United Press International with the GAO memorandum, said

HUD last year spent 47.2 percent of its annual budget in the last eight weeks of the fiscal year.

In examining HUD's books, GAO said it discovered "that HUD had an $18 billion surge in obligations in the last month of fiscal 1979." But $16 billion of that was supposedly for low-income housing and public housing assistance.

But the auditors found that after HUD had "obligated" these funds in the closing weeks of the fiscal year, it later "de-obligated" a portion of them meaning the money was free to be spent on other programs or projects.

GAO said the funds are promised by HUD to certain projects through tentative letters which HUD later can withdraw. GAO maintained that the letters were "not legally sufficient to constitute obligations."

The letters advise housing project sponsors that their programs have been tentatively, but not finally approved. Then, the audit said, HUD later withdraws approval and frees the funds.

"This procedure provides HUD with significant amounts of funding in excess of that indicated by its financial reports" to Congress, the memo said.

"In reporting obligations based on these letters, we believe HUD could have misled the Congress on its needs for additional funds in the next fiscal year by understating the funds actually on HUD's books, GAO said.

HUD officials disagreed with the conclusions in the GAO audit, defending the practice of what has been called by one House committee "paper reservations."

GAO said HUD officials maintain that less than 10 percent of the money they obligate at the end of the fiscal year fails to result in actual contracts.

But GAO said HUD officials also reported their records were not complete enough "to document their opinion."

Carter dedicates Memorial Day to raid's dead

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter, citing the loss of eight Americans in the Iranian rescue mission, Thursday designated Memorial Day, May 26, as a day of prayer for peace.

"This past year we have had abundant proof that American courage still lives — eight Americans gave up their lives and others were seriously injured in the attempt to free their fellow Americans held hostage in Iran," Carter said in a proclamation.

Carter, following the mandate of a 1960 congressional resolution, designated 11 a.m. as a time for Americans in every locality to unite in prayer.

Teachers rally outside talks

The salary of a first-year teacher in the district would rise by about 13 percent under that plan, but teachers with more than four years' experience "would have no incentive for this package," each negotiator insisted.

The district's plan, if accepted, would keep pay increases based on education and require the same at present, he said. But it would provide a "very high base" so the district can hire new replacement teachers.

Those at the rally applauded when Ware said the same amount of money offered in the district's plan would fund a $10,500 base and give teachers with more experience larger increases and more "career incentive."

Regarding the district's salary offer, Superintendent James Sawin noted earlier Thursday the average increase in state funding to Idaho school districts will be 10.7 percent and the board's offer would "more than speak for itself in terms of fairness."

"The decisions made in Japan have been the right ones, of major significance and benefit to our country and the rest of the world and they have required great exhibitions of courage and leadership," Carter said.

Ohira indicated Japan would be prepared to lower import duties for the month on U.S. automobile parts. Japan has already removed totally the duties on fully assembled American cars.

TFEA officials disagreed over the need for the rally but said it would not disrupt Thursday night's negotiations. Also, both sides said their negotiators were willing to meet over time to try to reach agreement.

The board's team is prepared to negotiate long hours and to continue on (today) and Saturday if necessary," Sawin said.

Sawin disagreed, saying the board's team "was trying to move and has been trying to move at all sessions."

Some jockeying back and forth between the two sides has occurred over whether certain proposals should be put in writing or informally dealt with through ongoing faculty-administration committees.

Chief teacher negotiator Ware had charged the board's team-awarded other items carved from the table, before discussing next fall's salaries.

"This is a terrible attack on our embassy," one of them said. "The members of our embassy are not explosive agents. No patriotic Iranian would do such a thing."

Another reason for the rally, teacher representatives have also charged the board's team with insulating the TFEA from majority support of the teachers. They have termed their action a show of force.

"We're not going to pay to build buildings or to meet increases in gasoline or other materials," Sullivan said. "We have to have a living wage."

"We do not have too many sympathetic legislators," he said, adding it "change some faces" in the Legislature through voting in the primary and general elections.

Vigil set for 10th anniversary of Kent State

KENT, Ohio (UPI) — Longtime anti-war activists — ranging from a "Chicago 7" defendant to a Nobel Prize winner — will gather this weekend for the 10th anniversary of the Kent State shootings.

It was a warm spring day on May 4, 1970, when four students were killed and nine others wounded by Ohio National Guardsmen during an anti-war rally on the Kent campus, called to protest then-President Richard Nixon's decision to invade Cambodia, which was then in Vietnam War.

Four of the wounded students will return for the weekend of activities observing the 10th anniversary of the shootings — Dean Kahler, Alan Cantora, Tom Grace and Robble Stamps. Kahler is paralyzed from the waist down as a result of the bullet wounds he received.

A memorial service Saturday evening will begin the Kent observance, honoring the dead students. Jeffrey Miller, Allison Krause, Sandra Scheuer and William Schroeder.

Rapist-murderer convicted

SANTA ANA, Calif. (UPI) — Rodney Alcala was convicted Wednesday of first-degree murder and kidnapping in the sex slaying of Robin Samsoe, a 12-year-old girl abducted last summer from near her home in suburban Huntington Beach.

The jury will return to court Monday to determine whether Alcala, 36, of Monterey Park, should be sentenced to life in prison or death in the gas chamber.

The panel began deliberations Tuesday morning, following a two-month trial in which the prosecution presented mostly circumstantial evidence against him.

Robin was last seen near her home last June 20 and witnesses said Alcala was reportedly seen taking pictures of her at the beach the same day.

Her badly decomposed body was found July 2 in the foothills of the San Gabriel Mountains. She had been raped and stabbed, and her arms and legs cut off.

The jury of three men and nine women asked testimony from a forester who contradicted the testimony of the state's key witness, another ranger.

Draft bill opponents seek cut in funding

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Draft registration opponents moved Thursday to cut funding for the program and leave the Selective Service System only enough money to prepare for a possible sign-up in case of a future emergency.

The Senate Appropriations Committee decided to vote Friday on an amendment offered by Sen. Mark Hatfield. It proposes that only $4.7 million be given to the Selective Service System, instead of the $13.3 million requested.

was only a "superficial and cosmetic" move to improve U.S. military preparedness.

Hatfield said his amendment would provide enough money for the services to update its computer system and to draft plans enabling it to act quickly in any future emergency.

Hatfield, who has threatened a Senate filibuster if necessary to stop the present bill, said Carter's proposal to begin registering 19- and 20-year old men this year was only a symbolic gesture that would do nothing to improve U.S. military preparedness.

But Sen. John Stennis, D-Miss., the bill's chief supporter, argued registration would encourage more people to volunteer for military service.

"The psychology of it will be a plus," he said, while insisting there is no scheme to follow up registration with an actual draft.

The administration bill providing $13.3 million for the registration program passed the House last week, and a Senate appropriations subcommittee approved the bill Tuesday.

Hatfield was joined by Sen. Jake Garn, R-Utah, who said registration

Saudi paper offers plan to end crisis

LONDON — A Saudi Arabian newspaper has urged the foreign ministers of the Islamic nations to adopt a four-point plan to free the American hostages in Iran.

Since Saudi newspapers rarely stray from the government line, there is a strong possibility that the plan has been floated by Saudi officials in advance of the Islamic foreign ministers' conference in Islamabad, Pakistan, on May 27.

The four points, as given in the Riyadh newspaper Al-Jazeera, are:

- A request through the Islamic bloc at the United Nations that the American government cancel last year's decision to freeze Iran's assets in American banks.
- The United States and Western European countries would be asked to call off all sanctions against Iran.
- Guarantee to Washington the personal safety of all the hostages until arrangements to evacuate them were completed by a subcommittee of the conference.
- Set a one-month deadline for the release of the hostages and ask the United States and Iran to abstain from any action that might complicate matters.

Saudi Arabia and other Gulf states are deeply worried over the tension caused by the imprisonment of the hostages. They have declined to take part in sanctions but they condemn the Iranian action.

Publication of the four-point plan coincides with the visit to the Gulf states of Iranian Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh, who is attempting to repair the damage caused to Iran's relations with its neighbors by the continued detention of the hostages.

The Islamabad conference has been called in an attempt by conservative Muslim nations to deal with the Soviet occupation of Afghanistan.

Wary allies told no more rescues

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The State Department said Tuesday that the European allies have told the United States they "strongly prefer" peaceful methods to try to get the release of the American hostages.

Spokesman Tom Reston said, "I think our friends and allies have made clear their strong preference that we avoid military actions in attempts to release the hostages. The European Community, however, has affirmed their solidarity with the United States in the aftermath of our rescue attempt."

Kids tell Congress of needs

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Children took the spotlight on Capitol Hill Thursday, testifying with relative sophistication about Iran, Cambodia, the energy crunch and the war special interests.

The youngsters, ranging from age 8 to 12, were invited to give their views in honor of Save the Children Day, sponsored by a private foundation of the same name in Newport, Conn.

The idea was to focus on matters important to the coming generation. All the children had plenty of thoughts on what should be done, as well as on contemporary problems.

Edmond Paquette, 12, of Chapel Hill, N.C., was the first of 22 youngsters who testified in support of the Children's Agenda legislation, urging "our nation's leaders to consider the issues which are important to children in the coming decade."

On Iran, Billy Scaggs, 10, Leesburg, Va., said, "We should give the shah back and get the hostages out and then break the shah back out of Iran."

Clark Barrett, 10, from the Georgetown Day School in Washington, said the hostage situation is "a very bad problem—and we can't help it unless we free the Iranians for a little while. They

Sen. Alan Cranston chaired a unique hearing yesterday. Children were the main witnesses, telling Congress what it should do.

Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., said, "You sound like the governor of California."

Said Oney: "Right on."

The children also showed concern about themselves and their age-mates the world over.

On energy, Todd Oney, 10, from White Marsh school in Gloucester, Va., said, "I wouldn't live in the White House because it costs too much money to heat the place."

New-law lessens impact, but

Mobs fear the IRS

WASHINGTON (UPI) — If Congress would close just one loophole in the tax law, it could "put the fear of God" back into the Mafia, an expert witness told a Senate subcommittee Thursday.

Fred Harvey Bonadonna, testifying about the inner workings of the Kansas City "outfit" to the Senate Permanent Subcommittee on Investigations, agreed with panel members the Tax Reform Act of 1976 has hampered law enforcement.

Because of past IRS abuses, the law made it almost impossible for other government agencies — including the FBI and local police — to get income tax records of gangsters.

Al Capone, among others, had been jailed for law evasion because authorities could not prove he committed more serious crimes.

"I can't understand why, but the Internal Revenue Service quit investigating these mobsters," Bonadonna said.

"If you can motivate IRS to getting back actively... and making them (gangsters) prove where they are spending their money, where they are getting the money they use at the gambling tables, you could put the fear of God in them. It would put a damper on organized-crime overnight."

Bonadonna, 41, has had intimate knowledge of the Kansas City mob since he was 10 because his father was a member. He himself successfully resisted pressure to become part of it.

Body believed latest victim of freeway killer

CARSON, Calif. (UPI) — The nude body of a teen-age boy was found at a construction site Wednesday by a street sweeper.

Police refused to say how the boy was killed but the possibility was raised that he could be the latest in a string of victims of the so-called "Freeway Strangler."

Most of the other victims of the person or persons known as the Freeway Strangler have been found dumped near freeways. All were strangled and all were nude.

Prisoners were well armed

AUGUSTA, Maine (UPI) — There are about 385 inmates at the maximum-security prison in Thomaston.

Authorities made 50 to 75 drug seizures and another 50 seizures of drug paraphernalia in the searches, which included the use of X-rays, Stiphens said.

The knives seized were mostly the homemade variety such as sharpened screwdrivers and kitchen utensils, he said. Also seized were 50 club-like Oriental weapons called "numchucks," which consist of two pieces of wood strung together with rawhide.

More than 1,000 weapons — about three per inmate — were seized during a two-week shakedown at the Maine State Prison, authorities said Thursday.

Inmates tossed several hundred weapons from cells after they were notified massive searches would begin, prison officials said.

Another 909 items of contraband including 500 knives and 70 firearms were seized in the cell-by-cell searches, along with about 200 clubs or other weapons.

Intelligence charter bill fails to pass

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate Intelligence Committee Thursday abandoned its efforts to write comprehensive charter legislation for the Central Intelligence Agency and other U.S. intelligence operations.

Committee members agreed, however, to consider a sharply cut-down version of the bill next week.

The bill before the committee deals with prior notification to Congress, cuts the number of committees that have to be informed of certain intelligence operations from eight to two; amends the Freedom of Information Act to protect the sources and methods of the CIA; and provides penalties of either 5 or 10 years and fines up to $50,000 for unauthorized disclosure of agents by government officials.

Under the Huddleston bill, the CIA would have to "keep the Senate and House Intelligence Committees informed of all intelligence activities," although the agency would not have to obtain prior approval.

The president could order that notification be limited to the Speaker, the Senate majority leader, the two minority leaders and the top two persons on each intelligence committee if the president determines such limitation is essential to meet extraordinary circumstances affecting vital interests of the United States.

Muskie to be lowest paid in Cabinet

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House Thursday made Edmund Muskie the lowest-paid member of President Carter's Cabinet when he becomes Secretary of State.

The resolution holding down Muskie's salary, which passed by voice vote, was a technicality required by Article I Section 6 Paragraph 2 of the Constitution. It forbids a member of Congress from being appointed to any federal office if the salary for that office had been raised during the member's term.

Since Muskie's last election to the Senate from Maine, the salary for Cabinet members has been raised to $200,000.

Muskie's salary will be held to $63,000 during his term as Secretary of State. That is the Cabinet salary when he began his latest term in the Senate in 1977.

The resolution has passed the Senate.

Amtrak arrives on time more than last year

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Amtrak Thursday reported "significant gains" in on-time performance for its passenger trains.

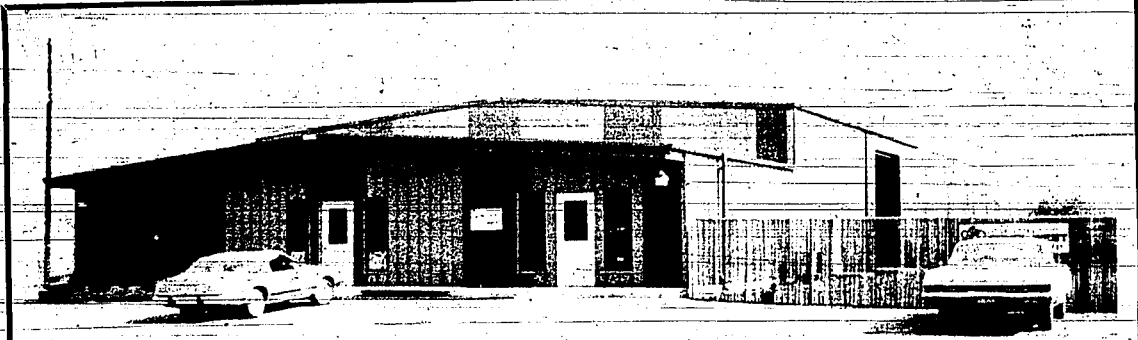

Systemwide, Amtrak trains were on time 74.8 percent of the time in February, up from 43.6 percent in February, 1979.

Among contracting railroads, Amtrak said the best performers were Canadian National, the Richmond, Fredericksburg & Potomac; Grand Trunk Western; Burlington Northern; Union Pacific, and Boston & Maine.

The railroads with the worst on-time performances were Delaware & Hudson, Santa Fe and Missouri Pacific.

Among the trains showing major gains in on-time performance were the Los Angeles-New Orleans Sunset Limited, which ran on time 65.4 percent of the time in February compared with 50 percent a year ago and on 15.4 percent in January.

The worst routes were Chicago-New Orleans at 32.8 percent and Los Angeles-San Diego at 41.2 percent.

In Los Angeles, communist demonstrators clashed with police

Americans mar May Day marches of communists

By United Press International
Small bands of Communists demonstrated from Wall Street to the West Coast Thursday in a May Day call for a workers' revolution that gained them little more than a few arrests and bloodied heads.

Most of the protesters were members of the Revolutionary May Day Committee of the Revolutionary Communist Party, a Maoist-oriented group that has staged demonstrations around the country in the past few months, including a takeover of the Alamo.

In a speech, the party's Central Committee Chairman, Bob Avakian, said their goal was a violent revolution in the United States.

"We're talking about an organized struggle that's politically led, mobilized and guided so we can strike the blow when the time is right," he said.

Chanting slogans calling for overthrow of the American system, "This pile of garbage wrapped up in red, white and blue," they turned out in cities across the country on the 52nd holiday of radical laborers, as designated in 1889 by the Second Socialist International.

Cleveland office workers threw rocks, bottles and eggs at about 60 members of the group. Several fist fights broke out.

Members of the Communist group, many carrying red banners, had paraded and gathered for speeches when they were confronted by office workers and other bystanders, some carrying American flags and some wearing jackets identifying them with a Teamsters Union local.

Every time the May Day group shouted, "Long live the first of May!" downtown office workers would respond, "U.S.A! U.S.A!" May Day members standing on a flatbed truck were pelted with rocks, bottles and eggs and the truck windows were smashed.

One of the May Day marchers suffered a head injury in a fist fight. Police "escorted" from the scene the man who hit the May Day member, but did not arrest him.

Officials of the Revolutionary Communist Party said the demonstrations were dedicated to the memory of Daniel Garcia, a member of the May Day Brigade of the party, who was killed in Los Angeles April 22, a month after he and members of the group took over the Alamo and tore down the Texas flag.

Garcia was fatally stabbed and a fellow member wounded when he and about 10 other party members went to a housing project to pass out literature and generate support for a May Day demonstration.

San Salvador

May Day march ends week of major violence

SAN SALVADOR — El Salvador (UPI) — About 5,000 leftists hiding weapons in gym and shopping bags marched Thursday in a tense May Day celebration that many feared would erupt into gunbattles with government troops.

An Air Force helicopter flew low over the marchers and a single-engine craft kept flying above, but there was no sign of government troops in the nearly deserted downtown area of the march.

They marched three abreast for 20 blocks and then held a rally at the Central Market, shouting "death to the junta" and "down with U.S. imperialism" as they nervously grasped banners bearing revolutionary slogans.

The march capped a tension-filled 24-hour period in which the political violence wracking El Salvador took 38 lives, among them five people whose bodies were found at dawn around the capital and nine government troops killed in two leftist ambushes in Santa Ana, 40 miles west of San Salvador.

Two peasants were found decapitated and gunmen killed a man on a hospital operating table Tuesday in the rising tide of unchecked violence that has occurred despite sweeping government land reforms.

Treasury Minister Roberto Albergue Vides resigned Tuesday.

becoming the fourth Cabinet minister to quit the shaky civilian-military junta since March.

In a statement, Albergue, a lawyer, said he was resigning to "pursue personal activities" but gave no further details.

At the end of March, the deputy minister of agriculture and the ministers of education and economy resigned in protest alleged government repression. The three men left the country immediately before resigning, saying they feared for their lives.

