Aging

Sex, other needs don't end, speaker says

By STEPHANIE SCHORW
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — How many of us, when asked to describe ourselves, give our age first?

Probably most. And that's one of our biggest fallacies. It's not how many years you have lived. It's how well you are functioning," according to Alma Ware, an expert in geriatric nursing from Seattle.

The elderly retain the same need for love and "touching" as they did when they were younger, Ware told a group during her workshop on "Letting Go and Enjoying Your Age," sponsored as part of the 1980 State Conference on Aging. More than 500 persons from around the state participated in the three-day series of workshops, lectures, dances and tournaments at the College of Southern Idaho.

Ware, in her workshop, used a wide definition for "touching" from petting a favorite dog to human sexuality. But in American culture, "touching" means sexuality, and the minute you talk about sex, you talk about a no-no, and when you talk about a no-no, you get uncomfortable.

Ware plunged ahead in discussing "no-no's" as they affect the elderly.

"One of the major losses, for many reasons, in American society at the age of 40-plus is loss of sexuality," she said. "It's not necessary, yet it's an attitude ingrained in us, she feels.

"For many women, when we can no longer have children, we're taught that we're no longer involved. When a woman can no longer reproduce, she thinks of herself as being in error or "Something is wrong with people if I enjoy being touched."

"The ability to be sexually involved remains with the human being all the life," Ware asserted. While a woman's estrogen level may decrease, her level of another hormone, androgen, which triggers the sex drive, increases.

Ware emphasized that touching can also be a hug from a friend or a loving word from a relative in a stressful time.

Dealing with stress, especially the loss of loved ones, is part of growing old, Ware feels. "Denying pain is denying yourself the satisfaction of knowing you've survived."

"Reminiscing is the best — even though at times it's a painful — way of growing. Frequently you start crying. If you cry in front of another human, they say, 'Please don't cry.'"

But friends should allow friends the freedom to cry. It works out their emotions. Even the loss of youthful dreams, realizing things haven't turned out the way you've planned, may be mourned as long as a death.

"If you haven't let go of dreams, let them go. One way to let go is talk to another human being," Ware said. "If friends aren't around, talk to yourself — "pillow talk," she calls it.

She was interrupted by a woman inquiring, "Is it all right to talk to yourself and answer your own questions?"

After laughter subsided, Ware said, "Sure."

While Ware explored American aging fallacies, another workshop explored fallacies and truths about how elderly are viewed throughout the world.

Sociology Professor Robert Speyer said while certain aspects of aging are the same in every culture, there are large differences in how the elderly are treated in primitive, developing and industrial nations.

Universal aspects of aging include: the elderly are always a minority; there are more older women than men; and a high value is always placed on life, that is, society attempts to keep its people alive as long as possible.

Even the well-known custom of Eskimos leaving their aged to die in the snow is used only as a last resort for individuals who are unable to keep up or produce in a nomadic culture, Speyer said. The Eskimo elderly are conditioned to accept the inevitable end.

Yet primitive countries on the whole, such as Samoa, hold the elderly in high esteem. They hold vital places in society for their memories of ancient customs, their wisdom and the tasks they continue to perform, Speyer said.

"You find historically, and around the world, the place an old person has in society is due to the stage the society is at."

Yet even in American society, where reportedly we have "a negative attitude toward the elderly," most of our political leaders are over 60, Speyer noted.

He also examined the Chinese people's renowned reverence for old age, and found that it may stem partly from fear caused by their ancestor worship based religion. If an older relative's spirit stays in the village after death, it means he can still affect the family for good or ill.

"We think of them as being loved. But are they really, or are they put up with for the future powers they may have?"

Although the elderly in America may feel disgruntled at the youth-oriented culture, "The elderly have more power in Congress than any age group," Speyer said.

"Why? Because (more than other age groups) they vote."

Silver Creek

Review asked in fish farm denial

By BRUCE HAMMOND
Times-News writer

BOISE — Buhl trout farmer Ken Ellis has asked the Idaho Department of Water Resources to reconsider his application to establish trout farms on Silver Creek.

Ellis, owner of Valley Trout Farms Inc., in a request submitted to DWR Director C. Stephen Allred and received Thursday, has repeated his original request to develop farms on Silver Creek, despite the fact that the Idaho Legislature earlier this year reserved a significant portion of the creek's water as a minimum stream flow.

According to his attorney, Robert Weaver of Buhl, Ellis now is asking only for use of water in the creek in excess of the amount reserved for minimum stream flows and now plans a smaller operation.

In his original application, Ellis sought to utilize 250 cubic feet per second of water at two separate locations on the creek.

Before Ellis filed his application, however, the Idaho Water Resources Board applied for minimum stream flows at the same locations where Ellis planned to divert water for his hatcheries. Earlier this year, the Legislature approved the minimum stream flow requested by the IWRB, and Allred subsequently rejected Ellis' applications. A 99 cfs flow has been designated for the upper reaches of the stream, from the confluence of Gray and Stalker creeks to the Picabo bridge. From the Picabo bridge downstream to U.S. Highway 93, a minimum flow of 74 cfs has been set. It is along this latter section of the creek that Ellis has requested permission to construct fish farms.

Ellis refused to comment on his motion to the DWR, but Weaver said it is Ellis' position that Allred overstepped his authority in denying the original application.

Ellis also claims that the impact of Ellis' proposed use of flows over and above the dedicated minimum flows was inadequately documented.

"As I understand it, stream quality is still under the administrative charge of the Environmental Protection Agency and (Idaho) Health and Welfare," Weaver said. "I think the director (Allred) has usurped this power."

"He says this (Ellis' fish farm proposal) might affect the water quality of the stream, but not enough evidence was submitted at the Shoshone hearing regarding this," Weaver said.

Thursday, Allred admitted that the effect of fish farm effluent on the DWR 74 cfs water right had not been completely documented "and provides possible grounds for requesting a rehearing."

"Also, Ellis' water right filing was in excess of 200 cfs," Allred continued. "There was no evidence that 100 cfs would do him any good after the 74 cfs streamflow minimum was approved."

Allred questioned if Ellis could successfully operate a trout farm with what water was left after the minimum stream flow was protected. "We did deny his initial application, and he can now do one of two things: request a rehearing on a couple of points not fully documented in the hearings or submit an oral argument to me," Allred said.

Ellis is pursuing the first of Allred's two alternatives.

"My number one objection to the findings... entered in the director's decision is that they are made up of things not entered in the Shoshone hearing," Weaver said. "It's my understanding that this process is conducted following certain rules and procedure, and that findings must be based on things entered in evidence and on nothing else."

Weaver said so far he has only asked Allred, based on procedural violations, to change his decision about fish farming on Silver Creek.

"I've asked the director to modify his decision according to the record, an action he can take under the law," Weaver said.

"I don't expect him to do that, so my next move is to appeal the error I find in the record to the District Court," Weaver continued.

Weaver was unsure Thursday whether the appeal would have to be filed in Ada County where Allred's office is, in Lincoln County where hearings were held, or in Blaine County, the site of Silver Creek.

"I only want the water application reheard if I've exhausted the other procedures," Weaver said.

Weaver admitted that because of the 74 cfs minimum flow set by the Legislature, Ellis would "have to run a lot smaller operation than he originally planned."

"During some months, documents show the waterflow falls down to 110 or 120 cfs, so water exceeding the minimum flow would be limited," Weaver said. "Of course, all this is really up to him (Ellis), but it stands to reason that some reduction would be necessary."

Too long on defense

House rejects 1981 budget

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House Thursday rejected the 1981 budget proposal opposed by President Carter and Speaker Thomas O'Neill.

The 242-to-141 vote against the $613.3 billion budget was a victory for liberals and moderates who waged a major last-minute campaign against it.

The budget will be sent back to a conference committee.

"This is not a choice between defense and non-defense. That choice has already been made," said Rep. Leon Panetta, D-Calif., one of five House Democrats who voted against the spending plan during House

Senate conference meetings last week.

"The question is, 'Is there going to be some modest restraint across the board,'" he said.

Panetta and the four other members of the "gang of five" who pulled out of the conference agreement asked their colleagues to overturn the budget because of disparities in the treatment of defense and domestic programs.

The others were Reps. Norman Mineta, D-Calif., Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., Timothy Wirth, D-Colo., and William Brodeur, D-Mich.

Rep. David Obey, D-Wis., who helped lead the fight against the conference bill, said the defeat meant the Senate "had to listen more closely to what the House had to say."

The compromise agreement leaned much further toward the Senate's high defense proposal.

It fell after Republican leaders were unable to deliver the votes necessary to save the proposal following the Democratic defections.

"Prior to the vote, House Budget Committee Chairman Robert Glinco said a lower defense budget was unrealistic.

"The American people want a first class defense second to no one," he said.

Republican leader John Rhodes, R-Ohio, urged support for the budget.

Boy in a bubble dies at age 17

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Teddy DeVita, who spent eight years isolated in a sterile bubble to protect him from germs his body couldn't fight, is dead of complications caused by frequent blood transfusions.

The 17-year-old, who made medical history by surviving longer than any patient with aplastic anemia — a disease that cripples the body's germ defense system — died Tuesday at the National Institutes of Health in nearby Bethesda, Md.

Aplastic anemia affects the body's bone marrow, preventing production of red blood cells, oxygen-carrying red cells and clotting platelets.

DeVita developed the ailment in 1972 at the age of 9 and lived since then in one of eight sterile isolation rooms set up by the institute for infection-prone patients.

On the few occasions he left the hospital he wore a special plastic space suit that maintained his sterile environment.

Repeated blood transfusions and life in the isolation room kept DeVita alive.

DeVita's father, Dr. Vincent T. DeVita Jr., is a cancer specialist who heads NIH's National Cancer Institute.

Despite his environment, DeVita appeared to be a typical teen-ager. He occasionally attended rock

Teddy DeVita spent 8 years in a protective bubble. His body couldn't fight germs music concerts at the Capital Center wearing his space suit, and friends said he was shy, but friendly.

He grew a beard, played the guitar, bickered with his sister, liked Shakespeare and "Star Trek."

