

TFEA declares impasse in contract talks

By LARRY SWISHER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — An impasse was declared in teacher contract talks Thursday night by the Twin Falls Education Association's negotiating team.

If the TFEA notifies the school board's team in writing within five days, the contract talks could be thrown into mediation.

If mediation fails, the next step could be a strike.

The teachers' team declared an impasse because the latest salary offer from the district was inadequate, according to TFEA chief negotiator Al Ware.

Ware said he plans to give written notification of the impasse declaration today or early next week. He said the letter would not be sent only if teachers receive "some indication either from the board or the board's team that they see a need for us to sit down and talk further."

Superintendent James Savin, speaking for the school board's team, last Thursday night accused the TFEA's team of not negotiating in good faith and of a lack of concern for the district's financial position.

Ware said, "We will not tolerate his accusing us; he is a hypocrite and a liar."

"We're still ready to sit at the table," Savin said, but he added "to the board it appears they have no intention of settling and are going for the impasse regardless."

He charged the TFEA has not moved from its initial demand for a 3-by-5 percent step-pay schedule, indicating a lack of "good faith."

"The board's latest salary offer is for an $11,000 base and a 2.8 percent-by-$50 step-pay schedule that would increase teacher pay between 11.4 and 15 percent, Savin said. He said that offer would amount to the largest salary increase in the district's history.

Ware refuted Savin's claim, citing a 12.7 percent average raise about four years ago and that "the district has more money available than it has ever had."

"His calculations and mine do not work on the same wave length," Ware said. The teacher negotiator said the latest offer would range from 11.4 percent down to 9.9 percent increase.

Ware said that is less than the board's initial proposal by a total of $70,000. The TFEA's team asked for an $11,475 base plus the 3-by-5 "index," and the board's team indicated theirs was their final offer, Ware said.

Ware said more than 80 percent of the teachers responded to a series of telephone questions and that 93 percent of those told the TFEA team "to hold the line" on the 3-by-5 index. Ware said 88.7 percent directed the team to declare an impasse if the board's team would not accept.

"To raise that kind of money," Savin said, "and give similar raises to other employees, without a doubt shows a complete lack of concern or responsibility for this district and its financial position one year from now."

He said for the board to go any higher would put the district in the same position as 1977, when it experienced a large deficit.

Ware said the district "would not be in jeopardy" if it would use its general fund equipment and desks for new classrooms. He said those expenses should be paid out of a $1.9 million plant facility fund.

Promises aid for victims

Carter tours volcano area

SPOKANE, Wash. (UPI) — President Carter took a helicopter tour through clouds and drizzle to view the volcanic devastation within two miles of the still-smoking Mount St. Helens crater Thursday, then flew to Spokane to discuss the massive ash fallout that paralyzed Eastern Washington.

"The moon looks like a golf course compared to what's up there," the president said after flying over the volcano for an hour. "The devastation is much greater than I had ever dreamed."

During the day, searchers recovered the first four bodies of victims of Sunday's "gigantic" explosion, which blew off the top of the mountain.

The confirmed death toll now stands at 19. Another 77 are listed as missing. The president rode in a flotilla of nine large Huey and Chinook helicopters which passed close over the cratered slopes pock-marked with small craters, huge mudslides, deep ash and giant blocks of melting ice.

Just hours before his tour, three small earthquakes — the largest measuring 3.1 on the Richter scale — shook the mountain, and scientists said there apparently was some movement of molten rock deep underground Wednesday night.

Carter also stopped briefly at an evacuation center in Longview, Wash., where residents of the mountain's base were taken because of possible flood danger. The 50,000 residents of Longview and Kelso were themselves placed on evacuation alert for a time earlier in the week because of flood warnings.

Carter met with a number of local eastern Washington officials to get their assessment of the fallout damage and talk to them about federal aid. The president said there will "undoubtedly be some damage to agriculture," but he said rainfall overnight has alleviated conditions somewhat.

Carter also had words of praise for citizens of the Northwest in their handling of the situation.

"There has been a remarkable absence of panic," Carter said. "I want to congratulate people here for that attitude."

The Sunday blast which tore 1,300 feet off the volcano exploded with a force of 10 megatons, according to scientists, 500 times as powerful as the atomic blast which devastated Hiroshima, Japan, in 1945. They said that since then, the cumulative release of energy has been 10 to 100 times that much.

Carter's large Huey helicopter approached closer to the crater than he expected, but a snowstorm kept him from getting even nearer.

"We got up where the ash flow was probably several hundred feet deep with tremendous icebergs still there, melting rapidly and putting off steam," Carter said after landing at Kelso, 40 miles from the volcano.

"The deposits of ash were collapsing in the enormous craters as the ice melted underneath."

"It's an unbelievable sight. There is nothing like this in the world."

"The mountain is completely devastated," the president said. "You can't see where the ground was

Emergency status granted ash-filled North Idaho area

SPOKANE (UPI) — President Carter Thursday issued a declaration of emergency status for ash-covered Northern Idaho, making that area eligible for federal emergency relief funds and assistance.

Idaho Gov. John Evans said he was "very pleased" with the declaration and the promise of direct attention from John Macy, head of the Federal Emergency Management Agency who traveled here with the president.

Evans made the pitch for emergency designation in a meeting with the president and eastern Washington officials and farmers Thursday who expressed concern over the devastating, long-term effect of the remains of Mt. St. Helens' eruption last Sunday that spread ashes over a 300-mile area, including northern Idaho.

President Carter okayed the designation on the spot, reminding Evans that he would need the formal request in writing to set the paperwork in motion.

Afterwards, Evans assessed the possibilities.

"We don't anticipate a long-term effect on livestock or agriculture in Idaho. We seem to be far enough along in the growing season. The big problem will be the harvest. When we try to move it out of that ash its going to be the worst."

"If there are severe losses, there's hope there, too," Secretary (Bob) Berglund said that he would assess as we move into this disaster implementation."

Election delay authority approved

COEUR D'ALENE, Idaho (UPI) — Gov. John Evans said Thursday he would sign a proclamation Friday morning giving the secretary of State authority to allow voter registration through primary election day Tuesday.

The governor said county registrars would be instructed to accept regular registration and absentee ballots postmarked prior to 8 p.m. election day.

State disaster personnel, Thursday morning advised Evans the volcanic ash situation in northern Idaho was not serious enough to force postponement of the election, but there should be some allowance for late registrations.

After touring Washington state with President Carter, the governor announced he would follow the advice.

Ash vacuum sparks council protest

COEUR D'ALENE, Idaho (UPI) — A Coeur d'Alene city councilman blasted his colleagues Thursday for voting to buy a $100,000 vacuum street cleaner to help clean up the ash from volcanic Mount St. Helens.

Councilman Spike Dinton said the four council members who approved the purchase were taking advantage of the ash problem to buy a piece of equipment that "is not really needed."

The vote Wednesday night was 4-2 in favor of the purchase.

EPA says volcano violates air quality

YAKIMA, Wash. (UPI) — The Environmental Protection Agency is not happy with Mount St. Helens. It is violating federal pollution standards.

The National Weather Service issued a whimsical statement declaring Sunday's eruption of Mount St. Helens "illegal."

"Environmental scientists have been studying the discharge from Mount St. Helens in southwestern Washington and have found that it fails to meet any of the federal pollution standards," the bulletin said.

"Therefore, EPA has banned any further eruptions."

Post office warns against mailing ash

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The Postal Service has warned people in the Northwest who mail volcanic ash from Mount St. Helens to make sure it is wrapped tightly.

"Many people are putting the ash in ordinary envelopes and spilled dust is fouling up mail-sorting machines, not to mention postal workers' hands and clothes," Western regional Postmaster J.F. Morris said Wednesday.

"The ash should be treated as though it were a precious gift or glassware," he said. "It must be packed in sift-proof containers."

The youth announced to his classmates that he would demand a fee for additional samples.

Boise lad makes bundle selling ash

BOISE (UPI) — Boise fifth-grader Billy Bliktfeldt happened to be in eastern Washington when Mount St. Helens erupted Sunday, and he hopes to make a little money off the disaster.

Returning to school Wednesday, Bliktfeldt handed out tiny, bagged samples of volcanic ash to his classmates, who had not seen any of the grit because the cloud of ash missed Boise.

Bliktfeldt and his mother were visiting relatives at Zillah, Wash., during the eruption, and they collected ash on a sheet.

Red Cross lists information number

OLYMPIA, Wash. (UPI) — The Red Cross has set up two telephone numbers to handle all inquiries about persons missing or displaced by the Mount St. Helens eruption.

The numbers are: (206) 736-0209 or (206) 736-0214.

Anderson tells Idahoans: 'Sign my petition'

BOISE (UPI) — Independent presidential candidate John Anderson Thursday officially launched a petition drive in Idaho to gain a place on the state's general election ballot.

Anderson said he considers the race in the Gem State an "uphill battle."

Arriving in Boise by plane from Los Angeles, Anderson later told reporters at a news conference that he was not concerned with gaining votes in Idaho's primary election Tuesday, noting that he has been unable to remove his name from the Republican primary ballot.

He said, however, he would not be displeased if Idahoans showed support for his independent candidacy by voting for him on the Republican ballot, but said he could "not retreat from the position I've taken" as an independent and, therefore, discouraged voters from casting ballots for him.

"We are no longer concerned with the primary," Anderson said. "We are concerned with obtaining 10,322 signatures of Idaho voters by the June 24 deadline so we can have a place on the November ballot."

Anderson said he was aware the state is considered a bastion of support for Ronald Reagan. He said, however, that he believes his candidacy offers voters a "reasonable choice" between President Carter's economic policies, "that have led us to the brink of economic chaos," and Reagan's stands, "that are out of another era and not suitable for the issues in the '80s."

U.S. reaffirms treaty N. Korea warned to shun aggression

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The State Department warned communist North Korea Thursday America will "react strongly" if the Pyongyang government tries any attempt to exploit the massive unrest in South Korea.

At the same time, the Pentagon announced that the United States agrees to free some South Korean troops from the joint U.S.-Korean command so they can help Seoul's military government control demonstrations.

Defense officials also said the United States has sent two E-3A aircraft reconfigured Boeing 707s to Okinawa as a precautionary move.

The E-3A is an electronic warfare-ground radar airborne command post.

Both the State Department and the Pentagon said there is no sign so far that North Korea will try to take advantage of the situation.

But State Department spokesman Holding Carter said the administration felt a warning was needed nevertheless because of North Korea's past actions and continuing desire to dominate South Korea.

The United States, which has 40,000 troops in South Korea, is committed by treaty to help if the Koreans are attacked.

"Given the circumstances, there is always the possibility of miscalculation by those who have shown in the past a readiness to exploit tensions," Carter said, recalling the North Korean attack on the south 30 years ago.

Talks open to end Korean rioting... A2

"I am simply saying that given the realities of history, it is useful to continually make sure that this miscalculation does not occur again," he said.

"And the reality also is that North Korea remains committed to a renegadeist (evangel) stemming from defeat) policy, and as long as that is the policy of a neighbor, it is worthwhile to remind that neighbor that it will not be allowed."

In a formal statement, the department said, "We reiterate that the U.S. government will react strongly in accordance with its treaty obligations to any external attempt to exploit the situation in the Republic of Korea."

Carter declined comment on reports from the South Korean government-controlled press that the demonstrations were caused in part by infiltrators from the north.

Rioters in captured armed cars hold Kwanju, Korea

Talks begin on Korean riots

SEOUL, South Korea (UPI) — Martial law authorities Thursday agreed to meet some demands made by rioters in the provincial capital of Kwangju and leaders of the bloody five-day-old insurrection called on their followers to abide by a truce, reports from the city said.

Kwangju, Korea's fourth largest city with 800,000 residents, was relatively quiet for the first time since Sunday, when riotous clashes broke out between the army and about 200,000 demonstrators demanding an end to martial law and greater freedoms.

Korea in 20 years and the toll was unofficially estimated at between 60 and 100 dead.

A group of 15 representatives from Kwangju city proposed a seven-point plan for a settlement and a cease-fire between the army and the demonstrators, whose chief demands included the lifting of martial law, the resignation of military strongman Lt. Gen. Chun Doo-hwan and the release of opposition leader Kim Dae-jung, arrested last week along with a number of other dissidents.

It was not clear what demands the government conceded but it appeared that it had offered to meet several lesser ones, including assurances that the military would not retaliate against the demonstrators once order had been restored.

For their part, the student leaders of the demonstrations appealed to their followers to lay down their captured arms and respect a truce to avoid further bloodshed.

It was the worst violence in South Korea since a nationwide student uprising toppled the government of Syngman Rhee in April 1960.

Newly appointed Premier Park Chung-hee made a quick inspection tour of the outskirts of the city and said the army had been withdrawn from the downtown sector to avoid clashes with the demonstrators who during the height of the fighting stormed several armories and captured guns and armored vehicles.

In a nationally broadcast speech, Park blamed "impure elements" for triggering the riots and pledged that the government would live up to a democratization timetable calling for constitutional changes by the end of the year and an election the following spring.

Credit rules eased

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Federal Reserve Board Thursday substantially eased the tough credit controls the administration imposed three months ago to bring runaway inflation under control.

Essentially, the nation's central bank cut the impact of the March 4 controls in half.

The Federal Reserve axed the reserve requirement that applies to issuers of consumer credit from 15 percent to 7.5 percent.

That means creditors — including the major credit card companies — will only have to set aside $7.50 for every $100 in credit they issue, instead of the $15 required under the March regulations.

The Federal Reserve said improved economic conditions — tumbling interest rates and a drop in consumer loans — led to the partial dismantling of the credit controls.

The board said it will continue its basic monetary policy designed to keep the growth in bank loans between 6 percent and 7 percent.

President Carter called the action "appropriate," and expressed hope that banks will act promptly to pass on the benefit to their loan customers.

In a statement issued at the White House, Carter said the actions "will help to assure greater availability of funds for lending to small businesses, farmers, automobile dealers and buyers, and many borrowers."

"Since the cost incurred by banks in obtaining lendable funds will be lower, the rates that banks charge their customers should also decline."

The president said the administration is "particularly concerned" that the prime interest rates, which banks charge their best corporate customers — "has fallen much less than other interest rates in recent weeks."

"We hope that banks will act promptly to pass on to their loan customers the benefits of the reduction in costs of funds they are now experiencing," he said.

The action by the nation's central bank suggests the administration believes it is finally beginning to win its battle against an inflation rate which has been running at 18.1 percent for the first three months of this year.

Friday briefing

They thought he was dead

MARTINSBURG, W.Va. (UPI) — Charles Herrell awoke in a strange place this week — inside a plastic bag at a funeral home. Everyone thought he was dead.

Finding no vital signs, the Berkeley County coroner, Dr. Walter Fix, had pronounced Herrell dead after he was called to the county jail Wednesday morning to examine a man who deputies had found in a car.

Just before he was to be placed inside a cooler, the plastic bag was untipped for one last check. Someone at the Brown Funeral Home noticed Herrell was breathing.

Herrell, a victim of hypoglycemia, said he suffered a blackout spell before deputies found him in his car.

Trapped miners await rescue

VAL D'OR, Quebec (UPI) — Rescue crews raced against time Thursday to burrow their way to eight miners sealed behind a massive mudslide two days ago in a 900-foot gold mine in northwestern Quebec.

"We don't know how much air they have but they say a minimum of 68 hours, maybe a bit more," Quebec Police Force Constable Claude Dolre said.

Donald Lavigne, manager of the Calgary-based Barrorold Mine Inc. which owns the mine, said once a heavy flow of water was siphoned out of the shafts, rescuers would have a good crack at retrieving some of the men alive.

Court delays Utah execution

WASHINGTON (UPI) — U.S. Supreme Court Justice Byron White Thursday temporarily blocked the execution of Dale Pierre, who had been scheduled to face a firing squad in Utah May 29 for murdering three people.

White issued a temporary stay of execution to give Pierre's lawyers time to file legal papers requesting full Supreme Court review of the case.

Pierre, and a co-defendant, William Andrews, were convicted and sentenced to death for the April 22, 1974, murders of three people during a robbery in Ogden, Utah.

According to testimony in the case, five people at an Ogden store were tied up, forced to lie on the floor and to drink liquid drain-cleaner before three were shot and killed.

Accused Guyana killer freed

GEORGETOWN, Guyana (UPI) — Former People's Temple member Larry Layton was acquitted Thursday of trying to kill two defectors from the sect's Jonestown commune in a shootout that killed California Rep. Leo F. Ryan and led to the mass suicide by 900 temple members.

Layton is the only member of the People's Temple to have been tried in the shooting.

He has been in jail since the Nov. 18, 1978 shooting, which took place at a remote airstrip in the jungle town of Port Kaituma, near the temple's Jonestown commune.

Layton had been inside a small plane with several defectors when the shooting began.

Space shuttle launch delayed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The space agency announced Thursday a six-month delay in the first operational flight of the U.S. space shuttle Columbia because efforts to improve a heat shield and other engineering tests have not been completed.

The Columbia's first operational flight is being rescheduled from March 1982 to September 1982, NASA statement said. The shuttle has been delayed a number of times already.

Right form Salvador army

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (UPI) — Right-wing extremists Thursday announced formation of a new secret army to "eliminate" communists, including members of the ruling U.S.-backed junta which has sponsored sweeping economic reforms.

A spokesman said the Secret Army is preparing "a plan of operations (to) physically eliminate all members of the government who back the Marxists, and all communists," the spokesman said.

"The Communist Party is illegal in El Salvador."

Iran pipeline blown up

TEHRAN, Iran (UPI) — Saboteurs blew up an oil pipeline in the north-western province of Chaharmahal and Kohgiluyeh in the second raid in the area in 24 hours, the official Pars news agency reported.

The attackers hit the pipeline at Chahar Hammam, 20 miles from the town of Naft-Shahr, causing a fire that was brought under control after an hour, the agency said. The flow of oil had to be stopped during repairs.

Earlier Wednesday in the adjoining area of Alkhosh, unidentified men attacked oil installations but failed to cause major damage, reports said.

Cuba says CIA set fire

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — The fire that killed more than 150 people in a Jamaican home for the elderly was "one of the best" of a U.S. campaign to "intimidate the people and shatter the revolutions" in Central America and the Caribbean.

Last week, Granma charged that the CIA also controlled the Bahamian patrol boat that took Cuban fishing boats into custody off the Bahamas, provoking an attack by Cuban jet fighters that killed four Bahamians.

formerly. The ash is several hundred feet deep. There are tremendous piles of steam coming up. There are enormous icebergs, as big as mobile homes, lying there and melting."

Near the entire landscape looked as if it had been heavily dusted with powder. In some cases the hills were stripped bare, exposing craters with grayish water in them. An occasional vehicle looked stranded and stuck in the mud and ash.

Carter, accompanied by Govs. Dixy Lee Ray of Washington, Victor Atiyeh of Oregon and John Evans of Idaho, flew along the north fork of the Toutle River, which was swept by mudslides from the eruption, and up the northwest side of the mountain toward the crater.

At one point during Wednesday night's meeting, Gov. Ray impatiently interrupted Carter's questioning of the volcano's status to say, "This is all very interesting, but we need help."

When the president asked, "What do you need specifically?" she replied by spelling out, "m-o-n-e-y."

Gov. Ray told Carter, "Our top priority is people problems. Homes have been destroyed. People are stranded. What we are interested in is what kind of system the federal government has to help get people back to their residences, to replace emergency vehicles which have been destroyed. We are concerned with the real people problems."