Local judges said the headless bodies of a man and a woman, showing signs of torture, were found near the town of Tecolula, 66 miles east of San Salvador. The man's head was stuffed into a sewage pipe, while the woman's head was tied by her long hair to a tree near her body, the judges said.

They said the brutality of the slayings made it appear the work of right-wing terror squads battling leftists in bloody violence that has taken some 1,000 lives since Jan. 1.

At least six other people died in political violence since Monday, including a young man who was undergoing surgery for a bullet wound when three gunmen burst into the operating room in Usulután, 67 miles east of the capital and pumped 45 caliber bullets into his head.

Judges said. Authorities said a police detective was murdered on a road west of the capital and one leftist guerrilla was killed in an ambush of a National Police patrol outside Santa Ana, 20 miles to the west.

Frogs won't jump this time

BARRE, Mass. (UPI) — Frogs got rights too.

That's why they won't be jumping Sunday in the annual Rites of Spring frog jumping contest.

Instead, humans have been invited to dress in frog costumes, jump and croak at the Wildwood Nature Center as they vie for standing for their favorite amphibians.

The Massachusetts Audubon Society earlier barred frogs as contestants in the year in the annual frog jumping contest because of a concern for the frogs' welfare, said spokesman Ron Wolanin.

The change was also prompted by Massachusetts Division of Fisheries and Game constraints which make collecting bullfrogs out of season illegal, he said.

"So now we have a people jumping contest instead," Wolanin said. "Making the position of a frog, you will be given three opportunities to jump as well as croak and the greatest distance covered wins the contest."

A flyer sent to schools to publicize the contest, warned students not to bring frogs. "Instead, come prepared, dressed like a frog if you will, to stand in for your favorite amphibian," it said.

The flyer showed one frog discussing the contest with another. "Maybe I'll spend the day under a lily pad. Just can't stand being poked and prodded and stuffed into someone's pocket. You know we've got rights too, and we aren't jumping for anyone," the frog said.

"Besides, you can probably jump farther than the frog anyway," Wolanin said. "If you want to win, get down and start practicing. Anyone can participate. Do you have nice spring legs?"

Ad brings miracle for nuns

DUBUQUE, Iowa (UPI) — An 85-year-old priest browsing the Wall Street Journal noticed an advertisement headed "Nuns Need Help."

The rest of the story may qualify as a miracle, as far as Mother Columba Quareis concerned.

Mother Columba says she figures the ad and the generosity of the priest probably saved her little abbey from big financial troubles.

A year ago 17 Trappistine sisters of Our Lady of the Mississippi Abbey discovered they were $250,000 short on a building project begun to accommodate increasing numbers of applicants for the order. Inflation, Mother Columba says, apparently doubled the original building costs.

In a last-ditch effort to save the project, the nuns took out an ad in the Journal and headed it "Nuns Need Help." A local priest raised the $448 for the ad.

Shortly after the ad was published, contributions came pouring in. But they were small — and after a few months totaled only $10,000.

Mother Columba said the nuns then received a little harder and a few weeks later an 85-year-old "little priest" who said he saw the ad while reading the Journal, sent $175,000 in bonds — most enough to pay off the entire debt.

"He'd made the money by investing his back during the Depression," Mother Columba said of the priest, who wishes to remain anonymous. "He said he wanted to share it with us. It has come to us by once and hopes to return again someday."

Mother Columba said the nuns lead a secluded life on their 585-acre farm overlooking the Mississippi River. A Trappistine monk from the nearby New Melleray Abbey oversees the farming operation for them.

Blinded man on his way to prison

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — Steven M. Biro, 22, of Indianapolis, was on his way Thursday to becoming the only totally blind inmate in Indiana's prison system.

"He will present a problem, but we have 7,000 prisoners and each has a different problem and we'll cope with this as we have others," said Dr. Norman J. Hunt, director of classification and treatment for the Correction Department.

Biro entered a guilty plea Wednesday in Superior Court to armed robbery, agreeing to a 10-year prison term.

He and two companions were charged with impersonating FBI agents to gain entry to an apartment building. Authorities said they handcuffed two occupants of the apartment and held two others hostage. The suspects were arrested within minutes of their entry.

Biro became blind in his right eye two years ago as a result of an infection from a dirty needle he had used to inject drugs. He claims he lost his vision in his left eye when a staple in a matchbook punctured his eyeball as he slept in Marion County Jail.

His codefendants say Biro punctured his eye purposely, boasting "They'll never send a blind man to jail."

Biro has denied he deliberately blinded himself and is preparing a $900,000 damage suit against the Marion County Sheriff's Department. "I'm not intelligent, but I'm not that stupid to puncture my eye," he said.

Andean villagers burn 'sorcerer'

LIMA, Peru (UPI) — In a bid to appease "the evil spirits," inhabitants of a small Andean town in southern Peru have burned to death a man they considered to be a sorcerer, news reports say.

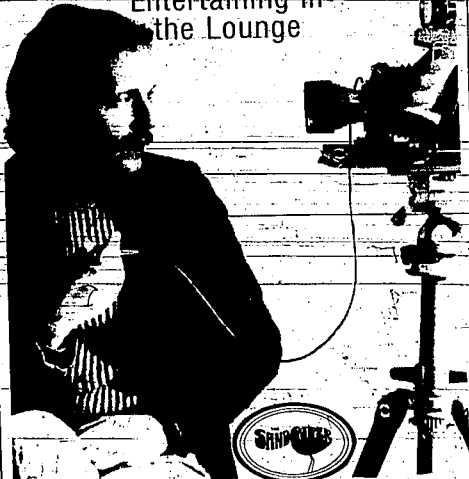

The townspeople of Pucunhu, located in the Arequipa Department some 500 miles south of Lima, gave a party in honor of the victim, identified as Manuel Surco, the reports said.

Surco, 45, added "Surco" drank large quantities of liquor and after passing out his legs and arms were bound with a rope. He then was taken to the top of a mountain and thrown into a bonfire.

More Merit Proof!

Research underscores MERIT as proven taste alternative to high tar smoking.

Results of the newest wave of smoker research are in. The conclusions: undeniable.

MERIT Sweeps Latest Tests.

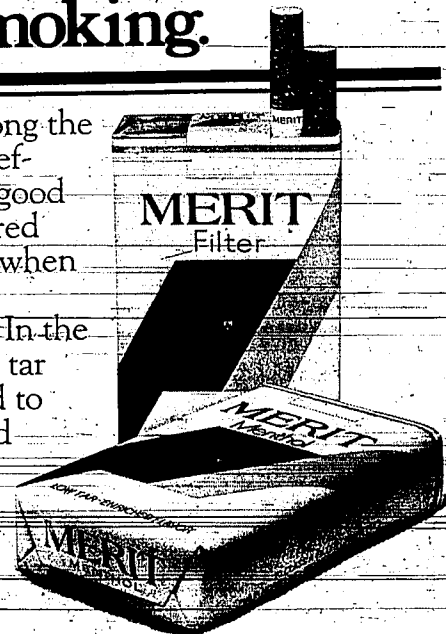

Once again, extensive testing with thousands of smokers across the country has solidly reaffirmed MERIT as a proven taste alternative to high tar smoking.

Blind Taste Tests: In tests where brand identity was concealed, a significant majority of smokers rated the taste of low tar MERIT as good as—or better than—leading high tar brands. Even cigarettes having twice the tar!

Smoker Preference: Among the 95% of smokers stating a preference, the MERIT low tar/good taste combination was favored 3-to-1 over high tar leaders when tar levels were revealed!

Long-Term Satisfaction: In the latest survey of former high tar smokers who have switched to MERIT, 9 out of 10 reported they continue to enjoy smoking, are glad they switched, and reported MERIT is the best-tasting low tar they've ever tried!

Of the above-mentioned eight American hostages, only three were rescued in the attempt as heroes. It was apparently not the first time that such a rescue force was ordered to be positioned outside Tehran. But the diplomatic option was chosen instead and the force withdrawn. Nearly six months later, and only three weeks before the declared deadline for using military action against Iran, on April 11 Carter decided to try it again. Had the latest mission not ended in fiery failure, the decision to abort would have passed as quietly as the first. Not even the Iranians would have known and those who took part would have quietly returned home to plan another attempt, equally cloaked in secrecy. America would have had no disaster for the world to ridicule—there would have been no heroes.

"Fear to do base and unworthy things is valor; if they be done to us, to suffer them is also valor."
—Ben Jonson

But, 10 days ago, it came time for a different sort of valor. The need to act, after a nerve-twisting patience unrivaled in U.S. history, was virtually compelling. As America slept, 90 hand-picked men set out on a mission as daring and dangerous as any commando raid ever attempted. None intended to become heroes, but the eight who died did so.

Undamaged helicopters intelligence gold mine

WASHINGTON — Though the helicopters of the U.S. rescue mission in Iran were equipped with special explosives designed to destroy the secret material aboard the departing commandos, failed to detonate them, thus handing the Iranians an intelligence coup, U.S. officials disclosed Wednesday.

The officials confirmed that the U.S. commandos had taken along wire and thermite explosives for the specific purpose of destroying sensitive papers and gear.

But, as fires from burning aircraft lit up the desert night at the refueling rendezvous point last Thursday and touched off ammunition, the 180 commandos and air crewmen were ordered to rush aboard their C-130 transports without waiting to blow up the helicopters.

With all that ammunition flying around in the dark, the commander on the ground, Col. Charles Beckwith, apparently feared that his live, remaining C-130 transports at Desert One might be set afire, stranding his team on the desert 500 miles inside Iran.

A Pentagon official said the command team had been dragging the helicopter that could not take off from Desert One away from the refueling site, apparently with the idea of blowing it up; when another helicopter collided with a C-130 full of fuel, the collision set both planes on fire and touched off the ammunition.

The spokesman also said the rescue team did not blow up the first of the seven helicopters abandoned on the desert for fear the resulting fire would alert the Iranians to the mission. The pilot of this helicopter landed safely in Desert One after experiencing problems with his controls.

"All the classified equipment and material were destroyed," said the Pentagon in reference to the secret gear on that line.

Exactly how big an intelligence grab the Iranians scored in going through the six helicopters abandoned at Desert One has not been disclosed. But the Iranians already have displayed enough sensitive photographs and maps from the choppers to disturb U.S. intelligence specialists. They fear some highly secret code gear may have been lost to the Iranians as well.

"Among the 'frenchie' who took risks to help the attempted rescue of the 53 hostages at the embassy in Tehran were some Iranian pilots. It is unconfirmed as to whether some of the helicopters might enable the Iranian government to find these Iranians.

One government intelligence specialist termed it "slippery planning" to let anybody in the American rescue party carry his wallet, as was done on this mission.

Planning criticized

CHARLESTON, S.C. (UPI) — The United States' effort to rescue the American hostages in Iran failed because plans for the surprise mission were inadequate to handle emergencies, according to a retired Air Force general.

"You never send a force that you don't have backed up unless you are in a dire strait," Ret. Brig. Gen. Ted L. Bishop said Tuesday.

"Planning must be more effective. This was not evident from what we know of the situation now."

The rescue effort claimed eight lives and injured five other men.

Naval force reduction may be required move

Daily Telegraph, London

A warning that America will not be able to maintain a force of two carriers and more than 20 supporting ships in the Indian Ocean for "very long" has been given by the former chairman of the U.S. Joint Chiefs of Staff, Adm. Thomas Moorer.

Moorer feels the reduction in the American Seventh Fleet in the Indian Ocean if at all prolonged is likely to provoke doubts in China, Japan and the Philippines about their own futures and orientations against the background of ever more tenuous linkages to U.S. military power.

"Instead, Moorer suggests, a force of one carrier and nine other ships would probably be adequate in the Indian Ocean. But there is an urgent need for these ships to have shore support nearer to the Persian Gulf than Diego Garcia in an island off the coast of India or Kenya, which are both some 2,000 miles away.

Moorer's views are aired in a U.S. Strategic Institute paper produced with Dr. Alvin Cottrell, director for wartime policy studies of the Center for Strategic and International Studies.

The most likely base for supporting this Indian Ocean fleet would be the United Arab Emirates, Oman and the Persian Gulf. There were no indications of any imminent action.

High numbers are due to rotation shortly of two Carrier Task groups which have been on station for months and which will be replaced by two other carrier groups.

The nuclear-powered carrier Nimitz, 93,400 tons with combat load, has been on patrol in the Indian Ocean and Arabian Sea since January — the longest period for a Navy ship at sea without a port call since World War II.

The 64,000-ton, conventionally powered carrier Coral Sea came on station Feb. 10.

They will be replaced by the patrol aircraft, the paper said.

If the air base on the islands were used as a staging post for Marines reinforcing the Indian Ocean fleet, America should assure Oman that they would be used only to help repel any fresh invasion by Soviet or Cuban supported forces from South Yemen.

The paper is strongly critical of the American government's rejection of Pakistan's offer of some seven years ago to allow American warships to use the remote fishing port of Gwadar in Baluchistan as an anchorage in return for arms supplies.

It claims that reports from Turkish intelligence sources say the Soviets are now training dissident Baluch tribesmen who are seeking an independent Baluchistan.

There is also a need to re-establish the right of American aircraft to use the Pakistani air base at Peshawar to mount a joint watch with Pakistan on Soviet activity in the northwest frontier province area "and, if necessary, counter those activities."

Peshawar was used in the 1960s as a base for American U-2 high flying reconnaissance aircraft which regularly flew over the southern parts of the Soviet Union.

The paper concludes with the warning that "the trends in the region, from the U.S. vantage point, are approaching a point of no return. There is little time and there is even less margin for error."

Henry flays negotiations with Tehran

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (UPI) — Former Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger said Wednesday that failed rescue may speed the return of American hostages from Iran, but he criticized President Carter for negotiating with their captors.

"I do not believe one should negotiate with people who take hostages," the former secretary of state told a news conference. "You encourage the taking of hostages and you encourage the raising of demands."

"I would say no negotiations until the hostages are released. We have let a lot of time go by without things going ahead."

Kissinger criticized Carter for lack of consistency. He said the White House policy on Iran has "gone back and forth between the soft and hard lines. One of the problems is it isn't quite clear what our position is."

Kissinger held a news conference before a speech at Temple Beth El's 125th anniversary celebration. A dozen protesters, calling Kissinger a "war criminal," demonstrated outside.

Kissinger said the failed attempt to free the 53 American hostages, seized in a militant takeover of the U.S. Embassy in Tehran last November, may have a positive effect.

"I tend to believe this rescue mission, even though it failed, may have a positive impact on the release of the hostages because it must have shown Iran... there is a limit on American patience," Kissinger said.

"I would think the long imprisonment of these hostages is something we cannot continue to be indifferent to."

Kissinger had nothing but praise for Sen. Edmund Muskie, D-Maine, picked by Carter to replace Cyrus Vance as secretary of state. He said he doesn't think a change of command will affect the nation's relationship with its allies.

Rotation plan boosts flotilla to 33 ships

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United States now has four aircraft carriers and 33 combat and support ships in the Indian Ocean, Arabian Sea and Persian Gulf. There were no indications of any imminent action.

High numbers are due to rotation shortly of two Carrier Task groups which have been on station for months and which will be replaced by two other carrier groups.

The nuclear-powered carrier Nimitz, 93,400 tons with combat load, has been on patrol in the Indian Ocean and Arabian Sea since January — the longest period for a Navy ship at sea without a port call since World War II.

The 64,000-ton, conventionally powered carrier Coral Sea came on station Feb. 10.

They will be replaced by the nuclear-powered carrier Eisenhower, a sister ship to the Nimitz, and the 61,000-ton turbine-powered Constellation which rounded the tip of South Africa last weekend and were heading north.

Naval sources said the Soviets currently have 27 vessels — 12 combat and 15 support — in the Indian Ocean area.

Each U.S. carrier heads a task force including guided missile cruisers, destroyers and frigates.

The American flotilla also includes an amphibious assault ship, a tank landing ship and two amphibious cargo and stores ships. Presence of a submarine tender indicates U.S. submarines are also operating in the area.

President says most commandos would try rescue again

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter says he met with most of the commandos who tried to rescue the hostages in Iran and wants all of them to be permitted to try again.

They were prepared to do their duty, and they did their duty," Carter said. "Sunday I met with a large group of men who were the core of this effort," a session that was held in secret. "The next day he went to San Antonio, Texas to visit with the five who were hospitalized."

Noting the nation's "serious challenges and problems," Carter said that "the meeting of those challenges and the solution of those problems require sacrifice."

White House officials said the president had tears in his eyes when he visited the commandos.

House Speaker Thomas O'Neill, D-Mass., said Carter told him of the meeting with the commandos and called it an emotional occasion.

Monday, Carter flew to San Antonio, Texas, and met with the five men injured when a helicopter and a C-130 cargo plane collided in the desert, and again heard the survivors say they would like to try again.

Injured airman flown home to see daughter

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (UPI) — The 27-year-old airman had been flying a kind of "trauma" from the Iranian desert and as he convalesced from his injuries, his only thought was to see his infant daughter.

Angelos both were listed in satisfactory condition.

William 1st Class William V. Tootle got the wish he had expressed to President Carter when he departed Kelly Air Force Base Tuesday en route to his home in Fort Walton Beach, Fla.

Col. Basil Pruitt, in charge of the burn ward, said each patient was progressing satisfactorily and all were expected to survive.

President Carter visited Tootle, and asked that he'd like to have most and see his family," said Tom Connell, a spokesman at Lackland.

Joseph Zengerle, assistant Secretary of the Air Force for Manpower, Reserves, Affairs and Installations, invited Tootle aboard his aircraft and detoured to Fort Worthon "Beach" en route back to Washington D.C.

AF officer stays silent about rescue

One of the commandos injured in the aborted hostage rescue mission returned home to his family Tuesday, and a second still being treated for burns said he did not want to discuss the mission.

Army stays quiet about Delta unit

The Army Wednesday maintained secrecy on the Delta Group anti-terrorist unit involved in the aborted Iranian rescue mission amid reports more than 50 of the commandos had returned to Fort Bragg.

What's what

Lone Ranger's creator publicized summer camp

James E. Jewell was only 23 years old in 1930 when he created the Lone Ranger. And the Masked Man became highly popular indeed in serialization over Detroit's WXYZ. Jewell decided his hero needed a friend, so he invented the Indian Tonto. The father of Jewell's girlfriend—the wife later to be his wife—ran a summer camp in Michigan. Its name, meaning "trusting brave," was publicized widely every time Tonto addressed the Ranger. It was called "Kemo Sabe."

Without hearing, without sight, Helen Keller studied the raised alphabet, both capitals and lower case. Her fingertips were sensitive; her concentration keen. She learned all the letters in just one day.

It's the custom in Japan to wash one's self thoroughly before getting into the bath.

TELEPHONES

Q. Is it true that Brazil had telephone service before the United States did?

A. Commercial service, yes. The telephone was put on display at the 1876 Centennial Exposition. Brazil's people there thought it more significant than did the U.S. officials.

Only one out of five murder victims is killed by a stranger.

