

Bush drops GOP nomination bid

HOUSTON (UPI) — George Bush ended his two-year, $16 million presidential campaign Monday.

Bush dropped out facing an estimated $300,000 campaign debt and delegate counts showing Ronald Reagan has locked up the Republican nomination.

"I am an optimist, but I also know how to count to 99," Bush told a news conference attended by his family and 300 cheering supporters. "I have never quit a fight in my life. But throughout my political career, I have always worked to unite and strengthen the Republican Party.

"I intend to go to the convention in Detroit and meet with delegates supporting my candidacy and ask them to cast their ballots for Governor Reagan as the 1980 Republican presidential nominee.

"The No. 1 priority for Republicans in the fall of 1980 is to unite to save our country from four more years of Jimmy Carter's weak, directionless, incompetent leadership," Bush said in the same hotel room where John Connally ended his campaign March 9.

The former U.N. ambassador and CIA director is the eighth Republican candidate to drop out of the nomination race this year. Two minor candidates — Harold Stassen and California businessman Benjamin Fernandez — remain to contest Reagan.

On Monday morning, Bush sent Reagan a telegram congratulating him on a "superb campaign" and pledging "my wholehearted support in a united party effort this fall."

Bush campaign manager Jim Baker said the campaign had spent $16.2 million and lately had fallen $300,000 into debt. He indicated a desire to protect campaign funding options was the reason Bush avoided technical words of withdrawal and apparently delayed official release of his delegates until the convention in Detroit in July.

"We're avoiding the use of a legal conclusion," Baker told reporters. "If we stood up here and characterized it for you, we then foresee the possibility of making the argument to the FEC (Federal Election Commission) and possibly others that we should be entitled to some things that we would be entitled to if we just stayed home."

Bush, who appeared in good spirits and frequently joked with reporters and the crowd, repeated that he has no interest in the vice-presidential nomination on a Reagan ticket. He declined to say if he would seek the presidency again.

His announcement came after a weekend of soul-searching in which Bush consulted aides, family members and friends at his Houston home. Bush aides last week ruled out an expensive California primary effort after deciding television networks' projection that Reagan had captured the nomination would make Bush fundraising impossible.

That decision left New Jersey and Ohio as major objectives June 3. But even a Bush victory there would appear to be futile.

Bush swamped Reagan in Michigan last Tuesday but lost Oregon. Two of the television networks — ABC and CBS — focused on Oregon as the over-the-top win.

GEORGE BUSH... Reagan backer now

Republican candidates who bowed out earlier were Rep. John Anderson, who withdrew to seek the presidency as an independent, and Rep. Phillip Crane of Illinois, Connally, Sen. Howard Baker of Tennessee, Sen. Robert Dole of Kansas, Sen. Larry Pressler of South Dakota and Sen. Lowell Weicker of Connecticut.

State races hold interest in Idaho primary

Richard Pence, Twin Falls County clerk, drags 800 pound voting machine into place for use today.

By DAVID MORRISSEY Times-News writer

BOISE — Idahoans head to the polls today. But while votes will be cast for presidential contenders, much of today's action seems to be in the state election contests.

Seventeen delegate votes to the Republican National Convention will be divided according to today's GOP votes. But those 17 delegates will now have little impact on the final nomination process. Saturday, just three days before Idaho's primary, former California Gov. Ronald Reagan clinched his party's nomination with delegates gained in caucuses and conventions in Kansas and Vermont.

Today's Democratic primary is strictly a "beauty contest," with the results not affecting the division of Idaho delegates to the Democratic National Convention. Democrat delegate votes were selected through a caucus system in April.

But while action on the presidential side of the ticket seems lackluster, a tough congressional race and several state legislative battles offer electoral excitement. In Idaho's 2nd Congressional District, which contains 26 counties and spreads across most of southern Idaho, Rep. George Hansen is seeking his sixth two-year term in office. The Pocatello Republican is being challenged by fellow Republican Jim Jones, a Jerome attorney and rancher.

Both have campaigned hard for their party's nomination, in what is a rematch of their battle two years ago. That year, Jones lost to Hansen by 143 votes.

According to the most recent campaign disclosure reports, filed 12 days before the primary, the Idahoans for Jim Jones Committee has spent $46,539.49, while the George Hansen for Congress Committee has spent $40,088.18.

Idahoans will also be casting ballots for U.S. Senate nominees.

Neither Democrat Sen. Frank Church nor Republican Congressman Steve Symms has opponents in their bids to gain their party's nominations. But the two candidates aren't waiting until their November show-down to start their campaigning.

In days immediately prior to the primary, both the Church and Symms campaign committees have launched political advertising campaigns, spending thousands of dollars to leave favorable impressions in voters' minds. Each has sharply attacked his opponent by name.

The Magic Valley will also decide the fate of five contested primaries for state legislative seats.

In District 21, which contains Blaine, Mindoka and half of Lincoln County, Democrat John Peavey is battling Democrat Clarence Bellem for the seat of retiring Democratic Sen. Jack Bell.

Peavey is a former Republican State Senator from District 21.

A battle will also be decided in that district for the Republican State Senate nomination, between Maurice Ellsworth and Eugene Moon.

A Senate contest will take place in District 22, which contains Elmore, Camas, half of Gooding and a slice of Twin Falls County. In the Republican primary in that district, incumbent Sen. J. Wilson Steen is opposed by Archie Walker.

District 23, which contains Jerome, and parts of Lincoln and Gooding counties, will see a race between incumbent Rep. Gordon Hallfield and challenger Neil Wein.

In District 24, which contains the western two-thirds of Twin Falls County, Democrats Bill Chisholm and George Anthony are seeking their party's nomination to oppose incumbent Rep. Noy Brackett, a Republican.

Clouds shroud Mt. St. Helens, delay damage assessment

VANCOUVER, Wash. (UPI) — Clouds shrouded steaming Mount St. Helens Monday. They prevented scientists from making aerial surveys to assess the damage caused by Sunday's eruption that spewed volcanic ash over thousands of square miles of western Oregon and Washington and into northern California. Search and rescue operations also were grounded by the low clouds, poor visibility and heavy accumulations of ash near the mountain. Geologists, meanwhile, conceded they are "woefully lacking" in the ability to predict whether the majestic peak was on the verge of another mighty eruption. "What we were looking for was a gradual increase in eruptive activity, but we were getting a real gradual deceleration — then boom," said Tim Hatt of the U.S. Geological Service regarding the May 18 eruption, which left dozens of people dead. "It was a breakthrough in characterizing this type of catastrophic blast, but we don't know if we can do any better predicting another one," Hatt said. A seven-hour eruption Sunday shot ash as high as nine miles amidst lightning flashes. No new casualties were reported, but Rhonda Brooks, a spokeswoman for the state Department of Emergency Services, said five people had been added to the list of missing people, increasing the total listed as missing from 76 to 81. Gov. Dixy Lee Ray extended the radius of the restricted zone around the mountain from 5 to 20 miles, including the most recently evacuated towns of Cougar and Yacolt. As a result of a morning news conference the five missing persons were seen by a 5th Cavalry helicopter crew at Fawn Lake, 5 miles northeast of the volcano. The helicopter crew landed and offered to give the hikers a ride out of the area, but they declined. "A deputy sheriff then went into the area, issued citations and ordered them to leave, Miss Brooks said, but they had not been accounted for when the storm erupted early Sunday. "They will be listed to the official missing persons list," she said. Traffic crawled at a snail's pace on Interstate 5 between Kells and Chehalis. Motorists had their parking lights turned on and were moving about 10 mph.

Aftershocks rumble through Sierra range resort district

MAMMOTH LAKES, Calif. (UPI) — Aftershocks rumbled under Central California's Sierra range Monday. They followed Sunday's quakes that rocked mountain resort areas. A rescue team in a helicopter searched the rugged mountain terrain for anyone lost or stranded by Sunday's quakes. Two shocks, registering 5.0 and 5.1, rattled Mammoth Lakes and Yosemite National Park Monday morning, following Sunday's earthquakes. Those quakes were 10 times stronger and shook much of central California, sending boulders crashing down mountainsides. Nine people were reported injured, two seriously. Workers in Mono County, site of the epicenters of the quakes, worked through the night repairing water mains and patching up power lines. A spokeswoman for the Mono County Sheriff's office said Monday there were no reports of any missing people in the area, but a helicopter looked for 20 persons who had taken out backpacking permits to hike into the high Sierra. The helicopter crew also was checking to see if any hikers had been stranded by rockfalls and to determine if roads were blocked. The first quake Sunday, a 6.0 shaker occurred at 8:33 a.m. MDT and was centered in an area of mountain lakes, and ski resorts. On the Richter Scale a 6.0 quake is 10 times the magnitude of a 5.0 quake. The second 6.0 quake struck at 12:45 p.m. Sunday, and two quakes registering 5.7 were felt, one in the morning and one in the early afternoon. Several smaller quakes rattled the area throughout the day. Seven persons in the Mammoth Lakes area were injured, none seriously. Two persons vacationing from Southern California suffered serious injuries when they were struck by falling rocks while hiking in Yosemite National Park.

Larry Samuel suffered two broken legs and other injuries. Belinda Samuel suffered one broken leg, and cuts and bruises. They were hiking on the Vernal Falls Trail in the park when the first quake hit and had to be carried out on stretchers to an area where a helicopter could pick them up. Power outages halted operations at six ski lifts at Mammoth Mountain. A total of 80 people were taken off the lift and the mountain was closed to skiers after about 3,000 people were ordered off the slopes. The Convict Lake area, five miles south of the community of Mammoth Lakes, was the hardest hit. More than 150 campers were evacuated at all of the 50 campsites along with patrons of the nearby resort. Officials said property damage appeared to be limited to broken windows and material which fell in themselves in stores and homes.

Birthplace inquiry nets royal red face

LONDON (UPI) — It was a question the British royal establishment would rather forget. Curiously, a spokesman had to admit that no one knows exactly where the Queen Mother was born nor why her eccentric father gave false details when he registered her birth. Everyone agrees the Queen Mother was born on Aug. 4, 1900, and that date will be celebrated all over the nation this year to mark the 80th birthday of the kingdom's most popular lady. But the Sunday Times claims her father, the heir of the Earl of Strathmore, not only missed the break deadline for registering a birth but put his historic name to the risk, risking the penalty of life imprisonment which in those days was the extreme penalty for falsifying an official document. The Earl — a fanatic for plum pudding which he reputedly tried to eat every day of his life — wrongly listed his daughter as born at St. Pauls Walden Bury, the family home in Hertfordshire. The newspaper said a local parishioner noted that the program of birthday festivities for the Queen Mother did not claim St. Pauls Walden as her birthplace but only as the place she spent much of her childhood. His curiosity led to requests for an explanation at Clarence House, the Queen Mother's home. A spokesman there told the Sunday Times the Queen Mother was actually born in London but refused to be more specific.

Dispute puts Cuban tug adrift on way to U.S.

KEY WEST, Fla. (UPI) — A Cuban government tugboat captain sneaked his boat into the refugee exodus but the vessel ended up adrift Monday when the chief engineer refused to go along with the plan.

The 60-foot Cuban government-owned tugboat, the 2 de Diciembre (Second of December), was towed into Key West by a Coast Guard cutter after it was spotted adrift, flying a tattered Cuban flag, about 30 miles southwest of Key West.

Coast Guard Cmdr. Samuel Dennis said the tug's seven-member crew reported a "distress situation" but when personnel from the cutter Cape Starr went aboard, they found the emergency was an argument whether to go to the United States or back to Cuba.

A State Department spokesman said four of the crew, including the captain, will get applications for asylum. The other three, including the balky chief engineer, will get to take the tug back to Cuba.

The four asylum-seekers were among almost 1,000 Cubans who arrived Monday ahead of severe thunderstorms forecast for the Florida Straits.

Customs officials said 15 Cuban-carrying 962 refugees docked in Key West between midnight and noon, swelling to 78,861 the number of Cubans who have fled their country via the refugee sealift since it began April 21.

Holiday death toll rises

By United Press International

Holiday travelers wound up Memorial Day visits to loved ones and campgrounds, then headed home Monday, and the traffic death toll mounted.

Estimates for the gruesome count were running behind National Safety Council estimates of 450 to 500 dead into the last day of the three-day weekend.

A United Press International tally at 7:30 p.m. EDT showed a total of 373 people killed in traffic accidents nationwide since 6 p.m. local time Friday, the holiday counting period ended at midnight Monday.

California had the most deaths on the road, with 60. Michigan was second with 20 dead, followed by Illinois with 19, Wisconsin 17 and Florida and Texas with 14 each. New Mexico and North Carolina each reported 13 traffic deaths.

Tug tows crippled tanker

CAPE FEAR, N.C. (UPI) — A tug began towing the crippled tanker-805 to a Virginia repair dock Monday, its 16 million gallons of crude oil still safe following a near-sinking that prompted fears of a potentially massive oil spill.

Under current weather conditions the 400-horsepower tug Cape Cod should be able to tow the 640-foot tanker into Hampton Roads, Va., in about a day and a half, said Coast Guard spokesman Jim Brooks.

Talks deadline passes

CAIRO, Egypt (UPI) — The target date for a year-long Palestinian autonomy negotiations expired Monday, with Egypt blaming the absence of agreement on Israeli "intransigence" and "intransigence."

But Foreign Minister Kamal Hassan 'Ali, who leveled the charge, said the negotiations frozen by Egypt since May 8 are bound to be revived and demanded that Israel create "better conditions" for resuming the talks.

Hungarian astronaut aloft

MOSCOW (UPI) — The Soviet Union Monday launched the world's first Hungarian astronaut toward a linkup in orbit with the manned Soyuz 6 space laboratory, the official Tass news agency reported.

Tass said Soyuz 36, carrying Soviet commander Valery Kubasov — who participated in the joint U.S.-Russian Apollo-Soyuz space flight in 1975 — and Hungarian flight engineer Bertalan Farkas, was launched at 9:21 p.m. Moscow time (12:21 p.m. MDT).

The flight was launched from a Central Asian launch site at Baikonur, according to the Tass report.

Romanian dancer defects

TEL AVIV, Israel (UPI) — A Romanian folk dancer who disappeared in 1975 in a before-its-time troupe boarded a flight for home has left Israel for the United States, apparently seeking asylum, Israeli newspapers reported Monday.

Helena Tiyana, married and a mother of two children, stayed with a Romanian-born Israeli family until she left for the United States Saturday night.

Tornadoes pummel Florida

By United Press International

Tornadoes and fierce thunderstorms pounded much of Florida Monday and unseasonably cool temperatures forced Memorial Day cookouts indoors in the West.

A severe thunderstorm warning was issued for Key West, Fla., which has been the point of entry for Cuban refugees.

One of two pre-dawn twisters ransacked a mobile home park, severely damaging about 50 of the units and cutting off electrical power to about 2,000 homes at Punta Gorda in Charlotte County, Fla. At least five families were left homeless.

Less than a half hour later, a tornado struck in Lee County, about 25 miles to the south, skipping through another mobile home park before it struck a shopping center. A half-dozen mobile homes were damaged and stores had their windows shattered. No injuries were reported.

"It caught most of the people in bed asleep," Cpl. George Leece of the Lee County sheriff's police said. "It was fortunate there were no injuries up there (in the mobile home park)."

Thunderstorms hung over southern Florida, packing winds that gusted to 74 mph in West Palm Beach.

Temperatures dipped over much of the western third of nation. Early morning temperatures in the 20s and 30s stretched from the central plateau into the middle of the Rockies.

Grand Junction, Colo., set a new record-low temperature for the May 26 when the mercury dipped to 34 degrees, breaking the old mark of 35 established in 1916.

Rain extended from Washington State into the northern Rockies with snow falling in the higher elevations.

A travelers advisory was posted for the northwestern sections of Wyoming, where snow and strong winds were expected to cause hazardous driving conditions.

A frost warning was issued for the southern half of the Salinas Valley in California.

A travelers advisory remained in effect for north-central and northeastern Oregon as ash from Mount St. Helens continued to fall over the area.

Warm and muggy conditions prevailed over much of the Plains, the mid and lower Mississippi Valley and the Gulf Coast region to the southern Atlantic Coast states.

Early morning thunderstorms were scattered from the Dakotas and western Minnesota into the eastern sections of Kansas.

Blacks charged in deaths

MIAMI (UPI) — Police arrested three young black men Monday and charged them with murder in the Miami riot slayings of three whites — a 21-year-old father of three and two teen-agers who were dragged from their car and beaten to death.

The three are the first suspects to be charged with killings that occurred during the three days of rioting that shook the city last week.

In all, 16 people were killed in the violence.

Police said they could not have made the arrests without the help of the black community. They said the three suspects were on probation for other crimes and were positively identified by witnesses as being participants in the slayings.

Refugees recaptured

FORT WALTON BEACH, Fla. (UPI) — Delays in resettlement prompted another dozen Cuban refugees to flee over the fence at the tent city outside Eglin Air Force Base Sunday night but all had been recaptured Monday, Air Force officials said.

It was the second straight night that refugees — all of whom have been at the tent city at least two weeks for processing — have scaled the six-foot chain link fence surrounding the camp housing more than 8,000 refugees.

The sweep by military security units and local law enforcement officers also turned up the last two refugees known to be still at large following a 45-minute rock-throwing outburst Saturday night.

Montana fire controlled

GLENDIVE, Mont. (UPI) — A wind-whipped grass fire that consumed 125 square miles of eastern Montana prairie and forced evacuation of 100 rural residents was finally controlled Monday by firefighters, who estimated the damage at $1 million.

The fire broke out Saturday, and winds preceding a severe rainstorm drove the flames across the brush and grass, blackening land on an estimated 90 to 90 farms and ranches. No injuries were reported, but livestock was killed.

Canadian fires rage

KENORA, Ontario (UPI) — Almost 500 fires raged through millions of acres of ash-dry forestland in the eastern half of Canada Monday, including a 150,000-acre inferno that put 16,000 residents in a major Ontario vacation area on evacuation alert.

That fire raged along a 40-mile front about 14 miles outside Kenora, but southeast winds directed it away from the city giving officials some time to make plans for possible evacuation of the area 125 miles east of Winnipeg.

Nuclear foes head home

SEABROOK, N.H. (UPI) — Anti-nuclear demonstrators, who had vowed to occupy Seabrook atomic power plant during the weekend, Monday abandoned their assault on the $3.1 billion seacoast facility.

As the demonstration wound down, 25 protesters were arrested Monday miles away at the Manchester offices of the plant builders.

It brought to about 58 the demonstrators arrested during the weekend. Eight people were injured as demonstrators clashed with hundreds of riot-equipped state and local police and National Guardsmen.

Today's weather

Voters should have fewer showers to dodge

Twin Falls, Burley-Rupert, Jerome-Gooding areas: Decreasing showers today and Wednesday with slightly warmer temperatures. Highs in the middle 50s and lows in the 30s.

Camas-Prairie, Hatley, Wood River valley: Scattered rain and snow showers today, decreasing tonight and Wednesday. Highs 50 to 55 degrees. Lows 30 to 35.

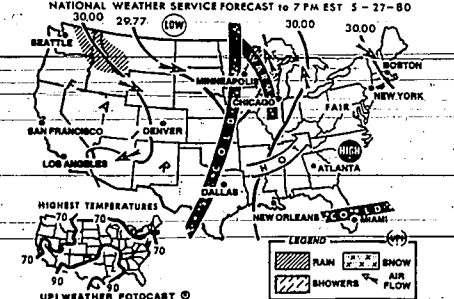

Northern Utah and Nevada: Fair to partly cloudy through Wednesday with widely scattered afternoon and evening thunderstorms in Nevada. A little warmer. Highs 60s to low 70s. Lows in the 30s.

Synopsis: Partly cloudy skies and slightly warmer temperatures appear in store for the Magic Valley.

A low pressure system which produced rain, snow and abnormally cool temperatures over the weekend was moving northward into Montana Monday afternoon and skies were clearing behind it.

Showers were expected to persist over southern Idaho into today, but then taper off. Temperatures which have been running about 20 degrees below normal are expected to rise slowly for the next several days.

On Monday, the National

NATIONAL WEATHER SERVICE FORECAST TO 7 PM EST 5 - 27 - 80

Weather Service issued a flood warning for the Henry's Fork near Rexburg. That stream, swollen by runoff from rains, was expected to crest around 9.2 feet Monday night, slightly above flood stage, then drop slowly today. Only minor lowland flooding was anticipated.

The field preparation outlook for Magic Valley calls for a slight chance of showers Thursday otherwise mostly dry Friday and Saturday. Temperatures will remain below normal with highs in the 55 to 65 degree range and lows in the 30s to middle 40s.

Pan evaporation is forecast at 15 inch today and 21 inch Wednesday. Maximum 4 inch soil temperatures will be a degree higher with the minimum Tuesday night unchanged. Winds will increase to 10 to 20 miles an hour this afternoon.

The warmest temperature in Idaho Monday was 63 degrees at Malad while Rexburg reported the low of 31. Elsewhere in the nation, Presidio, Texas, had the warmest temperature, 102, while Aspen and Gunnison, Colo., had the coldest, 21, degrees.