She added, "We need money to pay for cleaning up, money to replace vehicles, money for farmers who are losing their milk and other crops, money to replace lost homes."

Bush concedes California, may end campaign Monday

WASHINGTON (UPI) — George Bush, his underdog campaign out of money, Thursday abandoned the June 3 California primary to Ronald Reagan, canceled a weekend campaigning and will announce Monday whether he is dropping out of the GOP presidential race.

"We have in effect closed it down — we don't have the bucks," said Bush campaign manager James Baker, referring to the Bush campaign in California, just a few weeks ago Bush said he would raise $1 million in an all-out effort to embarrass Reagan in his home state.

Baker insisted that the decision to abandon California did not necessarily foreshadow a decision by Bush to concede the Republican battle to Reagan, who is only nine delegates shy of clinching the Republican presidential nomination, according to UPI's count.

"We've been talking to party leaders and he's going to make a decision over the weekend," Baker said from Bush's Washington headquarters.

The decision will be announced in Houston Monday, he said.

Despite Bush's surprisingly large victory over Reagan in Michigan Tuesday, his campaign was stung by CBS and ABC network projections that Reagan had clinched the nomination, an assessment that hurt fundraising efforts.

Miami cops suspended for vandalism

MIAMI (UPI) — Two black and three white city policemen, including a former "Officer of the Year," were suspended Thursday because of complaints of vandalism and use of excessive force during Miami's race riot, the nation's worst in a decade.

Police Chief Kenneth T. Harms, in announcing the five, had been suspended with pay, but he also has contacted Florida National Guard commanders about possible involvement of guardsmen in vandalism.

Roy Brown, a six-year patrolman who is black, was accused of using excessive force during the arrest of a black woman outside a discount department store in the riot area last Saturday. In 1977, he was named "Outstanding Officer of the Year" by a group of Dade police chiefs. With the title went a $1,000 award for "extraordinary fidelity and exceptionally meritorious conduct."

The four officers were accused of vandalizing 14 automobiles parked Saturday at a shopping center located in the riot area. Harms said the vandalism involved smashing windshield and spray painting the words "chick" and "fooler" on the vehicles.

Gov. Bob Graham flew to Miami late Thursday with a group of his "Little Cabinet" members to inspect clean up operations and meet with community officials and leaders to determine what aid the state could provide.

Fifteen people died and hundreds were injured in the three days of rioting, burning and looting which was touched off Saturday by a Tampa jury's acquittal of four white ex-Dade policemen accused in the beating death of a Miami black businessman.

Graham said he was "very disinclined to consider amnesty," even for persons arrested for violating the curfew that was imposed in Miami during the riots. Several civil rights groups were seeking amnesty for the arrested.

In Tampa, police arrested two young men on charges of being accessories in the shooting of a policeman, hit in the cheek by a sniper's bullet Wednesday night. Two vehicles were burned and police reported 10 other incidents of vandalism, mostly rock throwing, in a third consecutive night of sporadic racial disturbances.

Miami was peaceful again Thursday. National Guard troops were withdrawn from their riot zone posts and another 1,500 were sent home. A reserve force of 1,000 was put on standby, out of public view. The curfew was lifted Wednesday night.

Riots show cost of discrimination

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Justice Department's civil rights chief said Tuesday the weekend rioting in Miami points up the "staggering costs of continued discrimination" in American society.

Assistant Attorney General Drew S. Days III said the rioting — which he labeled the worst in the United States in a decade — underscores the need for desegregating schools and providing job opportunities for minorities.

"I am not here to suggest that affirmative action is the answer to Miami," Days told the national institute of the American Bar Association.

"I do believe, however, that by educating America to the pervasive life-threatening costs of discrimination, we will be working together in the right direction."

Days noted that Florida schools were officially segregated until 1971 "and the effects of that segregation are very costly."

He said although schools now are desegregated, Florida is requiring high school students to pass a functional literacy test before they are given their diplomas.

The test has become subject to a court fight, because 20 percent of blacks, compared with 1.9 percent of whites, failed the first three times it was administered.

Days blamed the test results on "the continuing effects of the past dual school system."

He said blacks across the nation have lagged behind whites in economic improvement in recent years, noting that "more black men between the ages of 18 and 22 (are) in prison than in college."

He said the government would continue to bring lawsuits to afford minorities and women more job opportunities, including forcing the setting of numerical hiring goals for them.

"It seems to me that we cannot, particularly after Miami, lose sight of the real meaning of affirmative action," Days said. "We must devote ourselves to reminding America in concrete and specific terms of the staggering costs of continued discrimination."

Damage from the riots, triggered over an all-white jury's acquittal of four white police officers accused of beating a black insurance man to death, already has been put at more than $100 million including destruction of at least 24 businesses.

"Days said when "the insurance claims adjustors complete their work, we may discover that his riot was one of the most costly in recent memory."

"As a result of the events of last weekend, we are the losers: we lost many lives, millions of dollars from fire damage, many dollars in lost revenue and most of all, we lost hope."

Solar flare will hit earth

BOULDER, Colo. (UPI) — The National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration Wednesday reported a major flare on the surface of the sun, and said the disturbance could disrupt communications on Earth.

Howard Sargent, duty forecast at the Joint NOAA Air Force Space Environment Services Center, said the flare occurred in a region south of the sun's equator.

"This means the flare was aimed almost directly at the Earth, greatly increasing its chances of producing effects in our environment," Sargent said.

The official said the flare was rated as an X-1 flare, the largest type in terms of radiation output. He said more flares could be expected, since the active solar region would face the Earth for another six days.

Sargent said effects could include a geomagnetic storm, expected in about 24 hours, that would disrupt certain radio transmissions.

He said the flare was detected by X-ray sensors aboard an NOAA satellite in orbit 22,000 miles above the Earth.

Don't postpone Tuesday's primary

Gov. John Evans should not postpone next Tuesday's primary election in Idaho.

The governor, as of late Thursday, was keeping that option open because of the Mt. St. Helens volcanic ash fallout in Northern Idaho. However, some state officials who were to advise the governor on the question of the election said Thursday it should go ahead as scheduled since rain has helped clear the affected area.

Evans understandably was concerned that the wide-spread ash would hinder Idaho panhandle residents from registering to vote and from getting to the polls. But postponing the vote would have far greater consequences. The entire state is geared to vote next Tuesday. Delaying the balloting would surely cut into the turnout, cause greater expense to the candidates and take the wind out of the election. Delaying might also give some candidates an unfair advantage, particularly those who have more to spend on their campaigns.

A delay of only a week would put the election into June, school recess and vacation season. Holding the primary the day after Memorial Day is bad enough, and that in itself is likely to cause a low turnout. A postponement would cause even more people to lose interest.

No one should be deprived of voting as the result of having to cope with a natural disaster. In this case, however, it seems Northern Idaho residents are coping with the cleanup and would not find it difficult to go to the polls next Tuesday.

The governor should allow the primary to be held as scheduled.

Baseball's fans will suffer most

Unless there is an 11th hour breakthrough, the baseball scores in today's sports section may be the last you'll read for a long time.

With contract negotiations at a standstill, major league ballplayers will not report for today's games unless head honcho Marvin Miller tells them otherwise. If a strike does occur, it will be a sad day for America's most beloved and popular sport.

Most of the players say they don't want to walk out, but for the sake of their union, they'll do it. They'll lose thousands in salaries, the owners millions in revenue. A prolonged strike would wreck the season.

And the fans? Who cares? They'll miss out, and if the owners cave in who do you think will pay the price?

Swamps of Miranda

WASHINGTON—Nearly years have passed since a bitterly divided Supreme Court marched into the swamps of Miranda.

A few days ago the court demonstrated a melancholy irony: It is still in the swamps of Miranda and cannot find its way home.

Miranda, of course, was the famous case in which Chief Justice Warren led four of his brothers into a constitutional morass. The general idea was to put an end to coerced confessions.

Once a suspect was taken into custody, there could be no interrogation until the suspect had been advised both of his right to remain silent and of his right to have a lawyer. Dissenting members of the court strenuously protested that Warren's "utopian" dream would create nightmares in the lower courts.

The dissenters in Miranda were right. The law no longer focuses on the guilt of the accused but on the conduct of the constabls. May a confession be admitted in evidence? Must a confession be excluded? Who knows? The court gives little help.

Two cases will illustrate the confusion. They could be remarkably similar elements. One is the Innis case, just decided two weeks ago. The other is the Williams case of 1977.

In Providence, R.I., in 1975, police arrested Thomas J. Innis on charges of abduction and shotgun murder. They took him into custody, four times read him the Miranda warnings and put him in a car to drive to the station. On the way, one officer remarked to another officer, making certain that Innis could hear him, that a school for handicapped children was nearby.

"God forbid that a little handicapped girl should find the shotgun and maybe kill herself." His conscience thus pricked, Innis led the police to the concealed weapon. At his trial, the gun was introduced in evidence. Innis was found guilty.

In Davenport, Iowa, in 1968, police arrested Robert Anthony Williams on charges of abduction and murder. The victim was a 10-year-old girl. Police took Williams into custody, five times read him the Miranda warnings, permitted him to speak with two lawyers and put him in a car to drive from Davenport to Des Moines.

On the way, one officer remarked that the little girl's body deserved a "Christian-burial." It was snowing and soon it might be difficult to find her. His conscience thus pricked, Williams led the police to the body. At his trial, police testified to Williams' voluntary disclosures. Williams was found guilty.

"All right. If there is any significant difference in the two cases, it is any difference of constitutional dimensions — it surely escapes the eye. Mr. Justice Stewart spoke for the court in the Williams case three years ago; he spoke again for the court in Innis this month. Both cases involved savage crimes, both defendants were unquestionably guilty. But behold: The conviction of Innis was just affirmed; the conviction of Williams was reversed.

The disputations of medieval theologians could not be more baffling than the law that now made his "Christian-burial" remark. It was "tantamount to interrogation" and hence forbidden. When the Rhode Island officer audibly mused on the risk to a handicapped child, he was just musing.

Mr. Justice Stewart's new rule is fashioned from the same cobwebs from which Miranda was woven long ago. "A practice that police should know is reasonably likely to invoke an incriminating response from a suspect amounts to interrogation." But, concluded the justice, "we cannot say that the officers should have known that Innis would so respond."

Marvelous, is it not? The court has wandered miles from the language of the Constitution. The Fifth Amendment says that "no person may be compelled" in any criminal case to be a witness against himself. The Sixth says that in all criminal prosecutions, an accused shall enjoy a right to have the assistance of counsel for his defense.

Nobody is "compelled" Innis or Williams to anything. Both defendants repeatedly were advised of their right to remain silent and to have a lawyer. Both confessed their guilt.

Mr. Chief Justice Burger, who had dissented in Williams at the top of his lungs, wearily concurred in Innis the other day. Trial judges, he said, have enough difficulty discerning the nuances of Miranda cases, and we do not clearly that situation here. "The chief will never speak a truer word.

Nursing homes win; taxpayers may lose

The inaction of the legislature, majorly on the nursing home cost issue at the recent special session will probably add millions of dollars to the state budget.

Far from saving anyone any money, the Legislature acted irresponsibly to add to the tax burden. It was a dismal performance. Little wonder that Gov. John Evans was disturbed.

Under the law, the state is obligated to pay costs of nursing home care for people who can't afford to pay. The state is paying about $2.5 million per month for the care of 2,900 nursing home residents.

The issue is how much should the state pay up to nursing home for a patient's care.

Some nursing homes are charging the state less than $1.50 per patient per day for administrative costs, for example. Some want to charge the state more than $3 per day for administrative costs.

The Department of Health and Welfare is willing to pay the full cost of nursing staff and other medical care. It is willing to pay well above the average for administration and certain operating costs.

But the department is not willing to let the nursing homes determine what administrative, operating and certain other costs are and pay the full amount, without limit. This is the issue, whether the state should be able to put some limits on what it pays.

Under existing regulations adopted by Health and Welfare, there would be limits. For example, the state would pay up to the 70th percentile of administrative charges. That is, if you had 100 nursing homes, the state would pay up to the amount charged by the 70th one from the bottom. It would not pay what the highest 30 percent want to charge.

Some of the nursing homes, through their organization, Idaho Health Facilities Inc., went to court and challenged this policy. They said that under state law, the state must pay full, reasonable costs. They said "that reasonable" does not allow any 70th percentile limitation.

The court agreed. If this ruling stands, it means the state must pay back to the date of the Health and Welfare regulations the difference between the 70th percentile on administrative and some other costs, and what the nursing homes say is their cost.

Moreover, the state is incurring added costs each day.

You can debate whether the 70th percentile formula is the proper limit, but there shouldn't be much debate on this point. The state should have authority to set some limit on the amount it is obligated to pay.

The Senate passed legislation that would have upheld the authority of Health and Welfare to limit the state's obligations, following the existing regulations. But the House said no.

The House passed a bill which left the law basically as it is, and did not uphold the cost-limitation regulations. When the Senate amended that bill to again uphold Health and Welfare's cost-containment policy, the House rejected the amendments, 37-29.

This means that the taxpayers of Idaho may have to pay millions of added dollars to the nursing homes which charge the most. It could limit the amount of money available to the public schools in 1981-82. It could rule out any tax relief next year. It could even push the Legislature toward a tax increase.

When a nursing home sells for a high price, the higher price becomes part of the cost-limitative costs. The state is obligated to pay more. The House's action stands to make nursing homes more profitable, at the expense of the Idaho taxpayer.

This nursing home lobby worked hard in the House. When the critical vote came, the nursing home lobby won and the taxpayers lost. And the Legislature meeting in January is likely to face a multi-million dollar deficit in nursing home payments.

Headlights not in use enough

Editor, Times-News:
To whom it may concern:
As a former traffic safety officer, I can highly appreciate the use of headlights by the telephone company at all times while driving their vehicles.

However, in sad dismay I watch as so-called safety officers (ISP and city) disregard this policy of safety completely. I also watch in horror on cloudy and rainy days such as we have been having recently as school buses loaded with precious lives pass with absolutely no light visible.

As a former member of the National Safety Council I can reaffirm that it is definitely true that during periods of poor visibility (early morning, late evening, rain, snow, clouds) that many accidents happen. The National Safety Council urges motorists to use lights during all times of operating a motor vehicle but certainly we should adopt a policy for early morning, late evening or hazardous weather conditions.

In conclusion, I say blessings on the phone company for setting a great example but what about the rest of you?

Teachers asking for the moon?

Editor, Times-News:
What on earth is the matter with Twin Falls teachers these days?
I honestly can't understand why they are asking for so much. After all, they have it so good already. In fact, the requests made by teachers through negotiations this year are so unreasonable that this old reporter got out to prove just that.

First of all, the teachers want something definite done about student discipline. Now why should the teachers be concerned? After all, the board is making up its own policy that the teachers will use in their classroom. Why, then, do the teachers want to help draw up that policy? Just because they work with the students each day doesn't mean they would have useful suggestions.

What about supplies? Reliable sources tell me that since most of the internal revenue funds start checking out of their own pockets each year classroom supplies then there must be no problem in this area. Why should the district help if the teachers are already doing such a good job of keeping their classes supplied?

Then there's the problem of overcrowded classrooms—just because the teachers are stretched so thin that the students don't get enough individual attention is no reason for concern. The teachers also claim that bulging classes are more difficult to manage. Fooy! It's obvious that with that many children stuffed together you're bound to have some problems.

Salaries are the real clincher. Can you believe that the teachers actually want an $11,500 beginning salary? How absurd! Did you know that if teachers were paid that much they'd be making almost as much as, well, only $3,000 less than the average high school graduate? Not only that, but they'd still be able to put a tidy sum into classroom supplies and college courses. How could they be so unreasonable?

In summary, the facts clearly show that teachers should be quite pleased with their situation. Their pleas for help are totally unfounded... or are they?

ERA supporters botch things again

Chicago Sun-Times (Field News Service).

It appears that ERA is going to be put on the back burner until next year because it doesn't have enough votes to pass the Illinois Legislature.

I'm not surprised. Its supporters have botched things again. If they keep hounding, I'm going to stop giving them free advice.

As some readers may recall, about a year or so ago, when the Equal Rights Amendment ladies were beginning another push in Illinois, I told them how to go about winning.

My strategy was simple. Instead of wasting their $150,000 budget on public relations, luncheons, seminars, fly-airs and brochures, they should use it for bribes like most sensible people do around here.

As a bribe-passing friend of mine said: "For $100,000, I can pass ERA, and get them out of Springfield last week."

The ERA ladies looked at me with horror, and they went on with their foolishness. So they lost.

This year they came back, and I gave them the same advice. Their national leader said something like: "We're not going in for the Royko bribe philosophy."

I said, fine. It's your money to waste, your ERA to lose. So let Phyllis Schlafly win the battle of separate latrines for male and female GIs, and not care.

So they went ahead and did it their way. They went to Springfield and nagged the legislators. They put on "white dresses" and held a "big rally" in Chicago. They pleaded and reasoned and used logic and idealism.

Naturally, it didn't work. Using reason and logic and idealism in Springfield is like offering warm milk to a wino.

Then they did the most incredible thing imaginable.

If we are to believe the accusations that came out of Springfield last week, somebody offered an anti-ERA legislator a "campaign contribution" to switch his vote.

Yes, I know that's what I told them to do. I urged them to offer money. But, good lord! It was said to be a $10,000 offer. Ten thousand dollars! To one guy! I never told them to do anything that crazy.

They obviously did not realize that in Illinois, a legislator is a nickel-dime operator. They are political small fry. Tinky-Teeny fry.

In most states, a legislator is considered a political heavyweight.

Around here, a state legislator hopes that if he hustles, he will someday work his way up to being a Chicago alderman.

You can imagine what kind of dwarfs they are, if they aspire to be aldermen.

So you simply do not offer people like that $10,000. It will scare the hell of them. For that kind of money, they'll think you want them to commit high treason or bump somebody off.

That is serious money. That's the kind of dough you spend on something really important, such as removing vacant property, or getting the taxes lowered on a new high-rise, or to get a highway contract.

As I explained very clearly, a few hundred dollars is considered a decent, honest, acceptable drop in Springfield. Legislators aren't greedy men. The testimony in some of their trials has shown that they sell their votes for two, three or four hundred dollars.

There is a practical reason for that. Every so often, the U.S. attorney's office audits a few legislators' bookkeeping bribes. It's sort of like a regular hunting or fishing season.

The legislators know that if they go into a federal court and look sort of sheep-like and embarrassed at having taken a $27 bribe, the judge can't get too mad at them. The judge knows that most of the prominent lawyers who practice in his court cheat their clients out of that much every day.

So chances are, for that petty sum, the judge will give them probation, or a few months in one of the more comfortable federal prisons.

But when you talk about $10,000 in one drop, it's a different matter. The internal revenue hounds start checking to see if you paid taxes on it. The U.S. attorney starts offering immunity to the ordinary $200 bribe-takers to squelch on you.

So it's much safer to stick with modest, humble sums. Two hundred here, three hundred there. Even a big night out on the town. It all adds up. And there is time, later, when you work your way up to the City Council or the Cook County Board, to buy yourself that Florida condo with something a zoning fixer gives you.

Little wonder, then, that even an unconfirmed report of a $10,000 offered such a burst of indignation in Springfield. It's not that they are honest.

Cops arrest 'young Dillinger'

CLEVELAND (UPI) — A teenaged boy, described by police as "a little John Dillinger" who has been charged with murder in the Magnum revolver slaying of a 13-year-old schoolmate, had a "hit list" of three people, police said Thursday.