Q. Do pythons steal from one another?

A. Rarely. If ever. Inclination is to say they never do, because such behavior would ruin their reputation. But never doesn't leave any room for the exception.

Why does dirty snow melt more quickly than clean snow?

Q. What's the oldest continuously inhabited town in the Americas?

A. Cuzco in Peru; Incaz started it.

NO TEETH

One out of every three people in Great Britain has no natural teeth. So it was reported. Why is such the case? A scholar who has looked into the matter blames socialized dentistry over there. Writes he: It's simply easier to pull teeth for the ficed for than do delicate repair for inefficient people. Maybe so, don't know.

Top three personal problems that plague medical doctors nationwide are alcoholism, drug addiction and mental depression. So say state health authorities in North Dakota.

Optimists honor Qualls

TWIN FALLS — Tim Qualls, Twin Falls chief of police, is the recipient of the Optimist Club's Respect for Law Week Citation.

Qualls, 50, was born and raised in Twin Falls. He began his law enforcement career in 1949 when he joined the Kimberly Police Department. In 1950 he joined the Twin Falls Police Department. He transferred over to the detective division in 1961 and became Chief of Detectives before assuming his current position as Chief of Police in 1978.

Besides his duties as chief of police, Qualls serves on the Idaho Post Council Advisory Commission for the Police Officer Standards and Training School and is serving his second term as president of the Idaho Chief's Association.

Optimist President Chuck Hallett said, "Tim Qualls deserves this Respect for Law Week citation. He has taught the residents of Twin Falls a tremendous amount about law and order and respect for the law."

"Respect For Law Week," an annual observance sponsored by the Optimist Club of Twin Falls, will be May 1-7. Through the Respect for Law program, Optimist clubs in the United States and Canada encourage citizens to become actively involved in combating crime.

According to the Optimists, the first step in creating a climate in which respect for law can exist is through establishing full cooperation between citizens and their local law enforcement officers. In areas where this cooperation has been accomplished, a measurable decrease in the rate of crime has been noted.

Officer Gene Richie of the Twin Falls Police Department has a film entitled "Scared Straight" depicting the hard prison life, which is available to groups or service organizations upon request. The Scared Straight program has been over 90 percent successful in dealing with delinquent youths, according to officer Richie.

President Hallett asks all citizens to join with the Optimist Club in this observance. "Good law enforcement cannot be the responsibility of police officers alone. Your help is needed."

Controversy rages over whether childbirth is family affair

Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I had our second child naturally. My daughter, then 2 years 9 months old, witnessed the entire birth, coaching me with, "Push, Mama, push!" It was a truly joyous occasion!

My reply: "There is no better way to learn about the miracle of life than to witness childbirth. I see nothing shocking or immodest about it. A 3-year-old should find it a fascinating and educational experience."

Well, after that letter hit print, Ernie, my dear, devoted mailman, was displeased with a double hernia from carrying these 40-pound sacks of mail into my office!

against my answer. Today, a sampling of the pros (Tomorrow, the cons)

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I had our second child naturally. My daughter, then 2 years 9 months old, witnessed the entire birth, coaching me with, "Push, Mama, push!" It was a truly joyous occasion!

If children are informed properly throughout the pregnancy with visual aids (books, films, etc.), they will be accepting and knowledgeable about the event. There is no need to hide the truth from a child. To experience reality now is to be unafraid later.

PATRICIA GONZALES
SANTA MONICA, CALIF.
DEAR ABBY: I was in a natural childbirth program at Illinois Masonic Hospital in Chicago. My husband and Sarah, our 2 1/2-year-old daughter, watched the delivery. (The child was told what to expect.) My parents also watched, and were moved by it. Nobody got sick. We also filmed the whole procedure, and we treasure those films. We often watch it together to relive a great moment in our lives. Our children will grow up to respect the miracle of pregnancy and childbirth as a sacred gift from God, instead of something to get rid of.

C.M. AND FAMILY, CHICAGO

DEAR ABBY: Three cheers for your open-mindedness regarding making childbirth a family affair!

Birth is a normal, natural human function that should be celebrated by the entire family. Siblings who are prepared for what is happening will be more understanding and loving to the new baby they "helped" to bring into the world.

There is so much more unity in the family that has "birthed" together. When one considers its beginning, no wonder the American family is disintegrating. Mom is in the recovery room, Dad is pacing the corridor, the baby is in the nursery and the siblings are shuffled off to Grandma's. The family never had a chance; it wasn't even born together.

PATRICE GEDDES BAKERSFIELD, CALIF.

DEAR ABBY: Last December I gave birth to a healthy, beautiful boy. Both my husband and mother-in-law were present during my labor and delivery, which prepared us well for the birth. I delivered completely naturally, without drugs or medication. My mother-in-law, later, said she learned more from witnessing my son's birth than she had from giving birth to four of her own children.

PROUD MOTHER, TUCSON

DEAR ABBY: My 4-year-old son attended childbirth classes with us and he also witnessed the birth of his little brother. Because of this experience there has never been any jealousy between the siblings. Childbirth has nothing to do with modesty. It is God's greatest miracle. Since we all came into this world in the same way, why should anyone find it disgusting or foul-smelling? No name, please. My husband is a state senator.

ANONYMOUS
DEAR ABBY: You will probably get a lot of mail telling you you're crazy, but here's one for your side. Parents think nothing of telling their children that kittens come from cats, puppies from dogs and chickens from eggs, so why should they say that babies come from "the hospital," "the doctor's bag" or "a cabbage patch"? Children won't make a big deal out of anything unless their parents do. Honesty is always the best policy.

Stacking quarters will promote mental health

TWIN FALLS — The National Mental Health Association's 1980 fund-raising challenge for 1980 is to make "Quarter Miles For Mental Health."

When laying quarters side by side in a line, it takes 66,000 quarters to make a mile. One mile of quarters is $16,500.

The Twin Falls County Mental Health Association is sponsoring a relay-to-collect-in-the-neighborhoods of quarters in an effort to meet the "Quarter Miles For Mental Health" challenge, under the direction of Mardo Eaton, chairman.

A banner and mental health information booth will be set up on the downtown mall Saturday to officially start this fund-raising effort and the "Silver Celebration," along with other 75th anniversary events in Twin Falls in early June, will mark the its finish.

If all the quarters collected were laid side by side, what distance could Twin Falls go? The chairman asked: "The Mental Health Association in Idaho is a non-profit organization of volunteers working as advocates to promote mental health, prevent mental illness and to improve the care of the mentally ill, according to Pat Thompson, chapter president. The local unit is affiliated with the National Mental Health Association which is one of the largest citizen advocacy organizations in the United States."

In Twin Falls the MHA supports a hotline telephone (733-0122) and presents forums and workshops for the public such as the 1978 series on depression, the 1979 series on local positive mental health programs for youth and the just completed workshop on crisis management. They will sponsor an upcoming forum on coping with jobs and inflation-related stress.

Thompson said there are many statistics demonstrating the tragedy of mental illness. It is estimated that 1 of every 10 persons are affected by mental problems and as many people are hospitalized for mental illness as all other ailments combined, including heart and cancer.

Unfortunately the suicide rate in the Magic Valley is significantly higher than the U.S. average and the Idaho rate is higher still. During the 5-year period between 1974-78, Twin Falls and Cassia counties even exceeded the state's distressingly high suicide rate.

For more information about the "Quarter Miles for Mental Health" or persons wishing to send a donation by mail, contact Thompson, 1668 Kimes, Twin Falls, phone 733-6028.

Marital boredom often hits in middle age

By ARTHUR J. SNIDER
Chicago Sun-Times

When a middle-aged husband or wife has frequent complaints of insomnia, back problems, fatigue, nervousness or other vague symptoms for which no sound medical reason can be found, a discerning doctor may well inquire, "How's your marriage?"

Marital boredom is a common cause of aches and pains. "Psychosomatic, hypochondriacal and hysterical symptoms, as well as the psychological ones of anxiety, depression and sexual dysfunction can spring from the same source: marital boredom," a Harvard psychiatrist says.

Why do marriages become dull? Inattention to one another in the critical age of 30 to 40 is the foremost reason, according to Dr. William S. Appleton.

The thirties are the building years when the husband is completely absorbed in furthering his career and the wife is rearing young children. They leave no time and energy for one another. They are too busy to be bored.

When middle-age comes and the scramble for a career has subsided and the children have left home, the couple turns to each other only to discover they no longer enjoy one another's conversation and interests. They have grown apart, developed in different directions and, tragically, have become too indifferent to notice.

Another reason for middle-age marriage dullness is high expectations. "Marriages are probably no less boring than they used to be," observed Appleton in the Journal Human Sexuality. "But people are less willing now to tolerate boredom. In the past, couples expected dullness. They spent evenings together quietly, reading or writing letters, doing their chores, taking care of the children and retiring early. That took care of the evenings."

"But today, the media have raised expectations. Couples expect the good life, high-quality leisure time, exciting sex, stimulating conversation, warm intimacy and a good-looking bright spouse 24 hours a day."

The psychiatrist offers some suggestions for preventing marital boredom:

—Keep in touch. Take the trouble to tell one another about the day's activities. The other should listen and show interest, even if necessary to pretend. Later, it will come naturally.

—Keep yourself interesting. Marital boredom is less of a problem for people involved in interesting pursuits. Those who look to the spouse for all of the stimulation place too much stress on the marital relationship.

—Inject new life into the marriage by creating shared activities to which the couple can look forward.

New trends are ignored in Britain

Daily Telegraph, London
LONDON — British women find keeping up with fashion costs too much with the trends changing too often, according to a survey.

Many of them ignore the trend-setters and wear only what suits them, a Berkeley-commissioned survey of 1,000 women showed.

More than half of the women questioned rejected the idea of frequent changes in fashion — with almost half wishing styles stayed more stable. One in eight said they should not change at all.

Just over half of women spent about $1,000 on fashion clothes last year and another 21 percent spent $2,000, said the survey. Twelve percent spent between $240 and $499, and 10 percent spent more than $4,000. Only one in seven expected to spend more this year.

Most of those interviewed did not know if they could go on spending as much on clothes, and one in three said they would not spend as much this year as last.

Forty percent said they wear only fashions that suit them regardless of the trend.

Dr. Lamb

Stress may be factor in fatigue of mother of 7 children

By LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.
(News-Enterprise Association)
Dear Dr. Lamb,
I am 45 years old, 5 feet 11 and weigh 180 pounds.
I have seven children from 10 to 28. I lost my husband three years ago and have a 10-year-old with leukemia. He's been in total remission for three years. I am a high-strung person and have a trouble-sleeping most of the time.

About a year-and-a-half ago started having extreme fatigue. I went to the hospital and had a complete evaluation with X-rays and everything and was told that all I had was a slight sinus infection which couldn't be the cause. My blood sugar was 180.

I was told I was in my menopause and to lose weight, try to relax and I would be fine. I asked the doctor for estrogen since I'd been told that makes you feel so much better, but he said he would not recommend it and with that, I was discharged.
I am still fatigued and can't believe there is not a physical reason for my condition. Some days it's so bad that I lie down all day and can't do a thing. Can you please comment on what I told you or help me in any way? I don't have to work since we have a business which my son runs.

(dular) or nutritional problems.
Of course, if there is a disease present that's causing the fatigue, the correct approach is to try to cure the disease. If there isn't any obvious disease, then you have to look elsewhere for causes for fatigue.
I'm sending you The Health Letter number 9-6, Fatigue: Feeling Tired and Wary. Other readers who want their issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019. It will give you a more complete discussion of the many things that can contribute to fatigue.

You've had a lot of responsibility for a long time, and the stress of this may have contributed to your feeling of fatigue.
The other question is how much fun you're getting out of life. People who don't have goals and aren't engaged in doing something they enjoy often get tired. Part of the problem is boredom. Everyone needs to be involved with people, needs to do things that they enjoy and needs to have goals to accomplish. You'd be surprised how much energy a person can have if she is suddenly told that she is going to take a trip that she had wanted to make for a long time, or some other pleasant event enters her life.

Some people actually have a depression and that's the reason they feel fatigued. These people often require professional help. I'm also sending you "The Health Letter" number 10-15, Depression: "The Ups" and "Downs" of Life. Very frequently, both men and women have mild and sometimes relatively severe depression in the middle years. In women there's a tendency to attribute these to life changes, menopause and in men, it's even popular to call it the male menopause.

Dear Reader,
You did the right thing in having a complete medical examination. Fatigue or loss of energy is a frequent problem. In about 80 percent of the cases that doctors see for this complaint, there is no medical reason for it. That means, however, that in 20 percent there is a medical cause. These can run the gamut of such things such as infectious diseases, diabetes, anemia, endocrine (glandular) or nutritional problems.

Sweatshirt now on right side of track

By JULIE HATFIELD
Boston Globe

BOSTON — A lowly garment with a brutally descriptive name — the sweatshirt — has crossed to the right side of the tracks this spring.
To celebrate its debut from the locker room to the tearoom, American manufacturers have in their inimitable way, given it a new name: "no-sweat dressing."
It's as American as its apple pie — the garment. If not the sweat — and it only took the imagination of a few young and kooky designers to turn it into a thing of beauty.

piped in white, to be worn with white cotton pants.
Overture has a zippy (literally and figuratively) new group that consists of jackets, pants, kimono wrap tops, "motorcycle" jackets, even a strapless jumpsuit, in red, white and blue. The new sweatshirt has become an art form," affirmed Gazelle owner Vanda Mangano, as she showed examples of the one-of-a-kind painted sweatshirts from the SoHo section of New York for $29 and $39 each. Designer Daniel Laurent has sold a whole group of striped and printed sweatshirts to that shop, and Cabal has sent up a whimsical group with dinosaur-like ridges running down the side of each sleeve.

The old gray sweatshirt, sloppy as it was, was a paragon of comfort. Nothing feels better against the skin than soft, fleecy, brushed cotton, and possibly because a lot more people tried it on when they took up running and exercising, a lot more people were reluctant to take it off and return to stiffer, more structured clothing when they left the gym.
So the designers jazzed it up with color, prints and stripes — little wads of change its loose and easy shape — and accessorized it with fun jewelry and high heeled shoes and created a new, more sophisticated, no-one-knows-how-to-categorize-it-in-the-stores-and-no-one-knows-where-it-should-be-worn.

A company called Pepsi Generation sports red and blue sweatshirt tops and pants. The shoulders of these outfits are quilted. And Kaitpickers makes a pretty side-buttoned-velour top that bespeaks sweatshirt roots. Oversized sweatshirts with giant colored parrots on the front by Kenal Yamamoto have just about sold out, at $25 each — at Ann Taylor. Running a close second are the store's own Ann Taylor sweatshirts with their name emblazoned across the front.

Thus it's being worn everywhere, day and night, with both sneakers and disco shoes.
Sweatshirts, whether in gray or high-fashion colors and prints, are a welcome respite for the young from the basic blue jeans. Pushed to the knee, like kickers, sweatpants have a fresh city look. The traditional sweatshirt fleeces have even been translated into silks and satins for evening and disco dress with skirted outfits and knee-length sweatshirt dresses.

California designers are coming out with even more imaginative sweatshirt looks for fall. One white jumpsuit features a shoulder that snaps open or shut, another is in velour, in a peach rust and gold color with snap closings at the neckline. And a spacy looking one in wool jersey is diagonally shopped at the neck, and has stirrup pants.

The V-necked velour tops in every color, seen in every sportswear department in every store in Boston, are an offshoot of the sweatshirt, or no-sweat look. Bonnie Taylor has $25 short-sleeve tops by IQ, and sweatshirt dresses by Kenzo for $51. Most stores, in fact, have their own version of the cleaned-up, dressed-up sweatshirt in women and people in poor physical condition, scientists said today.

Givenchy showed sweatshirt-type blouses paired with pleated plaid skirts or patterned silk ones in his fall 1980 show, and indeed, many other Frenchmen have had a good time with an originally all-American garment. "When the French do a sweatshirt, according to Bernice Orzer of Associated Merchandising Corp., which advises American stores, "they smock it, paint it, embroider it, zipper it, pleat it and wear it inside out. That just forces the Americans to push their existing trend and make it more interesting."

Exercise said to help clot-fighting enzyme

BOSTON (UPI) — Moderate exercise increases a special enzyme in the blood for digesting blood clots that can lead to heart attack or stroke, especially in women and people in poor physical condition, scientists said today.
A single clot, lodged in an artery or heart cavity, can reduce blood flow and choke off oxygen to the muscles or brain. As a defense, the body releases an enzyme to break up the clot in a process called fibrinolysis.
Dr. Salvatore V. Pizzo and six researchers at the Duke University Medical Center in Durham, N.C., found that enzyme activity against clots increased in adults who completed a 10-week physical conditioning program.
Fibrinolysis rose in all of the 60 people, ranging in age from 25 to 69, but the biggest increase came in persons of "low initial physical fitness" and women, they said.
The findings were published in this week's issue of the New England Journal of Medicine.
Exercise may enhance hormones that increase fibrinolysis, Pizzo said in a telephone interview, although it was not clear why the increase is more marked in women and people in comparatively poor health.

There isn't a good mechanism to explain that at this point," he said.
The doctors measured fibrinolysis before and after the track program by compressing each person's arm five minutes in an inflatable cuff — the same kind used to take blood pressure. The pressure causes fibrinolysis to occur.
The increase in enzyme activity is striking, Pizzo said, since it is seen throughout the body, not just the muscles that were exercised.
"Take someone who's running around a track and mainly their leg muscles are going to benefit," he said. "We're measuring this activity in their arm, so what we're saying is there's an effect of exercise that's generalized, even though the main muscles exercised are leg muscles."

Self-detection technique of testicle cancer termed success story

By ALLAN PARACHINI
© The Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES — A few months ago, three Boston doctors previewed a short film on testicle examination — a surprisingly unrecognized self-help skill that can detect the most common form of cancer in young men.

After they saw the film twice, the doctors decided it could be a valuable part of the health education curriculum in area high schools and colleges. They realized that it might be greeted by a few locker room snickers when it was first shown.

That night, the 25-year-old man who was the projectionist at the preview put the technique he had just learned to work. The result was startling: He found a tumor the size of a bean.

The next day, the worried young projectionist sought out the three doctors. Their examination confirmed what he had found. Within hours, treatment had begun.

Like nearly all testicle cancer victims, the projectionist is alive today. His sex life is apparently well along the way to a full recovery, thanks to a technique that perhaps should be — but isn't — as accepted as breast self-examination by women.

Ten years ago, the story would have been quite different, with death the most likely outcome. But in what experts on testicle cancer in Los Angeles call the "most dramatic success story in cancer today," cure rates for all but the rarest one of the five major types of the disease have advanced beyond 95 percent.

It is good news that comes none too soon, according to physicians at Eastern Sloane-Farber Cancer Institute and University of California School of Medicine here in Los Angeles. Consider:

- While testicle cancer was once among the rarest forms of the disease, the incidence of new cases has more than tripled since 1972, for reasons doctors do not understand.