Carter greets carrier, outlines benefit plan

William Duke, fiancée Ann Omohundra embrace on return of carrier USS Nimitz to port in Norfolk

Sadness, happiness, pride mix together aboard Nimitz

ABOARD THE USS NIMITZ (UPI) Sadness, happiness and pride ran in cross-currents through the 5,000 man crew of the USS Nimitz which arrived home Memorial Day.

It arrived after six months at sea — most of it off the coast of Iran.

Some crew members Monday saw for the first time children born while they were away. All of them had little more than letters and snapshots linking them with families and friends while aboard the huge nuclear carrier.

The tour is believed to have been the longest for a Navy vessel since World War II. The carrier and two accompanying guided missile cruisers were greeted by President Carter and 20,000 anxious relatives and friends.

"I used to have a girlfriend," said Airman Jamie Morris of Topeka, Kan. Laughing a bit ruefully, he said, "But I stopped getting letters in January."

Petty Officer 2nd Class Rick Vian of Marion, Ind., said his wife gave birth to a boy two months ago. "She had a hard time. It was really bad," he said.

Vian said his request for leave was rejected because of the Iranian mission.

The Nimitz left Norfolk, Va., Sept. 10 on a routine deployment to the Mediterranean. But in January the huge vessel received orders to a position off Iran.

It was from the deck of the Nimitz that eight U.S. helicopters took off in late April on the ill-fated attempt to rescue the 53 U.S. hostages in Tehran.

The seamen said they knew about the mission through ship scuttlebutt before it was launched.

"Yeah, rumors travel fast. Two hundred men came off before the advance of the mission. Everybody helped and pitched in. We worked 18 to 20 hours at a stretch. It's a damn shame it failed," Vian said.

"You had a hint when they brought on the landing party and started painting the helicopters brown with no markings," said seaman Thomas Boughey, 33, of Toledo, Ohio.

The seaman said the eight Sea Stallion helicopters were given extra-special care and special maintenance crews came aboard to work on them before they took off for the desert refueling stop in Iran. Boughey had no explanation for the failure of three of them.

"I'd say it was fate," he said. "I'm disappointed it failed and that we lost eight lives."

After the mission failed, the commandos and maintenance personnel left the ship for Diego Garcia in the Indian Ocean.

"Our hearts were really low" after the mission's failure, Boughey said. "The hostages went through a lot more hell than we did."

"We're really glad we tried the mission," said Petty Officer 2nd class Ken Scallan, of Plymouth, Mass. "It's a letdown."

Lt. Cmdr. Michael O'Keefe, of San Diego, Calif., said the rescue helicopters look off at dusk.

"When the final one took off, we saw a school of porpoises leaping in the water. We all thought it was a good sign," O'Keefe said. "I don't think anybody here consider themselves a hero. We did our jobs best we could."

Capt. John Balzler, skipper of the USS Nimitz, told a visiting reporter, "It was emotional letdown for everyone (that the mission failed).

ABOARD THE USS NIMITZ (UPI) President Carter marked Memorial Day Monday aboard the giant nuclear carrier USS Nimitz.

The ship was steaming home from a six months tour.

The president told the 5,000-man crew he supports pay and benefits increases for all U.S. servicemen.

"I thank you from the bottom of my heart for exhibiting that strength so well, and I say on behalf of a grateful nation 'Well done' in this tremendous mission," Carter said.

The president was on a loud speaker hook-up which carried his words to the crews of the guided missile cruisers USS Texas and USS California which accompanied the carrier home.

The president's remarks from the carrier 30 miles out at sea were also carried to 20,000 family members and friends gathered at Atlantic Fleet Headquarters in Norfolk, Va., anxiously awaiting arrival of the vessels.

The president denounced Iran for continuing to hold 53 American hostages, saying they had been held in "an inhumane" way.

He praised the Nimitz crew for its part in the ill-fated hostage rescue attempt which eventually cost the lives of eight servicemen. The Nimitz was the departure point for the eight helicopters which attempted the raid into Iranian territory.

"All of you shared in that humanitarian commitment, that humanitarian mission," Carter said to a roar of applause.

The president praised the American forces for effectively projecting U.S. military might to the Persian Gulf and said it had contributed toward protecting the lives of the hostages.

"I am determined to maintain our military forces at the highest level of readiness — at the highest level of strength," he added.

Carter then unveiled the military pay compensation package he will back in Congress. He was interrupted by deafening applause and shouts of "All right, all right."

Carter said the benefits package, if enacted, would include among other things:

- A $20,000 re-enlistment bonus ceiling — up from $15,000 — and increased enlistment bonuses.
- A 15 percent increase in sea pay and 25 percent hike in flight pay.
- Increased basic subsistence housing and housing allowances.
- Dental care for dependents of active duty servicemen.

The proposals will cost about $85 million for the remainder of fiscal year 1980 and range from $435 million to $700 million in the next fiscal year.

Following the ceremony on the Nimitz, Carter, helicopter to Atlantic Fleet Headquarters to speak briefly to the relatives and friends waiting for the ships to arrive at about 3:30 p.m. MDT. The crew was without shore leave for six months.

Adm. Thomas Hayward, chief of naval operations, and other top brass say the Navy will be hard pressed to man a carrier battle group in the Arabian Sea — along with carrier battle groups in the Mediterranean and Pacific — for the indefinite future.

Carter's recent remark that money did not matter when he served as a submariner has not gone down well in Navy ranks.

Sources said Carter decided to call for a variation of the proposed Nunn-Warner bill that would allow servicemen bigger enlistment bonuses and "provide more benefits such as increases in transfer allowances.

The president was accompanied by Defense Secretary Harold Brown on his flight to the Nimitz. But Hayward stayed away, although Navy sources said there was no significance to his absence.

Navy Secretary Edward Hidalgo and Deputy Defense Secretary Graham Claytor flew to Norfolk early Monday and went aboard the Texas and California to offer personal shipboard welcomes to the men of the two cruisers.

The Nimitz left Norfolk Sept. 10 on what was to have been a routine six-month cruise to the Mediterranean.

It was diverted to the Persian Gulf from Naples Jan. 4, and the crewmen had not set foot on land since then although they were allowed an unprecedented beer party to mark their 100th day at sea.

As a prelude for one of Norfolk's biggest welcome home celebrations since World War II, 72 aviators from three Navy air squadrons took off from the deck of the Nimitz and flew home to Oceania Naval Air Base in Virginia Beach Sunday, welcomed by more than 200 cheering wives, friends and children.

Ex-soldier shows flag

CHESAPEAKE, W. Va. (UPI) — Former Army mess sergeant Herbert Shearer, a demonstrative self-styled patriot, is known as "flag man."

American flags of various sizes adorn the top of his diner in this southern-West Virginia town, near the capital.

On each major holiday, Shearer decorates his eatery with plenty of flags.

For Memorial Day, Shearer decorated the graves of 50 veterans in Marmet Cemetery with American flags.

When the Iranian terrorists seized the U.S. embassy in Tehran and kidnapped Americans, Shearer attached 50 huge flags to the edge of his roof with a stapler. On each star, he needed a staple and the date of its admission to the union.

"Anybody that's been in the service anybody who fought for the flag, they would understand it," he said.

Shearer, 56, also has decorated a two-mile stretch of telephone poles in Chesapeake with an array of stars and stripes.

The veteran feels there aren't enough American flags in streets and stores, so he orders 1,400 at a time from a Chicago firm. He'll give a flag to anyone who asks.

Polls are open, get out and vote

All the primary election hoopla has come to an end—now it's up to the voters of Idaho.

The polling booths opened at 8 this morning and will continue until 8 this evening.

Idahoans, however, might find it difficult to get out and vote, particularly when the election comes on the heels of the Memorial Day holidays and when even state election officials predict just a 32 to 34 percent turnout.

If that occurs, some men and women in fact will be elected to office by a minority of voters because they face no opposition or because both parties are not represented on the ballot.

In those cases, there will be no choice in November; the choice is now. And that's why it is important that eligible voters make the effort to get to the polls today.

There are, of course, some interesting races that should perk up the turnout. The George Hansen-Jim Jones contest in the 2nd Congressional District on the Republican ballot is the most notable race for voters in the Magic Valley. But for the most exciting race this year—Frank Church vs. Steve Symms for U.S. Senate—the voters will have to wait until November. Still, Democrat Church and Republican Symms will carefully assess today's results and plug them in to their campaign strategy over the next five months.

Unfortunately, the state's presidential preference selections on the ballot will do little to attract voter interest. All but four Democratic delegate votes already have been parceled out because of an earlier caucus—and the Republican vote won't have any impact, since Ronald Reagan has the GOP nomination in hand.

But if voters really care about effective government at the level where they can have the most influence—in their own cities and counties—they will go to the polls today and make their selections.

Effective government starts at home and only with competent, sensitive individuals at the helm can Idaho solve its problems and keep government in step with the wishes of the people.

The countdown

Were you counted?

The 1980 Census is down to the wire and census personnel are making their final efforts to see that every individual in the Magic Valley is counted and credited toward their communities.

If you missed getting a census form in the mail, or weren't visited by a census enumerator, it's not too late. Monday's Times-News carried a census form on Page A-7 you can fill out and return to the Boise office.

Or, you can call 334-1197 collect and talk to census personnel.

Remember, if you're not counted now, you'll have to wait for another 10 years.

Adams, Sullivan: Married?

WASHINGTON — When first I heard about Richard Adams and his "spouse" Anthony Sullivan, words failed me, and it is probably good they did.

His story, still unfolding, says something about modern sensibilities. Adams, an Australian, came to America in 1972 on a visa permitting him to stay until Jan. 7, 1974. On Jan. 5, 1974, he married a lady in Las Vegas. He promptly petitioned for permanent residence as an "alien relative." But by September, 1974, he was living alone, his wife's whereabouts unknown. He was told to demonstrate that he was a bona fide marriage. He didn't.

On April 25, 1975, Adams filed a petition on Sullivan's behalf, stating that he, Adams, with the help of a compliant clergyman had become married to Sullivan in Colorado. The government replied that a same-sex "marriage" is invalid for immigration purposes because it is not real and certainly Congress never intended a union of that sort to be a basis for a visa petition. So the two fellows went to court to assert their "rights."

They said the validity of a marriage for immigration purposes should be determined by the law of the place where it occurred, and that Colorado law says: "A marriage between a man and a woman licensed, solemnized and registered... is valid in this state." They said because this law "does not specifically prohibit" same-sex marriages, there is an "inference" of permission. The judge replied that the silence of Colorado's law on same-sex marriages permits no such inference and, besides, congressional intent, easily surmised, should prevail.

The government argued that "the basic structure of society and social values rely upon the historical man-woman marital relationship." Therefore, as another court said in a similar case, "there can be no doubt that there exists a rational basis for the state to limit the definition of marriage to exclude same-sex relationships."

That proposition is precisely what Adams and Sullivan deny. They say the government itself has acted in ways that legitimize doubts about that proposition. They argue that "sanctified notions about male and female roles are falling away fast. And various judicial and executive decisions cumulatively suggest, that soon, if not now, homosexuals will be admitted to all the rights, privileges and immunities enjoyed under U.S. law."

A court has held that, even if one accepts psychiatric testimony that formal recognition by a university of a homosexual student organization would tend to perpetuate or expand homosexual behavior, such evidence does not justify a university's refusal to grant such formal recognition. This is congruent with the policy of the U.S. Job Corps, which has seen fit to issue a manual on "sexuality," entailing respect for differing sexual "lifestyles" and stipulating heterosexual and homosexual activities. "Homosexual parents, of both sexes, have been granted the same custody rights, and have been found 'fit' as adoptive parents."

Sullivan and Adams say the "discrimination" against them is unconstitutional because courts no longer allow "stereotyped and/or antiquated assumptions about homosexuality and gender roles."

In a decision affirming the constitutionality of laws prohibiting same-sex marriages, the Minnesota Supreme Court held that marriage "manifestly is more deeply founded than the asserted contemporary concept of marriage and societal interests for which petitioners contend." Adams and Sullivan argue, in effect, that nothing is so deeply founded in modern society—except, of course, their rights, as they see them.

They say, "There is no important governmental interest in preserving the moral status quo." Hence, there is no justification for the "discrimination" that denies them the legal benefits (such as preferential tax treatment) and other advantages (such as "societal respectability") of state-sanctioned marriages. "Times," they admonished the judge unsuccessfully; now they will admonish a federal appeals court.

One thing does, indeed, lead to another. The fact of change, filtered through the modern mind, becomes charged with value. One thing should lead to another. This mischievous proposition is what C.S. Lewis called "the fatal serialism of the modern imagination—the image of infinite unilinear progression which so haunts our minds. Because we have to use numbers so much, we tend to think of every process as if it must be like the numerical series, where every step, to all eternity, is the same kind of step as the one before."

But the life of society is not a numerical series. Infinite unilinear progression is a chimera. It is not infinite. It ends, with what Lewis called "the abolition of man."

Garage sale fantasy

Los Angeles Times Syndicate WASHINGTON — All over America people are holding garage sales. I don't know about you, but I can't pass one up. What drives people like myself to garage sales is that we all have fantasies that somewhere in the flossom on display is a treasure that the owner doesn't know he's got.

Here is my favorite garage sale fantasy:

I go to a garage sale at the Kruegers. It's all junk, but, as I'm about to leave, my wife whispers, "You have to buy something or they'll be very insulted."

"There's absolutely nothing here I want to have in the house," I whisper back.

"Why don't you buy that painting?" "It's the ugliest picture I've ever seen."

"Yes, but we can always use the frame."

"But they're asking $15 for it," I protest.

"Offer them $10. It's five o'clock and you can see they're desperate."

Offer Krueger ten and he says, "Oh, $12.50 and all sales are final. I'm about to call him a crook, when my wife nudges me in the ribs, and I pay him the $12.50. "Do you have any newspaper to wrap it in?" I ask.

"We don't wrap," Krueger says. "You bring your own wrapping to a garage sale."

I stick the painting under my arm and say to my wife, "Hurry up or we'll miss the 11:2 bus."

We got on the bus, and seated across the aisle is a man in a pin-striped morning suit. I figure he's just been to a wedding.

He looks at me, and then casually at the painting I have leaning against my knees. Suddenly his eyes bug out.

"I beg your pardon. May I examine that painting?" he says.

"Forgive me," he says, handing me his card. "I am from Sotheby Park Bernet's, the art auction house, and I could swear that picture is an original Applebaum."

"You are correct," I say. "It's been in my family for years. My Aunt Ada left it to us in her will."

The man from Sotheby gets on his hands and knees and says, "It's the most magnificent Applebaum I've ever seen. We've known of its existence, but we were unable to trace it after it was sold by the J.P. Morgan estate."

"The Morgans and my aunt were good friends," I say.

The Sotheby man takes a magnifying glass out of his pocket, and looks at the history of Applebaum."

"A little," I reply. "But our family has so many great paintings, we can't keep track of them all."

"Applebaum lived in Alaska, and spent 40 years painting nothing but dog sleds. He never painted the dogs just the sleds. For years he was ignored by the art world. But in 1950

Politics: Taking fun out

Universal Press Syndicate WASHINGTON — Time was, and the time was not so very long ago, when running for office was a hazardous business.

Getting votes in a typical campaign had all the efficiency of raking leaves in a high wind. Viewed as an art or as a science, politics once was a matter of surprise for amateurs—and it was fun.

Also, then days is gone forever. The mall brings the first issue of a new quarterly: "Campaigns & Elections, otherwise identified as—The Journal of Political Action. Its several articles confirm the most dismal forebodings of an aging reporter: Politics is no longer fun, and the pros are taking the fun out of it."

Permit me a small sigh for the innocence of yore. The first presidential campaign I remember was Roosevelt's in 1936. A couple of years later I was cutting my teeth covering city, county and state elections in Virginia. There weren't any computers then; there weren't any random sample polls.

In Virginia, we reckoned the Harry Byrd vote and the anti-Byrd vote, and within the Byrd organization men communicated mostly by golden silences and sidelong glances. Goggled and scared, our polis flew by the seat of their pants.

Now it's "geodemographics." The progressive, modern candidate tends to bypass the traditional two-party structure. He doesn't take much stock in campaign buttons, posters and bumper stickers. He surrounds himself with professional managers, fund-raisers, statisticians, pollsters, men, accountants, consultants and lawyers. They sell him like so many tubes of toothpaste.

We used to have a wonderful silver-haired old pol in Virginia by the name of Ebbe Comp. He had an '80 back in 1957. God knows what Ebbe would have thought of Jonathan Robbins and the "Claritas" Cluster System. Ebbe ran the Byrd organization by cracking his knuckles. Mr. Robbins runs campaigns "through geodemographics."

If I understand the Claritas Cluster System correctly, which seems altogether doubtful, Mr. Robbins and his associates have fed a billion bits of statistical information into the mouths of their computers. On command, the machines regurgitate correlations of income, education, housing characteristics and voting patterns. The system permits classification of community differences according to "basic sets of variables which measure the grouping phenomenon."

In the end, Mr. Robbins is able to tell a candidate all about the communities in his constituency in terms of class, housing, age, ethnicity and race, family life cycles and mobility. A typical cluster might embrace 350 households with about 800 persons. A Type 23 cluster is known jovially as Banker's Neighbors. It is a mix of urban, middle-class, backyard, row house and apartment house neighborhoods. A Type 37 cluster is the "Bobemian Mix," made up largely of well-educated young adults with few children. Type 29 is called "Cauburg Cornrow." Type 39 "Sharecroppers."

Working from these formidable printouts, the professional managers send out their letters and where to make their phone calls. A candidate, presuming he favors flood stamps, does not send the flood stamp letter to Cluster 28, "Blue Blood Estates." He sends the flood stamp letter to Cluster 11, "Dixie-style Tenements."

The thing is, the system works. Mr. Robbins tells us how Claritas defeated a "right-to-work" referendum in Missouri in 1974. It was hired by the labor unions to oppose the proposition.

When the campaign began, a right-to-work was expected to win by a 60-40 margin. After Mr. Robbins had sent 100,000 households through his computers, right-to-work lost by 59-41. Union supporters knew exactly where to throw the curve, where to throw the fast ball and where not to waste their time.

It's all very scientific, very anti-septic, marvelously efficient. But is it a good thing? Does a candidate turn into a punchcard... responding to a programmed data? It would be pretty easy to lose the human touch in all the tapes and codes and banks, but my reservations are futile: This is the political wave of the future. Duck!

2 hospital stories: Cases of the chicken and the stool

Chicago Sun-Times (Chicago) Hospitals are frequently the scenes of human drama, life and death, sadness and joy, triumph and failure, hope and despair.

Countless movies and TV dramatizations have been made about hospitals. But here are two real-life hospital stories that recently happened in Chicago.

First, the story we might call: "The Lady in the Dark."

It was a very late on a recent Monday night. The proud fathers and other visitors had all left lying-in hospital, the maternity branch of the University of Chicago's Billings Hospital. A faint nurse happened to be standing inside the main entrance and she glanced toward the door just as a figure was approaching from out of the darkness.

It was a woman carrying a shopping bag. To the nurse, she looked to be walking furtively. She looked nervously to each side and seemed to be afraid of being seen. Then she walked quickly to the hospital door, put down the shopping bag, looked around again and turned and scurried away.

The nurse immediately went to her supervisor and said: "A woman has just left a shopping bag outside the door."

The nursing supervisor picked up a phone and called a security guard. Then all three—the nurse, the supervisor and the security guard, went to the entrance and looked at the shopping bag.

The top of the bag was sealed with a piece of paper.

"It's moving," the guard said. And it was. The sides of the bag bulged and quivered.

"There's something alive in it," the nurse said.

"We'd better open it," said the supervisor.

This wasn't the first time such things have happened at this and other maternity hospitals.

You've read about them—in infants being abandoned by women too poor to care for them, or too ashamed, because they are unwed, to keep them.

The security guard carefully pulled the top of the bag open.

A white chicken jumped out. The chicken was captured and turned over to the university's animal experts, who examined it and said it was an ordinary, healthy, white chicken.

When I heard about the chicken, I asked D.J.R. Bruckner, a university vice president and spokesman. He had no theories as to why the woman left the chicken at the hospital.

Bruckner shook his head and said: "Our society is in bad shape when a woman is forced to abandon her chicken."

The next story might be called "The Lady in the Lot."

It concerns a suburban woman who has been having difficulty with her bowels. She was having what is sometimes referred to, in local commercials, as a problem of irregularity.

She visited a physician at Michael Reese Hospital and he examined her.

After examination, the doctor said that before he could reach any final conclusions she would have to bring in a sample to be analyzed. A stool sample, to put it bluntly.

The woman returned home and waited for an opportunity to provide the sample. After a couple of days went by, the opportunity arose.

She deposited the sample in a plastic bag. Then she pondered what to put the plastic bag in. After all, a lady does not want to walk around in public, or even in private, carrying that sort of thing in a clear plastic bag.

She considered putting it in her purse, but decided against it. It wasn't the kind of thing she wanted mixed with her car keys, money and make-up.

So she looked through a closet and found just the right container: an old, small purse belonging to her daughter. It was worn and frayed and should have been thrown out anyway.

The woman put the plastic bag in the old purse, then drove to the hospital. She parked in the lot, got out, and began walking toward the hospital entrance.

Suddenly the old purse was yanked from her hand.