His room boasted trappings of the teen years: a stereo, two guitars, a telephone and books.

He was taught by tutors from the Montgomery County school system, from which he was to graduate next month. He scored in the top 99 percent of the college entrance exams and had planned to take college courses next year.

Coal pipeline grant sought

TWIN FALLS — A Salt Lake City company has applied for a federal grant to study a proposal for a coal slurry pipeline from Wyoming, through Idaho, to Portland.

The "Northwest Pipeline" Corp. proposed pipeline would cross Idaho through the Snake River Valley.

Owen Zuro, a spokesman for the company, said the application for a grant from the Department of Energy is only to study the project. The study would cost about $6 million, according to the company. The pipeline proves feasible, it would not be built until at least the late 1980s, he said.

The proposed pipeline would carry about 25 million tons of coal per year out of the Powder River basin in Wyoming. About 10 million tons would be used at a proposed coal gasification plant, to be located somewhere in Oregon or Washington. The rest would be sent to Portland. About 5 million tons would be used by electric utilities on the west coast. The remaining 10 million tons would be available for export to the far east.

The company believes the project will bring a new supply of coal to the northwest, using a low-cost transportation system and with a minimum environmental impact. In a news release announcing the project, the company also points out that a coal gasification plant would help replace natural gas that must now be imported from Canada. And coal sold abroad would improve the country's balance of payments.

The Northwest Pipeline Corp. is a wholly owned subsidiary of "the Northwest Energy Corp. Other companies that will participate in the feasibility study include Bechtel National Inc., of San Francisco, and Gulf Interstate Engineering Co., of Houston.

They're first mates for new astronaut crew

HOUSTON (UPI) — Dr. William F. Fisher joined his wife Anna in the nation's astronaut corps Thursday, making them the first husband-wife team and realizing a dream they nurtured since their honeymooning at the Johnson Space Center three years ago.

Fisher was among 19 astronaut candidates announced by the space agency for the space shuttle program.

"I really find it very hard to put into words how happy we are," said Mrs. Fisher, who was chosen for the program in 1978. "It's something we've looked forward to for so long and yet realized how slim the odds were."

The Fishers were working at a UCLA-affiliated hospital in Torrance, Calif., and engaged to be married when they first applied to become space shuttle mission specialists — the non-pilot category — in 1977.

Both had dreamed about it since elementary school.

Dr. William Fisher is a new U.S. astronaut. He joins his wife who was selected earlier.

After the honeymoon interviews, Mrs. Fisher, 30, was among the first women astronauts chosen for the space program. Fisher, 34, was not chosen the first time they applied.

He reapplied and improved his credentials by earning a master's degree in engineering at the University of Houston.

Evans says federal disaster effort isn't enough for state

BOISE (UPI) — Gov. John Evans said Thursday he was unhappy with the federal offer of disaster aid funds on financial relief for Idaho Panhandle counties damaged by volcanic ash from Mount St. Helens.

"I'm not happy with that," Evans said, adding the federal government's 75-to-25 matching ratio. The state would shoulder 15 percent of the recovery cost and local governments the final 10 percent, he said.

Evans said he was asking Idaho Sen. Frank Church and James McClure to help convince the Carter administration to provide more than 75 percent assistance.

After past disasters, Evans said, "the federal government... assumed a greater role, and now it has reversed itself."

Noting the law calls for state and local governments to pay for their own disaster recovery and shoulders the federal government with little responsibility, Evans said, "I can't argue with that, if they just treat us as fairly as other states have been treated in disasters of recent years."

Damage estimates in the wake of the May 18-19 ash disaster indicate the state and local governments of northern Idaho might have to pay as much as $16 million to recover, if the current federal aid plan holds up, Evans said. The total cost of the damages could approach $50 million, he said.

Idaho state and local agencies would have to lighten their budgets and "hopefully not" be in a serious deficit position, the governor added.

Benevolence County officials notified the state Thursday that the help of Idaho National Guard units was needed no longer, Evans reported. And state transportation officials, he said, were studying the possibility of prohibiting chemicals to keep northern Idaho's highways free of the blinding snow.

The state will be able to react better, to a potential second serious eruption of the Washington state volcano, Evans predicted. Asked if the state had the resources to cope with another blast, he said, "We're going to have to. We can't sidestep the problem. We'll do whatever we have to do to take care of the people."

Confusion over how the cleanup of volcanic ash will be paid for is making it difficult for the Coeur d'Alene City Council to make "intelligent decisions," city Administrator Eugene McAdams said Thursday.

Although the federal government will pick up 75 percent of the clean-up tab, nothing is really clear, McAdams said.

"The situation is awkward for the council because there are several 'catch-22's' in the process," he said.

"First of all, Congress has not appropriated the 75 percent. The next catch is that the 15 percent match has not been clearly identified by the state either. Also, the Federal Emergency Management Agency has not given the city any guidelines to go by so the city is in a very, very difficult position," McAdams said.

He said the problem is that the city is being forced to spend money allocated for other programs on the cleanup of ash. Since the city council does not know what expenses are reimbursable, it has no choice but to take money from current operating budgets.

"The difficulty is that the city council is forced to make decisions and spend money, but it can't establish what it is entitled to because we don't know what the federal guidelines are," he said.

saying "the defense appropriation is just about as high as I think we can get it."

Earlier, O'Neill told reporters he opposed the budget proposal, becoming the first congressional leader to take President Carter's side against the spending plan.

O'Neill, a longtime supporter of social programs, said the budget is "not in tune with the principles of the Democratic party."

Carter said Tuesday he hoped the budget would be defeated in the House, where a group of moderate and liberal Democrats oppose it as too conservative. At the same time, the more conservative House Republicans said it was too liberal.

The Joint Chiefs of Staff publicly broke with the president Thursday, speaking out in favor of the $153.7 billion defense proposal. But they stressed that spending levels supported by Carter will not jeopardize national security.

The president had proposed a $150.5 billion military budget.

Demos delay platform call fearing fight

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Chairman John White of the Democratic National Committee, a backer of President Carter, has postponed the party's national hearings in apparent hope of avoiding an issues fight with Sen. Edward Kennedy.

"Very frankly we Democrats need some time to attempt to achieve maximum unity in our party. The difference in that one week might give everybody the chance to look at the mathematics, understand them and, based on that understanding, take the steps necessary to bring the party together," said Detroit Mayor Coleman Young, a prominent Carter supporter who chairs the platform committee.

The Washington hearings had been scheduled to begin June 5 — two days after the eight-state windup of the 1980 primary season. But they were rescheduled a few weeks ago.

A new date of June 12 has been set in hopes the delay will give Kennedy time to weigh the costs of a war with Carter and perhaps to decide against a divisive platform fight.

Kennedy has threatened such a fight, which worries the Carter people who badly want a unified party for the fall campaign against likely Republican nominee Ronald Reagan and Independent John Anderson.

Kennedy will have enough delegates to bring minority reports on the platform to the convention floor for such a battle.

Kennedy represents the liberal wing of the party and his program includes a number of proposals — opposed by Carter — that are part of the traditional Democratic platform.

Fighting Kennedy on those issues before a national television audience, Carter's supporters believe, might hurt him in the fall campaign. The alternative, unless Kennedy ducks the fight, is to accept the revisions — and later ignore them.

Meanwhile, Sen. Edward Kennedy said Thursday that if President Carter agrees to a debate, he will free his delegates to vote "their conscience" at the national convention in August.

He urged Carter to release his delegates also, giving the convention the "liberty to nominate Mr. Carter, to nominate me — or to select a third person."

Asked about the proposal later, Carter campaign manager Robert Strauss told reporters, "I haven't paid attention to it. I don't know what it would accomplish. I want to come together with Senator Kennedy."

Iran, Iraq battle on border

TEHRAN, Iran (UPI) — Iraqi troops supported by helicopters attacked border posts in Iran on Friday but were driven back in a four-hour battle in which a number of Iraqis were killed, Pars news agency reported.

The Iranian news agency said the Iraqi troops attacked border posts at Faryababad, Kanjanjan and Anzali in Ham provinces.

The report follows a state radio broadcast that said Iraqi guards on the border in Ham province kidnapped four Iranians who crossed the frontier Thursday to escort Iranian refugees back across the border.

Prison guards find tunnel

POLK CITY, Fla. (UPI) — Guards at the Polk Correctional Institute didn't give it a second thought when they saw inmates hauling loads of dirt past them day after day in wheelbarrows. They thought the prisoners were improving their athletic field.

But on Wednesday, the guards discovered a 90-foot-long tunnel some 10 feet down that was wired for electricity. The dixerers were provided fresh air pumped in through a vacuum hose and a fan stolen from a water cooler.

The project was interrupted about 100 yards short of the prison wall.

Civil rights leader shot

FORT WAYNE, Ind. (UPI) — Black civil rights leader Vernon Jordan was shot in the back by a sniper and seriously wounded Thursday in a motel parking lot.

Police did not rule out a racial motive in the shooting and said the unidentified rifleman apparently acted alone.

Jordan, 41, director of the National Urban League and a civil rights crusader for two decades, was shot about 2 a.m. as he stepped out of a car in the parking lot of the Marriott Inn.

He also was struck by a second bullet and received a superficial wound in the right leg.

President Carter said in Cleveland he believes the shooting was an attempted assassination. White House source said Carter had discussed the matter with Justice Department officials and there was reason to believe the attack was planned.

Today's weather

Weatherman forecasts wet, but warming, weather

Twin Falls, Burley-Rupert, Jerome-Gooding areas:

Variable clouds with widely scattered showers or thundershowers, mostly afternoons or evenings through Saturday. Highs mostly in the 60s both days. Overnight lows upper 30s to middle 40s.

Camas Prairie, Halley, lower Wood River valley:

Variable clouds through Saturday with widely scattered showers or thundershowers, mainly afternoons and evenings. Highs near 60. Overnight lows in the 30s.

Northern Utah and Nevada:

Variable cloudiness and scattered showers or thundershowers, mainly afternoons and evenings. Highs near 70 with lows near 40.

Synopsis:

Unsettled weather appears likely to continue well into next week in the Magic Valley.