The suspect, a 14-year-old ninth grader not identified because of his age, has been charged with killing Mark W. Hintz, an eighth-grader at A.B. Hart Junior High School.

The suspect, in trouble with police and school authorities for some time, was arrested several hours after the killing earlier this week in a woods on the city's East Side.

Several teenage and adult witnesses told police they thought the shooting was accidental, occurring as the suspect was showing off the revolver. But prosecutors called it murder, maintaining that Hintz' name, already scratched out, was on a "hit list" they confiscated from the suspect.

Police said the suspect told school friends he planned "to kill some people," including Hintz and a Cleveland police officer, reported to be Patrolman Dale Neal who works outside the school. He, then, reportedly intended to kill himself before an upcoming juvenile court appearance, police said.

The suspect had threatened to complete the killings by May 28, the date he was due in court on a charge of breaking into homes, police learned.

Neal said he recently confiscated a bag of marijuana and a knife from the suspect and that he learned the boy was waiting for him Tuesday afternoon, gun tucked in a waistband, at a deli/ice cream near the school. Neal did not show up.

Police said the boy then announced plans to shoot Neal Wednesday morning in an alley near the school.

The boy, police said, also planned to kill another student at Hart because the two recently were involved in a fight.

Paper on inventor nets lad award

CHILLICOTHE, Ohio (UPI) — Kent Glendening, 14, an eighth grade honor student at Mount Logan Junior High in Chillicothe, Thursday was presented the Thomas Crapper Award for a study he did on the man who perfected the flush toilet.

"Mr. Crapper invented the water closet flush mechanism much as it is used today," said Frank Clisham, Ann Arbor, Mich., who chairs the Justice for Thomas Crapper committee. "History has not done well by this remarkable man."

"Kent Glendening has taken great strides in correcting this oversight with an outstanding job in research and reporting," said Clisham in presenting the award.

Glendening's choice of Thomas Crapper as the individual in history as his entry for National History Day competition and the success he has enjoyed is the reason given for the award presentation by his society.

Lucian Yates, teacher and mentor in Glendening's project, was quick to point out that Kent's scholastic attitude would have taken him far regardless of the subject and that Mr. Crapper gave him the inspiration to excel.

Yates told with pride of the esprit de corps of the student body in rallying behind Glendening to finance his trip to Washington for National History Honors Day at Georgetown University May 29-31.

Community support came with a proclamation designating May 22 as Kent Glendening Day in Chillicothe. Clisham represents the Theiford Corp. of Ann Arbor, Mich., which manufactures portable toilets and has given the Thomas Crapper award for the last 10 years to outstanding employees or industry related individuals for outstanding achievement.

Glendening was the youngest ever to win the award.

Court clears golf betting

DENVER (UPI) — The Colorado Supreme Court ruled Thursday there's nothing wrong with golf course betting.

It said that's so it was even if the wagering involves thousands of dollars.

And, the court said, it wasn't gambling, either.

The court's decision overruled a judge who had claimed a $24,600 gambling debt was an illegal and unenforceable debt and said betting on the outcome of the golf game between participants was not "gambling" under state law.

As a result of the ruling, the court ordered Lloyd W. Hammer to come up with $24,600 to pay off his golfing opponent, Frederick C. Berkefeldt.

The court said Berkefeldt came to Colorado from Kansas specifically to participate in the match with Hammer and two other men. During the match, Hammer and Berkefeldt made several wagers on their golfing skills and at the end of 18 holes, Hammer owed his colleague $24,600.

To pay for the debt, Hammer pulled $500 in cash out of his wallet and gave his golfing companion a check for $24,100. The check was not honored by Hammer's bank, however, since the account had been closed.

When Berkefeldt filed suit to collect the money, it was rejected by Jefferson County District Court Judge Henry E. Nieto on grounds it was an unenforceable illegal debt, since the wager was not incidental to a "bona fide social relationship."

The judge also ruled there was no fraud since the check was intended only as evidence of the debt.

DEAR MANTOBA: I wouldn't. What if something better comes along and sees you out with HIM?

DEAR ABBY: Regarding the person who objected to left-handed handshakes:

Boy Scouts always shake with the left hand, the reason being the left hand is closer to the heart. Baden-Powell, the founder of the Scouting movement, adopted this method of greeting people after his experience with the Masai tribe in Africa.

These people would approach with a shield in the left hand protecting the heart. As a sign of trust, they would transfer the shield to the right hand while raising the left in greeting, thereby exposing the heart.

Expensive envelope
NEW YORK (UPI)—Wealthy stamp dealer Howard O. Fraser has paid a record-breaking $1 million for a collection of old envelopes, according to Alain de Cadenet, consultant to the British Post Office. Fraser bought 3,900 19th Century United States covers from the private collection of Mark Haas that included Confederate 20-cent bisects of covers plus franked envelopes that bore signatures of Presidents George Washington, Thomas Jefferson, Andrew Jackson, and Abraham Lincoln.

I loved to hear my husband snore. I knew he was home, alive and safe with me.

GOP may hold budget key

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A House-Senate conference committee gave final approval Thursday to a balanced budget for 1981, but House leaders predicted trouble getting it passed because of a big increase in defense spending.

The committee agreed to the $612.3 billion budget after working out differences in wording between House and Senate versions of the bill.

It also agreed to ask Congress' spending committees to save $8.5 billion through legislative changes and the tax-writing committees to come up with $4.2 billion in new revenues to make the balanced budget stick next year.

In passing the budget, which cut domestic spending to help pay for the defense increase, the committee lost substantial support from moderate-to-liberal Democrats in the House.

Thus House Republicans, who have voted against past budgets to protest deficit spending, probably will determine its fate for the first time in the six-year history of the current budget process.

House cuts disability benefits

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In an effort to make work more attractive, the House voted Thursday to cut maximum disability insurance benefits under Social Security by an average 14 percent for workers who join the program after July 1.

The bill, which passed 389-2, also contains further return-to-work incentives and other changes in disability and insurance programs.

The cuts in disability insurance benefits came about because studies showed that in some cases, those on disability were receiving the same or higher benefits than if they had been working.

The new limits on benefits — which would apply only to those going on disability July 1 or later — would be 85 percent of the worker's average indexed monthly earnings, or 150 percent of the worker's benefit, whichever is lower.

Committee, predicted 40 to 50 of the 159 Republicans — "and hopefully more" — would support the budget.

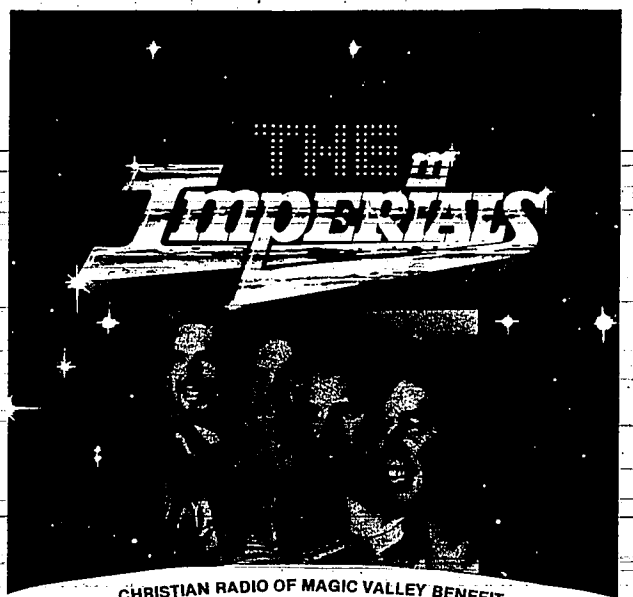

That represents twice as many as the 22 who supported the Budget Committee's less conservative proposal on the House floor earlier this month. It may not be enough, depending on how much Democratic support has been lost.

The budget also will have trouble from the right since the most conservative Republicans say the defense budget is not high enough and other spending is too high.

House Speaker Thomas O'Neill, counting possible defection of up to 40 "progressive liberal" Democrats, predicted a tough fight.

The compromise budget, which won initial approval Wednesday, included $13.7 billion for defense spending — a figure higher than proposals rejected by the House last week.

Strike looms as talks continue into morning

NEW YORK (UPI) — With the prospect of talks lasting through the night, representatives for baseball's owners and players huddled in negotiations past midnight Thursday in an effort to agree on a new contract and avoid a strike by the players.

The players are scheduled to strike starting with Friday's games.

The two sides, which began their talks Thursday morning, broke for dinner and reconvened at 10 p.m. EDT.

It appeared talks might continue through Friday morning.

Marvin Miller, executive director of the Players Association, spoke to player representatives from the Houston Astros and the New York Mets Thursday night and indicated talks were expected to go around the clock.

After their game with the Mets, the Astros boarded a bus for Philadelphia for a scheduled Friday night game with the Phillies.

Miller spokesman John Stearns told his teammates to call the Players Association Friday morning for further instructions.

In Los Angeles, the Dodgers left for Chicago on a flight at 11:30 p.m. EDT. The flight was rescheduled several times, pending late developments in the talks. The first game to be affected if a strike is enacted will be in Chicago, where the Cubs host the Dodgers beginning 2:30 p.m. EDT.

In Pittsburgh, player representative Phil Garner and half the Pirate team were awaiting word from Miller at Three Rivers Stadium. The Pirates, who played in Pittsburgh Thursday night and are scheduled to fly to St. Louis Friday morning, stayed in their hotel for news of any developments.

Miller spoke briefly with reporters earlier Thursday night and said it would take a "small miracle" to avoid a strike.

Miller, admittedly tired and worn out from day-long negotiations with the Player Relations Committee and federal mediators, met with Ray Grebey, prime negotiator for the owners, earlier in the evening.

"We had one informal discussion before dinner," said Miller. "But at this point in time I'm no more optimistic about a settlement than I was earlier in the day."

"I'm so tired that to say I feel better about these things is ridiculous," he said. "It will still take a small miracle. Unless an agreement is reached, the strike is on."

As has been his custom throughout the negotiations, Grebey showed up a half hour late for the night talks. He also remained close-mouthed as to the possibility of settlement.

"I have no comment to make," he said. "And I have no deadline."

Miller emphasized to reporters when he arrived at the hotel for the night meeting that he was on time.

During the negotiations Grebey has continually kept

Miller waiting and Miller felt it was a ploy by the owners to show their strength.

Representatives of the owners and the Players Association met twice Thursday afternoon before breaking off shortly before 8:30 p.m. EDT with no progress on the key issues.

David Vaughn, the assistant counsel to federal mediator Kenneth Moffett, said "We met on issues which I am not at liberty to discuss."

The afternoon session began 50 minutes late — at 4:50 p.m. EDT — as Grebey did not arrive until that time. After 70 minutes of negotiations, the talks broke up with no movement on the main issue of compensation for the signing of free agents. A Thursday morning session of slightly more than two hours had also produced no movement.

Vaughn sounded a pessimistic note, saying, "There's an awful lot of ground to cover and very little time to do it. However, it's a better situation than if the talks were broken off."

"It's going to take an awful lot of movement. The odds are against it (averting a strike) and getting larger every minute," he said.

Asked how long the parties actually met face-to-face during the three-hour morning and afternoon sessions, Vaughn said, "Over an hour. But there are many different ways to make progress in labor negotiations. But meeting face-to-face is the best way."

"We went over most of the minor issues other than compensation," Moffett said after the morning session. "We had a party and nothing happened. If there are possibilities of progress, we will keep meeting but both sides are 180 degrees apart."

Miller says the owners are attempting the break the will of the players.

"There has been a lack of good faith," he said. "The owners are saying to the players, 'Get on your knees or else,' and that's a mistake. It's a mistake to treat highly competitive athletes that way."

The stumbling block of compensation has all but obliterated the fact that the parties have settled or are near settlement on virtually all other issues involved in the Basic Agreement — such as minimum salary, pension plans and retirement benefits — although Miller says the owners shouldn't get any of the credit for that.

The owners, instead of selecting compensation from the June draft of amateur players, want their choice of a professional player in exchange for a top free agent.

Miller added that the players have suggested the creation of a 1- or 2-year study committee to examine the current free-agent system, at the end of which the owners would have the option of reopening the issue. But Grebey stands firm that the clubs want a change now, not one or two years hence.

Miller indicated that he will continue meeting with the owners as long as Moffett wants.

NHL playoffs

Flyers force series into sixth game

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Summer is less than a month away but the Philadelphia Flyers see no reason to hang up their skates just yet.

The Flyers staved off elimination from the Stanley Cup finals Thursday night, getting two goals from Rick MacLeish, including the eventual game-winner in the third period, in a 6-3 victory over the New York Islanders.

The Islanders still hold a 3-2 advantage in the best-of-seven series and can clinch the first Stanley Cup in the 8-year history with a victory Saturday in Uniondale, N.Y.

But the Flyers, who were soundly beaten in the third and fourth games of the matchup on Long Island, played the type of game that renewed their hopes that a decisive victory would be played in Philadelphia Tuesday night.

"We knew it would have been over tonight if we didn't win," captain Mel Bridgman said. "But we weren't ready to give up. We didn't feel like ending the season. We wanted to play more hockey."

Flyers Coach Pat Quinn fell the difference from the previous two games was his team creating more scoring opportunities and applying more pressure on Islander goalie Billy Smith.

"We felt he (Smith) had a lot of weaknesses," he said, "but we just haven't been able to exploit them. We got inside tonight and created some more chances. We were more aggressive carrying the puck. We seem to play with more confidence."

It was MacLeish, a veteran center playing in his 95th Stanley Cup playoff game, who gave the Flyers needed momentum.

Quinn clinging to a 2-2 lead when MacLeish took Bridgman's pass at center ice, skated into the New York zone and ripped a 35-footer off the arm pad of Smith at 9:43 to steer the Flyers out of striking distance.

"He's the type of player that when he gets chances like that, he's not going to miss," Quinn said. "He has a few opportunities tonight and he took advantage of them. He's the type of guy who has to get the key goals for us."

Rookie forwards Propp and Paul Holmgren added goals to give Philadelphia a comfortable lead.

Islanders Coach Al Arbour did

Islander goalie Bill Smith and Dennis Potvin turn back Flyers' Bob Dalley at the mouth of the goal.

not appear overly concerned by the defeat.

"I don't think we were over confident," he said. "We started out very well but we couldn't put the puck in the net. They were fortunate on a couple of goals. We had shots glancing off the posts. We just made too many defensive mistakes."

Sifvan Persson scored a pair of power-play goals for New York as the Islanders set a Stanley Cup record for most power-play goals in one series with 13.

Rookie defenseman Mike Busniuk actually put the Flyers ahead for good at 17:04 of the second period, just 48 seconds after Bryan Trottler tipped in Persson's slapshot to tie it 2-2 for his 12th goal of the playoffs and his 77th point, tying a Stanley Cup record held by Phil Esposito and Frank Mahovlich. Linesman set up the play by kicking the puck between the Islander net. Busniuk recovered it and skated out alone, shooting a five-footer past the glove of Smith for his second goal of the playoffs.

The Islanders opened the scoring at 10:58 with their 12th power-play goal of the series. After Mike Bossy's shot was stopped by Peeters, the puck deflected to Persson, who skated to the top of the left-wing circle and whistled a slapshot to Peeters' glove side for his fourth goal of the playoffs.

The Flyers, who went more than 15 minutes of the first period without a shot on goal, scored twice in the opening six minutes of the second period to take their first lead since the second game of the series.

Bobby Clarke tied it at 1:35 when Behn Wilson passed it off from the left-wing boards and he shot a 10-footer from the slot to Smith's left. MacLeish put Philadelphia in front at 5:55 after intercepting Denis Potvin's pass at center ice, skating in and snapping a 30-footer over Smith's glove.

New York, however, quelled the sellout Spectrum crowd of 17,071 with the tying goal at 16:16 when Trottler tipped in Persson's slapshot from the right point from about five feet in front of Peeters.

USC sprinter declared ineligible for season

SEATTLE (UPI) — Sprinter Billy Mullins was declared ineligible by Southern Cal Thursday for the rest of the school's track season, including the Pac-10 track and field meet underway at the University of Washington.

Mullins, who has run the fastest 400 meters in the world this year, has been under close scrutiny since it was reported earlier in the year that he was enrolled at four different junior colleges in widely scattered sections of Los Angeles in the fall of 1977.

The decision to declare Mullins ineligible was the result of a continuing investigation involving USC and representatives of the NCAA and FIAA conferences, said Dr. Richard Perry, athletic director at USC.

The conference is still pursuing its own investigation into allegations concerning Mullins' college credits, said Jim Muldoon, Pac-10 public relations director.

The conference may decide to impose further sanctions or penalties against USC when its investigation involving Mullins is completed this summer, Muldoon said.

"Whatever actions have to be taken will be concluded before the start of the 1980 football season," he said.

In a formal statement, Perry said Mullins must forfeit the rest of his eligibility for the 1980 season because he was erroneously allowed to compete during the 1978 season, including the 1978 NCAA championship.

Mullins transferred to USC from Rio Hondo College in February, 1978. Due to a "technical infraction" that was not detected at the time, Mullins shouldn't have been allowed to compete for USC in 1978, said Perry.

"USC accepts full responsibility for the erroneous declaration of Mullins' eligibility for the 1978 season," said Perry's statement. "It should be clearly understood, however, that the problem is a result of the complexity of NCAA eligibility regulations and does not indicate any culpability on Billy's or the university's part, or any attempt to circumvent NCAA rules."

Mullins, a senior, was expected to run the 400 meters and compete on USC's 400- and 1600-meter relay teams in the Pac-10 meet. He has run the 400 meters in 48.94, the 100 meters in 10.31 and the 200 meters in 20.63.

USC's 400-meter relay team also has the fastest time (38.69) in the world this year.

With Mullins barred from competing, USC is a slight favorite to win the conference championship. He is also ineligible for the NCAA track meet to be held in Austin, Texas, June 3-5.

"Without you, we're seriously hurt," said USC Coach Vern Wolfe. "Besides losing points in the sprint, it causes all kinds of readjustments in the relays."

Giant killer has only one day to enjoy win

ROME (UPI) — Thierry Tulane, the 16-year-old Frenchman, who shocked defending champion Vitas Gerulaitis a day earlier, had little time to enjoy his new-found fame when he fell to Tomas Smid of Czechoslovakia, 1-5, 7-6, 5-1, Thursday during the $200,000 Italian Open tennis championships.

Tulane, ranked No. 34 in the world, took control against Smid in the first set, but the experience of Czech changed his tactics to throw the youngster off his game and gain the quarterfinals.

"Tulane did not miss a point in the first set, but Smid played unbelievably well. He is going to be a standout player."

Tulane, in a cheerful mood despite his defeat, said, "I became very tired in the second set, but I know I will have a much stronger than Gerulaitis. I plan now to concentrate on the French Open."

Top seed Guillermo Vilas of Argentina defeated volatile American Hank Pfister, 6-4, 7-5, to gain a quarterfinal match against Raul Ramirez of Mexico. Pfister drew an official warning for unsportsmanlike conduct in the first set.

The last remaining Italian in the tournament, Corrado Barazzutti, defeated Chile's Hans Gildemeister, 6-6, 6-4, before a cheering 7,000 crowd. He will face Frenchman Yannick Noah, who advanced when his American opponent, Eddie Dibbs, withdrew in the second set with a pulled muscle. Noah was ahead at the time, 6-0, 1-4.