A black teen-ager had snatched it, and began to walk toward the hospital entrance.

She chased him, shouting: "Wait, come back. I'll give you money. I'll pay you. Wait, you don't want that purse, honest you don't!"

But he didn't stop. In a moment he was out of sight.

We can only let our imaginations tell us what that teenage purse snatcher's reaction was when he went home and looked in the purse.

My guess is that he said something like: "Damn, some of them honks must be worse off than we are."

Nationwide survey slated to help pick running mate

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Ronald Reagan's pollster begins a nationwide survey this week to help determine who would be the best running mate for the 1980 Republican standard bearer.

Reagan, who according to a UPI count has already clinched enough delegates to be nominated at the GOP national convention in Detroit, has called the selection of a vice presidential candidate "the toughest choice I have to make."

It is particularly important because Reagan, although apparently in good health, is 69 years old. His strategists feel many voters might cast their ballots based on whether Reagan's vice president is perceived as capable of running the country.

Dick Wirthlin, Reagan's top political adviser, will conduct the poll through his survey firm — Decision Making Information Inc.

The vice presidential question is just one part of an hour-long personal interview with 1,500 randomly selected voters. The citizens will be asked to choose from among 18 names listed as possible Reagan running mates.

Wirthlin expects the results to be ready by mid-June.

"The survey," he said, "is broad-based and removed from personality."

The poll, plus talks with top GOP leaders and an examination of the prospective running mates' records, will be used by Reagan to make his final choice, Wirthlin said.

He declined to name the 18 prospects on the list, but did say others who sought the 1980 nomination — except Rep. John Anderson — are included. Anderson is now running for president as an independent.

That would mean the list includes former Texas Gov. John Connally, Rep. Philip Crane of Illinois, Senate GOP leader Howard Baker, Sen. Robert Dole of Kansas and former Ambassador George Bush, who dropped out of the race Monday.

In addition, sources said, Rep. Jack Kemp of New York, Sen. Richard Lugar of Indiana, former Treasury Secretary William Simon, Gerald R. Ford, Illinois Gov. James Thompson and Sen. Paul Laxalt of Nevada also are included.

Ford has said that under no circumstances would he take the second spot.

Wirthlin also said at least one woman is listed, but he would not identify her. Speculation has centered on former Ambassador to Great Britain Ann Armstrong.

"There are people on the list who have not been widely discussed," he added.

In addition, the poll includes a question dealing with whether a woman running mate would help or hurt Reagan.

"We're also using the survey to assess what kind of traits and attributes the American voter looks for in a vice presidential candidate," Wirthlin said.

Reagan has said he wants a running mate who is compatible with him on basic issues such as abortion.

The careful selection process — this time around contrasts sharply with Reagan's 1976 decision to announce prior to the GOP convention that liberal Republican Sen. Richard S. Schweiker of Pennsylvania would be his running mate. That decision incensed the conservative wing of the GOP which Reagan so carefully wooed and was seen as a fatal mistake late in the primary season which may have contributed to Reagan's loss of the nomination.

Reagan expresses gratitude for Bush pledge of support

By United Press International
Ronald Reagan, chief beneficiary of George Bush's decision to drop his challenge for the Republican presidential nomination, expressed his gratitude Monday for Bush's decision and pledge of support.

"I was a support campaigner and I'm most grateful for his expression of support for my candidacy and for his pledge to work for unity in the party," Reagan said at a holiday barbecue and gospel sing in California.

Whatever differences he and Bush may have had with regard to specific issues, Reagan said, "we have always been united in our determination to remove the present administration in Washington; from office so we'll go forward in pursuit of that goal."

GOP national chairman Bill Brock summoned reporters in Washington to say the withdrawal leaves Ronald Reagan the unquestioned champion of the Republican Party.

"We have the Republican nominee," Brock told a news conference. "I think he can beat Jimmy Carter like a drum."

But Brock also praised Bush for conducting "a good and gallant campaign," and said, "he has always been a gentleman."

Rep. John Anderson, who withdrew from the Republican race to seek the presidency as an independent, predicted he would attract much of the Republican support released by Bush.

"He fought a very gallant race but finally had to accept the inevitability that Reagan would be the nominee," Anderson said. "I hope some Bush supporters will be joining us."

Anderson said in many primary states the votes Bush received were actually anti-Reagan votes, and some of them will come to him.

Gov. William Milliken of Michigan may have been the most disappointed Republican. He campaign hard to help Bush achieve a landslide victory in his state last week, only to see it obscured by the announcement by ABC and CBS that Reagan's votes in Michigan and Oregon had put him over the top for the nomination.

"While I am disappointed by his decision, I recognize the realities which resulted in Ambassador Bush deciding to halt his campaign," Milliken said in a statement released through his capital office.

He said Michigan "can be proud of the role this state played in giving George Bush his biggest victory."

Rep. James Abdnor, R-S.D., said he was relieved by Bush's announcement, and believes Reagan will "be a fine man to head up our ticket."

"I think the hanging was on the wall," Abdnor said. "I liked him. I knew him. But it was high time we put our forces together and got behind one candidate."

BABY DOC'S BABY

Haiti is the poorest country in the Western hemisphere, but that's not going to cramp "Baby Doc" Duvalier's style on his wedding day. The 28-year-old ruler, who inherited his "President for Life" post at the death of his father, Francois "Papa Doc" Duvalier, weds 27-year-old divorcee Michelle Bennett today in festivities expected to cost more than half-a-million dollars. Says the bride to be, "We will make lots of children and live happily ever after."

Crewcuts turn status symbol among youths

KENSINGTON, Md. (UPI) — Doug Kelly's new haircut "all began as a dare. But the chuckles from his high school classmates about "burrheads" have evolved into something of a status symbol.

The crew cut, that rage of 1950s, is alive and well in 1980. "It's startling," said Mike Michaelson, the Montgomery County school system's administrative assistant for student affairs. "That's what I looked like in high school. When I first saw these kids, I ran home and looked at my old yearbook."

Kelly, 16, collected $70 in dare bets after he became the first at Kensington's Einstein High School to get a crew cut last month.

A dozen other friends followed suit, and the cut caught on at several other high schools in the Washington suburb of Montgomery County.

"When we first did it everyone flipped out," Kelly said. "There were a lot of snickers and teasing and the other kids thought we were goofy." "It's considered really neat now."

Brawl after luau leaves guard dead

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Police have arrested five persons as the result of a luau that turned into a bloody brawl, leaving a security guard dead and his wife badly beaten.

The fight broke out early Sunday morning when security guards apparently refused to return cleaning deposit money the party-goers had paid to rent a hall.

Joseph Gross, 25, was found sprawled on the dance floor of the "Happening Factory" in the North Hollywood district. He was pronounced dead at the scene. His wife, Kathleen, 23, who was also working as a guard, was found beaten and unconscious in a hallway.

The Gross couple were armed with pistols and police said one of those arrested had been shot in the leg.

Booked for suspicion of murder were Uesero Misaalefua, 23; Budwiser Misaalefua, 22; Gasio Kimio, 19; Ti Utuone, 18, and Vendella Misaalefua, 31.

Alexander says Hunter deserves the award for being "so forthright and honest," but the judge wasn't impressed. He fined him $150.

Donald Condencia — ex-cowboy turned cop — fell back on his old rodeo skills Sunday in action that should put him in the record books. How many cops or cowboys, after all, ever lassoed a 40 mph wallaroo? Condencia got a rope on the creature — a first, cousin to the kangaroo — after it broke out of the San Francisco zoo and went speeding down a highway. The marauding marsupial was booked for escape, resisting arrest and assault on a police officer.

Wheaton High School Principal Anson F. Wilcox says the revival of the "burrheads" is an indication that patriotism is also back.

"The kids have settled down," said. "They went through the '60s and mid-70s with a 'Do your own thing' attitude. But now they're swinging back to the idea of pride in family and country. The economy has kids more concerned about getting jobs and the Iranian crisis has spurred their patriotism."

Kwangju citizens' group, Gen. Kim Jae-Suk, meet in suburb Monday in attempt to end violence

Korean troops seize control of riot-torn city of Kwangju

KWANGJU, South Korea (UPI) — South Korean Army troops Tuesday seized complete control of the riot-torn provincial capital of Kwangju.

They took it over from militants who had held it for nine days.

In a terse statement issued in Seoul, the Martial Law command said the troops stormed the city of 800,000 people at 3:30 a.m. (11:30 p.m. MDT) and regained full control less than two hours later.

Groups of rebels at the provincial government offices downtown and at a suburban park resisted the military action and two of them were killed, the statement said. Two hundred others were arrested but there were no "civilian casualties," the statement said.

The military said it moved against Kwangju, 170 miles south of Seoul, to save its residents from hardships resulting from lack of food and other supplies and from the intimidations the rebels had imposed.

Kwangju, South Korea's fourth largest city, will be sealed off until law and order have been fully restored, the communiqué said. Official sources in Seoul said authorities will start delivering emergency supplies to the devastated city immediately.

Top military officials said the army had originally planned to carry out the operation Sunday night but decided to put it off to try once more for a peaceful settlement.

But because rioters showed no signs of giving up Monday, the military decided to move ahead with its plans.

A highly placed official in Seoul said 127 people have been confirmed killed since anti-government demonstrations led by students erupted in Kwangju on May 18.

But civil leaders claim that between 400 and 500 people have been killed in the violence that has made the city a symbol of opposition to the martial law regime. They estimate 4,000 to 6,000 persons have been injured.

The demonstrations broke out after the government expanded martial law to all parts of the country and arrested a number of political opponents, including opposition leader Kim Dae-jung, who comes from Kwangju province.

The crackdown was accompanied by a ban on political activity and the closing of university campuses, where numerous anti-government protests have been held in recent weeks.

Militants supported by residents have held the city since May 20, when army troops moved in but were confronted by the rebels who burned down army public office buildings and commandeered scores of army trucks, jeeps, city buses and passenger cars.

To prevent a bloodbath, the army withdrew from the city.

Youths armed with M-1, M-16 and carbine rifles staged a series of bloody clashes with army troops on the outskirts of the city as the siege continued.

A crisis settlement committee formed by 30 civic and religious leaders and student representatives kept a semblance of order in the rebel-controlled city and succeeded in collecting about 2,500 weapons from hot-headed rioters.

Militants, however, refused to turn in their weapons and vowed to fight to the finish.

South African police arrest 52 church leaders in protest

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (UPI) — Heavily armed riot police arrested 52 protesting church leaders and tear-gassed demonstrating students Monday.

The arrests came in mounting nationwide confrontations over racial discrimination in South Africa's school system.

The police, armed with automatic rifles and clubs, arrested the clergy members and students as they tried to march on the city's police headquarters to protest the weekend arrest of a prominent minister who is of mixed race — officially called "colored" in South Africa.

In Cape Town, police tear-gassed mixed-race students at a protest meeting in the cafeteria of the Western Cape University, then charged into their midst with swinging clubs as the students fled the building.

No injuries were reported.

The Rev. John Thorne, former head of the South African Council of Churches, was arrested Saturday after he announced support of a month-old school boycott by colored and Indian students protesting what they said was an educational system that favored whites.

Hours after the clergy's protest, police said Thorne had been released from detention in Cape Town and no charges would be brought against him.

Meanwhile, the arrest of the clergy members was condemned by the South African Council of Churches who charged police with using force "unjustifiably."

Under South Africa's three-level system, white schools receive four times as much money per student as do Indian and colored students.

The church leaders endorsed Thorne's position in pamphlets they gave to passing motorists and pedestrians before the police arrested them.

Those detained included Anglican Bishop Desmond Tutu, the current secretary general of the Council of Churches, and leading figures in the Catholic, Presbyterian, Methodist, Evangelical, Lutheran and Congregational faiths.

The 50 men and two women, white, black and colored — sang "Onward Christian Soldiers" as they were loaded into the police vans to be taken to police headquarters.

A police spokesman said all were being charged under the riotous assemblies act, which carries a maximum sentence of 100 days imprisonment.

The city's chief public prosecutor said they would remain in jail through the night. Other protest demonstrations were reported in several of Cape Town's mixed-race suburbs without police involvement.

Most of the country's 2.5 million colored population live in Cape Town where about 4,000 protesting youths went on a rampage in the city center Saturday to publicize their school protest.

Guerrillas claim success

ALGIERS, Algeria (UPI) — A guerrilla group seeking independence for the Western Sahara claimed Monday to have killed 189 Moroccan soldiers in three recent attacks on the southwestern desert town of Abaltek.

In Morocco, officials mentioned casually figures for only one of the attacks.

They said four Moroccan soldiers were killed and seven injured during the worst assault, which occurred Friday.

Moroccan authorities also claimed their forces killed 152 rebels of the Polisario Front.

Manhattan apartment Saturday afternoon.

The spokesman said the death "looked like a suicide" and the body was turned over to Brazilian officials.

Under international rules, city police could investigate the death only upon the official request of the home government and no such request was made by Brazilian authorities, the spokesman said.

Ashes of Brazilian consul sent home

NEW YORK (UPI) — The body of the Brazilian consul general, who was found shot to death over the weekend in what police termed an apparent suicide, has been cremated and his ashes flown home to Brazil, officials said Monday.

Lebanese feud erupts

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — A long-standing blood-feud between two rival Christian militias erupted anew Monday in the mountains north of Beirut.

It left five people dead and more than 15 wounded.

Police sources said a machine gun and mortar clash was triggered by members of the private army of former Lebanese President Suleiman Franjeh who tried to occupy villages controlled by their arch-rivals, the Phalangist Party of Pierre Gemayel.

The sources said Franjeh's army directed mortar fire into the villages of Douk, Shebtine, Malfouq and Misrah — located in a cluster about 30 miles northeast of Beirut — after being driven off by Phalangist militiamen.

Five people were killed and at least 15 wounded during the shelling of the mountain villages, the Phalangist radio said.

Police sources said Franjeh may have instigated the fighting in an effort to disrupt the current negotiations between the Phalangists and the Syrians, who have traditionally backed the former Lebanese president.

Franjeh, they said, fears that a rapprochement between the Christian Phalangists and the Syrians might leave him isolated.

Franjeh fought alongside the Phalangists against the Palestinians and Lebanese leftists during Lebanon's 1975-76 civil war. The two sides, however, had a falling out in 1973 during a power struggle for control of the Christian militia.

European Socialists end 'fact-finding' session in Tehran

TEHRAN, Iran (UPI) — Three European Socialists ended a 10-day "fact-finding" trip to Iran Monday. They left, insisting they had not come to mediate in the hostage crisis and would not report to President Carter. They have not come to assert American interests, Austrian Chancellor Bruno Kreisky was quoted as saying in an official statement issued by the news agency. The Socialists are independent of America.

We have not joined the economic boycott (of Iran) and we shall not do so. We shall not go to the Olympics, but we are independent of Moscow." Kreisky was spokesman for the rest of his delegation — Swedish Social Democratic leader Olof Palme and Spain's Socialist leader Felipe Gonzalez — who were seen off by Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh and Ali Rez Nohari, who was also in Tehran at the Central Bank of Iran. They left for Athens aboard the same chartered jet that had brought them from Vienna on Sunday.

Their talks came just two days before the opening of Iran's new parliament — charged with deciding the fate of the 53 American hostages. The captives spent their 204th day in captivity, reportedly scattered around Iran. "There was no immediate word if the Socialists had met with U.N. envoy Adib Daoudi, who was also in Tehran for exploratory talks on the future of a U.N. inquiry mission that failed earlier this year to resolve the crisis. At a news conference, Kreisky and Ghotbzadeh repeated no mediation was involved in the Socialists' visit. Kreisky said he would not report to Carter on the talks with President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr, Ghotbzadeh and Ayatollah Mohammad Beheshti, leader of the fundamentalist Islamic Republican party that controls Iran's parliament. "You see, we have not been acting as mediators here," Kreisky said. Ghotbzadeh said the mission was aimed at "fact finding and, I hope, these facts have been found." He acknowledged that the atmosphere for "mutual respect and understanding" had improved with the visit. "But that again has nothing to do with the question of the hostages." Kreisky said he did not know when the hostage issue would be discussed by the parliament and that it was "not the main issue." In the delegation's talks. In the past, Iranian leaders have said the parliament will first take up other domestic problems. "We discussed the questions of reducing tensions, religion, the Middle East and Iran after the revolution and other subjects," Kreisky said. At the U.S. Embassy in Tehran, where the hostages had been held until an abortive American rescue attempt April 25, the Kayhan newspaper reported the third incident of violence since the hostages were reportedly moved.

French priest sentenced in death of teen-age girl

MONTEPELLIER, France (UPI) — A Catholic priest who used whips and other "tricks" to torture handicapped girls has been sentenced to 10 years in prison for the suffocation death of an epileptic 13-year-old. The case of the Rev. Rene Fabre, 69, brought strong reactions Monday from several French newspapers, which expressed concern that the priest's gruesome methods of discipline at the Espellidou home he ran for 11 years went undetected by state health authorities. Fabre, a member of the French Legion of Honor and a former army chaplain in Indochina, was sentenced Saturday on an involuntary manslaughter charge in the death of Isabelle Le Menach, 13, an epileptic, who died 2 years ago of suffocation. The case, which drew national attention for his disciplinary methods during a 4-day trial, said he had ordered the girl punished because she disrupted a Sunday mass with incoherent noises. Fabre had her bound in a straitjacket and hanged from a wall in a padded cell.

Her parents fought for more than three years to bring the case to trial and are expected to now seek charges against others who knew of Fabre's policies but failed to act. "These aren't really methods but rather tricks that I invented," Fabre told the court before the jury handed down the stiffest possible sentence. In his testimony, Fabre told of other disciplinary "tricks" he used in the home for the physically and mentally handicapped in southeastern France. When one girl wet her bed, "I had to dunk her head in the toilet while I flushed it" to teach her cleanliness. Another girl was chained to a hot radiator because she was restless. "The conditioning of the mentally handicapped by violence is necessary to compel them to acquire a sense of responsibility. I assure you, my tricks worked." A child who uttered an obscene word had her mouth filled with bird droppings "to teach her to be polite."

Israel's Weizman makes it formal

TEL AVIV, Israel (UPI) — Defense Minister Ezer Weizman sent his resignation to Prime Minister Menachem Begin Monday. There were reports that the army chief of staff also threatened to quit. Weizman, who announced his resignation to the cabinet Sunday, opposed to a proposed severe cut in the defense budget, spent the day taking leave from army and defense officials. His resignation takes effect Wednesday and no successor has been named. Israel Radio said Weizman's letter to Begin accused the government of "marking time" in the peace negotiations with Egypt. "Instead of taking measured but determined steps toward a comprehensive and stable peace," the radio said Weizman cited a "growing and deepening rift" with Begin and charged the prime minister had "the rare opportunity to inject a new spirit into the nation, and now you've missed this opportunity." "The nation has never been as depressed as it has been during the last year," Weizman was quoted as telling Begin. News reports said army Chief of Staff Lt. Gen. Raphael Eitan also threatened to resign over the Finance Ministry demands for cuts in defense spending, but military officials said Eitan has no intention of leaving his job. The budget cuts of about 10 percent won Cabinet approval Sunday. The action by the outspoken Weizman, 56, came as the target date for completing talks with Egypt on Palestinian autonomy passed without an agreement but Israeli leaders expressed willingness to resume the suspended talks. Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir told a group of visiting U.S. congressmen that Weizman's resignation will not effect the negotiations with Egypt.

U.S. says Cambodia needs aid

GENEVA, Switzerland (UPI) — The United States warned Monday Cambodia faces extinction. It said that will occur unless the Vietnamese occupiers and their Soviet backers allow aid and medical assistance through to the people. Security Secretary of State Warren Christopher, who pledged an additional $29.6 million from the United States for the relief effort, said the Cambodian people face another wave of mass starvation and disease within weeks and possibly weeks. Together with other top-ranking officials from Asian and Western nations, he participated in a Cambodia conference which Vietnam and Soviet Union boycotted. Christopher squarely Hanoi and Moscow for the situation and said up to 2 million Cambodians could die in good faith, we increase our levels of commitment, we appeal to the authorities in Phnom Penh to the government of Vietnam. The supporters of Vietnam do not deserve over the death of a nation and its people. Christopher asked Vietnam and its puppet regime in Cambodia to lift restrictions on international relief distribution which he said had "hobbled relief efforts." He also appealed directly to the United Nations to use helicopters or other aircraft to airlift supplies to the isolated regions of Cambodia which are being isolated by the approaching monsoon. Secretary General Kurt Waldheim invited 99 nations to the 10th session of the U.N. General Assembly designed to raise additional funds for Cambodian relief. Only 58 countries sent representatives although all those most likely to involve were present with the exception of Vietnam and the Soviet Union which said the meeting was "political." Cambodia itself was also absent because the United Nations still refuse to recognize the 18 months of Vietnamese invasion troops 18 months ago.