Temperatures will trend near seasonal levels, but repeated pulses of moisture will continue to cross Idaho from the northwest. The result will be scattered afternoon and evening showers and thundershowers, conditions similar to those which have prevailed for the past several days.

Elsewhere in Idaho Thursday, the warmest temperature was 74 degrees at Fruitland while McCall reported the coolest reading of 30 degrees.

The field preparation outlook calls for mostly dry Sunday and Monday but an increasing chance of showers about Tuesday. Temperatures will be near seasonal levels.

Fan evaporation is forecast at .24 inch Thursday and .28 inch Saturday. Little change in maximum or minimum 4 inch soil temperatures today and tonight. Winds of 5 to 8 miles an hour this morning will increase to 12 to 18 mph by afternoon with strong, gusty winds near any thundershowers about development.

Elsewhere in the nation Thursday, the highest temperature was 98 degrees at Laredo, Texas, while Gunnison, Colo., reported the lowest reading of 27 degrees.

Search for volcano victims called off

VANCOUVER, Wash. (UPI) — Officials halted further aerial searching in the devastated Mount St. Helens blast area Thursday.

Hope faded that any more victims or survivors of its May 18 volcanic eruption will be found.

In 12 days of helicopters crossing and recrossing 600 square miles in 650 missions, crews rescued 197 people including one who later died of burns, recovered 21 bodies and pinpointed at least another dozen death sites where victims were presumed buried under volcanic ash and mud.

At least 35 people were known to have been killed. Authorities said the death toll includes 22 victims whose bodies were recovered and others presumed to be dead. The final toll could go as high as 80. At least 13 of 88 still missing were confirmed to have been in the blast area when the mountain erupted with a gigantic explosion May 18.

Coroners were preparing to issue "presumptive certificates of death" for those who were missing and known to have been in the blast area.

Dr. D.F. Wyszczanski, Lewis County coroner, said: "It will depend upon getting information that will positively put them on the mountain. Then we can go from there. We can issue a presumptive certificate of death."

Officials said they did not want to add to the death toll with a possible crash of a search crew on the dangerous mountain which still contains the constant threat of more eruptions.

At a news conference announcing suspension of further aerial searching at search headquarters in Toledo, Wash., Sheriff Bill Weister of Lewis County said:

"This is the 12th day of the search. All the bodies that were recovered were picked up days ago. The last three days have just been the same recrossing and re-crossing of the search area.

"To be realistic, there are no more bodies being found. What we're worried about is having one of the choppers crash and kill four or five people. It's just not worth that risk. If there was any sign of life still up there, then they'd land on the edge of the crater if they had to."

Meanwhile, scientists kept up their nonstop monitoring of the unpredictable volcano.

One who flew over the the mountain Thursday reported seeing bright spots in the crater, but geologists said they could not yet tell whether the spots signal the beginning of a "lava dome" rising within the volcano.

An SR-71 "Blackbird" spy plane was sent to take high resolution pictures in an attempt to find clues in the search for more victims of the blast.

Scientists have predicted that the mountain will resettle its summit, shortened by 1,300 feet in the eruption. Geologists were able Wednesday to measure the temperature in the pyroclastic flow "just north of the crater." They found a temperature of 297 degrees centigrade (566 degrees Fahrenheit) about 5 feet deep in the flow.

This indicated the flow is not cooling very rapidly, as material in the initial blast may have been about 300 degrees centigrade (570 degrees Fahrenheit).

Meanwhile, the mountain was doing "more of the same," a geologist said. It was throwing out small amounts of steam to elevations of 9,000 to 10,000 feet above sea level or just over the edge of the crater. So little ash was in the latest emission that it was not noted on National Weather Service radar.

Volcano experts and federal geologists said Mount St. Helens would continue to be dangerous for weeks and possibly months to come.

"We can probably expect a long cycle of intermittent activity, with eruptions such as we saw last Sunday but of gradually diminishing intensity," said Steven Harris, a California State University volcanologist and author of the book "Fire and Ice" on Cascade volcanoes. Harris had predicted Mount St.

Helens would erupt before the end of the century.

He said it was "unlikely" the mountain would repeat its cataclysmic blast of May 18.

However, he added that "Mount St. Helens is still a young volcano and in the cone-building stage, even though it has wrecked itself for now."

U.S. may return royal flag

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter has ordered aides to look into a request to return to Canada the Royal Standard which American troops seized in Toronto in the war of 1812, it was disclosed Thursday.

Carter was asked during an interview with Newhouse Newspaper editors whether he would return the Royal Standard to Canada "as evidence of our particular gratitude for the rescue of our six embassy employees in Tehran."

Solar flare may stir up magnetic storm on Earth

BOULDER, Colo. (UPI) — Solar forecasters with the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration said Thursday a minor magnetic storm may occur on earth this weekend as the result of the eruption of a major flare on the sun's surface.

If there is any effect on earth, it will occur late Saturday. Officials said there could be a minor effect on some radio frequencies, although forecasters said the flare was of such short duration, no problems are expected to occur.

Phil Powell of the NOAA-Air Force Space Environment Services Center said the flare peaked at 1:53 p.m. (MDT) Wednesday.

Europe watches U.S. puppet show; Soviets on move

© The Washington Post Company

LONDON — While the British were preparing to commemorate the 40th anniversary of the Dunkirk evacuation (May 26-June 4, 1940), newspapers here carried a photograph that eerily evoked an earlier war, the War to End War.

It showed soldiers wearing gas masks, emerging like specters from a fog of gas. It could have been Flanders, 1917. It was Wiltshire, 1980.

The event was reported as "the first major, realistic chemical warfare exercise" organized by NATO power. "It had better not be the last."

With saturation bombing of civilians, the Second World War planes and the indiscriminate nature of war. But there is this to be said for the Second World War: It did hold chemical warfare in abeyance. Even the Nazis were deterred from using it.

But today's Soviet regime — the only regime directly descended, without an institutional rupture, from a regime allied with Nazi Germany in 1939 — has shown, in Afghanistan actions and Warsaw Pact preparations, that it is ready, perhaps eager, to use its huge capacity for chemical and biological warfare.

The basic bad news about Europe is that the Eastern sky is darkening, fast. The good news, such as it is, is that many Europeans are becoming sensibly scared. The bad news from America, as many Europeans interpret it, is that Ronald Reagan is unknown, and Jimmy Carter is? For Reagan, the good news from Europe is threefold:

First, President Reagan, if such he becomes, will have an easy act to follow. Second, he almost certainly will exceed Europe's expectations for him. Third, he will find himself working with allies, who, in their lucid moments, know that they divide their time between deploring and emulating America's shortcomings.

British confusion about the effective date of Britain's sanctions against Iran moved the Times of London to thunder against the Thatcher government's "Carterism" — a low blow, but a reminder that although the President's name is a European code word for confusion, he has not quite cornered the market on ineptitude.

There is in Europe today a rising tide of loathe talk about this "fact": American inconstancy is less an expression of Carter's incompetence than of an incurable weakness of the American political system, so Europe may have to "go it alone." But that phrase must mean either neutralism which would mean Soviet hegemony or Europe paying the price for its own defense. To most Europeans, both ideas are repulsive.

Given leadership from America, the situation in Europe today could be encouraging. The three most important European leaders — Britain's Thatcher, Germany's Schmidt, and Italy's splendid Cossiga — have a hard-edged vision of the world that is much closer to Reagan's vision than Carter's. At least two of them are reliably said to be privately pleased that NATO suits from too much public politeness is dead.

Carter displayed his style as commander-in-chief when he ordered the aircraft carrier Nimitz to make special haste home so he could use it as a prop in a Memorial Day media event, welcoming sailors back from a voyage that involved 144 days without a port call.

For three years Carter has savaged the Navy even more than the other services. He has drastically slashed the number of ships, and by using a veto to block, if only temporarily, Congress' desire to build another nuclear carrier, he did his bit to make sailors spend unreasonably long stretches away from home — and, so, to make more sailors leave the Navy.

In the days immediately preceding that media event, Carter, showing the passion he reserves for the things he really cares about, fought Congress' attempt to enact a modest increase in defense spending. However, when TV cameras came aboard the Nimitz, Carter suddenly discovered that he supports a military pay increase that he had strenuously opposed the week before, but that was going to pass anyway.

Such shabby charades are being watched by a European political class which, when it looks east, sees 150 Soviet SS-20 missiles targeted against Western Europe, and another SS-20 being deployed each week. If you seek the sources of the cynicism that nurtures neutralism in Europe, you will find one at 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue.

An aide to Giscard d'Estaing recently said that "one of our problems in the West is that the military strength is in the United States and the statesmen are in Europe." No, the West's problems stem from the fact that there is not nearly enough of either commodity in either place.

Raising the curtain on the 75th

In just five days, the city of Twin Falls will kick off its 75th anniversary celebration. Ten days of fun-filled events await residents and visitors, thanks to the untiring efforts of the celebration organizers. Last-minute planning continues and some events, such as June 14 parade, still need entrants. It's going to be an exciting and memorable time for Twin Falls. The only ingredient needed now is for the townspeople to turn out and enjoy the events. We'll be bringing you all the latest information, plus continual updates on the schedule of events. Times-News reporters and photographers also will be giving extensive coverage to the celebration.

Be looking for the special June 8 Times-News commemorative edition, which will focus on the growth of Twin Falls, its pioneers and significant events of the past. It's an edition you'll want to keep for posterity.

The 75th begins with a band concert in the city park Thursday, June 5. See you there!

The agonies of life-support

By DAVID B. WILSON
© Boston Globe
(Field News Service)

BOSTON — A woman dying, considered dead, sparing the courts the difficulty of deciding whether his doctor and his heirs could legally cause his death by removal of a life-support system. Sounds harsh. Another way of putting it is whether the doctor and heirs might be permitted to allow Spring, 78, and by all accounts sane, die with dignity in the absence of kidney dialysis treatment almost wholly funded by the federal government.

To understand what is going on here it is useful to set aside the legal and philosophical issues and address some practical matters. If an old, comatose, incompetent and presumably moribund person can be caused to die, who benefits? The person who dies? Or those relieved of the tedium of care, those who stand to inherit whatever may be left of the deceased's property after costly therapies and, finally, the taxpayers?

