

Courts block Carter's 10¢ gas tax

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A federal judge Tuesday blocked President Carter's plan to impose a 10-cent-a-gallon gasoline fee Thursday and congressmen moved to kill the price increase altogether.

The White House said "the government will immediately appeal the decision by the district court."

Press secretary Jody Powell said the administration will seek "an expedited ruling by the appellate courts" and expects a decision in about three weeks.

Powell said a request would be made for a stay in "certain aspects of the lower court decision" but did not specify which aspects.

"The administration continues to feel strongly that the gasoline conservation fee is sound and necessary," Powell said. "We certainly are confident of our ultimate legal position."

The fee was scheduled to take effect at the pumps on Thursday.

The administration could file briefs simultaneously with both the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals and the Emergency Court of Appeals in Washington.

At the White House, Carter told a group of visiting editors the fee "is extremely important for the nation to maintain."

Robinson found neither the Trade Expansion Act nor the Energy Policy and Conservation Act gave the president power to circumvent Congress' expressed opposition to a gasoline conservation tax.

Rep. Henson Moore, R-La., one of a bipartisan group of congressmen who joined in seeking the injunction, predicted the House Ways and Means Committee to which he belongs would pass a resolution Thursday blocking the gasoline fee.

Other congressmen who participated in the lawsuit told a news conference the decision was a victory for Congress and the American consumer.

Robinson said in a 12-page ruling "The gasoline conservation fee at issue in the instant litigation does not fall within the inherent powers of the president."

The judge said the fee was not sanctioned by the two laws the administration cited in imposing it, and he ruled that the fee was "contrary to manifest congressional intent."

"The court has no choice but to grant plaintiffs the relief they seek," he said.

The injunction was requested in a suit filed by oil jobbers, consumer groups and five congressmen who challenged the fee as an unconstitutional infringement on Congress' power to tax.

Robinson cited as a precedent for his action a Supreme Court case in which the government was barred from seizing Youngstown Sheet and Tube Co. steel plants on grounds a pending strike threatened national security.

Robinson said he did not question the president's determination that dependence on foreign oil has grave consequences for the economy and for national security.

But he said the court could not shirk its duty to determine whether the president's action falls within the authority granted him by Congress.

"In making that determination, clear expressions of statutory purpose cannot be ignored, laudable purpose notwithstanding," Robinson said, "existing statutes cannot be used for purposes never contemplated by Congress and in ways contrary to congressional intent."

He said the Trade Expansion Act, one of the laws invoked by Carter, did not "authorize the president to impose general controls on domestically produced goods either through a monetary mechanism or through a quantitative device."

The court suit contended the fee is really a veiled tax that would hurt consumers and independent refiners, who would be unable to pass on its full cost because of low demand for gasoline.

The fee is also in trouble in Congress where a 75-19 Senate vote late Monday was widely seen as a measure of that chamber's opposition to the fee in an election year. The vote paved the way for a formal challenge by removing procedural barriers.

House Speaker Thomas O'Neill said a bill to block the 10-cent-per-gallon increase in gasoline prices could easily pass the House, although he personally favors the fee as a conservation measure.

Opponents of the fee expect the documents to bolster their argument that the Carter program, billed as a way to conserve gasoline and cut oil imports, was really designed to balance the federal budget.

The administration has projected the program will yield $10.3 billion for the U.S. Treasury in its first year.

Carter, using his authority to control imports under the Trade Expansion Act, has already imposed a $4.02 per barrel fee on imported oil. The second phase of the program the gasoline conservation fee scheduled to take effect Thursday — would hike pump prices a dime a gallon by forcing gasoline refiners to buy special rights to market their product.

Maryland, Nebraska primaries Carter, Reagan win

By United Press International

President Carter and Ronald Reagan jumped into a big early lead in the Maryland primary Tuesday night and were heavily favored to sweep Sen. Edward Kennedy and George Bush in Nebraska as well.

As the 1980 primary season entered the home stretch, the two states were favored to give Carter and Reagan the bulk of their delegates, leaving them within less than 150 of the number needed for nomination.

But despite the odds, Kennedy and Bush fought on as if the battles were still wide open.

Based on early returns the primaries looked like this: Maryland: With 7 percent of the vote in, Carter had 8,420 or 52 percent and 33 delegates to Kennedy's 2,966 or 32 percent and 20 delegates. Reagan had 2,951 or 30 percent and 18 delegates to Bush's 2,434 or 32 percent and 18 delegates.

There were no immediate returns from Nebraska.

There were 83 Democratic and 55 Republican delegates at stake in the two states.

A poll of Maryland voters leaving the balloting by the ABC television network concluded there would be "no surprises — Carter and Reagan were clear favorites."

But they said Kennedy was leading in wealthy and populous Montgomery County, a suburb of Washington where government workers have been vocal in their anti-Carter sentiments.

A light to moderate turnout was reported in both states, despite generally good weather and interviews with some voters indicated their apathy was either based on a belief the presidential contests were already decided, while other said they were unhappy with the remaining choices.

The Maryland ballot also gave voters a chance to reject both Carter and Kennedy and vote "uncommitted" in Texas earlier this month nearly 20 percent of the Democratic vote went that way.

Maryland was a key state in Kennedy's long, uphill, underdog battle plan. He sought to tap a wide range of anti-Carter votes in the state — government workers in the Washington suburbs unhappy with the way they have been treated by the administration; blacks who fear their food stamps will be cut off, unhappy farmers and unemployed factory workers in Baltimore.

Although Carter did campaign personally, Carter took no time to visit Maryland with surrogates, including Sen. Frank Lautenberg and Vice President Walter Mondale, with the president's local backers — Democratic Sen. Gene Harris and Gov. Harry Hughes and Baltimore Mayor Donald Schaefer.

The odds of a tight night would strike in Maryland — a state known for its mayoral voting record in both parties.

With the nomination seemingly in hand, Reagan didn't seem to care. His campaign near the legal spending limit, he did not even campaign in the state.

Nebraska Secretary of State Allen Beermann had predicted about 25 percent of Nebraska's 200,000 registered voters would bother to go to the polls — the lowest percentage casting ballots in 26 years.

Tornadoes

6 die as twister crunches Kalamazoo

By United Press International

Deadly tornadoes swooped down from thunderstorms and ravaged Kalamazoo, Mich., Tuesday, killing at least six people, injuring about 70 others and inflicting heavy damage on downtown buildings, including a crowded shopping mall.

Civil defense officials and Kalamazoo County sheriff's deputies said three twisters whirled to the earth, and feared other storm victims might be trapped in the rubble of several demolished buildings.

The storms were part of a severe weather system that raked southwestern Michigan with lashing winds, rain and golfball-size hail that shattered the windows of buildings and cars.

"We're having a search and rescue attempt," a Kalamazoo police spokesman said. "We're going from building to building in the downtown area, searching for casualties possibly trapped."

Mayor Edward Annen declared a state of emergency and made all available police officers to patrol the sealed-off downtown area. A 9 p.m. to 7 a.m. curfew was imposed.

Michigan Gov. William G. Milliken declared the city a disaster area, mobilizing 200 state police troops to assist local authorities and placing 200 national guardsmen on stand-by alert.

Authorities reported six storm-related deaths including a motorcyclist, one person in the 16-story Industrial State Bank building and three shoppers killed when the back wall of a downtown department store collapsed. One man being treated at Bronson Hospital suffered a fatal heart attack, hospital officials said.

"It's bad, it's just chaos here," said one resident who said 70 persons were reported receiving treatment at one of the city's two major hospitals, most of them battered by flying glass and falling debris.

Police said they had several reports of looters moving through the debris-littered downtown area shortly after the twisters swooped down about 6 p.m. MDT, during the evening rush hour.

Special session

H & W gets funds, but also warning, criticism

BOISE (UPI) — The House did what state officials and Idaho welfare recipients wanted Tuesday, but several lawmakers said the Health and Welfare Department notice it might have a rough time in the 1981 Legislature.

Four Republican representatives blasted the administration of the department, and a fifth said he favored dismantlement of the agency.

Gov. John Evans' special session call included a proposed $450,000 supplemental June appropriation for the department's Aid to Dependent Children program. The House passed it 59-16 Tuesday night and sent it to the Senate, which was scheduled to consider it Wednesday.

"There is more corruption in that department as anywhere in state business," said Rep. Myron Jones, D-Mald. "We ought to dismantle that outfit."

He said "there are more women getting pregnant every day to get on that program," adding that children benefiting from the program ought to be found and forced to "wash the windows of the county courthouses."

Rep. John Reardon, R-Boise, denounced the department, calling for a grand jury investigation of its administrators.

Rep. Dan Emery, R-Boise, said he supported the aid program but said the legislators should consider using some "push positions" and put severe restrictions on travel allowances for welfare officials.

"Administration of the ADC and other Health and Welfare programs is a 'great disgrace' and many welfare payments are obtained under fraudulent means, said Rep. Tom Slivers, R-Twin Falls.

He urged his colleagues to vote for the measure, but said they should keep a "hole card" and "take a look at the Health and Welfare Department next year."

Iranian found inside secret nuclear site

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — The FBI has arrested an Iranian found inside a double-fenced barrier surrounding what federal sources say is a secret nuclear weapons storage base.

Ahmad Vaghar, 39, was arrested late Saturday after he penetrated an outer fence and was walking toward a second fence charged with 25,000 volts of electricity.

FBI agent Norman Smith said Monday in a sworn statement before U.S. District Judge Harry Claiborne that Vaghar was stopped by a security officer for Area Two of Nellis Air Force Base when he "was found inside the one fence approximately 50 feet from a second fence which protects Area Two."

Area Two, a heavily patrolled section about one mile north of Nellis Air Force Base, is protected by two fences. The inner fence is electrically charged.

Federal sources said Area Two was a nuclear weapons stockpile site. A spokesman at Nellis Air Force Base would either confirm or deny that nuclear weapons were stored in Area Two.

The suspect was arraigned before acting U.S. Magistrate Dan Ahlstrom Monday on charges of violating federal law and Air Force regulations by illegally entering the military area.

Ahlstrom ordered Vaghar held on $500,000 bail and he appointed a psychiatrist to examine the suspect.

Smith said in the affidavit in part: "Ahmad Vaghar was found inside the one fence and approximately 50 feet from a second fence which protects Area Two, Nellis Air Force Base. The second fence is electrified with 25,000 volts."

"When the defendant was found, he was at that time walking in the direction from the first fence towards the second fence... he could not or would not speak in the English language... he had no identification on his person."

Senate rejects efforts to reconsider staff bill

BOISE (UPI) — Senate Republicans again flexed their majority muscles today on the second day of a special session and refused to reconsider a bill passed Monday to provide funding to keep a legislative staff.

The vote to refuse reconsideration asked by Senate Minority Leader Cy Chase, D-St. Maries, was 19-17.

Monday, the Senate approved a bill that would restore funds for legislative functions that were wiped out by a gubernatorial veto at the regular session. The bill approved by the Senate Monday would reduce the legislative staff to 43 people — a reduction of four people.

At the regular session, Evans vetoed the appropriation for the legislative staff in retaliation for budgetary cuts in his funding which the Senate Monday refused to restore.

Staff funding was included by the governor after issuance of his original special legislative call.

While the Senate Monday was acting on the two staff funding measures, the Ways and Means Committee got the special session rolling by voting to introduce eight bills that would boost transportation taxes across the board by 21 percent.

Included in the proposals was a two-cent increase in the state gasoline tax to 11 1/2 cents and stiff increases on truckers in registration, diesel fuel and ton-mile taxes.

The package was designed to generate an additional $20.4 million to the Idaho Department of Transportation for maintenance.

Also, the committee voted to introduce a bill that would give the state Health and Welfare Department an additional $450,000 to completely fund the Aid to Dependent Children program.

Rep. Peggy Bunting, R-Boise, called Manning a good administrator who has held the line on his budget as long as possible.

Rep. John Sessions, R-Driggs, sponsor of the bills, said the 21 percent increase was not dramatic because none of the taxes had been raised during the past four years of sharp inflation.

And he said the package was designed to affect road users equally, including truckers and gas-tax-paying motorists.

He paid off his ex-wife in coins

TULSA, Okla. (UPI) — Bob Taylor's final payment on his divorce settlement amounted to a ton of money.

Armed guards who delivered Taylor's $17,500 — in nickels, dimes and quarters — to the office of his former wife's attorney Monday said the money weighed about a ton.

"This is a lot of money but it sure doesn't hurt as much to give it up when it's in quarters, nickels and dimes," Taylor said. "Paying in all coins is sure getting me out of the blues."

Taylor said he had planned to pay by check, but changed his mind when a collection attorney began threatening him.

"I just don't like being harassed, and this is the way of getting back at her for sacking the collection agency on me," Taylor said.

"I guess at long as it's paid, it doesn't matter," said Harry Lentz, Mrs. Taylor's attorney.

House scuttles road repair funding increase

BOISE (UPI) — Arguing tax increases are dangerous when the economy is lurching, the Idaho House Tuesday scuttled a bill that would increase funding for highway construction and maintenance.

In killing a bill that would have boosted registration fees for most commercial vehicles and hiked the ton-mile tax paid by truckers, the chamber cast gloom on the remaining items in the $20.4 million funding proposal requested by the Idaho Transportation Department.

The truckers' tax bill, defeated on a 29-41 vote, would have generated an additional $5.25 million for local governments and the department.

Defense issue keys budget

WASHINGTON (UPI) — House and Senate negotiators sought a compromise Tuesday between their divergent spending plans and then raised this year's defense budget to $135.7 billion — a higher figure than either house had proposed.

Without argument, the conference committee agreed to the $135.7 billion in military spending for the current fiscal year, compared to $129.9 billion set by Congress when the budget was passed last fall.

The figure is $1.5 billion higher than the House recommendation for additional defense spending and $1.7 billion higher than the new figure accepted by the Senate only Monday.

The negotiators must decide on a new spending limit for 1980 to allow for spending that was not anticipated when the budget was written last year. The House has recommended a $371.6 billion overall limit, compared to the Senate's more conservative ceiling of $566.4 billion.

Both chambers have approved balanced budget proposals for fiscal 1981, although the Senate's budget would be $100 million in deficit without revenues from President Carter's oil import fee.

The Senate Monday approved a $612.1 billion 1981 budget, which calls for $7.8 billion more in defense spending than the House's $612.9 billion plan.

The conference committee is working toward a

Thursday deadline for approval of a budget.

House Speaker Thomas O'Neill said at his regular morning news conference he doubts Congress will meet the budget deadline.

They missed it last year and, O'Neill said, "I doubt if we can meet it this year."

Other differences that must be ironed out include whether to continue Saturday mail delivery, state revenue sharing and the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration. All are included in the Senate bill but were eliminated by the House.

The Senate also made deeper cuts in education and transportation funds and slashes more from public service jobs to pay for its $155.7 billion defense budget.

Nationwide alert for con who killed guard, escaped

CAMILLA, Ga. (UPI) — A convict stabbed a 65-year-old prison guard to death Tuesday and escaped from the Mitchell County Correctional Institute in a prison car armed with the victim's gun, authorities said.

A nationwide alert was issued for Bud Daniel Conger, 22, of Moultrie, Ga., described by prison officials as "extremely dangerous."

Warden Joel Faircloth said police in Georgia, Florida and Alabama were especially asked to search for a green 1973, four-door Ford Torino.

"We're looking everywhere for that car because if they (police) see it they can spot it easily with all the county emblems on it," Faircloth said. "He got about a 3 1/2-hour headstart."

He was believed armed with a .38-caliber pistol which belonged to the dead guard, Hubert Lodge, whose body was found about as the morning guard came on duty.

The warden said Conger apparently overpowered Lodge and stabbed him as the guard made his hourly rounds. Lodge, who was near retirement, was the only guard on duty at the time.

Sara England, spokeswoman for the Georgia Department of Offender Rehabilitation, said Conger was serving six years for burglary.

House, Senate pass food stamp bills

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House Tuesday overwhelmingly approved enough money to prevent a cutoff in food stamp benefits for 21.4 million Americans on June 1, but not enough to prevent another recession-bred crisis in September.

By a vote of 354-56, the House approved adding $2.56 billion to the $6.19 billion fund that will run out by the end of the month.

A short time later, the Senate Appropriations Committee approved a $3 billion appropriation, which is expected to be more than enough to prevent a shortfall, and sent the bill to the full Senate for Wednesday consideration.

Both actions are aimed at beating a Thursday deadline, when Agriculture

Secretary Bob Bergland has vowed to inform state governors they must start the administrative process to cut off funds June 1.

As a result of rising unemployment, Rep. Bob Traxler, D-Mich., warned, the House appropriation might be $400 million short of the amount needed to keep the program operating through the end of September, the end of the fiscal year.

"We're going to run out of food stamp money by Sept. 1," Traxler predicted. "These are people; they're not statistics."

Differences between the House and Senate must be reconciled following a vote by the full Senate, Sen. Thomas Eagleton, D-Mo., head of an agriculture appropriations subcommittee, said he will seek a special waiver so that a Senate vote on the food stamp appropriation will not be shoved aside while Congress wrangles over differences in the House and Senate budget resolutions.

But Senate leaders said they feared any effort to take emergency action similar to that taken by the House might be filibustered in the Senate.

Late Monday, House and Senate conferees approved and sent back to the House and Senate a compromise authorization ceiling on food stamp spending, another process necessary to keep the program in business.

They agreed to a $9.49 billion ceiling, which would permit additional appropriations of up to $3.3 billion.

The conferees admitted they approved too low a ceiling for the coming fiscal 1981 year, but they said they would deal with that problem next year.

A Congressional Budget Office estimate of $2.9 billion needed to provide food stamps for the needy this fiscal year was based on an expectation that unemployment now at 11 percent, will rise to 8 percent.

Each 1 percentage increase in unemployment adds 1 million Americans to food stamp rolls.

The original spending shortfall occurred because Congress was too optimistic about food inflation and joblessness. In addition, new food stamp recipients were poorer than expected and needed higher benefits.

Three out of five food stamp recipients are children, elderly or disabled. Sixty-nine percent of food stamp households are headed by women.

Professor and students held in welfare swindle

BOSTON (UPI) — A grand jury Tuesday indicted a college professor and four other people in an alleged welfare fraud that may have bilked "close to a million dollars" from the state, officials said.

The 4-year-old scam involved Northeastern University students and a bogus social service organization ostensibly set up to "treat youthful juvenile offenders, alcoholics and battered women," said Stephen Delinsky, director of the state Criminal Investigation Bureau.

A Suffolk County grand jury returned 364 indictments against the five people connected with interested Neighborhood Action Inc., Delinsky said.

Delinsky named Dr. Robert Hayes, 35, a physical education professor at Northeastern, as head of the illegal operation.

Allegedly, used students from Northeastern to apply for some of the funds, Delinsky said, by using phony welfare identification and non-existent children.

The organization, based in the city's Dorchester section, allegedly obtained welfare funds "through a policy of phony recipients, post-offices boxes and apartments," he told a news conference Tuesday.

"(Students) made up a significant portion of the scheme, but not by any means the vast majority of it," he said.

State investigators uncovered documentation of $200,000 in fraudulent welfare payments, Delinsky said, but "the potential for reaching an amount close to a million dollars is there."

Delinsky said none of the students involved in the alleged operation had been named in the indictments.

Toxic chemical cleanup fund wins

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House Commerce Committee voted 21-3 Tuesday for a $600 million "superfund" to help pay the costs of cleaning up thousands of abandoned toxic waste dumps.

Both the subcommittee version and the substitute call upon industry and the federal government to share cleanup costs equally.

Mt. St. Helens continues to threaten eruption

VANCOUVER, Wash. (UPI) — Mount St. Helens expelled steam from new vents on the west side of its crater Tuesday, but scientists' attention remained drawn to the huge growing bulge on the volcano's north flank.

The bulge, if it continues to grow outward at the rate of four to five feet a day, eventually could send a massive avalanche racing down the mountainside.

An 800-foot wide slab of snow, ice and gravel was jarred loose Monday by a sharp earthquake and plunged 4,000 feet down both sides of the Sugar Bowl Glacier.

However, geologists said it definitely was not the massive avalanche they say could still crash down without warning.

Earthquakes continued to jolt the volcano Tuesday. The Geophysics Department at the University of Washington said a tremor with a magnitude of 4.0 on the Richter scale was recorded at 2 a.m. and a 4.4 magnitude quake was recorded at 4:12 a.m.