OPEC lands financial chiefs meet

VIENNA, Austria (UPI) — Finance ministers from the 13 OPEC nations gathered Monday in the Austrian capital for a routine meeting but they are expected to deal with the chaotic situation in the oil market. Officials of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries said the meeting will focus on the OPEC fund which is designed to help developing countries deal with their balance of payments problems and with development projects. The finance ministers session is a break from the regular semi-annual conference of the cartel's oil ministers who will meet in Algiers June 9. OPEC member nations have again raised their crude oil prices in recent weeks and the oil ministers were expected to discuss the current price disorders. More moderate OPEC members, led by Saudi Arabia, were expected to press for a unified pricing system within the organization. At the last ministerial conference in December in Caracas, Venezuela, the oil ministers failed to agree on a single price to stick to each of the member states to charge whatever it wanted for crude oil.

Maine family beats heating costs by hard work

MILLINOCKET, Me. — James A. Farley deftly cut a large beechwood log into two-foot pieces with his chain saw while his son, Jeff, threw the pieces on top of a five-foot-high pile of wood that stretched the length of their driveway.

This was the third year in a row that Farley, a policeman in this town of 8,700 nestled in the midst of the northern Maine woods, has filled his driveway with enough beech, maple and poplar logs to heat his family's two-story frame house and cook their meals on a big iron stove in the corner of the kitchen.

Taking a rest from the hard work, he and his wife, Donna, sat in the kitchen over cups of coffee and recalled how, after the oil embargo in 1973, their bills for heating oil began to creep up, going from $1,000 to $2,000 a year.

Farley, who earns $13,000 a year and says he hates to pay the full price for anything, went hunting for a used iron stove. He found one for $30, which he paid for by bartering other items he had in his garage. In the basement, he made another stove out of an old 55-gallon steel drum to replace his furnace.

The cost for heating and cooking this year, he said, would be the $50 that he paid three young men to go into the forest and cut and deliver 10 cords of wood. (The usual price for a cord of wood in this area is about $45 to $50.) It takes him about five cords to get through an average winter, he said.

"We've managed to beat the energy crisis," he said, "and nowadays that's saying something."

Farley is one of a growing number of people, particularly in rural areas where wood is readily available, who have turned to wood stoves to save on fuel bills. The largest shift has taken place in New England, which is heavily dependent on oil for heat and where heating oil prices have risen to higher levels than in some other regions.

A study for the Department of Energy estimated that between 1972 and 1977 the number of wood stoves in the United States grew from about 250,000 to two million and that in 1978 alone an additional 1.1 million wood stoves were bought nationwide. A projection from a Gallup poll done by the Wood Energy Institute of Camden, Me., estimated that about five million households "have" wood stoves for heating and cooking and that more than half of the owners cut their own wood.

Most of the others had their wood cut and delivered at prices that vary widely from region to region. In Maine, which has a stack of wood stoves which is four feet deep and eight feet long, can cost from $50 to $100. In New York City, there has not been a significant growth in the use of wood stoves and most of the firewood is sold in bundles. These generally have from six to eight pieces of 12-inch-long wood and sell for from $3.75 to $6. Wood that sells for $4 a bundle works out to cost about $40 a cord, and so most city dwellers buy the wood only for the pleasure of an occasional fire.

In the suburbs around New York City, a cord of hardwood sells for from $140 or so to as much as $200. Many people, however, have been fetching their own wood. They watch for real estate who have trees taken down, or go out after storms with chain saws to cut up fallen branches.

The Farleys have divided the labor of keeping the fires going. Mrs. Farley said that Jeff, 13 years old, goes out three times a day to split wood and bring it into the house. "And I don't care if it's snowing or—so below," she said firmly. Their younger son, Todd, 9, is in charge of preparing kindling from the redwood logs that are good for starting fires.

It took some trial and error to use the stoves. "You have to learn how to keep a fire going," Farley said. Green or wet wood cannot be used. This year he will use wood cut last year and now seasoned. The wood is kept outside, where it loses most of its moisture. (Wetness from rain does not permeate the wood, which dries in a few days.)

For kindling, he uses small pieces of cedar, which burns rapidly, wrapped in newspaper. If he wants the stove to heat up quickly, he puts in poplar, which burns rapidly and forms hot coals, and then adds hardwoods such as beech and maple.

The stove in the kitchen, besides being used for cooking and baking, gives off enough heat to warm most of the downstairs, including the dining room and the living room. The stove in the basement is started in the evening by piling in three to four logs. These last until morning while copious "quills" take the sting out of particularly cold days.

Homeowners urged to curb fuel use

By GRANT PICK

Chicago Sun-Times

"A homeowner is a poor sucker if he doesn't work on cutting down his energy consumption," said Karl Kilma, an energy-conservation officer for the U.S. Energy Department's office. "Soon, half a person's salary will be going for energy, and a person isn't going to have enough left at the end of the month to buy a can of beer."

Increasingly, Kilma and others are warning about the impending fuel crisis at American hearths. Last year, Federal Trade Commission Chairman Michael Pertschuk estimated that fully one-quarter of U.S. energy is being expended at home. Aged consumers are paying more and more for that energy.

Energy experts are advising homeowners to get smart and curb their home fuel use — for their own sakes as well as for the country's. Consumers to choose lots of ways to reduce their monthly payments to the utilities.

The concept of payback — the time it takes to begin to reap a return on an investment — comes into play: Kilma insists the time has come for homeowners to apply the principle of payback to home energy. Energy-saving measures are only worthwhile if buyers reap a return in at least five years, he contends.

Kilma says the most cost-effective step is to insulate the house. The payback comes in two years at the most, he says.

On the other hand, Kilma says, "Storm windows prove really expensive." He denies that they significantly reduce heat loss and says their payback period runs 15 years.

Caulking, weatherstripping or putting a small fan in the attic bring swift paybacks, Kilma says.

Chuck Schumacher, a personal finance planner for a large Midwestern savings and loan association, thinks a quick payback is the crucial factor in spurring consumers to make home energy improvements. He reports that "to realize that payback, more and more homeowners are seeking home loans to add insulation, storm windows and furnace attachments.

But Schumacher says there is at least one reason to consider making improvements if the real cost is amortized over many years — it may boost the value of your home.

"People looking for homes today want to realize fuel savings," Schumacher said. "As homes change hands, their fuel bills go higher and higher. So when it comes time to sell your house, if you have energy improvements, you can push them to get more money in the marketplace."

Otherwise, figures Schumacher, consumers should be looking to see whether the payback they could get for an energy-saving measure outweighs other uses to which the same chunk of money could be put. A passbook savings account, for example, returns $3.90 a year on $1,000, Schumacher says.

Consumers should ask whether insulation or a five damper could do better.

And Schumacher says the return on investment will diminish if the homeowner needs to take out a loan. He points out, however, that because fuel bills are climbing, the return in energy savings likewise shoots up year after year.

"The fuel bill you're saving on could be $25 this year, and $50 next year," Schumacher said. His advice to consumers: Make home improvements today to realize the most money.

For the swiftest payback, do the installing yourself, Kilma says.

"There are a lot of snake-oil operators around," he warns.

If a contractor is to be consulted, Kilma offers a shopping instruction: Make the contractor provide an estimate of the payback period, and siphon off 10 per cent of his fee until he performs the job to your satisfaction.

"I don't expect every citizen to have an MBA," he said. "But everyone can have people explain the work they're doing. All you have to do is ask the right questions."

"But have something done to your home. Today is better than tomorrow."

We've got rampaging inflation; the cost of labor is going sky-high. It will cost the consumer 15 per cent a year more by waiting. So don't wait, do it today, do it yourself — make sure you know what you're doing."

Roger Whitmer, an associate professor of architecture at the University of Illinois, suggests the following energy- and money-saving tips:

- Buy the most energy-efficient air conditioners available — even at a higher price — because costs of operation will be less.
- Plant trees and shrubs to shade homes — and reduce the need for so much air conditioning.
- Ventilate attic spaces during the summer with fans or vents in roofs or overhangs to prevent summer heat build-up, requiring more air conditioning.

Historic home tour set June 8 by Junior Club of Twin Falls

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls Junior Club will hold an historic tour of homes and buildings June 8.

The regular tour will be from 1 to 6 p.m. with the patron tour for persons purchasing a $10 ticket, to include two additional homes, those of Dick and Patty Kerbs and John and Bonita Hepworth.

The patron tour also will include hors d'oeuvres at 6 p.m. June 8 at the Turf Club. Buses will leave the Turf Club to view the patron homes every half hour from 6:30 to 8 p.m.

Homes on the regular tour will include those owned by Mr. and Mrs. Oren Boone, Pole Line Road E.; Mrs. Penny Shane, (old Sierers home), 203 Eighth Ave. N.; Canyonside Realty, (old Thomas Costello home); 511 Second Ave. W.; Mr. and Mrs. Robert March, (old Earl Felt home, 1916), 160 Ninth Ave. N.; Rev. and Mrs. E. Weston Scott, (old Breckenridge home), 137 Seventh Ave. N.; Mr. and Mrs. Mac Akins, (old Louis Pettit home, 1910), 403 Third Ave. N.; Phillip Uhlrig, (old McCullom home, 1910), 708 Shoshone; Mr. and Mrs. Robert Wright, (old Christian Peterson home), 141 Ninth Ave. N.; Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Touchette, 1429 11th Ave. E.; Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Gray, (old Gary A. Tush home, built prior to 1909), 127 Ninth Ave. N.

Buildings will include the Justamere Inn, country house, United Methodist St. Edwards, Catholic, First Christian and United Presbyterian churches and the old Times-News buildings.

Tickets for the regular tour are $5 and $2.50 for senior citizens. They are available at the Bookstore, Van's Department Store, Ann's Hallmark, from any Junior Club member and also will be available the day of the tour at the Boone home on Pole Line Road or at the Justamere Inn.

Transportation for the tour will be provided for a nominal fee. Buses will leave every half hour from Justamere Inn.

Funds from the tour will be used to help the Magic Valley Alcohol Rehabilitation Center and the neonatal care unit at Magic Valley Memorial Hospital, according to Sandra Howden, publicity chairman.

The tickets include drawings and history of each home and building and also have maps and details of a short walking tour of some of the churches and other buildings.

The Boone farm home, built in 1918 by James Alvis, is considered a good example of sophisticated use of lava rock combined with brick. The house has been nominated to the National Register of Historic places. The lava rock extends indoors to a fireplace with green tiled hearth.

The Shane home, built in 1906 for realtor Guy Sierers, is of Western Colonial style with a broad columned porch and boxiness in style. The windows include diamond shaped and oval starburst windows as well as original stained glass revival in the upstairs bathroom.

The imposing Greek-Revival and Victorian former residence at 511 Second Ave. W., now owned by Canyonside Realty, was built in 1908 for Thomas Costello, manager of the Twin Falls Townsite Co. The Costello family sold the property in 1944 to Robert and Teala Bellini. Mrs. Bellini taught music there for many years.

The March home at 160 Ninth Ave. N., is termed an "airplane" bungalow with its flat-roofed central story section, suggesting the wings of a bi-plane. It shows the influence of the California-centered architectural style known as Mission, not to be confused with Spanish Mission styles. Earl Felt, the first building inspector for Twin Falls and a building contractor, built the house in 1916.

The symmetrical facade of the two-story Classical Box style house at 127 Seventh Ave. N., now the Christian Church parsonage, displays characteristics of this popular style, including a full front porch and panel detailing around the front door. Natural oak is seen in each room and the fireplace is faced in inlaid oak panels. The three-paned windows in the dining room have a center panel of stained glass. The house was built in 1909 for Loyal Breckenridge, manager of the Twin Falls Flour Mills, who lived there all his life.

The Adkins house at 403 Third Ave. N., described as a dignified two story Western Colonial, was built in 1910 for Louis Pettit, an early lumber firm manager. The home conveys its original elegance through AUSTRIAN SWAG draperies over lace curtains and many antique furnishings.

The Ohio bungalow at 708 Shoshone was built in the early 1910's for Robert M. McCullom, one of the town's first pioneers who was an officer in the Twin Falls Investment Co. The late Asher B. Wilson lived there for many years. The interior contains many fine details beginning with a geometric inlaid-wood design on the front door and fine oak woodwork.

The Wright home at 161 Ninth Ave. N. is another Western Colonial structure, considered a fine interpretation of the classical revival style. It is believed that the house was built for Christian Peterson in about 1911. Other owners were C. H. Robbins of the old Shoshone Grocery, James Fitzgerald and Albert H. Brailford. The house has a beveled glass door, inlaid panels on the side of the staircase and bay window in the dining room with a built-in bench.

The Swiss chalet home of the Touchettes at 1420 11th Ave. E. was the home of John Visser, a talented early Twin Falls architect. Visser, who designed the Lind garage, now demolished, had the same firm which manufactured the terra cotta for that building prepare the pieces to create the floor to ceiling terra cotta faced fireplace. It has a cartouche with a clock built into it.

The Gray home at 127 Ninth Ave. N. has the gabled roof and tuscan columns on the porch which characterize the Greek Revival style of architecture. It was built before 1909 for Gary A. Tush, chief engineer of the Twin Falls Land and Water Co. Later owners include Paul Detweiler.

MR. AND MRS. RUSSELL BURCH JR.
Hanna-Burch

RUPERT — Ron M. Hanna of Kimberly and Russell E. Burch Jr. of Twin Falls exchanged wedding vows March 1.

The ceremony was performed at the Rupert First Christian Church with Marvin Schrom, church pastor, officiating.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Merle Hanna of Rupert, Russell E. Burch Sr. of Los Angeles, and Janice Kime of Hayward, Calif.

The bride wore a full-length gown of white Quiana, in blouse-on styling, with a princess neckline and a train of self-material. Highlighting the design were a yoke of appliqued flowers and seed pearls and long sleeves trimmed with lace and self-covered buttons. Her jewelry included an opal and diamond pendant, a gift from her father and a diamond earrings that belonged to her grandmother. She also wore the same blue garter her mother had worn at her wedding 25 years ago. Her veil of illusion net was held by a cap of applique flowers and seed pearls.

The bride's sister, Julie Hanna, was her maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Kathy Warburton, a gift from her father and a diamond earrings that belonged to her grandmother. She also wore the same blue garter her mother had worn at her wedding 25 years ago. Her veil of illusion net was held by a cap of applique flowers and seed pearls.

The bride's sister, Julie Hanna, was her maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Kathy Warburton, a gift from her father and a diamond earrings that belonged to her grandmother. She also wore the same blue garter her mother had worn at her wedding 25 years ago. Her veil of illusion net was held by a cap of applique flowers and seed pearls.

Best man, Chris Hanna, the bride's brother, and John Smith of Burley were the groomsmen. Jason Burch, son of the bridegroom, was ringbearer.

Devi E. Bruns was the organist. Punky Gieser, accompanied by Steve Keene on the guitar, sang two solos. Clyde Richan also sang.

A reception was held in the Rupert Elks Lodge. Gail Petersen of Pocatello lent the guest book and Ty VanEvery, Kathy Mooso, Kirsten Mooso and Nicki Maggard were in charge of gifts.

Presiding at the champagne table were Dr. M.H. Simon, Mr. and Mrs. Norm Simon, Don Mooso and Mr. and Mrs. Vern Knight.

The cake was cut and served by Janine Morgan of Twin Falls and Sharon Wengert of Buhl. Connie Porter of Boise and Debbie Sullivan of Twin Falls poured.

Special guests attending the wedding were the bride's grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Jim Raynor of Emmett and the bridegroom's grandmother, June Ward of Twin Falls.

The bridegroom hosted a rehearsal dinner at Doc 'n' Dan's in Rupert.

Following their wedding trip to California and the Oregon coast, they are living near Kimberly. He is employed with Commercial Tires and she works for Farmers' Home Administration, both in Twin Falls.

King Heroin parody of 23rd Psalm

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
© Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I am enclosing a column you ran eight years ago when I was in high school.

It helped me make a decision about drugs I have never forgotten. I wasn't a drug user, but some of my friends were into drugs and trying to get me to join them.

Now that kids in their pre-teens are trying drugs, I hope you will reprint it. You have been so good about rerunning articles that have helped people, please don't let me down. If it helps just one kid like it helped me, it will be worth it, thank you.

—TAMMY, LITTLE ROCK

DEAR TAMMY: The article you enclosed is indeed worth a rerun, and here it is.

"King Heroin is my shepherd, I shall always want."

These tragic words, part of a twisted rewording of the beloved 23rd

Psalm, were discovered recently in Reidsville, N.C., in a closed car alongside a dead heroin addict. She was 23 years old.

Her death was ruled a suicide. A hookup with the car's exhaust had sent carbon monoxide fumes from a running motor into the vehicle. Here's the complete "psalm."

"King Heroin is my shepherd, I shall always want. He maketh me to lie down in the gutters.

"He leadeth me beside the troubled waters. He destroyeth my soul.

"He leadeth me in the paths of wickedness.

"Yes, I shall walk through the valley of poverty and will fear no evil, for thou, Heroin, are with me.

"Thy Needle and Capsule comfort me. Thy strappings the table of groceries in the presence of my family. Thou robbest my head of reason.

"My cup of sorrow runneth over. Surely heroin addiction shall stalk me all the days of my life and I will dwell in the House of the Damned forever."

Also found in the car with the dead woman was the written message:

"Jail didn't cure me. Nor did hospitalization help me for long. The doctor told my family it would have been better—and indeed kinder—if the person who got me hooked on dope had taken a gun and blown my brains out. And I wish to God he had. My God, how I wish it!"

DEAR ABBY: I have a friend who keeps her late husband's ashes in a fancy porcelain jar on the mantle in her living room. Perhaps I should say that she claims they are her late husband's ashes, because this lady has a rather wild imagination.

The jar containing the so-called "ashes" is highly capped. In fact, my friend frequently shows it around. It looks (and smells) exactly like cigarette ashes to me!

Do you think they could be her husband's remains?

—A FRIEND

DEAR FRIEND: If the cremated remains look (and smell) like cigarette ashes, that's probably what they are. It's a common misconception that after cremation the body is reduced to fine ashes. Actually, what remains is a combination of bone fragments and ashes.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "WANTS TO BE POPULAR": When you enter a room, do you say, "There YOU are," or "Here I am?" Ponder that a while.

Do you wish you had more friends? Get Abby's booklet, "How to be Popular: You're Never Too Young or Too Old." Send $1 with a long, self-addressed, stamped (25 cents) envelope to: Abby's Popularity, 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

Engagements

Kristine Fife

BURLEY — Mr. and Mrs. Dale Fife of Burley announce the engagement of their daughter, Kristine, to Robert Kinucan.

Kinucan is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ken Kinucan of Samuels, formerly from Bellevue.

Miss Fife, a 1976 graduate of Burley High School, is studying communications at the University of Idaho in Moscow. She is employed by the Bureau of Land Management in Boise as a public information intern.

Kinucan graduated in 1976 from Wood River High School in Halley. He is studying range resource management at the University of Idaho and works as a range technician for the Boise National Forest.

The couple will wed Aug. 9 at the First Presbyterian Church in Burley.

Connie Hubsmith

RICHFIELD — Mr. and Mrs. Jack Hubsmith of Richfield announce the engagement of their daughter, Connie Sue, to Tracy Lee Sorenson.

Sorenson is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Sorenson of Shoshone. Miss Hubsmith is a 1978 graduate of Richfield High School and graduated from the College of Southern Idaho in 1979. She is employed at Western Stockman Supply in Twin Falls.

Sorenson also graduated from Shoshone High School in 1978 and is employed with Triangle Steel Builders.

A June 7 wedding is planned.

Apartment dwellers can also plant seeds

By RICHARD DeLANO
© Chicago Sun-Times

A twinge of envy need not occur for apartment dwellers without gardens. The reason is that while gardeners are planting their seeds in their gardens, apartment dwellers can be doing the same.

Growing houseplants from seed, especially in the spring, is a very practical project. According to horticulturists at Cornell University, 50 different species have grown into attractive houseplants from seed.

Leonard Perry, a graduate student at the university, has found many interesting subjects include the Chinese dwarf banana, the rubber tree, bird-of-paradise and asparagus fern.

The Cornell project, initiated in 1972, is an effort to determine which foliage plants of tropical origin could be grown from seeds. Furthermore, it was planned to determine the conditions most favorable for germination and growth.

The Cornell researchers have found that no commonly used seed treatments are best for all varieties: Most seeds do not need light for germination. In most cases, a warm germination medium encourages faster germination.

Planting the seed at depths twice the width of the seed works well most of the time.

The acidity of the soil had little effect on the germination.

An artificial soil mix of half sphagnum peat, most and half vermiculite with a little limestone added works quite well.

Containers can be almost anything from paper cups to plastic trays and clay pots. All that is necessary is that they have a drainage hole.

Houseplants grown from seeds at home are adapted to indoor conditions, especially low light levels, from the start. This ensures better growth and a greater chance of survival than purchased plants.

Most seeds are collected in tropical areas—around the world. Two species of very good sources for houseplant seeds are Geo. W. Park Seed Co., Greenwood, S.C. 29617, and Peter B. Dow & Co., P.O. Box 696, Gisborne, New Zealand. Both offer colorful catalogs.

Another source of these exotic seeds is the local garden center. Many are starting to carry houseplant seeds and their growing instructions.

However, according to Perry, many of the tropical plant seeds perish rapidly when stored. Seeds should be planted immediately on arrival. Seeds in the Aralia and Arum families, as well as those of parlor palm, are highly perishable.

Finally, Perry says seeds need a warm soil to germinate. The temperature in the soil should be between 70 and 85 degrees. Bottom heat to help reach these temperatures can be provided by soil heating cables or a germination mat.