Remember now, we are not talking about someone who cannot, say, distinguish dark and light, day and night, warm and cold, pleasure and pain, or who cannot, however vaguely, understand the difference between living and dying and prefer one to the other.

Whatever this person may be at one time have stated in a "living will," the pertinent question must be who this person is at the present at which a decision is to be made, wants, however feebly and, yes, however stupidly. Infants are stupid, feeble, incontinent and utterly dependent upon stronger, able individuals for consultant care and life support. They communicate at an infantile level. They are a nuisance. Does any of this justify infanticide?

I recently visited a friend in hospital who was being kept alive by intravenous feeding. That friend could laugh and love and recognize friends. He intensely wished to live. I have another friend whose precious and useful life has been preserved by surgical procedures never attempted a generation ago. Because these procedures are costly and often fail, it has been suggested that persons with my friend's problem be permitted to die in infancy. Presumably with dignity.

If equality is to mean anything at all, it must not exclude old people, or weak, unattractive, odd, poor or otherwise unimpressive individuals from the rights to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. A society that discriminates in the protection of those rights forfeits the support of its members.

It has been argued that the courts have no business intervening in relationships among the patient, the patient's relatives or "loved ones," as the saying goes, and the doctor, or "health care delivery system," as another saying goes. This sounds good. But remember that some considerable proportion of homicides are committed in hot blood by "loved ones" on other "loved ones." The advantage to society is that the dependent's descendants of a demise "with dignity" is a substantial matter, and to pretend that it is not is to fudge the argument.

Even if it be stipulated that in most cases doctors and relatives will be consulting what they believe to be the patient's own best interest, they will nevertheless be relying upon subjective judgments. They have an interest, for which, being aware of it, they may even overcompensate. The courts must, it seems to me, retain a role to protect the patient, whether the decision be withdrawal or continuation of life support.

But the matter is not that simple. Nor is it likely to be satisfactorily resolved by the wisest judges. In the last generation, Americans have had a doubling of that proportion of Gross National Product devoted to health care. Because of inflation, unionization and technological progress, the cost of care has increased to a level at which, for many low-wage persons, the availability of insurance is the most treasured aspect of compensation. This is cruel and preposterous.

A steadily older population making more and more frequent demands for increasingly costly therapies will, under either a private insurance system or socialized medicine, be taking resources from children and working-age Americans which they can ill afford to spare.

And yet, life-support therapies are expensive, continuously refined and improved. No one would immediately object if some universal specific would cure all cancer and heart disease. But there is considerable doubt that the country could afford to do so.

These are unprecedented questions. Anybody who pretends to have a simple and adequate answer has not been paying attention.

Dredge mining

Editor, Times-News: In reading your editorial of May 22 concerning "State controls over dredge mining law,"

I believe that you will find nearly all prospectors are for sensible type of regulations. However, let's not get the general public incited with the Yankee Fork monstrosity!

William Scribner is talking about recreational dredges and states that manufacturers overstate their products' capacities. Am I to understand this statement mean it's possible for a 1 1/2-inch inside diameter hose with a 1 hp motor will pull more than a cubic yard per hour? I doubt this very seriously.

An Idahoan's application for a permit to alter a stream channel states a description of equipment which includes nozzle size, motor horsepower, make and model, and says equipment not listed under this permit cannot be used under this permit.

As an example, a 1 1/2-inch dredge means the inside diameter of the suction hose that goes up to the sluice box. It is not the diameter of the nozzle, which is anywhere from 1/4-inch to a full inch less than the hose itself, this points out that the largest gravel to be picked up is approximately 1/2-inch in size.

Most dredge operators have no desire to alter a stream (recreational). From the ecological standpoint, as one removes yardage from the river bottom you are not dredging, undermining the banks or changing the course of the stream. What you are doing is working with materials that have already been washed there to begin with. Relatively little silt is stirred up and as you "clean" gravel from the stream bottom it brings up worms and natural food which the fish really line up for.

Spawning is respected by nearly all sportsmen and dredge miners. It should be mentioned that the Gold Prospectors Association of America, nearly 70,000 strong, make donations to the Fish & Game Department to use as they see fit for the benefit of Fish & Game.

Now if it were the Monster of Yankee Fork, that's something else. E.M. BROBY

Urges retention

Editor, Times-News: The American Association of University Women, Twin Falls Branch, urge the members of the Board of Trustees of the College of Southern Idaho to retain the administrative position of Dean of Women.

We support the retention of this position for three principle reasons: 1. There is a role for women in college administrations, and most particularly, in a co-educational, tax-supported, community college such as CSI.

2. There needs to be a specific person available to women to deal with their problems, housing arrangements, schedules, vocational plans, etc. We are not satisfied with the proposed new administrative arrangement that such a person will be available to women. 3. The community has shown its support by the many signatures on the petitions presented at the last board meeting. We hope that such community interest would encourage you to carefully evaluate the proposed deletion of the Dean of Women position.

AAUW wishes to congratulate CSI for its excellent facilities and programs. We are appreciative of all the efforts of the college over the past several years. MARY NELSON

Tourney success

Editor, Times-News: A tournament thought to be hopeless on Friday evening was made possible due to the efforts of Marv Pierce and the ground crew. They worked from 4:30 to 1 p.m. Saturday in order to make the fields playable. There is no other association in Idaho that would put forth the time and effort in order to make the tournament a success.

We are sure that all of the softball teams would like to thank these people for making the Newtons softball tournament a success regardless of the weather. A special thanks to Marv Pierce, not only for working so hard to get the fields in shape, but also for his efforts to allow all the teams to complete the tournament. It was a tough job well done, Marv. QUALITY WOOD/ MUG AND JUG Filer

Vote results rudely awaken Northwest incumbents

WASHINGTON — The defeat of one of the Northwest's more powerful congressmen and the poor showing of its most senior congressman in last week's Oregon primary election is a portentous for the success of important regional legislation during the remainder of this Congress.

In his loss to Ron Wyden, Rep. Bob Duncan, D-Ore., has been transformed into a lame duck. Duncan is chairman of the Subcommittee on Transportation of the House Appropriations Committee and a member of the club which runs the House.

While Duncan's opponent ran a hard, well-financed race, the relatively close call of Rep. Al Ullman, D-Ore., has sent shock waves through the Northwest congressional delegation, because the candidate who racked up 45 percent of the vote against him was lackluster and without resources. Some here interpret it as a signal that 1980 will be a bad year for incumbents.

If the chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee is to favor the coming race against a more formidable, better-financed Republican challenger, Dennis Smith, he will likely spend a lot more time than he had planned in Oregon between now and November.

The efforts of Duncan and Ullman are important to raising the Northwest Energy Bill in the relatively few days that remain in this Congress. Proponents of the legislation have counted upon the two senior Oregon congressmen to influence the House Rules committee to bring the energy bill to the floor in a timely fashion.

As a lame duck, Duncan doesn't have much left to trade, and Ullman may well be too preoccupied with survival to lend much assistance to the energy bill.

Were the Duncan upset and the Ullman scare simply an Oregon phenomenon, or will the anti-incumbent sentiment spread across state borders into Idaho and Washington state? If 1980 were to be the unmaking of senior Northwest incumbents such as Sen. Warren Magnuson, D-Wash., (chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee); Rep. Tom Foley, D-Wash., (chairman of the House Agriculture Committee) and Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, (chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee) the region would see its clout in Congress vanish quickly.

Foley, who has also used his seniority to help move the Northwest Energy Bill, recently commented that with the way the economy was going, he would like to be running against an incumbent this year.

Even two-term Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Oregon, is probably reading the election returns with some anxiety. His opponent in November, state Sen. Ted Kulonogski, D-Lane County, drew much better than most observers expected. Kulonogski's vote count, when added to that of his liberal primary opponent, former congressman Charles Porter, is close to Packwood's vote total. Packwood, incidentally, has already agreed to debate Kulonogski. Those debates will have a quality of "de jure" to some observers who remember how then-Sen. Rep. Packwood made immense gains during his televised debate with the late Sen. Wayne More, D-Ore., in 1968.

The 1980s promise to revolve around the theme of increased regionalism in Congress, as one region pits itself against another in the battle for scarce budget resources. When it comes to the natural resources-based politics of the Northwest, money for the region's forests, fish and agriculture will be harder to come by and regional energy legislation harder to move.

Environmentalists are pleased at the defeat of Duncan, whom they have labeled a "timber beast." But, in Duncan, the forest products industry is losing a great and well-placed friend. Over the years, he, along with Ullman and Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., has been a force in getting the appropriation for timber harvest and reforestation in the national forests increased markedly.

"What if?" is the favorite game of political observers. If Ullman, Foley and Magnuson were to join Duncan in November, the next generation of the region's congressmen would suddenly assume prominence and visibility in regional politics.

In Washington state, that would mean more exposure for congressmen such as Democrats Don Bonker, Al

Swift, Mike Lowry and Norm Dicks. Each of these characters has strong personalities and individual styles from Dicks, who grew up at Magnuson's knee and who has been a member of the New Deal politics, to Swift, who wants to be an inside operator, to Bonker, who has been an advocate for fish enhancement and log export legislation.

In Oregon, the senior members of the House delegation would become Rep. Jim Weaver, D-Ore., and Rep. Les AuCoin, D-Ore. Weaver has achieved the status of subcommittee chairman (Forests Subcommittee of the House Agriculture Committee). He is resented by many Northwest congressmen for his outspoken opposition to the Northwest Energy Bill and his advocacy of a national grain marketing board. AuCoin is a very careful politician, but he has been vocal and taken heat for backing an amendment to the energy bill which would effectively penalize nuclear power.

Idaho's Republican Sen. James McClure would gain prominence in the absence of Frank Church. McClure is well-positioned on the Energy and Appropriations committees, and he is one of the more intelligent and articulate of the new conservatives.

Summing up the response of many Northwesters on Capitol Hill to the Oregon primary, one congressional observer said, "Yes, Virginia, there is an electorate."