Politics and the special session

Gov. John Evans may not achieve his legislative goals during this special session of the Legislature, but the session may turn out to be a great success politically for him and his fellow Democrats.

Evans has already given himself the opportunity to turn one legislative defeat into a political victory.

When Evans offered the Legislature a second chance to pass legislation restoring funding for its legislative staff as well as for additions to his staff, he cast himself in the light of reason and compromise, offering to let the by-gones of the past session be by-gones. In the earlier session, the Legislature slashed Evans' staff, and he responded by vetoing the appropriation for its staff.

But the Senate has refused again to provide the funding Evans has asked for his staff, while approving an appropriation for its own staff.

Evans could continue the stalemate by vetoing that appropriation, and no one would come out a winner.

But Evans has nothing to gain now by vetoing the appropriation. He knows the legislative staff performs a necessary role in Idaho's government. The appropriation can and should be made.

He also knows that by rising above his feud with the Republican majority, he can score a political victory.

He can point to his action, pat himself on the back for his statesmanship, and blast Republicans for persisting in playing politics at the expense of the citizens of Idaho.

The Republicans have contributed to their own predicament in this case by failing to adequately explain to the public their reasons, and there may be good ones, for opposing Evans' request.

The political points Evans scores may add up in the battle for control of the Senate.

This latest episode will give Evans and the Democrats more ammunition to use against leading Republicans, particularly Sen. James Risch, R-Boise, the Senate majority leader, who is facing a strong Democratic challenger in his bid for re-election.

Certainly Evans would like to have his staff restored, but he is in the position of salvaging a political victory from the jaws of legislative defeat.

'Shade facts a bit'

Universal Press Syndicate

WASHINGTON — In the current issue of The American Lawyer, reporter Jane Berenson provides a depressing account of her investigation into cheating by attorneys.

Holding accounts with a dozen other items in the news, all of them provoking the same question: What's happened to old-fashioned honor-in our country?

In March, Berenson flipped through the Manhattan Yellow Pages and picked 13 lawyers at random. She called on each of them with a cock-and-bull story to this effect: Last October, she was walking up Broadway toward 70th Street. Just downtown, she stumbled and fell over a curb. Dazed and bruised, she supported herself on a nearby barrier surrounding some Consolidated Edison construction work or three feet from the curb. Hospital examination disclosed a ruptured disc. Pain persisted in her lower back. She had been out of work for six months. Did she have a plausible lawsuit against any?

To their credit, eight of the 13 lawyers said bluntly, no. Berenson kept hinting that maybe she could implicate Con Ed. "We can't fabricate," said one. "You can't claim either the city or Con Ed was negligent," said a second. "You could lie about it," said a third, "but I wouldn't be your lawyer." Attorney Lance Spodick turned her down flatly: "If you lied from the beginning, you probably would have a good case. But no lawyer is going to help you if he knows you're lying."

Well, Spodick was wrong. More than a third of the lawyers in her sample were ready and willing to give her a go. "All we have to do," said one, "is to bend the facts a little." A second lawyer counseled her to the same effect. She wouldn't really have to lie on the witness stand. "All you have to do is shade the facts a bit. Just a little shading about where you fell." A third slyly suggested that if she would only "refresh your memory," doubtless her story would improve.

Berenson's account comes on the heels of the perennial report from the Internal Revenue Service: Millions of taxpayers have cheated on their April returns. The Reader's Digest carries a hard-hitting account of welfare fraud. The virus of dishonesty infects the rich no less than the poor: A congressional committee last week learned of great corporations using two sets of figures on the cost of prospective regulatory burdens — one set to water down the government, another to butter up the stockholders.

A few weeks ago in the small rural county where I live, sponsors of a fund-raising drive conducted a 10-kilometer run. The youngster who apparently finished third had to be disqualified. He had hidden a bicycle in the woods and pedaled part of the way. That was just before the Rosie Ruiz incident in the Boston marathon. How much cheating occurs in the world of athletics?

A recent article in the Washington Post indicates the problem is serious:

Get out of my way

Chicago Sun-Times (Field News Service)

CHICAGO — I was driving through the Near North Side, not far from Lincoln Park.

In a distance, I could see the usual parade of joggers, panting and wheezing their way toward the perfect pulse rate or trimmer behinds. Nearby were some Frisbee tossers, jumping around like idiots and screaming as being stars on Wide World of Sports.

As I rounded a corner, I had to hit my brakes. There were two young men roller-skating in the street, which is the best place to do that.

They appeared to be wearing designer jeans. One wore a puffy-sleeved silk shirt open to his navel. The other had on a white T-shirt bearing the name of a popular singles bar.

The tall, skinny one was spinning on one skate like a mad stork. The other was doing what appeared to be a dis-co dance on wheels, undulating in a way that would have caused his immediate arrest in my old neighborhood.

I crept along behind them for about half a block when the stork man twirled on one foot, then twirled on the other foot, and the aspiring gigolo spun his hips faster than his wheels.

Because they had the street blocked, I had no choice but to poke along and watch them. They grinned at me as they twirled and pranced. I guess they thought that the reason I got in my car and drove on that street was just to see how nicely they could roller-skate.

Something came over me. I didn't even stop to think about what I was doing. You might call it an uncontrollable urge.

Infighting clouds future of Northwest power bill

Times-News Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON — Last week's public bloodletting within the nation's largest confederation of public utilities left a bad taste in the mouths of several participants regarding the future of the Northwest energy bill.

Lingering bitterness among Northwest public utility representatives bodes for chaos in their approach to the next leg of work on the bill, in the House Interior Committee.

Hiding up Capitol Hill in a taxi after last week's troubling events at the Washington Hilton Hotel, Robert "Chip" Greening, manager of the (Northwest) Public Power Council, said "We've got to live with each other, and a lot of back-stabbing won't allow us to get together on issues when we need to."

The regional energy bill prompted the first fight in the history of the American Public Power Association. Drafted by dissident public utilities from the Northwest, a resolution to oppose the bill emerged from the legislative resolutions committee with a strong majority vote.

In stormy debate on the floor of the convention, Snohomish County, Wash., PUD executive Bill Hubbert referred to the resolution's sponsors as "anti-nuclear and anti-growth," and they are using this resolution as a screen for what they want to accomplish. That prompted John Bartels of the Eugene, Ore., Water and Electric Board to rise to a point of personal privilege to answer Hubbert's characterization of himself and his colleague, Jack Craig, of Eugene.

I came to a full stop and I let them get about 200 feet ahead. I flicked a switch on my steering column. It's called a panic switch, and it came with my four-wheel-drive Bronco. You're only supposed to use it in an emergency, such as when you see a stranger crouching in your back seat. When you turn it on, the switch activates a piercingly loud siren.

With sirens screaming, I stomped the gas pedal and roared straight at them.

When they heard the siren, they froze. When they saw my Bronco bearing down on them, with my face leering from behind the windshield, their eyes bulged and jaws dropped.

The Stork Man dove off the street into a tall hedge. His disco friend flipped over the curb and banged into the trunk of a tree.

I slowed down, and in my rear-view mirror I could see them scramble to their feet and shake their fists at me.

It really made me feel good.

So I'm serving notice on roller skaters. Get out of my way or I will hurt my two-ton Bronco at you.

I've put up with joggers running past my house, frustrating the natural instinct of my dogs to bite things that move. I've put up with female bicyclists who wear tight pants, which cause middle-aged motorists to suffer from heavy breathing and have dirty thoughts, thereby creating dangerous distractions in traffic. I've put up with the teen-age mutants who have grown loud portable FM radios where their right ears should be.

Now, joining the other urban nuisances, we have the mod roller skaters all over the place, and I'm not going to let them take over the streets.

I pay for a city sticker. I pay for state license plates. I pay taxes on my gasoline. I pay for a dozen parking tickets a year.

The roller skaters don't pay for anything except their Brut after-shave lotion.

They don't belong in the streets. It's against nature for them to be there. If they wanted them out in the middle of the streets, he would have equipped their bodies with piston engines and a gas cap.

I don't mind roller skaters when they are on little children, who have been taught to move politely out of the way when an adult yells: "Look out, you little rat."

But I'm not going to tolerate supposedly grown men with wheels on their feet, especially when they are gyrating in a lewd manner on a public thoroughfare.

The place to gyrate lewdly, if that is what you must do for recreation, is in a disco, a high-rise apartment, a singles bar or in the bleachers at Arlight Field — but not in the middle of a Chicago street.

If they must do it outdoors, then they should stay on the sidewalks where they can't do any harm, other than knocking down a few old ladies. I'm not in favor of roller skaters knocking down little old ladies, but I'm not a little old lady, so that's their problem, not mine. If they don't like being knocked down, let them trip the skaters with their canes.

So from now on, roller skaters, it is war. Just one tiny note to wear in your shirt open to the belly button won't look nearly as fashionable with radial tire tracks across your chest.

Seniority's value

Editor, Times-News:

Recently we have read several pro and con articles about the value of the seniority of Sen. Frank Church.

Seniority in the United States Senate certainly carries some power and prestige, or at least it should.

Has his power and prestige in the Senate been effectively utilized for the people of Idaho as well as the rest of the nation? I would suggest that every voter from every party analysis the way this man has voted and ask, "Has he used this power to keep our nation strong and to defend the Constitution? Or did he identify himself as a dove and advocate branding his counterparts as war-loving hawks?"

Did Idaho's senior senator use all his power and influence to keep the Panama Canal? Or did he, in fact, use his influence to turn the canal to a lame cause and not vote on the issue at all?" For Idahoans where gun rights have traditionally been a key issue, only a vote against gun control is significant and a vote not cast means compromise.

Would a powerful and effective senator from Idaho return from a visit to Cuba filled with praise for Castro? Now it seems as if several hundred thousand Cuban subjects don't share Idaho's senator's views.

Did he ever raise his voice against the weakening of U.S. military power in the face of an ever-increasing and ever build-up by communist nations? Or did he identify himself as a dove and advocate branding his counterparts as war-loving hawks?

In other words, the senator use all his power and influence to keep the Panama Canal? Or did he, in fact, use his influence to turn the canal to a

Infighting clouds future of Northwest power bill

"There is a serious fish and wildlife problem out there, and to ignore it is to keep your head in the sand," comments an aide to Dingell.

Dingell writes of the Public Power Council a letter about one month ago in which the congressman spelled out his posture toward the fish language and, essentially, told Greening not to hope for compromise.

Responding to Greening's transmittal of a Public Power Council resolution concerning the version of the energy bill recently passed out of his subcommittee and the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee, Dingell wrote, "I note that the (Public Power Council) plans to 'contact and negotiate' with the region's 'fish-eries interests' to try to resolve some unidentified problems with the so-called fish provisions of the bill. I think the Council should clearly understand that the legislation has progressed in the House to a point where new agreements reached in the region by various interests will likely have difficulty gaining acceptance by the (Interstate and Foreign Commerce) Committee."

In a subtle reference to the shortness of time, Dingell told Greening that, "attempts to make major modifications in the reported bill before the House-Senate Conference could well imperil the bill's progress in the House during the remaining legislative days of the 96th Congress."

Suddenly, last week, it became apparent to a lot of Northwesters that this Congress is already moving toward its finish. A conservative estimate would be that only 75 legislative days remain. June will be taken up with appropriations bills that are moving later than usual because of the president's submission of a second, balanced budget. July will be abbreviated by recess for the Republican National Convention; August will be recessed entirely for the Democratic convention and campaigning and September will be all that remains before recess on Oct. 3 to allow senators and congressmen to campaign for re-election.

In other words, the legislative timetable has reached the point where "dial-a-time" tactics can be successful at killing legislation, because uncompleted bills will die as the 96th Congress ends.

Already, it is apparent that the House Interior Committee will have trouble focusing on the Northwest energy bill until it completes work on the very important Reclamation Bill, the so-called 160-acre limit legislation.

Once the Interior Committee's Subcommittee on Water and Power takes up the bill (late June is a good guess), don't look for a three-day wrap-up as occurred in Dingell's subcommittee. There will be no counterpoint to Rep. Al Swift, D-Wash., to shepherd it. Rep. Jim Weaver, D-Ore., will have an agenda, and congressmen George Miller of California and Bob Carr of Michigan, both, are in line to the bill. Once it reaches the Interior Committee, congressmen from Montana and Idaho will attempt to change the bill's public participation section to benefit their less populated states.

"As one public power representative put it, "There won't be a script once it gets to the Interior Committee."

Insulate or perforate?

BRISTOL, England (UPI) — So these workmen arrived at Anne Kelly's home to pump insulation into the walls and plugged in their drill. Ops. The drill bit went through the wall and into her deep freeze. The workmen moved into the bedroom, carefully measured the bedroom wall and plugged in their drill. Ops. The bit went right through the wall and Mrs. Kelly now has a gaping hole into her living room. Better move outside, the workmen thought, and out they went and plugged in their drill. Into a wooden box — holding the central heating pipes this time. Mrs. Kelly stood there watching loan ooze into her kitchen. "It was like something from outer space," she said Tuesday. "I just couldn't believe it. It was impossible to be angry because it was all so funny." "We have replaced the deep freeze and we will be redecorating the living room," said a spokesman — for the insulation firm.

Chief quits job rather than park

JAMISON, Pa. (UPI) — Budget-minded town supervisors told their police chief to patrol less and save gas. When they insisted, the chief threw his badge on a meeting table and quit.

Albert Pirolli, 49, came to Warwick Township in rural Bucks County four months ago with 20 years on the Philadelphia police force behind him and the idea that a cop belongs on the street.

Pirolli says he "more or less ignored" orders to cut 24-hour patrols because of the price of gasoline. Last week, when the monthly police gas bill was $100 higher than in March, the supervisors told Pirolli to park his patrol car.

Pirolli tossed down his badge and said good-bye to his $16,000-a-year job.

"We had five burglaries in March," he said. "In April, we didn't have any. So I used 100 gallons of gas too much. I asked them, 'What do you want, burglaries or burning gas?'"

When asked about the gas-saving policy, Jean Stout, chairwoman of the board of supervisors, said: "We don't have enough money for the whole damn budget. This is a lousy little township of 2,000 people. All this buzz is very irritating."

Peking lauds Genghis Khan reign

PEKING (UPI) — In a surprise move, China has officially endorsed the reign of Genghis Khan, ruler of a vast empire who, for centuries vilified as one of the world's most evil tyrants. Peking's rehabilitation — of Khan came in the Communist Party newspaper, "People's Daily," which praised the Mongolian as "leader of Chinese and foreign peoples, an outstanding military strategist."

Genghis Khan ruled an empire stretching from China to eastern Europe more than 750 years ago, but historians have compared him with Attila the Hun, his mounted hordes terrorized much of the then known world. In the past, Chinese historians have either totally ignored his role in establishing the Yuan Dynasty or played down his contributions to Chinese history. The Yuan dynasty lasted for nearly a century. The newspaper commentary followed the 733rd anniversary of Khan's death last weekend, when as many as 10,000 persons flocked to his tomb in China's Inner Mongolia region. "The People's Daily said the conqueror united Mongolian tribes, founded the Mongol empire and a progressive function in the development of Mongolian society." Other achievements included establishment of a 300-year Mongolian domination of Russia. Inner Mongolia is situated across the border from Soviet Outer Mongolia. Khan's rehabilitation was apparently part of a current Chinese campaign to woo the country's more than

Driver finds fortune but life goes downhill

TOKYO (UPI) — From the day truck driver Hisao Onuki found $440,000 in yen wrapped in old news, papers his life has been downhill. "I've gone through a terrible period," Onuki told reporters following a ceremony in which bank clerks counted 10,000 of the 10,000-yen notes at a Tokyo police station. Deeked out in dark glasses, a cotton mask over his mouth and a white cap, the 42-year-old Onuki described how he picked up the cash wrapped in newspapers April 25. "I was unlucky (to find the money)," he told a news conference from which television cameramen were barred. "Why do I have to go through such a terrible time simply because I honestly reported the find to police?" Onuki, now unemployed, said he was forced to change his residence and quit his trucker's job because of crank calls. Police officials said Onuki is entitled to receive the entire sum if no one claims the money by Nov. 8. However, he will pocket only 67.2 million yen ($255,000) after tax deductions. Even if someone claims the money before that date, Onuki will get between $22,000 and $88,000 as a finder's fee, authorities said.

FBI probe: Businessman who volunteered to help fight white-collar crime helped break mob control

(Editors note: UPI spent 10 weeks looking into the FBI's alliance with a private businessman who aided undercover agents in the "Abscam" probe and other investigations. Here is the last of a three-part series detailing one of the most elaborate undercover efforts in bureau history.)

By GREGORY GORDON
WASHINGTON (UPI) — At first, FBI agents didn't know what to make of Dick Muffoletto.
He had never been convicted of a crime. He wasn't asking for immunity or pay for assisting bureau agents in dangerous criminal investigations.
All Muffoletto said he wanted when he walked into the FBI's New York office in 1973 was to root out the kind of corruption that nearly drove him out of the electrical contracting business.

"I know it sounds corny," Muffoletto says, but he says he was induced by a television appearance by then U.S. Attorney Whitney North Seymour.

He remembers Seymour saying, "White-collar crime will average 20 percent in this country unless businessmen who understand white collar crime come forward and help us." Muffoletto said his wife and daughters urged him to go forward.

For most of the next seven years, Muffoletto became a rare breed—a private citizen crusading for law enforcement.

Not only did he help convict two New York City officials who tried to shake him down for payoffs, but he put up $20,000 of his company's money as bribes and devoted thousands of hours to assist the FBI.

The commitment led him in 1978 to agree to set up a construction company front for one of the FBI's most elaborate undercover operations.

In return for the use of $6 million in FBI money—Muffoletto—allowed agents to pose as employees of his Olympic Construction Co. and a subsidiary, the Metropolitan Electric Co., and to control company finances.

The company was the front for the undercover investigation including the "Abscam" congressional bribery probe.

For more than a year, Muffoletto lived in the Washington townhouse that became a scene of the "Abscam" investigation—and he participated personally in a probe of alleged fraud in the bonding industry.

"It was just a mutual thing that happened between myself and the bureau," Muffoletto says. "The agents, they believed in me. We all came to the conclusion that the only way white collar crime is going to be stopped is with businessmen."

On Jan. 11, 1973, Muffoletto starred in disbelief at the front-page headline in a New York newspaper: "CITY VOIDS $4.2 MILLION IN MOB-LINKED CONTRACTS."

The title was calling him a mobster. Nine days earlier, Muffoletto had been on top of the world, owner of a small outfit that outbid big New York companies and won a major renovation job at Riker's island prison off Manhattan.

He had withstood having his employees beaten, his trucks shot at by rival unions.

He had backed powerful Local 3 of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, which had a grip on the electrical industry in New York, and won. Muffoletto was convinced the companies dominated by IBEW 3 were conspiring to bid on city contracts—and his winning the contract award made him "a hero" with his friends.

Suddenly, Mayor John Lindsay had pulled the rug out from under him. Citing criminal indictments of two leaders of the IBEW-rival Teamsters union, with which Muffoletto's employees were affiliated, Lindsay canceled the Riker's deal. He linked the company to organized crime and barred Mansfield from city contracts for five years. Muffoletto was as good as out of business.

"I was infuriated," he recalls. "I'm an elder in my church. I'm not mob-linked with anyone. Here the whole world is rigging the contracts and I'm trying to do the job properly. And this is like Alice in Wonderland."

Muffoletto suspected leaders of IBEW 3, an AFL-CIO affiliate that backed Lindsay, had pressured the mayor's office. He sat down with his wife, Doris, and asked if she wanted to leave New York.

"She said, 'Fight it out. You've got your reputation. You know you did no wrong. You've got to fight. You've got to sue.'"

Muffoletto filed suits charging bid rigging by other contractors and defamation of character by the city. And on the advice of his attorney, he went to the FBI.

The bureau at that time did not even understand how to handle somebody like me," he said. "I wasn't an informant. I had no problems."

Muffoletto told the FBI that the day before his Riker's Island contract was canceled, assistant public works commissioner Dominic Delicata took him to lunch, congratulated him and suggested he buy a $50,000 policy from Delicata's insurance company. FBI agents urged Muffoletto to move from New York if Delicata approached him again.