- Unlike some cancers that prey primarily on the socially disadvantaged, testicle cancer is a disease most common to the middle and upper classes. Incidence rates for young professionals are four times as high as those for unskilled laborers and bus drivers. Blacks are virtually immune, though no one knows why.

- And while it is still only a theory, researchers at USC believe there may be a connection between the incidence of testicle cancer and the treatment of the mothers of the victims with the synthetic hormone DES while they were pregnant more than 20 years ago.

- If the theory is ever proven, it would be clear that a generation of "DES sons" has been added to the ranks of "DES daughters" — young women at higher than normal risk of getting vaginal and cervical cancer because their mothers also were given the hormone treatment.

- For now, however, the handful of centers that have developed thorough testicle cancer treatment programs hope to persuade men to start monitoring their own bodies, a practice even simpler than the self-examination of breasts by women.

"This shouldn't be — though there probably is now — any skittishness about a man examining his own testicles. Especially when they're young, guys spend a lot of time feeling their muscles," said Dr. Donald Skinner, USC's testicle cancer expert. "They know exactly what their muscles feel like in all of the parts of their bodies. They should know what their testicles feel like normally so that they know if there is a sudden change and that it isn't the way it was before."

Testicle cancer can afflict men from infancy through old age. Skinner said a 2-year-old boy was treated for the disease at USC recently and that another of his patients was a 95-year-old man.

For the most part, however, testicle cancer strikes boys and young men starting just after puberty through the late 30s. The bulk of cases are in the 20- to 34-year range.

Advances in therapy in the last five years have made this, perhaps, the most curable of all cancers today. Even when the disease has spread to the abdomen or chest, Skinner said, modern treatment can save the lives of 65 or 70 percent of the victims. Cure rates of 85 to 95 percent — or even higher — are now commonplace when the cancer is caught early, Skinner said.

And self-examination can be a key factor in early detection.

There are five major types of testicle cancer. A variety called Seminoma is most common in men 25 and older. A kind called embryonal carcinoma is more frequent in teenagers and men in their early 20s. Of the five, only a variety called choriocarcinoma still is usually fatal, but it is by far the rarest of all.

Self-examination of the testicles is done at the time of a shower. It can be done at any time and need not be performed, like breast checks, only at a certain time in each month.

To examine himself, a man should wait until the skin of his scrotum is relaxed. Most doctors recommend self-examination in the shower. A normal testicle is smooth, egg-shaped and somewhat firm to the touch at the top of each side. A tube called the epididymis is connected, which carries sperm away from the testicle.

Self-examination is suggested no less frequently than every six or eight weeks, doctors agreed, at least in part because it is important for each man to know what his own testicles feel like under normal conditions. If there is any change in the shape or texture, a doctor should be consulted immediately.

An infection called epididymitis can cause one or both testicles to swell and Skinner said that antibiotic treatment for the infection may be tried for a week or two. But if the swelling does not disappear — or if a distinct lump, however small, is felt, the man should suspect cancer and seek assistance immediately.

A man should also become suspicious if he has unexplained lower-back pain, Skinner said. Testicle cancer often spreads to the abdomen and produces large tumors there — some the size of a football — even though the tumor in the scrotum remains small. Though the spreading is dangerous, Skinner and Garnick said, even most patients with large secondary tumors survive.

"Any lump in the testicle can be presumed to be cancer until proven otherwise," Skinner said.

Neither the surgery nor follow-up radiation and drug treatment, Skinner and Dr. Marc Garnick of Boston's Farber Cancer Institute, said, has any effect on the man's ability to have an erection or sexual climax.

About two thirds of all patients with the disease have signs of spreading when the cancer is detected, Skinner said, a factor that may be related to lack of awareness among men of the potential for cancer in their reproductive organs.

Garnick said that because testicle cancer still is not something men discuss freely, many misconceptions exist about it. Listing them, Garnick said that:

- The chance of getting cancer is not increased if a man has suffered a testicle injury. However, many men who have the cancer detect it after a sports injury because their attention is drawn to that part of their bodies.

- Having venereal disease has no effect on a man's chance of getting cancer; nor does masturbation.
- Enlarged testicles are not a sign of increased virility, but often the first warning of disease — either infection or cancer. Any change in testicle size should be reported to a doctor immediately, particularly by boys and men from 15 to 35.

Skinner and Dr. Brian Henderson of USC said that until recently, testicle cancer was extremely rare, but that since 1972, the incidence has started increasing rapidly for reasons doctors do not yet understand.

Nationwide, the National Cancer Institute expects 3.7 new cases for every 100,000 men in the country this year, but Skinner said the rate is distorted because black men almost never get testicle cancer — though they contract prostate cancer twice as frequently as whites.

Among Caucasian men, the disease rate is nearly six new cases per 100,000 males, Skinner said, and the incidence is increasing quickly.

White supremacist, aides plead innocent in Boise court

BOISE (UPI) — White supremacist Richard Butler and his chief lieutenant and two bodyguards pleaded innocent Thursday to two charges. They also demanded a jury trial on charges of trespassing and carrying concealed weapons.

The four uniformed members of the neo-Nazi Church of Jesus Christ, Christian Nations were arrested Saturday night after they refused to leave the Red Lion Inn-Downtown while attempting to conduct a "conversion and baptism" rousing Saturday.

Weiser, plus Butler's bodyguards, Larry K. Dodge and Elden E. Cutler, both of Hayden Lake, were accused of trespassing. Dodge also was accused of carrying a concealed .25 caliber semi-automatic pistol, and Cutler — who scuffled with a police officer during his arrest — was charged with controlling a .25 caliber semi-automatic pistol.

The four Aryan Nations members again today were dressed in dark blue pants and jackets and light blue shirts during the court hearings. Each wore a multicolored swastika patch on his left shoulder. Three other Aryan Nations members were at the arraignment.

Butler and his co-defendants will be free on bond until their joint trial on the misdemeanors charges. They were ordered to appear May 13 in the courtroom of 4th District Judge Karen Vehlouw, who then will set a date for the trial.

The group was barred from the use of public and private community buildings in Ontario, Ore., Boise and Jerome last weekend during the southern Idaho tour, and was opposed by several dozen hecklers in Boise. "We have been called from all over the country and all over Idaho," he said, adding that the group "most definitely" would continue its efforts to increase its membership.

Symms asked to drop Texan from job

BOISE (UPI) — Democratic Sen. Frank Church's campaign manager Thursday called on Rep. Steve Symms to "immediately disassociate himself" from a Texas billionaire who is a member of the Idaho Republican's campaign finance committee.

Symms is challenging Church in the 1980 U.S. Senate race in Idaho.

The plea to Symms by Boise attorney Carl Burke, coordinator of Church's re-election campaign, resulted from Dallas silver speculator Nelson Bunker Hunt's failure to appear before a House subcommittee.

"I find it unbelievable that Congressman Symms would not immediately disassociate himself, publicly, from a man who has been cited for contempt of Congress," Burke said.

That subcommittee voted this week to censure Hunt and his brother, Herbert Hunt, for contempt because they ignored a congressional subpoena. Symms said Wednesday he had not decided whether he would vote or abstain on the contempt citation should it reach the full House.

The Hunt brothers could face fines and jail terms under the contempt citation. They failed to appear before the lawmakers Tuesday to testify about their activities in the silver market.

A spokesman for the congressman also said Symms has not considered asking Hunt to drop off his campaign finance committee.

"Steve Symms faces an obvious conflict of interest and should not hesitate to disassociate himself from an individual who flagrantly violates a subpoena to testify on a matter important to the nation's economy," Burke said in a news release.

"I would hope Mr. Symms would immediately announce that Mr. Hunt has been dismissed from his fundraising role and that Mr. Symms will step aside on any vote on the contempt citation."

"I would hope Mr. Symms would immediately announce that Mr. Hunt has been dismissed from his fundraising role and that Mr. Symms will step aside on any vote on the contempt citation."

House subcommittee this week voted unanimously to censure a Dallas billionaire, for contempt because he did not honor a subpoena to testify before the subcommittee.

Bunker Hunt has not been found guilty of doing anything legally wrong," Schirmer said.

FBI joins police in search for man who kidnapped son

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — Salt Lake City Police say the FBI has agreed to help locate a man charged with abducting his ailing 7-month-old son from a hospital, even though the kidnapping does not violate a federal law.

Garrett allegedly took his son from Primary Children's Hospital on April 25. The boy had been at the hospital for two weeks where he was being treated for a bone marrow infection.

Detective Gary Fuller said Garrett's mother, who lives in Spring Valley, Calif., reported having contact with her son. But she claimed she could not tell police where her son was or if his child was receiving medical attention.

Fifth Circuit Court Judge Floyd Gowans Wednesday signed a complaint against Nicholas Garrett, 28, of Panguitch, Utah, charging Garrett with aggravated kidnapping. Gowans set the father's bail at $25,000 on the arrest warrant.

Police say Garrett and the infant's mother, Susan Brown, 24, of Panguitch, were never married. Under Utah law, a father of an illegitimate child has no custody rights. But the FBI said federal custody laws are different and it can only help with the investigation if the child was taken to another state.

Deputy Salt Lake County Attorney Dennis Fuchs said the boy may be in immediate need of medical treatment. Fuchs said, "If the child should die as a result of being deprived of medical care, then Garrett could face a separate murder charge."

Woman lies in car 12 hours

BOISE (UPI) — A woman lay unconscious for 12 hours Wednesday in one of Boise's busiest parking lots before someone looked inside her wrecked car and called for help. Police said.

Hugh Rowland found the woman in the afternoon — about half a day after the 1 a.m. crash. Police said Ms. Vanoski was slumped over the front seat after her head hit the windshield, knocking her unconscious. She was listed in fair condition Thursday at St. Alphonsus Hospital.

"This one looked like any other accident with the way the car is pushed up against the bank. I was just coming over to give it a ticket. I never saw the woman till I came up with the ticket and looked into the front seat. "She was lying there covered with a blanket and looked like she was bleeding. I didn't even open the door. I just ran and called the police."

Prosecutors seek to halt keg parties

BOISE (UPI) — Prosecutors from seven southwest Idaho counties had a strategy meeting Wednesday to see how they could stop teen-age keg parties this spring.

Rowland said he saw the car when he arrived at work at 5 a.m., but didn't think much of it. "It's not uncommon to find a bent car in this parking lot," he said. "Usually I give the person a day to clean it up and they usually come sometime during the day and remove Officers said they had spotted the wrecked car at 7 a.m. while on patrol, but left it untouched because they thought its owner had pushed it into the parking lot after an accident on the street.

The officials said they would crack down on mass beer-drinking among high school students because keg parties contributed to the deaths of about a dozen youths last spring. The deaths included highway fatalities, drownings and a fall.

"Our motivation is the protection of life and property, and not necessarily to legislate morality," said Ada County Prosecutor Jim Harris, who hosted the meeting.

Both youths and adults hopefully will be discouraged by authorities, "putting the fear of God" in them, he said.

Man arraigned for safe theft

BOISE (UPI) — The man who police said wheeled a 500-pound safe out of a federal office April 15 was arraigned Tuesday in 4th District Court on burglary and grand larceny charges.

Officers accused Rick L. Mitchell, 22, Boise, of taking the safe object from the U.S. Housing and Urban Development Department's Boise office and stealing $1,200.

The safe was found later near Gowen Road south of the Boise airport.

Flood fear prompts call to evacuate

LOVELAND, Colo. (UPI) — The children in Babbette Quinn's fourth grade class at Big Thompson Elementary School watched nervously as the river outside their classroom climbed during a day of steady rain.

Larimer County Sheriff Jim Black also eyed the rising Big Thompson River, remembering the July 31, 1976 flash flood which killed 139 persons.

Deciding not to take any chances, Black late Wednesday pulled out his flood response plan. He called in his reserve and six duty officers and ordered a precautionary evacuation of an estimated 125 families at the lower end of the Big Thompson Canyon. The elementary school which Mrs. Quinn's students had left a few hours earlier was reopened as a command post and evacuation center. By midnight, however, no evacuees had arrived and center personnel concluded shelter had been found with friends and family.

"The sheriff said 125 families were contacted but we don't know how many people that is or how many actually responded," said Mrs. Quinn. "The Red Cross is set up here with food and shelter but none are taking advantage of it."

No deaths or injuries were reported, and the only flooding was in basements of a few homes along the river. Rivers throughout Colorado's river range, already swollen with spring runoff from mountain snowpack, reached the spillover point with Wednesday's steady rain or drizzle.

Residents below Big Thompson Canyon, recalling the flood that killed 139 in 1976, began evacuating as rains swelled the riverbank

Mrs. Quinn said the center and command post were part of a well-organized plan developed after the 1976 flood, when a 19-foot wall of water triggered by a deluge of rain swept down the narrow canyon and destroyed everything in its path.

County sheriff's office said Wednesday's activity was the first time the flood response plan had been used since 1976.

"I think there is a lot of caution being exercised but the past experience here dictates that," said Mrs. Quinn. "I wouldn't call it overreaction."

MX changes please Garn

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Paul Laxalt of Nevada and Jake Garn of Utah have asked the Defense Department to abandon the race-track basing mode for the MX missile and adopt a "grid" or "section" road system instead.

It would lessen the social and economic impacts of the system and would require less land and fewer miles of road, they said in a letter to William Perry, under secretary of defense and research and engineering.

Defense Secretary Harold Brown told Congress this week the original MX plan has been refined. He said there will be changes in size and configuration of the bunkers as well as the vehicle that shuttles the missile among the bunkers arranged in a loop pattern. He said some loops may be changed to a straight line configuration.

Laxalt and Garn, whose states would be the location for the $56 billion project, said Brown's suggestions pave the way for a non-race-track basing mode.

Malfunction shuts down reactor

HANFORD, Wash. (UPI) — The government's nuclear reactor at the Hanford Atomic Reservation was shut down Wednesday for the second time in four days — this time for a suspected fuel element failure.

The dual-purpose N-Reactor, operated by UIC Nuclear Industries, was expected to be operating in a few days after one of its 16,000 uranium fuel elements was replaced, a company spokesman said.

The reactor was shut down Sunday because of a leak in a water piping system. It was returned to service Tuesday.

Officials said they repaired three leaking valves that caused water in the generating system to collect in a reservoir.

The system is a recirculating type and none of the water or radioactivity was leaked into the environment, spokesman Karen Scott said.

The reactor produces plutonium for the government and electricity for Northwest utilities.

Climber dies in fall from cliff

SEQUOIA — NATIONAL PARK (UPI) — Rangers aided by a rescue helicopter have recovered the body of a climber who fell more than 350 feet down a sheer cliff on Mount Whitney and died.

The dead man, identified as David

Juve Hu, 32, Berkeley, was one of four climbers who had planned to spend Tuesday night atop the 14,944-foot mountain. But they made it to the top ahead of schedule and started their descent.

Hu, the leader of the party, slipped on snow on ice while coming down the west slope of the mountain after losing his ice axe and crampons. The others realized that he had fallen too far to survive so they camped the night at Iceberg Lake, about 2,000 feet below the top.

Honest man returns cash found on street

SPOKANE (UPI) — Two Roundup, Mont., truckers lost their briefcase containing valuable papers and $2,700 in cash along a downtown street

Wednesday. They were lucky the man who found it did the honest thing.

Allen and Everrett Reiner lost the case and the money when Allen placed the briefcase atop a car and then got in and rode off, forgetting the briefcase was on top.

Filer shooting report release before council

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News Staff Writer

FILER — The Filer City Council, meeting in closed session Wednesday night, decided to decide in public whether to release a report on an alleged police shooting.

Mayor Eldon Ryals was not available Thursday, but Councilman Robert Fort said the question of releasing information on a special investigation of the alleged shooting incident here will be on the council's agenda Tuesday at its regular monthly meeting.

Fort said at that time the council will decide whether to release a report on the investigation. He said because Wednesday's meeting was an executive session, no decision could be made.

From statements made by the mayor and council members, it is not clear if the council will release both the investigation report and the recommendations made by Twin Falls Police Chief Jim Qualls or only Qualls' recommendations. The investigation report contains Qualls' conclusions on whether any shooting actually took place in the disputed incident.

Dan Wilson, 23, of Filer, was arrested April 5 and charged with destruction of property and resisting arrest. He alleged that while officers were attempting to arrest him, he was shot in the lower left arm by Filer police officer Ron Moore.

Filer Police Chief Randy Lammers and officer Moore both denied the young man had been shot, and Lammers asked Twin Falls police to make an impartial investigation into the matter. The investigation and report were completed several weeks ago, but Filer officials have not yet seen fit to release the outcome of the investigation.

Wednesday morning, Magistrate Judge Michael Redman of Twin Falls County signed a motion dismissing charges against Wilson. Filer prosecuting attorney Terry Johnson moved for dismissal.

Earlier this week, Ryals had said an executive session would be held May 8 to discuss whether to release the investigation report.

Fort said Thursday, however, that he had not been advised officially of the May 8 meeting. He said as far as he knows, that meeting will not be held.

Fort was critical of the news coverage given the incident, saying he has not had one Filer resident ask him about the results of the investigation. He said if there is considerable interest in the incident and its investigation, it must be in Twin Falls or some other community because Filer residents do not appear concerned.

An election has been set for May 21 on the question of recalling councilman Lee Alexander. He is one of the council members calling for reduction of the Filer Police Department from four men to three men and is known as a critic of the Filer Police Department and Police Chief Lammers.

In general, members of the council have indicated they feel a recall election is unnecessary and Alexander has not committed any act worthy of being removed from his office.

American Falls Dam repayment OK nearer

WASHINGTON — Repayment of construction costs of the new American Falls Dam has moved one step closer.

Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus Thursday approved two proposed contracts which will allow the federal government to reimburse Idaho irrigators for costs incurred in constructing the replacement dam.

Under the contracts, which are approved, we can move ahead with the remaining steps that will return some $20 million to the irrigation speculators who have faced the task of financing the dam's replacement," Andrus said.

The Reclamation Safety of Dams Act of 1978 specifically authorizes Andrus to pay such costs.

Executive orders proposed contracts will facilitate federal payment of the irrigation speculators obligation and allow long-term bonds to be issued by the American Falls Reservoir District to finance the remainder of the obligation.

The remaining obligation will be repaid by Idaho Power Co., an irrigation spaceholder that chooses to forego the federal repayment, Interior Department spokesmen said.

The first American Falls Dam located in southern Idaho on the Snake River, was built in 1927. A part of the Mindokota Federal Reclamation Project, it was replaced because of a loss of strength due to an alkali aggregate reaction to the concrete spillway section of the original dam. The new dam was dedicated in 1979.

"Space" in the 1.7 million-acre-feet capacity reservoir behind the dam is met by irrigation districts or companies, the Bureau of Indian Affairs for the Fort Hall Indian Reservation and the Idaho Power Co.

Judge says shooting husband was justified

Cannell murder charges dismissed

RUPERT — Charges of second degree murder against a Rupert housewife have been dismissed.

Magistrate Judge Ronald Bruce ruled following a preliminary hearing that Deanna Cannell was justified when she shot and killed her estranged husband, Gene Cannell, April 19.