Ninth-seeded Manuel Orantes of Spain overcame Andres Gomez of Ecuador, 1-6, 6-3, 7-5, and Ivan Lindl of Czechoslovakia, the sixth-seed, stopped American Brian Gottfried, 6-4, 6-4.

Eliot Teltscher, a 7-6, 6-3 winner over Australia's Peter McNamara, is the only American to reach the quarterfinals.

Magic Valley Shrine game

Easterners miss usual luxury of big linemen

BURLEY — In two years of Magic Valley all-star football, the trademark of the eastern team has been big linemen.

But in preparing to go after a third-straight Shrine game victory May 31 at Brun Stadium, the absence of the anchors in the line aren't there.

"We're a bunch smaller," says Kimberly Coach Gordon Hogan who is handling the line this time around. And he should know. He's worked with the line on the other two occasions.

"I'd guess (Valley's) Bob Schlund is our biggest at about 220, Gordon Rogers is about the same weight but shorter," he said.

Like the west stars, the easterners have had trouble getting their acts together.

"I think we finally got all the graduations out of the way," says Coach Florin Hulse of Murtaugh who is the head man of the east. "We've been working out with 20 players but not the same 20. Last night (Wednesday) we had 27 and I think from now on we'll be able to get a pretty good line on the crushers and find out what they can do."

Hulse said the players is trying to fit the right people into the right places.

"This is the first time I've ever been associated with an all-star team like this," he said. "The one thing I've found out it doesn't make any difference what size school the player comes from, he can play about anywhere you want him to. They're all good athletes."

The west has a fairly solid advantage. In speed in the backfield — boasting all three district state track 100-meter champions — but Coach Hulse doesn't figure anyone will beat his backfield lineup much for quickness.

The east leads with "double-threat" Craig Jones at quarterback. "It would be nice if he were a foot taller but he gets the job done very well," Hulse said of the Burley senior. "He gets outside very quickly."

Jones will put a lot of pressure on the west defense with that quickness and for that reason the east staff figures to option a lot.

The other two working at quarterback are Wood River's Paul Leggis, a more of a passing-type signal caller and less a runner, and Declo's Rihett Matson, a big athlete who probably will be seen more at light end or wide receiver than under center.

If the west can point to its backfield speed as a strength, it is the receiving corps that makes the east dangerous.

The four most highly regarded during last fall's season were 6-5 Jeff Wright and 6-2 Brent Funk of Burley, 6-3 Bob Maloney of Minico and the 6-3 Matson from Declo.

They aren't the only people the east has who can catch the ball but at their sizes they are the most imposing. Additionally, all four played in the Magic Valley all-star basketball game, giving another indication of their hands and maneuverability.

"We don't expect to see many dropped," Hulse said of the catching corps. "And we've got some quarterbacks who can get it to them."

So far Hulse has been impressed with the all-around ability of Funk.

"All you have to do is suggest it to him and he'll get it done," Hulse said.

On running plays, the ball likely will be in the hands of Burley's Don Konrad, a 180-pounder, or Todd Curtis of Declo, who at 155 might be the quickest running back on the team.

The east was hurt when Minico's Joel Metzner had to pass up participation due to an injury. Metzner was probably the premier tackle-to-tackle runner in Magic Valley last fall.

Hulse said he didn't want all the above written down as gospel because the staff is still finding things out.

"Because of all the other things going on this week, we've had some of these players here only one night," he pointed out. "Tomorrow (Friday) we're taking our trip to the Crippled Children's Hospital in Salt Lake so we won't have a practice."

"We're looking forward to next week because there shouldn't be much to interfere with our turnouts and we can start getting a line on every player. We're going to have to make some switches in position and decide whether a player should go on offense or defense. We'll have five days really to decide on that and try to get all the parts working together," he said.

Assisting Hulse, in addition to Hogan, are Otani Wallace of Raft River, Forrest Fomesbeck of Valley, Eric Bjorkman of Burley and LaVere Bennett of Murtaugh.

The east roster includes:

Minico — Matt Reifer, tackle; Kevin Koepnick, tackle; Glenn Broadhead, running back-defensive back, and Bob Maloney, light end.

Burley — Don Konrad, running back; Craig Jones, quarterback; Brent Johnson, tackle; Jeff Wright, wide receiver; Allen Robinson, defensive back, and Brent Funk, light end.

Wood River — Mike Seal, linebacker, and Paul Leggis, quarterback.

Declo — Rihett Matson, running back, quarterback, receiver, defensive back; Todd Curtis, running back-defensive back; Kelly Mullock, center; Mike Slund, fullback-defensive tackle; John Hoffand, center-defensive end.

Players face summer without play or pay

By JENNY KELLNER
UPI Sports Writer

With the probability of a strike by Friday nearing 100 per cent, 650 major league baseball players now have to face the prospect of a summer without baseball — and without pay.

Most have been getting aside money since spring training and arranging for outside jobs, some as far removed from baseball as possible. Detroit's Richie Hebner, for example, intends to return to Massachusetts to help his father with the family grave digging business.

Others will concentrate on keeping in shape, spending time with their families and trying to figure out where the next paycheck will come from.

"What could I do, be a college professor?" asked Boston's Jerry Bandy. "Baseball's the only thing I know. I'll work hard to stay in shape, just as I did in the off season, and hope it's settled soon."

For some National League teams, however, the first priority simply will be getting home.

The strike would be effective with the Los Angeles Dodgers-Chicago Cubs game at 2:30 p.m. EDT Friday. The Dodgers delayed their departure from Los Angeles until 7 p.m. EDT Thursday but were the only team in the league that had to leave the day before Friday's game.

The other West Coast National League teams, San Diego and San Francisco, had night games Friday and could make travel arrangements after knowing whether the players will strike.

Dodger players will have to pay their own way home from Chicago if they strike but a club spokesman said that would be cheaper than losing a day's pay by not going to Chicago.

"It's a good thing we're not in the National League," said Boston traveling secretary Jack Rogers. "The Western clubs are all in the East. Those players have to get home on their own and pay their own bills. Ours don't."

Traveling expenses seem to be the least of the players' worries. With a guaranteed minimum salary of $21,000 in the major leagues, most players have enough stashed away to keep their families fed, clothed and housed for at least a few months. No one expressed fear about starving but some felt continuing the strike through the fall and winter would be a hardship.

"Everyone I know has been saving since spring training," said New York Mets pitcher Craig Swan. "And if they haven't, they should have been."

"I've saved $20 or $30," cracked Detroit's second baseman Tom Brookens, who says he's going home to Fayetteville, Pa. "That ought to be enough to buy me a couple of Big Macs."

Minnesota's Roy Smalley feels the majority of players have enough to get through the summer, but adds, "the winter will be tough."

It isn't only the players who are wondering what to do if the strike comes.

Atlanta's Enos Cabell, however, figures it's time for some relaxing.
"I'll go to California, play golf and hit the beach," he says.
Some players may look to the National Broadcasting Company for part-time work, as the network may switch to College World Series games from Omaha, Neb., to fill the time slot held by the Saturday "Game of the Week."

"We've got an agreement with the College World Series and if the strike goes into the second week, we'll show a college game," said NBC spokesman Mike Cohen. "If it goes three weeks, we might show another college game or possibly a Japanese game. After that we haven't really figured out plans."

Others, like New York Yankee star Reggie Jackson, aren't worried at all and, in fact, view the strike as an opportunity to attend to their own businesses.

"I'm not concerned about the strike," said Jackson, a millionaire businessman in his own right. "It's out of my control. I'll go home, that's all. No, I'm not going to work out. If the owners say the hell with it for the season, I don't see anything wrong with it. That's their prerogative. I wouldn't mind being at home for the whole summer."

Even those who hate to see the baseball season end prematurely, have found bright spots amid the uncertainty.

"I've got two children, six and 1 1/2 years old," said Swan. "With the waiting and the wondering almost over, I'm looking forward to spending time with them. They grow up so fast."

"I bought a home recently in Greenwich and maybe I'll have time to start sailing (on the Long Island sound), which is something I've wanted to do," said Swan. "As far as outside work, I don't have anything planned except for maybe a few appearances."

His teammate, Frank Thomas, said he definitely was getting a job but said, "First I might go to Montreal for the Roberto Duran-Sugar Ray Leonard fight (June 20). Then I'll get a job."

Boston's Jack Brohamer already has made plans to work.
"My dad and brother have a sheet metal plant in San Marcos, Calif., and I'll probably do some sales work for them," Brohamer said.

Teammate Butch Hobson, whose wife is expecting their third child, has his family in Boston but plans to go back to Alabama if the strike looks to be a lengthy one.

"I'll get a job," he said simply.

Red Sox slugger Jim Rice said he probably would go back home to Anderson, S.C. for a couple days and try to get a job.

Teammate Jim Dwyer said: "I'm playing regular for the first time in my major league career and it's going to end because of the strike. I'll go home (Evergreen Park, Ill.) and hope they get it settled fast."

Bumby bats Orioles to win

BALTIMORE (UPI) — Al Bumby drove in two runs with a pair of singles and Scott McGrew pitched a two-hitter Thursday night to lead the Baltimore Orioles to a 5-1 victory over the Detroit Tigers.

McGrew, 2-2, was tagged for Frank Kemp's fifth homer in the first inning, but settled down to record his first complete game in seven starts and seventh victory in eight career decisions against Detroit.

Rookie Dan Graham opened a two-run second with a single off loser Dan Petty, 2-2. Terry Crowley walked and both runners moved up on DeCinces sacrifice bunt.

Gary Roenicke was intentionally walked and after Rich Dauer's ground ball forced Roenicke enabling Graham to score, Bumby, singled, to left to break a 1-1 tie.

The Orioles scored their other three runs in the eighth on RBI singles by Doug DeCinces, Gary Roenicke and Bumby.

McGrew, who gave up a double to Lance Parrish in the fourth inning, retired the last 17 batters in a row.

Yanks 5, Jays 1

TORONTO (UPI) — Rookie Joe Lefebvre homered in his first major-league game and Bobby Brown doubled in two runs to give the New York Yankees a 5-1 victory over the Toronto Blue Jays.

With the scored tied 1-1 in the eighth, Ruppert Jones and Graig Nettles hit back-to-back singles off Toronto starter and loser Dave Stieb, 4-2. Jones stole third and Nettles advanced on a passed ball, before Jim Spencer walked, setting the stage for Brown's double.

Lefebvre walked and Rick Cerreto's sacrifice fly scored Spencer, chasing Stieb.ucky Dent then singled in Brown to give New York a 5-1 lead. The Yankees had tied it 1-1 in the seventh on Lefebvre's blast over the right-field fence. Toronto scored their lone run in the fourth on Al Wood's RBI double.

Griffin, 1-2, scattered seven hits over seven innings, before giving way to Gossage.

Royals 16, A's 2

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — John Wathan hit a three-run homer to highlight a 16-2 victory Wednesday night that carried the Royals to a 16-2 victory Wednesday night over the Oakland A's.

Wathan's first home run of the year — highlighted — scored at least one run as the Royals set their season high for hits and runs. Willie Wilson, Darrell Porter, Willie Alkens, and Clint Hurdle all collected three hits with Wilson and Alkens also scoring three runs each.

Bennie Martin scattered seven hits in upping his record to 4-1. The converted relief pitcher allowed solo batters to Tony Armas and Wayne Gross, but still remained unbeaten in four major league starts, all this month.

Texas 12, Angels 2

ARLINGTON, Texas (UPI) — Bump Wills and Buddy Bell each hit two-run homers in the fourth inning and two

Texas pitchers combined for a club-record 15 strikeouts Thursday night in rallying the Rangers to a 12-6 victory over the California Angels.

Bell, who drove in four runs overall and went 4-for-5 with two homers, knocked in Wills in the first inning with a single and Mickey Rivers drove in three runs with a double in the second to give the Rangers a 4-1 lead. But California struck for three runs in the third — three coming on a bases-loaded double by Al Cowens — to put the Angels in front 6-4.

Texan then sent 11 men to the plate in the fourth, scoring six runs and taking the lead for good against loser Don Anco, 3-4. Jim Sundberg started the inning with a double and scored on Mickey Rivers' single. Wills then delivered his second homer of the year, APOI over followed with a single and, after Ance was relieved by Jim Barr, Bell hit his first homer of the night.

Sundberg later singled in Richie Zisk with the inning's sixth run and Bell delivered a solo homer in the seventh. Danny Darwin reliever Jon Matlack in the third and struck out 10 batters in boosting his record to 3-1. Matlack had struck out five while giving up all six California runs.

Pitts 6, Pirates 4

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Pinch-hitter Dave Winfield smashed a game-tying home run and Jerry Mumphrey and Jerry Turner followed with RBI singles in the ninth inning Thursday night to lift the San Diego Padres to a 6-4 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates.

With one out in the ninth, Winfield's fifth homer of the year came off reliever and loser Kent Kettner, 5-2. Ozzie Smith then singled, stole second, and scored over Mumphrey's single to right. Grant Jackson replaced Kettner and got Gene Richards on an infield out, but then Turner looped a single, scoring Mumphrey.

The victory went to reliever Bob Shirley, 3-1, who pitched two hitless innings. Trailing 4-0, the Padres scored two runs in the sixth on a Bert Blayden balk and Willie Mays' RBI double. Bill Fahey singled home Richards in the eighth to pull San Diego to 4-3.

Steve Nicosita hit his first homer of the year — a two-run shot in the second — to give the Pirates a 2-0 lead and Lee Lacy added a solo shot in the third.

Astros 8, Mets 5

NEW YORK (UPI) — Cesar Cedeno and Craig Reynolds smashed home runs and Houston pounded five New York pitchers for 17 hits Thursday night to help Joe Niekro to his fifth victory, an 8-5 decision over the Mets.

Niekro, who was reached for 11 hits by New York, pitched 6 2/3 innings. Frank LaCorte finished up for his fourth year.

Cedeno's homer was a two-run blast off reliever Kevin Kobel, 0-4, in the fifth inning. Mark Bombardk had started for the Mets but lasted just 1 1/3 innings, giving up five hits, including Reynolds' solo shot in the first.

Rafael Landestoy and Enos Cabell had three hits each for Houston.

Frank Taveras had four hits and Steve Henderson threw to lead the Mets. New York first baseman Lee Mazzilli was ejected after arguing his strikeout call in the eighth inning.

Jackson loses $5,500 daily

TORONTO (UPI) — Reggie Jackson, the outspoken slugger of the New York Yankees, says a major league baseball strike will be just as hard on the game's millionaire as it is on the journeyman players.

"What about me?" said Jackson, who fielded questions before Thursday night's game with the Toronto Blue Jays. A strike has been called for Friday.

"Don't tell me about the little guy. I'm losing $5,500 a day (because of the strike)," said the Yankees' player representative. "The Jacksons and Seavers (Tom of the Cincinnati Reds) are making it possible for the other guys to make a living. Just like the Aarons and the Mays' made it possible for me to make a living."

Some reporters were surprised by Jackson's statement since it has been reported that he has a guaranteed contract with the Yankees protecting him against financials during any strike.

"I'm not going to tell you my deal — you got no right to know what I make. I hit the ball over and over," Jackson kidded. "That (the guaranteed contract) is for me to know and for you to find out."

Jackson is currently playing on a 5-year agreement signed in 1977. He said he will supplement his income in the next few weeks by doing television commercials.

Jackson suggested the entire baseball season should be called off if the negotiations do not produce a fairly prompt resolution.

"If it goes for more weeks I think we should just forget it," he said.

Olympic struggle

Boycott call answered by 46 and ignored by 42 others

LONDON (UPI) — With the deadline for accepting Moscow's invitation just two days away, Israel's Olympic Committee voted Thursday to boycott the Moscow Olympics.

The Israeli decision brought the tally of nations boycotting the games to 46. At the latest count 42 countries have said they will compete.

The 25-17 vote to stay away by Israel's Olympic Committee was in line with the recommendations of the Israeli government that Israel's athletes should respond to the boycott call of its staunchest ally, the United States.

As the May 24 deadline for accepting Moscow's invitation approached, a host of smaller nations have made up their minds to stay away including Hong Kong, the Philippines, Indonesia, the Bahamas and Sudan.

But the United Arab Emirates decided Thursday to participate in the Olympics, following the earlier decision by its Gulf neighbor, Kuwait, to go to Moscow. Colombia was another late decider in favor of sending its team to the Olympics.

The response to the American-led boycott over the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan has been disappointing among those European nations that usually field strong competition at the Olympic Games. West Germany is the only Common Market country to say no to Moscow.

Britain's Olympic Committee decided to compete in defiance of the Thatcher government's recommendations to stay away and France followed suit May 13.

In a flurry of activity Monday, Austria, Belgium, Iceland, Ireland and Sweden all decided to take part in the Games by large majorities votes.

Turkey's Olympic Committee seemed certain to vote against going to the Games Friday after the government recommended a boycott. Spain's decision was more uncertain, with the Madrid government urging a boycott but the nation's sportsmen favoring attendance.

The Belgian government said Thursday it will not be sending an official delegation to the Olympic Games and will not help finance Belgian athletes going to Moscow.

A $483,000 grant from the national lottery to help cover the cost of participating in the Olympics will be withheld.

Belgium has also scrapped the issue of a special Olympics postage stamp. Instead, it will issue a stamp commemorating Belgian athlete Ivo Van Damme, a silver medalist at the Montreal Games who was killed a few months later in a car crash.

Preakness hearing over foul claim slated for June 2

BALTIMORE (UPI) — The Maryland thoroughbred racing board will hold a hearing May 2 on an appeal filed by the owners of Genuine Risk challenging the dismissal of a foul claim against Codex in last Saturday's Preakness, officials said Thursday.

The thoroughbred board of the Maryland Racing Commission said the hearing will be held at Pimlico Race Course, where the track stewards and attorneys for Bert and Diana Firestone will review an alleged incident at the top of the stretch that the Firestones say cost their Kentucky Derby winner a chance at winning the second leg of the Triple Crown.

Genuine Risk's jockey, Jacinto Vasquez, said Codex bumped his horse as the field came around the far turn. He also said Codex's rider, Angel Cordero, struck Genuine Risk with his whip.

The stewards deliberated 10 minutes after the race before dismissing the foul claim. The Firestones took the decision calmly Saturday, but announced on Monday they would appeal.

The commission has held up distribution of the $250,000 purse until a decision is made. But, wagging results will not be affected, it ruled.

Meanwhile, the state attorney general's office announced it is investigating comment made by a member of the five-man thoroughbred board of the Maryland Racing Commission that could lead to his disqualification on the Preakness ruling.

Alan Foreman, an assistant attorney general attached to the racing commission, said Attorney General Stephen Sachs will decide whether board member Robert Furick should be disqualified from voting on the matter for remarks he made to a reporter.

Furick told the Baltimore News American Tuesday, "When I heard so appeal was filed, I said, 'Hurry, hurry, hurry... I may look at the films and think Cordero is an angel. But I don't think he's an angel.'"

Furick was not available for comment Thursday. Commission Chairman Robert W. Banning said earlier this week commission members will not comment on the appeal until it is settled.

If Furick is disqualified, the Firestones would need three of the four remaining members to vote in their favor to overturn the stewards' decision.

The commission has overruled the stewards in the past, although only once in a similar situation. That came last September, when the board disqualified the winner of a claiming race at Timonium after viewing films. Pimlico officials said telegrams and telephone calls denouncing the stewards still are being received.