Elucubration pays for Denver youth

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Jacques Bailly, a 14-year-old eighth-grade student from Denver, won the National Spelling Bee Thursday.

He correctly spelled "elucubrate." Jacques got his chance when Paige Pipkin, a 12-year-old seventh-grader from El Paso, Texas, missed on "giltch." She spelled it "giltch."

After Jacques properly spelled "giltch," he breezed through "elucubrate" before pronouncer Richard Baker could provide its definition.

Jacques is no stranger to elucubration — laborious work, especially at night or by candlelight.

"Well, you read a lot and you work a lot," he said, explaining his secret of success.

Jacques and Paige were the cream of 112 finalists who came to Washington for the 53rd annual competition sponsored by Scripps-Howard Newspapers. Only 32 made it through the first six rounds of "miss and out" spelling Wednesday.

Thursday's words proved even more difficult, with 10 contestants dropping out in the seventh round, and another eight missing in the eighth. The next four rounds cut the field to just Paige and Jacques.

Jacques spelled "aburn," "jnesse," "maladroitt," "nimlety," "juratory," "davitt," "abecedarian," "friljous," "blatherskite," "wassail" and "halcyon" to reach the final face-off.

None of the words stumped him, Jacques said, "but some of the others there were some that I would have missed." He gave special thanks to his spelling coach, Sister Eileen Kelly.

"I've had a lot of good competition," said Jacques, who has participated in spelling bees for three years. "The first time I came in, second, I got beat by my brother, Phillip, who's a year older than me."

Jacques, who represented the Rocky Mountain News in Denver, won $1,000 and a loving cup. Paige, sponsored by the El Paso Herald-Post, received $500.

Standing on the stage after the contest, Paige explained her slow spelling style — pausing about five seconds between each letter.

JACQUES BAILLY ...spelling champ

"I've always spelled slowly," she said. "I spell that way because it's safe."

She also vowed to try again. "It's boring," she said of her long hours of memorizing tens of thousands of words. "But I'll be back again next year."

'Fat Charlie' legend ends with arrest

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (UPI) — After 10 years and 10,000 cars, police finally caught up with "Fat Charlie."

Jose Carlos de Carvalho, 32, or Carlinhos Gordo (Fat Charlie) is known throughout Brazil as "the king of the car thieves."

After months of investigative work, police swooped on his apartment in the fashionable seaside Leblon district, arrested Fat Charlie and seized a mini-publishing house of stolen car and traffic documents and forging material.

Police credited Fat Charlie with the handling of 10,000 stolen cars but he said he really could not say how many cars he and his gangs stole and resold in the last 10 years.

The vehicles were passed on to a "Col. Lopez" in Paraguay where the stolen cars found a new home, Fat Charlie said.

Looking every bit like a typical used car salesman, he told reporters, "I don't use violence, I'm just a good businessman."

But like most Brazilian criminals, he has no false modesty.

"I am a legend," he said, as police moved him to a high security jail.

Farrah hit with divorce suit by Lee

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Farrah Fawcett-Majors, an original member of "Charlie's Angels," has been sued for divorce by Lee "The Six Million Dollar Man" Majors after nearly seven years of marriage.

Majors filed divorce papers Wednesday, citing irreconcilable differences as the reason for the break-up of the marriage.

Married in July 1973, the couple had been separated since April. They said the breakup was caused by the separations resulting from their careers.

It was the first marriage for Miss Fawcett, a former Texan. Majors had been married once before. They had no children.

Majors is best known for his role in the television series, "The Big Valley" and "The Six Million Dollar Man."

In addition to her role in "Charlie's Angels," which brought a burst of popularity, Miss Fawcett has appeared in movies including "Somebody Killed Her Husband," "Sunburn," and "Saturn."

She promoted her own line of cosmetics and a poster emphasizing her tousled blonde hair and curvaceous figure was at one time the biggest selling poster in the country.

Spittoons tossed out in Louisiana

BATON ROUGE, La. (UPI) — With a brass spittoon symbolically resting on the podium, Rep. V.J. Bella won approval of his bill to eliminate a legal requirement that the police jury keep adequate numbers of the spitting pots in parish courthouses.

Legislators hooted and cleared their throats Wednesday as Bella explained the bill to repeal an antiquated section of the law.

He has a companion bill to eliminate a state law against spitting on the walls of public buildings.

Sassoon settlement reaches $5 million

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (UPI) — Vidal Sassoon, who has styled the hair of some of the world's most famous women, has agreed to pay his ex-wife a divorce settlement of about $5 million over the next two years.

A spokesman for the celebrity hairdresser said that Sassoon has agreed to pay $30,000 a month to his estranged wife of 13 years, Beverly, to support their four children and supply cars and other property that will bring the total settlement to about $5 million.

The decree was granted in Santa Monica Superior Court.

Dear Abby

Blonde divorced fortune hunter soon may not need to rent

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
© Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: An attractive, blonde, 32-year-old divorcee is renting out a small guest house. We heard that she was involved in a scandal back East, so she left her home and family and came West to live on a limited income.

The last six months she has been chasing our 82-year-old neighbor — a very wealthy widower who is alert, lively and in remarkably good health.

It all began when she started taking him special foods and phoning him several times a day. Now the affair has progressed to where she has been spending most of her nights at his place.

This lonely man has given up most of his old friends, and his faithful, Old World housekeeper of many years is so shocked, she is quitting.

Half of my family says there's no fool-like-an-old-fool-and-if-she-takes-him-to-the-cleaners, he asked for it. The other half is so disgusted by this blatant fortune hunter that they want to throw her out of the rental. They say by not doing so we are a party to it.

Please give us your opinion.

—TURNED-OFF LANDLORDS

DEAR TURNED OFF: None of your tenant's private life is none of your business. Furthermore, if you should throw her out of her rental, the lovely, lively 32-year-old widow will probably take the poor, homeless lady in!

DEAR ABBY: I'm another one of those "Never thought I'd write to Dear Abby" persons.

I have a daughter-in-law who never calls me to extend a dinner invitation. She always has our son do the calling, which irritates me, as there is no reason why she can't call me personally.

This seems to be a common problem among mothers-in-law. I truly want a good relationship with my son's wife and will abide by your decision. If you print this as a help to other mothers-in-law in the same boat, sign me.

—IRRITATED

DEAR IRRITATED: If you truly want a good relationship with your son's wife, you will not make an issue of who does the calling. Just be grateful for the invitation. Most mothers-in-law seldom see their sons unless MOM does the inviting.

DEAR ABBY: I must comment on the controversy concerning bullfighting. What surprises us Spanish people is that Americans condemn bullfighting but see nothing wrong with the outrageous savagery of their so-called sport, "boxing!"

How can you condemn bullfighting and approve the brutality of two human beings beating each other with the ultimate purpose of knocking the opponent unconscious, which at times has caused fatal results?

It is unconceivable to us that a civilized country permits such inhumane contests causing swollen eyes, bloody noses and faces beaten to a bloody pulp!

Abby—please be less concerned about our bulls, and show more compassion for your fellow man by trying to outlaw boxing.

—DAVID FRONSECA
EAST RIDGE, TENN.

DEAR DAVID: At the risk of opening another bull session, I'll repeat my comment: "All sports in which blood (animal or human) is spilled should be outlawed." However, in boxing, the boxer comes into the ring voluntarily, of his own free will. In bullfighting, the poor bull has no choice.

CONFIDENTIAL to those who have sent for Abby's booklets. Please request with orders and am getting them out as quickly as possible.

Twin Falls girl will enter teen pageant

TWIN FALLS — Suzanne Lay, 17, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bill H. Lay of Twin Falls, will compete in the Miss Idaho Teen USA Pageant in Boise July 5.

The pageant, the official statewide finals for the Miss Teen USA in Albuquerque, N.M., in November, will be held at the Red Lion Riverside Inn at Boise.

Miss Lay, a junior at Twin Falls High School, is sponsored by Valley Brake. Her hobbies include piano, dancing, sewing, modeling and horseback riding.

Contestants, who must be between the ages of 14 and 18, are requested to participate in the volunteer service program of the Miss Teen USA pageant, by contributing at least 12 hours time to some worthwhile charity or civic work.

The state winner will receive an all-expense paid trip to compete in the national finals and a $500 scholarship to the school of her choice.

New earthquakes hit nuke plant area

SAN LUIS OBISPO, Calif. (UPI) — Minor earthquakes jiggled California Thursday after an aftershock tremor in the area of a recently discovered fault network rattled a controversial nuclear power plant.

Experts said the 4.8 Richter scale tremor was not related to a series of heavier quakes which shook Sierra resort areas earlier in the week.

The quake Wednesday occurred only hours after a $100 million suit was filed against the utility which owns the still unused nuclear plant, charging — that earthquake studies were not adequate.

The suit was filed by the Marre Land and Cattle Co., owners of the land that Pacific Gas & Electric Co., lessees for the Diablo Canyon Nuclear Power Plant.

A spokesman for Caltech's seismology lab said the quake was in the area of the Hosgri Fault, which only last year was found to be connected to a network of faults leading to the San Andreas Fault and thus capable of more severe damage than was earlier thought.

Rob Leslie, a graduate student at University of California, Santa Cruz, last year found the Hosgri Fault 2.5 miles offshore from the $1.8 billion nuclear facility was connected to the San Simeon Fault, and from there to the San Andreas Fault.

Leslie said at the time a fault network of that length — nearly 250 miles — was capable of a quake with a magnitude of 8 on the Richter Scale. His estimate was disputed by UCLA scientist Clarence Hall Jr., who said the maximum quake would be 7.5.

Gunshots reported near site where hostages held

TEHRAN, Iran (UPI) — Gunmen in the city of Mashad opened fire at a site where some of the 53 American hostages reportedly are held and shooting was heard at the occupied U.S. Embassy in Tehran, separate reports said Thursday.

The reports of the shooting followed the opening Wednesday of the Iranian parliament, which has been authorized by Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini to decide the fate of the American hostages.

The Islamic militant captors of the hostages immediately blamed the shooting in the northeastern city of Mashad "on inherent lackey of America" seeking to prevent spy trials for the Americans.