The shooting occurred at the Cannell home, 124 Second St. in Rupert about 3:45 p.m. April 19. The victim was pronounced dead at the scene with two bullet wounds in the left chest area.

During a lengthy preliminary hearing Tuesday several persons, including the defendant, testified to beatings and other abuse she had suffered at the hands of the deceased. The couple's son and daughter both testified concerning their father's alcoholism and his temper. Both said Cannell had beaten and mistreated their mother on many occasions over the years.

Mrs. Cannell said she had recently filed for divorce, the third time in her 24-year marriage, and had requested a restraining order to keep Cannell away from their home.

She said on the morning of the shooting, he had called, and she told him she would not talk to him and not to come to the house. But he arrived in the afternoon and entered through the back door. She said she backed out briefly and suddenly realized she had shot her husband with the rifle she kept close by for protection.

She told the court she slept with the gun near her bed and had kept it near the kitchen sink when in that room or on the washer in the utility room near the back door. She said she had long feared her husband planned to kill her and possibly himself, and that he had often told her they would be better off dead.

In dismissing the case, Judge Bruce stated the woman had taken every step available to her legally to protect herself. He said she had filed for divorce, sought protection through a restraining order and called police when her husband came to the house.

Judge Bruce said the law allows defense of the home and person. He said Mrs. Cannell acted in her own defense without malice, and her action was justified.

Sinclair leaving GOP post

TWIN FALLS — Orriette Sinclair, Idaho's Republican National Committee chairman for nine years, said Thursday she will resign her post at the end of her present term.

"I've thoroughly enjoyed it," Mrs. Sinclair said. "I've had a great time, but a person has to quit some time. You run out of steam. We need persons with new ideas."

The Twin Falls Republican has been one of the more active members in Idaho Republican politics. She has worked with numerous political campaigns, has helped organize projects to locate and register young voters, and has served on several national Republican Party committees. Presently she is a member of the National GOP Rules Committee.

While resigning her post, she made it clear much of that activity will continue.

"I shall remain a working Republican," Mrs. Sinclair said in a letter to members of the Idaho Republican Central Committee, "anticipating with pleasure every success of yours."

Mrs. Sinclair said she would remain in her office until the adjournment of the Republican National Convention scheduled for Detroit, Mich., this summer.

Mrs. Sinclair's resignation brought expressions of regret from Dennis Olson, Idaho GOP state chairman.

"In 1970, I awarded her the citation—as the outstanding Republican worker in Idaho, and she was formally inducted into the Idaho Republican Hall of Fame," Olson said. "She has been a worker always there from day one."

"Ori had previously advised me of her intent to not seek re-election, although I encouraged her to do so. She did promise that she would not retire from Republican politics but would continue to be active in Twin Falls County."

"Her contributions will be sorely missed. She's been a great team player and a valued adviser."

'Moly' mine's dollar impact could affect Magic Valley

TWIN FALLS — Molybdenum is hard to pronounce, so call it "moly," said Bill Satathite, assistant project manager of the Cyprus Mining Corp.'s proposed molybdenum mine near Challis.

Satathite spoke Thursday at the Twin Falls Kiwanis Club luncheon. Ken Stearns, marketing director of the Twin Falls Bank and Trust, introduced Satathite by saying molybdenum will have a big economic impact in Challis, but that impact should also be felt in the Magic Valley.

The proposed mine will employ 550 people and increase the population of Challis from about 1,000 people to 2,000, Satathite said. The mine will be located near Thompson Creek, about half way between Challis and Stanley.

It will use half again as much electric power as all of Custer County uses now. "We've been told the power will be available," Satathite said. "We haven't been told what it will cost."

Satathite said moly is used in steel alloys and also in some lubricants, it makes motor oil more slippery, he said.

"To give you an idea of the size of the equipment we're talking about using the tires on some of the equipment are 11 feet tall. They cost between $9,000 and $10,000 each," he said.

But before any mining can begin, the company needs to have an environmental impact statement approved. That could be done by the end of the summer, he said.

"We want to assure Custer County residents that we won't harm water

Rektor faces lawsuit

TWIN FALLS — An American Falls couple has filed a $175,000 lawsuit against a real estate broker Nolan Victor of Ace Realty.

The suit, filed in 5th District Court earlier this week, charges that Victor misrepresented information concerning an American Falls motel later purchased by David and Naomi Hansens.

The motel, the Hillview Motel, was purchased by the Hansens on March 30, 1979.

The Hansens charge that Victor made incorrect statements concerning the physical condition of the motel's facilities and equipment, and misrepresented the earning capacity of the motel by understating operating expenses.

The Hansens last year brought suit against the original owners of the motel, Kenneth and Patricia Hartley, in court in Power County. The case has not been resolved, but the Hartleys have won preliminary possession of the property and the court has ruled damages cannot be assessed against them.

The Hansens are asking $103,000 in actual damages, including their original down payment, subsequent payments, and lost income; $50,000 in punitive damages; $20,000 to cover their attorney's fees in the lawsuit; and attorney's fees and court costs in the suit against Victor.

Buckskin Bill, 73, is dead

SALMON (UPI) — Idaho's "Buckskin Bill" who was the subject of a National Geographic television special, a book and several magazine and newspaper articles, is dead at the age of 73.

Buckskin Bill, who was born Sylvan Ambrose Hart May 10, 1906, was found dead Tuesday by an unidentified friend in his alpine cabin overlooking the Salmon River.

He apparently died from a heart attack.

Hart lived alone in his cabin 10 miles south of Dixie on the "Five of No Return" for the next 35 years and received national recognition as one of the "last of the mountain men."

He was the subject of a book entitled "The Last of the Mountain Men," an environmentalist book on the history of Oklahoma and had a year of post-graduate study in geology and engineering. He worked in Texas oil fields until the Depression, when he moved to the Salmon River.

He left his wilderness sanctuary during World War II to work as a toolmaker for Boeing Aircraft's Wichita, Kan., plant, but returned to his Salmon River cabin after the war.

Legislature limit bill is proposed

BOISE (UPI) — A special legislative session is a good time to adopt a bill limiting all legislative sessions.

So says Idaho Commerce and Industry Association President P.K. Harwood, Harwood thinks Gov. John Evans should ask legislators to consider limiting the length of legislative sessions.

"From all indications, it appears the Legislature will be called into special session in mid-May," Harwood said. "Due to the excessive length of the recently concluded session, 82 days, it appears the special session affords an excellent opportunity for legislation to be adopted limiting the length and subject matter of the Legislature's second regular session."

Harwood said the cost of running the Legislature should motivate lawmakers to limit their sessions, and he said the excessive length of the annual sessions also precludes many citizens from serving.

Ernest M. Stumpf, 17, was suffering from internal injuries, a clinic spokesman said.

Stumpf was heading north on county road 3400 East when his motorcycle collided with a pickup truck driven by Earl James Carlisle of Kimberly, Carlisle, who swerved in an attempt to avoid Stumpf, lost control of his truck and went off the roadway into a ditch, Twin Falls Sheriff James Munn said.

Carlisle was reported in fair condition at Magic Valley Memorial Hospital.

8 face drug charges

CALDWELL (UPI) — A crackdown on alleged drug dealers and those allegedly possessing stolen property in Canyon County has resulted in the arrest of eight people.

More arrests are anticipated today, says county Sheriff George Nourse.

Nourse said the arrests, which began Sunday, follow months of undercover operations by detectives in his office. He said the allegations involve the apparent sale of marijuana, LSD, heroin and stolen property.

Growth-limiting measure means customers pay installation charge

Idaho Power wants new lines fee

BOISE (UPI) — Idaho Power Co. proposed Thursday a policy that would require customers to pay the cost of new distribution lines to serve them.

The move by IPC is another step to slow customer growth and to delay construction of high-cost generating plants.

The new line-extension policy, believed by utility officials to be the first of its kind in the country, was proposed in an application filed with the Idaho Public Utilities Commission Thursday. If approved, the plan would go into effect June 1.

"This major departure from our present policy hopefully will put a damper on steady load growth requiring new resources, since prospective customers may think twice about requesting line extensions when they face the high costs of construction Idaho Power must pay for facilities of all kinds," company President James E. Bruce said.

"Our don't want to build new plants; but they are being forced on us by steadily increasing customer demands, especially for electric space heating. Ways must be found, however new and different, to slow down load growth."

If approved by the PUC, the new policy would require customers to pay the average unit costs of materials and labor for a line extension from the end of the nearest existing distribution line. Idaho Power would continue to pay for each new customer's transformer and meter, estimated to cost $800 for each installation at present prices.

Idaho Power now pays the full cost of line extension when its anticipated revenue from a minimum electric use, agreed to by the customer, will at least equal the construction cost in seven years.

"This policy has the effect of forcing customers to use perhaps more electricity than they otherwise would in order to meet the minimum in their line extension agreements," Bruce said.

Bruce said the new proposal would encourage conservation and, at the same time, elimination of contracts calling for minimum electricity use would save Idaho Power the costs of handling the agreements. He said the proposed policy closely follows Idaho Power's applications to the PUC for approval of a two-stage conservation program to promote energy savings.

Chief features of the program are installation of insulating jackets on electric home water heaters, promotion of residential solar water heaters and interest-free loans for electric-heat home "weatherization," including caulking, ceiling and floor insulation and storm windows and doors.

Idaho Power estimates the entire conservation program, expected to cost about $16 million, could result in an annual energy saving of about 176 million kilowatt-hours.

Range quality question sparks more debate

BOISE (UPI) — Ranchers and environmentalists looked horns Thursday over whether efforts by cattlemen and government agencies were improving range quality and management.

Bill Swan, a Rogerson rancher and vice president of the National Cattlemen's Association, said management of public lands should be a cooperative effort by ranchers and government agencies.

"Speaking for myself, I have got to have an integrated plan," Swan told those at a meeting of the Sheep

Producer and Environmentalist Committee in Boise. "Private land and well as public land as got to be taken into consideration."

He said if environmental impact statements are prepared without taking into consideration the effect its going to have upon adjoining lands that's got to be the height of folly and stupidity.

Swan said during the early days, settlers picked out the most productive lands with the most water to settle upon. He said those lands now provide most of the forage for livestock as well as wildlife. He said private land provides 90 percent of the deer range during the winter months.

He said government agencies can no longer manage public lands efficiently because of energy shortages and budget cutbacks.

"We're going to have to look to the rancher as the manager of these lands," Swan said.

In order to do this, the rancher will need more land, water, habitat and wildlife management techniques and his actions monitored on a periodic basis, he said.

But Bob Krumm, a former Bureau of Land Management Boise district manager, said cattlemen are "trying to steal the cat's paws."

Krumm said ranchers could not properly manage public lands because of their lack of economic flexibility and knowledge, and their greed.

He cited several academic sources which said North America's land management policies lacked traditions and customs for managing land, and thus management was motivated only by greed.

Krumm said western ranchers wanted to avoid arousing their neighbors ire, so government agencies were forced to take over public land management.

Swan said present land-management policies had improved rangeland, although some areas have been overgrazed.

Krumm agreed with Swan's statement that 80 percent of the public rangeland had improved or stabilized, but said, "I don't think stabilization is necessarily good."

He said the Jerusalem allotment near Boise had once been grassland but forage in the area had changed and was now covered with "acres and acres of Black-eyed Susans."

"I don't think ranchers should be proud of the Jerusalem allotment," Krumm said.

"A lot of operators spend an awful lot of their own funds (for range improvement), and have been very cooperative and very progressive," Krumm said.

Buhl man charged

BOISE (UPI) — A Buhl man has been accused of transporting a stolen vehicle from Washington to Nampa in a federal district court indictment here.

Jack Vaughn Kirby is accused in the federal grand jury indictment of transporting a stolen Peterbilt truck across state lines, a charge that carries a maximum penalty of five years in prison and a $5,000 fine.

He also is charged with bringing a stolen Trailmobile trailer into Idaho from Washington, which carries a maximum penalty of a $10,000 fine and 10 years in prison.

Proceedings are scheduled for May 5.

Tight races loom in SIC track finals today

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News Sports Writer
TWIN FALLS — The Southern Idaho Conference runs its final track and field championships at Bruin Stadium today.

With that meet, plus the golf matches at Twin Falls Municipal Golf Course and the baseball windup Saturday, the conference falls into oblivion as it is now known. While some of the western Idaho schools are thinking of retaining the name, the five-team alignment will be a shell of its former self.

But as the SIC track championships pass into history, its finale could be a barnburner.

The surprise of the whole thing is that Twin Falls, which figured to be well down this year, could come out of it with the title. Not that the Bruins are favored. That honor goes to Borah. And Pocatello looms as the logical runner-up. Pushing pencil across the paper, it appears that Twin Falls and Capital will be the top two for third and fourth.

There are two things that stand out about the meet, however. The first and most important to the Bruins is that Pocatello and Borah appear capable of hurting each other in the point column. The other is the consistently strong showing the Bruins boys have made in all their major meets this year.

"They have been competing very well," says Coach Jerry Kleinkopf. "We have to have maximum efforts on all fronts plus help, but, yes, there is a possibility we could win it. If we did, it would have to be considered an upset."

The Twin Falls girls will be favored to maintain their undefeated boast with the challenge again coming from Borah.

The day will begin with preliminaries and some field finals at 1 p.m. The two-mile and remainder of the field events will start at 2:30 p.m., and the running finals begin at 5 p.m.

It's Magic Valley's single biggest sports day of year

About 1,500 individuals will compete today when the biggest single athletic day of the season sprawls across Magic Valley.

Four conferences, Southern Idaho at Twin Falls, Cross State at Burley, Magic Valley at Murtaugh and Canyon at Wendell, will crown boys and girls track and field team and individual champions.

Additionally, the Cross State Conference will crown tennis and golf champions in a one-day blitz on Burley city facilities and six members of that league will battle at Burley and Minico fields for the baseball prize.

The Southern Idaho Conference will crown its golf list at Twin Falls Municipal in the afternoon.

Twin Falls will wind up its baseball season by hosting Pocatello at 1 p.m., making the Bruins' first appearance at the all-new Frontier Field park.

College of Southern Idaho punctuates the day with a single game, starting at 4 p.m., against Snow College, also at Frontier Field.

"If Libert runs like he did last week, they can't beat him," says sprint coach Duane Stands. "But, if Libert runs like he did two weeks ago, they can beat him."

But perhaps Twin Falls' biggest hopes of overtaking Borah are Orl and Newman of Pocatello, who have the potential to knock the Lions off one-two finishes in the mile and two mile.

Somewhere along the line, however, Pocatello has to have a setback or the Indians just might help themselves into the title.

One thing worth watching in the girls division will be Bruin Laurie Kulken in the discus. Kulken, who became Idaho's all-time best at 141-6 two weeks ago, had a brilliant workout Monday. She made 10 throws and the shortest was 144 feet. The two longest got 153-2 and 150-11.

"It is not a surprise," says weight coach Larry Culver. "She always had that capability. All of her record throws this year have heeled over and fallen short. It was just a matter of leveling it out and getting the ball. All her throws today (Monday) sailed and you knew 150 feet was within reach when that happened."

Meanwhile, Kulken similarly is improving her shotput distance. "We're working on a couple of other points," Culver said.

Kulken said the day was "terrific, it felt great."

Kulken's position as a double winner isn't jeopardized. Twin Falls' chances for the team title might be unless the Bruins can get some help in the hurdles. Borah's girls have been feasting off points in those two events.

There are key matchups in the sprints: In the 100, Carrie Jones and Ginger Proctor will be going against defending state champion Mary Brooks of Boise. In the 220, Proctor and Dina Libert will battle Heidi Ward.

The quarter-mile is a rubber match between Libert and defending state champion Ward. Libert won the first in a school record and then set another school record in finishing second last week.

In the distances it is Twin Falls against the world. But the world is getting closer. Senior Cindy Crow is still mending from the overwork that sapped her a month ago. She is getting stronger. Sophomore Julie Yergensen continues to thrive on the increasingly harder workouts and could well be the two-mile favorite.

In the mile, the Bruin lassies run into Becky Bjorn of Meridian and she is the pick of a couple of wins this far. Tammy Crow knows where her competition is in the half because she chased it across the finish line last week.

Although Twin Falls didn't show real well in the relays last week, Coach Kleinkopf noted senior veteran Kathy Deleza was ill and unable to compete.

None of the teams is at full strength although nearly so. The top eight in all flat races and hurdles from both divisions advance to the Friday finals and/or preliminaries. All relays will run, the first heat being the top four from each side in last week's qualifying.

Last week's western SIC finals prompted the idea that the Bruin boys could be in the title running. They were within nine points of the Lions at the end.

Twin Falls can help itself greatly in the pole vault where last week Mitch Mingo and Dave Routh felt to fourth and fifth at subpar heights. Neither much likes the Boise pit. This time they have the advantage of the home pit and any displacement there would only benefit Twin Falls.

Casey Lewis of Capital, a JS-C performer in indoor but sidelined all spring with a back problem, will be in the vault and if he is healthy, he has to be considered the favorite. But Mingo, on basis of heights, cleared this spring, has to be the second seed and Routh has been 13-6 in the home pit and that could be enough to displace two Borah vaulters.

Another key for Twin Falls will be senior Mark Libert. "I don't know where we would be without him this year. He's provided a lot of leadership," says Coach Kleinkopf.

Borah's Randy Holmes is the odds-on favorite to win all three sprints, making it essential that Libert turn back the assault of two solid Pocatello sprinters plus another from Meridian. Coach Jerry Kleinkopf also is leaving room on the slate for another appearance in the Boise Relays.

It is essential to Twin Falls that it maintain as close as possible competitive relations with the west side of the current SIC, because traditionally that's where the strength lies.

Periodically, one of the eastern schools — like Pocatello — this time around — shows up with a solid contingent. But without running against the west side and getting some comparative ideas, the Bruins will be at a distinct disadvantage in making those late-season changes that are designed to garner state finals points.

A little word on former CSI all-American Jerry Williams.

Ex-CSI Coach Mike Mitchell in Twin Falls over the weekend, said reported that Williams had left the University of Colorado. Jerry, you'll recall, ran into some first-semester grade problems and wasn't eligible to participate in the second semester.

When Williams visited Twin Falls during spring break, he was adamant that he would be going to summer school to catch up on his grades and play for the Buffaloes next fall.

Mitchell said he's not aware if anything particular set Williams off this time, but that the youngster had left school and said he was going back to Chicago.

show up. There apparently are commitments from Borah, Capital, Meridian and Nampan from the west. Boise is in a "maybe" holding pattern last time heard from.

The other side will probably be the two Pocatello schools and Minico — at least this time.

The Twin Falls Invitational fills a yawning gap in the A-1 track schedule as it probably will be the only time outside of state that the major powers will collide. It definitely will be the only time they'll meet on a full-team basis because by state the eliminations of qualifying in district already have been accomplished.

Several years ago in the late 1960s as it is recalled, for some reason the SIC got a burr under its saddle and did away with all competition on a conference level outside of football and basketball.