With the contracts canceled, city officials played away for a time. Then U.S. District Judge Whitman Knapp issued an injunction restraining Mansfield's contracts and threatening to hold in contempt anyone who harassed the company. Later, Muffoletto won a $750,000 judgment for defamation of character.

Muffoletto was back in business. A couple of months later, Delicata approached him again. Within a few days, a Board of Education figure, Aldo Vari, offered to approve phone contracts for Muffoletto if he would give Vari a commission.

Muffoletto went back to the FBI. He spent much of the next 2 1/2 years wired with listening devices, attending a stream of meetings with Delicata and Vari.

Delicata, whom the FBI considered a mobster, offered to slip Muffoletto documents needed to win competitive bidding on a big street lighting contract.

Later Delicata proposed using his connections to get contracts for Muffoletto in return for a 5 percent commission. Delicata bragged of his friendship with Rep. Mario Blaggi, D-N.Y., and Delicata's assistant, Anthony Tangredi, said Delicata was working with the congressman on a "shipping deal."

Delicata also said he could get more contracts for Muffoletto in Washington, through New York's former public works commissioner, Alfred Maevsi, who had been named the assistant postmaster general for real estate and buildings.

Muffoletto recorded the conversations. At one point, he flew to Florida with Delicata to discuss a deal with foreign investors.

Delicata got one year in prison; Vari served six months. And the FBI did not vigorously pursue the leads Involving Blaggi and Maevsi, Muffoletto said.

"They (bureau officials) were very much against this investigation," he said. "They wanted to kill it. They asked, 'Why should the federal government be meddling in New York City affairs?'"

He said he consented in 1978 to work with the FBI again because he thought, "Maybe this is a new bureau... and they're trying."

He found the latest relationship, which turned up abuses in the bonding industry, rewarding.

A hero's goodbye

AIR FORCE ACADEMY, Colo. (UPI) — With a tearful kiss on his coffin, an Air Force captain who died a fiery death in the Iranian desert was buried Tuesday in the foothills of the Rocky Mountains.

His friends and comrades gathered in the lush green cemetery at the Air Force Academy as full military services were held for Capt. Charles T. McMillan II, 28, one of the eight servicemen who died in the aborted attempt to rescue the American hostages April 24.

After the flag-draping her husband's casket was presented to her, Janis McMillan clutched it and broke into tears. She placed her head on the coffin and kissed it lightly as the services came to an end.

"Greater love than this hath no man than he lay down his life for his fellow man," said Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Francis G. Andrews, a priest who officiated at the services at the academy's towering chapel.

"We love the dedication that these men have shown to God, their country, their fellow man and especially their families." Following the chapel services, attended by McMillan's parents, Charles and Nora McMillan of Carleton, Tenn., the body was taken to the academy cemetery for burial.

At graveside, under cloudy skies and chilly winds, three T-28s from Holloman AFB, Alamogordo, N.M., flew overhead in the "missing man formation" to signal a fallen comrade. A distant bugler blew taps following a 21-gun salute.

McMillan, an instructor navigator at Hurlburt Field in Florida since last November, was a 1973 graduate of the Air Force Academy.

A last look...

Mrs. Charles McMillan weeps at the services for her husband, killed in the abortive Iran hostage rescue raid.

Nepal voters OK monarchy

KATMANDU, Nepal (UPI) — Voters in the Himalayan kingdom of Nepal have rejected a parliamentary democracy, choosing instead to retain the almost unlimited authority of the king and his advisers, government sources said Tuesday.

Results of the May 2 referendum on Nepal's political future — the first in over 20 years — showed the ruling partyless Panchayat system winning by over 62 percent, the sources said.

Although vote counting has been completed in more than 72 of the kingdom's 75 electoral districts, the National Election Commission said it would wait till all results were tallied, probably Wednesday, before announcing the official outcome.

Advocates of a multi-party system refused to concede defeat, saying they would wait for the commission's formal statement.

The apparently overwhelming Panchayat victory surprised many observers.

Student-led agitation for reform shook the government last May, prompting Harvard-educated King Birendra to call the referendum allowing Nepalese to choose between the Panchayat or a parliamentary democracy.

Under the Panchayat system, power is in the hands of elected councils from the village to the national level, with the king at the top. Less than 200 people elect the National Panchayat, which serves as an advisory council to the king.

Nepal's last elected government was toppled by Birendra's father, King Mahendra, only months after it came to power in 1955.

Prior to this month's voting, opposition leaders issued warnings that a Panchayat victory meant the ballots had been rigged.

The government victory was expected in the 54 districts populated by hill tribes who have followed the same lifestyle for hundreds of years. But the massive inroads the Panchayat made among the 21 fertile plain districts came as a surprise.

NATO plans war materials buildup, sets new priorities

BRUSSELS, Belgium (UPI) — In their first joint response to the Kremlin's demand for a reduction in the United States and its NATO allies will build up supplies of war material, improve chemical warfare defenses and earmark civil airliners for potential use as troop carriers, diplomats said Tuesday.

U.S. officials said NATO's foreign and defense ministers would pledge the measures in a rare joint meeting today which they said was intended as a "clear signal to the Kremlin of Western determination to resist aggression."

The NATO session was paralleled in Poland by an equally rare meeting of the Warsaw Pact party chiefs, foreign ministers and defense ministers with Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev and Premier Alexei Kosygin attending.

U.S. defense officials said the North Atlantic Treaty Organization's response to the 80,000 Soviet troops in Afghanistan since December was divided into two categories: "quick fix" measures that would go into effect immediately and longer-term steps that required further elaboration.

The measures are taken from medium- and long-term plans already approved by the alliance at its summit meeting in Washington two years ago.

The U.S. defense officials said NATO is revising priorities in view of the Afghan situation. Some measures which had been planned to go into effect within 10 years might now be brought forward to three years or less, they said.

Within a year or less, the allies will increase stocks of ammunition, speed up procurement of weapons, improve defenses against chemical warfare, install new anti-air and anti-aircraft missiles and speed assistance to Turkey and Portugal, the diplomats said.

Diplomats said the European allies will agree to build up reserves of troops and equipment that could be used to replace American resources if the United States becomes involved in military action outside the NATO boundaries.

NATO sources said the reported use of chemical weapons in Afghanistan has prompted the allies to improve defenses in this field. U.S. officials said there was no proposal now for NATO to develop chemical weapons.

Russian troop withdrawal noted

BERLIN (UPI) — An unspecified number of Russian troops have pulled out of East Germany to fulfill a pledge made by Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev last fall, the East German news agency ADN said Tuesday.

In a speech in East Berlin last October, Brezhnev pledged unilateral withdrawal of 20,000 troops and 1,000 tanks from East Germany. The withdrawal began with the departure of a few hundred troops from Wuertemberg last December.

Other withdrawals have been announced sporadically, with no indication given of the number of Soviet troops returning home.

Senate approves draft funding bill

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate Appropriations Committee Tuesday approved funds for President Carter's draft registration plan, sending the bill to the Senate floor where it faces an almost certain filibuster by Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore.

The measure is not expected to be taken up in the Senate before May 28. The committee adopted one Hatfield amendment requiring that registration forms include a space for conscientious objectors to state their position at the time they register.

'Princess' shown in spite of protests

By United Press International
Bomb threats, court suits and protests reaching halfway around the world failed to deter the majority of Public Broadcasting Service affiliates from airing "Death of a Princess" — the controversial program about the assassination of Princess Ines in Saudi Arabia, the nation's largest oil supplier.

The show went on Monday night despite official complaints and callers who lit up station switchboards voicing concerns ranging from the program's content to its effect on U.S.-Saudi relations. Only seven of the 240 PBS affiliates did not air the two-hour film.

KCTV-TV in Minneapolis received two telephoned bomb threats just before the show was aired. KLRN in Austin, Texas, also received a bomb threat. At the PBS affiliate in Des Moines, Iowa, off-duty police officers were hired for security during the showing.

Many who called stations after the showing, however, said they wondered what all the fuss was about.

Some even said they found it boring. "We received a lot of unpleasant and abusive calls before it was shown," said KTCB receptionist Gwen Lewis. "Afterwards, the calls were very positive. Now they seem to be all for it and the callers didn't think it was all that controversial."

In New York, WNET said that it received more than 1,000 "discussion-type" telephone calls over the weekend from people concerned with the politics vs. the First Amendment, but only a "trickle" came in Monday night. "There's not much of a reaction now that the show is on the air," WNET program director Harold Holzer said.

The controversy surrounding the British-made film — telling of the executions of a 19-year-old Saudi princess and her commoner lover — began weeks ago and intensified in the last few days before the showing.

Mobil Oil Corp. took out full-page newspaper ads saying that airing the film would be contrary to the national interest. The Saudi government and the U.S. State Department asked PBS not to show it.

Petitions — later denied — were filed in Atlanta and San Francisco to stop the broadcast.

The U.S. Supreme Court even became involved. A Houston judge actually ordered the local affiliate to show the program but the Supreme Court refused to overrule a federal appeals court order overturning the Houston ruling.

Earlier, the Saudi government had complained to the U.S. State Department, saying the film was distorted.

In turn, deputy Secretary of State Warren Christopher forwarded a letter to PBS last week from Saudi Arabian Ambassador Sheikh Faisal Athabegian, who said the dramatization relied on "simplistic stereotypes, innuendos and other deliberate contrivances repeatedly to abuse and insult Arabs."

The program had been shown in Britain and the British ambassador to Saudi Arabia was then kicked out of the country.

In a closed-circuit, in-house broadcast to PBS affiliates Monday, network President Lawrence Grossman assured the stations the program would be aired despite pressures not to.

Grossman told the affiliates he replied Monday by letter to Christopher that the film was offered as scheduled "as one part of public television's ongoing examinations of the major issues in the Islamic world."

Mobil Oil, a major financial supporter of PBS programming and a partner in oil with Saudi Arabia, purchased ads urging PBS to review its decision in light of "what is in the best interest of the United States."

Though many callers said they were worried about the program's impact on world oil politics, others expressed fears about censorship and foreign involvement in the United States.

"I think it's a good thing the program was aired," said Jack Geldwell, president and general manager of WTVS in Detroit.

Soot spews over entire town

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (UPI) — "I'm so disgusted I could croak," Mrs. O. P. Moody said as she surveyed the fine black dust covering her porch.

"I've got this stuff all over my house — on the furniture and on the bed," she said Monday. "I smelled it during the night and I thought my house was on fire."

What Mrs. Moody was so upset about was a shower of soot that fell on a wide area of downtown Jacksonville Sunday night and early Monday when one of the generators at a Jacksonville Electric Authority plant malfunctioned.

More than 150 callers vented their anger on the utility, the sheriff's office and the fire department. The problem was resolved shortly after midnight.

The soot covered clothing, cars and trees and one policeman said the city's white police patrol cars looked as if they had been painted black.

Jail term still awaits commissioner

ROGERSVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — Ralph Davis, 71, a Hawkins County Commissioner, thought he avoided serving a 60-day jail term when he left the state 40 years ago.

But he got some bad news Monday. A judge ruled the law requires Davis to serve the sentence regardless of the fact he was convicted in 1939.

However, mercy may still be in the offing. The judge set another hearing for June 20, at which time Davis could be granted probation. If probation is not granted, he will be going to jail and will have to pay a 41-year-old $350 fine.

In 1940, Davis left the state rather than serve the sentence for an assault on businessman F.H. Rogan. He returned to Rogersville in 1970, and in 1979 was elected to the county's legislative body.

Jolly Garland, a young Rogersville businessman, discovered the secret of Davis' past. He took the old court documents to the judge, who ordered the county commissioner to appear in court.

Male date revives prom fuss

CUMBERLAND, R.I. (UPI) — Aaron Fricke says he has a right to take the date of his choice to the high school senior prom.

School officials say no because the 18-year-old's proposed date is another male.

Fricke's lawyers filed papers in U.S. District Court in Providence Monday seeking both a preliminary and a permanent injunction forcing Cumberland High School to admit Fricke and his date to the prom, citing his First and 14th Amendment Rights.

"The basic reason I'm going through with this is that I want to attend the prom," Fricke said. "I feel I have a right to, just like any other student."

But at least one other student didn't agree.

"I don't think he should be able to go," said the student, who asked his name not to be used. "If he wants to dance with the guys he should go to a gay bar."

In Cumberland's second dispute in two years over the rights of a homosexual high school student, Fricke asked Principal Richard B. Lynch for permission to attend the May 30 dance and reception with another male. Lynch refused the request.

In a letter to Fricke, Lynch said he denied permission because of "the real and present threat of physical harm to you, your date, other students, and others." He also said the school could not "ensure protection" of the couple at an out-of-state site.

The prom is planned for the Pleasant Valley Country Club in Sutton, Mass.

Fricke's listed date is Paul Guilbert, who was barred by Cumberland school officials when he attempted to attend last year's prom with a male.

The American Civil Liberties Union refused to take Guilbert's case because he was a minor at the time and his parents refused to support the request.

Fricke contacted the National Gay Task Force after Lynch's refusal. The group agreed to fund and finance legal counsel.

Fricke's lawyer Lynette Labinger said "All Aaron wants to do is attend a dance with a companion of his choice. It is not a homosexual activity. It is not an illegal activity."

"I don't believe in breaking new legal ground — First Amendment protection of freedom of speech and in association has been established by the U.S. Supreme Court," she said. "So I don't think it's opening any floodgates."

Plant adds sulfur to help scrubbers

JACKSON, Mich. (UPI) — Consumers Power Co. is adding sulfur to smoke at two generating plants.

It says emissions from new low-sulfur coal are so clean they don't activate air-pollution devices.

New equipment costing $9 million was installed at a plant in Muskegon and another near Essexville to add sulfur trioxide to exhaust gasses, company officials said Monday.

The added sulfur won't significantly increase overall emissions but helps the pollution devices work better, officials said.

Real live firebird

HONOLULU (UPI) — A bird carried a smoldering cigarette into its nest under the eave of a two-story duplex on Walkiki and touched off a $20,000 blaze, fire fighters say.

"The nest caught fire and it spread to the attic," a spokesman said Monday.

Residents of the duplex escaped injury after a passerby pounded on the door to alert them of the flames.

Swing into summer with salads & sandwiches

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Summer meals can be a challenge, but what a delightful one!

As weather changes from cool and crisp to warm and sunny, it dictates food to match.

One of the best ways of assuring your family well-balanced meals during summer is to plan and prepare them in advance. Planning avoids repeating foods too often; preparing in advance means that you can assemble foods before the heat wills you.

Salads come in for their share of attention, whether they're creamy and fruited varieties, served with hot rolls, or hearty main-dish types with cheese for protein and substance. Either kind should be chilled thoroughly. For the warm days, when appetites are almost absent or vacationing, consider the refreshing appeal of a Crown O' Fruit Salad.

The bottom layer starts with crushed pineapple in a gelatin base, made snowy and cool with cottage cheese and dairy sour cream; crunchy with almonds and tangy with lemon peel. The topping makes the salad a thing of beauty with halved strawberries, sliced peaches, fresh blueberries and cantaloupe balls. Serve with glorified rolls, quickly made from packaged crescents brushed with melted butter and Parmesan cheese. Dessert coverage is easy: Creamy Iced Coffee.

Three colorful beans make a favorite salad for another meal. You need only cook and drain the baby lima beans (green) and just rinse and drain the red kidney beans and beige garbanzos. Cheddar cheese strips and hard-cooked eggs add substance. Mustard-seasoned yogurt provides a zippy dressing.

Chilled milk and crackers complement this main-dish salad.

If you choose to practice the fine art of sandwichery for lunch or a light supper, consider the crisp satisfaction of cottage and Cheddar cheeses with nuts, celery, cucumber and pineapple slices. The cooler the better for this sandwich, so prepare the cottage cheese mixture in advance for chilling. All other ingredients are chilled, too.

Milk and lemon sherbet with sweetened tea make a delightful dessert-beverage in one. These menus will help keep you cool, calm and collected during a summer's worth of good eating.

Leftover wine can be saved; here's how

ST. HELENA, Calif. (UPI) — Leftover table wine keeps better and longer if you store it properly, says winemaker Louis P. Martini.

White wine in a partially filled bottle or jug can be refrigerated several days without significant change in quality, but red wine leftovers are best decanted right away into screw-top containers just large enough to hold the beverage, and then capped tightly.

Air space left between the surface of the wine and the cap not only destroys the wine's bouquet and aroma, Martini says, it may also turn the wine into vinegar.

The winemaker recommends using a plastic funnel to decant wines into smaller containers and plastic caps to seal them.

At Wit's End Why parents don't 'do' much

By ERMA BOMBECK
© Field Enterprises, Inc.

It astounds me that one out of every two teenagers in this country finds his parents' lifestyle unappealing and has no intention of following in their footsteps.

Fifty-four percent of America's teenagers, according to a recent Gallup Poll, said their parents are boring. They don't go out and do things. They don't see people or go on vacations. They don't pursue another career or pick up and move. If they could make a change in their own lives they'd have more free time, fewer children, stay single longer and "be rich."

Parents! Aren't you sick you didn't think of those things first?

If you kids could indulge me a bit, I'd like to tell you a story. Once upon a time, there were two young people who were bored to death with their parents' lifestyle. Their parents and the entertaining look second place to the slumber party which hosted a third world. Their careers, wishes and dreams were listed way down on the priority list... under college for the children, loans for cars and weddings.

The thought of showing some imagination and moving elsewhere was built around you... finishing school, leaving friends and being able to adjust to a move. They settled for what their parents settled for.

As for riches... you've got me there. They never made it to the big cruiser, the white shag carpet in the bathroom and surfing in Kauai.

But... don't tell your parents. They had you and they think they're rich!

Turkey said good buy in May

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The USDA is talking turkey for May.

The erstwhile holiday bird is expected to be, in unusually heavy supply this month, along with pork, broiler-fryers, eggs, milk and dairy products.

The department's marketing alert for the month says turkey supplies will be 40-45 percent higher than last May and 50-60 percent higher than the 1977-79 average for the month.

That kind of news usually means better prices at the market.

Pork supplies are expected to be 10 percent higher than a year ago, broiler supplies up 4-6 percent, and egg supplies up 1-2 percent over last May.

May is also a peak production month for milk and this year will be no exception, the newsletter says. Production will be substantially higher than commercial producers can use.

Butter stocks were up 14 percent in early March, American cheese stocks up 8 percent, and non-fat milk stocks were almost double the levels of a year earlier.

Grilled Cheese Mexicana is a variation of an old favorite, using more cheese than ground beef and a South-of-the Border flavor

Variation of barbecued beef

Washington, D.C. — Few foods are as American as barbecued beef, but to keep the sandwich interesting, variations are always welcome.

Grilled Cheese Mexicana is one of the infinite variations, using more cheese than ground beef (12 ounces of the dairy product, to eight ounces of beef) and a South-of-the-border flavor accent with tomato paste and chili powder.

Just how does one-half pound of ground beef extend to make six sandwiches? Therein lies the novel treatment: the triple-decker, and the seasoned beef mixture is placed inside circles cut in the middle slice of bread. There's no need to be concerned about heartiness or protein since the cheese gives both. It will also give a very meat sandwich which is first grilled, then baked. Serve it on a summer's day with a crisp, chilled green salad and ice cold milk, and reap compliments aplenty.

GRILLED CHEESE MEXICANA
6 servings

- 8 ounces ground chuck
- 1/2 cup finely chopped celery
- 1/2 cup finely chopped onion
- 1/2 cup tomato paste
- 1 teaspoon chili powder
- 1/2 teaspoon sugar

- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1/4 teaspoon pepper
- 1/4 teaspoon garlic powder
- 18 slices white sandwich bread
- bread, softened
- 12 slices (12 ounces) Cheddar cheese

Cook ground chuck, celery and onion in a large saucepan until meat is brown and crumbly; drain off excess fat. Stir in tomato paste and seasonings. Cover and simmer 10 minutes, stirring occasionally. Meanwhile, spread 12 slices of bread with butter on one side only. With a 2 1/2-inch round cookie cutter, cut out centers from remaining slices of bread. Preheat oven to 375°F. To assemble sandwiches, place 6 slices of bread, buttered side down, on cutting board. Cover each with a slice of cheese. Place bread slices with centers removed over cheese. Spoon about 1/4 cup meat mixture into center, spreading evenly. Cover with remaining cheese slices. Top with another slice of bread, buttered side up. Brown sandwiches on lightly buttered griddle on both sides. Place on cookie sheet. Bake 8 to 10 minutes. Serve immediately.