The official Pars news agency said unidentified gunmen opened fire sometime between Tuesday night and early Wednesday at the site in Mashad, where a group of the hostages are being held.

Pars made no mention of any shooting at the occupied U.S. Embassy in the Iranian capital, but witnesses said they heard heavy shooting around the still occupied U.S. Embassy in Tehran.

A militant inside said "it was nothing but guards firing."

There was no indication of casualties in either of the incidents.

The militants have claimed they moved the hostages to 15 cities across Iran to thwart a second U.S. military rescue attempt.

A communique issued by the militants in Mashad said the shooting was an attempt by President Carter, "this great Satan," to derail the Islamic revolution and keep the hostages from being put on trial as spies.

Iran to make hostage vote in 7 weeks

TEHRAN, Iran (UPI) — The speaker of Iran's new parliament said Thursday a decision to release the 53 American hostages or try them as spies will probably be taken seven weeks from now in late July. He ruled out any action on the hostages crisis before then.

Yadollah Sahabi, interviewed by the state radio, said consideration of the hostage crisis will have to await the formation of a new government, expected to be inducted into office sometime between late June and early July, and then a debate of the new programs that the government will introduce.

"I think one must certainly wait (ill) the third week of July for the debate on the hostages," Sahabi said.

Sahabi said parliament, empowered by Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini to decide the hostages' fate, will not even begin its official business until it elects a permanent speaker over the next three weeks.

"After the (Majlis parliament) becomes official, it will take some time for the new government to be introduced," he said. "Then, the members of the government will take time to introduce their program."

Following that, the deputies will debate the government program and finally vote on the new government into office. Only after all of those formalities have been accomplished will fate of the hostages held for 208 days come up for debate, Sahabi said.

Muslim militants holding the hostages said Wednesday, as the parliament was formally inaugurated, that they had no intention of furnishing "an acceptable reason for the people of Iran" if it decided not to try the hostages as spies.

The challenge was the latest in a series directed at the parliament, whose influential fundamentalist members have already indicated they will vote for spy trials.

U.S. to sell equipment to China army

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Pentagon announced Thursday it has approved the sale to Peking of battle-field radar, helicopters and transport planes, and will authorize U.S. companies to build electronics and helicopter factories in China.

The sales by private U.S. companies are subject to approval by the American government, but in most cases, officials indicated, this would be automatic.

Sale of military weapons will not be permitted.

U.S. officials would not specify the exact items Communist China might purchase, but they acknowledged eventual sales could run into hundreds of millions of dollars.

Brown said the United States would permit U.S. firms to make technical presentations in China of military-related equipment and high technology with both civilian and military uses.

Asked if the United States was now moving towards a defense alliance with Peking, Brown replied: "Not at all. The United States and the People's Republic of China are friends. It is possible to be friends without being allies."

Brown repeated U.S. policy against selling lethal weapons to China.

Kellwood trying to line up possible buyer

By STEVE LIPSON
Times-News writer
TWIN FALLS — When the Kellwood Co. announced plans to close its hosiery plant here, Earl Faulkner decided to take action.
Rather than allow the community to lose 70 jobs, the owner of the Falls called a Kellwood executive in Siler City, N.C., and asked the company if it would consider selling the plant to a local group. Faulkner's idea was to raise money locally to purchase the plant and keep it open.
But, he said, the executive told him not to worry because the company is confident it will find a buyer for the plant.

On May 1, Kellwood announced that it would phase out production at its Twin Falls plant over the next six months. The company was forced to close the plant because of poor panty hose sales nationwide. With an annual payroll of about $3.4 million, the hosiery plant was one of the area's largest employers.
Several companies have shown an interest in buying the plant. Representatives from two interested companies toured the Twin Falls facility recently. But so far, no sale has been arranged.

Bert Cook, head of Kellwood's hosiery division in Siler City, said, "At this point, there is nothing real hot to trot." He said some companies have expressed interest in the plant, and he plans to call several others that might be interested.
But the weak economy might make some companies reluctant to take on an expansion project right now, Cook said. And he isn't sure that the interest expressed in the Twin Falls plant so far is anything more than curiosity.

Kellwood executives aren't the only ones looking for a buyer for the plant here. The Twin Falls Chamber of Commerce is also searching for a company to take over the building. It was the chamber that arranged the two tours of the facility for interested companies.
Jay Hoyer, the chamber manager, said he is more optimistic than he was a month ago that a company will be found to take over the hosiery plant. Businesses seem optimistic about the future, even though the economy is slumping, Hoyer said. And the Kellwood facility is fairly large. There aren't many like it available anywhere in the country.

But, he said, he can't take credit for finding the companies that toured the plant recently. "That was just a coincidence," he said.
One company approached state officials saying it was interested in locating in a city of about 25,000 people, Hoyer said. State officials referred the company to him and he arranged a tour. The company has also visited Burley and Pocatello, Hoyer said the other company was referred here by a consultant who is helping the company find a new location.

Hoyer said he is also going back through his files and calling companies that were interested in Twin Falls in the past but couldn't find a big enough site.
Charles McManaman, Kellwood's plant manager here, said he conducted one of the tours Hoyer arranged. He wasn't told what company the people represented. "But they seemed to like what they saw," he said.

Twin Falls teacher pact receives OK

By LARRY SWISHER
Times-News writer
TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls School District trustees and teachers ratified a new contract agreement Thursday.
The school board met and ratified the settlement in a five-minute meeting Thursday night. Teachers and other certified personnel ratified it Thursday afternoon.
Board members denied they received public pressure to meet teachers' demands last week after an impasse was declared in negotiations.
In fact, they said, any comments they received were to the opposite effect.
After the impasse, an agreement was worked out behind the scenes and negotiators for the board and the teachers reached settlement Tuesday night.
Teachers and other certified personnel who attended a ratification meeting Thursday afternoon voted by 84.17 percent to accept the agreement and 15.83 percent to reject it, according to Al Ware, chief negotiator for the TFEA.
The settlement between the board and the Twin Falls Education Association, the bargaining agent for teachers, establishes new salaries and salary schedules and sets forth agreements on a number of policies and practices.

The salary proposal accepted by the teachers is the same as presented by the school board's negotiating team May 22, except for one item, that is an improved step-pay scale, which will go into effect in 1981-82 under the ratified settlement.
The two-year agreement on step-pay means next spring the only negotiable salary item between teachers and the district will be the base pay, which will go from $9,900 to $11,000 next fall.
The negotiating team for the TFEA declared an impasse May 22, basically over the improved step-pay scale.
Every board member said he was not contacted by any teacher or member of the public urging compromise following the impasse. This contradicts statements in Wednesday's Times-News by chief TFEA negotiator Al Ware that teachers had called board members, who became "very involved in the process."
Board member Robert Knighton, said the impression given was the board "cease to pressure our teachers and gave away the store."
In fact, in answer to a question from Knighton, Superintendent James Sawin said, Ware approached him first.

Beltway route hearing on tap

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer
TWIN FALLS — Public input is being sought by the Twin Falls Highway District Wednesday night in a meeting on the proposed belt route east of Twin Falls.
Highway department officials said the meeting begins at 8 p.m. in the mini-auditorium of the Vo-Tec building, Room 108 at the College of Southern Idaho.
Keith Andersen, highway district engineer, said the meeting to gather comments and views of residents is being held even though actual construction of a belt route to bypass Twin Falls to the east may be more than 10 years away.
He said in order to meet federal funding requirements, a number of preliminaries are necessary, including public input meetings.
He said the proposed rural arterial route, running north and south through the county would run from Orchard Drive where it joins the western half of the belt route.
Andersen said there are three alternative locations proposed at this time, including along Eastland Drive, a route one-half mile east of Eastland or another on 3300 East Road, a mile east of Eastland.

Basically, Andersen said, the proposed route is designed to give through traffic an opportunity to skirt through traffic in order to skirt through traffic in order to skirt through traffic.

Cunningham's courtroom gets unexpected bath

TWIN FALLS — There was some unplanned moisture here Thursday afternoon in 5th District Court.
Although court was not in session, employees of the building went scurrying for help when the sprinkler system in Judge James M. Cunningham's courtroom suddenly activated.
Although firemen said they could not find any indications of fire, court clerks said the courtroom area was drenched with what smelled like burning rubber.
Had court been in session, some attorney probably would have found his argument watered down because the sprinkler began spraying water in the area between the bench and the counsel table.
Jim Vickers of the Twin Falls Fire Department said apparently the fire problem was a faulty sprinkler head that blew up. Carpeting, walls and ceiling tiles were soaked by the mishap. Building officials said it occurred in the night or on a weekend, the situation would have been worse.

YFCA ending day-care affiliations

By STEPHANIE SCHOROW
Times-News writer
TWIN FALLS — The YFCA plans to end its day care and preschool program today.
The move comes as part of a new effort by the YFCA to balance its books after years in the red.
However, the program will continue, says its employees, as they are organizing a non-profit organization to continue the program. As of Monday, the similar services at the same rates will be offered at the Head Start building, 325 Madonna Street N.
A spokesman for the YFCA Board of Directors said the decision to eliminate the day care/preschool program was made for financial reasons and did not reflect on its quality, which members described as "excellent."
But the Y discovered, through a new accounting system, that the program, especially the infant care, was a large financial drain, according to Y Board Chairman Donna Stalley. Two-thirds of the Y's present deficit stemmed from losses in the day care/preschool program, Stalley said.
Closures offered included gym and swimming classes and hot lunches and utilized four rooms at the Y. Administrator Shirley Sobotka said about 55 children were served daily; in total, about 70 to 80 children used the services.

The Y was also the only day-care center that cared for infants, Sobotka said. The program employs about 15 persons, including CETA personnel.
But the program is losing money "and we can't subsidize it," Stalley said. "We're very sorry about that. But we owe more to the community than just 50 children."
Dorothy Geist, former program administrator and present volunteer, said eliminating the day care "would be a real hardship because they're aren't many day-care centers available in town and many close up for the summer."
Because of the great need for day care, Geist said employees decided to keep the same program going, possibly with help from the Community Action Agency, at the Head Start building. The new non-profit corporation will be called Early Childhood Learning Center, the name of a former CAA day-care program.
While the financial details of the organization have yet to be determined, Geist said the program would be financially feasible, especially as the program's estimated monthly overhead will be decreased. It was $3,200 a month in the Y building and will be $700 rent plus utilities in the new building.