The same weekend was converted into a Twin Falls Invitational and it was the official unofficial SIC finals for three years. Maybe four. When the conference finally got its thinking back on track, the official name was restored and, voila, the coaches immediately voted to allow all records established during the moratorium.

The Twin Falls track schedule for next year will not be totally unlike that of the past few years. The exception will be that we'll not see the Borah-Capital-Bruin triangular, which was always a good meet. Most of Twin Falls' competition will come from within the new Gem State league.

The Bruins will have a triangular, it appears, with Boise and Meridian. Coach Jerry Kleinkopf also is leaving room on the slate for another appearance in the Boise Relays.

Three leagues to crown six champs today

MAGIC VALLEY — There are some strong possibilities but few real cinches for team honors in three Magic Valley conference track and field championships today.

The finals form the final time the teams go out in full force prior to the district qualifying meets slated for Twin Falls' Bruin Stadium Wednesday through Saturday by all three prep classifications.

The Cross State Conference appears to have Caldwell holding a meager edge over Jerome for the boys title with the girls virtually untested. A Murtaugh, Castleford seems to be the team to beat among the boys and it's about anyone's guess in the girls. The A-3 squads will be lining up at Wendell with Gooding, Declo and Valley being the best chances to succeed among the boys while Glenns Ferry appears to hold the girls inside position.

It should be a good showdown between Jerome and Caldwell for the Cross State Conference boys title in Burley.

Caldwell administered a pretty good whipping to the Tigers a week ago in the Cougar Invitational. But helping Caldwell was the presence of Ontario and Emmett. Those two schools fit into some of Jerome's usual power events and they won't be on hand Friday.

Coach John Blatter believes the Tigers have a chance to win it, noting a couple of subpar performances hit his crew the last time around. But, he acknowledges, if Jerome can win it, it doesn't have a lot of margin for error.

The Jerome girls, however, apparently do have a wide margin to play with, especially now that Karen Sobotka has returned to the sprinets to reign over a freshman corps that did a good job in Sobotka's injury-forged absence.

The Jerome girls still have the strength and depth in the other events to have won the title Friday but Sobotka just adds that much insurance.

On the southside, Castleford's boys, having perhaps the best year in the last 25 at that school overall, appear to have the depth to win the Magic Valley Conference title at Murtaugh. Bill Cothorn will present problems for the other schools in all the jumping events and the Wolves will have more bodies at Murtaugh than any other side.

Among the girls the picture isn't nearly as clear. It's a toss-up among a couple of teams, the coaches feel.

When you start discussing the Canyon Conference, about the only surety among the boys is that Gooding's John Traugher is among the best two or three sprinters in the state regardless of classification.

He leads a sprint crew that appears untouchable to the rest of the league, meaning Gooding will build up points in the short sprints and sprint relays. Then it becomes a matter of whether the Senators have enough in the other events to hold off a comeback.

John Traugher believes the possibility of the title is there but he sees the advantage as razor thin.

It is an odd year in the Canyon Conference because for the first time that league is basically mediocre — on a comparative basis. Most years, at least half of the best performances by event in the state come from this alignment. Not this year.

Bruins finish baseball season

By IRWIN CURTIN

TWIN FALLS — How important is today's Twin Falls High School baseball game against Pocatello?

"I'd say it's the moment of truth for us as far as the season's concerned," said Bruins' Coach Ron Watson Thursday of the 1 p.m. contest at Frontier Park that precedes a 4 p.m. (approximately) game between the College of Southern Idaho and Snow College.

It's the moment of truth for the Bruins, 11-1, because with a victory today they'll end their regular season with a winning record.

And with a bit of momentum to carry into next week's district tournament against Minico and Burley. Matchups in the tournament, which opens Tuesday, will be dependent on the other athletic directors and coaches from the three schools meet in Twin Falls.

It took six weeks but the Bruins finally reached the 500 level Wednesday, with 6-4 and 5-1 victories at Capital.

"They've got something to be proud of, playing really well on the road," Watson said of his team's performance against the Boise school. "Capital was in the same situation as us, trying to get to 500."

"No, I don't think there'll be any problem getting them up for Pocatello. They started getting up for that game right after the Capital victory."

Watson said he plans to start senior southpaw Adam Blake today, but will not hesitate to bring in Todd Wigginton, Brook Brodeen or Nick Benavente if Blake should falter. Wigginton and Brodeen both were recently called up from the Bruins' sophomore team and Benavente is a junior.

Susan Engelhart will represent Twin Falls in the long jump and both hurdles in the SIC finals today

Larry Hovey

TWIN FALLS — In reality it will be a funeral Friday afternoon at Bruin Stadium.

But what a wake.

It will be the last time the prestigious Southern Idaho Conference conducts a major championship spectacle, the track battle, usually more fiercely fought than state, along with the other sports falling prey to the Boise area dominance in football.

Perhaps only in name only, however.

Ever before the funeral, talk of a resurrection as early as 1981 is in full bud. In fact, it seems that the Twin Falls Invitational will take the place of the SIC finale — it did once before when the league did away with track championship sanction for three years.

The new Gem State alignment already apparently has agreed to move the finals to a previous week, leaving the traditional "conference" weekend for a get-together of the erstwhile SIC members.

It is an insight into the quality, loyalty and desire to compete of the SIC track coaches. Of course, that comes as little surprise. Most of the problems that led to the death of the SIC came on an pecking order somewhat higher than the coaching level.

"We are really pleased," said Twin Falls Coach Duane Stands. "It could be every bit as big a meet as the SIC track meet."

Currently it isn't known if all the former SIC teams will show up. There apparently are commitments from Borah, Capital, Meridian and Nampan from the west. Boise is in a "maybe" holding pattern last time heard from.

The other side will probably be the two Pocatello schools and Minico — at least this time.

The Twin Falls Invitational fills a yawning gap in the A-1 track schedule as it probably will be the only time outside of state that the major powers will collide. It definitely will be the only time they'll meet on a full-team basis because by state the eliminations of qualifying in district already have been accomplished.

Several years ago in the late 1960s as it is recalled, for some reason the SIC got a burr under its saddle and did away with all competition on a conference level outside of football and basketball.

Saturday's Kentucky Derby has field of 13

LOUISVILLE (UPI) — He is the youngest colt in the Derby by seven days, but to hear trainer Ron McAnally talk, Super Moment is growing a fast.

The colt, born on May 10, was one of four California horses entered Thursday in the field of 13 for Saturday's $200,000 Kentucky Derby. And while most of the media attention to the West Coast contingent has gone to Jaklin Klugman and his 2-year-old owner Jack Klugman, Super Moment quietly has been gaining the support of a number of handicappers and horsemen.

In a field with no true speed and concern over the two favorites' ability to go 1 1/4 miles, Super Moment's one-run style has racecasters busily examining his past performance and hoping the odds on the colt will remain high.

McAnally, one of the most respected horsemen on the West Coast, is confident his horse is maturing quickly enough to pose a real threat to favored Rockhill Native in the Derby.

Of his victory in the Blue Grass, Rockhill Native was established as the early 8-5 favorite with Wood Memorial winner Plugged Nickle the second choice at 2-1. Colt third choice was Rumbo — another California colt who was second in the Santa Anita and Hollywood Derbies — and Jaklin Klugman.

Genuine Risk, the only filly in the field and the first entered in the Derby in 21 years, was the 10-1 fourth choice while Gold Stage and Super Moment were way back at 15-1. Bold N'Rolling, the final West Coast entrant, was 20-1 while Degenerate John, Withholding, Execution's Reason, Rocky Wain and Hazard Duke were all 30-1.

One of the reasons California horses have never received much consideration in the Kentucky Derby is their overall inability to handle the different track surfaces this side of the Rocky Mountains. However, this year, with his victory in last Saturday's Stepping Stone, Jaklin Klugman has already proved he can handle the strip at Churchill Downs and on Thursday, Super Moment demonstrated the same when he breezed a half-mile in a steady 49.25.

Even more impressive was Super Moment's furious charge in the Blue Grass, when at 40-1 he blew past horses in the stretch and finished four lengths behind Rockhill Native on his own turf at Keeneland.

"Our horse hasn't been out in a month," said McAnally, "but other horses running all-out at the end. He shouldn't have been tired."

"Here at Churchill, I think Super Moment will have the advantage in the stretch. His sire, Big Spruce, came from behind and I've been trying to teach this horse the same pattern, and so far it's been working."

Super Moment, a nice-looking bay colt, did not impress as a 2-year-old (finishing second and fifth in his two starts. But this year he seems to be improving and maturing, although somewhat erratically, like any teenager.

After finishing second in the San Vicente, he won a division of the Santa Catalina Stakes, then was a dismal fifth in the San Felipe Stakes. In the 1 1/4-mile Santa Anita Derby on March 30, however, Super Moment finished fourth behind Codex, and seemed to be gaining on the leaders.

"It seemed to be he was the only horse running at the end," said McAnally. "If the Santa Anita Derby and the Blue Grass had been another 1-8th mile longer, I feel he would have won both."

McAnally feels the main competition for his colt will come from Rockhill Native — if he had to single out one colt.

"The other horses? Well, it's my opinion that Plugged Nickle drifts out because he doesn't want to go the extra

1-8th mile," he said. "There's a little doubt in my mind about Rumbo because they waited until the last minute to bring him here."

"Bold N'Rolling is a nice horse but we beat him twice and we've never run against Jaklin Klugman. I don't know about his ability to go the distance. And the filly — off her performance in the Wood, she deserves a crack."

McAnally was not at all disturbed by his Thursday draw, when Super Moment drew the No. 3 post with Don Pierce listed as the rider.

"With that long stretch, it doesn't make any difference," he said.

The complete field for the Derby, which will be telecast by ABC beginning at 5 p.m. EDT with time 5:38 p.m. — Bold N'Rolling (Patrick-Venezuela), Jaklin Klugman (Darel McArgue), Super Moment (Don Wurman), Degenerate John (Ruben Hernandez), Tonka (John Holladay), Rockhill Native (John Oldham), Gold Stage (C. J. Cardero Jr.), Hazard Duke (Don Brumfield), Rumbo (Luffit Pincay Jr.), Genuine Risk (Jaclito Vasquez), Plugged Nickle (Buck Thornburg), Withholding (Mike Morgan) and Execution's Reason (Handy Romero).

NBA playoffs

Sixers figured on playing Lakers all week

CHESTER, Pa. (UPI) — As far as Billy Cunningham was concerned, the Los Angeles Lakers were going to be the NBA Western Conference champions after they got by the Seattle SuperSonics in Game 4 of their playoff series.

When Cunningham called the Philadelphia 76ers together for practice Tuesday, two days after they defeated the Boston Celtics to win the Eastern Conference title, the session was conducted with the Lakers in mind.

"I started planning on Los Angeles from the time of our first practice on Tuesday," Cunningham admitted Thursday. "You could see that, number one, they were very effective with their transition game. Number two was (Kareem Abdul-) Jabbar. Or maybe it was the other way around."

The Sixers fly to Los Angeles Friday to continue preparations for Sunday's series opener against the Lakers. They earned their second berth in the finals in the last four years last Sunday with a 100-94 win over the Celtics.

Of his own team, Cunningham said he was confident the Sixers' coach was right. Although the Lakers didn't clinch their series until Wednesday night's 112-105 victory, Thursday's practice at Widener University was Philadelphia's second in preparation for them.

of an all-around team than that one, which relied on offense."

"The team's game is playing better as a unit," added Caldwell Jones, who was the starting center in 1977 but opens the game at strong forward now. "We have five guys who are helping each other out all the time, and the defense is better."

The Sixers lost to Portland in six games in 1977 under Gene Shue. Cunningham, who replaced the fired Shue six games into the 1977-78 season, didn't want to get into comparisons.

He did say, though, that the matchup between the teams will be the second and third regular season records in the league would be a classic one.

"It's going to be a heckuva series between two teams who want it badly," he said. "Everybody is ready and looking forward to it. The key to winning will be for one team to stop the other's transition game."

"I don't think defense will be the big thing in the series. It will be the loose balls, the charging fouls, the little things. Neither team has utilized the three-point goal that much, and people thought that would be a factor in the playoffs."

Another big factor will be whether the Sixers can hold in Abdul-Jabbar, who poured in 38 points in the series clincher over Seattle.

Darryl Dawkins, who was dominant inside in Philadelphia's series-clinching win over Atlanta and Boston, will have the primary responsibility for keeping Abdul-Jabbar away from the hoop.

"I'll just play my same game and bump and bang with him," Dawkins said. "I'll try to keep him out of the lane. When he stops him, you can just slow him down." "I can't get too physical because I have to keep from getting in foul trouble."

The Mavericks

Dallas officially joins NBA

DALLAS (UPI) — The NBA formally awarded the 23rd franchise to a Dallas group headed by Donald J. Carter Thursday and the new team immediately announced it would call itself the Mavericks.

Carter paid $10 million to bring the expansion team to Dallas, but he is expected to sell almost half of the club to various interests in the city.

Dallas was granted the franchise last February, but only after terms of the contract were altered by the league. Those alterations included the demand of a quick down payment, allowed each NBA team to freeze eight instead of seven players in the expansion draft and awarded the new team the 11th pick in this year's draft instead of the No. 1 choice it had sought.

"It's been a long, tortuous road," said NBA Commissioner Larry O'Brien at Thursday's ceremonies. "The admission of the Mavericks to the NBA represents a significant move for us as we prepare for our 35th season."

Dallas' chances for an NBA team were dramatically enhanced with the construction of Reunion Arena, an 18,000-seat facility that opened this week.

"I can remember coming here a year ago and putting on a hard hat and walking down in a big hole in the ground," O'Brien said. "The arena would be ready in time for the 1980-81 season. And when I got back on the airplane and flew home to New York I was thinking to myself that they would never be ready. But they are."

"The arena is perfect in every way — and this franchise has been put together in the right way. We are happy to be in Dallas. This is one of the finest sports cities in the country."

The Dallas Cowboys, for instance, are recognized in and out of the world of sports as a quality organization. I'm confident the fans will be supportive. And I'm confident we will give you exciting basketball."

Norm Sonju, former general manager of the NBA's Buffalo franchise who was hired by Carter to put together the Dallas team, said "Mavericks" was chosen as a nickname so the club would have a western identity.

Sonju also said he was in no rush to hire a coach for the club, indicating he and player personnel director Rick Sund were prepared to conduct the team's first draft themselves.

West credits owner for LA's resurgence

CHARLESTON, W. Va. (UPI) — Basketball great Jerry West credits the resurgence of the Los Angeles Lakers largely to new owner Jerry Buss.

The former Lakers guard made the observation while visiting his family in West Virginia after being inducted into the Naamath Hall of Fame in Springfield, Mass. on Monday.

"West will be inducted into the West Virginia Sports Hall of Fame in Morgantown Sunday — the same day the Lakers begin the NBA championship series in Los Angeles against the Philadelphia 76ers."

"He's really tremendous to work for," West said of Buss. "He wants to have the best team and he's willing to do things. Some owners are not willing."

West and former Lakers owner Jack Kent Cooke were embroiled in a legal battle over his contract and salary after West's return from the game. However, the dispute was settled and West was named coach of the Lakers.

Since giving up the coaching job, West has worked in the Lakers' front office, helping search for college talent.

"We've improved quite a bit from a team that could score but couldn't rebound or play defense," West said. "And that's partly because we have an owner who really knows basketball."

The improved team play has made Kareem Abdul-Jabbar more effective, West said.

"Kareem is the best player today because he has the right people to help him," West said. "When he has the players to do the physical things, it gives him the latitude to do other things."

"And the addition of (Magic) Johnson has helped in two areas — rebounding and ball-handling. Usually, it takes two players to accomplish that."

The former West Virginia Wildcat said it's been a relief not coaching — and he has no plans to re-enter coaching.

"I have no plans to get back into coaching at this point in my life," West said. "It's taken me a whole year to get calmed down from three years of coaching."

Four pro players can join elite list

NEW YORK (UPI) — Four players this year have a chance to join a select group of NBA players who played for two different championship teams.

The four are Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and Philadelphia 76ers meet Sunday in the first game of the championship and the four players eligible for the distinction are Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and Jamaal Wilkes of Los Angeles and Henry Bibby and Lionel Hollins of Philadelphia.

Abdul-Jabbar won with Milwaukee in 1971-72, Wilkes with Golden State in 1974-75 during the Rookie of the Year season. Bibby with New York in 1972-73 and Hollins with Portland in 1976-77.

Broken finger sidelines Staub

ARLINGTON, Texas (UPI) — Texas Rangers designated hitter Rusty Staub, the American League's second leading hitter, suffered a fractured finger and will miss about 10 days, the team announced Thursday.

Staub, who was hitting .412 with nine RBI and two home runs, joined the little ring fingers of his left hand Wednesday while diving into second base in Texas' loss to Detroit. X-rays revealed he suffered a chip fracture of the ring finger.

Jockey bribing rumor premature

NEW YORK (UPI) — State racing officials Thursday labeled as "pure speculation" charges that nine jockeys were involved in a major scandal to fix thoroughbred races in 1974 and 1975.

A spokesman for the New York Racing Association, which operates tracks in the state, said the charges, "At this point, there is no particular case. It's pure speculation. The policy of the association is that when indictments are handed up, those indicted will not be allowed to ride."

The spokesman's comment followed a report in the New York Post that nine jockeys took bribes from alleged race fixer Con Errico to "pull" (hold back) horses in nine races at the Aqueduct and Saratoga racetracks.

Rockets retain Coach Harris

HOUSTON (UPI) — Denny Harris was given a three-year contract Thursday as head coach of the Houston Rockets by owner George Mauer.

As a first-year head coach Harris guided the Rockets to a 41-41 record this season and into the second round of the NBA playoffs. His finish was considered a disappointment to Mauer, a first-year owner, even though it was the third best in team history. The Rockets also attracted record attendance.

BSU winds up spring drills

BOISE (UPI) — Boise State University's final week of spring football season concludes Saturday with the 10th annual alumni football game scheduled to begin at 7:30 p.m. at Bronco Stadium.

The game will feature the 1980 Bronco varsity team against a team of former BSU varsity players, including several award-winning players from Big Sky Conference championship teams from 1973-1975, 1977.

"We are looking forward to playing in a game-like situation," said BSU head football coach Jim Crisler. "We plan to keep things pretty basic both offensively and defensively."

Kuhn fines Mets $5,000

NEW YORK (UPI) — The New York Mets have been fined $5,000 by Commissioner Bowie Kuhn for "conduct detrimental to baseball" for comments made by the head of their advertising agency.

The comments, made by agency Delia DeLima, were critical of the New York Yankees in general, criticized the area around Yankee Stadium as unsafe compared to the neighborhood in which Shea Stadium is situated and took pot shots at Reggie Jackson and Ducky Dent.

Houston Open Morgan assumes lead before downpour hits

HOUSTON (UPI)—Golfing opened with a bang as Billy Morgan scrambled out of bunkers Thursday on a one-stroke lead over four golfers before torrential rain cut short the play of half the field in the first round of the $50,000 Houston Open.