Quick-cooking brown rice is developed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Quick-cooking brown rice that can be prepared in 10-15 minutes has been developed by a team of U.S. Department of Agriculture scientists.

That's about one-quarter the time needed for regular brown rice. The quick-cooking type also contains 20 percent more protein, twice the minerals and seven to nine times the vitamins of white rice, the scientists say.

Robert Carlson, a member of the USDA research team that developed the processing method, says it could also lead to energy savings for manufacturers.

"Drying time is about half that required for quick-cooking white rice," he says, "and the temperature used is lower."

The process involves specialized drying equipment first developed at the USDA Western Research Laboratory in Berkeley, Calif., for use with fruits and vegetables. Carlson is a chemical engineer at the laboratory.

The patented process is available free to manufacturers — but don't look for the product in stores any time soon.

William Goldsmith, executive vice president of the Houston-based Rice Council, says it could be a year or longer, as research and test-marketing would have to be done before any manufacturer would commit his company to marketing such a product.

Dear Abby

Only a big kiss preceded this marriage 69 years ago

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
© Universal Press Syndicate
DEAR ABBY: My wife and I have been married for 69 years. I am 83 and she is 80. We were married, Myrtle and I "went together" for almost a year. In all that time she never found out whether I was a "poor lover" or a great one. My work took me out of town from Monday through Friday, so we spent our Saturday evenings together in her parents' home (in the "parlor") often with either one or both parents present.

Sometimes the two of us would enjoy a meal in a deluxe restaurant. (It cost me 76 cents plus a 10-cent tip). I was doing well as a traveling salesman. I made $100 a month plus expenses!

Sunday mornings we always went to church together. Myrtle sang in the choir. So did I until they found out what was the matter with the choir — then I didn't sing there anymore.

We fell in love, but not the way they do today. Not so much as a good-night kiss before we became engaged. When I asked her to marry me, after much pleading on my part she finally said yes. Then I took her in my arms and planted a big kiss right on her lips. And that was it. No more than a hug and a kiss until we were married some two months later.

Well, I guess I turned out to be a pretty fair lover. We had five children, 17 grandchildren and 23 great-grandchildren.

You may want to put this in your "My, how times have changed" file. Anyway, Myrtle joins me in sending you our love and appreciation for all those wonderful columns through the years.

DEAR ABBY: I can sympathize with the woman whose 46-year-old husband has begun taking clarinet lessons. How about a 35-year-old wife who has taken up tap dancing?

Do you think I'm being unreasonable when I insist that she do her tapping out in the garage? She has a long extension cord for the record player.

DEAR ABBY: I can't believe that you aren't aware that most married women consider every single attractive female a threat to their marriages.

For your amusement, when I became a widow, a married woman whom I had known only slightly called to tell me that she was beside herself with grief because her husband's doctor had told her that her husband might go "any minute." But, of course she was not allowed to tell him. Well, today — seven years later — the husband is still hale, hearty and thriving.

Very clever, wouldn't you say? — BERT
DEAR BERT: Yes, and also devout.

Getting married? Whether you want a formal church wedding or a simple "do-your-own thing" ceremony, get Abby's new booklet. Send $1 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped (28 cents) envelope to: ABBY'S WEDDING BOOKLET, 132 LASKY DRIVE, BEVERLY HILLS, CALIF. 90212.

Barbecue is as American as apple pie

NEW YORK — Anyone who says there's no such thing as an American cuisine has obviously overlooked the barbecue. Both the ingredients and its basic method of preparation make it more American even than apple pie.

Some say this form of meat cookery originated among American cowboys on the open range. But others point to the spicy tomato-based sauce, the hallmark of today's barbecue, as proof that it was developed by resourceful black people in the Kansas City area in the last century.

Fresh garden tomatoes were cheap and plentiful in Missouri and were used in zesty marinades to tenderize economical cuts of beef before cooking; then slowly over aromatic, spicy outdoor fires. Those early barbecues, chefs seasoned the marinade with a zesty hot sauce that has been long a staple in southern kitchens.

Indeed, the unique flavor-and-budget-wise economy of the original barbecue can easily be duplicated today, right in your backyard, with Smoky Beef Barbecue. Although the meat, moderately priced beef chuck, is cooked on an outdoor grill, the secret of its goodness begins the day before, in the kitchen. That's where you prepare the marinade made from a Red Sauce Base, a blend of salted, chopped onion, tomato paste, sugar, water and Tabasco sauce. Add lemon juice and vinegar to lighten the tenderizing properties of the sauce, molasses for a touch of sweetness and some light smoke to recapture that old-time flavor. The meat is tender, tasty and ready to grill after steeping in the marinade for 24 hours. And it's delicious, ready to eat and enjoy in the pleasant outdoors after just 40 minutes of cooking.

Of course, Americans have always been known for innovation. And barbecue recipes are no exception. Outdoor cooks on the West Coast, for instance, like barbecued short ribs, ideal as finger food at informal get-togethers. And the sauce begins again with the easy-to-make Red Sauce Base. This time, however, it's varied with the addition of a beef bouillon cube, chili powder and the dry white wine so abundant in the West.

SMOKY BEEF BARBECUE
1 recipe Red Sauce Base*
1/2 cup lemon juice
1/2 cup vinegar
2 tablespoons molasses
1 to 2 teaspoons liquid smoke
1/4 teaspoon salt
2 to 2 1/2 pounds beef chuck, cut 1 1/2 inches thick

In large sauceman make Red Sauce Base*. Stir in lemon juice, vinegar, molasses, liquid smoke and salt. Bring to boiling, reduce heat and simmer 3 to 5 minutes; cool. Pour over meat in shallow glass pan; cover; refrigerate 24 hours, turning 2 or 3 times. When ready to cook, place meat on greased grill rack; baste with marinade. Grill meat 40 minutes, turning often and basting frequently with marinade. Heat any remaining marinade and serve with meat.

BARBECUED SHORT RIBS WITH WINE TOMATO SAUCE
1 recipe Red Sauce Base*
1 cup dry white wine
1 beef bouillon cube
1/2 teaspoon chili powder
1/4 teaspoon salt
6 pounds short ribs

In large sauceman make Red Sauce Base*. Stir in wine, bouillon cube, chili powder and salt. Bring to boiling, reduce heat, simmer 3 to 5 minutes; cool. Brush ribs with sauce and cook over hot coals about 30 minutes; cool. Brush ribs with sauce and cook over hot coals about 30 minutes; turn frequently, brushing with sauce each time. Heat any remaining sauce and serve with meat.

RED SAUCE BASE
2 tablespoons salad oil
1 medium onion, chopped (1/2 cup)
1 can (6 ounces) tomato paste
1 cup water
1 tablespoon sugar
1 teaspoon Tabasco pepper sauce
1/2 teaspoon salt

Heat oil in medium sauceman; sauté onion until clear, about 5 minutes. Stir in tomato paste, water, sugar, Tabasco and salt. Simmer 15 minutes.

SAN FRANCISCO — Meatless main dishes using alternative sources of protein such as eggs, cheese, grains and nuts, can be both wholesome and delicious.

Almond Eggplant Cannelloni is one such vegetarian meal which capitalizes on a delectable Italian classic.

This updated version cuts calories, adds nutrients and contains no pasta, however. A nutrilicious combination of almonds, beans and cheese provides the protein in this dish. Almonds alone are a valuable source of vitamins and minerals, including—vitamin—E, riboflavin, phosphorous and magnesium.

Microwave cooking further modernizes this venerable Italian entree. Tender slices of eggplant, which work as pasta in this recipe, cook to perfection in a microwave oven. The quick-cooking process retains the flavor, color and crispness in vegetables, as well as important nutrients. No-wonder vegetables that are cooked fast and served crunchy are popular today!

Almonds, used as both an ingredient and garnish, add a unique flavor and crunchy texture to Almond Eggplant Cannelloni. This versatile nut can be used in soups, salads and sandwiches. Keep convenient almonds on hand as a delicious, nutrilicious addition to any menu category.

To toast almonds in the microwave oven: Spread a single layer of almonds on a paper plate or shallow-baking dish. Cook on full power for 1½ minutes. Stir the almonds; let stand 1 minute; then cook 1½ minutes longer on full power. When almonds turn a toasty golden color, they're done.

ALMOND EGGPLANT CANNELLONI

- Filling:
- 1 can (15 ounces) pinto beans, drained
  - ½ cup thawed, drained frozen spinach
  - ½ cup half and half
  - 2 tablespoons lime juice
  - ¼ cup grated onion
  - 1 teaspoon salt
  - ½ teaspoon nutmeg
  - ½ cup sliced almonds toasted

Cannelloni:

- 1 large eggplant, trimmed and sliced ½-inch thick
- 1 can (16 ounces) whole tomatoes, drained and pureed
- 2 cups shredded Monterey Jack cheese

2 tablespoons sliced natural (unblanched) almonds, toasted

Puree all filling ingredients except almonds in food processor or blender; add almonds; set aside. Generously brush eggplant slices with oil. Arrange 2 or 3 slices in shallow baking dish. Cook in microwave oven on full power 1 minute. Turn slices over; cook 1 minute longer. Repeat with remaining slices. To assemble cannelloni: spoon filling down centers of eggplant slices; fold sides over to enclose, filling. Spread tomato puree in bottom of 7x11-inch baking dish. Arrange eggplant, seam-side-down; over puree. Cover loosely with plastic wrap. Cook in microwave oven 3 minutes on full power. Remove wrap, top with cheese and almonds and cook 1 minute longer to melt cheese. Makes 6 servings, 3 to 4 cannelloni per serving.

To cook with a convention oven: Prepare filling according to directions above. In skillet or on griddle, saute eggplant slices in oil until tender; drain on paper toweling. Assemble as directed above. Top with cheese and almonds. Bake in 400 degree oven about 10 minutes until cheese melts and cannelloni is heated through.

Swiss chard is in beet family

By ROBERT W. STRUBE
© Chicago Sun-Times

The botanical definition of swiss chard could be the cause of a lot of confusion: Swiss chard is defined as a type of beet that develops no enlarged, fleshy root. It has large leaves with thickened mid-ribs, and both ribs and leaves are delicious when prepared correctly.

Chard will produce fresh greens throughout the summer. The large fleshy leaf stalks may be white or red with broad, crisp green leaf blades. The leaf blades are prepared like spinach, and midribs or stalks may be cooked in the same manner as asparagus. Chard is an attractive ornamental that adds to the beauty of a garden. Many home gardeners like to grow chard because it is not available in food markets, and it yields well with few production problems.

Chard grows well in any soil where lettuce or spinach will grow. Plants may be started inside and transplanted to the garden after the danger of frost is past, but most gardeners plant seeds directly into the garden in late April or early May. Swiss chard makes a very good salad green. It is important when you purchase swiss chard that you look for fresh, crisp leaves with good green color. A leaf of swiss chard makes a very attractive decoration to be used on a breakfast plate of ham and eggs with a slice of orange on top. Greens other than leaf and head lettuce are now being used very successfully.

The benefits of buying swiss chard are that in effect it is two vegetables in one since the leaves may be cooked as greens and the white stems may be cooked like celery. The fiber is delicate, similar to asparagus. This, like most vegetables if cooked, should be steamed, never boiled and the leaves should be cooked like spinach, using only the water that clings to them after washing.

Swiss chard is an excellent source of vitamin C, potassium, phosphorus and calcium. Raw, there are 23 calories per 100 grams. Cooked or steamed and well drained, the calorie value is only 18. A whole pound of swiss chard contains only 82 calories.

Try using swiss chard as you would spinach. The recipes for spinach soup can be used to make chard soup. A cream soup is generally the best choice and you can also use a little garlic or nutmeg to flavor the greens and give them a subtle flavor. The white stems can be used chilled after cooking, as you would asparagus, with a french dressing or a vinaigrette.

Boston cake didn't rise as planned

BOSTON (UPI) — The cake didn't rise like it was supposed to — it was only 10 feet tall.

No, the failure wasn't due to a plant with questionable baking skills. It was dripping skies in the nation's oldest capital city that was to blame.

City officials thought they'd end up with a 25-foot-high yellow cake decorated with dozens of miniature plastic cupids and topped with three fountain-sputting red, white and blue water.

The 2,000 pounds of flour, 1,000 pounds of sugar and an undetermined number of eggs turned into a recipe for laughter as the crowd watched edgy bakers place the layers of the pastry atop plinky plastic pedestals.

About 5,000 hungry well-wishers showed up Thursday to help Boston kick off its 350th birthday celebration and to get a piece of what was to have been a four-ton poundcake. But a cold drizzle kept the cake from rising to creators' expectations. Its modular construction grew to only 10 feet when the wet weather turned the cake's frosting into sweet, white mud. The bakers gave up after the third tier. After a brief, ground-level cutting ceremony, the crowd lined up to take the cake away, piece by piece.

Interest in fruits and vegetables

By JEANNE LESEM
UPI Family Editor

DALLAS — A renaissance of interest in fresh fruit and vegetables was reported at the food industry's annual convention in Dallas.

But the trend was not obvious among retailers, wholesalers and other visitors at the 630 product exhibit booths at the city's convention center.

Visitors at the 43rd annual trade show of the Food Marketing Institute appeared to be on a giant plip-out on pizza, popcorn, peanuts and other snacks — washed down with beer, soft drinks and an occasional sip of wine, and followed by cookies, ice cream and other sweets. All free samples, of course.

National surveys of consumer behavior at the four-day meeting that closed May 7 confirmed both the fresh produce trend and the apparently contradictory eating habits.

The bi-annual Women's Day-Yankelovich, Skelly and White study showed people who had made big changes in their eating habits were, in fact, consuming more healthful diets, including fresh produce.

"But 34 percent of the survey participants also said they reward themselves with sweets and other comforting foods in times of stress — and this year things are going badly for many people," said one speaker, Ruth Clark, senior vice president of Yankelovich.

"My own view is that the future points to a balancing act between the need for consolation and using food as a crutch, and the money squeeze," Mrs. Clark added.

The survey is believed to be the first major attempt to measure the impact of inflation on American's attitudes toward nutrition. It was based on a national sample of 1,221 adults — 18 years and older. Twenty-five percent were men, up from 20 percent in 78, to reflect the growing numbers of men involved in family food shopping.

Mrs. Clark said the study showed a movement to more salads, fresh fruit and fruit juices — but in most cases at a lower rate of speed than before.

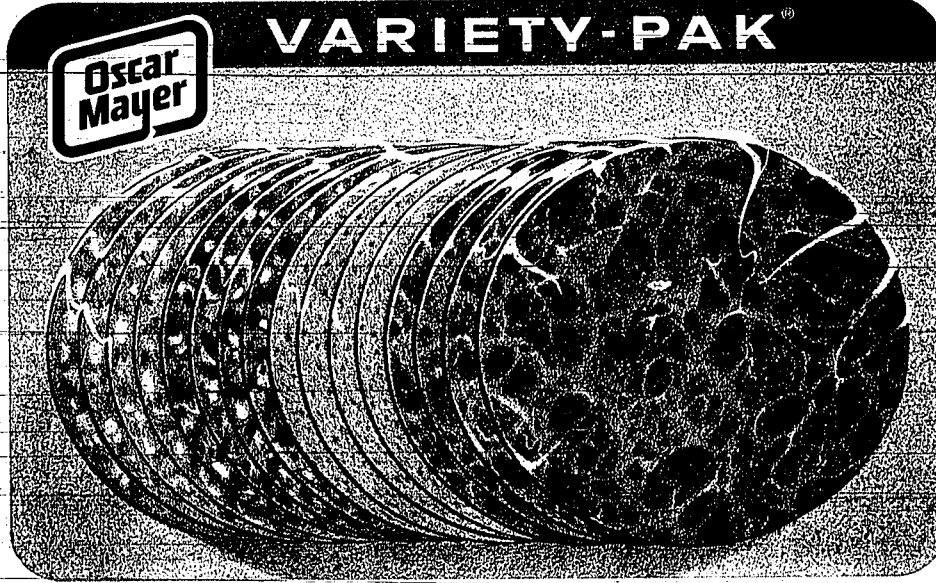

Allice Gruber, who spoke at a produce workshop, said her company surveyed 450 of its customers in April 300 of them in 10 of its Boston, Mass., stores and the remainder through questionnaires distributed through community groups. She said 38 percent were buying more fresh fruits and vegetables than a year ago for three main reasons: better taste and nutrition and freedom from additives. Ms. Gruber is consumer relations director for Purity Supreme, Inc. of North Billerica, Mass.

She emphasized that the survey was local, and might not reflect a national pattern. She added the study showed greater demand for loose produce instead of prepackaged, and better quality, plus recipes either with or near the produce. They also want the market to supply cooking information.

Robert O'Neill, a trade magazine editor who also spoke at the produce workshop, said fresh fruit and vegetables "have" made a "decided turnaround after more than a decade of gentle erosion."

He described the return to bulk, or loose, produce as "perhaps the most dramatic development in recent years." O'Neill, executive editor of Progressive Grocer, said merchandisers told the magazine's latest produce poll that almost seven out of 10 dollar sales now come from bulk.

Twin Falls vocational students earn honors

The event was held last week at the Burley Mall.

Big income needed

NEW YORK (UPI) — In the year 2000, an American will need 163 percent more income than today to maintain his or her standard of living, says Donna Winn, a retirement planning executive for a New York City-based brokerage firm.

Ms. Winn says retirement plans should be based on answers to several questions, arrived at with the help of a professional financial planner:

—Where will I retire? Although relocation costs money, staying in your hometown might mean more desire to travel.

—How much income will I need? Don't assume your cost of living will necessarily be greatly reduced.

—How can I achieve that income with the greatest safety?

—Should I be afraid to risk new investments? Should I shift cash flow, reduce life insurance?

—How can I get the best tax savings and benefits for my heirs?

—Do I want to live pretty much as I do now—with most of the trills of a good life?

Ms. Winn says it's wise to plan expenses for at least 20 years of retirement.

The O'Leary students placed first in total points in competition with three other schools. O'Leary led with a total of 1,550 points, followed by West Junior High School with 650, East with 545 and Burley with 175.

Individual winners from O'Leary were electronics, Alan Haslam, first, and Rick Martin, second; drafting, Kalyn Marsh, best of show; Janelle Sorenson, first, Mark Cazeau, second, and Darren Sandstrom, third; woods, Marie Sterling, first, Sue Given, second, and Nicole Hitchcock, Mike Jordan and Lonnie Houser, all third; wood turning, Andy Lowe, second; mass production, Industrial Arts Club, first, and Andy Lowe, second; plastics, Donald Denny, first, and Tony Houston, second; and crafts, Chris Chaps, first, and Craig Cook, second and third.

Advanced metal working students at Twin Falls High School took first place in the advanced metals division.

The winners were Cathy Smith, first for a set of hurricane lamps cast from German silver; Carty Tadlock, second for a handmade knife; and Holgard, first for a cast, yellow brass eagle plaque; Wayne Anderson, second for a cast, silica brass boot pull; and Gary Herr, second for a cast yellow brass doorknocker.

Serve salad for that spring bridal shower

ENGLEWOOD CLIFFS, N.J. — The saying goes, "April showers bring May flowers," but there are different types of showers . . . and not all bring flowers!

The custom of "showering" the bride with gifts has become a tradition that is enjoyed not only by the bride, but everyone invited.

If you are giving a shower this spring, why not make it a buffet lunch? The menu needn't be elaborate after all, the bride-to-be should star. You can add a touch of elegance, though, with the "Ring of Promise Salad."

Since this delightful salad is so refreshingly light, it's the perfect accompaniment — to anything you serve. And, it's so convenient — the unflavored gelatine base means you can make the salad ahead of time, a must with everything else that needs to be done.

The unflavored gelatine is mixed with sugar and dissolved in hot pineapple juice, then sour cream and sherbet are blended in. After standing only about 5 minutes, the sherbet chills the mixture enough so it thickens and chopped celery and pecans can be folded in. Turn the mixture into a ring mold and chill until it's firm.

If many guests are expected, make two rings, and if you feel ambitious, intertwine them for a double ring effect. You'll find the "Ring of Promise Salad" not only tastes delicious, it looks so lovely you can use it as a centerpiece.