Pageant planned

BOISE (UPI) — Former Miss America Kylee Barker Brandon will host the 1980 Miss Idaho Scholarship Pageant June 13-14; pageant directors have announced.

Pageant spokesman Linda Michel said Miss Brandon, Miss America of 1979, will arrive at Boise June 11 and lead the 15 Miss Idaho candidates through activities and rehearsals.

East European women taking back seat to men

GENEVA, Switzerland (UPI) — Women in Communist Eastern Europe are taking a back seat to men in the job market and also get little help at home from their husbands, a report published Wednesday by the International Labor Organization said.

Women account for between 44 and 50 percent of the total work force in East European nations, including the Soviet Union, and some 90 percent of all working-age women have jobs.

"But no matter what their job outside the home, it is back to the traditional role for most East European women once they leave the work place," said the ILO survey that also covered Czechoslovakia, East Germany, Hungary and Poland.

"They still spend much more time than their husbands on chores dealing with shopping, housework and looking after the children."

In Poland, the study said, 70 percent of working women and 90 percent of housewives do all the housekeeping themselves.

A survey in Hungary showed that working women spend 80 percent of their leisure time—or about 3.3 hours daily—doing housework.

"And more than 40 percent of working women tackle all household chores without any help whatsoever from their husbands," the report said.

Women work in most branches of industry, agriculture and services with only some exceptions for health reasons, the report said.

"But although East European men and women receive equal pay for equal work, it is also true that the less well paid employment is disproportionately taken on by women," the survey reported.

"In practice, young couples begin married life on equal terms but as the family increases this equality is undermined."

The ILO survey said the man's career progresses as he gains more experience "while that of the woman, interrupted to raise children, stagnates."

Business

Business directory fulfills definition

By MARY TOBIN

NEW YORK (UPI) — If a successful business is based on defining a need and filling the void, Karen Zehring, editor of The Corporate Finance Sourcebook, may have a bona fide definition.

Miss Zehring has just published the second edition of the new reference work that provides names of over 1,500 firms and 30,000 individuals who can, according to the editor, "say yes to a loan or investment proposal, manage corporate funds, assist in putting financial plans in action or influence the price investors will pay for stock."

In short, it tells you where the money is, Miss Zehring said in an interview. "An entrepreneur or financial officer of a firm can match himself up with the proper source of capital to fit his particular needs."

The reference work is a handsome volume that separates firms into 12 categories, such as "Investment Banking," "Venture Capital," and "Major Private Lenders." There is a section listing individuals who are involved in financing services.

An enthusiastic young woman with a sunny smile, Miss Zehring has demonstrated more than a bit of the entrepreneurial spirit herself.

While working with Institutional Investor magazine, and later McGraw-Hill, she conceived the idea for her book. "I felt the growing importance of corporate finance officers was not being sufficiently recognized," she said.

She approached McGraw-Hill's book division with the idea of producing an annual directory and the first was sold 4,500 of 5,000 copies.

"I felt the project could succeed and that I could do better on my own," she said. McGraw-Hill accepted her proposal for a licensing agreement and Miss Zehring was in business.

"I obtained working capital she singlehandedly persuaded big firms to prepay advertising. 'Of course I had done my homework, and my presentation was complete. I knew what I was selling,' she said.

"I was especially pleased at the quality of advertisers," she said. They include banks and insurance companies, brokerages and industrial firms.

The 1980 edition's first run of 10,000 copies is almost sold with the help of a book club alternate selection and the purchase of 1,000 copies by one of her advertisers to give to prospective clients.

Miss Zehring has some unusual ideas about business that she attributes partly to childhood experiences.

"My father, who was an investment banker, always stressed learning the value of money," she said. He curbed the "Zehring Family Bank," from which she and her sisters could borrow for business ventures at 4 percent interest.

"My first business (when she was 7) was a garden. I borrowed, grew tomatoes, sold them, and repaid the bank. I discovered that I could charge more for yellow tomatoes than for red tomatoes and they weren't any more trouble to grow."

Miss Zehring (Mrs. Peter Davis in private life) is expecting her first child in June and the seasonal nature of her current business appealed to her. Her Manhattan office uses mostly part-time employees — some women who left business to have a family — and she hopes to establish a day-care center for them.

"But it is not a cottage industry; it's a business. I'm building a business in the traditional way," she said. "I've never had a career. I've always had work and work was always more important to me than a job."

The book "is not a vanity project. I want to make money" but she adds, "I just think there's a way you can combine humanity with productive, useful work."

Burley branch opening set for Wednesday

BURLEY — Opening of the United First Federal Savings branch office here is planned for Wednesday.

Burley Mayor Charles Shaddock will officiate at ceremonies this afternoon which the association's directors and executives will attend.

The office is the third for United First Federal in the Magic Valley. Other offices are in Twin Falls and Jerome. Assistant Vice President John Robinson is manager of the Burley branch.

The new office, built by Hisaw Constructors of Burley, covers 4,000 square feet and includes 1,200 square feet of rental office space. The facility is located in the Burley mall.

The firm has operated from a temporary mobile office in Burley since July, 1979.

New gas pipeline proposed to link Wyoming, California

ROCK SPRINGS, Wyo. (UPI) — Four natural gas firms have asked the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission for permission to build a $341 million pipeline from the gas-rich basins of southwestern Wyoming and northern Utah to the West Coast.

Pacific Gas Transmission Co. officials said recently that Pacific Interstate Transmission Co., a Southern California Gas Co. affiliate, would participate in the project. It was announced earlier that El Paso Natural Gas Co. and Northwest Pipeline Co. would also join in the project.

Pacific Gas spokeswoman Gretchen Hall said the proposed pipeline termed the Rocky Mountain Pipeline Project would serve the company's northern California customers.

Under the proposal, two lateral lines would be constructed and link with a main line south of Provo, Utah, company officials said.

One lateral, 24 inches in diameter, would start near Kemmerer, Wyo., and run westward for 144 miles. A second lateral, 20 inches in diameter, would start near Bonanza, Utah, and run 120 miles westward.

The two pipelines would join the 30 inch main line, which would move gas from near Provo to the Nevada-California state line, officials said.

Ms. Hall said that in addition to serving northern California consumers, the pipeline could serve companies along the pipeline route.

"Right now," she said, "the engineers are in the field researching the environmental impact statement, which will be prepared by the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission."

She added it was unknown when the federal agency would act on the four companies' request for permission to build the pipeline system, which would transport 300 million cubic feet of natural gas daily.

She said the system's capacity would be increased to 700 million cubic feet daily after several years.

Western lumbering looking up

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — Conditions in Western lumber mills continued to improve during the week ended May 17.

However, 44,000 workers were still affected by curtailments on closures at 822 mills, the Western Wood Products Association said.

Surveys in mid-May indicated 50,000 people were either laid off or working adjusted schedules at 427 of the West's 820 lumber mills.

The WWPA said 23 mills employing 8,000 people remained closed in the week ended May 17. Another 254 were on curtailed schedules. Production during that same week was down 30 percent from normal, and lumber orders were down 23 percent from normal. Shipments were off 30 percent from normal. Inventories continued to decline for the fifth straight week.

In Oregon, 30 mills were closed, 70 were curtailed and 11,000 workers affected in the week ended May 17. In California, 17 mills were closed, 40 were curtailed, and 9,500 workers affected.

In Washington, 24 mills were closed;

57 curtailed and 8,000 workers affected. In Idaho, 11 mills were closed, 25 curtailed and 4,500 workers affected. In Montana, eight mills were closed, 19 curtailed and 2,800 workers affected.

In the other seven Western states, there were 18 mills closed, 43 mills operating on curtailed schedules and 9,200 employees affected.

The WWPA figures apply only to lumber mills. They do not represent plywood, paper, logging or any other segment of the forest products industry.

McCulloch goes up

LOS ANGELES — McCulloch Oil Corp. reports increased net income and earnings for the first quarter of 1980.

Net income of $2.83 million or 16 cents a share increased from $2.18 million or 12 cents a share a year ago. Revenues were $28.07 million, up from $15.43 million in 1979. Revenues were reclassified because coal operations were discontinued in November.

Deregulation advances

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A bill that would partially deregulate the trucking industry was approved by voice vote Thursday by the House Public Works Committee.

The measure, which is somewhat more limited than the version passed overwhelmingly by the Senate last month, was worked out earlier in a compromise with key Senate members.

It passed a crucial test Monday when it was approved by the surface transportation subcommittee.

A committee official said none of several amendments approved Thursday substantially altered any of the bill's major provisions.

The legislation would make it easier for trucking firms to enter new markets or expand existing markets and would make it easier for them to alter freight rates. It also would partially lift the antitrust immunity that now allows trucking firms to get together to set rates.

Unlike the Senate version, however, the bill does not exempt all processed foods from regulation, only certain commodities. Currently, farm goods that have not been processed are exempt; the Senate version would expand that exemption to include all food items, whether processed or not.

The administration has estimated that deregulation of the interstate trucking industry could save consumers $5 billion annually in transportation-related costs. An estimated 16,000 firms would be affected by deregulation.

Keeping health in health food

Field Enterprises, Inc. Among my acquaintances are several, particularly younger couples, who buy as many products as they can in health food stores.

The advertising boasts the foods are nutritious; the nutrients are listed on the labels; the buyers are confident they are doing the best possible for their bodies' health.

If you are one of them, are you achieving your goal?

Answer: It depends on how long the product has been sitting on the shelf. Freshness is critical to health foods, and the label does not tell you how fresh the product is.

By their very nature, health foods are more perishable than standard commercially processed food. You, therefore, must pay much more attention than you ordinarily would to keeping the foods fresh.

Consider the simple case of wheat germ — a popular health food which all health-food followers swear by. Wheat germ comprises the nutritionally rich portions of the wheat berry, containing the life-building amino acids. While it remains part of the berry it is not subject to rapid decay, for nature provides it with protections not yet equalled by man.

When the wheat berry is milled for flour, though, the wheat germ often is extracted, along with the bran. What remains is standard commercial white flour. If the germ and bran are left in, it is called whole wheat flour, and is nutritionally desirable, although its nutritional elements are now unprotected, for the natural shield has been broken. Without this shield, oxygen gets to the nutritionally rich fatty acids contained in the delicate wheat germ oil and causes spoiling.

This process, known as oxidation, causes the oils to become rancid, a situation to be avoided.

Top health experts accuse rancidity in foods of retarding the digestive process, irritating the stomach and bowel linings, destroying essential vitamins both in the food and you. Rancidity also is accused of producing harmful by-products, including aldehydes, ketones, carbonic acids and alcohols — all of which break down life-building amino acids.

Freshness, then, is what to seek in health foods. But how do you, the consumer, do it?

Freshness dating would be one way, but there are as yet no laws requiring health-food manufacturers to date their products.

Tests of another way, for fresh wheat germ is quite sweet, when rancid it becomes bitter. But you must buy before you can taste it, so you are relying heavily on the manufacturer's integrity.

Manufacturers can insure freshness, says Lou Richard, president, Fearne Soya Foods, Melrose Park, Ill., but buying fresh is not always easy. About 10 percent of the wheat germ Fearne Soya gets from suppliers must be rejected, Richard reveals.

A way must be found to eliminate the oxygen, so the product doesn't spoil.

Richard says his firm immediately packages a batch of fresh wheat germ — but only after a machine has flushed out the air and replaced it with nitrogen (essentially just ordinary air that has had all the oxygen removed). Then the package is given an airtight seal, so that what remains inside is fresh wheat germ. The package is given a date, too, as a "sort of extra insurance for the consumer."

Be on guard against wheat germ from which the nutritious oil has been removed to leave "defatted" wheat germ. This "defatted" wheat germ is added to some cereals, pasta, crackers, etc., to imply that these products provide the excellent nutrition of natural raw wheat germ. This is not true.

Basically, it's up to you, the consumer, to be aware of freshness in the health foods you buy. Obviously, you care enough about keeping a healthy body to buy health food in the first place. So take the extra effort to find health foods worthy of the name.

Packaging and vitamin E content are two important tip-offs. The package should be of a fairly dense material — metal foil is best. And one serving of the food should provide a significant percentage of the Recommended Daily Allowance for Vitamin E (which will be listed on the label), usually from four to 15 percent, depending on the serving size.

If the food doesn't meet these two tests, it probably is made with defatted wheat germ — and that, I repeat, is a product from which the nutritious oil has been removed and against which you should be on guard.

Albertson's sales, earnings increase

BOISE (UPI) — Albertson's Inc. Friday announced a 14 percent increase in both sales and earnings for the quarter ending May 1, and the board of directors declared a quarterly cash dividend of 20 cents per share.

Warren E. McCain, chairman of the board of the Idaho-based food and drugstore chain, said the dividends will be payable on Aug. 28 to shareholders of record on Aug. 1.

McCain announced sales for the 13-week first quarter amounted to $714,488,574 compared with $625,562,680 for the same quarter a year ago. Earnings for the period amounted to $9,253,601, or 60 cents per share, compared to $8,144,067, or 53 cents a share, reported last year.

Ash fall cleanup continues

CHEHALIS, Wash. (UPI) — Residents of southwestern Washington used snow shovels Monday to remove volcanic ash from their yards and sidewalks.

Traffic crawled along at about 10 mph on Interstate 5 between Kelso and Chehalis as volcanic dust kicked up by passing vehicles cut visibility to a minimum.

The ash fallout in southwestern Washington was caused by Sunday's eruption of Mt. St. Helens but it was not comparable to the massive fallout in eastern Washington after the volcano's cataclysmic eruption May 18.

That section of the state still was plagued by dust and ash from the earlier eruption. The National Guard was ordered into the area to help in cleanup efforts hampered Sunday by wind gusts up to 30 mph in the Moses Lake area.

National guardsmen were cleaning up public buildings and city facilities at Moses Lake and Warden among other localities.

Rain was settling some of the dust in eastern Washington, but it produced scattered power outages in Moses Lake Monday as the wet ash, which is a good conductor of electricity, caused shorts on power poles and transformers.

Nearly 300,000 face masks were made available to residents in the Spokane area and others were available in the hard-hit Ritzville area, where ash drifted as high as three feet have been reported.

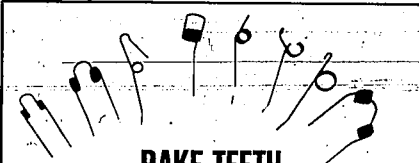

The chief problem in eastern Washington is that the ash is kicked up every time the wind blows and officials said that condition might persist for months.

Romances flourish at West Point despite restrictions

WEST POINT, N.Y. (UPI) — The Army, Navy and Air Force military academies will hand out 2,780 diplomas Wednesday.

For the first time female voices will join in the solemn pledge of service to country.

Add upon graduation, several women cadets will walk under the traditional arch of crossed swords to make a different vow — "I do."

Brynnen Sheets of Edmond, Okla., will become the first West Point cadet bride, marrying 1979 graduate Robert Hahn of Rochester Wednesday night.

They face separation for six months as Miss Sheets waits to be assigned to Germany, where her future husband is stationed.

Defense Secretary Harold Brown is scheduled to address 821 Army cadets, including 62 women, at the 32nd U.S. Military Academy graduation at Michie Stadium.

The Air Force Academy near Colorado Springs, Colo., will commission 901 graduates, as second lieutenants — 86 of them women — at the school's 22nd commencement at Falcon Stadium. Air Force Secretary Hans Mark will speak to the third largest graduating class in academy history.

In Annapolis, Md., members of the Naval Academy's class of 833 midshipmen, including 55 women, will be commissioned either as Navy ensigns or second lieutenants in the Marines. Admiral Thomas Hayward, chief of naval operations, will address the class at the 190th graduation in Navy-Marine Corps Memorial Stadium.

The tradition-breaking women entered the academies in the fall of 1976 to the jeers of some male classmates and predictions by many that they could not handle the rigorous four-year program.

Just over half of the 119 women who reported to West Point four years ago survived the heavy physical training and combat exercises and a classroom schedule heavily weighted toward engineering.

Of the original class of 1980, 46 percent of the women dropped out while 37 percent of the men resigned.

About half of West Point's graduating women plan to be married soon, and all will marry fellow 1980 class members or men who already have graduated.

Eight of the Annapolis women say they plan to marry fellow midshipmen. The Air-Force Academy reported 52 weddings have been scheduled in base chapels.

The engagements have survived an atmosphere hardly conducive to dating.

"You really can't carry on a great romance here," said West Point Chaplain Richard Camp, who will marry Miss Sheets and Hahn.

Copies are banned from kissing or holding hands in public and there are few places where they can be alone, said West Point senior Army Muir, 22, of Greenwich, Conn.

"However, Miss Muir said, "There are opportunities and cadets know how to use the time available to them. Cadets are very ingenious."

Miss Sheets met Hahn one morning when she showed up early for her company formation and decided to kill time by playing in the snow. Hahn walked up and asked her what she thought she was doing.

She asked him for the first date, when she and her roommate invited him and his roommate to go skating.

Hahn's Army buddies in Germany tease him about marrying a fellow cadet, Miss Sheets said. "I think he has been convinced I'm big, mean and tough," she said.

Military officials are waiting to see if the traditional strong loyalty among cadets will add extra meaning to a marriage relationship, Camp said.

"They have shared these experiences together from beast barracks (basic training) on," Camp said. "I'm not sure if it will make any difference, but we will be watching them closely. The Army has a great stake in their marriage."

Cadets report that most of the tension surrounding the entrance of women has eased, especially after the last all-male class graduated last year.

Priest joins crusade for criminal justice system reforms

WILMINGTON, Del. (UPI) — The priest who was acquitted of charges stemming from the capers of a thief known as the "Gentleman Bandit" has become a crusader for reforms in America's criminal justice system.

Last summer a jury in Wilmington acquitted the Rev. Bernard J. Pagano of charges stemming from the armed holdups of several Northern Delaware convenience stores when he stepped forward to confess to the crimes.

During Pagano's trial, seven witnesses had identified him positively as the polite, well-dressed bandit who held up their stores.

"If I were just Bernie Pagano, nothing would have been made of it," the priest said of his highly publicized case. "Or, if I was a black or a Hispanic, I probably would have had to stay there (in jail). The fact that I'm a Roman Catholic priest, there

Singer Bryant remains in seclusion

SELMA, Ala. (UPI) — Singer Anita Bryant, who last week filed for divorce from her husband of nearly 20 years, is resting in seclusion and "spending lot of time in bible study."

Miss Bryant, a former Oklahoma beauty queen known for her opposition to homosexual organizations, is scheduled to make a speech today during graduation exercises at Dallas Christian School near Selma.

She arrived in Selma Friday and was staying with friends.

Miss Bryant filed for divorce in Dade County, Fla., circuit court last week, saying her marriage to her husband-manager, Bob Green, was "irrevocably broken."

City budget report calls for layoffs

By MARTY TRILLHAASE
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls residents may bear a larger role in street repairs next year, including financing some improvements themselves.

A preliminary budget report to be presented to the City Council today, recommends laying off a total of about 20 fulltime employees, including 10 of the street department's 16 employees.

Without those street employees, residents will be required to pay for improvements on residential streets, and will be responsible for maintenance of alleys and, to some degree, keeping curbs clean.

The report also suggests the city continue its new policy of hiring private contractors to do its major street resurfacing and seal-coating projects. Services provided by the reduced street department will be held to a minimum, including a fall street cleaning to minimize drainage problems, winter ice removal, pothole patching, and street signing and striping.

The council meets at 5 p.m. at City Hall in an informal work session. No final decision on the report, prepared by Mayor Hank Woodall and Councilmen Jim Smallwood and Chris Talkington, is expected until the council meets June 2, Woodall said.

Once the council endorses the priorities set down by the report, City Manager Tom Courtney will begin to prepare a detailed budget reflecting those priorities. The new budget must be adopted by Sept. 30. It takes effect Oct. 1.

Council members prepared the report in order to give Courtney guidance on how to deal with an anticipated $29,000 to $300,000 deficit due to the 1 percent initiative. The city's revenues are expected to be about $3.6 million, including $2.3 million in property tax revenue. The city has had to budget on the same amount of property tax revenues for two years under the Legislature's partial implementation of the 1 percent initiative.

Woodall cautioned the report is tentative and does not take into account the possibility of the city receiving an additional $88,000 if the State Tax Commission finds the tax rate in Twin Falls County to be below 1 percent of the market value of property in the county.

The report proposes maintaining the present level of service in police and fire protection. The report does call for the elimination of one position each in the fire department and police departments. Through reorganization in the fire department, the report says the present level of service can be maintained.

In police, the report calls for the addition of a night patrol officer to replace a retiring administrative officer.

City employees who remain with the city will receive a 6.5 percent base salary increase under the proposals. Employees would receive a 4 percent increase on Oct. 1, and a 5 percent increase on April 1, 1981.

Employees had asked for a 9 percent increase. But the report says each additional 1 percent salary increase would cost the city $20,500, roughly the average city employee's salary. That fact has led some council members to state higher salaries will mean even more layoffs.