Local favorite John Mahaffey, Jay Haas, David Edwards and Skip Dunaway shot 66. Several others finished two shots behind the leader as warm, windless weather gave the early starters excellent playing conditions.

Only a handful of the 78 afternoon starters completed their first round. They were chased off the course for three hours by driving rain and lightning.

Lou Graham was 5-under par through 15 holes, Curtis Strang was 5-under through 13 holes, as play was suspended at 7:47 p.m.

Two shots behind Morgan after 18 holes were Victor Regalado, Danny Edwards, Sammy Rachels, Rex Caldwell, Jack Newton Jr., Jim Nelford and Greg Powers.

The non-finishers were scheduled to resume the first round at 7 a.m. Friday, an hour before the first regularly scheduled tee-time.

Mahaffey, who lives in Houston, said the course was in the best condition he had ever seen it and the weather was "almost ideal" for the early starters.

Forty-four of the 78 finishers shot sub-par rounds.

Morgan, sand-wedged to within one foot of the No. 11 cup on the second hole, starting him on his finest round this year—a round that included seven birdies and one bogey.

Morgan sank that one-foot putt and then later in his round blasted out of hazards three more times to give himself easy one-putt greens.

"I've been playing pretty good since the Tournament Players' Championship," said Morgan, 33, of Wewoka, Okla. "My ball hitting ability coming into here has been pretty good."

Morgan has played near the top of the field ever since the Houston Open was moved to the pine-tree-lined Woodlands in 1975. He missed by two strokes winning in 1975 and in the three other years he played there he has finished 10th, 34th and 22nd.

"I just like this golf course," he said.

Shue leaves NBA Clippers to seek new opportunities

SAN DIEGO (UPI)—Gene Shue, the coach of the San Diego Clippers whose squad played almost the entire season "without" star center Bill Walton, will not return next season, the president of the NBA franchise announced Thursday.

In a joint announcement, both Clippers President Irv Levin and Shue said the decision was reached by mutual agreement.

No replacement was named.

Shue, a 14-year NBA coaching veteran, was the first coach in the Clippers' 2-year history. He previously coached at Baltimore and Philadelphia following a 10-year career as a player.

"Gene and I sat down over a period of time and discussed his future in an amicable manner," Levin said. "Gene indicated he wanted to explore more professionally and financially rewarding, and I agreed to honor his decision."

Levin said that even though Shue's contract runs until July 1, "I have given him permission, effective immediately, to commence negotiating for future opportunities."

Shue has agreed to stay with the Clippers to assist in the transition of the coaching change, Levin said.

"We appreciate Gene's efforts with the Clippers these past two seasons and wish him well in his future endeavors," Levin said.

In the Clippers' first two seasons, Shue guided the club to records of 43-39 and 35-47, barely missing the playoffs of the Pacific Division both seasons. This season the Clippers were expected to make a stronger showing with the arrival of Walton. But the 6-foot-11 center appeared just briefly before being sidelined again because of a stress fracture in his foot.

"I feel it is in my best interests at this time to pursue other opportunities in the coaching profession," Shue said. "I have enjoyed working with Irv Levin and the Clippers and appreciate the support of our fans."

Shue, who has a lifetime coaching record of 526-520, recorded his 500th NBA coaching victory this season to become the fifth coach in history to reach that milestone.

He was named the NBA's Coach of the Year in 1968-69 and twice coached teams into the NBA championship series, with Baltimore in 1970-71 and with Philadelphia in 1976-77.

Drafting Sims doesn't mean he'll sign

BY RICHARD L. SHOOK
UPI Sports Writer

DETROIT (UPI)—Everyone seems to think that just because Billy Sims has been drafted by the Detroit Lions it is only a matter of brief time until he is signed.

But not Billy Sims.

Billy Sims wants to play football for the Detroit Lions. The Detroit-Lions want Billy-Sims to play football for the Detroit Lions. They fans want Billy Sims to do his spectacular running for the Detroit Lions. The Lions want Sims to do his spectacular running for the Detroit Lions.

Thomas, the man charged with negotiating a contract with the 1978 Heisman Trophy winner from Oklahoma.

Even Jerry Argovitz, the young, retired dentist who is taking his first fling at finding fortunes for footballers, would like to see his primary client in the Honolulu Blue and Silver of the Detroit Lions.

But that doesn't mean it's going to come about. Foster in Buffalo can tell you that. They thought they had Tom Cousinsek as one of their starting linebackers last season when the Bills made him the first player to go in the 1979 draft.

But equating the drafting of Cousinsek to his signing was like mistaking New Hampshire for Vermont. Now, the Detroit Lions are in danger of thinking Arizona is New Mexico.

"They don't think they can lose Sims. Which only enhances their chances."

Owner William Clay Ford of the Lions, so far, refuses to get involved. "I could, after all, set a precedence and Ford hardly has time to negotiate with every one of his players."

That brings it down to a duel, if you will, between Argovitz and Thomas.

"The problem to date is that Argovitz is new to the negotiating game and thus is not playing under the same rules Thomas is going by."

"My aim is to get a contract that will stand examination — this year, next year and for future Number one's (draft choices)," Thomas said.

"His job," Thomas said — of his professional adversary, "is to get the best possible contract for Sims that he can."

The Lions have a reputation for cheapness that is either well-deserved or the product of a highly critical local media, depending on your point of view.

Thomas maintains, without divulging details so they can be examined, Detroit's offer to Sims is the best ever made a rookie coming out of college. Nearly a million dollar package.

"It's done," Thomas said of the negotiations, "with the intent of signing a guy for the lowest buck possible. What we want is a contract that will stand examination. We want a contract in line with what other number one's have been paid in the past."

Argovitz, though, wants to set a new standard. He argues rightly the downtrodden Lions are in a special situation — and his client, Sims, is a special player with motives uniquely suited to the situation.

He also argues what all those other No. 1 picks signed for is irrelevant, contending they signed too cheaply.

He also argues what all those other No. 1 picks signed for is irrelevant, contending they signed too cheaply.

"There is only one Billy Sims," Argovitz said in his brief flight in Detroit the day the Lions drafted the Hooks, Texas, native. "Here he is."

"The difference is dollars," Argovitz said. "They put one value on Sims and we put another."

People in the Detroit area have figured something out provincially that Sims has no real alternative to playing football in the NFL, for the Detroit Lions.

Lopez-Melton leads women's international

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (UPI)—Defending champion Nancy Lopez Melton sank a birdie on the final hole Thursday to grab the first-round lead in the $100,000 LPGA Women's International, with a 4-under-par 68.

Lopez, who said she has been fighting an attitude problem this year, was one shot ahead of Pam Higgins after 18 holes. Six players were tied for third or under par. Lopez sank more were knotted at 1-under 71.

Lopez sank a 20-foot putt on the par-4 18th hole after landing on the green pin high with a 7-iron. The tournament is being played on the 6,290-yard Devil's Elbow South Course at Moss Creek Plantation.

"I've had to talk to myself a lot because a feel mentally I have not been that strong," she said. "I've been feeling very frustrated. I've got to get over that or I'm not going to win. I felt good today."

Lopez, the holder of 13 tournament championships, including the Women's Kemper earlier this year, said she has had "really bad temper" this year. "I was getting down on myself more than I used to."

Higgins, recovering from tendinitis in both arms, held the early lead until the Lopez threesome, the last on the course, finished.

Higgins, 34, who had a 3-under par 69, recorded five birdies. She sank a 35-foot birdie putt on the par-4 18th.

Higgins, who lives in Palm Springs, Calif., credited her caddy, retired local dentist Buzz Thompson. Thompson fired a 68 on the course earlier in the week. Higgins said her caddy explained the grain in the last five or six greens, enabling her to gauge the speed of her putts.

"My concentration is still not solid enough," she said. "I usually don't think ahead. Things were just going my way."

Tied for third in the clubhouse at 2-under 70 were Hollis Stacy, witness Alice Ritzman, Marlene Hagge, Joyce Kazmerski; Pat Bradley, and Silvia Bertalacci.

Hagge, who takes vitamins and munches on homemade oatmeal cookies and dried fruit during her rounds, said she was pleased with her play because she was not driving well on a course that demands accuracy.

Berman to have final say on wiring pros for sound

HOUSTON (UPI)—PGA Commissioner DeanePGA said Thursday he would make a decision next week on whether to allow players to wear microphones during play in tournaments.

"Ultimately the decision will be made by me," said Berman. "I will receive input from various sources."

At this year's Hootch Classic, tour regular Tom Kite agreed to wear a microphone so that CBS-TV could pick up comments during his play.

While standing on the tee of a par-3 hole, Kite said that John Schroeder, playing in front of his previous show, beamed for slow play. Kite's comments went nationwide.

During the Tournament of Champions three weeks later, Tom Watson's helpful hints given to Leo Trevino during the final round were picked up by a microphone stationed near one of the tee boxes.

A viewer called PGA officials to point out that Watson had broken the rules by giving advice on the course and Watson eventually was assessed a two-stroke penalty.

Watson, however, had enough of a battle to withstand that shock and won the tournament, anyway.

Berman, a farmer, later was asked if he had ever received a tip during his playing days.

"I don't recall that having occurred," said Berman during a news conference at the Houston Open.

"But a decision will be made on the milking next week. It has been interesting, obviously controversial. I think we have learned a great deal."

Berman also said the PGA is in the "final stages of discussions" concerning two additional senior tournaments.

The PGA has already announced the formation of two senior events.

"By next year we may have four to six senior tournaments," Berman said. "The seniors are anxious to play, but they're in a half dozen tournaments."

Hitchcock 1900 - 1980

BY ROGER EBERT
©Chicago Sun-Times

So now will never know what demons and angels haunted Alfred Hitchcock. The man who died on Tuesday created one of the most remarkable accomplishments of any filmmaker: He dwelled on his obsessions in 53 motion pictures without ever once finding it necessary to tell us what he thought of them. In a century when artists thought it necessary to analyze their most intimate dreams, fears and desires, Hitchcock projected his fantasies onto the screen and then went home to spend quiet evenings with his family.

Hitchcock's films continue to inhabit our imaginations and haunt our memories. He was a master of the great simple image, and once you had seen Cary Grant being chased by the croqueting plane in "North by Northwest," or watched the murderer watching a game of tennis in "Strangers on a Train," or been shocked by the shower scene in "Psycho," you were not likely to forget them.

But there was another level on which Hitchcock's films were unforgettable: The level of his fears and obsessions. Of his fears we know something. Of his obsessions we can only speculate.

His most primal fear was of finding himself accused of a crime and unable to defend himself. That was a fear from childhood. The story has been told countless times: Young Alfred, the son of a London greengrocer, was sent to the police station with a note from his father. A policeman read the note and locked the little boy in a cell, saying, "This is what we do to naughty boys."

By the time his father retrieved him, Hitchcock had developed such a fear of policemen that even 50 years later he refused to drive a car for fear of being stopped by the police. Hitchcock would, however, make one exception: He would drive his daughter, Patricia, to church — because surely God would not allow me to be interrupted on such an errand." The logic was the logic of dreams, and the best Hitchcock films used images as sharp, clear and fantastic as dream images.

His fear of authority led to a pattern in his plots: A great many of his films were about an innocent man wrongly accused of a crime. He handled the theme seriously ("Frenzy"), comically ("North by Northwest"), and sometimes with great subtlety (as in "Notorious," where Ingrid Bergman almost loses her life because an authority figure, Cary Grant, wrongly concludes she is immoral).

Hitchcock's obsession with certain images is a hallmark of his films, but he would never talk openly about his work on that level, and was never tempted to attempt amateur psychoanalysis on himself. He can be seen at his most nimble in "Hitchcock-Truffaut," the extraordinary book-length interview he submitted to with the French director François Truffaut in 1967. Again and again, Truffaut draws parallels, finds similarities, suggests patterns in Hitchcock's work. And again and again, Hitchcock tap-dances away from Truffaut's insights: "A murderer that Truffaut finds philosophically meaningful is cheerfully described by Hitchcock as "amusing."

One of the most intriguing images in Hitchcock is that of the tall, cool, blonde woman. He used her in many different contexts, and cast her in many different actresses (Eva Marie Saint, Grace Kelly, Janet Leigh, Tippi Hedren). The most unsettling things were likely to happen to his movie blondes; he seemed to delight in placing them in bizarre circumstances. Did he simply dislike blondes? He would never say. In "Hitch," John Russell Taylor's authorized 1979 biography, Taylor speculates that there must be a prototype blonde hidden away somewhere in Hitchcock's past. Hitch never said, and we will never know.

He said, indeed, about as little as it was possible to say about his movies, preferring to let them speak for themselves. He claimed at times to be essentially a technician (his famous goal was to "play the audience like a piano"). His movies rarely had obvious morals or messages — or if they did, they boiled down to simplistic platitudes, broadly stated patriotism, or a belief that justice would usually (but not always) be done. Dozens of books have been written attempting to extract a philosophy from Hitchcock's large body of work, but they are all speculation; Hitchcock claimed merely to enjoy dissecting peculiarities of human nature.

If he refused to be drawn into discussions about his philosophy, he nevertheless delighted in the fame he enjoyed. He was a character invented by himself, and the evidence suggests that his persona was primarily a work of fiction. The "public Hitchcock" was droll and petulant, smacking his lips over macabre details during the delightful introductions to his TV series. He loved to pose for bizarre photographs; the Paris edition of Vogue once ran a cover photo of Hitchcock with a raven perched on his cigar, and inside there was a shot of Hitchcock looking into his refrigerator, which contained a wax effigy of his head.

That rotund, macabre fellow was a suitable person for the director of Hitchcock's pictures, which is perhaps why Hitchcock created him. In private life, he was to the end a conservative Englishman who invariably dressed in black suits and white shirts; who avoided the Hollywood nightlife scene; who preferred to spend evenings at home with Alma, his wife of more than 50 years; who dated on his only daughter, Patricia; who was a gourmet cook, wine connoisseur and dog lover; and who, in an extraordinary revelation to his biographer, confided that he had been celibate for the last 40 years.

How could such a man make such a body of work? Where did the incredible and shocking ideas come from? How could the cool, perfectionist technician — the man who insisted on incredibly detailed screenplays — take such a delight in the ugly details of homicide, sabotage, murder, mayhem, war and the macabre? Perhaps Hitchcock's peculiar vision was something he grew up with, something in the air of British middle-class respectability in the early years of this century. George Orwell wrote a famous essay on "The Decline of the English Murder," describing the bizarre attempts of perfectly respectable murderers to commit and conceal their crimes.

And, during an interview with me in 1969, Hitchcock described just such crimes with obvious relish. He recalled the Acid-Bath Murders ("Committed by a man named Halg who did his jobs in a little garage halfway between London and the coast... was tripped up when the undermanageress of the Hounslow Court Hotel, Kensington, noticed him going out with women and not coming back in with them... the police found everything, bills for the acid, the tub where he did the work, even some dentures that hadn't been eaten up by the acid...") He was reminded of favorite court cases ("A one-armed woman sued a woman with no legs for the alienation of her husband's affections... of course, the poor man had a proclivity for maimed women... his wife had no recourse, really, except perhaps to cut off her blubs... He told such stories in a series of lugubrious — understandings, smiling very small smiles after each one, as if to say, there but for the grace of God go we — acid murderers every one of us.

Nenzel makes sepia watercolor sketches from snapshots he's taken of old structures mostly located in the original Twin Falls townsite

Patrick Sullivan/Times-News

Buildings sketched for posterity

By LARRY SWISHER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The houses Chet Nenzel thinks have character would probably drive most homebuilders crazy.

But then Nenzel doesn't have to build the older houses in Twin Falls that are attracting his eye these days. He sketches and paints them.

It's part of his contribution to Twin Falls' 75th Anniversary celebration this year.

Nenzel is a relative newcomer to the city, but he notices things that longtime residents may not.

"I may find a worthwhile picture in something somebody else walks by every day," the retired Air Force engineer says.

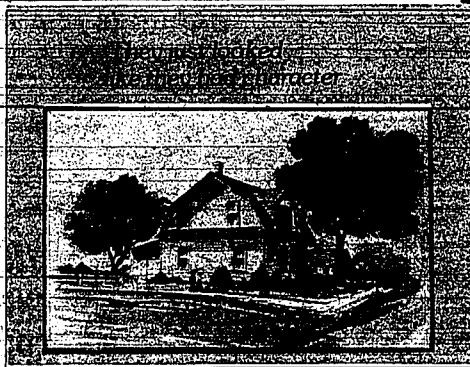

The first subject in his current project appeared to him across the street while he was waiting for his wife, Elaine, outside a beauty shop.

"I thought, 'That's a good looking old building.'"

Nenzel painted the home at 266 Blue Lakes Boulevard as he imagined it looked in the teens and early 1920s. He drew on his memory and added a hitching post and a strolling couple from the period into the picture.

This painting started him on a series of watercolors of older Twin Falls homes and buildings.

So far, Nenzel has done six watercolors of about a dozen he plans to complete in time for an art show and auction in City Park June 7-8, during the anniversary celebration. The show is being staged by the Art Guild of Magic Valley.

Nenzel will also try to learn about his subjects, how they were originally built and who were the original owners.

The structures are still standing and are located mostly in the original Twin Falls townsite. Nenzel works mostly from snapshots he has taken of the buildings and may make a rough sketch on the site.

"I had no particular motive or preconceived ideas," he says. "I noticed some many months ago. They just looked like they had character, that's all."

He has reconstructed on canvas the Twin Falls railroad passenger depot, which used to stand by the tracks next to Shoshone Street South. The building has been moved to the Nat-Soo-Pah resort, south of town, when Nenzel went to sketch it.

"I put it back near the tracks where it used to be," he says about his painting of it. With the aid of imagination, he also restored one end of the structure, which is now missing.

In addition to the depot and the older homes that Nenzel has picked out, he has painted St. Edward's Catholic Church, built in the 1930s, and the Methodist Church. Both face City Park.

Before the art show, he intends to paint the Presbyterian Church near the courthouse and the former O'Leary school site, the Bickel and Lincoln elementary schools and four or five other homes he has in mind.

Painting the still-standing structures is "just a different presentation," Nenzel says. "You can do things with a sketch you can't do with a camera. You can do things with the background, just what you want, like exaggerate trees."

Faces of love gained and love lost haunt a Texas courthouse

By RUTH EYRE
©Dallas Times Herald

WAXAHACHIE, Tex. — When citizens here pass by the beautiful stone faces carved on the east side of their old Victorian-style courthouse, they may well think of the legend of Harry Herley and the love that was.

Then they gaze at the grotesque stone faces on the west side and think of Harry Herley and his love that never was to be.

It has been more than 80 years since sculptor Harry Herley unceremoniously departed Waxahachie — most townfolks agree he was run out of town. Yet the young artisan left a lasting impression with his chisel and hammer on the pride of the county, the Ellis County Courthouse.

Herley came to the county about 1896 to carve into the red sandstone and granite courthouse, then under construction. Otto Kroeber, the courthouse contractor, imported Herley and two other European sculptors to work on the courthouse.