RING OF PROMISE SALAD

- 1 8-ounce can crushed pineapple in natural juice, drained (reserve juice)
- 2 envelopes unflavored gelatine
- 2 tablespoons sugar
- 1/4 cups sour cream
- 1 cup lemon or orange sherbet, softened
- 1/2 cup finely chopped celery
- 1/4 cup chopped pecans or walnuts
- Mix reserved juice with enough water to equal 1 1/4 cups; heat to boiling in large bowl, mix unflavored gelatine with sugar and hot juice and stir until gelatine is completely dissolved. With wire whip or rotary beater, blend in sour cream and sherbet. Let stand until mixture is slightly thickened, about 5 minutes. Fold in remaining ingredients. Turn into 5-cup ring mold or bowl; chill until firm. Makes about 10 servings.
- Note: for a double ring effect, make 2 single rings as above. Cut 1/2 section (about 1/2) from one ring; place inside second ring. Line up remaining 3/4 of cut ring alongside uncut ring to give entwined effect.

Contains sodium

NEW YORK (UPI) — Worcestershire sauce contains 53-66 milligrams of sodium per teaspoon, depending on which national brand you choose. A comparable amount of table salt contains 2,300 milligrams of sodium.

If you're giving a bridal shower serve Ring of Promise Salad, using unflavored gelatine, sour cream, sherbet and pecans

Fish, chicken help keep meal costs down

By ROBERT C. MARSH

The problem I set myself was whether or not it was still possible to devise a simple meal that would cost less than a dollar a person, could be prepared quickly, would be nutritious and taste good enough that it could be eaten with some frequency (say once every two weeks).

You can't get much in the frozen food department for less than that, and I would like to think a person who is willing to take a little trouble can produce a meal that offers both economy plus the advantages of freshly prepared food.

Naturally, there is more than one solution to this problem—I hope to come up with a half dozen of them over the next few months.

Eating on the cheap traditionally has involved alternatives I ruled out for one or another reason. You can, for example, stuff yourself with bread and hot drinks and feel no hunger; but it's a poorly balanced diet. Many a starving graduate student has eaten lots of potatoes, or rice, or noodles, but that quickly becomes monotonous and is not adequate in protein or vitamins.

My father weathered the Great Depression by consuming impressive quantities of dried beans, which are a better balanced food than rice, for example, but again there is a problem of monotony. A few beans take me a long way, although red beans and rice have long been a staple food of the poor in the Caribbean. We'll come back to this dish in a few weeks, it has possibilities.

You can go on an orgy of greens; but there are multiple problems. For a start, really high-quality salad greens are expensive. For another, greens contain a lot of water and quite a bit of fiber, but if you need calories for energy, they are a poor source. A rabbit can eat rabbit food and thrive because he has a rabbit's appetite, each day he may eat as much as half his weight in greens) and a rabbit's digestive system. You have neither. Anthropologists now seem to agree that mankind has eaten a mixture of meat and plant foods for millions of years. We can, if necessary, survive for long periods with only meat or only plant food, but the majority are happy with the mixture.

On the other hand, changing tastes and rising food costs have a strong effect on our choices. In the past two years my consumption of poultry has gone way up, and I am eating lots of fish, in part because we will accept a small portion of fish (four or five ounces) more quickly than a small portion of red meat. Any meal that costs less than a dollar a serving must make sparing use of meat or combine meat and alternative, but less expensive, protein sources. Since my favorite international cuisine is Italian, I decided to begin with a simple meal based on pasta. Americans are eating lots of pasta and buying lots of bottled spaghetti sauce (look at the shelf space these products get in your local supermarket). But there is pasta and pasta, and there are significant differences between the sauces from various manufacturers; despite the fact that they are competitively priced.

Salary hikes granted deaf school teachers

By BRUCE HAMMOND
Times-News writer

GOODING — Salary increases and tentative approval for a job training program have been granted to the Idaho School for the Deaf and Blind in Gooding.

The action came at an Idaho Board of Education meeting in Boise Friday.

"The board has given us permission to apply for grant money for the career program," Superintendent Keith Tolzin said Tuesday.

School officials have already submitted the funding request to the Region 4 Development Association office in Twin Falls for Comprehensive Training and Employment Act money. If the funding is approved, final permission must be received from the education board, according to Tolzin.

"The program is designed to provide vocational training for our high school students," Tolzin said.

If approved, 57 visually and/or hearing-impaired students would receive training and employment opportunities to maximize successful transition into the world of work, according to Tolzin.

Students would be placed with Gooding-area employers for on-the-job training. CETA funds would be used to pay students minimum wage for their work.

"The jobs will depend on the interests of the students," Tolzin explained. "We're looking at things in agriculture, the automotive area and the commercial areas such as retail stores."

In past years, students from the state school have worked afternoons on Gooding city work crews, local mills and auto shops, according to Tolzin.

"But the problem with that is the employers' inability to pay, so that's why we're seeking the CETA funding," Tolzin said.

Tolzin said the program is tentatively set up with local employers. Some of the funding would also go toward a work study coordinator to head the program.

"The funding would only be for one year, until we see how everything works out," Tolzin said.

The program would begin Oct. 1,

1980, and operate through Sept. 31, 1981.

"Indications are good at this point for approval of our proposal, but that's all we've heard so far," said Tolzin. "Thursday, we're supposed to go to Boise and plead our case for funding, once more, so it's moving along."

Cost-of-living salary increases for school staff were also approved at the education board meeting Friday, Tolzin noted.

"We haven't received anything formal in writing on it yet, but indications are that the raises were approved," Tolzin said.

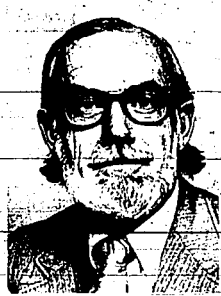

The average salary increase for all of the professional employees at the school is 3.38 percent. Additional compensations, averaging $350, were also approved by the board for six staff positions.

"It looks like with these raises we're still below the level of most of the other school districts around here, but that's a problem we'll have to take up with the board at a later time," Tolzin said.

Instructor salaries at the Idaho School for the Deaf and Blind range from $10,358 to $18,595, depending on experience. The average is around $13,500.

District 22 Senate seat contest pits Steen vs. Walker

By STEPHANIE SCHOROW
Times-News writer

BLISS — The 1 percent initiative and representation for the "chemically dependent" are issues being raised in the Republican primary race for the District 22 senate seat.

Archie Walker, a Republican, is challenging incumbent Wilson Steen in the May 27 primary for the party's nomination for District 22 senate seat. District 22 is comprised of Camas and Elmore counties and two precincts in Gooding County.

If elected to the Idaho Senate, Archie Walker of Bliss hopes to represent a group who, he feels, are not now represented.

"Frankly, as an alcoholic who hasn't had a drink for 18 years, I don't think the chemically dependent segment of the population has received any representation in the Legislature," said Walker, one of the founders of the Gooding Alcoholism Treatment Center, now called the Walker Center.

To combat problems of alcohol and drug addiction he proposes increased education programs rather than stiffer legal penalties. "Prohibition never solved anything," he said.

For example, he opposes the Legislature's attempt to restrict the sale of paraphernalia related to drug use, saying "in the first place, it's probably not constitutional. In the second place, it's not going to do anything."

He proposes the Legislature fund school programs so students "know as much about injecting a poison as driving a car."

His strong emphasis of chemical addiction problems lead to claims of being an "one-issue" candidate when he ran for the Gooding County Commission a year ago.

He said, however, "I'm not a single-issue candidate, but I do think we ought to look at this issue; it's a fairly significant and timely issue."

For example, he contends that $285 million was spent in Idaho last year to combat problems stemming from those chemically addicted.

In other issues, he opposes the so-called Sagebrush Rebellion, supports encouraging alternate energy (such as solar energy) and opposes the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory's injection of radioactive waste in the underground aquifer.

Of the INEL plant, he said, "I'd put a cork in every injection well they've got. I think that's criminal. We don't know what happens to that water."

He characterized the Sagebrush Rebellion as "the idea of getting something for nothing," but added that "I understand the desire for local control."

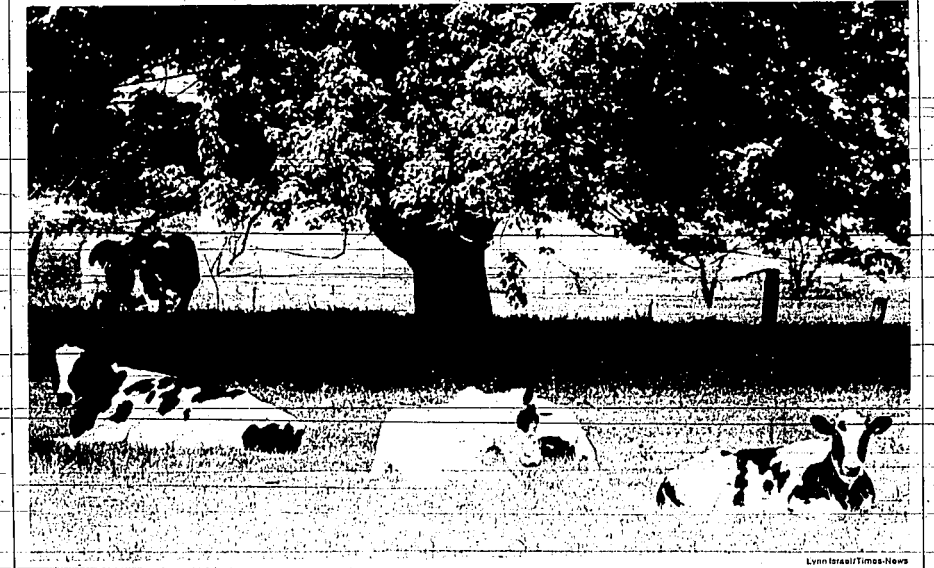

Still, he feels continued jurisdiction by the Bureau of Land Management is financially more feasible than state management of federal lands.

Walker also feels that a new 1 percent initiative proposal, one that outlines for voters what lost tax revenues would mean, should be put up for a vote. "I'd like to see the whole thing started all over again," he said.

"They ought to rescind it."

Presently, it is too difficult to fit the 1 percent "into our archaic tax system," and property tax cuts should be considered.

With temperatures back in the 70-degree range and clear skies overhead — although a few cumulus clouds were a-building over distant mountains — these dairy cows appeared to be relaxing and enjoying a May day made more delightful for humans and bovines alike by the sharp contrast with conditions of the past week in the Magic Valley. These cattle were in a pasture on a farm about seven miles north of Twin Falls in Jerome County.

Lincoln sheriff's race based on teen drug, alcohol issue

By SUSAN GALLAGHER

SHOSHONE — Controlling high school students' use of drugs and alcohol should be the top priority of the Lincoln County sheriff, say the majority of Republican contenders for the post.

Vying for the Republican nomination May 27 will be Jack Olsen of Richfield, Stephen Southwick of Dietrich, and Darwin Mills and John Davis of Shoshone.

Anna Mae Yeates, Shoshone, is the lone Democratic candidate for the position being vacated by retiring sheriff Bill Anderson.

Jack Olsen, a Lincoln County

Sheriff's deputy for the past 3 1/2 years, said he believes the agency "could be doing more in the way of communicating with young people and educating them" concerning the use of intoxicants.

He said his goals as sheriff would include "bringing law enforcement in this county up to a modern, professional level," both in terms of personnel management and equipment. Vehicles which travel only eight miles on a gallon of gas are among the deficient equipment, he said.

Olsen claimed the sheriff's manpower needs to be more evenly distributed in Lincoln County. Some portions of the county are heavily patrolled while others are neglected, he said. Olsen added the three-person sheriff's department "could stand to have one more man," but said he uncertain about the availability of funds for a new position.

Olsen, 38, has nine years experience in law enforcement, including work with the Idaho State Correctional Institute and the Garden City Police Department. A native of Pocatello, he graduated from the Idaho State University law enforcement program in 1971.

Stephen Southwick also said he would like to expand the sheriff's staff by one person, but like Olsen, he expressed concern about funding.

"I know Bill (Anderson) has been trying to add a position and has been unsuccessful," he said.

Employed in the home construction industry, Southwick, 34, has 3 1/2 years experience with the Weber County Sheriff's Reserve Corps in Utah.

"I don't think we have any big, serious crime problems in Lincoln County, but I'm concerned about teenagers using alcohol and some of them getting into drugs," he said.

"One of the main things about the sheriff's office is that there needs to be some change," Southwick con-

District 21 senate race brimming with candidate hopefuls

By RON ZELLAR

CAREY — Energy and agriculture are major planks in the platforms of three Democrats seeking the nomination for state senator from District 21.

District 21 encompasses Blaine and portions of Lincoln and Minidoka counties. The race features former Republican senator John Peavey and restaurateur Dick Russell, both of Carey, and rancher Clarence Bellem, Rupert.

Peavey says a strong energy policy is essential to the continued health of farming in southern Idaho. Bellem favors additional water storage on the Snake River for the same reason.

And Russell said the state should take another look at coal-fired generating plants to fill its energy needs.

The Times-News also asked all three candidates to express their views on the need for a state energy department and on the desirability of a two-cent increase in gasoline taxes to increase highway maintenance.

stream from American Falls Reservoir, Bellem said.

"We need to plan for the future," he said. "We may not need additional agricultural land right now, but we may need it later to feed our world."

Bellem said the Idaho Legislature should act next year to purchase the Lynn Krändall site for water storage above Pallasades Reservoir. A similar proposal this year was passed by the House but died in the Senate.

In high runoff years, 5 million acre-feet of water flows unregulated past Milner Dam, he noted. The water Private enterprise could take care of many of the country's problems, he said.

Lots of candidates promise voters the moon, but Eugene Moon said he is the only one who can deliver it elected.

Instead, however, Moon said he favors less government whenever possible.

"Private enterprise could take care of many of the country's problems, he said. If only governments would resist the urge to regulate anything and everything."

He is adamantly opposed to creation of a state energy department, noting that the Federal Energy Office last year spent more money than the seven largest oil companies made in profits.

He is opposed to allowing state agencies to issue their own regulations, and said legislative pay hikes should be decided on roll-call votes to allow the state's residents to know how their representatives voted.

For track showdown

Area teams head to state

By MIKE PRATER
Times-News sports writer

The single largest high school athletic event of the year will take place at Boise State University this weekend — the state track championships.

Here's a rundown (and coaches' comments) of who's going from each north valley school.

Jerome boys

Randy Larsen qualified in the district meet for three events: the high hurdles, the 200-meter dash and as a member of the 880-yard relay team.

Scott Noble will run in the high hurdles along with Karsen, and on the 440-yard relay team.

Kevin Churchman has qualified for four events — the 880-yard relay team, the 400-meter dash, the 440-yard relay team and the medley.

Dustin Calhoun is another triple jumper, as he will run in the 880-yard relay team, the 400-meter dash and in the 200-meter dash.

Tony Dickens will help out in the 800-, 440- and medley relays and Armando Lopez will compete in the intermediate hurdles and the 100 meters.

Doug Ahrens will help the medley effort along with Mike Woodland, who is also running in the 440-yard relay team.

The distance points should come heavy, as senior Gerry Leininger will head the pack of a talented trio.

Leininger will triple up in the 1600 and 3200 meter runs along with Robin Mein also will run both, and Jim McKean will run the 3200.

The field events, according to Dunn, will be weak. However, Brent Wallin and Bob Stone will combat that and hope to score in the high jump — the only field event that qualified for the Tigers. Tracey Ahrens will be going as an alternate.

Jerome girls

The 12 girls that will help to defend Jerome's state championship include weightman Dianne Hill, who will compete in the shotput and the discus.

Salina Meyer and Barbara Sorenson also will throw the discus.

Erin Schander will triple up in the high jump, the 880-yard relay team and the medley.

Lisa Winnett will handle the distance duties by running in the 1600 and 3200 meter runs.

Cindy Adams will double up in the long jump and the high hurdles, while Karen Sabotka will carry a heavy load in the 100 meters and in two relays — the 440 and medley.

Tracey Ahrens also, a three-time qualifier, will compete in the 200 meters, the 100 meters and handle the 440-yard duties.

Jane Iretson will run the 800 meters and Lara Johnson, Kristi Peterson and Vicki Winders will help in the relays.

Wood River girls

The Wood River girls team has reduced in size from a large team to one girl.

The one girl that will represent the

Wood River boys

The Wood River boys have qualified people in two field events and one running event at the A-2 championships.

Bob Montgomery has the best shot at an individual title, according to Shay, in the pole vault, and as a result are sending seven competitors to Boise — all of them will be in at least one event.

There are about three or four competitors jumping in his range, and he's been at 6-1 before, so anything can happen," Shay said.

Gooding boys

The Gooding boys' team had a relatively easy time at the district A-3 track meet in Twin Falls, and as a result are sending seven competitors to Boise — all of them will be in at least one event.

Senior John Traugher has been ripping up his competition in the sprint all year long and will get his chance to prove himself as a state sprinter in the 200 meters and 100 meters. Traugher was taken out of the 880-yard relay team in order to rest between events, but is still in the 440-relay.

Gooding girls

As in the case of the Wood River Wolverines, the girls' track team at Gooding has been reduced to one participant — Gwen Trospier.

Trospier will compete in the intermediate hurdles.

Pilot boys

While the Glens Ferry girls were tearing up their competition at A-3 district last week, the Glens Ferry boys were having a difficult time of things.

The Pilots only managed to send one boy to the state meet.

Danny Shrum will compete in the intermediate hurdles for the boys.

Pilot girls

The Glens Ferry girls took their division at the district A-3 track meet behind the power of individual talent.

Amy Wertz picked up shotput and discus victories and will compete at state in those events.

Kelly Jensen will be going in the high jump and long jump while Pam Messery will be going in four events.

Messery qualified for the 100 and 200 meters, the mile relay team, the 400 meters and the 200 meters.

In the only other individual event, Janet Pruet will run in the intermediate hurdles.

Others who will contribute in relays include Pruet, Beth Ann Bostock, Kina Kom and Marcee Pember.

"It looks as if we're going to give a strong showing," said track coach Bob Elliott. "I haven't seen the times from up north, but we have some good individual talent to compete with."

Hagerman boys

The Pirates ran into tough luck at their district tourney, as they only managed to qualify two boys to Boise.

Jeff Powell will run in the quarter mile, while David Andrus, their best hope for a first place, will tackle the distance duties. He will run in the 1000 and 3200 meter runs.

Wendell girls

The Trojans managed to sneak a few girls into the state track meet at their district tournament.

Elizabeth Layton managed to sneak in twice as she'll run in the intermediate and the high hurdles.

Others that will compete for the Trojans are Nancy Lancaster in the long jump, Bonnie Traugher in the high hurdles. The two relays that qualified are the medley and the 440 yard relay teams.

Wendell boys

Although the Wendell boys' team didn't win the team title, the Trojans qualified several individuals for the state meet.

Steve Laitner will be going in the pole vault, and Bill Bunn in the long jump.

According to Wendell Track Coach Yogi Behrens, Bunn has a good chance at winning a gold medal at the two day competition.

Others include Rod and Todd Hegl in the shotput, and foreign exchange student Stewart Moot in the 400 meters. The mile relay team also qualified.

Valley boys

Five boys managed to qualify for the Valley boys team to the A-3 state meet — but in only two events.

Kent Metcalf qualified in the only open event and also is a member of the medley relay team. Others on that team include Rob Tiley, Scott Johnson and Jay Blacker.

Valley girls

The Valley girls track team has qualified people for four open events and one relay.

BB Davy, Valley's top weightman, will throw the discus and Shawna Henry will give her best in the high hurdles.

Two Valley sprinters have made it in the 100 meters — Tammy Andrus and Sue Shaver. Mary Havens will run the 1600 meters.

The only Valley relay team going is the mile, and consists of Kathy Human, Cindy Hansen, Machelle Mussman and Leslie Stover.

Dietrich boys

Basketball star Tracey Perron is going to make it or break it as the only qualifier for Dietrich.

Perron, who qualified for the high jump, is jumping in a range with about four or five other competitors.

According to his coach, Kelley Murphey, Perron can either place first or get last.

Carey boys

Troy Murray might have a long lonesome trip to the state meet as the only Carey competitor going to Boise boys or girls.

Nevertheless, Murray has qualified for the state meet in the high hurdles.

According to his coach, Blaine Tingoy, Murray is a "dedicated athlete who will work for anything."

Shoshone boys

The only one going for the Indians just happens to be the strongest kid in school — Alton Huyser.