Appeal court upholds decision against U.S. athletes

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A federal appeals court Thursday turned down a challenge by 25 American athletes to the U.S. Olympic Committee's authority to boycott the summer games in Moscow.

Following the decision, a lawyer for the athletes who wanted to compete in the Olympic Games, said they will not pursue further appeals because of "time and simply the judgment that it would not be worthwhile."

The appeals court had asked the Circuit Court of Appeals to order the USOC to accept Moscow's invitation to the games.

But the three-judge panel upheld a ruling by U.S. District Judge John Pratt, who last week dismissed the case on grounds nothing in the International Olympic Committee charter requires the USOC to take part in an Olympic contest.

The appeals court acted in a brief order after hearing oral arguments by lawyers representing the Olympic Committee and the athletes.

The U.S. Olympic Committee voted not to attend the Summer Olympics April 12, bowing to President Carter's demand for a punitive boycott in response to the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan.

The athletes, including two 1976 Olympic gold medal winners, filed suit charging the USOC decision violated their constitutional rights and their right to take part in the games.

The athletes who filed the suit included Olympic gold medal winners Mac Wilkins of Souquel, Calif., who won the discus throw in 1976, and Arnie Robinson of San Diego, who won the long jump.

During oral arguments Thursday, William Allen, lawyer for the athletes, contended the 1978 Amateur Sports Act, which gives the USOC its charter, does not allow it to prevent U.S. participation in the event.

He told the court the USOC's role is to safeguard the right of athletes to participate in Olympic Games — not to make political decisions.

"Congress expected that if there were Olympic Games, this committee would see that the United States was represented," Allen said.

"In this case, years of training and personal and financial sacrifice would be lost... for in Olympic sports there is no substitute except the Olympics," he said.

But Olympic committee lawyer Patrick Sullivan said that under the International Olympic Committee's rules, the American organization has the right not to attend the games.

"If you have the right to participate, you have the right not to participate," he argued.

Russians call boycott failure

MOSCOW (UPI) — The Soviet sports daily Sovetskiy Sport Thursday pronounced President Carter's Olympic boycott a failure.

"A few days before the entry deadline, it can already be said with certainty, the anti-Olympic campaign, unleashed by irascible reactionary circles, has suffered a defeat," said the paper.

"A majority of National Olympic Committees did not put their heads in the collar held out by the boycott's initiators. The sporting public of the planet came to the defense of Olympic ideals, to the support of the Olympic movement."

The entry deadline for countries wishing to take part in the Moscow Olympics is May 24.

Afghanistan week bill introduced

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Legislation asking President Carter to declare July 21-27, the week the Moscow Olympics open, as "Afghanistan Relief Week" was introduced by Rep. Lester Wolff, D-N.Y., Thursday.

Wolff said in a House floor speech that the legislation would "help focus the attention of the Congress, the American people and the world on the situation of the nearly 1 million refugees from Afghanistan, and on what Afghanistan represents to the world."

Carter has forbidden American athletes to participate in the Moscow Olympics as a sign of protest of the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan.

In a letter to Carter, Wolff said, "Such a proclamation by you would enhance the understanding of the American people and the world community of the issues involved in the struggle of the people of Afghanistan for their freedom."

Wolff was joined in the legislation and letter by Rep. Millicent Fenwick, R-N.J., and Sens. Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., Jacob Javits, R-N.Y., Charles Percy, R-Ill., and James Exon, D-Neb.

Gold medal nations snub U.S. call

PARIS (UPI) — The U.S. call for a boycott of the Moscow Olympics has failed to attract a high percentage of the most successful nations at the last two Games.

Only the United States, West Germany, Kenya and Norway of those 22 countries that won at least two gold medals at either Munich or Montreal are currently planning not to attend the Games.

Decisions are still awaited from Australia, whose competitors won eight titles in 1972 but none in 1976, and Japan, winner of 13 gold medals in Munich and nine in Montreal.

In 1976, 88 countries attended the Games, despite the Black African boycott. The International Olympic Committee announced Wednesday 78 nations have already accepted invitations for Moscow.

Permanent site report ready

LAUSANNE, Switzerland (UPI) — A four-member International Olympic Committee commission will report at the Moscow Olympics on moving the Games to a permanent site in Greece, it was announced Thursday.

IOC President Lord Killian said the commission chairman, Louis Guindroux-N'Daye, IOC member for the Ivory Coast, visited several sites near Olympia at the end of April.

N'Daye and three other commission members will compile a report to be submitted to the 83rd IOC session in Moscow.

The commission was set up after a proposal to the IOC at the Lake Placid Winter Games earlier this year from Constantine Karamanlis, the Greek prime minister at the time.

The commission's brief is to "examine the possibility of staging the Games on a permanent basis at an ex-territorial site at Olympia in Greece," Lord Killian said.

The three other commission members are IOC member for Canada James Worrall, Pedro Ramirez Vazquez of Mexico and the Greek IOC member, Nikolos Nissiotis.

Wildcats' Kyle Macy signs with Phoenix

PHOENIX, Ariz. (UPI) — Guard Kyle Macy of Kentucky, drafted a year ago as a junior-eligible, has signed a multi-year contract with the Phoenix Suns, the National Basketball Association team announced Thursday.

Macy, 6-foot-3 and 188 pounds, was the last player taken in the first round of the 1979 draft, with the Suns selecting him on a pick obtained in a trade with the Washington Bullets. The junior-eligible rule was dropped by the league this season and underclassmen now have to renounce their "college eligibility" to become eligible for the draft.

The Suns had to sign Macy by June 10 or he would have been subject to this year's draft. Because of that deadline, Suns' general manager Jerry Colangelo watched Macy throughout the season and began negotiations May 5 with Macy's agent.

Macy called the negotiations "tough" but said, "both sides were very fair." Terms of the contract were not released, in line with the Suns' policy.

Macy, who helped Kentucky to the 1978 national championship, topped the Wildcats in scoring with 15.4 points a game last season. He also was the team leader in assists and shot 51.2 percent from the free-throw line. His career assist total of 470 is a Kentucky record.

The Suns already have four guards on their roster, including starters Paul Westphal, one of the NBA's top scorers, and Don Buse, a defensive specialist, and reserves Johnny High and Mike Brant. However, there have been reports that Westphal and Buse could be trade bait and that the other guards could be placed in next week's expansion draft.

Andretti leads carburetion test

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — Mario Andretti, one of the "Fearsome Foursome" drivers in the minds of rivals, posted the fastest time in Thursday's carburetion testing with a speed of 189.854 mph.

respond. A lower boost causes a flat out situation on the track and leaves not too much margin for error."

finish a race in 10 previous starts at the Speedway, failed to reach 180. His 177.130 was achieved despite some engine problems.

Dan Ongais, left, and John Rutherford share a laugh during break

Of Andretti's two Penske stablemates, defending champion Rick Mears came in with a 188.000 and Bobby Unser had a 184.011 lap around the 3.1/2 mile Indianapolis Motor Speedway.

Pole-sitter Johnny Rutherford, the other member of the feared Big Four, furnished the second best speed at 189.874 on a day that provided drivers and crews with their final tuneup before Sunday's Indianapolis 500 mile race.

Andretti, still weighing a decision concerning his future in Grand Prix Formula One racing, doesn't feel too stringently about the old adage, "life begins at 40."

"At 40, I feel every move must count," he said. "I can't afford to make a wrong decision because my life is getting shorter and shorter."

His ability to achieve speed, however, doesn't seem to have suffered.

There was one minor mishap on the track when Tom Bagley, also 30-years-old and competing in his third Indy race, lagged the wall in turn three. Bagley escaped injury but the car suffered tub and suspension damage, which are expected to be repaired in time for the race.

Spike Gehlhausen had the fourth fastest speed of the day at 184.149. The rookie Tim Richmond, who had his year's fastest practice lap speed, clocked the speed trap at 184.918.

J.J. Foyt, seeking an unprecedented fifth victory at the Brickyard, clocked a 182.078; three-time winner Al Unser was clocked at 181.108 and Danny Ongais at 181.159.

Mears, qualifying sixth at 187.490, said his crew had cleared up a blower problem, enabling him to get a few more revs and additional speed.

Gehlhausen, a local product from Speedway, Ind., said his time Thursday was indicative of the car's performance.

"And being up front (inside on the second row) has changed our strategy," Gehlhausen said. "We're just going to stick with Rutherford because we figure he's the one to beat. We're going to have a strategy session tomorrow and I'm going to try not to think about the race too much."

Mears credits technology and the ground effects design of his car for the Penske-Cosworth's ability to maintain a 100-mph speed despite a drop in air pressure from 50 to 48 inches.

"It's only a mile slower, but it has been worse," said Mears, who noted that the lowering of pressure "could make the race a little more dangerous."

"If you lose downforce during the race, your car will handle harder. You can't afford to let off on the throttle at the 100-mph level or else you'll find yourself a half lap back before you know it. But I'm not particularly worried about the situation. If I was, I might as well go home now."

"I don't know what the right combination is for a safer ride. Having the boost at 60 was pretty good pressure. Now that, it takes the car longer to

It's a business Cincinnati knows strike cost to penny

CINCINNATI (UPI) — Each weekday game canceled — $388,000. Each Saturday or Sunday game canceled — $500,000.

That's the Cincinnati-business-community's economic loss to a baseball players' strike, according to Cincinnati Chamber of Commerce executive vice president Farnesley Peters.

These figures include the slumps at restaurants and hotels and losses in ticket, parking and concession sales.

So a baseball strike would have a multi-million dollar impact on Cincinnati — immediately because the Reds had a gigantic Memorial Day weekend homestand on top — six games in five days, Friday through Tuesday.

The big attraction was a doubleheader against the archrival Los Angeles Dodgers Monday — Memorial Day.

Before the threat of a strike, the entire five-day homestand probably could have been counted on to lure a total of nearly 200,000 fans to Memorial Stadium.

Cincinnati's city government also stands to lose as much as $45,000 for each date canceled by a strike.

That revenue usually comes in from rental of the city-owned stadium to the Reds, city-owned parking lots underneath and surrounding the stadium and the city tax levied on game tickets and concessions sold at the ballpark.

As the strike deadline approached, Reds President Dick Wagner sent a two-page letter to season ticket holders, giving his side of the negotiating story.

Wagner noted that the average annual salary of a major-league ballplayer is $150,000 and said he couldn't "conceive" why players would strike.

Wagner also included this grim note: "There is nothing so sacred about a baseball club that says it has to stay in business; and if we can't control our business destiny, then there will be no ballclub to pay the player's salary."

Meanwhile, Wagner told reporters, "I think this (strike threat) is a great mistake. If you take the time to read what has been offered to the players, it's inconceivable why there would be a strike. Inconceivable, beyond belief."

But Wagner has been making strike plans: — During a players' strike, he keeps Manager John McNamara and all coaches on the payroll but assigns them to minor league instructional duty and scouting work.

— Reds radio network broadcasters Marty Brennaman and Joe Nuxhall also get shipped to the minors, to Denver on Saturday, for instance, to broadcast the Class AAA game between the Reds' Indianapolis farm team and the Denver Broncos.

— The strike threat left Reds' star catcher Johnny Bench "frustrated."

"You work so hard to make the game a great tradition," said Bench. "You wonder why it comes down to round-the-clock negotiations the last day to keep that tradition intact. It's just frustrating as hell—I'll be glad when it's all over."

Several Reds' players look a light-headed approach about their strike plans.

"I'm driving up to the Yukon to trap grizzly bears," said pitcher Mike LaCoss.

Pitcher Tom Hume, asked how long he could go without a paycheck, said, "One day."

Greenberg sides with players in row

NEW YORK (UPI) — Hall of Famer Hank Greenberg, who was both a player and a baseball owner in his time, said Thursday he was "partial to the players" in their contractual statements with the owners. "I think the players are right in this particular case," said the former Detroit Tiger first baseman who hit 58 homers in 1938.

Decathlon star may be blossoming

BOSTON (UPI) — Tom and Mike Brown, a pair of 6-foot-6 identical twins, arrived at Springfield College four years ago hopeful of displaying their athletic skills on the basketball court.

Mike wound up on the track team over a $40 promise for jumping shoes and emerged as one of the country's brightest stars in the decathlon. And he is not injured, a shoulder, he might have opted for the North American Soccer League.

Tom finished as the starting first baseman on the baseball team and in the Chiefs' last game, a 1-0 victory over Williams, he hit a homer and had Springfield's only two hits. The performance came after he had missed several games with a bad back that was still bothering him.

The Browns are black and are the adopted sons of white parents who live in Old Greenwich, Conn. Their father is a carpenter, the mother a housewife. It is a situation which Mike Brown feels has helped him off the field.

Mike makes you accept people better than others. You're aware of race and other differences. Some people can't accept that. I think a better person would be a good definition," he says.

To one who seems to doubt either one's ability on the field, Tom thinks Mike is the better athlete and so did the Springfield coaches, who recently named Mike Springfield's athlete of the year.

I had to take up track as a requirement for physical education," said Mike Brown, who owns the American decathlon record and placed sixth in his first decathlon in April after just two weeks of pole vaulting. "I didn't even start until the end of the year. I'm still new at it. I practice three to four hours a day and it's quite a grind."

Mike Brown, says coach Ken Kalka, was discovered by accident in gym class.

"There he was, high jumping in crummy sneakers. Bad technique. I told him I'd buy him a pair of high jump shoes for $40 if he'd come out. The first meet he did 6-foot-8. I've never seen anybody with the raw ability and talent he has. He's quicker and faster" than (Bruce) Jenner," Kalka says.

Mike Brown briefly considered pro soccer, until he injured his shoulder early last fall. He then devoted himself strictly to track and field and now has just one goal in mind — the 1984 Olympics. He plans to move to California and find a job, any job, that won't interfere with his training.

"My sights are set on Los Angeles for the decathlon. As long as I stay injury free, I feel I can make the team and participate," he says.

Tom Brown had played baseball since he was six and had hoped to play both baseball and basketball — at Springfield. But a knee injury ended his basketball career so he concentrated on baseball. He was a little slower in showing his promise than his brother.

"I never saw him as a freshman, but I heard he was nothing special," said baseball coach Charlie Roys. "As a sophomore he received spot service and when I took over as head coach in his junior year, he was my primary first baseman."

"There's probably no one who worked as hard as Tommy or played with more courage and tenacity under adversity; that bad back would keep an average person off the field. It's just a reflection of his character," Roys says.

Gillett denies being ousted

BURLEY — Former Burley basketball Coach Ron Gillett said Wednesday he was not fired from that position but in reality had resigned first.

Gillett said he resigned for various factors he felt impeded the success of the basketball program. The following day, he agreed to withdraw the resignation following discussion with school administrators.

Gillett said some of the points of the agreement were abrogated, which resulted in some litigation. Following a court judgment, the Cassia County school board terminated his contract.

"I resigned before they fired me," Gillett said, adding several newspaper items on the incident had incorrectly said he had been ousted.

Carey names top athletes

CAREY — Troy Murray was a double winner when Carey High School honored their outstanding athletes Wednesday.

Murray was cited as the outstanding basketball player and track man. The football award went to Deloy Dillworth.

The girls awards went to Lisa Peterson in volleyball, Linda Hunt in basketball and Holly O'Crowley in track.

Morton to leave track

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI) — Former Sen. Thurston B. Morton, R-Ky., plans to announce his retirement next month as chairman of Churchill Downs Inc., home of the Kentucky Derby.

"I've been at it long enough," said the 72-year-old Morton. "Frankly, my health hasn't been the best."

Morton, who was elected chairman of the thoroughbred track 11 years ago, said he would formally announce his resignation at the annual meeting of the track shareholders June 3.

Morton, a former national Republican chairman, was elected chairman of the track's board of directors in 1969 after he successfully led a fight opposing a track takeover move mounted by National Industries Inc. of Louisville.

Morton, who served in the U.S. Senate from 1957-69, formerly served a director of the American Horse Council, an industry trade group he co-founded in 1969.

Coaches deny physical abuse charge

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Howard University football coach Floyd Keith and assistant Tom Perry Thursday curiously denied charges by players who said their athletic scholarships have been withdrawn or reduced and others who complained they were physically abused and threatened with the loss of their scholarships.

Keith and Perry "deny" the charges, "what" asked about the players' charges made in interviews with The Washington Post.

Several players at the predominantly black school accused Keith of forcing an injured player to practice against doctor's orders, running a mandatory supervised off-season weight training program in violation of NCAA rules and failing to provide copies of scholarship contracts to the players, also in violation of NCAA rules.

Sixers sign 6-7 forward

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — The Philadelphia 76ers Thursday signed center-forward Keith McCord of the University of Alabama at Birmingham to a multi-year contract.

The 6-foot-7 McCord was chosen by the Sixers in the 1979 draft as a junior, but delayed signing a contract to finish college, a team spokesman said.

The 22-year-old Birmingham native led his college in scoring, rebounding and blocked shots last season. He was named to the All-Sun Belt Conference's first team and was named his school's most valuable player.

The Sixers spokesman said McCord will attend the team's camp in September.

What's what

'Damaged goods' term led to word 'average'

To sculpt a statue, you envision the form you want, then chisel away the imperfect rock that doesn't quite fit. So said Michelangelo. Or words to that effect. In principle, this is similar to the technique required to come up with one good idea, is it not? You think up 1,000 ideas, then toss out the 999 that don't work. Some artists work that way, too. The small part is painting in the picture. The big part is painting out what's better left unseen.

When an old-time merchant received damaged goods, he had to average their cost across all the goods he sold, that just to come out even. Our word "average" comes from the Arabic which originally meant "damaged goods."

You can figure a horse in the Kentucky Derby will lose from 10 to 15 pounds during the race, depending on the day's temperature.

DIAMONDS

Q. How many diamonds have been mined since their discovery?
A. By weight, about 200 tons.

Far more breast lumps are benign than malignant.

Q. Is there any continent where there are no butterflies?
A. Only Antarctica.

There's not even so much as one creek in Saudi Arabia.

Q. Motto of the Boy Scouts is "Be Prepared." What's the motto of the Girl Scouts?
A. The same.

MURDER

Women rarely murder the men they love for money or property. Crime researchers say that jealousy is their motive, mostly. Or the wish to get one out of the way in order to live with another.

Bear in mind, almost all female frogs are silent. Incidentally, not all the male frogs croak. Some buzz. Others squawk. And that Cuban tree frog sounds a little like a cat in the night.

There are squirrels, you know, that go straight from late-summer estivation—sleep—to winter-long hibernation—wleep. List them among the creatures that spend three-fourths of their lives in nap.

Police Convenience store clerk badly beaten

TWIN FALLS — Police were searching Thursday for an unknown assailant who left a young female clerk beaten and unconscious in the Circle K Market Wednesday night.

Debbie Stephens, 23, of Twin Falls, was found by customers about 11:55 p.m. Wednesday, Police Chief Tim Qualls said.

He said she was lying on the floor in the market on Washington Street South. She had been severely beaten about the head and was taken to Magic Valley Memorial Hospital and immediately underwent five hours of surgery.

She was taken to St. Alphonsus Hospital in Boise about 5 a.m. Thursday where she remained in critical condition late Thursday night in the intensive care unit.

Qualls said he is not releasing details of the incident to protect the investigation at this point.

He said three different customers stopped at the store and were attempting to render assistance to the injured woman after calling police. Qualls said it is not known how long she had been unconscious when found.

Robbery was not the motive, he said, as nothing was missing from the store. He said a number of persons have been questioned in an effort to provide clues to the incident.