Cuts in the city street department alone will not provide all the dollar savings needed, however. In addition to those being proposed for the streets department—the following cuts are recommended:

- Engineering — One full time position will be eliminated. The cuts mean the city will be forced to place a lower priority on surveying and/or drafting, meaning possible delays in the city's ability to quickly prepare project plans.
- Parks — Five full time positions will be eliminated and replaced with seasonal help. Under this proposal, summer maintenance will remain at the present level, but winter construction, vandalism repair and facility maintenance will be curtailed.
- Recreation — One full time position will be eliminated, but the number of part-time supervisors will be increased. The proposal calls for a significant reduction in early season ball diamond maintenance, gym supervision, and general program supervision.

The reduced scope of the city's role in streets, recreation, and parks have led the budget committee members to propose grouping those departments with city water programs into a new public works department under one department head answerable to Courtney.

The public works coordinator will be responsible for reviewing and prioritizing projects and deciding which of those projects will be allocated resources. Also included in the department, head's responsibilities is reviewing and determining more efficient ways of completing work.

The report acknowledges this new method of supervision will not offset the loss in service that will result from the cuts.

What rain? A fly fisherman in float tube on Frank Oster Lake near Hagerman didn't seem to mind

Wet weekend

Persistent rain, cold put a damper on plans to observe Memorial Day

By MARTY TRILLHAASE
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Skies cleared over the Magic Valley Monday following a cold and wet Memorial Day weekend.

A cold, winter-type, low pressure system covered most of the state during the holiday weekend, keeping temperatures below 50 degrees and at times well into the 30s at night in Twin Falls.

More than one-half of an inch of rain fell in the area according to the Weather Bureau.

The weather bureau said .51 of an inch of rain fell on Twin Falls over the weekend, most of it occurring Saturday. Temperatures ranged from a low of 35 degrees Saturday to a high of 47 Sunday.

More than an inch of rain fell on Boise during the weekend and almost as much fell on Pocatello.

In the central Panhandle area, more than an inch of rain fell on Grangeville and Mullan over the weekend.

A bureau spokesman said rainstorms are not unusual for Memorial Day weekends, but the cold weather system was of a greater intensity and duration than has usually been the case.

Weather apparently kept many people at home. No major accidents were reported on Magic Valley highways, state police said.

Idaho State Police Sgt. Bob Wright of Twin Falls said traffic volume was down considerably from previous years. Two accidents were reported in the Magic Valley area over the weekend with only minor injuries and property damage reported, he said.

Many of the travelers who had intended to spend the weekend camping apparently turned back when the weather showed no indication of letting up, as the Sawtooth National Recreation Area information officer said.

The holiday weekend, which signaled the opening of the fishing season, was marked by a low camper turnout in the Sawtooth National Forest, public information officer Ken Burrell said. Burrell said as few as 100 motorists stopped for information at the district's station located nine miles north of Ketchum. That's considerably less than the number of campers stopping by the office during most of the month, he said.

Most of those stopping in during the weekend were asking about the latest word on the weather, he said.

"Unless they had a camper, it seemed like they just look off for home," he said.

Business in the Sun Valley-Ketchum area was reported down, although the weather boosted the restaurant business, local businessmen said.

Memorial Day has rarely meant a significant increase in tourist business in Ketchum, local businessmen said. Bad weather, coupled with the holiday occurring earlier this year, kept some tourists away, Bruce Cima of Ketchum Dry Goods said.

These tourists who came, mostly from Idaho population centers, ended up spending more time in the area's shops and restaurants, he said.

Rick Carnes, owner of the Hobbit Inn, said the weekend was good for his and other restaurants.

"It was real subtle," he said. "We didn't see that many new faces and nobody geared up for it because nobody really anticipated it being that big a weekend," he said.

No rainfall figures were available for the Halley-Sun Valley-Ketchum area, although snow was reported above the 5,000 to 7,000-foot level.

Forecast for southeast Idaho called for cool and cloudy weather with showers decreasing today and Wednesday. Lows were expected to reach the mid-30s and highs were expected to be in the 50s.

The forecast was similar for southeast Idaho although flood waters flowing were in effect for the Henry's Fork area near Rexburg (see story, B2).

Fire damages machine shop

KIMBERLY — A fire Monday heavily damaged the frame of a machine shop building near Kimberly.

The fire, located two miles east and one-half mile north of Kimberly, apparently started when electrical wiring shorted out and ignited the building's wooden frame, Kimberly Fire Chief Dan Vawver said.

The building's wooden frame was surrounded by an aluminum wall, forcing firefighters to peel through layers of sheetrock and the aluminum wall to get to the burning frame.

Eleven firefighters from the Kimberly Volunteer Fire Department responded to the call at 5 a.m. The fire at the building, owned by Lanny Wooten, was extinguished by about 7 a.m. No injuries were reported.

Vawver said the southwest corner of the building was heavily damaged. Reconstructing the frame could cost about $10,000, Vawver said. Machinery inside the building was not damaged, he said.

Evans rules out 3rd session unless legislators can agree

BOISE (UPI) — Gov. John Evans said Monday he would not call another special session of the Idaho Legislature unless legislative leaders agree in advance on a bipartisan solution to the Medicaid funding problem facing the state.

Evans insists the state will incur an $8 million Medicaid liability unless the Legislature takes action before January because of a District Court ruling that the state must pay "full and reasonable costs" for nursing home care.

The governor said a lack of action on the part of the Legislature will result in the need for a major tax increase next year.

In an interview with KTVB television in Boise, Evans suggested that a special legislative committee meet soon to formulate legislation to solve the Medicaid problem.

The Republican-controlled Legislature refused to consider the Medicaid problem during a special session called by Evans earlier this month.

Evans said he would ask the leadership to reassess their position, stating that he felt "the House and Senate were very close to a solution in the final days of the special session.

"I'm wondering if a special legislative committee could get together, have a meeting of the minds and come up with a piece of legislation that would correct the situation," Evans said. "Then, if the leadership supports the position, we could resolve the problem in another special session."

"If we don't then we'll just have to shoulder the additional tax burden of having those additional costs," Evans said.

But Moscow, Potlatch schools close Latest ash fallout misses Idaho

BOISE (UPI) — Idaho officials expect no new fallout from the eruption the latest eruption Sunday of Mount St. Helens.

A heavy fallout of volcanic ash occurred last week from the eruption of the Washington volcano, but the latest eruption is not expected to add to the woes of North Idaho residents.

Weather and disaster officials report there is less than a 15 percent chance of any fallout from the latest eruption.

Prevailing winds are blowing the ash to the west rather than to the east as occurred a week ago.

North Idaho residents still are being dug out from the fallout of a week ago, which deposited up to two inches of volcanic ash in several areas of North Idaho.

Meanwhile, the Moscow and Potlatch public schools said they will close at noon today for the remainder of the academic year.

School officials announced the decision Monday, noting that they have consulted with health and volcano experts who believe volcanic ash reaching northern Idaho from Mount St. Helens in southwestern Washington is a health hazard.

Moscow School Superintendent Richard Nelson said he had been advised that 80 to 90 percent of the volcanic ash is made up of glass. He said school officials decided it would be an unwarranted health risk to ask children to leave their homes for the remaining eight days of school this year.

He said children will report to classes as scheduled on Tuesday, but will be sent home at noon.

"We have pretty good evidence that the ash represents a health danger to students, not in mention the auto damage," Nelson said.

Other schools in the area had decided to continue classes on a day-to-day basis Monday.

News briefs

Phone changes slated
TWIN FALLS — The 25-cent pay phone call and "dial-tone-first" are coming to Jerome, Gooding, Eden and Hazelton Saturday. Mountain Bell has announced.

Ken Mann, district manager in Twin Falls, said the conversion of coin phones will mean telephone users will hear a dial tone soon as they lift the receiver.

"That will enable a person to reach an operator for emergency calls without depositing any money."

The Idaho Public Utilities Commission ordered the conversions when it allowed Mountain Bell to increase its pay phone rates. The company had requested a raise from 10 to 20 cents, but the IUPUC tacked on another nickel to be used toward the cost of installing dial-tone-first in more communities.

Mann said most pay phones in the four communities listed above will be converted Saturday by special technicians. He said instruction cards will be displayed when the new rate and dial-tone-first go into effect.

For local calls the user will deposit 25 cents after hearing the dial tone, then dial the call in the normal manner. If the user is dialing a long distance, first depositing money, the caller will be reminded automatically to do so and start over.

If a coin is deposited before dialing "0" (operator), the coin will automatically be returned.

Mineral revenues received
BOISE — Idaho received $1.7 million from the Bureau of Land Management for its share of mineral leasing revenues for the six months ending March 31.

The state receives 50 percent of the leasing revenues from federal lands in the state, which are paid twice yearly into the state's general fund. The state returns 10 percent of that amount to the county generating the revenue.

The share in Twin Falls County amounted to just $5.

Final census calls due
BOISE — Census workers in Idaho are making a "last call" for being counted in the 1980 national census.

The count of citizens in all states is now nearing a close. Idaho census workers want to make sure all of the state's citizens are counted. Anyone who feels they have been missed or anyone in the family is not counted should call the census office in Boise, 334-1197. Collect calls will be accepted.

Betty Parker, census district manager in Boise, said the "were you counted?" campaign is one of the final phases of the 1980 census.

A master address list is kept by the office and those calling in will be checked against this to make certain they are counted, but not counted twice.

More hunt permits due
BOISE (UPI) — The Idaho Fish and Game Commission has approved an increased number of controlled hunt permits for the 1980 big game seasons.

The commission approved the issuance of 14,463 permits, an increase of 3,394 from last year. Of that amount, 8,175 are for deer, up from 6,525 in 1979, and 3,956 are for elk, up from 2,425.

The number of permits was increased for every species except sheep. The commission approved the closure of 16 mountain goat hunts and reduced the number of permits to 141 from 223.

The Fish and Game Department also will issue 1,910 permits for antelope, 102 for bighorn sheep and 140 for moose. Moose permits will be issued to Idaho residents only.

IDAHO FALLS (UPI) — Bonneville County authorities continued their search Monday for four people believed drowned in a boating accident on Palisades Reservoir Saturday, but suspended their search late in the day because of poor weather.

A dispatcher said search and rescue crews left the reservoir located about 40 miles northeast of Idaho Falls by 5 p.m. Monday when cold weather and churning water hampered the search.

Four people survived the accident, which occurred when the 14-foot aluminum craft nosed into waves and plunged toward the bottom of the 99-foot reservoir.

Memorial Day vacationers returning home along Interstate 5 near Coville, Wash., traveled in convoys Monday as ash from Mount St. Helens' latest eruption at times made visibility almost zero. There were numerous accidents along the highway and the traffic was forced to move very slowly.

Guard reaches Panhandle; Chase chastises response

SAINT MARIES (UPI) — National Guard troops pulled into St. Maries in the Idaho Panhandle Monday afternoon to assist local officials in ridding the community of volcanic ash from Mount St. Helens that has blanketed the area.

State Sen. Cy Chase, D-St. Maries, said he welcomed the state aid, although he noted that he and local authorities — who have been critical of the state's slowness in helping north Idaho residents — have been seeking troops and equipment since the ash southwestern Idaho mountain belched steam and ash on northern Idaho a week ago.

"In the first place, the National Guard told us they didn't have the proper equipment, the water rigs, that we need and other professional equipment," Chase said Monday. "But they're up here now, and they've started to do some work. Luckily, we've had very hard rain for about a day and that's kind of helped calm things down."

Chase said the next aid north Idaho residents need from state and federal officials is a significant amount of federal funds to assist counties and cities rent high-pressure sprinkler trucks and heavy graders to not only clear the streets, but repair the gravel and oiled roadways after ash is removed.

"It's going to take federal money and a lot of it," Chase said, noting that Gov. John Evans' emergency contingency fund "just won't scratch the surface."

"They haven't told us to what extent the federal government is going to chip in, and, understandably, the cities and counties are reluctant to obligate themselves to these costs, until they know exactly what they can expect from the government," Chase said.

Chase said federal officials have assured him that word on the federal aid would be sent to Idaho shortly after the close of the holiday weekend.

Spokane on alert

SPOKANE (UPI) — A limited state of emergency caused by falling volcanic ash will remain in effect in Spokane County through today.

Unlike last week, however, schools will be allowed to open.

Meanwhile, the Spokane County Air Pollution Control Authority said its once-per-day reading of the atmosphere showed the particulate in the air at a level about four times what is considered normal. The ash from Mount St. Helens' latest eruption.

The 75 inches rain over the past 24 hours has helped keep the dust down.

Two outages knock radio, TV off air

BOISE (UPI) — Three Treasure Valley television stations, an undetermined number of radio stations and the Bogus Basin ski resort lost power twice Monday when Idaho Power's main powerlines to the facility developed problems.

A spokesman for the utility said the first outage, which occurred at about 5:48 a.m. and lasted until 1:11 p.m., was caused when the main powerline out of Horseshoe Bend "just" brought out somehow because of the 19 inches of new snow they've gotten up there."

The spokesman, a dispatcher, said the cause of the second power outage had not been determined at 3:30 p.m. Monday, however, another spokesman said he believed the power was terminated the second time when trees fell on the powerline near Bogus Basin just outside of Boise.

The dispatcher said Idaho Power crews switched power transmission from the line out of Horseshoe Bend Monday morning to restore power, "but then the second, alternate line developed problems" at about 5 p.m.

Neither spokesman would speculate on the length of time it would take to restore power, but both noted it could be at least until 11 p.m. and possibly later Monday night.

Flood warning for Henry's Fork

REXBURG (UPI) — The National Weather Service Monday issued a flood warning for the Henry's Fork of the Snake River near Rexburg, warning that the river was expected overflow its banks during the night.

Madison County sheriff's deputies warned residents of the low-lying areas near the river to watch for rising water, but a dispatcher said late Monday that no flooding activity had been reported.

She said residents were preparing to watch the area throughout the night to ensure deputies that no losses of life or livestock would result from the high water.

Forecasters at the National Weather Service in Boise said the river was expected to crest at 5.2 feet sometime during the night, slightly above the flood stage of nine feet.

LeBaron trial nearing end, may go to jury Wednesday

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — Third District Court Judge Ernest F. Baldwin was scheduled to meet with attorneys today to draft jury instructions in the capital murder trial of polygamist patriarch Ervil LeBaron.

Before recessing for the long Memorial Day Weekend Friday, Baldwin told lawyers he wanted the case ready to go to the nine-man, three-woman panel sometime Wednesday.

Defense attorney F. John Hill said he might still present some witnesses Wednesday prior to closing arguments and jury instruction, but he said those appearances would be brief. Defense counsel also indicated that LeBaron, the 55-year-old leader of the Church of the Lamb of God, might take the stand.

LeBaron is charged with ordering the slaying of rival polygamist cult leader Dr. Rulon Alford. The 71-year-old naturopath was gunned down at his Murray, Utah, office on May 10, 1977, by two women.

Prosecutor David Yocom also alleges LeBaron set up a plot to have his own brother Verlan killed at the Alford funeral. Verlan leads another plural marriage sect known as the Church of the Firstborn of the Fullness of Times.

Witnesses for the defense last week, including one of LeBaron's 14 wives and three cult members, said the plot to assassinate Alford was hatched by traitors in the church who wanted to seize control of the small band headquartered in Dallas.

They testified that Lloyd Sullivan and his son Donald thought LeBaron was a poor leader who was unworthy to serve as patriarch and prophet of the polygamist sect.

Lloyd died of a heart attack in 1978. Donald pleaded guilty to one count of conspiracy to commit murder, and appeared in the trial as a key prosecution witness.

The younger Sullivan told the court LeBaron ordered he and four other followers to travel to Salt Lake to kill the two polygamists. He said another LeBaron wife, Rena Chynoweth, and Ramona Marston shot Alford, while Sullivan, Jack Strothman and Edward Marston were assigned to shoot Verlan with machine guns at the Alford memorial service.

Sullivan said the plot to slay Verlan was conceived when the assassination squad observed a large number of police officers and television camera crews at the funeral.

'It's blowin' again,' and family gets out

HAZEL DELL, Wash. (UPI) — Sunday's eruption of Mount St. Helens which resulted in the evacuation of the mountainous town of Cougar marked the second evacuation in eight days for the Don Moore family.

When the volcano exploded a week earlier, "we camped out in Woodland, and stayed overnight 'til we could make sure that nothing was going to happen to our side of the mountain," Moore said.

The family returned but the mountain blew again Sunday.

"It was terrible up at our place," said Moore's wife, Florence. "It was dark, yes—and wet."

"Our landlord woke us up at six o'clock. He just knocked on the door and said to be ready, 'cause the volcano was blowin' again."

Hart denies he's changed war stance

DENVER (UPI) — Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo., who is seeking re-election to a second term, said his support of increased military defense spending does not represent a shift from his opposition to the Vietnam War.

Hart said he was being tagged a "born-again hawk" by his Republican foes but "anyone who knows me and knows my record realizes that's not true."

"The notion that if you were opposed to the Vietnam War then you were soft on defense is a fallacy," said Hart, who managed George McGovern's unsuccessful presidential bid.

"I always thought that being opposed to the war was actually a conservative position," he said. "It cost $350 billion, financed entirely by deficit spending. The war was largely promoted by politicians, and opposing it had nothing to do with being soft on defense," he said.

Hart said emphasis on his defense spending voting record by Republicans, primarily GOP senate candidate Howard "Bert" Callaway, amounted to keying on a bunch of "little things."

"I think it is significant that a candidate is spending his time pointing out the little things," he said.

Moore said that when the caravan left at 8:30, "it was pretty dark, but it wasn't like night. Maybe like dusk. But it (ash) was fallin' heavy enough to make it almost impossible to drive."

"We drove at about 25 miles an hour, and it took almost an hour-and-a-half for us to get here. Normally, it wouldn't take any longer than 45 minutes," he said.

Moore, from Texas, said he saw little similarity between the volcano fallout and dust storms of west Texas.

"It's a lot worse driving in this (fallout) because the dust doesn't stick to everything. This is just like pouring wet concrete on your car. The wipers will knock it off the windshield but then it will dry and bake itself onto the car."

Another Cougar resident, Norm Peacher, said he was thinking about moving due to the uncertainty created by the volcano.

"I've been thinking about moving anyway," he said. "You know, once it stops, there's gonna be all kinds of jobs around here—putting in roads that were washed away, salvaging logs from the river. But nobody has any idea how long this will last."

Quake: No escape, family finds, as boulder comes crashing down, wrecking car

FRESNO, Calif. (UPI) — Dave Heerman could easily become paranoid about earthquakes. He feels maybe he fooled Mother Nature or something because no matter where he goes he seems to be there when the earth begins to shake.

In the big 1971 earthquake in Los Angeles Heerman was hit on the head by a falling mirror in his home.

Then Sunday, nine years later he, his wife, Pat, and their two children, Trevor, 3, and Robert, 2, were driving in the Sierra near Hume Lake for a family outing when the earth began to shake.

A falling boulder hit their car, smashing the front end to bits. Heerman, a Van Nuys truck driver, and his family escaped with minor cuts and bruises but the car's front end was demolished.

"We came up here for a nice weekend, but it shakes just as bad up here as it does down south," Heerman said. "We're always getting tremors down there, but that was a good one," he said referring to the second of two quakes that hit the Sierra Sunday.

The Heermans were eating breakfast in Fresno when the first earthquake hit Sunday morning, but were headed toward the Kings River about 1 p.m. when the second one hit.

The boulder smashed into the car on the right side, buckling the doors and collapsing the roof.

"It was all over before you knew it," said Pat Heerman, who was driving the car. "We never saw the rock that hit us."

Passing motorists and U.S. Forest Service rangers stopped to help and it took three men to roll the boulder from the roadway.

Heerman then went to work on the car. One of the rangers gave him a parachute shroud to use for a fan belt, and he poured pepper into the leaking radiator to stop the numerous leaks.

Heerman straightened a bent tie rod by beating it with rocks and taped a dangling headlight back in place and then drove the car back to Fresno where he and his son were treated for their minor cuts at a hospital.

In search for lost child: Police stumble upon PCP lab

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A house-to-house police search for a 5-year-old boy, which coincidentally turned up a $3 million PCP lab, has ended with the arrest of a drug manufacturing suspect, and the safe return of the child.

Michael Withers, 22, was arrested at his home in Southwest Los Angeles Sunday and booked into Central Jail on suspicion of manufacturing PCP.

Police stumbled upon the PCP lab accidentally while searching a residential neighborhood for Tony Finex, who was reported missing from his home Saturday.

Officers said they noticed a strong odor of PCP components in a garage adjoining Withers' apartment. They said Withers allegedly emptied about two gallons of liquid PCP — worth about $3 million on the street — down a drain before his arrest. Several ounces remained in the kitchen sink, police said.

Police said Tony had been playing with another small boy, who hid him at his home overnight and all day Sunday, unbeknownst to the playmate's mother.

The boy was returned to his home shortly after 7 p.m.

Drowning, problems plague outing: Holiday river cruise may end

MOAB, Utah (UPI) — The organizer of the annual Friendship Cruise says the traditional Memorial Day Weekend boating trip may be on its way out.

Rand Taylor of Moab said Monday bad weather that apparently resulted in a drowning accident, supply problems, and difficulty of moving boat trailers and other materials have cut into the annual trip to Moab.

The boaters traditionally put in a Green River and travel downstream on the Green River to its confluence with the Colorado River, and then power up the Colorado to Moab.