Huyser, a shotputter and discus thrower, is returning to the state meet this year after placing fourth last year as a junior.

According to other district times in the state, Huyser ranks among the best and has a good shot at a pair of victories at Boise, according to his coach.

Shoshone girls

The Shoshone weight program must be doing a good job.

Not only is their only qualifier for the boys a weightman, their only qualifier for the girls also is a weightman.

Kathy Williams has qualified for the shotput, and according to her coach Larry Messick, "Kathy isn't the most talented girl, but she might sneak in there for some points. I'm definitely not counting her out."

Richfield girls

Sindi Smith is the bright spot of the Richfield track team as she and Bowen are the only competitors going from that school.

Smith, a sprinter, has been ripping up the competition in her area all season long.

Her chances of doing well in the 400 and 200 meter runs rank very high.

Bowen, a halfmiler, is the only other participant from Richfield.

Camas Co. boys

Terry Lee is the remainder of the Camas County track team after they were beaten at the district track meet last week.

Lee will represent the Mushers in the 1600 and 3200-meter runs at the state track meet this weekend.

Briefly in sports

Wood River seeks title

HAILEY — Despite low odds and high obstacles, Wood River tennis Coach Clarke Doxey feels his team has a shot at the state tennis title this weekend.

The tournament opens Friday at Sun Valley.

Bishop Kelly, the number one ranked team in the state, has three more entries in the tournament than Wood River, but Doxey doesn't let it bother him.

"We still have some of the best individual talent around, and if we can knock off a few of their big guns, we can win it. It won't be easy, but we're sure going to give them a run for their money," he said.

The best hope for a Wood River individual title lies with Hal Sweasy, who after playing singles all year long, has joined together with Lance Leby to make a strong boys' doubles team.

Others who will be going on the trip with the Wolverines will be Jeff Heitner, boys singles; Tom Moore, girls singles; Paul Exline and Ron Weckerle, boys' doubles; Betsi Fine and Jackie Garner, girls' doubles; and Laura Newcomb and Eric Exline, mixed doubles.

Country club opens holes

JEROME — A seven-man team consisting of five men and two women picked up first place money at the grand opening golf tournament at the Jerome Country Club last weekend.

Jerry Gasser, Herb Fritzley, Mill Coffman, Dot McLinn, Betty Conover, Mick Otto and Mitch Williams all split first place money of $170 after scoring a eight-under-par on the new golf course.

The second place team, also at eight under, consisted of Jim Blamires and his wife Jane, Del Miller, Flora Miller, Chuck Hosman, Ed Lietzman, Sandy Thompson, Wally Young and Bob Burton.

Larry Darling, Tom Flasketz, Jack Kennedy, Betty Shaud, Ann Merzhan and Sandra Karsen made up the third place team which went seven under.

The closest to the hole winner for the men was Otto, who put it within 4-feet, two-inches of the hole. Otto won a float trip down the Salmon River along with Louis Hitch who won the women's category with a shot of 16-feet, 10 1/2-inches away from the pin.

Gooding's Mann heads team

GOODING — Mike Mann will head Gooding High School's contingent to the state tennis tournament at Sun Valley this weekend.

Mann, who won the district singles' title Monday, will be joined at the tourney by Gwen Reed, girls' singles; Bonnie Arkosh and Stacey Reed, girls' doubles; and Craig Hall and Lauri Graves, mixed doubles.

Corrections on tennis

HAILEY — The May 7 sports section of the Times-News North Valley edition contained four errors:

It was reported in a column under a picture of Gooding tennis player Mike Mann that Wood River beat Gooding twice this year in tennis matches, 7-5 and 10-2. The actual scores were 8-4 and 10-2.

In addition, Wolverine tennis player Hal Sweasy's name was misspelled. It is Sweasy, not Sweeney as reported.

In another error, it was reported to the Times-News by the Gooding tennis coach that Sweasy and Mann were to play for the number one men's singles title at district, but Sweasy instead played doubles.

In the final error, it was reported that the match between Wood River and Gooding was played in Sun Valley, but the match, not a tournament as was reported, took place in Hailey at the Woodside Racquet Club.

The Times-News Sports Department regrets the errors.

Larsen receives award

POCATELLO — Jerome graduate Rick Larsen, a three-year letterman for Idaho State's football team, has been awarded the Big Sky Conference scholarship-athlete award.

A three sport veteran at Jerome, Larsen is majoring in computer science and is carrying a 3.72 grade point average. He played defense back for the Bengals the past three seasons.

Rose is subject of FBI check

In bank's loss of $1.4 million

By STEVE LIPSON

Times-News writer
TWIN FALLS — Lynn Rose, owner of the Twin Falls Livestock Commission, is under investigation by federal authorities in connection with an Elko bank's loss of $1.4 million.

In addition, the Security Bank of Nevada has taken steps to acquire Rose's assets.

Rose confirmed that he is the subject of the investigation, but said, "There's a lot more to it than you've heard." On the advice of his attorney, he refused to comment further except to say that he is continuing to operate his business normally.

Rose's attorney, State Sen. James Rich (R-Boise), said, "Neither my client or myself have any input for the media." He warned the Times-News to "be careful what you print."

Details about the case are unclear because investigators and bankers also refused to answer questions.

Bill Jansen, an FBI agent in Las Vegas, said the FBI was involved in the case and that it involved two Twin Falls banks and a bank in Elko. He said he could not comment further because the investigation was not complete.

Phil Pro, an attorney in the U.S. Attorney's office in Reno, said his office is investigating the case. He could not comment on the ongoing investigation except to say the case is not scheduled to be presented to a grand jury. He added that he cannot be sure charges will even be filed.

Records from the Twin Falls branch of the Idaho Bank and Trust were subpoenaed by the U.S. Attorney's office in Reno, said bank manager Steve Houston. He could not comment further except to say that his bank did not lose any money in the incident.

Wayne Condon, president of Security Bank, first revealed the loss at the bank's Elko branch at a shareholders meeting in Reno on the morning of April 1. He said an "unfortunate problem" had cropped up in Elko and later added more details when questioned by shareholders.

Condon refused to speak to the Times-News, but according to newspaper reports of the stockholders meeting, Condon said that a customer at the bank's Elko branch transferred $1.4 million that he did not have in his account but in a bank in Reno.

Condon explained to his shareholders that the customer deposited checks from his accounts in Idaho banks at the Elko branch of Security Bank and then wrote checks from that account, which he deposited back in his accounts at the Idaho banks.

The checks from the Idaho banks to Security Bank were no good, Condon said. Before Security Bank discovered that the bank had loaned $1.4 million to be transferred from the customer's account in Elko to his accounts at Idaho banks.

Condon said the customer, who he described only as a long-time Security Bank customer, wrote checks assuming the money would come in from his business. But he suffered losses and was unable to cover the checks.

"This is similar to a loan that has gone bad, only this wasn't a loan," Condon said. "We're in the risk business. Sometimes the risk is more than we can handle."

The most the bank stands to lose from the incident is $400,000, because the loss can be deducted from the bank's income taxes, Condon told shareholders. Security Bank made $3 million in profit last year.

Condon said the customer was cooperating with the bank. The bank would allow the customer to pay back the loss or to acquire enough of his assets to cover the shortage. "The customer does have a lot of assets," Condon said.

decorative flowers on display at a Twin Falls business. The recent wet weather has been a blessing to Magic Valley lawns and gardens, not to mention the

Kidnap case hearing closed

HAILEY — The mother of two men sentenced Thursday on kidnapping charges was arraigned Tuesday for the same crime.

Louise C. McLinn of Kimberly, also known as Louise Doldge, was bound over to 5th District Court at the close of a three-hour preliminary hearing, which was closed to the press and the public.

Participants said assistant Blaine County Prosecutor John Luster called three witnesses during the hearings to testify about McLinn's alleged role in the kidnapping.

The defendant is tentatively scheduled to appear Friday morning before Judge Douglas Kramer to be read her rights and enter a plea.

Defense attorney Mark Russell of Ketchum said he requested the closed hearing because he feared too much detail about the substance of the charges might prejudice potential jurors and make it difficult to obtain a fair trial.

Originally, three persons were charged in the Dec. 23 attempt to kidnap Wesley Wills, 31, of Ketchum from his Warm Springs home.

McLinn's sons, Doug Doldge, 20, and Earl Doldge, 23, both formerly of Kimberly, were sentenced Thursday by Kramer to 15 years, for second degree kidnapping and five years for conspiracy to commit kidnapping. A third person, Tammy Widmer, 21, formerly of Shoshone, drew a 10- and five-year sentence, on the same charges.

During a hearing to sentence the three, Blaine County Prosecutor Keith Bank repeatedly asked the Doldge brothers to name a fourth person Roark said participated in the plot.

The two declined to answer and were cited for contempt of court by Judge Kramer, who added an additional 10 days in the county jail to their 15-year sentences.

Woodall surgery termed success

The surgery took about 90 minutes. The mayor's wife, Lucille, said the surgery took place without complications and Woodall could be released from the hospital early next week.

Woodall entered the hospital Sunday experiencing severe pain in his back, she said. He had been undergoing tests for about a week indicating he was suffering from a gall bladder ailment.

Woodall was under sedation following surgery.

Schools energy audit plan approved

By LARRY SWISHER

Times-News writer
TWIN FALLS — Energy specialists in coming weeks will look for ways to make Twin Falls school buildings more energy efficient.

The school board Monday night approved spending approximately $25,000 for the energy audit in hopes of qualifying the district for federal 50/50 matching grants that would help pay for improvements.

In other business, the board accepted a bid for construction, took under advisement a request to initiate a fluoride treatment program, and turned aside a request for additional professional leave days for teachers.

Assistant Superintendent Gary Piller said the energy audit will cover all buildings but the new O'Leary Junior High School. The high school is expected to be a key area.

The district must complete the audit and apply to the Idaho Office of Energy by June 15 to be eligible for federal monies.

Asked about the chances of gaining matching project grants, Piller noted the district is one of the largest users of energy in the area. He said the fact the grants are awarded partly on the basis of the potential energy savings works "in our favor."

A second factor used in awarding grants is the amount of time it takes for the energy savings to pay back the investment.

There is no guarantee the application will be successful, he said. But the district may be able to use the cost of the audit and a thermostat efficiency project already done at the high school to help make the grant.

Superintendent James Sawin argued the energy audit would provide information for future use of the district's plant facility fund, even if it does not receive a grant.

Three energy auditing companies submitted cost figures in the neighborhood of $25,000 to $26,000, Piller said. The board approved hiring the least expensive firm but that firm has yet to be determined until Piller checks his information.

Also, the board received bids from four companies for construction of a sports equipment storage building at the high school stadium, remodeling of the high school library-media center and fire and life safety improvements at Bickel Elementary School.

The board accepted the apparent low bid of $202,788 from Otis Hall Construction Co. of Twin Falls. The work will be done over the summer.

On behalf of Twin Falls dentists, Dr. Gary Dixon appeared and urged initiation of weekly fluoride-mouth rinses in elementary school classes to help fight tooth decay.

He said the voluntary program would be provided at no cost to the district. The Gooding, Wendell, Shoshone and Kimberly school districts operate such programs with success, he said.

Two board members said they had received telephone calls from residents with fears about the fluoride treatment.

Dixon said only large amounts of the compound would cause harm and noted the rinse solution is not swallowed.

He said people think fluoride can cause "all kinds of things," but to his knowledge none of it is true.

He said a child would have to drink a "bathtub-full" of the fluoride rinse solution to be harmed.

Two board members spoke in favor of the tooth decay prevention program, and the board took the dentist's request under advisement to gather input from the schools.

Twin Falls Education Association President Richard Laufenberg said the 250 professional leave days allotted had "run out." He noted that 30 of those days were used by staff who did not require a substitute.

The TFEA has been unsuccessfully requesting additional days from the board for months. Teachers use the leave to attend workshop, professional meetings and other functions not directed by the district.

The board directed Sawin to meet with the professional leave committee chairman to work out remaining leave needs for the rest of the year.

Permission for several staff members to attend a Special Olympics could fall under "district-directed" leave, he said.

Accident victim identity released

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls County Sheriff James Munn Tuesday identified the victim of a fatal accident near Curry as Kermit Jerome Leir, Jr., 17, of Twin Falls.

The youth was working on a car on his grandparents' farm two miles southwest of Curry about 9 p.m. Monday, according to the vehicle slipped from the jack and crushed him.

County Coroner Cloyce Edwards said the youth apparently died instantly. Edwards pronounced him dead at the scene. He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Kermit Leir of Twin Falls. His grandparents, at whose home the accident occurred, are Mr. and Mrs. W.B. Barker.

Stamps stolen

KING HILL — Thieves burglarized the U.S. Post Office here Monday night, according to Elmore County Sheriff's office.

About $35 cash and $50 in stamps was taken, officers reported, after the outside door was jimmied.

Federal and local officers, headed by Deputy George Taylor, are investigating the incident.

Wilson sticks by guns that he was shot by Filer police

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES

Times-News writer

FILER — Danny Wilson, whose arrest April 5 started a chain reaction of events including suspension of the Filer police chief, is standing firm on charges he was shot by a police officer.

The 23-year-old Wilson also charged that the investigation reinvestigation in the incident by Twin Falls police officers contained many misstatements and distortions, "appearing to be a deliberate attempt to whitewash what took place."

Wilson said he feels he is the injured party in the incident and that Filer police had no reason to stop him for questioning early on April 5, much less arrest him.

A Filer resident, Ron Stokesberry, saw Wilson running through a parking lot about 1:15 a.m. and contacted his wife by c.b. radio, asking her to notify police. Stokesberry said the individual had fallen and might be ill or in trouble and need assistance.

After a shot was fired during the arrest attempt and Wilson was arrested, he was charged with disturbing the peace, resisting arrest and destruction of property.

All charges were dropped several days later.

He said he believed the charges brought against him were false and lodged to cause excessive bail of $3,400. Wilson said the incident cost him $400 in bond fees which he cannot recover, even though the charges were dropped. He said the Twin Falls sheriff's office told his mother she would have to go through a bail bondsman to get him released.

Wilson, who works as a driver for Monarch Concrete Co., said to him $25 is not easy to come by.

Wilson also claimed he did not tell Twin Falls police that he left the Burlap Pizza restaurant at 12:45 a.m., but rather at 1:15 a.m. The report quotes him as saying 12:45 a.m., which would leave about 20 minutes between the time he left the restaurant and the time the Stokesberry report was phoned in unaccounted for.

Wilson said he stopped briefly to talk with an acquaintance as he

Wilson said he is a runner and decided to run across town to his home and see if he could get there ahead of McCoy. As he ran, he crossed Highway 30; he said, and through a parking lot and across the side street without stopping. He said a pickup truck then pulled up and he felt threatened so he continued to run but fell as he looked back and saw a police car approaching.

Wilson said "I moved out from where I fell rapidly and was turned somewhat toward the officer when he fired. I was not exactly in front of any building, but I felt the bullet graze my arm and heard it pass between my arm and ear."

Officer Ron Moore said he fired a warning shot into the air, but that this was later as he pursued Wilson across a private yard.

Wilson said he came out from under the bush where he fell with his arms over his head.

According to Wilson, Moore said, "I shot in the air, I shot in the air," and he responded, "Like Hell you did, you almost hit me in the head."

Wilson said when he was first arrested he was taken to the Stokesberry home in Filer, and there Moore asked for a couple of wet towels and attempted to wipe the dirt and blood from Wilson. Wilson said he told Moore to let him alone. At that time, he said, the officers asked if he wanted to see a doctor and again, enroute to Twin Falls, asked if he wanted to go to the hospital.

Wilson said he told them he did want to see a doctor, and officers Moore and Ron Remora stopped at Magic Valley Memorial Hospital but made him stay in the police car. He said Moore went in and brought a doctor to the emergency entrance but the doctor never attended him.

"I didn't say a word to the doctor. I just stared at him, but the officers said I had used some profanity and the doctor didn't come to the car. He told them I should be alright, but to watch me," Wilson said.

He also said he was denied the right to make a telephone call at the sheriff's office because he refused to sign the booking sheet. He said he was not especially cooperative with officers when they made him remove his clothes, searched him and gave him a pair of orange jail coveralls to wear.

Wilson said he was told by an attorney it would cost him $2,500 as a retainer and probably $4,000 to $7,000 to defend himself against the charges, so he did not employ an attorney but waited to see if the city would press charges.

Wilson said he has not decided if he will press additional charges against the city of Filer. He plans to confer further with Filer City Attorney Fred Decker.

Aryan trial set July 10

BOISE (UPI) — A Boise judge set July 10 as a tentative trial date for top members of a pro-Nazi sect who face charges of trespassing and carrying concealed weapons.

Richard Butler, leader of the northern Idaho-headquartered Church of Jesus Christ-Christian Aryan Nations, and his chief lieutenant, and two bodyguards appeared Monday before 4th District Magistrate Judge Karen Vehlow.

The four pleaded innocent May 1 to charges stemming from their scuffle-marked arrest April 26 after they refused to leave the lobby of a downtown hotel where they attempted to hold a "conversion and baptism" meeting.

At the trial-setting proceeding, Butler acted as spokesman for his followers and at times spoke in objection to remarks by the judge and the prosecutor, Assistant City Attorney Jim Siebe.

Judge Vehlow led a 10-minute discussion of when the defendant date for a trial would be, with Butler noting it took nine hours to drive from his Hayden Lake residence to Boise for each court appearance.

Siebe said the judge would give the trial two days at the most, given his experience with similar cases.

"I don't want to correct the learned attorney, but there is a tremendous volume of evidence that must be brought in," said Butler, peering across the table at Siebe.

"This is the first time the victims of a crime have been prosecuted for a crime," said the leader of the anti-Semitic group that espouses the policies of Adolf Hitler and would like to send all Jews and non-white Americans out of the country.

Butler and the other chief spokesman, Dr. Robert Mankers of Welser, are accused of trespassing at the Red Lion Inn-Downtown in Boise.

Leonard files lawsuit appeal

TWIN FALLS — George Robert Leonard Tuesday appealed a 5th District Court judgment ordering him to pay his grandmother more than $24,000.

Leonard, of Twin Falls, was ordered by Judge Theron W. Ward, to pay his grandmother, Leta V. Leonard, a total of $24,543.33, including more than $8,000 in punitive damages.

The judgment was the outcome of a case filed by Mrs. Erhardt against Leonard in which she alleged he took the money from a joint bank account and used it for his own purposes.

Leonard said testimony in the case showed the grandmother opened the account when he was 14 years of age and said him it was for his use whenever he needed it. He said no requests were made for return of the money and she never made any draws against it herself.

Leonard said at that time his grandmother was in good mental and physical condition and handling her own business affairs.

He said Judge Ward made no mention in the judgment of the 40 acres of land given to him by his grandmother. He said testimony presented in the trial showed that when a family dispute arose some years later, he gave the land back to her and it was deeded to the three sons of her first marriage.

Leonard said he feels Ward was wrong in concluding that his grandmother did not intend to give him the money in the account and that the money was hers alone. He said testimony clearly showed she asked that his name appear on the joint account and that she requested he sign the account card.

Leonard alleged it was not until some time after he had withdrawn the money in the savings account, with the understanding it was his, that his grandmother came under the control of an aunt and uncle and demanded through an attorney that it be returned. He said he refused, acting on his belief that the funds were a gift to him and he was not obligated to honor the wishes of a disgruntled branch of the family.

Leonard said this is why he is appealing to the Supreme Court. The money was his, he said, because she gave it to him.

Merl Leonard, Twin Falls County

Commissioner and father of George Robert Leonard, also took issue with the judgment, which stated he had transferred his mother's money into accounts under his own name, his wife's name and that of his mother.

The commissioner said his only connection with the case was his relationship to the plaintiff and defendant. He was not named as a defendant in the action and therefore could not understand why he had been named in the judgment.

He said he had no connections with the issues in the case and felt Ward was unfair in his statements. Merl Leonard said "a determination" or whether the grandmother intended to transfer the account to his son was in no way connected with him.

Murder trial date firm

COLUMBIA, S.C. (UPI) — Chief Justice J. Woodward Lewis has left intact the June 2 trial date for James Arthur Brown, 24, who is charged with murdering two elderly female farm-to-town missionaries in Berkeley County in December.