"They all stayed at Mama Frame's boarding house. While staying there, Harry Herley fell in love with her daughter, Mabel," said Mrs. Robert Ruskin, a local historian and curator of the Ellis County Museum.

Across the street in the town square Mrs. Ruskin pointed to an angelic-looking face over the east entrance of the old courthouse. The legend, she said, is that Herley modeled this face after his love, Mabel Frame.

But Herley had fallen in love with one of Waxahachie's most attractive women and he was soon to be scorned.

"Mabel Frame was the town's telegraph operator, and she was not in love with Harry Herley," said Mrs. Ruskin. "Miss Frame discouraged his attentions."

"I heard she already had a boy friend, so he lost out," said another Waxahachie resident, Jessie Delk.

The rejected Herley then began carving faces with a vengeance. Lips were contorted into grimacing-frowns. Eerie faces, with eyes askew, sneered at the local citizenry. One grotesque face smiles down through a toothless grin.

So much for the love of Herley's life.

"His unfortunate love affair caused the gargoyle-type faces," said Mrs. Ruskin, shaking her head as she pointed to the faces on the west side.

Herley's ugly faces apparently were not taken well by Waxahachie's cotton-rich farmers and cattlemen who hired him to beautify their courthouse. But nobody knows exactly what happened to Herley.

Judge Milton Hartsfield, a longtime courthouse observer, said, "I don't think anybody really knows that happened to Herley. It's not written. It is just a legend." Some say he was deported back to Europe. A few say he was tarred and feathered.

But all the townfolks agree Herley left town quickly. And Mabel married another man.

Above, the face Harry Herley carved when he was in love. Below, his gargoyle-like faces of rejection.

Monochromatic series is for Twin Falls' 75th anniversary

The older homes were "built with the idea of permanency" and with a great deal of pride, the painter notes. Many have spacious porches, gables, fish scale shingles, elaborate windows and lattice work and a general attention to details and craftsmanship.

Nenzel says the life of the time was quiet and horses and bugles were the main means of transportation. Many streets were unpaved.

But the early residents of Twin Falls must have been "a very energetic people." "They built the town in a very short time."

Most are pretty well preserved, but there are a few glaring exceptions, he says. "If they are preserved, they must be rehabilitated and modernized out of necessity, Nenzel recognizes. Insulation, for example, was "not even thought of then."

But some modernizing of older homes infuriates the painter.

"It's good if they leave the basic design and the exterior alone," he says. But porches may be enclosed or bricked up and additions built on "with no relationship to the balance of the house," until it is changed into a "hobscob of architecture."

Nenzel says preserving older homes is "a difficult problem" because "you can't have the town stand still."

"Certainly the homes along Blue Lakes deserved to be preserved,"

Nenzel began painting only 10 years ago, when he took a six-month "crash course" from a Spanish artist in the Azores Islands where Nenzel was stationed as an industrial engineer. He says he had always had it in the back of his mind to try painting.

"I've been working at it pretty steadily ever since, though I still consider it a hobby," he says.

And a lot of things just riding out through the valley," Nenzel says. "A particular barn and set line appeals to me. Almost without exception, I take many, many liberties with them and come up with my own composition."

He paints largely in oils and watercolors and landscapes dominate his work. The series for the 75th anniversary "is in monochromatic sepia watercolor."

Chet and Elaine Nenzel grew up and were married at Reno. They say Twin Falls, especially in size, reminds them "strongly of their home town in the 1890s."

After he retired, they lived at Elko, where he still sells more of his paintings than anywhere else. But the Nenzels soon moved to Twin Falls, which they grew to like during frequent visits.

"I don't think I have met any nicer people," Nenzel, who is active in a senior citizens bowling league, says. "It's a great city."

Soon coming to Twin Falls, Nenzel served as president of the Art Guild of Magic Valley for two years and is now the vice president of the Magic Valley Arts Council.

'Close to Home' sampling of on-base philosophy

By LESLIE HANSCOM
©Newsday

NEW YORK — In a thumbnail self-portrait, Ellen Goodman describes herself as "38-year-old woman, mother, and expert on only one subject: the ambivalence of life."

With these as her ambivalent credentials, she has made herself into a national voice. A growing part of the public isn't sure what it thinks on this or that subject until it knows what she thinks.

Goodman speaks her mind twice a week in The Boston Globe, her home base; and in 200 or so other papers to which she is syndicated by The Washington Post Writers Group. It is a sane mind, balanced by a firm set of values, and when she makes it up, she can summon sensible arguments and forceful words to let the reader know how she did it. Her columns stand up to the sternest test; when they are collected in a book, a book is what you have.

Her new collection, "Close to Home" (Simon & Schuster, $9.95), covers a multitude of topics that wouldn't have engaged the intellect of the late Walter Lippman. She writes of co-ed dormitories, the deplorable unfashionability of being punctual and how her zucchini grows. She either shuns the great issues or views them in a side light, but whatever she writes about has a connection to the life that confronts us when we awake in the morning.

To set up shop as a columnist and offer opinions for sale takes a lot of guts, Goodman admits, but so does journalism in any form.

"You are brought in as such a generalist," she says. "If you're a reporter, you cover a fire on Monday, government on Wednesday and medicine on Friday. As a columnist, you at least have a chance to develop a few specialties and inform yourself a little better than other people in the fields you choose."

Her own choice of specialties she identifies as these: "I've been following what's happening to the family. I've been keeping track of the women's movement. I've been doing a lot of bio-ethical stuff. I've been following what our country is going through as it affects you and me, and I've been following myself and my foibles."

Ellen Goodman has long, blonde hair, a long-elliptical face. When I was a kid, a platonic friend was a guy who was too short for you and an easy manner in holding up her end of a conversation. She graduated cum laude from Radcliffe and went to work at Newsweek at a time when the prospects for women there were not encouraging. Her career seemed to be stalled at the level of researcher, for Peter Benchley, a Newsweek writer at the time, with whom she had appeared in a college production of "Guys and Dolls."

ELLEN GOODMAN
'80 Pulitzer Prize winner

She migrated to a newspaper job in Detroit and later to Boston, where she has worked a dozen years for The Globe. As she tells it, she stormed into the office of that paper's editor, Tom Winship, one day to fire off a volley of opinion on "some issue or other" and was invited to express herself in a column. For the last six years, the column has been her exclusive job on the paper, although she also free-lances as a writer and television interviewer.

To keep the opinions coming, she reads newspapers, every national magazine and as many books as she can cram in. If a deadline approaches, and she has an opinion handy, she writes the column anyway.

"There's only one sin in the business," Goodman says, "and that's not filling your space and doing it on time. In 17 years, I've never missed a deadline. That's the difference between having a craft and having a talent."

Woody Allen put his finger on it, she believes, when he said, "At the same time, there is a handful of subjects on which she can always show up with something new to say. 'I can always get a new thought,'" she says, "on relationships between male and female, parent and child." She is a divorced mother of an 11-year-old daughter, Katie, to whom her new book is dedicated.

In one column of the collection, Katie turns up as the protesting victim of her mother's enthusiasm for growing vegetables. Like every gardener, Goodman has wrestled with the problem of trying to eat zucchini as fast as they grow. Her method was to disguise them in numberless recipes.

"When she was six," the mother writes, "I found my daughter picking distastefully through peppermint-stick ice cream, asking, 'Is there any zucchini in here?'"

Ellen Goodman chooses not to write about foreign policy or economic issues at the strategic level. She believes everything that is to be said about the hostages in Iran has been said by somebody else.

"The human realm," she says, "is what I cover." If she writes about public figures, it is to sympathize with Pat Nixon as a tragic victim of her own self-denial or the late Martha Mitchell as a "Crazy Lady" who "wanted to be somebody and settled for being outrageous."

Of the public issue that she does admit into her territory, the one that gives her the most trouble is the moral problem of prolonging the lives of the "hopeless." "Most of the bio-ethical stuff," she says, "just makes my head spin, if you let yourself think of the ramifications. They just spread and spread. Think, for example, of what you do in a situation where there are three dialysis machines for every 200 people."

Instead of proselytizing for a particular attitude toward such garbled problems, Goodman seeks to convey the idea that, "This is how we should be looking at this, or this is a way of thinking about it. You set out the arguments and try to figure out what you think yourself. It's hard, but if you get paid to think for a living, you at least don't have to do any heavy lifting."

Pennario: Community Concert finale

TWIN FALLS — Pianist Leonard Pennario will provide the grand finale of the 1980-81 Community Concert season tonight.

His concert is scheduled for 8:15 p.m. in the College of Southern Idaho Fine Arts Auditorium.

Pennario's professional concert debut was at the age of twelve, playing the Grieg Concerto with the Dänas Symphony. At 19 he played Liszt's "E. Etai Concerto" with the New York Philharmonic under Artur Rodzinski.

Since then he has performed with major orchestras in the U.S. and Europe and as a solo artist in major recital halls. Among the nearly 100 conductors with whom he has collaborated are Barbrolli, Belnum, Boy, Golshmann, Kempe, Klempner, Krips, Kubelik, Mitropoulos, Montaux, Munch, Ormandy, Previn, Reiner, Rodzinski, Schermerhorn, Shaw, Solti, Stokowski and Wallenstein. After the death of Rachmaninoff, Mitropoulos wired him asking him to participate in a memorial concert in Minneapolis dedicated to the Russian composer.

— followed him throughout his career. Albert Goldberg, the Los Angeles Times critic, reported of an October 1976 recital, "It was somewhat of a shock to see Leonard Pennario described in a recent announcement as a 'veteran' pianist, when it seems only yesterday that he was regarded as a boy wonder. The wandering days may have passed, and in point of service he may well be considered a veteran but certainly only better connotations of that term were in evidence at his recital in Caltch's Beckman Auditorium. He still plays with all of his youthful exuberance and gusto. He delights in flights of breathless bravura and propels his audience along with him in pleasurable excitement. Time has left its mark only in the increased poise of long experience and in the versatility demanded by an extended repertory."

Among what the artist considers milestones in his career were his concerts with Jascha Heifetz, Gregor Piatigorsky and William Primrose in California and at Carnegie Hall during the '60s.

In April 1967 during a five-concert engagement with the Los Angeles Philharmonic, conducted by Zubin Mehta, he played the world premiere performance of Niklos-Rozsa's Piano Concerto, Opus 33, which was composed for and dedicated to the pianist. "It was some of the most brilliant music making of the season. 3,249 music lovers loved the concert," reported Murray Bernstein in the Los Angeles Times.

Pennario's celebrity has been enhanced by his career as a recording artist. In 1956 he signed a long-term contract with Capitol Records. Later in his career he recorded for RCA recital albums and works performed with the Royal Philharmonic, the London Symphony and the Boston "Pops." He recorded Dvorak's F minor Trio on the Columbia label.

His most recent recordings have been on the Angel label. His latest Angel release was "Day Dreams" In 1977, a collection of piano pieces by Debussy, Ravel, Satie, Faure, Poulenc, Granados and Rachmaninoff.

His first album on Angel, "The Union," is a compilation of ten piano solos by Louis Moreau Gottschalk, the first American "serious" composer and concert pianist to achieve international renown. Pennario's second album of Gottschalk's music, "The Battle Cry of Freedom," won the Record World-critics' prize for the outstanding album of American music in 1975. Reported Stereo Review: "In addition to seven pieces, (recorded elsewhere), this second volume contains two long-published pieces that nobody but Mr. Pennario has so far recorded. Plus three unpublished pieces so widely unfamiliar that it is doubtful whether twenty people have read them through since Gottschalk's death... Thank you, Mr. Pennario!"

Mitropoulos summed up his friend and colleague thusly: "Collaboration with this young musician has been one of the happiest experiences of my life. I say musician, because although he possesses the technique necessary to virtuosity, he possesses what is more important—a soul."

Pianist Pennario: boy wonder flowered into international artist

STRUNG-OUT SALLY: Paramount Pictures consented to foot the bill for Sally Kellerman's plane fare from California to New York to publicize the movie, "Serial." While in Manhattan, Miss Kellerman gladly participated in a string of press interviews arranged by her public relations firm—Oddy, the film company's own publicity schedule of top-level press contacts was largely ignored by Sally. Paramount was miffed when she begged off, explaining that she just wasn't up to the additional interviews because she was "too tired, exhausted and overworked."

Q: We hear Melina Mercouri was a smash in the Athens revival of Tennessee Williams' "Sweet Bird of Youth." Any chance she'll bring the production to the United States? — A.W. of Newport, Ky.
A: It's not very likely. Melina is a member of the Greek parliament and she takes a passionate interest in Greek political affairs. She's already refused offers to star in an American production, saying she's only free during her summer break from Greek parliament sessions.

Q: Isn't there a personal feud brewing between Lucie Arnaz and Nell Diamond, co-stars of the big-screen update of "The Jazz Singer"? I hear things between the two are so bad, the production had to shut down. Is that true? — M.R. of New Orleans.

A: No, Lucie and Nell respect each other's work and Lucie has nothing but praise for Nell's acting. Conflict involved the movie's director, and filming had to wait until someone else was hired. But the finished footage of Nell and Lucie is so good that it'll remain, we're told, no matter who winds up as director.

Q: Has Bette Midler finally decided to give up her concert appearances to concentrate on movie acting? — H.M. of Clifton, N.J.
A: Bette is giving mixed signals about her future career plans. She's just completed filming her act as a feature movie because she wanted a permanent record of "the way it was." At the same time, Bette says she hasn't firmly lined up her next movie job and that she'd like to get a little deeper into rock music.

Q: I'm a big Burt Reynolds fan—and I also like Jane Fonda. What are the chances they'll team up on a movie project? — B.W. of Denver.

A: Jane, who's currently finishing "Nine to Five," with Dolly Parton and Lily Tomlin, is mulling a future project with none other than John Travolta, but thus far Burt hasn't figured into her plans. Jane's dad, Henry, thinks there might eventually be a meeting of the two. He told Burt recently that Jane indeed wants to do a movie with him—so we'll have to sit back awhile and see what develops.

A: Kristy claims she frankly can't understand the film's R (restricted) rating, and dismisses the picture's language "warrior" as just "cuss words." And she points out that her mother did not permit her to do a nude scene with teenage actor Matt Dillon. In short, Kristy thinks all the fuss is unrealistic and the rating unduly strict.

Q: Adrienne Barbeau was being receiving a lot of publicity mileage from her stint as a topless dancer, prior to landing her role in TV's "Maude" and movies like "The Fog." Isn't this successful and appealing actress—a bit embarrassed by this rather sordid aspect of her past? — S.S. of Rochester, N.Y.

A: Not in the least. Adrienne briefly worked as a go-go dancer in New Jersey when she was a struggling actress living in Manhattan. It provided money for essentials like rent and acting lessons.

Q: I enjoy Kristy McNichols acting, but strongly believe that a teenage girl has no business being in a movie like "Little Darlings," with such blue language and risqué situations. How does she feel about this aspect of the movie? — R.N. of Washington, D.C.

A: Kristy claims she frankly can't understand the film's R (restricted) rating, and dismisses the picture's language "warrior" as just "cuss words." And she points out that her mother did not permit her to do a nude scene with teenage actor Matt Dillon. In short, Kristy thinks all the fuss is unrealistic and the rating unduly strict.

Q: I can't believe Mary Tyler Moore is playing a hard-edged witch in her current movie. What's the part all about and why did she take such an unflattering role? — A.C. of Scarsdale, N.Y.
A: In "Ordinary People," Mary plays an upper-middle-class housewife whose unemotional and compulsively neat personality contributes to her son's attempted suicide. But taking the part gave Mary the chance to know Robert Redford—as a director, not just as an actor—and besides, Mary seems hellbent for challenge these days. "I've got Redford," says Mary's part was softened so she won't be such a shrew.

Q: Isn't Dolly Parton's effervescent and voluptuous image being changed quite a bit for her new movie, "Nine to Five"? Will we be saying hello to a new "Dolly"? — N.H. of Memphis.

A: Not really. The movie's producers love Dolly pretty much the way she is—that's why she was hired, and it looks as though Dolly will emerge as an effervescent and voluptuous secretary, which is what she plays. Dolly's co-stars, Jane Fonda and Lily Tomlin, will be all different, though—one has dyed her hair honey-blond and wears large, bifocal glasses for her part. Lily is being decked out in crimson—to match her newly-dyed red hair. But Dolly remains pretty much Dolly.

GLAMOROUS ROACHES: A former Hollywood movie queen is having difficulty keeping her home in a civied condition. The legendary lady's penchant for gobbling fruit while watching TV, then tossing the skins on the floor, has activated an army of live-in roaches. They've become near-impossible to shake and are breeding like well, roaches. Only the other evening, her boyfriend, a fastidious elderly millionaire, saw the star home after the theater and then drove back to his own place. When his butler came to the door to help him off with his coat, a big roach crawled out of his pocket.

VICTOR MATURE
... Mafia melodrama

Q: I still recall with great pleasure watching the many movies starring one of Hollywood's great all-time beauties, Irene Dunne. Is she still living? — L.V. of South Bend, Ind.

A: Irene is 75 now, and although she's no longer professionally active (her last film was in 1952), she still maintains a busy private life at her mansion in Holmby Hills, Calif. Irene, who made over 40 movies, looks marvelous but considers her long and fabulous career practically "another life-time." Irene lives the quiet life, doesn't like interviews, doesn't encourage her many fans and doesn't in the least like to wax nostalgic.

Q: I read a long time ago that a movie biography of Jimmy Cagney was about to begin production. It seemed like such a great idea—what's the basis of the project? — D.F. of Ann Arbor, Mich.

A: The idea for a movie of Jimmy's fascinating life and career has been kicking around for at least a year now. Movie studios say two scripts are in various stages of preparation and things may turn into a horse race to see which version finally wins Cagney's okay; in any event, an onscreen Cagney story is very much a long-time-off. Meantime, we'll content ourselves with Jimmy's return before the cameras as a police commissioner in Dino De Laurentis' production of "Ragtime."

Q: I could be wrong, but didn't that veteran Hollywood star Victor Mature attempt something of a comeback in a big international film recently? And does he plan to make any more movies? — B.M. of Wheeling, W.V.

A: Mature, 64, did play a cameo part in British director Michael Winner's recent movie, "Firepower," with Sophia Loren and James Coburn. Victor's next movie, we're told, is a Mafia melodrama titled "House of Lions" opposite Olivia Hussey. Victor recently did a lot of roaring when he accidentally stepped on a nest of hornets while playing a round of golf. The stinging experience left him with some medical bills, but Victor will undoubtedly be in good shape to appear in his upcoming movie.

FOREVER VIOLET: Ultra Violet, that bizarre-looking young Andy Warhol superstar of a few years back, was spotted by my subway spy the other day wandering around a Manhattan underground platform leading a tiny dog on a leash. Trimming pockets into New York's subway system is frowned upon; yet the unconventional Ultra asked a transit cop for directions! The stunned chap was so dumfounded at this far-out apparition, he put the lady on the right track, helping her find her train platform.