They normally camp out on the river bank at several locations while several men haul the boat trailers from Green River to Moab where the cruises end.

But Taylor says his organization couldn't obtain enough supplies for all of the overnight camps and had to cancel one of the cookouts. And he said higher gasoline prices are driving up the costs of moving the trailers and limiting the number of persons entering the cruise.

Only 228 boats were registered for this year's cruise, down from the more than 400 that have made the trip in past years. And Taylor said about one-third of those boats ended the 1980 cruise early because of bad weather.

National Park Service rangers were back on the runoff-swollen Colorado Monday looking for a 29-year-old Salt Lake City man missing and presumed drowned in the Friendship Cruise accident.

The missing boater — John C. Post was one of four persons on the boat that capsized in a portion of the Colorado called The Slide. Rangers said Post was the only one of the four not wearing a life jacket.

The Post boat had made its way about two miles upstream on the Colorado when it ran into "extremely heavy water," rangers said. Witnesses said the boat was flipped sideways by the river and swamped.

Another Friendship Cruise boat also capsized in The Slide area later Sunday, but all three of its occupants were rescued.

Male seniors wanted for blood study

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — The University of Utah Medical Center is the Veterans Administration Hospital in Salt Lake City looking for a few healthy male senior citizens.

The two medical facilities say they want 15 healthy men who are at least 65 years old or older to voluntarily give small amounts of blood for a joint study.

Dr. Owen Ash, director of clinical chemistry at the university center, says, "Many blood chemistry standards were set 25 years ago when methods of measurement were much less accurate than they are today."

"The purpose of this joint study is to determine exactly what a healthy person's blood is like. We need to more accurately determine the blood chemistry of healthy people so we can quickly and accurately determine those who are not healthy."

Ash said the university and VA Hospital have collected 105 of the 120 blood samples they need for the study.

"But now we need blood from older men," he said. Volunteers can come to the VA Hospital and donate three small test tubes of their blood for the study.

"The only requirements are that the men are free of medication — including aspirin — for 48 hours, and that they have not eaten anything for at least 12 hours prior to donating their blood."

"In addition to helping us establish new standards for the blood chemistry of healthy people, the test results for each volunteer will be sent to his private physician. If these volunteers had to pay for the complete blood tests, it would cost them from $300 to $400," Ash said.

Arson suspected in brush blaze

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (UPI) — Fire investigators said arson was suspected in a weekend brush fire near the North American Air Defense Command complex and the Broadmoor Ski area at the base of Cheyenne Mountain.

Sleve Hart, Broadmoor Fire Department deputy chief, Monday said witnesses reported seeing two teenagers flee the fire scene, one mile north of the NCAD complex and a mile south of the ski area.

He said the 35 mph wind fanned the blaze, which charred about two acres of scrub oak and deadwood, never threatened the adjacent areas and was extinguished late Sunday.

There were no injuries.

Cyclist hits fence, cuts throat, dies

PHOENIX (UPI) — A 19-year-old Phoenix man died to death Sunday afternoon when he cut his throat on a fence in a motorcycle accident.

Phoenix police said Kenneth Dalley was driving the dirt-bike in an easement on private property near his home. His brother Brian Dalley, 14, was a passenger.

The motorcycle ran into a chain link fence about 2:54 p.m. and Kenneth was thrown into the razor wire toppling the fence, slitting his throat.

Police say the two ran to a nearby house where rescue workers called fire department paramedics. However, paramedics said Kenneth was dead when they arrived.

Indianapolis results revive 'car vs. driver' controversy

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — Whenever an innovative machine is unveiled in auto racing there is an immediate argument whether it's the car or the driver that puts the vehicle in victory lane.

Johnny Rutherford was smooth and sophisticated in his handling of Jim Hall's Chaparral that won Sunday's Indianapolis 500 mile race and earned the driver his third victory at the mecca of auto racing.

Rutherford also won the opening race of the 1980 season at Ontario last month and was easily the favorite to win the Indy classic.

Third-place finisher Gary Bettenhausen, who charged up from next to last on the starting grid, said he had a good car, "but I hope we get back to the point where the cars are more equal. Then we'll find out who the good drivers are."

Driver protests passing penalty

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — Pancho Carter hopes he can find film of an incident at the Indy 500 mile race Sunday that will prove he shouldn't have been penalized for passing the pace car during a yellow caution light.

Chief steward Tom Binford Friday denied a protest by Carter and his crew concerning the one-lap penalty. They have three days to appeal and it could mean the difference between a second and sixth-place finish.

The alleged infraction occurred on the 58th lap just after first-runner Mario Andretti pitted and Carter took over the lead.

Carter and his chief mechanic, John Capels, said Bob Cassidy, the steward-in-the-pace car, waved Carter on when the yellow caution light flashed after an accident. They claim Cassidy signalled to pass instead of holding his hand still in a "don't pass" sign.

"Andretti ducked into the pits and Cassidy had to look for a new leader," Capels said. "They decided to report Pancho went past the pace car illegally and penalized us. We have witnesses who will testify that Cassidy waved Pancho on."

But Binford disagreed, saying "It was a clear cut case of procedure followed as customary and there was no question an infraction took place. Carter presented no new facts today beyond those known at the time the one-lap penalty was assessed."

Binford said Cassidy's version of the incident supported his decision.

"Cassidy says if his hand moved at all it was vertically," Binford explained. "Carter knew he was in the lead. He knew he wasn't supposed to pass the pace car."

Capels said Carter rightfully earned a strong second-place after running 200 laps.

"We were less than 20 seconds behind Rutherford at the end," Capels said. "They subtracted a lap from us as a penalty for passing the pace car and that was the difference between a second and sixth-place finish and also the loss of between $70,000 and $90,000 in prize money."

Carter said his car was running extremely well at the time.

"If I did the passing deliberately, I'd have made sure I gained a lap on everybody. Then I would have been penalized a lap and set back to my original situation. I wouldn't have lost any lap," Carter said.

Capels said "USAC placed the burden of proof on us, which means you're guilty unless you can repudiate their decision. The system is wrong. It's one man's judgment in a pace car."

and a new suspension system." Pancho Carter also feels he has a workable car, not good enough to catch Rutherford but a vehicle capable of finishing second.

Carter, who was sixth Sunday, filed a protest Tuesday with chief steward Tom Binford that he had been wrongly assessed a lap penalty in a caution light passing of a pace car and that he could have been runner-up instead of Tom Sneva.

Binford denied the protest. "It was a clear cut case of procedure followed as customary and there was no question an infraction took place. Carter presented no new facts beyond those known at the time the one-lap penalty was assessed."

Carter and his chief mechanic, John Capels, maintain that Bob Cassidy, the steward in the pace car, waved Pancho on when the yellow caution light flashed after a 58th accident. They claim Cassidy signalled Carter to pass instead of holding his hand still as a "Don't pass" sign.

In denying Carter's protest, Binford said circumstantial evidence backed up the ruling.

"We were less than 20 seconds behind Rutherford at the end," Capels said. "They subtracted a lap from us as a penalty for passing the pace car and that was the difference between a second and sixth-place finish and also the loss of between $70,000 and $90,000 in prize money."

end," Capels said. "They subtracted a lap from us as a penalty for passing the pace car and that was the difference between a second and sixth-place finish and also the loss of between $70,000 and $90,000 in prize money."

In post-race happenings Monday, rookie Hurley Haywood was moved up from 18th to 16th and Bobby Unser dropped a notch to 19th place.

There was also a total of $2,100 in fines levied against drivers. A.J. Foyt was fined $300 and Rick Mears, Jerry Sneva, Bill Vukovich and George Snider, $100 each for missing last Thursday's driver's orientation meeting.

Foyt also missed last year's session, so his penalty was greater.

Bill Whittington was assessed $300 for failing to attend Saturday's driver's meeting.

The crew of Mike Mosley, who finished 32nd, was fined $200 for two pit infractions Sunday — $500 for the board man crossing pit lane during the race and $100 for the crewman failing to wear a fire retardant uniform. George Snider's crew received a $100 fine for leaving a the unattended and Don Whittington's gang received a $400 penalty for having six men over the wall on four pit stops. Usually Foyt looks forward to running at Indianapolis year after year, but 1981 may find the Texan absent for the first time since his rookie year of 1958.

Foyt is extremely critical of the United States Auto Club ruling that dropped the manifold pressure from 50 to 48 inches this year.

"It was pitiful out there Sunday," Foyt steamed. "I wasn't outrunning anybody at 181 miles an hour. Whoever cheats the best runs the fastest."

"I won't be back next year unless something is done about that hogwash rule. You don't come out here for an endurance race — it's the case, you might as well make it a 24-hour race."

Rutherford, whose next stop is Milwaukee on June 8, was frustrated at the number of caution lights in the race.

"It's exasperating to sit out there with a lead like we had on two or three occasions and have it wiped out by somebody smacking the wall or breaking down and stopping on the track."

But that's all part of the game for Rutherford and he'll take a victory anytime he can get one.

New pact may spark trading

CHICAGO (UPI) — The settlement on a new players' agreement should signal an increase in the number of trades before the June 15 deadline, Cubs General Manager Bob Kennedy said Monday.

Chicago White Sox Vice President Roland Hemond agreed, saying teams that had been afraid to talk trade will now probably try to work out a deal in the final three weeks before the deadline.

Both Kennedy and Hemond reportedly have been seeking to make deals since the start of spring training but have been frustrated in their attempts because of an unwillingness by other clubs to make any moves while a strike was possible.

"I think you will see things pick up considerably in the next several weeks," said Kennedy, who would not say what the Cubs would be looking for. "Everyone was very apprehensive before the strike, but now things will be different."

Hemond tried to make a trade while in Milwaukee two weeks ago at the time the Sox activated right-handed pitcher Francisco Barrios. But many teams that were reportedly interested in several of the Sox' outfielders backed off because they were afraid a strike would occur.

"We've been talking all along, but things have been so quiet since the spring because people just didn't want to make any moves," Hemond said. "I don't know why specifically some of the teams weren't willing to trade, but it was just a feeling on some of the teams that they should not make a move with the chance there would not be any more season."

The Cubs' needs include a left-handed starter and more infield help. The Sox could also use extra infield depth and another reliever. But neither Kennedy nor Hemond would predict whether they would be able to make a deal in the next three weeks.

"It's tough to say," Kennedy said. "I just can't predict."

One deal that apparently won't occur is one involving Chicago relief ace Cy Young Award winner Bruce Sutter. Sutter reportedly had been offered to the St. Louis Cardinals before the start of the season.

But both Kennedy and St. Louis General Manager John Claiborne have denied there have been any subsequent talks about sending Sutter to the Cardinals.

Hemond said even if he was unsuccessful in swinging a deal before the June 15 deadline, there was the chance of obtaining a player via waivers.

"That's how we could work something out with a team in the other league," he explained.

But the Sox are in an unaccustomed position of having one of the best records in the American League, meaning they would have to wait longer for players to be passed by teams with inferior records.

"June 15 could be a big day; it is sometimes," Hemond said. "You may recall we made what appeared to be a small deal last year at that time."

The deal Hemond referred to was the one-by which the Sox acquired reliever Ed Farmer from Texas in exchange for Eric Soderholm. Farmer currently leads the American League in saves.

Heiden leaves race

SOMERVILLE, N.J. (UPI) — Speedskater Eric Heiden may have won five gold medals in the Winter Olympics, but he discovered Monday that victory doesn't come quite as easily off the ice.

Heiden dropped out of the annual "Tour of Somerville" 50-mile bicycle race after "only a few laps," a race spokeswoman said.

"Eric quit after trailing badly in the first few laps," the spokeswoman said. "He just didn't get it going."

Heiden's sister, Beth, also a world-class skater, managed a fifth-place finish in the women's 15-mile event. Stephen Bauer, Ontario, Canada, won the men's race in a time of 1:48:43, one minute slower than the race record. Tom Officer, of Lyme, N.H., was second and Jocelyn Lovell, Canada, finished third.

Jerome, Nampa teams cop titles

TWIN FALLS — Great Expectations of Jerome and Barger-Matson of Nampa came out of the loser brackets to win titles in Twin Falls, slowpitch tournament action Monday.

The two-day tournament was stretched to three by rainy weather but switching action to South Park and LDS diamonds where conditions were much better allowed the competition to be completed.

Great Expectations got more than its entry money worth as it lost the first game of the meet and then came back to win it all.

The Jerome crew did it with a 7-3 decision over Schlitz of Pocatello after throwing the meet into an extra game with a seventh-inning deciding 10-9 decision.

Earlier, Great Expectations relegated A1's Tires-Donnelly Sporting Goods of Twin Falls to third place 6-4.

A1's-Donnelly had advanced to the championship semi-finals where it bowed to Schlitz.

In the women's division, Barger Matson got in six games Monday. The Nampa crew finally decided it 4-2 over Intermountain Employment Agency of Salt Lake City in the final game of the tournament after bringing on the extra session with a 7-2 decision.

Intermountain had gained the finals by beating Coors of Twin Falls 3-1 in the championship semi-finals. Barger-Matson then sent Coors to third place with a tight 8-7 victory.

Earlier in the day, Coors defeated Tomadachi of Idaho Falls 3-2 in the replay of a protested game. Ironically, that was the same score of the game which was protested. Officials made a mistake by replaying the entire contest rather than restarting from the point of protest.

Rockies eye Brook

DENVER (UPI) — U.S. Olympic hockey coach Herb Brooks says taking over the NHL, Colorado Rockies is contingent on obtaining a release from his contract with the Davos, Switzerland, hockey club.

Brook, in a telephone interview from Minneapolis, also said he was awaiting his agent's study of the offer made by the Rockies.

Brook would replace Don Cherry, who was fired last week, if he accepts the Rockies' offer.

"I will look at it and see how it compares to the European offer," Brook said. "If it is as good, or close, then I hope to find an ethical and moral way to get a release from the contract. But it will have to be in the ballpark."

Brook admitted he would like to coach in the NHL but emphasized that "I will not pay to coach in the NHL."

Brook's Davos contract is for a reported $75,000 tax-free fee each of two years. And it would take negotiation, presumably by the Rockies, to release him from it.

Meanwhile, the Rockies announced the signing of one of Brook's proteges, Steve Janaszak, a free agent who was the U.S. Olympic hockey team's backup goalie.

Janaszak, who also played four years for Brook at the University of Minnesota, was the Most Valuable Player when the Gophers won the 1979 NCAA hockey tournament.

Larry Houey

TWIN FALLS — As they lay Bob Hilliard to rest this morning, it brings to mind one of the unhappier moments in Twin Falls athletic history.

Hilliard, who was football, basketball and track coach at Twin Falls High School in the mid-1950s, died suddenly Friday. His funeral is scheduled for 11 a.m. today in Burley.

Hilliard was caught in some kind of squeeze we sit in on and never fully understood. Hilliard never understood either.

It would appear that the way Hilliard was dismissed from the Twin Falls basketball team was simply meant to be. No one connected with the situation seems to have a firm grasp on it. But it remains, to our knowledge, a shabby incident in Bruin athletics that could be equalled only perhaps with the way Chuck Farmer was let out of the same position several years later.

Without getting into all the vagaries of the situation, Hilliard either wanted or was asked to step down as football coach. He agreed, saying he would like to continue at the basketball helm.

Hilliard helped build Twin Falls athletic history

It wasn't a particularly unhappy ending for Bob's career, however. After working in an agri-business for just over a year, he began his banking career at Burley and went on to become one of the good guys in that city's business community.

To the end Hilliard remained a strong athletics booster. Unlike many who have carved a name for themselves in sports, he did not turn his back on it.

He was a three-sport star at Pocatello High School and went on to Idaho State. He performed well enough there that he was among the first inducted into the ISU athletic hall of fame.

He came to Twin Falls as football coach in 1955 and took over basketball when Dan Folkins resigned a year later.

We ran into Hilliard then as he resigned a year later.

At the same time, Pocatello High was romping. The Indians had put together a 28-game undefeated streak (they'd been tied twice) and came into old Lincoln Field probably a four-touchdown favorite over the Bruins.

At the same time, Pocatello High was romping. The Indians had put together a 28-game undefeated streak (they'd been tied twice) and came into old Lincoln Field probably a four-touchdown favorite over the Bruins.

Hilliard responded with an unbalanced line which the Indians never adjusted to defensively and jumped into the lead. Throughout the fourth period Twin Falls was fighting off its back. For those of you trying to recall, the quarterback of that Pocatello team was Duane Sims who went on to become a major league catcher.

Anyway, Twin Falls posted a 14-6 upset. Small wonder, then, the suspicion was this would be considered his most memorable moment at Twin Falls.

Not so, Hilliard stunned us. He admitted that victory was a very decided high point but his most memorable moment came in basketball the following year.

Again it was Pocatello. The Indians, one year after sweeping everything aside in taking the state title in undefeated style, again were working on a winning streak.

Pocatello had built that string on super quickness. Twin Falls was taller but considerably slower.

The teams played solid defense and Twin Falls usually had a slight lead. But with six minutes left in the fourth quarter, Pocatello moved ahead by one, got the ball back and went into the corners or spread offense. You know, the old corners play that N.C. State is credited with developing about 15 years ago — or something like 10 years after Pocatello High School had used it here, borrowing it from Idaho State which used it the year before.

Hilliard had heard about the formation and knew how Pocatello's quickness could severely dent the slower Bruins.

Now the shoe was the other foot. Pocatello sagged and Twin Falls probed. Off a wave-type situation out front, Bruin saw the hole, made the drive and was in for a cripple. But instead of laying it up, he banged it off the glass and the ball stayed out.

While the luckless Bruin covered his head, prostrate on the floor, Pocatello took the ball downcourt against no competition and laid it in as the final seconds ticked off for a three-point win.

American League Error lets Texas nip Angels

ANAHEIM, Calif. (UPI) — Right fielder Dan Ford, dropped Pat Putnam's fly ball with two outs in the eighth inning Monday, allowing three runs to score and enabling the Texas Rangers to pull out a 6-5 victory over the California Angels in a fight-marred contest in which four players were ejected.

Buddy Bell, Johnny Grubb and recently-recalled pitcher Bob Babcock were tossed out of the game for Texas and pitcher Bruce Kison was ejected from California in the aftermath of three separate beanball incidents.

Bell was ejected in the sixth inning when he charged the mound after flying out because he thought Kison had thrown at him on the previous pitch. After the pitchers were warned by plate umpire Bill Haller, Babcock was tossed out on the very first pitch he threw in relief in the seventh because the pitch went behind batter Ford.

Kison hit Grubb with a pitch in the eighth and both players were sent to the showers after Grubb wrestled Kison to the ground. The benches and bullpens for both teams came streaming onto the field in both the Bell and Grubb incidents.

Yanks 13, Tigers 5
NEW YORK (UPI) — Rick Cerone drove in six runs with his first career grand slam and two singles Monday to pace a 15-hit attack that powered the New York Yankees to a 13-5 victory over the Detroit Tigers.

Cerone singled home a run to cap a five-run fifth inning that put the Yankees ahead 6-3, singled home another run in the seventh and capped his performance with a grand slam which highlighted a six-run eighth.

Chicago 6, Twins 3
BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (UPI) — Alan Bannister and Greg Pryor had three hits apiece Monday night to lead a 12-hit attack and lift the Chicago White Sox to a 6-3 victory over the Minnesota Twins.

Ken Landreux, who leads the American League with a 3.53 average, singled with bases loaded in the seventh inning to drive in Minnesota's final two runs and extend his hitting streak to 27 games, longest in the majors this year.

Dave Edwards' RBI single in the second gave Minnesota a 1-0 lead but Chicago erased it with two runs in the third. "Bottled and scored" on Bannister's single, Chet Lemon then doubled down the left-field line to drive in Bannister.

Brewers 11, Seattle 1
MILWAUKEE (UPI) — Gorman Thomas and Ben Oglivie cracked home runs to pace an 18-hit attack that included nine for extra bases Monday in sparking the Milwaukee Brewers to an 11-1 rout of the Seattle Mariners.

The victory was Milwaukee's fourth straight and snapped a four-game winning streak for Seattle. Thomas gave the Brewers a 2-0 first inning lead with his eighth homer after a single by Cecil Cooper. Thomas also singled home a run in a five-run third and drove in another run in the sixth. Oglivie belted his league-leading 12th home run in the fifth.

A's 4, Royals 1
OAKLAND (UPI) — Matt Koouh pitched a three-hitter in going the distance for the eighth time and Dave Revering drove in two runs with his seventh homer Monday in leading the Oakland A's to a 4-1 victory over the Kansas City Royals.

Koouh, pounded for seven hits in 3 1/3 innings a week ago against Kansas City, walked one and struck out six for his sixth victory in 10 decisions in 11 1/2. Washington hit a solo homer in the third for the Royals' run and singles by Frank White in the fourth and Willie Wilson in the sixth were the only other hits off the right-hander.

Jays 3, Boston 1
BOSTON (UPI) — Run-scoring singles by pinch hitter Damaso Garcia, Alfredo Griffin and Bob Bailor with two-out in the ninth inning Monday gave the Toronto Blue Jays a 3-1 triumph over the Boston Red Sox.