Qualls said some time ago he attempted to get an ordinance adopted in the city prohibiting stores from allowing only one person on duty in such all-night businesses, especially in more remote areas. They are natural targets for such assaults, robbery and other crimes, he said.

Qualls said Mrs. Stephens has two small children and had worked at the market for about the past five weeks. He said she and her husband and children came to Idaho in February.

Inquiry continues into boy's death

JEROME — Authorities are continuing their inquiry into the death of an 11-year-old boy found Tuesday night in the Snake River Canyon.

Jerome County Sheriff Eliza Hall said Thursday his department has placed together several bits of useful information, but does not know enough to rule the death an accident or a homicide.

The body of Brandon Bekow was found beside his bicycle 150 feet below a cliff 500 miles from his home. He was reported missing late Monday night.

Hall said a full autopsy report will not be available until early next week. "We're checking every end," he said. "But, at this point, we don't have enough to rule it either way."

Twin Falls softball players plan to face council in June

Parks curfew change will be fought

By MARTY TRILLHAASE

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls softball players plan to ask the City Council next month to reverse its decision to impose a 10:30 p.m. curfew at city parks.

The players want the curfew pushed back to 11 p.m. and will ask the council to do that at the June 2 council meeting.

Council members Monday voted for the earlier curfew after receiving complaints from residents in the Green Acres subdivision about noise from late night ball games at Frontier Field. The city previously had an 11 p.m. curfew at Frontier Park. The ordinance specifically requires that artificial lighting be turned off at 10:30 p.m. regardless of whether a game is still in progress.

There are more than 100 softball teams in Twin Falls, most with 12 players each. The softball season, consisting of games held six nights a week, runs through July.

Most of the players feel strongly about the curfew because they had assumed the issue had been settled, women's softball league president Mary Lou Webb of Kimberly said.

The city had previously required play to halt at 11 p.m. Webb added the association had required teams to finish by that time.

None of the players spoke up at the council meeting Monday prior to the vote on the curfew because the players had not been notified in advance of the council's decision, Webb said.

"We would have been at that meeting. I feel strongly about that," she said. "There is backing in the association and we would have been there if we had proper notification." Softball officials said they will try to work within the curfew before approaching the council. Among the steps they will take is scheduling

60-minute games, thereby shaving 15 minutes off each game's allotted schedule, and holding a team to 10 runs per inning, Webb said.

But holding teams to that schedule could be difficult, she said. "It just puts too close a time limit on the game," she said. "We have people who work and that's why we start at 6:30. You never know what will happen in a game. If you have any type of an interruption, it delays the game."

City recreation department chief Chad Browning said the curfew may also cause problems for recreation program — tournaments which — frequently run past 10:30 p.m. Those tournaments must be allowed to finish or the entire tournament schedule would be disrupted, he said.

"I'm not just speaking about softball on that. I'm talking about the whole recreation program as far as tournaments are concerned," he said. Browning said he is consulting with other Idaho cities concerning how curfews are implemented. He said he believes the issues can be resolved.

Dredging act enforcement may get tougher

By STEVE LIPSON

BOISE — The Idaho Land Board may start tightening its enforcement of the state dredging act.

At its meeting Tuesday in Boise, Idaho Attorney General David Leroy, who is also a member of the Land Board, recommended several steps that could tighten the board's enforcement of the law.

The board has come under fire recently from environmentalists charging it with improperly enforcing the state's dredge mining laws. At Tuesday's board meeting, State Sen. Ken Robison of Boise said the board is not protecting the state's rivers and fisheries because it is not requiring dredge mining permits in some cases where the law appears to require them.

Environmentalists also charge the board's interpretation of the law virtually guarantees all lease applications will be accepted.

Some environmentalists also charge the state has no control over exploration with dredges. However, Stephen Allred, director of the Idaho Department of Water Resources said any dredge miner must obtain a stream channel alteration permit from the DWR before he can begin exploration.

Leroy's recommendations to the Land Board were part of a legal opinion about the state's right to grant dredging leases on portions of the Salmon River. That right was questioned by the U.S. Forest Service, which claimed the federal government, not the state, owned the stream bed.

Leroy said the state owns the stream bed and has the right to issue dredge mining leases on the Main Fork of the Salmon River, but he recommended the Land Board temporarily withhold new dredge mining leases on rivers, like portions of the Salmon which are under study for possible inclusion in the Wild and Scenic Rivers system.

As a result of the recommendation, the State Land Department plans to release a list today of portions of rivers which will be temporarily withdrawn from consideration for dredge mining leases.

The department also plans to release a set of draft regulations on dredge mining for public comment today. At Tuesday's meeting, Leroy recommended the board consider using its emergency authority to immediately adopt and begin enforcing those regulations.

The board decided to release the proposed regulations for a two-week public comment period and consider adopting them on an emergency basis at the next Land Board meeting in June. If adopted, the board could enforce the regulations for 120 days while holding public hearings and preparing a final version of the rules.

Leroy's other recommendations included: • Requiring the state departments of Fish and Game and Water Resources to comment on all dredge mining applications. These would be presented in full to the Land Board along with the recommendations of the Land Department when the board considered an application.

Leroy said the board needs more precise detail about recommendations from other state agencies than it gets in the summaries of comments the Land Department now prepares.

• Adopting a rule or supporting an amendment to the dredge mining act to limit contiguous claims in stream beds. Leroy said he finds it "offensive" when someone applies for an exclusive lease of 40 miles of stream bed.

• Insisting the Department of Lands be given sufficient numbers of field and technical people to properly enforce the dredge mining laws.

Pat Ford, executive director of the Idaho Conservation League, said he agreed with most of Leroy's recommendations. But, he said, the key to addressing the concerns of environmentalists is in the proposed dredge mining regulations, which have only been seen by members of the Land Board.

While the Land Board waited for Leroy's opinion on the ownership of the Salmon stream bed, it imposed a moratorium on new dredge mining leases on the Salmon, Boise and Snake rivers. According to Mark Riddoch, the Land Department's legal counsel, about 15 lease applications are being held up by the moratorium. He said the board has not decided when it will consider those applications.

Although the state is withholding leases for stream beds on rivers where an ownership dispute could arise with the federal government, the state's claim of ownership could set off a confrontation over exploration rights between dredge miners and the Forest Service.

Allan Ashton, supervisor of the Sawtooth National Recreation Area, said claims have been filed on virtually every inch of the Salmon River inside the SNRA since last January. If the state owns the stream bed, miners need only a permit from the state water resources department to begin exploration work with dredges.

But Ashton said he has sent letters to all the people with claims along the Salmon telling them the Forest Service considers the area withdrawn from mineral exploration and will not permit any dredging.

Teachers select new officers

TWIN FALLS — Connie Hutchison will be the new president of the Twin Falls Education Association for the 1989-90 school year.

New officers of the TFEA were installed at an executive council meeting Tuesday.

Mrs. Hutchison is a third-grade teacher at Morning-Lauden Elementary School. She succeeds Dick Lautenberg as president.

Other new officers are Jack Matthews, a math teacher at Robert Stuart Junior High School who was re-elected vice president; Karin Evasz, a sixth-grade teacher at Lincoln Elementary School who was re-elected treasurer; and Vickie Ainsworth, a resource-room teacher at Lincoln who was elected secretary.

House candidates debating

CASTLEFORD — Rep. Roy Brackett, R-Twin Falls, and his two Democratic opponents, William Chisholm and George Anthony, will attend a public forum tonight in Castleford.

Brackett represents District 24 in the House of Representatives. That district contains the western two-thirds of Twin Falls County.

Falls entry fee tallies $716

TWIN FALLS — Following a weekend take of $716, city officials are optimistic the $1 admittance fee at Shoshone Falls could turn a profit.

The fee does generate more money than necessary to administer the fee collection and park maintenance, several park improvements could be financed, City Manager Tom Courtney said, including improved parking facilities and land rehabilitation.

Despite the first weekend receipts, the city won't know how much money it can expect the fee to generate at least for 30 days, he said. The City Council may review the fee in mid-June, he said.

The fee, charged for every vehicle entering the park, was established last year by the City Council as a means to control vandalism, maintain the park; and to pay for the costs of administering the fee. The city began charging the fee on a weekend basis Saturday. Officials planned to charge the fee daily following the Memorial Day weekend, but the daily charge was implemented this week.

Castleford, the forum begins at 8 p.m. in the Aed Barrel, the youth center in Castleford.

Anthony and Chisholm are vying for the Democratic nomination in Tuesday's primary election. The nominee will go on to face Brackett in the general election.

3 seniors housing plans to HUD

GLENN'S FERRY — Three Magic Valley housing projects for senior citizens have been tentatively approved by the Idaho Housing

Seven low-income housing projects in the Magic Valley were considered by the IHA, but only three have been forwarded to the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development for approval.

The housing proposals find tentative approval by the IHA are: • A 48-unit apartment building for Rupert area senior citizens. The project is tentatively called C Street Manor and is being developed by Borton Development of Weiser.

Westside Court has been proposed for Gooding by Max Boesiger of Meridian. Originally proposed for 36 units housed in two buildings, the IHA has recommended the project be reduced to 30 units. The proposed site is at the intersection of California Avenue and 14th Street.

Amstutz Apartments is a rehabilitation project proposed for Glenn's Ferry by Bonnie McGinnis and John Williams of Boise. The project would remodel 12 units on South Ada Street to be occupied by senior citizens or handicapped people with low-income.

"We haven't issued any commitments on these projects yet," Karen Scovel, IHA housing development officer, said Wednesday. "We have selected the three proposals for further study, but we can't make any funding commitments until there is HUD approval."

About 70 low-income housing proposals were considered by the IHA this spring.

Once HUD approval is granted, construction costs and long term loans will be provided by IHA to low-cost housing developers. HUD would subsidize the tenants' rent.

Scovel said HUD should respond to the funding applications in about 60 days.

Blood drawing in Buhl begins at 10 a.m.

BUHL — The Red Cross bloodmobile will hold a regular blood drawing from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. today at the Buhl Moose Hall on Main Street.

Mrs. Alene McKecker, blood program chairman for the American Red Cross Buhl chapter, said employees are urged to allow their employees time off so they may participate in the drawing.

She said with vacation time starting the tourist season under way and increased farm activity the need for blood is increasingly urgent.

"Along with the emergencies, there are always the scheduled surgeries, making a demand for blood transfusions ever increasing with our increasing growth of population in this area," she said.

The chairman also pointed out that 17-year-olds are eligible to donate blood, as are persons up to age 65.

Idaho

Volcano

Health problem study begun by DHW

Idaho Health and Welfare Department officials have begun compiling information on possible health problems associated with the volcanic ash that has reached Idaho.

Air monitors in the Coeur d'Alene, Lewiston and Silver Valley area registered amounts of the volcanic ash "far in excess of emergency levels" Sunday and Monday, officials said.

On the size of particles would be needed to assess possible damage to respiration. They said most of the ash reaching Idaho is too large to be breathed into the lungs, but more data on the smaller particles would make it possible to assess health effects.

Ash causes problems with water supply

KELLOGG (UPI) — The Panhandle Health District is urging northern Idaho residents who receive water from a surface source to obtain their drinking supplies from an underground well as long as volcanic ash persists.

Some 30,000 industrial-type face masks will be distributed by the department for emergency personnel, such as police and road maintenance workers and for people with respiratory ailments, they said.

The following components were found in the volcanic ash in the corresponding percentages: silica, 49.6 percent; aluminum oxide, 12.9 percent; iron oxide, 4.4 percent; lime, 3.2 percent; sodium oxide 5.1; potassium oxide, 2.0; sulfur, 0.03; and magnesium oxide 1.2.

Man caught breaking 35 mph speed limit

WALLACE (UPI) — A Michigan man driving twice as fast as authorized on ash-covered Interstate 90 caused a three-car pile-up just outside Coeur d'Alene, Shoshone County authorities said.

Emmett Thomas was pursued and pulled over at Smelterville, 10 miles west of the accident scene.

Deputies said Thomas was driving a truck pulling a boat and trailer about 55 to 60 mph. The speed limit in the wake of the ash fallout is 35 mph, they said.

Record long-distance phone calls made

BOISE (UPI) — Idaho's record for the most long-distance calls in one day was broken by nearly 60,000 Monday as Panhandle counties were staggered by ash from volcanic Mount St. Helens.

Telephone Co. officials said. Spokesman Hart Carlson said 60,000 calls were attempted, compared to the previous high of 600,000 on Christmas Day last year. The second-highest mark was set Tuesday with 630,000 calls, Carlson said.

Some 75 percent of the calls were successful, with the remaining attempts failing because of jammed circuits, he said.

Ashton commencement set in high school auditorium

BOISE (UPI) — Students at an eastern Idaho public high school were not to hold their graduation ceremony at a Mormon church Thursday in compliance with Idaho U.S. District Chief Judge Ray McNichols' order prohibiting it.

McNichols issued the preliminary injunction barring the religious location Wednesday "with reluctance," noting the dispute between the Mormon majority and the non-Mormon minority in the Ashton area could better have been solved by citizens working together.

going to school at North-Fremont High and here the school board wants to put graduation in the church without thinking about us," said Dennis Lent, 18, who testified during the day's proceedings. "It's a religious building."

Six graduating seniors in the class of 57 students, their parents and an Ashton resident filed suit against North Fremont High School this week seeking the injunction before Thursday night's commencement. They said their constitutional rights to freedom of religion and guarantees that church and state be separated would be violated if graduation were held at the Ashton Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints State Center.

The students and their parents said they would boycott the ceremony if it were held at the Mormon church, noting the religious building alone symbolized and, in fact, embodied beliefs with which they did not agree.

Prosecution rests in LeBaron trial

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — The prosecution rested its case Thursday in the first-degree-murder trial of Ervil LeBaron after another witness testified that the 55-year-old polygamist leader was dedicated to killing his rivals.

LeBaron is charged with ordering the 1977 slaying of Dr. Ron Allred, the 72-year-old leader of about 2,500 Utah polygamists. The defendant is also accused of plotting to kill his brother, Verlan LeBaron, at Allred's funeral, a plan that was abandoned because the service was guarded by police.

Carmel Jensen said she met and talked with LeBaron three times in Ogden, Utah, in 1975. During those conversations she said Ervil told her that Verlan had done things that were "abominable in the sight of the Lord."

Mrs. Jensen is a member of a plural sect led by Verlan LeBaron. Other witnesses testified that Verlan was named the patriarch of the Church of the Firstborn of the Fulness of Times after Ervil was removed from that position through excommunication.

"He said Verlan had accepted a position that put him as a traitor to the kingdom, and that sooner or later, he would have to be annihilated," she said.

Mrs. Jensen also testified that LeBaron also made threats against the life of Allred.

"He told me Rulon had been given many years to come forth and deliver his means and his congregation," she said.

Prosecutor David Yocom claimed LeBaron wanted to take control of the "congregation" and — $125,000 Utah paid by its members — each year.

Allred, a naturopathic physician, was shot to death by two women who burst into his Murray, Utah, office. Yocom claimed the woman who fired the fatal shot was Rena Chynoweth, one of LeBaron's plural wives. Ms. Chynoweth was acquitted in a trial one year ago.

Judge Ernest Baldwin denied several defense motions to dismiss the case or reduce the charges against LeBaron. Those charges include one count of first-degree murder in the Allred killing, a count of attempted murder in the plot to kill Verlan, and two counts of conspiracy.

G. Fred Metos, a member of the legal team representing LeBaron, told Baldwin the state had not proved the murders were ordered for pecuniary gain or that the lives of others were threatened during the Allred slaying. Those two factors are critical to maintaining the capital murder charge against the defendant, Metos said.

He also asked the judge to dismiss the attempted murder charge because there was no proof that an assassination team allegedly sent by LeBaron took a "substantial step" toward killing Verlan.

And the defense lawyer told Baldwin there was no concrete evidence proving that LeBaron directly ordered the killings during meetings in Albuquerque and Evanston, Wyo., as claimed by prosecution witnesses.

"Then you and I have heard two different sets of evidence," replied the judge.

The jury was not present for the arguments over the motions.

President gets blame for MX plans defeat

WASHINGTON (UPI) — "Heavy lobbying" by the president and the Pentagon led to the defeat of a proposal requiring written plans for dealing with the impact of MX missile system construction in Utah and Nevada, says Rep. Dan Marriott, R-Utah.

Marriott's proposed amendment to the defense budget was rejected 135-268 Thursday by the U.S. House of Representatives. The amendment would have barred any MX system construction work on federally-owned lands in the Great Basin until written plans for coping with its potential impact were drafted.

"The White House and the Air Force pulled out all the stops to defeat my amendment," he said. "I have merely put into writing what they have already committed verbally to do," said Marriott.

"It's pretty clear they want to keep all their commitments verbal. It's a lot easier to break a promise than a law," the congressman said. "This raises serious questions in my mind about the credibility of the Carter Administration's promises to deal straight with Utah and Nevada on this issue."

Marriott said White House officials, including Vice President Walter Mondale, and Defense officials misled the majority leaders of the House and its Armed Services Committee and asked them to work against the Marriott amendment.

The congressman also said many House members received the impression that his proposal was aimed at killing the MX. "That was an absolutely false idea," he said.

Radiologist says radiation rules overprotective

DENVER (UPI) — A New Mexico radiologist claims governmental standards for radiation exposure are overprotective and only "feed the public's fear of radiation."

"The government regulatory agencies are vying to regulate," said Robert Moseley of the University of New Mexico medical school. "They're saying, 'I can regulate more than you can.' The public gets the view there is some scientific reason for increasingly strict regulation and there isn't any."

Moseley was in Denver Wednesday as a part of a campaign by about a dozen scientists to "educate" the public about radiation. He said the campaign is funded by the utility industry in an attempt to reduce fears about nuclear power and medical use of x-rays.

"I don't know why the public views radiation as a dread hazard, but they do," said Moseley, a physician and former staff member of the Los Alamos Scientific Laboratory.

Army convoy set to move chemical warfare test kits

TOOLEE ARMY DEPOT, Utah (UPI) — The Army planned Friday to move 60 obsolete chemical warfare test kits from here to Utah's highway proving ground in preparation for dismantling the sets to Colorado for disposal.

Spokeswoman Kathy Moore said the kits contain a total of 67.5 gallons of various deadly chemical agents. She said they would be flown next week from Dugway's Michael Army Air Field, 30 miles west of Salt Lake City, to the Rocky Mountain Arsenal near Denver.

Moore said Thursday the transfer is part of a project to round up 20,000 obsolete test kits stored at 14 military bases in 13 states and on Johnston Island in the Pacific. All of the kits will be destroyed at the arsenal. The project began Monday.

The kits were built in the 1930s. They were designed to train soldiers to deal with nerve gas and other chemical munitions, and to detect the presence of chemical agents in combat. But open-air testing of chemical weapons and the use of live agents in military training was halted in 1969.

Moore said 100,000 of the kits were built, and 80,000 were used up in training troops.

The Army decided several years ago to destroy 20,000 obsolete test kits in storage. In 1978, 1,700 of the kits were shipped from Tooele to the Rocky Mountain Arsenal to determine whether the facility could handle the job of destroying the entire stockpile.

She said the 1978 test proved the arsenal could handle the disposal. The Army estimated it could save $37.8 million by moving all the kits to a common site for destruction rather than attempting to construct disposal facilities at all 14 bases.

Tooele's South Storage Area includes a new, multi-million dollar facility used to destroy old chemical munitions. But Moore said it will take seven years for the facility to destroy obsolete weapons and stored chemicals already slated for destruction.