She said the program will probably continue to receive U.S. Department of Agriculture grants and some of its Y equipment is on loan from Head Start. Costs will continue to be $6 a day for 3- to 5-year-old children and $7 for those under 3 years, she said.
The space the program occupied at the Y will now be devoted to other activities and programs, Stalley said. She said the Y may consider starting another day-care program some day.
The setback is part of the Y's goal to achieve firm financial footing, Stalley said. New Y Director Jack Doyle said the Y has shifted to a new accounting system, called "Function Accounting," that pinpoints areas of financial loss by calculating indirect costs, such as overhead, into program expenses.
This means for first time the Y Board of Directors knows what areas of the operation are making money and what areas are losing money, Stalley said.

The Y now hopes to operate in the black in June, although it has been in the red for as long as I've been here," according to Stalley, three-year board member. The total Y budget is in the quarter-million-dollar category, she said.
Under the old accounting system, Stalley said the Y just didn't know that the day-care program was losing money. She attributes such accounting procedures to "poor management."
The extent of the Y's present debt is as yet unknown, Stalley said, but she indicates it is substantial. However, the board has never considered the possibility of closing down operations, she said.
"Our financial situation is not rosy but it is perhaps no worse than it has ever been," according to a statement issued by Stalley. We know the where and why of our losses and we are doing something about it."
Stalley also said the accounting system would be computerized, with help from board member Dave Cooper, an accountant.

She said the Y board first became alarmed in 1979 when participation in programs tripled and yet the debt increased to $22,000.
She stressed the board feels optimistic positive steps have been taken to get the Y out of debt. She attributes much of the progress to Doyle, a national Y troubleshooter.
Doyle moved here from Alaska where he built a YMCA literally from scratch. In 12 years, the Anchorage Y went from an office to a large, new facility and his budget went from $0 to $600,000. He had previously worked with 40 Ys in California.
Doyle, on the job three weeks, said his work in Twin Falls would mean finding "creative" ways to get into the black.
His first task has been to change to Functional Accounting, the system recommended by the national YMCA organization and the United Way.
"It's a challenge to get a Y out of trouble. I'm sure we can," he said.
Stalley said a Y membership drive will be kicked off in about three weeks.

Gooding alcohol center use limited

By LARRY SWISHER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The regional substance abuse program of the Department of Health and Welfare will reduce its use of an alcoholic treatment center at Gooding.

Instead, it will increase use of a less expensive center at Twin Falls to provide treatment for clients.

The move gained the approval Wednesday of the department's Region V advisory board and takes effect with the new budget year beginning July 1.

Judy Brooks, health services manager for Region V, which is headquartered in Twin Falls, said inadequate funds will force a cut in staff and a change in use of treatment centers.

Brooks said "there's no right way to do it," but that funds are inadequate to fund both the Walker Center at Gooding and Magic Valley Alcohol Rehabilitation Center at Twin Falls and the region's staff.

Kent Henderson, Region V director, said the Legislature wanted an increase in the use of treatment centers but "didn't really come up with enough money to do it."

Brooks said this fiscal year the region paid for 42 people to receive treatment at Gooding and will pay for 30 in 1980-81. She said the Walker Center covers its cost from $1,650 to $1,995 per person for a 29-day treatment program.

MVARC charges $30 a day for detoxification as opposed to $70 at Gooding, she said.

The difference in cost comes because Gooding has a medical component, a 24-hour nursing and a doctor, Brooks said. She estimated 5 to 10 percent of DHW clients require the medical component.

The region will contract with MVARC for $105,000 worth of treatments and with Gooding for $60,000 for 1980-81. This year's contracts totaled $115,000.

Bean warehouse protested

Castleford residents complain to Twin Falls County Commissioners on proposal

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Residents living near the site of the proposed AAA Bean warehouse at Castleford protested the warehouse in an appeals hearing before Twin Falls County Commissioners Wednesday.

Lonny Stanger, attorney representing a number of protesting Castleford area residents, told the commissioners his clients feel the warehouse should be located on nonproductive farm land. He said the proposed site is on choice, producing farm land and there are other sites available close by on "highly unproductive land."

He also said available within the town of Castleford where the facility could utilize water and sewer systems, residents of the area have argued.

Stanger said the adjacent property owners believe such an industrial operation will devalue their property in addition to creating traffic problems on an already heavily used county road.

Lloyd Webb, attorney for AAA Beans, said his client is asking for a conditional use which gives the county the right to dictate conditions under which the property will be used. He said there would be no cleaning of beans and no milling operations. The building would be restricted to bean receiving, with the beans held there until they can be moved elsewhere for cleaning and packaging.

County Commission Chairman Merl E. Leonard said the county officials will make a decision and announce it at 10 a.m. June 4.

He said originally the owners of the bean warehouse facility submitted their request to the county Planning and Zoning Commission several months ago. The zoning board split evenly on whether to recommend the request to the county commissioners and board chairman Cornelius Lanning broke the tie, voting to turn down the request.

Larry Conglat, who formerly managed Beans Inc. in Filer before it was damaged by fire and closed, and Walter Taylor, who operates AAA Beans in Filer, are requesting the conditional use to allow building of the Castleford facility.

They appealed the zoning board's recommendation to the county commissioners and the first appeals hearing was held. The county returned the matter to the zoning board asking a review committee study.

Wood's said it was "furious" the zoning board had been misinformed as to the exact location of the proposed facility. After learning it would actually be located further from a sharp curve on the county road, the board agreed to approve the request with specific conditions.

These conditions included no bean cleaning or milling, a 200-foot setback of the building from the roadway, and extending the entrance and exit from the plant to the county road to a width of 272 feet. In addition, the firm must close operations at 11 p.m. each day.

Leonard said all of the pro and con testimony presented on the issue will be considered before a decision is reached.

regularities, but also those developmentally advanced," he said. If an entering kindergarten pupil can already read somewhat, he said, "we want to be able to start an appropriate instruction program instead of going through a reading readiness program."

Each child will also be asked to demonstrate his skills of expression and communication through speech and language.

"For example, if we find a child is hard of hearing, we want to know so we can deal with that," Watson said. "Maybe it means giving him preferential seating or maybe it means a medical referral."

"In the emotional-social area, we find various levels of adjustment in children," he said. "Most kids appear to have enjoyed a normal course of development and are able to make a satisfactory transition to school. Other are perhaps showing strong dependency signs, which may mean we have to take a closer look at the parent-child relationship."

He said the district now has parent training classes that can help parents deal with their children if they have anxieties and concerns.

Sometimes, Watson said, "we run into language development."

"A child may be using poor sentence structure and syntax or misarticulating sounds."

But he said these are very common and many outgrow the difficulty.

"The screening program that can cause learning difficulties, especially in reading, is 'left-right confusion,'" Watson said. He said identifying this through the screening process enables educators to suggest ways of dealing with the problem and makes them aware of its existence.

The whole screening process is aimed at identifying such problems ahead of time, instead of after the child enters school, Watson said.

In the fall, kindergarten teachers will be given the results of the screenings of their students. "This makes them immediately aware of any concerns we may have to deal with, instead of running across them by chance," Watson said. Otherwise, difficulties may not be discovered and identified for two weeks or a month.

The screening program, which is federally funded, has had good participation, Watson said. The response from parents who participated has been very favorable. About 98 percent of them felt it was very worthwhile and wanted it to continue, he said.

"It tends to generate a close relationship between parents and the schools," he said. "It lets them know of our program and the interest we have in their children."

4 believed drowned still not found

IDAHO FALLS (UPI) — Bonneville County sheriff's deputies have found no signs of the bodies of four people believed drowned in a boating accident Saturday at Palisades Reservoir in eastern Idaho.

A spokesman for the sheriff's department said no signs of the bodies had been found Wednesday, although he said deputies worked at the reservoir during the day with one of the four people who survived the boating accident being pinned at the location where the boat went down.

Witnesses Saturday said wind kicked up waves, which hit the 14-foot aluminum boat, and caused it to plunge 80 to 100 feet to the bottom of the reservoir, located about 40 miles outside of Idaho Falls.

The meeting will begin at 9 a.m. in the City Council chambers. Jay Hays, manager of the Twin Falls Chamber of Commerce, said all plans for the Diamond Jubilee celebration will be finalized at the meeting. He invited all interested people to attend.

Nerve gas: Congressional Committee wants it moved from Colorado arsenal possibly to Utah

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate Armed Services Subcommittee approved an amendment Thursday calling upon the Defense Department to detoxify or relocate within one year the hundreds of Weyeye nerve gas bombs now stored at the Rocky Mountain Arsenal in Denver.

The Weyeye bombs, each of which contains a deadly nerve agent, long have been a center of controversy. Some proposals urged they be shipped to Utah for storage in that state.

The amendment, proposed by Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo., subcommittee chairman, requires the Secretary of Defense to notify the Armed Services Committee within 90 days of its plans to remove the bombs.

Hart said his amendment calls for the removal of all chemical munitions from the Rocky Mountain Arsenal within one year, but leaves the choice to the military whether to move the bombs or to detoxify them.

"Continued storage of chemical weapons at the Rocky Mountain Arsenal in the heart of the Denver metropolitan area constitutes an intolerable risk," Hart said.

"Rocky Mountain Arsenal is contiguous to Stapleton International Airport which services Denver and the surrounding area, and the flight path of arriving and departing aircraft carries them over portions of the arsenal now used for the storage of chemical munitions. The consequences of an airplane crash into one of these storage areas are imponderable."

The decision by the Subcommittee on Military Construction was unanimous. The subcommittee also agreed to hold a hearing before the full Armed Services Committee considers legislation on the issue of binary weapons and the capability of U.S. soldiers to defend themselves against the use of chemical weapons.

The subcommittee also approved a proposal to begin construction next year on a new Fort Carson hospital near Colorado Springs. The Carter administration had proposed delaying the start of construction until 1981 and requested no money in the fiscal 1981 budget.