Lloyd Moseby started the ninth inning rally off Tom Burgumler with a single and was sacrificed to second by Al Woods. Dick Drago, 2-2, relieved and, after getting the second out, hit pinch hitter Otto Velez with a pitch. Garcia, Griffin and Bailor then followed with consecutive run-scoring singles.

Orioles 7, Indians 3
BALTIMORE (UPI) — Eddie Murray drove in four runs, including two with a homer in the seventh inning, Monday night to power the Baltimore Orioles to a 7-3 victory over the Cleveland Indians.

The Orioles scored four runs in the fifth to take a 5-1 lead off loser Len Barker, 5-3, with Murray and Rich Dauer each contributing two-run singles in the seventh. Ken Singleton walked with one out and Murray followed with his home run.

National League Cardinals end 10-game skid

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — George Hendrick broke a 1-for-13 slump with two homers and drove in three runs Monday, helping the St. Louis Cardinals snap a 10-game losing streak with an 8-5 triumph over the New York Mets.

Hendrick's 337th homer, his seventh, tied the score 3-3 in the fourth and he followed an RBI single by Ted Simmons in the sixth with his second home run of the game.

The final two St. Louis runs came in the seventh on consecutive doubles by Mike Ramsey, Keith Hernandez and Simmons off Ed Glynn, the third New York pitcher.

The Mets jumped to a 2-0 lead in the first two innings against Bob Forsch on RBI singles by Frank Taveras and John Stearns and a run-scoring triple by Lee Mazzilli. But Forsch, who struck out five and walked none in evening his record at 3-3, stopped the Mets until the ninth when they scored twice on a sacrifice fly by Ron Hodges and an RBI single by Mazzilli.

night to drive in the winning run and give the Philadelphia Phillies a 7-6 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates in a fight-marred contest triggered by a beanball incident.

Mike Schmidt led off the ninth with a double and Greg Luzinski followed with single, sending Schmidt to third. Lonnie Smith then pinch-ran for Luzinski and Bob Boone slipped a double to score Schmidt. Garry Maddox was intentionally walked, setting up Bowe's game-winner off loser Ken Tekulve, 6-3.

In the second game of the day which featured a beanball incident, Bert Blyleven was hit by a pitch in the sixth inning which triggered a 10-minute benches-clearing brawl. The problem started in the first inning when Blyleven brushed back Schmidt, and Luzinski with high inside pitches. When Schmidt was brushed back again in the third, he took a step toward Blyleven and both benches emptied but no blows were struck.

Kevin Saucier hit Stargell with a pitch in the fifth, then plunked Blyleven with the first pitch to him with two out in the sixth to touch off the trouble. Blyleven picked up the ball and charged toward the mound, where he was restrained by Phillies' catcher Bob Boone.

Meanwhile, players from both teams began swinging near the mound. Order was apparently restored when the fight broke out a second time, this one with Philadelphia bullpen coach Mike Ryan doing most of the damage.

Expos 4, Cubs 0
CHICAGO (UPI) — Steve Rogers pitched a three-hitter and Chris Speier had three hits, including a two-run triple, Monday to pace the Montreal Expos to a 4-0 victory over the Chicago Cubs.

Rogers, 5-4, struck out seven and walked two in pitching his third complete game of the year. He gave up infield singles to Larry Blittner in the fourth and pitcher Willie Hernandez in the fifth and a solid single to Mike Vail in the sixth.

Rogers also drove in a run in the fourth with a suicide squeeze bunt. The Expos started the inning with a lead-off single by Ellis Valentine, who went to third on a single by Gary Carter and scored on a double by Warren Cromartie. Speier was intentionally walked by Hernandez, 1-3, and Rogers drove in Carter with a perfectly placed bunt on a 3-2 pitch.

Braves 2, Giants 1
ATLANTA (UPI) — Larvell Blanks delivered a two-run single with two-out in the eighth-inning Monday night to lift the Atlanta Braves to a 2-1 victory over the San Francisco Giants.

Bruce Benedict led off the eighth inning with a double to knock out starter Alton Ripley. Mike Lum then greeted losing reliever Greg Minton, 1-2, with a single to left, sending Benedict to third. After Benedict was thrown out at the plate on a fielder's choice, a ground out by Jerry Royster moved the runners up a base and Blanks followed with a two-run single to center.

Reds, Dodgers split
CINCINNATI (UPI) — George Foster hit a grand slam in the fifth inning and Paul Moskwa struck out nine in six innings Monday to lift the Cincinnati Reds to 5-4 victory over the Los Angeles Dodgers and a split of their double-header.

In the opener, Jerry Reuss tossed a four-hitter to notch his sixth victory against no losses as the Dodgers scored a 4-0 triumph.

With the score tied 1-1 in the fifth, the Reds loaded the bases against Dave Goltz, 3-3, on singles by Dave Collins and Dave Concepcion and a walk to Ken Griffey. Foster then greeted reliever Joe Beckwith with his eighth career grand slam.

Back-to-back second-inning doubles by Ray Knight and Dan Driessen in the second inning gave the Reds a 1-0 lead, but the Dodgers tied the score in the fourth inning on Pedro Guerrero's RBI single.

Phil's 7, Pirates 6
PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Larry Bowa singled with the bases loaded and none out in the ninth-inning Monday

Gerulaitis, McEnroe post victories

PARIS (UPI) — Fifth-seeded Vitas Gerulaitis struggled on an unfamiliar European clay court for five sets to edge unknown West German Peter Heller 7-6, 6-1, 5-7, 6-2, 6-2 in the opening round of the $650,000 French Open Tennis Championships Monday.

The 25-year-old New Yorker, who was upset by a 19-year-old Frenchman Thierry Tulasne in last week's Italian Championships had to use all his court-craft to defeat Heller, currently ranked 85th by the Association of Tennis Professionals (ATP), 80 places below the American.

Gerulaitis harshly criticized the surfaces of the courts at Roland Garros, where a new 12,000-seater No. 1 court has been built.

"The courts are very dry and have an unpredictable bounces," Gerulaitis said afterward. "I had to take me time to adapt to the European surfaces."

"The American clay courts are so different. They are much faster and the balls come through so much more sharply. Both Tulasne and Heller, of whom I hadn't even heard until I played him today, wouldn't win a match on the concrete or indoor surfaces in the States. They couldn't use their tactics of standing on the baseline and using a big swing with plenty of top-spin."

Gerulaitis only began to vary his game in the fourth set when he began putting over a series of drop-shots to make the 21-year-old from Essen run about the court. He added it takes him two sets against new players to know what they're up to.

Another American, No. 2 seed John McEnroe, also had problems in adapting to the notoriously slow courts, much to the delight of the 17,000 center court crowd.

McEnroe battled for more than an hour to take the opening set but took only a 32 minutes more to defeat Frenchman Patrice Dominguez, 7-6, 6-0, 6-0, to start his bid for the $53,000 first prize.

The colorful 21-year-old lefthander from New York was concentrating on singles in this tournament and says he is in pretty good shape.

"The balls today were coming through faster than I expected and it was only when I started playing a serve-and-volley game I had more success," he said.

Despite his loss, Dominguez was unimpressed by McEnroe.

"I give him very little chance of winning the title, unless the court becomes faster," he said.

Marathon game goes 77 hours

MARSHFIELD, Mass. (UPI) — They may have run the basepaths a bit slower than three days ago, but 20 men Monday broke what may have been the world record for marathon softball playing.

Jaycees spokesman Frank Cole said more than $4,000 had been raised for the March of Dimes and several local charities in the game which began Friday at 10 a.m.

Cole said the group played at the Marshfield high school softball field for more than 77 hours, easily breaking the Guinness Book of World Records mark of 72 hours for endurance softball play.

The group used Guinness rules for the contest — 20 individuals, no substitutions, and a five-minute rest break per hour. That meant none of the men had more than a catnap since last Friday morning.

Indy rookie faces surgery

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — Rookie driver Bill Whittington, 30, of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., may have to undergo surgery as a result of his accident during the early laps of Sunday's Indianapolis 500.

Whittington suffered a fracture of the lower right leg when he spun out to avoid driver Dick Berggren, who hit the outside wall in the short chute on the 10th lap.

Whittington was jockeying for position after the yellow light and spun, hitting the outside wall in the number two turn.

Whittington was taken to Methodist Hospital, where he was placed in the orthopedic care ward. The rookie driver was scheduled to be examined by Dr. Robert Beckman, who will determine if Whittington needs surgery.

Rinka breaks swim record

MAGDEBURG, East Germany (UPI) — East Germany's SYLVIA Rinka Monday set a new world record time of 1 minute, 10.20 seconds for the women's 100 meter breaststroke.

Rinka sliced 11 seconds off the previous best set by Soviet swimmer Julia Bogdanova at the World Championships in Berlin in August, 1978.

Rinka's mark lowered by more than two seconds her best time last season of 1:12.24.

van't Hof wins NCAA title

ATHENS, Ga. (UPI) — Robert van't Hof of Southern California upset top-seeded Peter Rennert of Stanford 6-3, 7-5 Monday to win the singles title of the NCAA tennis championships.

Stanford won the team competition last Thursday, defeating Cal-Berkeley 5-3.

In doubles Monday, Tennessee's Mel Purcell and Rodney Harmon edged Trinity's Tony Gammalva and John Benson 7-6, 7-6 for the crown.

Van't Hof, the fifth seed, broke service in the sixth game of the first set. With another break in the third game of the second set, he went up 2-1. Ryl Rennert then won two straight games to take a 3-2 lead.

"I was playing very loose in the match," van't Hof said. "Everybody had been gunning for me all week and I finally got to gun for somebody else."

Van't Hof said he started off the match "really hot." But when Rennert decided to slow things down "I just hit with him for a little while and then just before he'd hit the ball, I'd play going in."

Rennert, who has defeated van't Hof twice this year and lost to him once, blamed his own serve and van't Hof's net play.

Cosmos take Challenge Cup

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (UPI) — Giorgio Chinaglia scored a controversial goal in the 78th minute Monday to give the New York Cosmos a 1-1 tie with the Vancouver Whitecaps and the championship of the inaugural Trans-Atlantic Challenge Cup.

In the first game of the double-header played before a crowd of 60,000, Manchester City of England edged A.S. Roma of Italy 3-2 to claim third place. Kasimierz Dzynda had one goal and set up two others for City.

Vancouver, the defending champion of the North American Soccer League, finished the three-round tournament in second place. Roma, the Italian League representative, was fourth.

In the final game, the Cosmos needed a tie or a victory to claim the Cup. Late in the second half, Johan Neeskens sent a pass from Ricky Davis to Chinaglia, who smacked in a 6-yarder with 13:27 remaining.

Neeskens claimed Neeskens hit the ball with his arm, nullifying the goal. But referee David Socha and linesman Gordon Armstrong refused to disallow the goal.

Cards try to revive bullpen

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — The St. Louis Cardinals, mired in a 10-game losing streak, Monday asked waivers on veteran reliever Pedro Borbon, sent pitcher Donnie Moore to Springfield of the American Association and recalled Jim Otten and George Frasier.

Borbon, who signed with the Cardinals as a free agent April 30, pitched in 10 games for the Cardinals and posted a 1-1 record and a 3.79 ERA with one save.

He allowed a three-run homer to San Diego's Gene Tenace Saturday night and a grand slam to Barry Evans of the Padres Sunday. In 19 innings, he allowed 17 hits and 14 walks.

Moore, obtained in an off-season trade with the Chicago Cubs, had a 1-1 record and a 6.23 ERA in 11 games, all in relief. He gave up 25 hits in 21 2/3 innings.

Day-old high jump mark falls

REHLINGEN, West Germany (UPI) — Dietmar Moegenburg of West Germany high-jumped 7-foot-8 3/4 Monday to equal the world record set the day before by Poland's Jacek Wozla.

Moegenburg, the European high jump champion, tied the record in his third attempt.

He then tried to break the record with the bar set at 7-9 3/4 but gave up after one attempt because of pain from an old injury to his left foot.

NFL contracts

Agents build clientele on deferments

By Will McDonough
(c) 1980 Boston Globe (Field News Service)

This year's first-round draft choices are getting bigger contracts than ever, for no apparent reason. What has been happening is almost a form of collusion between some teams and agents. Teams are giving enormous contracts on paper, but very little cash up front. Most of the money is being dished out in deferred compensation, which the player won't start to collect until 1985 and beyond. Meanwhile, the agent goes back into the field and tells owners he got his client a great contract, and feeds the publicity of the pact to help recruit draft choices next year.

The owner doesn't mind because he is only paying out about 50 percent of the contract over the next five years, and the remaining 50 percent spread over 20 years starting 15 years from now.

For example, one contract given to a first-round choice who has signed contracts a $250,000 bonus and base salaries of $75,000, $85,000, $100,000, $125,000, $150,000 and $200,000. The bonus is deferred until 1985. In the first year, he also defers $25,000 a year and in the last three years $100,000 a year.

Some top agents want nothing to do with deferred compensation, feeling that a player is getting shortchanged and that such pacts are all to the owners' benefit. However, there are an increasing number of hustlers in the agent field every year who are really deceiving their clients with this type of deal.

The word around the league is that quarterback Marc Wilson of Brigham Young mysteriously lost value in the draft when clubs learned that Howard Rosenberg, his agent, Wilson was expected to be in the top five players taken, but instead only Oakland took him as the 16th choice on the first round. The San Francisco 49ers reportedly are working out what amounts to a game-to-game contract with controversial Thomas (Hollywood) Henderson, Henderson, who became a problem in Dallas, forcing Cowboy coach Tom Landry to dispatch him in a trade to San Francisco, will be paid well by the 49ers as long as he plays well. At the first sign of trouble, the Niners are leaving the contract with Henderson open so they can dump him in a hurry. Hollywood has assured the SF brass he'll be a good guy.

The word in Philadelphia is that the Eagles' front office is pushing veteran cornerback Bobby Howard, who used to play with the Patriots, to retire. Howard, 35, did a big job for Philly in the last two seasons as the Eagles reached the playoffs. Gil Santos will get a look from the NBC-TV brass next week as a possible play-by-play man for the network. Santos had his job pulled from under him as the Patriots' play-by-play radio man when the team switched stations from WBZ to WEEI. The Patriots' coaching staff was impressed by No. 6 pick Preston Brown of Vanderbilt. He caught everything thrown at him and has outstanding speed, the type that could really help in the kick-return game.

Patriot tight end Russ Francis was a bit concerned about what management thought of the feature story in Sports Illustrated that featured his off-season skydiving exploits. Player contracts contain a clause which states that a player isn't supposed to involve himself in any type of off-season activity that could be injurious to his health. "Russ called me up and asked if I were going to do anything to him," said general manager Buckley Kirov. "I told him yes. I was going to have him committed."

This is going to be a long summer for John Hannah, but the Patriots' All-Pro guard is gearing up for what he knows will be a tough challenge.

"I've really got to work this year to get myself in great shape," said Hannah, who will leave his native Alabama much earlier than usual to prepare himself for the 1980 season.

Hannah was disappointed with his performance in 1979, even though he was voted the league's best offensive lineman by the players. He was bothered by a serious knee problem and couldn't play up to his level of previous seasons.

"My knee still isn't good," said Hannah, "but the doctors don't feel surgery is the answer at this point. They just told me to go out and play on it as long as I could and see what happens." Hannah feels his knee has been deteriorating over the last five years. The injury reached serious proportions in training camp last year when Hannah "felt something go" while he was pulling out to block on a play during practice.

"The knee bothered me all season," said Hannah. "I just couldn't pull out and run like I could before." The ailing knee has also prevented Hannah from working a great deal on his football program since the Pro Bowl game. As a result, his weight had gone from 272 to 257 when he weighed in at the Patriots' mini-camp 10 days ago.

"I'm going to be back up in the Boston area in the middle of June, about a month before the start of training camp," said Hannah. "I'll be working at a lot of football camps in the area, and this will give me a chance to work out with some of the other (Patriot) players in the area. I really don't have anyone to work with back home."

Hannah, whose wife, Page, is expecting their second child later this year, has made arrangements to rent the house of former teammate Leon Gray. It is almost imperative for the Patriots that Hannah lose about 20 pounds to protect his knee and regain some of the speed he has lost through the injury.

Abuse on the road

Carew exempts Angel fans from blast

ANAHEIM, Calif. (UPI) — Rod Carew said Monday the sharp remarks he made last week on the eve of an expected baseball strike sharply criticizing the griping fans were not intended for hometown consumption.

After the California Angels lost to the Texas Rangers last Thursday, Carew told reporters that the fans thought players were "overpriced SOB's and egomaniacs."

"We'll give them a couple weeks to find somebody else to yell at," Carew threatened. "They can't scream at their wives at home, so they come out to the ballpark, have a couple beers and scream at us."

But after receiving some heat from the Anaheim fans, Carew issued a "clarification" Monday.

"On the club's recent road trip I took a lot of verbal abuse from fans along the way," Carew said. "It bothered me to the point where I spoke out about it and unfortunately some of things said were taken in general."

Carew said his remarks were directed at the fans in Texas and Kansas City and "definitely" not meant to apply to the fans or ownership in Anaheim.

Last Friday, a fan at Anaheim Stadium displayed a large sign that read "Rod — Excuse Me."

Another California fan suggested to sportswriters that a candy bar be named after Carew — the "Zero Bar."

The Angels are not scheduled to play in Texas again until mid-September.

Four walls to remind Scott of his defeat

By MILTON RICHMAN
UPI Sports Editor

NEW YORK (UPI) — I was in prison once and hated every minute of it.

It wasn't really that bad, though, because I had an agreement with the warden beforehand: assuring me I could leave when I liked and he was as good as his word, seeing to it the gates were immediately opened for me as soon as I had obtained the story I had come for.

Somehow, James Scott's loss to Jerry "Bull" Martin in a 10-round light heavyweight bout held inside Rahway, New Jersey's maximum security state prison Sunday reminded me of my trip up the Hudson River to Sing Sing prison in Ossining, N.Y.

I remember — how delightfully welcome that sudden rush of fresh air felt hitting me when I took those first few steps outside the main gate at Sing Sing, and I couldn't help but think how utterly defeated and restricted James Scott must have felt when he woke up in his same old confining cell Monday morning.

Scott, 32, had been unbeaten in 19 fights, eight of which had been held inside Rahway until Martin, a 27-year-old Anglin, now living at home in Philadelphia, scored his upset victory over him.

There had even been some talk of a possible release from prison for Scott, sentenced to 30 to 40 years in 1975 for armed robbery, so that he could fight for the light heavyweight title, but a Superior Court Judge in Newark, N.J., scotched any such plans last September.

In denying Scott's petition for release, the judge took cognizance of his attempt to rehabilitate himself but said his past history of anti-social behavior "substantially outweighed" it. The judge added, "I am not satisfied that if I permitted him to return to the community, he would not be a danger to the society."

Scott didn't constitute that much danger to Martin in their nationally televised fight. A right to the chin dropped Scott in the first round and a left hook by Martin floored him again in the second for a five-count. Martin rarely let up the rest of the way and the referee and both judges had him comfortably in front at the end.

As consolation, Scott earned approximately $40,000, which is substantially more than a lot of law-abiding citizens make in an entire year on the outside. Scott donates 10 percent of what he makes from his fights to a special fund for crime victims and the rest is being held for him.

But the money hardly makes up for Scott having to look at those same four walls every day. Except for two brief periods, he has been behind bars since he was 13. Originally sent to the reformatory in Jamesburg, N.J., for truancy, he was declared incorrigible five years later and moved to Trenton State Prison. When he was let out from there, it wasn't long before he was back in prison again.

Pete Rose wound up second in this bid to take third base on a single to rightfield by a teammate. Rafael Landestoy applies the tag

What's what

Tracking down words in dictionary easy

Pick any word in any dictionary at hand. And I can tell you the word after you answer no more than 20 questions only with a yes or no. Do you believe that? Believe it. Trick is to open the dictionary in the middle, and ask if it's in the first half. Then split the half it's in, and ask if it's in the first half. Then split, and ask again. To the page in the half page. And so on. You'll come on it within 20 replies.

A patty made of soybean meal and mechanically bored chicken served on a bun is sold in Japan under the name "Amerikaburger."

Bear in mind, when applauding at the opera, cry "Bravo!" for the lady singer, but "Bravo!" for the man.

Did I tell you there are 92 stitches on a major league baseball?

FLY TYING

Q. How long have fishermen been tying their own flies?
 A. That's prehistoric, I think. First known book in English on fishing was called "Treatise of Fysshing Wyth an Angell." Came out 1496 in Westminster, England. It explained 12 different fly patterns. Incidentally, 10 of those are still used.

Q. Why is some special day referred to as "a red-letter day"?
 A. Was a time when most calendars printed ordinary dates in black but holiday dates in red.

Q. To what extent do the big retailers, like Sears, rely on credit sales?
 A. To a considerable extent. At Sears, 56 percent of sales are on credit. J. C. Penney, 42 percent. Federated, 65 percent.

Q. What's noon—12 a. m. or 12 p. m.?
 A. Neither. Nor is midnight an a. m. or p. m., I'm told.

HOBO

Argument continues over the origin of the word "hobo." One authority says the first "hoboes" were Hobart-Grimes operatives hired by railroad companies to report on unrest, to break up strikes, and to police the tracks. They seemed to travel about with no visible means of support.