A four-year search by Summa Corp. and several organizations failed to find a location to display the historic aircraft intact. The 140-ton, 220-foot-long "Spruce Goose" dwarfs the Boeing 747 and C-5A military cargo planes.

A section of the wing will be exhibited at the Aerospace Museum in Washington, D.C., according to an announcement by Summa Corp. Thursday. Eight other nationally recognized museums will be given the opportunity to acquire parts for the giant sea plane.

The Board of Directors of Summa Corp. said disposal of the flying boat was in accordance with a 1975 agreement between the company and the Smithsonian Institution. The agreement was negotiated prior to the death of Hughes in 1976.

Officials of Summa Corp., the holding company for the vast Hughes estate, said the flight deck would remain in the company archives.

Hughes said he had the controls on the first and only flight of the H-1 Flying Boat in 1947. Hughes flew the seaplane about one mile, reaching a maximum height of some 35 feet over Los Angeles.

The plane cost the federal government $18 million to build and was the target of government critics who said the plane as a boondoggle, would never fly and waste millions of dollars of his own money into its development.

After the maiden flight, Hughes placed the aircraft under heavy guard and in a climate controlled hanger at Long Beach, Calif. Hughes spent $64 million sheltering the Flying Boat from weather and public viewing the remainder of his life.

Summa Corp. officials say the aircraft is in top condition. Its engines are turned over once a month.

The decision to dismantle the Flying Boat was predicated "on a need to vacate the Long Beach hanger site by Sept. 30," according to the Summa Corp. announcement.

"Over the years the Port Authority has had numerous expansions of the Long Beach hanger but the harbor facilities urgently are needed for other purposes," said the Summa Corp. announcement.

Hughes corporation orders 'Spruce Goose' dismantled

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — The "Spruce Goose," a giant flying boat designed in World War II by the late Howard Hughes to transport 750 combat loaded troops, will be dismantled and displayed in sections at museums and scientific institutes throughout the country, Summa Corp. announced Thursday.

A four-year search by Summa Corp. and several organizations failed to find a location to display the historic aircraft intact. The 140-ton, 220-foot-long "Spruce Goose" dwarfs the Boeing 747 and C-5A military cargo planes.

Crossruffing battle plan

Bridge hand diagram showing North and South hands with cards and a detailed text explanation of the play strategy, including trump management and crossruffing techniques.

Vulnerable: North-South Dealer: East West North East South Pass 1 NT Pass 2 Pass 3 Pass 4 Pass Opening lead: ♠ 6

South looked over dummy and made the remark: "Partner, we didn't bluff enough." Then, as is frequently the case when declarer uses his mouth instead of his brain, South proceeded to go down one trick.

Imperials' concert for Christian Radio

TWIN FALLS — The first gospel act to perform at the Grammy awards, the Imperials, will make their only Idaho appearance June 2 at the First Assembly of God Church at 7:30 p.m.

The concert will benefit the Christian Radio of Magic Valley, which is targeted to begin broadcasting in the Magic Valley within a year.

The Imperials have been nominated for seven Grammys and have won two. In 1979 they performed the Grammy-winning "Sail On" at the awards show.

Over a period of 25 albums the Imperials have evolved from a traditional southern gospel sound to their present blend of inspiration, contemporary and gospel elements. Armond Morales, the bass singer and an original member of the Imperials, was there in the 'early days' when they backed Elvis Presley's gospel album, "How Great Thou Art."

"They have performed with such stars as Carol Channing. Their TV appearances include the David Frost and Merv Griffin shows."

The group has traveled the road from the southern gospel world to the contemporary glitter world of Las Vegas, and back again. According to the group, they know the pitfalls of secular success and have grown musically and spiritually from their struggles.

Tickets are $5 for adults; under 15, $2.50. Tickets are available at Christian Supply Store and Christian Book Store.

The double Grammy-winning Imperials will make their only Idaho appearance here June 2

Soaps in prime time: 'Flamingo Road' hot

By VERNON SCOTT
HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Is the world ready for yet another TV prime soap opera?

Evidently, the answer is a resounding yes.

Television programmers perceive hour-long, tawdry melodrama as "the cycle of the immediate future, moving in on territory held by half-hour situation comedies, the most popular TV genre of the 1970s."

Just as westerns and cop shows fired and fell back, it appears that many sitcoms are losing their appeal.

The runaway success of "Dallas," which found itself No. 1 in the ratings last March, and the growing popularity of "Knight Landing" has spurred the networks into contriving other nighttime soap operas.

Among the most promising newcomer at this stage of arranging next season's schedule is "Flamingo Road," a two-hour drama which may be shown as a TV movie this spring or saved until the fall to lead off the projected series. Based on an old Joan Crawford movie, "Flamingo Road" involves the economic and sexual adventures of the rich inhabitants of a small Florida town.

If the characters are fairly stock, the performers set the show a notch above most soap operas, prime time or otherwise.

The Lorimar production — which also produces "Dallas" and "Knight Landing" — features Barbara Rush and Kevin McCarthy as a married couple, Morgan Fairchild, playing the wife of Mark Harmon, is their trouble-making daughter.

The top-flight cast is further enhanced by the presence of Stella Stevens as a local madam and Howard Duff as a sheriff.

Fairchild is the central character of the projected series, "a real bitch," as she pegs her scheming character, a standard, indeed, essential character to all soap operas.

The blonde, alluring Fairchild is an old pro at playing soapy vikens.

Len Chmiel to teach

Landscape seminar offered

SUN VALLEY — Len Chmiel, featured artist in the April 1980 issue of "American Artist" magazine, will be the instructor for the Sun Valley Center's Western Landscape Painting Seminar June 30 through July 4.

The five-day class for intermediate and advanced painters will be held outdoors, using the scenic environs of Sun Valley as subject matter.

Tuition is $125. A deposit of $30 will secure a place in the class. Registration is limited to 15. For registration, materials list, assistance with housing, transportation or further information, please contact: Registrar, Sun Valley Center, Box 656, Sun Valley, Idaho 83353 (telephone 208) 622-8371).

The seminar is followed July 3-6 by the Sun Valley Western Art Auction and Exhibition which last year had over $1 million dollars in art on display.

Chmiel is a young Colorado-based painter who works in oil with a wide variety of subjects. He is best known for his figurative works and his boldly colored landscapes. Sandra Wilson, in an interview with him for the February 1976 issue of "Southwest Art" magazine, said, "He has a fresh, vibrant, highly individualistic approach in his use of color, and though he is a realist, he is at the same time highly expressionistic."

Strong composition is a major factor in his painting."

Chmiel's work is included in the Jones-Manville Corporation's Heritage Collection in Denver and the Collection of the State of Wyoming. He has had eight one-man shows, including an exhibition at the prestigious Birger-Sandzen Memorial Gallery in Lindsborg, Kansas.

He attended the Chouinard Art School (now California Institute of the Arts) and the Art Center in Los Angeles. After working as a freelance illustrator, he moved to Denver in 1971 where he taught figure drawing at the Rocky Mountain School of Art.

Dilettantes seat officers

TWIN FALLS — Presiding officers for the 1980-81 musical theater season were elected at the annual meeting of the Dilettantes of Magic Valley, held May 2.

Named president was Dell Timpson; vice president, Liz Remer; and secretary, Terry Rowe. Jim Varley was elected treasurer; Helen Lee, historian, and Esther Nielsen, three-year board member. All are Twin Falls residents.

Auditions for the Dilettantes' annual Fourth of July revue will be held June 2 at the Presbyterian Church Auditorium at 7 p.m. The revue is presented in City Park.

All interested persons are invited to audition.

Writing contest results given

POCATELLO — The results of the recent non-membership contest sponsored by the Idaho Writers' League have been announced by Betty Rohrscheid, president.

Florence F. Ickes of Coeur d'Alene won first place in poetry. First-place fiction winner was Clay Morgan of McCall. Bill Graves of Rathdrum won first place in the articles division.

The new contest, aimed at discovering persons interested in writing and offering help in attaining sales, drew entries from 156 authors. Three honorable mentions were made in each category.

Judges for the fiction and article categories were instructors of the Creative Writing and Journalism departments at Idaho State University. Poetry was judged by Sodie Hager, Idaho's poet laureate.

Main Avenue as it looked in the early 'teens, photographed by Bisbee. A section of the book deals with Twin Falls' downtown architecture

By STEPHANIE SCHOROW

Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A recently published booklet captures the spirit of Twin Falls' architecture, from the barns to the bank buildings.

With old photographs, new photographs and pen-and-ink drawings, the publication explores the unique buildings representing what it called "the architecture of an Irrigated Tract."

"Twin Falls Country, a Look at Idaho Architecture" was published by the Idaho State Historical Society. Patricia Wright of Boise, aided by a matching grant from the Department of the Interior under the National Historic Preservation Act, put together a summary of about 70 representative historical structures, still standing in Twin Falls County.

Even such structures as the Amalgamated Sugar Co., Main Avenue gas stations and the Idaho Power Substation are examined with pictures, prose and pen.

The booklet's first picture looks out over Blue Lakes Boulevard before it was lined with fast food businesses or even pavement — nothing but splendid trees and mud.

According to author Wright, the Justamere Inn at Second Street and Fourth Avenue North, intricately depicted in one of Elizabeth Mowrey's drawings, is perhaps the finest example in Twin Falls of the Spanish Mission style, with its stucco and big baroque gables.

The booklet also takes us through area homes, like the Bobber Home, 235 Seventh Avenue E., which combines symmetry and wild imagination. As described by the book, "the roof line is extended to produce a garden wall perforated by a gothic-arched passage. But the chimney is amazing, studded with wildly projecting 'clinker bricks.'"

The booklet even recounts early 19th Century civic skirmishes over sites and materials. "A running battle was waged, with three generations of county commissioners on hot pursuit of public opinion; over whether such an important building (the courthouse) should not really be of Stone (instead of brick), and if so, how to finance it within the limits of the $150,000 bond passed by the voters in 1908."

The courthouse was finally completed with brick and an "amusing" mixture of classical columns: modified Doric on the first floor, Corinthian on the second and Ionic at the entrance.

The book also focuses attention on a building's fixtures rather than just the whole building itself. With its overall drawing of St. Edward's Catholic Church, for example, it sees small photos of each of the "exterior terra cotta," or symbols of the Apostles.

The front cover depicts the 1917 Dau barn in Buhl, noted for its filigreed ventilators

Another picture closes in on the wrought-iron lamp of the American Legion Hall and the "hooked lampposts," with paws and claws, standing outside the Federal Building. The columns of the Elks building also get special attention.

This technique is a way of focusing attention on the unique aspects of a building residents pass every day.

Although not all the downtown buildings are featured in the book, the outline they make against the skyline is carefully depicted with a drawing of just their roof tops.

Not to be accused of elitism, the book examines the not-always utilitarian structures of industrial and automotive buildings. It calls C.E. Lind's Buick dealership, built in 1920, a "splendid terra cotta car palace." Nothing is left of this "temple" on Second Avenue East except a few shards of ornaments outside the county museum.

Barn architecture is also examined, with examples of the pointed hay-barn, (the Maxwell Barn) and the Dutch gambrel roof, (the George Wyatt barn, east of Buhl).

Plans for a booklet on Twin Falls architecture were developed after a historical district was created here in 1978. It is one of several Idaho architecture booklets being compiled by the Historical Society.

The Twin Falls book was originally the idea of Don Hubbard of Boise; Wright carried it to conclusion.

Wright, with Madeline Buckendorf, a Historical Society employee, toured the area, gathering information on the structures and their histories.

In the process Buckendorf, who grew up in Filer, "fell in love with Magic Valley again and she (Wright) fell in love with it period."

Buckendorf gathered the "oral history" for the project; that is, she talked to the many persons who could remember how buildings were built and what they were used for.

Buckendorf said she found the Buhl area particularly rich with historical buildings, and further study is planned for that area.

She was also intrigued by the unique barns, the "business buildings for farmers."

She emphasizes that "by no means" does the booklet cover all the historical sites in the Twin Falls area. "Many more could have been done."

After Wright had chosen the buildings, she collected old photos, mostly from the Bisbee collection. New photos were taken by Duane Garrett. Elizabeth Mowrey of Creative Workshops, Inc., Moscow, spent hours in Twin Falls sketching buildings to emphasize certain details. Roger Slade designed the final layout.

The group project took over two years to complete. It's now on sale at Twin Falls book stores and the city library for $3.50 with all proceeds going for reprinting funds.

The book is being promoted by the Twin Falls Junior Club, which is also sponsoring a tour to give residents a chance to see some of the buildings depicted.

The tour will be held June 8, as part of Twin Falls' 75th Anniversary celebration.

Buildings in the tour also featured in the book include: Justamere Inn, the Courthouse, the Methodist Church, St. Edward's Catholic Church, the First Christian Church, the Breckenridge home, the McCollum home, the former Times-News building (Masonic Hall) and the Presbyterian Church.

Tour tickets are $5, $2.50 for senior citizens and $10 for patrons. Tickets are available from Judy's Bookstore, Van's Department store, and Ann's Hallmark in the Blue Lake Shopping Center. Transportation is available for a nominal fee.

It's dance time in Manhattan again

By GLENNE CURRIE
UPI Lively Arts Editor

NEW YORK (UPI) — When May comes, the big spring dance season in New York cannot be far behind.

Up at Lincoln Center, American Ballet Theater is celebrating its 40th anniversary at the Metropolitan Opera House May 5-July 12, and the New York City Ballet is at home April 25-June 23 at the New York State Theater.

Meanwhile, Alvin Ailey's American Dance Theater, under acting artistic director Judith Jamison and Ailey was indisposed, moved into City Center May 7-25.

For ABT, the opening days of the season were of interest principally for the first New York appearance of Alexander Godunov with the ABT since his defection from the Bolshoi last year.

His first role, opening night May 5, was in George Balanchine's "Theme and Variations," opposite Martine Van Hamel, whose regular partner he seems to be becoming.

In effective contrast to his free-wheeling athletics with the Bolshoi last summer, Godunov was discretion itself in "Theme and Variations," beautifully light on his feet with unhurried, domineering turns in the air and double ronds de jambes en l'air and entrechats.

In the tango, he was perhaps too effacing, with often perfunctory arm gestures, but Van Hamel was simply terrific, lovely arms and sensual slow developments. The other soloist, however, lacked common style, and the ballet masters should look to it.

Kristine Elliott, Yoko Ichino and Fernando-Bujones provided a bubbling, enjoyable "Glinka Pas de Trois."

On May 9, Godunov made his New York debut in "Swan Lake," also opposite Van Hamel, with Lucia Chase as his mother, celebrating her 40th year with the company.

The acting in "Swan Lake" — particularly the timing of reactions — needs reworking. And the hunters seem to be looking more for mushrooms than for birds.

Godunov again was the perfect general, settling off Van Hamel well, and giving classroom, not circus, versions of cabrioles, sissonnes, grand jetes and double turns. Van Hamel was brisk and brilliant as the Black Swan; the six princesses were the prettiest ever seen, and the Spanish Dance was exciting for the first time in many moons.

The best ensemble dancing of the week came May 8 at NYCB, in an almost flawless performance of Balanchine's "The Four Temperaments." Marjorie Spohn, Stephanie Saland, Kyra Nichols, Victor Castell and especially Adan Luders, were outstanding, among inspired cast.

The evening also saw the world premiere of Balanchine's "Ballade," set to Faure's Ballade for Piano and Orchestra, Opus 19. It was pretty flimsy stuff.

In a vaguely Second-Empire setting, Merrill Ashley in porcelain pink was partnered by Ib Andersen, star of the Royal Danish ballet who has been signed by NYCB as a principal this year. Andersen has integrated well into the Balanchine style, and Ashley of course is one of the company's finest dancers, but the choreography is indifferent and the character colorless.

For an unexpected treat, Mikhail Baryshnikov substituted for Heigl Tomasson in the Balanchine bon-bon, "The Steadfast Tin Soldier," opposite Judith Fugate. He mugged, too much, but his stiff-legged leaps and jumps still look impressive.

The American Dance Theater presented two New York premieres on opening night May 7, but neither was by Ailey and neither had the look or feel of the Ailey company. Maybe the group is taking new directions, but these works don't seem to be going anywhere.

They were "Later That Day," by Kathryn Posin to a section of Philip Glass's "Einstein on the Beach," and "Inside (Between Love ... and Love)," by Ulysses Dove to a commissioned score by Robert Ruggieri and poetry by Robert Maurice Riley.

"Later That Day" has a flirtation going in downstage, while a silent narrator reads from an open book and a line of dancers moves back and forth at the rear. The repetitive snake dances, with slight variations, neatly parallel Glass's barely-changing theme. The choreography itself is not particularly interesting.

"Inside" is a woman's solo, interpreted opening night by Jamison in her solo appearance onstage for the season. It's in five sections, on the general theme of the opening "I Do Not Need No Love." Like so many works created for this wonderful dancer, it makes little use of her special qualities and in the end fails to make any sort of impression.

The program also included Lar Lubovitch's "Les Noces," which never actually comes across either as primitive or modern, and Ailey's fine "Memoria," with the sensuous Donna Wood playing the role of the late Joyce Trisler, to whom the work is dedicated.

'La Bayadere'

Natalia Makarova (right) and Anthony Dowell dance the lead roles in the American Ballet Theatre's new production of Ludwig Minkus's "La Bayadere." Makarova choreographed it after that of Marius Petipa; Minkus' score has been arranged by John Lamborchy, who will conduct the ABT orchestra. The production, which premiered Wednesday night, will be broadcast Wednesday on PBS.

MOMA empties its galleries for an unprecedented Picasso-only exhibit

By AMEIL WALLACH
@Newsday

NEW YORK — Sitting there, seven years' ago, in the dusty clutter of his estate in the South of France, Picasso reacted with delight to the proposition.

His eyes protruded into a smile as William Rubin, director of the department of painting and sculpture at the Museum of Modern Art, suggested the idea: For the first time in its history, the museum would empty out all its galleries to show the work of one man, Pablo Picasso.

Considering the sculptures and the canvases leaning against walls, perched on chairs, stacked on easels, covering everything visible, and hidden, too, in safes, celdars and attics, Rubin estimated that the show would have to include at least 300 paintings, 200 drawings and 150 sculptures. And most would have to come from the master himself, who had been hoarding his offspring for 70 years, filling entire houses with his treasures. Sealing them up, then leaving it all behind, and moving somewhere new to start all over again.

His last house was Mas de Notre-Dame-de-Vie at Mougins, France, where Rubins visited him that winter of 1973. By April 8, Picasso was dead.

Once the squabbles among heirs were over, legally at least, Rubin revived his dream exhibit idea. Only by then it had grown. There would be 1,000 works, including ceramics and prints and drawings from museums and collections all over the world. That figure remained until 10 days ago. And then it was reduced again.

When "Pablo Picasso: A Retrospective" opened to the public Thursday, works from the Pushkin State Museum in Moscow and the Hermitage Museum in Leningrad were missing. It is just one more headache in what has become the most extensive logistical maneuver the MOMA has ever undertaken. For six weeks, crates of paintings have been arriving daily, to be reverently uncrated, measured, checked and stored for hanging. And, in a reverse move, the museum's famous works by such artists as Degas, Gauguin, Munch and Pollock have been taken off the walls, measured, checked, packed and shipped for exhibit at other museums or storage in warehouses.

All along, there was hope — "pessimistic hope," Rubin called it — that in the end the works from Russia would arrive.