Circuit Judge Clyde Robinson moved the trial from Berkeley County to Spartanburg County last week, saying it was "highly unlikely" that the defendant could receive a fair hearing in the greater Charleston area. The state is seeking the death penalty against Brown.

Lewis signed an order Monday retaining the original trial date and maintaining Circuit Judge Marion King of Dillon as the presiding judge. The trial is expected to last about two weeks.

Lewis is charged with two counts of murder and one count of criminal sexual conduct in the deaths of Elizabeth Webb King, 66, of Kaysville, Utah, and Jane Ruth Teuscher, 65, of Fish Haven, in their homes were found Dec. 15 in their parked car at a Charleston County shopping center.

Petitions circulated wanting Boise River dredging denied

BOISE (UPI) — Sportsmen have begun circulating petitions asking the Idaho Land Board to deny a request by a Boise mining company to dredge the South Fork of the Boise river for gold.

The sportsmen contend dredging by O and C Mining Co., Boise, would destroy one of Idaho's best fisheries.

O and C has filed an application with the state for permission to dredge a 29-mile stretch of the South Fork between Anderson Ranch Dam and Neal Bridge.

Vern Knox, president of Fly Fishing of Idaho, said Monday dredging would disturb the habitat of aquatic insects that are the main food source for fish.

Knox's concern was shared by Herb Pollard, state fisheries manager for the Idaho Department of Fish and Game. He said the department would oppose the request.

Pollard said the area was one of the "best fisheries" in the state. He said his agency would oppose even the smallest type of dredge mining on the South Fork, citing the fact the department has a "tremendous investment of money and manpower in it."

Lloyd Owings of O and C contends, however, the dredging should improve the fishing because it will create eddies where fish can lay their eggs and the tilling reefs dredging leaves trap sediment.

Correction

The Filter School Board has not hired a new clerk-secretary and will not do so until July, board vice-chairman Harold Peterson said Tuesday.

Because of wrong information, Tuesday's Times-News incorrectly reported Helen Kovarsky, wife of new superintendent Sheldon Kovarsky, was hired. She is just one of many applicants, Peterson said.

Current Superintendent Ray Baker and his wife, Dorell, are retiring. Mrs. Baker is the current clerk-secretary.

Land developers press to populate Big Sur

By ROBERT A. JONES
©The Los Angeles Times
CARMEL, Calif. — From one huge window of his house, photographer Ansel Adams can look south toward the rugged edge of the Big Sur coast, a brooding scene of exploding surf that Adams has loved since he first came here and built his house 17 years ago. It is a view that — like much else of Big Sur — seems nearly as primitive and wild today as when man first arrived here more than a century ago. But standing at his window, Adams says the Big Sur is in trouble. "We're losing it," he says. "And every year we are going to lose it faster and faster."

After years of political dormancy, the Big Sur coast seems to be approaching its time of crisis. Long regarded as a great exception in the California shoreline, it has avoided the rush to development that has embroiled other sections of the coast. But now, Adams and others argue, the assembly of forces that long have protected the region are beginning to crumble. And Big Sur, they say, could succumb dramatically and tragically. The fears expressed by Adams and some conservation groups have also created enormous turmoil in the region itself, for many here do not share their pessimism. Unique in its sense of privacy, in its role as a haven for artists and writers, Big Sur's identity, they say, is more threatened by the prospect of a government takeover than by private development.

Undeniably, however, Big Sur is a region approaching overload. With its magnificent headlands falling to the sea, its redwood groves, its clear rivers, and its isolation, it has served for several decades as a de facto national park. Last year more than a million people made the pilgrimage down the narrow California Highway 1, about the same number who visited the official shrines at Yosemite and Yellowstone.

As its attraction has increased, so have the pressures to convert the old ranches and agricultural areas of the region to expensive home developments. View lots can command prices upwards of $100,000 and some larger parcels, if developed, could make their owners millionaires. Already, some conservationists say, the initial symptoms of the fate awaiting Big Sur have become visible along its northern end, where several clusters of homes now encroach on land that was virtually free of development a decade ago.

While most here agree that the Big Sur coast will soon face a crucial turning point — away from or toward development — Adams and the Washington-based Wilderness Society created a storm of reaction recently when they proposed that the region be officially designated as a National Scenic Area.

"Ever been an Indian on a reservation?" asks Gary Koepfel, editor of the monthly Big Sur Gazette. "The Big Sur people would be like that. As any Indian can tell you, the reservation experience is a limited experience, with a limited tenure."

Ultimately, Koepfel says, residents here fear that an all-dominant government agency zealously pursuing the environmental ethic would hound them from their land, converting Big Sur from a living community to a museum.

Thus the debate in this community of 1,500 people has been lively, at times testy. The chairman of the local Citizens Advisory Committee on planning matters — which had been perceived as tilting toward federal designation — was persuaded, recently to offer his resignation when several anti-park citizens threatened to produce various details of his private life for public scrutiny.

Eventually the tendered resignation was rejected, but Chairman Roger Jewell says, "You see the creation of imaginary villains and conspiracy theories. They do not exist, but they have converted friends and neighbors to enemies."

Even Adams, long a noted wilderness photographer and literary portraitist to President Carter, has been transformed from a local patriot to the object of occasional scorn. In one recent issue of the Big Sur Gazette, a political cartoon shows a grinning Adams with one arm around Carter and another around Smokey the Bear, and give the Big Sur coast to my fuzzy friend," Adams is saying to the president.

Likely the debate will escalate further this spring when it is expected that Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., and Rep. Leon E. Panetta, D-Carmel Valley, will introduce legislation aimed at providing some form of federal designation for the Big Sur coast.

In a telephone interview, an aide to Cranston said the protection bill will be submitted before April 25, when the Senate Subcommittee on Parks has scheduled hearings on the future of the Big Sur coast. In the coming weeks, the aide said, Cranston will hold several meetings with Panetta to discuss the possibility of introducing similar legislation in the House of Representatives.

Sandy Hilmyer, executive director of the Big Sur Foundation, concedes that the debate over Big Sur will be unusual — and unusually difficult for conservationists — because "the symptoms of decay now are minimal. The primary threat to the coast, Hilmyer says, stems from what he calls the "frightful dilemma" facing the two traditional protectors of the region: Monterey County and the California Coastal Commission.

For the last seven years the Coastal Commission has delayed much development through its authority to control building permits until the region has developed its coastal land-use plan. Once the plan is completed in 1981, however, officials will be faced with the prospect of either denying building permits permanently or allowing construction to begin.

Permitting construction will begin the degradation of the region, Hilmyer says; denying construction will force the government agencies to compensate owners for their losses. And at present both county and state officials say they have nowhere near sufficient funds to buy out the landowners.

Along the 100-mile length of the Big Sur there are an estimated 800 undeveloped parcels, ranging in size from the 7,000-acre El Sur ranch to small lots. While not all parcels would require government intervention, conservationists say many would, and the eventual price for outright purchase and scenic easements could range from $30 million to $100 million.

Some development could be curbed without payments to landowners, but coastal officials estimate that about 1,000 additional homes — or roughly double the current number — eventually would be built in the absence of compensation funds.

"It's dealing with the really big ones that are the real problem," said Leo Otter, Big Sur planner for the coastal commission. "The county will be in charge of enforcing the coastal plan, but I don't see any source for that kind of money outside the federal government."

Proposed development is not the only problem the future will bring to the coast. The estimated 2 million to 3 million visitors per year at present is expected to grow to 6 million over the next 25 years, and the narrow, two-lane Highway 1 already operates at a capacity through much of the summer.

The tourists who pour down the highway find beautiful vistas but few visitor facilities. From Malpaso Creek at the northern end of the region to Lime Kiln Creek at the south, there are at present three marked points of access to beaches and five trailheads leading to wilderness areas of surrounding Los Padres National Forest.

The result has been long conga lines of autos snaking down Highway 1 through much of the summer, frustration on the part of visitors trying to find points of exit from the highway, and increasing trespassing onto private land.

"Ambling through his 50-year-old home perched on a shoulder of the coastal hills, Jim Josoff scoffs at such claims. Molting toward a window that reveals a southern stretch of coast, Josoff says, "What you see is a coast already protected. These people shouting overdevelopment, overdevelopment?"

Three months ago Josoff founded Friends of Big Sur to organize what says is a nearly universal reluctance on the part of Big Sur residents to become part of a federal reserve. "Big Sur is a marvelous mixture of people and landscape," he says. "You have to ask yourself how long the culture of this area would last under federal management. The real issue here is whether the government has the right to wipe out a way of life."

In the Big Sur, any arrangement would be highly complex, involving the coordination of many powers divided among local, state and federal agencies. With less than a month left before the scheduled introduction of legislation in Congress, opponents of federal designation say they fear the outcome may ignore such subtleties in favor of a simple takeover by federal authorities.

Cinderella's princely kiss offended Chinese

Moviegoers in the People's Republic of China were shocked recently at a showing of Walt Disney's "Cinderella." The Prince kissed Cinderella, that did it. A kiss in public is not acceptable there. Of the films from all over the world, surely "Cinderella" is among those least likely to be tagged as morally offensive. But so it was: At one time in one place. Curious, what? Doubt they'll ever be able to show "Sleeping Beauty" over there. It would make the audience nervous to wake her up.

EARTHQUAKE

Q. Was the San Francisco earthquake of 1906 the greatest ever recorded in this country?

A. No, sir, the quake of 1811, centered at New Madrid, Mo., merits that distinction, I'm told. It covered 40,000 square miles. It knocked down chimneys within 400 miles. One area 40 miles wide and 150 miles long dropped several feet and filled up with Mississippi River water. And nearly 2,000 afterthoughts went on for months.

A. After...dogs came cattle, sheep, horses, donkeys, chickens and cats, in that order. Or so say the scholars.

A. How about the banana tree?

Athletes challenge boycott in court

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Eighteen American athletes, charging their constitutional rights have been violated, Tuesday challenged in federal court the U.S. Olympic Committee's decision to boycott the 1980 Moscow Games.

U.S. District Judge John Pratt heard arguments on the legality of the American boycott 11 days before the deadline for a final U.S. decision on whether to enter a team. Pratt said he will rule on the issue by the end of the week.

Lawyers representing the 18 athletes argued the USOC lacks power to refuse to send a team, as requested by President Carter in retaliation for the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan. However, a USOC lawyer contended the committee has full authority to accept or reject invitations to Moscow.

The 18 athletes — including two 1976 Olympic gold medal winners, a coach and a USOC official — filed suit on April 23, contending their constitutional rights were violated by the boycott.

no authority under the 1978 Amateur Sports Act to prevent U.S. participation.

On April 12, the USOC House of Delegates approved a resolution to boycott the Games unless the Soviets withdraw 100,000 troops from Afghanistan by May 20.

"I can't find anything wrong with the members of the House of Delegates agreeing with the president of the United States," committee lawyer Patrick Sullivan said. "That's not against the law."

Attorney William Allen, representing the athletes, said when Congress passed the Amateur Sports Act it "very deliberately withheld" from the committee any authority to deny athletes the right to compete in the Games.

He said the USOC is "not authorized to go beyond sports-related considerations" and it clearly "has made a political decision."

Sullivan argued the USOC's authority is vested in the International Olympic Committee's rules, not in the Amateur Sports Act.

Noting the IOC extends Olympic invitations to various countries, Sullivan said, "It's my experience in life, that when you're invited to go somewhere, you're under no obligation to go."

Sullivan said the committee was aware that without U.S. participation, the Moscow Games would lose "a great deal of their glamor."

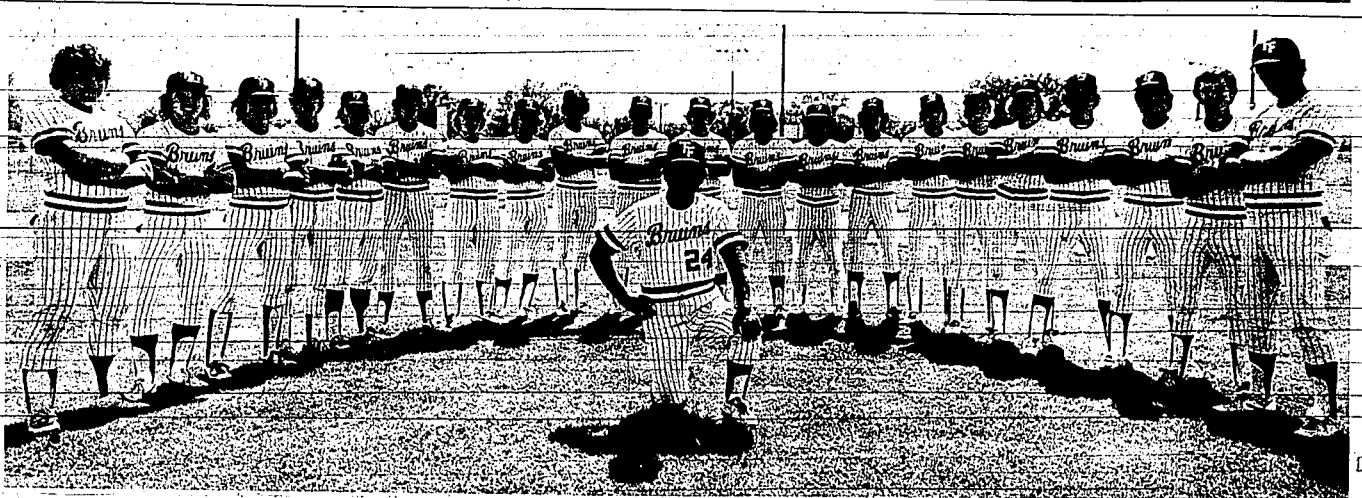

"The president of the Soviet Olympic Committee indicated that the Soviet people would be offended if we didn't come to the Olympics," Sullivan said. "That's precisely what we want to do."

Plaintiffs in the suit include 1976 gold medal winners Arnie Robinson, a long jumper, and Mac Wilkins, a discus thrower; Anita DeFrantz, a member of the women's eight-oared shell and a bronze medal winner at the 1976 Montreal Games; weightlifters Philip Grippaldi, a member of the 1976 team, Robert Giordano, Louis Mucardo and Terry Mantor; rowers Carol Brown, a bronze medal winner in 1976, Judy Geer and Jan Folschick, both 1976 team members, Carle Gee, Jan Harville, Patricia Brink, Patricia Spratlan, Charles Altirkuse, and Robert Esposeth, an alternate on the 1976 team; fencer Bruce Jugan; water polo team member Peter Schunigg; shot putler Allan Feuerbach, a member of the 1972 and 1976 teams; Robert Ernst, coach of the 1980 U.S. rowing team, and Burton Shaw, chairman of the national governing body for water polo and a member of the executive board of the Olympic Committee.

TWIN FALLS — The state A-1 invitational baseball tournament kicks off Thursday afternoon at Idaho Falls with seven teams including the Twin Falls Bruins — hoping to dethrone defending champion Lewiston.

Twin Falls (14-11) and winner of its last six games faces the unenviable task of playing Lewiston (17-12) in the tourney's opening game at 1 p.m. at Bonneville, the host school.

Skyline (8-9) meets Caldwell (19-6) at 3:30 p.m. to close out the upper bracket's first-round play. At 6 p.m. Meridian (21-9-1) faces either Highland, Blackfoot or Pocatello; after three rain-outs, Highland and Blackfoot were to play Tuesday for the right to meet Pocatello today for a chance to earn a berth in the tourney.

The first day of play concludes at 8:30 p.m., when Coeur d'Alene (16-7), which earned a trip here as an at-large qualifier, plays Bonnyville (21-2). Burley, which finished with its best record in history at 17-12, also was considered with Borah for the at-large berth.

The tournament, with a single-elimination format and consolation bracket similar to that of state basketball tournaments, continues Friday. Consolation games will be played at 1 and 3:30 p.m., and semi-finals will be contested at 6 and 8:30 p.m.

Scheduled for Saturday are the consolation title game at 10 a.m., third place at 12:30 p.m. and the championship game at 3 p.m.

Twin Falls Coach Ron Watson didn't sound at all glum Tuesday about his team's chances against Lewiston.

"We're a hot ballclub right now. The thing I'm stressing is for them to keep playing the way they played in the district," Watson said, referring to the Bruins' victories against Minico and Burley. "We want good defense with no errors, balanced hitting all the way through the lineup and the same attitude they have toward winning. It's become very contagious within the ballclub."

"We set three goals at the beginning of the season. No. 1 was a winning season. We made it interesting, but we accomplished it. The next one was to win the district tournament. And the third was to finish in the top three teams in the state. I think we can do that. The impression I get now is they have a lot of confidence in themselves as a ballclub and as individuals."

Bonneville, Lewiston and Meridian seem to be the favorites, Watson said, adding quickly: "The way we've been playing, we'd consider ourselves a favorite. The other teams may not, but we don't want to sell ourselves short."

Watson will start one of two seniors against Lewiston Thursday, either right hander Kerry Brown (4-1) or southpaw Adam Blake (6-4).

Twin Falls takes four players into the tournament who hit over .300 during the regular season. They are: Brown (.370, with one home run, three triples, six doubles, 10 stolen bases and 11 RBI); senior first baseman Greg Habel (.362, two home runs, six doubles and a team-leading 24 RBI); junior centerfielder Gary Krumm (.333, with 12 stolen bases); and junior rightfielder Lari Hovey (.304, with nine RBI).

"I'm extremely proud of this team," Watson said because of its past success: Bonneville, with the best record; and Caldwell, with two less victories than the Bruins, appear to be the tournament favorites.

Lewiston Coach Dwight Church, who's won five state titles and taken his Bengals to the state tournament for 10 consecutive years, said Tuesday his team's win about half of its games this season by coming from behind in the late innings.

"I'm not extremely proud of this team. They've shown me a lot of moxie about being able to come from behind and get the big hits when we need them," he said by phone.

Despite his team's success in recent years, Church said "I never like to assure my team a favorite in this tournament."

"I know nothing about Twin Falls and the other teams in the south. But they've got to be good teams to get to the tournament," he said.

Church will be counting for much of his offense on four players who hit more than .300 during the regular season. They are: junior outfielder Mark Michael (.380); senior third baseman Eric Rafferty (.380); junior outfielder Jim Brigham (.333); and junior second baseman Dan Steelman (.320).

Senior righthander Jim Reiner (6-2) is a probable starter against Twin Falls, Church said.

Caldwell Coach Charlie Alvaro said his team's "biggest asset" this season has been its pitching.

"Our staff's earned run average is less than two. We play good defense, but we haven't been hitting the ball as well as you would like. We get timely hits, though."

"I guess the favorites are Bonneville and Lewiston. Bonneville's only lost two games all season and they're playing at home. Lewiston hasn't had that great of a year, but they're always a good baseball school and a great tournament team."

"I think it's all going to depend on pitching," he said. "If you've got only one good pitcher, you could be in trouble. That's why I'm glad we have those three good pitchers."

Those three good pitchers, all senior righthanders, are Mark Haggerty (7-3), Marshall Coha (7-2) and Rick Ross (4-0).

"They're power pitchers, all three of them, and Marshall also relies on a lot of off-speed stuff," Alvaro said, adding Haggerty will probably open on the mound against Skyline.

Alvaro's only .300 hitter is his son Brad, a sophomore shortstop, second baseman and pitcher. He hit .353 during the regular season, belted Caldwell's only home run, and leads the club in doubles, triples and RBI.

"We're not an overpowering club as far as hitting the ball," the coach said, "but we've managed to hit when we had to."

Bonneville Coach Bob Whitney, asked how his team's season has gone, answered with little hesitation.

"What can you say about a 21-2 season? It's been great. They're probably more consistent than any team I've coached here in 11 years. We've got excellent pitching, good team speed, good defense and a good nucleus of seniors," he said Tuesday.

"Any shortcomings?"

"The only thing lacking is I don't think we've played as tough a schedule as some of the teams in the Boise valley or those up north," he said.

Whitney will be depending on the hitting of senior catcher Glen Storer (.430), senior shortstop and pitcher Richie Webb (.397) and a team-leading four home runs, and senior third baseman and pitcher Darrell Freter (.385 and a 5-0 record). Junior southpaw Jeff Drake is also 5-0, while junior righthander Scott Widdison (4-0) and senior southpaw Ben Bullen (4-2) round out the staff.

"I will be satisfied with nothing less than the state championship," Whitney said. "This is my last chance. I'm quitting as coach. I'll still teach here but I want to devote a lot of time to private business. I'm a commercial artist."