The trouble started in February, when in response to the Soviet Union's invasion of Afghanistan, the U.S. government refused to insure against seizure a loan exhibit to the National Gallery in Washington of works from the Hermitage. After that, the Soviet government asked for such a guarantee for the Picassos. By the time the MOMA got the guarantee, the Soviets had other reasons not to send. The MOMA asked the French to intercede. No luck. On the day on which the last painting arrived from Madrid, the museum learned that it would not be receiving the Soviet loan.

"Outside of art historians, no one will even notice they're missing," Rubin said philosophically. As it is, estimates are that the 850,000 people who could see the show will each have to walk three miles to view all 960 or 970 works. Everyone at the museum too busy at the moment to count up the figures that detail exactly how much is there.

At recent auctions, superb Picassos have been bringing up to $1 million each. (One brought $3 million at auction in Manhattan last week.) There are scores of superb Picassos in the show. The Federal government has insured it to the maximum of $50 million. The MOMA has a private insurance policy on the rest of the total value, but for the obvious security reasons would like to remain vague as to how much the exhibit is worth.

"It is," Snyder said, "A terrible security risk."

In recent weeks, as paintings arrived, and hours grew long and tempers short, exasperated visitors were barred from the galleries. Elaborate plans had been prepared in advance, with scale-model cardboard cutouts to represent the works. But once they actually arrived, everything changed. The colors, in some cases, were different than expected, from reproductions, or the impact stronger. Walls had to be repainted, partitions altered. Rubin moved about in a wheelchair, as MOMA curators traditionally do to save their strength when installing a show, threading past the paintings, which, as usual, were laid on the floor preparatory to hanging.

To the west of the museum, construction continued on the condominium tower, which the MOMA is erecting as part of its expansion plans. To the north and east, a transformation was taking place in the sculpture garden. For the first time, visitors to the museum will be entering through the 54th Street garden. Platforms and seating have been erected as a receiving area and lobby. The real lobby is used as exhibit space. As in all construction, there were delays, but miraculously the temporary lobby was finished in time for the gala opening, and the exhibit was, for the most part, ready two days ahead of schedule, due to the cooperative efforts of Rubin and the co-curator for the show, Dominique Bozo.

Sills to sing farewell in San Diego

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — Five performances of "Die-Friedermaus" starring Joan Sutherland and Beverly Sills, Oct. 5-19, will highlight the Diego Opera fall season. The two soprano will alternate in the roles of Adele and Rosalinda.

This is the first production in which the two divas have sung together, and marks Sills' farewell to the operatic stage. The fall season also features Richard Strauss' "Elektra" with Regina Resnik, and Massenet's "Werther."

Gossip

and Peter are still going steady.
Q: I came across a Hollywood coffee table book which maintains that glamorous film stars had their closeups shot first thing in the morning when they were well-rested and would photograph at their best. Does this practice still hold? — A.T. of Wichita

A: Yes, but we know of a funny variation. Leslie Brown, co-star of the movie, "Nijinsky," was booked for an 11 a.m. camera date with New York magazine. However, Leslie unexpectedly asked that her appointment be moved an hour later because early morning photos just aren't flattering in Leslie's case; she flowers around noon!

Q: I read in a gossip column that Stockard Channing, after stepping into Lucie Arnaz' shoes in the Broadway musical "These Playing Our Song," was unhappy with the way things were going. She complained about the ad campaign and the lack of good publicity, among other things. Is Stockard usually this critical? — R.H. of Salt Lake City.

A: Not at all. We met Stockard two weeks over the part (March 18) and she swears she can't figure out how to get started in acting. She claims she's still very excited about the musical.

IDENTITY CRISIS: Ernest Borgnine, who loves fishing, ran into a fellow fisherman at a tournament and they struck up a conversation. The man, who happened to be the spitting image of actor William Conrad, bragged to Borgnine (whose name he did not know). "Everyone tells me how much I look like Conrad, so whenever I'm asked for an autograph, I just sign his name. Then, taking a better look at Ernie, the chap said: "Aa you, pal — you look a little like that actor on 'McHale's Navy!'"

Q: We watched Judy Garland's performance in the movie, "A Star Is Born" on TV. Is it true that she once acted in a little-known summer stock try-out of this same plot, many years before she appeared in the film? — S.S. of Burbank, Calif.

A: You must be thinking of a certain radio show, and here's the way it went: Judy starred in 1940 on the Lux Radio Theater in "A Star Is Born," a straight dramatic version. A dozen years later, she repeated her role as Liza Lasker in the now-legendary movie musical. Judy's earlier shot on the radio in this identical role served as a warm-up.

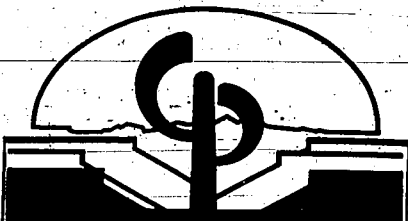

Q: Lizzi Minelli really sticking to her plan to reduce her social activities while she tries to get pregnant? — P.W. of Indianapolis.

A: It's tough but Liza's genuinely trying. She has made a number of appearances on the TV specials with Goldie Hawn and Mikhail Baryshnikov, are examples — but Liza is cutting down on her concert schedule. A big Las Vegas date has been lined up for July but will be canceled if Liza and her husband Mark Gero find the storm is due.

Q: What's this about Rex Harrison coming back as Professor Higgins in a "My Fair Lady" stage revival? He was wonderful in the original musical nearly 25 years ago, but isn't he a little old for the part now? — H.V. of Clifton, N.J.

A: Rex says he is not too old. Now that he's 63, Harrison maintains he's actually far better equipped to play the marvelous professor than he was when he was in his 50s. Rex says he's "better" because he's emotionally and physically, adding that he's "better than a lot of us" and that he's "not

... it's in the dark

Q: Since it's such a huge success, will there be a follow-up film to "Kramer vs. Kramer"? — P.T. of New London, Conn.

A: A sequel is a possibility but there is no decision at this point. The reason is that the principals are pretty well committed to other projects for quite a while. Director Robert Benton has at least two films ahead of him before he can even start thinking sequel. And Dustin Hoffman and Meryl Streep also have film commitments for the near future.

Q: Natalie Wood seems to have had a stable marriage even though she and husband Robert Wagner have had their problems in the past. How does Natalie keep things running so smoothly?

A: J.M. of Bangor, Maine.
 Natalie works hard at maintaining a fine balance between her career demands and family needs. She recently bowed out of a starring role in the movie version of Agatha Christie's "The Mirror Crack'd" because she felt the London location would separate her from Bob and the kids for too long a period. Bob had planned to shoot segments of his "Hart to Hart" TV show in England but when that plan fell through, so did Natalie's movie participation. Clearly their marriage relies more on togetherness than knocking on wood.

Q: What's this about Lena Horne retiring? How come, since she still looks marvelous and her singing is still topnotch? — J.M. of Racine, Wis.

A: Word of Lena's supposedly impending retirement came out a while back while she was playing an engagement in San Francisco. But we wouldn't take it all that seriously. Lena herself is telling interviewers that she has performed engagements through the end of the year and will eventually bow out of night clubs but would love to host a TV variety show. Don't bet that we've seen the last of glamorous, 62-year-old Lena.

GUEST APPEARANCE: Some of the top buyers were on hand the other day when noted fashion designer Zoran held a showing and party for his new lines at his Greenwich Village showroom. But perhaps the most interesting sight was guest Lauren Hutton, who showed up wearing high top tennis shoes, Army fatigues, T-shirt, and matching Army fatigue hat. As if that wasn't enough, Lauren had a special present for Zoran: a custom green and white plastic bag.
Q: Does Buzz Brundage consider himself an American actor, and if so, how?

which actor has inspired him most? — G.S. of Knoxville.

A: Burt takes his acting very seriously and was more than just a bit put out that he wasn't even nominated for an Oscar for his movie, "Starting Over." Burt also runs a dinner theater in his hometown of Jupiter, Fla., where he sometimes teaches aspiring actors enrolled in the theater's training program. Burt's role model, by the way, is Spencer Tracy. The late actor's principal piece of advice to young actors was, "Don't bump into the furniture."

Q: I've heard Candice Bergen referred to as an lebergh princess. Is this evaluation fair? — C.R. of Columbus, Ohio.

A: Not at all. To some, Candice seems lovely, yet remote. Those who know her well claim it's an inaccurate description. Actually, she's a bright, direct and completely natural person who, perhaps because she doesn't do crazy things for publicity, isn't considered "touchable" or "untouchable." She's a lady in the true sense; polite, confident, and extremely considerate.

Tradesmen who've been to her smushing apartment overlooking New York's Central Park claim she likes to wear blue jeans around the pad, no make-up, and has absolutely no airs whatever.

Q: You're always able to get inside information. What about Larry Hagman on the TV series "Dallas"? Will his character, J.R., survive the shooting? — H.V. of Camden, N.J.

A: Sorry, even we can't crack this one. The producers of "Dallas" are keeping the shooting incident a big mystery to hype media and public interest in next season's series. But at the moment they may be unsure themselves. — It's about four months to the start of "Dallas" this September. So they still have plenty of time to decide. Here's another thought — If Hagman agrees to return to the series — that is, if he's paid enough to the evil J.R. will survive. Otherwise, all bets are off. In any event, we'll know for sure when the first "Dallas" installment airs in the fall, probably as a two-hour special.

Q: Has Bettie Midler finally decided to limit herself to one steady boyfriend? — Phoenix.

A: Bettie, who is 34, by nature abhors limits; and that includes who she sees privately. When we spoke with her a while ago, she was very high on actor Peter Berg. While the two may have had their differences earlier, Bettie

Ralph Waite's film a Cannes sleeper

By ROGER EBERT
Chicago Sun-Times

CANNES — One of the more unexpectedly successful at the Cannes Film Festival this year is an independent American production named "On the Nickel," which is finding audiences on the glamorous Croisette for its story of the misadventures of skid row in Los Angeles.

The film is the completely personal project of Ralph Waite, the actor who has played John Walton, the father, on "The Waltons," for the last nine years. He financed it with his own money, wrote it, produced it, directed it and stars as "C.G.," a skid row alcoholic whose wife and death eventually destroy the community of dropouts and drifters on Fifth St. in Los Angeles.

Waite brought the film here for the same reason most independent American producers turn up with their work: He hopes a favorable reception at Cannes will produce foreign sales and give the movie critical respectability in the American market. So far, he has only opened in two U.S. cities, Los Angeles and New York. Now it's up to Cannes.

If the reaction of Cannes audiences is a reliable barometer, and sometimes it is, Waite has a modest success on his hands. His film is a touching human story that is amazingly, given its subject — is not unrelievedly depressing but has a great deal of humor and warmth.

The life of C.G. and his fellow skid row inhabitants is seen as tragic and desperate, but the film's alcoholics are depicted not as case studies but as three-dimensional human beings. They hate the missions where they're forced to pray before they get a cup of soup and a cot for the night. They definitely live outdoors, in the streets and under a flowering tree. They are mistreated by the police and mishandled by the courts. They die. The film's closing sequence, which succeeds in being hilarious and moving at the same time, involves an attempt to steal C.G.'s ashes from the county crematorium.

For Waite, the movie is a labor of love. He sat on the terrace of the Majestic Hotel and talked about it, almost unrecognizable behind a bushy beard he has grown for an Ibsen play he's doing in Colorado. "I'd had a long run on 'The Waltons,' and I could see that it was winding down," he said. "I'd made a lot of money from the series, and it was a series I was happy to do — but a TV series doesn't really give an artist much scope for his feelings. It's a routine grind, six days a week. I'd learned how to direct while working on 'The Waltons' — I directed 15 or 16 episodes myself — and I wanted to put something of myself back into Los Angeles before the series ended and I went home to New York."

"I read a story in the papers about an Indian named Robert Sundance who was suing the City of Los Angeles for $7 million for false arrest. He was a skid row alcoholic who got sober, was told he wasn't a criminal but had a disease, and began to ask why he was arrested 700 times, had always pleaded not guilty but was sent to jail anyway, and had spent nine of his 17 years in jail, from three days to three months at a stretch.

"His lawsuit had single-handedly changed the way skid row alcoholics are treated in Los Angeles. I met Sundance and spent several months hanging out on skid row with him — and a social worker named Jill Halverson, researching the society there. I met some of his friends, like a woman named Rose who inspired a character: In the movie, one day he told me this story about a flowering tree they used to sit under, next to a water spigot, and how the police came one day and turned off the water and cut down the tree. I could feel my guts turning over. This was going to be the centerpiece of my story."

'Knights': dull mutant

By Elliot Wald
Chicago Sun-Times

The idea must have seemed irresistible: Combine the cruising-for-burgers nostalgia of "American Graffiti" with the gross-out humor of "Animal House."

Throw in some sex, some cops and PTA-types as foils, some old rock 'n' roll (for a soundtrack album) and release it for the teen-rampant summer months. "Animal Graffiti" — guaranteed box-office.

"The Hollywood Knights" is about as close as you can come to cross-plagiarism without capturing the charm of either original. It concerns a Beverly Hills car club (a street gang on wheels) bent on turning Halloween, 1965, into an evening of revenge for the imminent demolition of its hangout: Tubby's drive-in, home of the "Big One" (insert obvious joke here).

The trappings of "Graffiti" have been transferred whole: hot rods, sex jokes (though more graphic), dumb cops, rock-radio orchestration (with jumbled chronology —

"Why Do Fools Fall in Love" was seven years old in 1965), the "last-night" setting, the guy leading for Vietnam, the young lovers in crisis. As for the humor, it's all "Animal House" — alephetic, pie-in-the-face, fender bending and pants-down peeing.

The shortcomings of "Hollywood Knights" can be captured in one scene. In "Graffiti," Richard Dreyfuss was forced by a gang to destroy a police car. The scene worked wonderfully — funny yet scary. Why does a similar moment in "Hollywood Knights" (Dreyfuss-surrogate Robert Wahl plays a bathroom trick on Officer Bimbeaux — note funny name) fall flat?

For one thing, "Graffiti" director George Lucas knew about pacing (and Floyd Mutrux of "Hollywood Knights" doesn't) — that there are quiet moments and noisy ones, and that the former set up the latter. Mutrux is — a cacophonist, and a heavy-handed one at that. Before the fat cop flops into a pile of wet garbage, we've all but had the scene explained to us.

Point two: We cared about the protagonists of "Graffiti." When Dreyfuss crept up on the police car, breaths were held. In "Knights," nobody cares because nobody's real; they're all just vehicles for crude jokes.

Not every scene in "Knights" links. Some of the pranks work on sheer outrageousness. A fat guy named Dudley (more being better, the film has two fat guys) has some funny lines.

Yet despite many of the same flaws, "Animal House" worked. Why? There are subtle differences (a smaller cast of characters, a more original setting) and larger ones (superior comic actors particularly John Belushi). And there is the main distinction. Line for line, scene for scene, "Animal House" was funnier, more inventive, wilder.

"Hollywood Knights" is occasionally funny, but never clever. In fact, it's resolutely dumb. Maybe that's why the producers thought it would be a hit. They think we're dumb. Who knows, maybe they're right.

Closed-captioning device in demand

By STEPHEN GOOD

Deloitte Times Herald
The deaf can now "hear" television programs, thanks in part to the electronic wizardry of Texas Instruments.

TI has developed circuits that translate television signals into subtitles or "captions" that flash on the screen during especially prepared programs broadcast by the Public Broadcasting Service, NBC and ABC.

Now about 14 million hearing-impaired Americans — two million of them completely deaf — can listen to the TV with their eyes.

The TV circuits are the heart of a brand-new device sold by Sears, Roebuck & Co., called the "telecaption-TV adaptor." The device sits on top of the TV set and attaches to the antenna wire hook-up.

Sears, which sells the device for $249.95 in its spring-summer catalog, says there is a six- to eight-week waiting list for the device.

"It has an incredible popularity nationwide," says a Sears spokesman. The company received nearly 12,000 orders for the device within its first four weeks of availability.

Now the device, which went on sale March 15, is selling at the rate of about 7,000 a month, and the spokesman says "it looks like it will not simmer down until the latter part of the year."

The captioning device was the brainchild of PBS, but it took the resources of the federal government, non-profit organizations and several companies to put captioning on the air.

Back in 1971, the U.S. Bureau of Standards and ABC first showed that a "closed captioning" system was feasible. Then PBS engineering department, working with about $5 million in federal funding, perfected the technology that allowed TV broadcast signals to carry captions on the airwaves.

Basically, the PBS engineers took one of the 21 broadcast "lines" that don't show on the screen unless the horizontal hold isn't working. These 21 lines — out of a total of 525 carried by the broadcast signal — are mostly unused, although a few are employed for testing or maintaining color control.

PBS found a way to encode captions on the first of these 21 lines. Then in 1974, working with the Gallaudet College for the deaf in Washington, D.C. the network began conducting experiments on program captioning.

By 1975, experiments showed the captioning system was popular and marketable. A year later, the Federal Communications Commission approved closed-caption broadcasting.

TI, meanwhile, had received a contract from PBS to develop circuitry that would "decode" the captioning signal and flash it on the TV screen. Within two years, the circuitry was perfected.

"We were funded by the PBS to develop a set of integrated circuits, some seven or eight circuits," says Dwan Chaffin, manager of TI's advanced circuits department. "Two or three of the circuits are state-of-the-art technology. They use technologies that are not in widespread production."

Chaffin said the circuits are "made in several U.S. locations and assembled in packages in off-shore locations, which is fairly standard for all our integrated circuits." The finished product sold by Sears (as assembled by Sanyo, a Japanese company).

Although the captioning device seems to be translating words spoken on the air, it's not quite that simple. And that's where the National Captioning Institute comes in.

The non-profit organization in Falls Church, Va., takes TV programs and writes captions for them, says NCI spokeswoman Jan Miller. Then these captions are translated electronically into a digital code recorded on a floppy disc.

The floppy discs are sent to the TV networks, which in turn place the code onto one of the lines of the program's master tape, which is broadcast over the air.

NCI currently captions 17 programs, five each for NBC and ABC, and seven for PBS. The captioned programs include:

On ABC, Saturday Night Movie, Barney Miller, Vegas, Three's Company and Eight is Enough.

On NBC, Monday Night Movie; Disney's Wonderful World, Real People, United States and Different Strokes.

On PBS, Masterpiece Theater, Once Upon a Classic, Over Easy, Odyssey, Mystery and Nova.

CBS currently is the only network without captioned programming, Miller said. "They're not involved. They're working on a system called teletext," which doesn't broadcast a picture but "just pages of information."

"They admit that implementation of this system is some years down the road," she added.

NCI's captioning service costs the networks $2,000 per programmable hour, Miller said. PBS pays a little less for the service.

"We also get some Sears $8 royalty on each piece of the decoding equipment which is sold," she said. In return, NCI granted Sears the exclusive marketing rights to the device for three years.

NCI's captioned programs first appeared March 16, the day after Sears' device came on the market. The institute already predicts expanded use of the captioning system, including captioned commercials, Miller said.

"It's interesting, they (the viewers) want them," she said. "They watch television, and it's a way of expanding the market and it's revenue for us. It's to everybody's benefit."

NCI has already done commercials and TV specials for Sears, IBM and Procter & Gamble, she said. Captioning for the commercials cost $165 apiece.

In October, Sears will begin taking orders on a new 19-inch color-TV set with a built-in captioning device. The set will cost $320, and will be advertised in the company's fall catalog.