Asked who he thought the tournament favorites were, the coach replied: "Lewiston has won 23 state championships and they're a tournament ball club. They've got to be the favorite coming in, every year. And Meridian is definitely a contender. We've beaten them three times this season in as many games. But we've been lucky to have done that."

Lakers, 76ers collide tonight

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (UPI) — Throughout the regular season, when the Los Angeles Lakers dominated the backboards they also dominated the game en route to the second best record in the league.

In the first two rounds of the playoffs, the trend continued. In five games against Phoenix, Los Angeles was outrebounded just once, and that game was the Suns' lone victory. Against defending champion Seattle, the Lakers were again outrebounded in just one game, and that was the SuperSonics' lone win of that five-game series.

They came the Philadelphia 76ers in the championship series, and Los Angeles, the second-best rebounding team in the NBA during the regular season, has continued its awesome rebounding display, taking a huge 200-145 edge through the first four games.

But, the series is tied at two games each entering the fifth game, and no one seems to have an explanation.

"We've outrebounded them every game," Los Angeles Coach Paul Westhead said during a Lakers workout Tuesday. "And we're still even in games. It's a startling figure. I just don't have an answer. I'm extremely pleased that our energy level is so high and I don't think we

"I haven't had a clean shot in the series," he said.

"I can't be effective when they're holding my arms," Abdul-Jabbar said after Sunday's 105-102 loss in Philadelphia, which evened the series at two wins apiece. "The rules say a player should be allowed to move without being impeded."

"Sooner or later, it will have to turn against us. We can't keep getting outrebounded and expect to win."

A-2 track Jerome Tigers top contender

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News sports writer

BOISE — Every year the state A-2 track meet means one thing. The Jerome Tiger boys will be battling someone — for the championship. It's no different this time around and Coach Jim Dunne points squarely at the Knights of Bishop Kelly as the team his Tigers must beat.

The Jerome girls, without the strength of a year ago, should again make a run at their division title. They go largely on the first-place point strength of Karen Sobotka in the sprints, and Julie Hills in the weights and relays. As usual, the Jerome girls should garner some distance points but not by the handouts they are used to.

The A-2 meet opens Friday at Boise State University.

The darling point of Jerome's preeminence in state A-2 track circles is that Dunne — and Karl Kleinkopf, before him — have battled for the state crown year after year without a splinter.

around.

"The other glaring point is that Jerome plucks distance runners out of grades every year, a seemingly endless succession of the state's best. And there's no difference there, either."

Unless someone comes wandering out of the far north district, the Tigers could well expect to take three places out of the 3200-meter run Friday evening. The eastern Idaho districts didn't break 10 minutes, in fact the fifth district barely broke 11. Jerome had Gerry Leininger, sophomore Robin Mein and junior Jim McKeen all under 9:20.

"Getting McKeen in on qualifying time) was very important to us," Dunne says. "We're going to need every point we can get against Kelly."

The teams that even if his Tigers can romp one-two-three in the 3200, that 24 points will mark a pinnacle. After that it will be a fight.

France to attend games

PARIS (UPI) — France confirmed Tuesday it would take part in the Moscow Olympics, putting pressure on West Germany to back its Common Market partner instead of supporting the U.S. boycott.

The vote by the French Olympic Committee was 22-0 for going to the Games with one abstention, Olympic Committee President Claude Collard said at the end of a six-hour meeting. The committee had previously officially accepted the Soviet Union's invitation and Tuesday's vote was simply not to rescind its original decision.

The College of Southern Idaho's regional track champions will compete Thursday through Saturday in the national junior college meet at San Angelo, Texas

Regional champs head to nationals

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News sports writer

TWIN FALLS — The number for the week is 21.

That's the number of points College of Southern Idaho boys ran up last year in the national-junior-college-track-and-field-finals and Coach Karl Kleinkopf says that will be the target when his six-man team competes in San Angelo, Texas, Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

The five-girl CSI team doesn't have an established quota but hopes to start building one.

Kleinkopf and 10 of his competitors left school in Twin Falls early today for Los Angeles. Brian Silvester, a Filer product who qualified in the discus, left Tuesday to represent the Eagles at the final scratch meeting this afternoon.

"Last year we felt we could logically shoot for 35 points," Kleinkopf recalls. "But after we got down there we found the competition was a lot tougher than the times that had been posted. So I guess the way to do it is to pick out the number you think you can get to and divide by two."

The coach planned on making just two scratches. He instructed Silvester "to take fresh Michelle Durkin out of the long jump, and scratch Pete Ellefson from the 5,000-meter run."

"We are asking Michelle to do a lot of things down there," the coach said of the Montana freshman. "She'll have preliminaries in both hurdles and run on both relay teams. She'll be running more than anyone down there."

"We're taking Pete out of the 5,000 because he'd have to run preliminaries in the 1,000 and the 10,000. The 10,000 is his best race and this way he can concentrate and go all out for it."

Kleinkopf added he was leaving Henry Carvajal and Hernando Hernandez in double distances for two reasons.

"First, the agenda works pretty well for them. Henry runs the steeplechase about three in the afternoon and the 5,000 preliminary is about 8 p.m. The same is true for Hernando. (In the 1,500 and 5,000.) They'll have about four hours of recovery time. Plus the preliminaries are Thursday and they won't be required to run again until Saturday."

"But the big reason we're leaving them in the double to their best events are first. They can do what they have to do in the steeplechase and the 1,500 and if that takes too much out of them, they can ease up a little in the 5,000," he added. "I talked to my brother down there yesterday and he said the temperature was 88 with 98 percent humidity. Just ugly. With the second half of the guys' double later in the evening, we're hopeful it might have cooled off a little for them."

Rounding out the distance corps, which figures to be CSI's best bet for big points, is Glenns Ferry grad Chris Black. Black clipped a 3:51.5 in the 1,500 in regionals last week in placing third.

From the national performance letter, Stripes-and-Bars, which is supposed to combine all the best times and distances for junior college athletes, Black and Hernandez know exactly where the competition is. Two Lane College runners relegated them to third and fourth last week at 3:49 and 3:50. Black and Hernandez finished that with identical 3:51.5s and those currently are the best four times in the nation.

"That's based on performances through May 4," Kleinkopf hastens to point out. "The latest Stripes and Bars doesn't include any regionals so I'm sure we'll see considerable improvement from other parts of the country."

Glenn Barnes will represent CSI in the 200-meter dash and the high hurdles, with emphasis on the highs.

"Glenn has a 14.19-handheld-in-the-highs and a 14.25 on the other. That compares with a 13.9 and a 14.1," Kleinkopf said. "I tend to believe that 13.9 because we saw some of that type of hurdling at nationals last year. We're hopeful that Glenn can be third or better but he's going to have a lot of competition."

Laurie Larsen, the other Montana freshman, came to CSI a year too late. She threw the javelin 142-4 last week in regionals and placed fourth. Last year that performance would have won nationals.

But like Hernandez and Black, Larsen knows the competition well. The top-four female javelin throwers in the country come from this region.

The other girls making the trip will be Durkin, Susan Sweet, Carolyn Veloz and Diane Dolzal.

Sweet will run in the quartermile, feeling that a 5:5.5 is not beyond her reach but for a mental barrier.

Dolzal and Durkin will run in both hurdles, Dolzal having placed seventh in the 100-meter finals a year ago—and looking to improve on that showing. Both Dolzal and Durkin have been about 65 in the intermediates which could be good enough to place but is a couple of seconds off the national bests.

The four girls, excluding Larsen, will form the 400 and 1,600-meter relay teams.

"I don't know about our chances in the 400," Kleinkopf says. "There generally are some pretty fine quartermile relay teams there. To place in the 100 the girls will have to go under four minutes. The best they've run this year is 4:03.9 but I think with this being nationals the adrenalin will be flowing and they could break four minutes."

White Sox option Chappas to minors

MILWAUKEE (UPI) — Harry Chappas, who just 15 months ago adorned the cover of a national sports magazine and was billed as the "Chicago shortstop of the future," Tuesday was sent down to the minor leagues by the White Sox.

Chappas, the switch-hitting 5-foot-3 second-year player, was demoted to the Iowa Oaks of the American Association after the White Sox activated right-handed pitcher Francisco Briceo.

Chappas, 22, was the cover boy of Sports Illustrated magazine before the start of spring training, 1979, but was shipped to the minors after a slow start. He returned late in the season and wound up hitting .288.

This season, Chappas was the No. 1 utility infielder but was batting only .172 with no homers and one RBI.

"Of course, he was disappointed, who wouldn't be?" said Chicago manager Tony LaRussa, who informed Chappas of the decision shortly before the start of the Sox' road game at Milwaukee.

LaRussa said he had been pleased with Chappas' performance in 1979, going down is no reflection on the job he was doing," LaRussa said. "He just got caught in one of those difficult situations."

LaRussa was referring to the fact Chappas had an option left, which would enable Chicago to recall him without having to place him on waivers. Chicago's other utility infielder, Kevin Bell, who was batting .191 in Bell, had exhausted his options. Bell probably would have been lost to Toronto if he had been sent to the minors.

"Maybe in two or three years, the situation will reverse itself for Harry and he'll be the one without any options left," LaRussa said. "Look at Rusty Kuntz. He was batting .288 when we sent him down. It's just too bad we don't have a 26 or 27 man roster."

The decision to send down Chappas came after White Sox Vice President Roland Hemond spent most of the afternoon in Milwaukee talking with other major league teams about a possible trade that would have made sending down a player unnecessary. However, Hemond was reportedly frustrated in his attempts to make a trade because of the pending major league baseball strike.

"Everyone was saying that they were interested but when the strike nearing May 22, everyone was just saying they want to wait and see what happens," said a Sox official.

Jerome Tigers rate as one of favorites in state A-2 meet

Jerome didn't win a field event in district last week, the Buhl Indians hogging them all in a precedent-setting showing for that school.

But Bruce Wallin could come back without a lot of trouble to score well in the high jump. He'll try to succeed in the high jump field will be Buhl candidate for the A-2, Jerome's own.

"Spencer is a great talent," Buss said, "and he is confident that he will either play for the Lakers or for another NBA team."

Buss said he would decide this summer if Haywood would play in Los Angeles.

CHICAGO BULLS general manager Rod Thorn will not become the head coach of the NBA's newest franchise, the Dallas Mavericks.

time for all U.S. prep girls at least once this year in the halfmille, Bonners Ferry sends three-time halfmille champion Woods. She's been clipping 2:20 and that's out of a high finish in the half.

Jerome should get points in relays.

Robin McDevitt of Buhl could score in both the mile and two-mile, having won both district crowns.

And then there's Elsie McDevitt of Buhl. Either she's a big contender for both hurdle championships or she's in Magie Valley Memorial hospital.

But the Buhl senior was in school Monday and Tuesday and working out afterward, feeling good and running well enough to defend the appendix stay program. It adds up to state medals for Hellwig.

Another Indian trying to reclaim a state title is Dennis Baxter. He won the halfmille as a sophomore but was trimmed last year. The youngster has had trouble with allergies that have impaired his breathing this spring. All he asks, however, is for open air passages the final 200 meters Saturday.

While the girls' division, Sobotka is back in the 100 and 200-meter dashes for Jerome. In excellent hands, Hill has the dominating discus throw among A-2 girls at 138 feet. Her 35-foot shotput of last week, however, leaves her in range of three girls from across the state.

And then there's Elsie McDevitt of Buhl. She's been clipping 2:20 and that's out of a high finish in the half.

Jerome should get points in relays.

Robin McDevitt of Buhl could score in both the mile and two-mile, having won both district crowns.

And then there's Elsie McDevitt of Buhl. Either she's a big contender for both hurdle championships or she's in Magie Valley Memorial hospital.

(Hellwig, who missed a chance at state honors last spring due to mononucleosis, almost missed district due to an apparent appendix flareup. She left the hospital to win both district titles — qualifying her for state — but was in pain after the intermediates.

But the Buhl senior was in school Monday and Tuesday and working out afterward, feeling good and running well enough to defend the appendix stay program. It adds up to state medals for Hellwig.

Hagler, Geraldo set for middleweight bout

By United Press International
Power-punching Marvin Hagler, eyeing another shot at the middleweight crown later this year, takes on veteran Marcos Geraldo Saturday in a 10-round bout at Las Vegas, Nev.

Hagler has been tentatively offered a title fight in September against the winner of the upcoming Alan Minter-Vito Antuoferno bout. Hagler battled then-champion Antuoferno to a bloody and controversial 16-round draw last November. Antuoferno lost his title to Minter earlier this year. Hagler, speaking at a news conference Tuesday, said he hoped his fight with Geraldo isn't over too quickly. The bald-headed southpaw scored back-to-back second-round knockouts earlier this year over Loucif Hanani and Bobby Watts. Both fights were in Portland, Me.

SOVIET FLYWEIGHT Alex-ander Sentshin set a world record in the 52-kg class Tuesday when he jerked 142.5 kilograms (314 pounds) at the USSR weightlifting championships in Moscow, Tass news agency reported.

Sentshin bettered the previous record of 142 kg (313 pounds) held by his countryman, Olympic champion Alexander Voronin, by 0.5 kg (1 pound).

THE BOSTON RED SOX and Detroit Tigers agreed Tuesday to restructure a trade involving veteran hurler Jack Billingham and minor league outfielder Sam Bowen.

The two teams Monday had announced a deal sending the 37-year-old Billingham to Boston for Bowen and another player. But Bowen has missed most of the International League season with a hamstring pull and re-injured the muscle in a Monday afternoon workout.

The teams agreed that Billingham would join the Red Sox as planned today and that Boston would in turn send one or more players to Detroit by Nov. 11, 1980.

BOSTON CELTICS trainer Ray Melchiorre and assistant coach K.C. Jones will receive full playoff shares amounting to about $14,000 each, team owner Harry Mangurian said Tuesday.

The Celtics players, in divvying up their $175,000 in playoff money, voted just one-half share to Melchiorre. At first, the players voted to give Melchiorre nothing but relented to give him the one-half share.

Jones apparently wound up with a half share after the players asked Mangurian if he would match the amount. When Mangurian said he would, the players backed off, leaving Jones with only the half share.

AN OBT-INJURED veteran stole the show Tuesday at the Baltimore Colts' camp for rookies and free agents.

Quarterback Bert Jones alternated plays with free agent Matt Reed of Grambling and showed little sign of the shoulder injury that kept him on the bench for 25 of the Colts' last 32 games. Jones threw short and long, and said later he felt only a little pain.

DON CHERRY knew little more Tuesday about his future as coach of the Colorado Rockies than he did more than a month ago when rumors of his possible firing by team president Armand Pohán first began.

"I haven't heard anything new from anybody," said a frustrated Cherry. "I've just been answering about 400 phone calls."

Cherry said Pohán asked him to be around Monday for possible discussions about his future, but Pohán never called.

Golden Eagles receive player commitments

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News sports writer
TWIN FALLS — A lot of scoring but not much height has been rounded up in Idaho by College of Southern Idaho basketball coach Dave Campbell. Campbell, who has offered aid to eight Idahoans, can count several in the fold, including Magic Valley's leading scorer the past two years, Marc Perron of Dietrich.

State A-1 champion Boise is sending two starters to the Eagles, headed by C-G John Swanson, who is following his brother Steve to CSI, and point guard Mark Owens, a 5-11 general and sharpshooter. Steve played for the Eagles under Jerry Hale.

Coach Campbell has received assurances from Troy Stone of Homedale that he'll be here. Stone is another smaller guard, about 5-9, and scored 1,869 points in three years for Coach Gary Matlock. Another small guard, 5-10 Eric Eastman of Mountain Home, will attend CSI.

The coach added he also is hoping that Burley's Jeff Wright and Stewart Koba of Caldwell will join the Eagles. "As you can see this isn't a very tall bunch of boys," the coach said. "Swanson is the biggest at 6-6 and we think that he will help us. He goes to the boards very well."

"I like to have guards," the coach answered the obvious question. "While these boys aren't very big, they all handle the ball pretty well, have good quickness and I think they are all excellent shooters."

Campbell added he is pushing recruitment for tall, inside players and anticipates visits from a 6-10 player and a couple in the 6-7 area in the near future. He declined to mention any names. However, he did say that CSI had signed a 6-3 swing man, capable of playing everything from point guard to quick forward.

"I am hopeful of wrapping the bulk of the recruiting up within the next two weeks," Campbell said.

Indy 500

Sneva hits wall in practice run

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — Rookie Jan Sneva led on the first lap Tuesday on his first practice run for this year's Indianapolis 500, seriously hurting his chances to qualify for the race.

Sneva, younger brother of Tom and Jerry Sneva, took car No. 77 out in practice. He lost control of the car going into the second turn and slid 120 feet into the grass. He slid another 100 feet, then did a one-half spin into the outside wall. The car eventually stopped 140 feet further down the track.

Sneva, 25, Spokane, Wash., was unhurt. The left side of the car suffered some damage.

The crash was the eighth since the Indianapolis Motor Speedway opened and the sixth involving a rookie. The other rookies involved in crashes this month were Tony Bettenhausen, Frank Weiskamp, Danny Sarno, Danny Carter and Tim Richmond.

Three rookies passed driving examinations in preparation for the May 25 race — Gordon Smiley, Rich Vogler and Ron Shuman.

Shuman was hardly the picture of confidence getting out of his car, a Penske-Cosworth entered by Gary Stanton.

"We're going to have to borrow a motor from someone," Shuman said after his run. "This one is losing 25 miles per hour on the straightaways. They say Rutherford was running 206 on the straightaways, we're running 181. That's 25 miles."

Shuman said the present motor was insufficient to run the times his team wanted during qualification.

"It's fine for the boost run here two years ago," Shuman said, "but now the 32-inch tires to 48 inches it's got to be altered. So we've got to borrow a motor to run in and to qualify in while someone rebuilds this one. If we can't rebuild it I'd say we're out of the show."

A handful of other drivers hit the track for the first time during the day. Tom Frantz, Smiley, rookie John Wood and Bob Harkley.

Most of the driving was conducted by drivers who were unable to get their cars qualified last weekend. Among that group were Sheldon Kinsler, Bill Alsip, Howdy Holmes, Phil Calliva, Dick Stimon, Tom Bigelow and Joe Saldano.

Saldano probably spoke for the entire group when he detailed his group's goal.

"We're aiming toward 185 miles an hour," he said. "We figure that will keep us in the field."

Janet Guthrie was still trying to get her car back on the track after making a qualification attempt last weekend, in which three laps were counted at 184-plus mph.

"We looking for 185," Guthrie said. "Our crew clocked us at 185 during the weekend. That will keep us in the show."

Top speeds were turned in by drivers who qualified in the first weekend of time trials. Rick Mears, who is sitting in position No. 6 with a qualifying speed of 187.490, turned in a 185-plus lap. Tom Sneva, who qualified tentatively in the middle of the fifth row with a speed of 185.290 mph, was clocked at 181.635 mph.

Baseball talks to resume between players, owners

NEW YORK (UPI) — The 26 major league owners Tuesday made a new proposal covering key issues in their labor dispute with the Major League Baseball Players Association.

Marvin Miller, Executive Director of the association, requested time to study the owners' new offer before resuming negotiations in the volatile situation that could erupt into a May 23 strike.

Ray Grebey, director of the Major League Player Relations Committee, declined to reveal the nature of the owners' proposal after the factions met for two hours. He indicated, however, that talks would resume today.

Merit Stands Alone.

Research underscores MERIT as proven taste alternative to high tar smoking.

One low tar cigarette offers proof—not claims—that there is a satisfying alternative to high tar smoking. That alternative: MERIT.

MERIT Taste Key To Success.

Latest smoker studies provide documented evidence in key areas of taste, ease of switch and ability to satisfy long term.

Blind Taste Tests: In tests where brand identity was concealed, a significant majority of smokers rated the taste of low tar MERIT as good as—or better than—leading high tar brands. Even cigarettes having twice the tar!

Smoker Preference: Among the 95% of smokers stating a preference, the MERIT low tar/good taste combination was favored 3 to 1 over high tar leaders when tar levels were revealed!

Long-Term Satisfaction: In the latest survey of former high tar smokers who have switched to MERIT, 9 out of 10 reported they continue to enjoy smoking, are glad they switched, and report MERIT is the best-tasting low tar they've ever tried!

MERIT is the proven alternative to high tar smoking. And you can taste it.