The subcommittee approved a proposal to put $10 million for site location of the hospital in next year's budget and also authorized spending a total of $87 million for the new facility.

"We desperately need to begin work on this new hospital for Fort Carson as soon as possible," Hart said. "A delay of one more year is unacceptable."

Hart said the current hospital facility, which was built in 1941, is deteriorating so rapidly it has become dangerous.

"The current Fort Carson hospital is more of a health hazard than a health care facility," he said.

Utah lady is a new astronaut

HOUSTON (UPI) — Utah State University research engineer Mary L. Cleave has been selected as one of 19 astronaut candidates for NASA's space shuttle program.

Cleave, 33 of Wellsville, Utah, is one two women and only six civilians chosen for the space shuttle program. She will be a mission specialist.

Cleave graduated with a Ph.D. in civil engineering from USU last year and now works with the University's State Water Research Laboratory.

The 19 candidates included eight persons classified as space shuttle pilots and 11 persons as mission specialists. All pilots are military officers.

The candidates were selected from 3,465 applicants for the jobs. The 19 finalists were scheduled to report to the Johnson Space Center in Houston July 7 to begin a one-year training program.

LeBaron jury must decide sentencing

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — The jurors who convicted polygamy cult leader Ervil LeBaron of ordering his followers to gun down religious rivals must now decide whether LeBaron should face a firing squad or be sentenced to life in prison.

Judge Ernest Baldwin ordered the jury of nine men and three women to return to court Monday for the sentencing phase of LeBaron's capital murder trial.

The panel deliberated only three hours Wednesday night before returning two guilty verdicts against the 55-year-old, LeBaron, who is the spiritual leader of the nomadic Church of the Lamb of God — a sect that moved around Mexico and the western United States operating small appliance stores and repair shops.

The jury convicted him of first degree murder in the 1977 slaying of Dr. Rulon Alford, 71, a naturopathic physician who was patriarch to about 2,500 Utah polygamists in a congregation known as the Apostolic United Brethren.

Alford was shot to death in his Murray, Utah, office by two women. Prosecutor David Vocom identified the killers as Rena Chynoweth, one of LeBaron's plural wives, and Ramona Marston, a member of his sect.

LeBaron was also found guilty of conspiracy in an aborted plot to kill his own brother, Verlan LeBaron, at Alford's funeral. A hit team, allegedly armed with machine guns, abandoned the attempt because a large number of police were present at the memorial service.

Verlan LeBaron leads another small plural marriage sect called the Church of the Firstborn in the Fullness of Time headquartered in Chihuahua State, Mexico, from which Ervil was reportedly excommunicated in 1971. Another brother, Joel LeBaron, was murdered in Mexico in 1972 and Ervil spent more than a year in a Mexican prison for being what the judge termed the "intellectual author" of the killing.

Ash poses big clean up problem

SPokane (UPI) — About 80 percent of Spokane city's 13,000 catch basins are plugged with volcanic ash.

While city street and sewage crews tried to dig out just how their going to unplug the underwater drainage system, people with ash left are being asked to put it in piles rather than wash it down the drain.

It's expected many of these catch basins are going to have to be manually dug out.

What's what

Hollow earth theory still not accepted

John Symmes, Jr., was convinced that the earth was hollow and that humanity lived inside it. He came to this conclusion for reasons unknown in 1818. And he devoted his entire life to the single purpose of persuading all mankind that he was right. Maybe Mr. Symmes was not the typical thinker of his or any other generation. But really, he wasn't all that different, was he? He too, thought he had it figured out.

That the camel first came into being on the North American continent no doubt you knew, but were you aware that bunnies probably originated in India?

Some parakeet smugglers hide those birds in hair curlers.

CATS AND DOGS

Wild felines, such as tigers and lions, can be trained to jump through hoops, stand on pedestals, and parade around in fancy fashion on command. Tame felines can't, or if so, only rarely. Wild canines, such as coyotes and foxes, are only trained with great difficulty, if ever. But tame canines, such as dogs, are trained with ease. How do you account for this difference?

Game-playing youngsters outdoors yell king's X and cross their fingers to signal for a time out. That finger-crossing is a youthful gesture that dates back through many generations. Certainly, far beyond living memory. Nobody knows how it originated, evidently. Or do you?

A Greek axe was called a pelteus. The big bird's beak looks like that. Which is why it's called a pelican.

GREETERS

Some bright soul among the officers of an Oklahoma civic club thought up a nifty wrinkle to turn the organization's big fish fry into a large social success. He telephoned each member, told same to come early, wear a welcome badge, and serve as a greeter. Each did. The whole thing turned into a long frenzied round of handshaking.

Did I say that only eight U. S. presidents had names that ended in "son"? What about David Atchison who was President for a day?

Jabbar, Celtics take NBA seasonal awards

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The Boston Celtics grabbed three of the top four NBA awards Thursday — Larry Bird as Rookie of the Year, Bill Fitch as Coach of the Year and Red Auerbach as Executive of the Year.

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar of the world champion Los Angeles Lakers won the fourth honor, his sixth Most Valuable Player award. That surpassed the previous record of five MVPs won by Bill Russell of the Celtics.

An anticipated battle for the top rookie honors between Bird, a former Indiana State star, and Earvin "Magic" Johnson of the Lakers didn't materialize as Bird was the overwhelming choice of the 66 voting sports writers.

He gained 82 votes to just 5 for Johnson, the former Michigan State star who was named the MVP of the championship series against Philadelphia.

In leading the Celtics to the best regular season in the NBA, 61-21, the 6-9 Bird led his team both in scoring with a 21.3 average and in rebounding at 10.4. He also finished second in assists at 4.5.

"The thing that is most amazing to me," Golden State's Clifford Ray said at one point during the season, "is that he knows the game already."

"I mean he knows the whole game. He's like John Havlicek with 21-year-old wheels and 4 more inches."

Former Detroit coach Richie Adubato admitted after one game:

"If he gets any better he will have invented a new game."

Abdul-Jabbar, who also won the MVP of the 1970-71, 71-72, 73-74, 75-76 and 76-77 seasons, collected 147 of the 221 votes cast this year. Julius Erving of Philadelphia was second with 31 1/2 votes, followed by George Gervin of San Antonio with 19.

Bird finished fourth with 15 votes, Boston's Nate Archibald, Seattle's Dennis Johnson and Atlanta's Dan Roundfield got 2 each and Seattle's Gus Williams had 1 1/2 votes.

Houston's Moses Malone, last year's MVP, got only 1 vote this year.

Abdul-Jabbar led the NBA in blocked shots with an average of 3.41 per game. He was second in field goal percentage at .604, sixth in scoring at 24.8 and eighth in rebounds at 10.8.

"Teams still put three guys on him," Lakers' coach Paul Westhead said about his team's captain. "They know he's the bank. You've got to guard the bank."

Fitch earned 37 votes and Westhead was second with 18 votes. Atlanta's Hubie Brown was third with 5 votes, followed by Lenny Wilkens of Seattle with 2 and Philadelphia's Billy Cunningham, Phoenix' John MacLeod, Milwaukee's Don Nelson and Portland's Jack Ramsay with 1 each.

Auerbach, who masterminded the Celtics' amazing turnaround from last season, when they finished with the worst record in their division, received 10 votes from his fellow executives.

Jerry Colangelo of Phoenix was second with 5 votes. Others named in the ballot were Bill Sharman of Los Angeles and Zollic Volchok of Seattle.

Borg serves notice to tennis field

PARIS (UPI) — Sweden's Bjorn Borg swept a 6-2, 6-2, 6-1 second round triumph over Ecuador's Andres Gomez Thursday to warn his American rivals he is in finer form than ever at the $650,000 French Open Tennis Championships.

His chief U.S. rivals, John McEnroe, Jimmy Connors and Vilas Gerulaitis were all resting Thursday but Connors was fined $1,000 by the men's International professional council for his behavior during Wednesday's second round against Frenchman Jean-Francois Caujolle.

Connors, No. 3 seed, was fined for an obscene gesture and three verbal obscenities and his opponent $200 for hitting a ball out of court during their volatile five-set thriller.

Borg, No. 1 seed and four times winner of the title, was nowhere near as pressed as Connors, who had to slay what he called "the greatest comeback of my career" to win after being two sets 5-2 and match point down.

Borg won the first four games in eight minutes against the hard-hitting Ecuador player, whose strategy consisted of lashing at balls and hoping some would pass the Swede. Some did but most didn't and Borg had another comfortable victory on his way to the $53,000 first prize.

He said afterward Gomez missed a lot of shots, particularly backhands.

"Personally I felt good. I'm really feeling hungry for tournament play this year because I haven't played as much as 1979," said Borg. "This is the most tiring tournament in the world physically although I think mentally Wimbledon is worse because on grass you have to be so exact."

Rain interrupted and then finally ended play early at the championships.

In the morning, the French No. 1 Yannick Noah edged Argentinian Jose-Luis Clerc 6-4, 6-7, 1-6, 6-3 in a bitter second round match.

Clerc, the No. 16 seed, was trailing 2-1 in sets overnight but used his fierce top-spinning serve with destructive effect in the fourth set.

Noah rarely came to the net and lost his dominance of the match. But, in the last set, he recovered his confidence and charged to a 4-2 lead.

The Clerc persuaded the umpire that one of Noah's serves which Clerc had put out, was possibly a let and the official ordered two serves to be played. With the crowd booing the decision, Noah won the rally, and then the game, to lead 5-2.

The next two games went with serves, although Noah needed three match points to defeat the 21-year-old Argentinian.

Romania's Virginia Ruzicic, the eighth seed, swept to a 6-1, 6-2 victory over Czechoslovakia's Maria Pinterova in their second round tie and Czechoslovakia's Hana Siranova, who upset American prodigy Andrea Jaeger in the previous round, continued her progress by defeating West German Iris Kuhn-Riedel, 1-6-6-3, 6-2.

Gooding's Mike Mann will lead the west into the Magic Valley Shrine All-Star grid game Saturday

Killanin admits boycott hurts Olympic look

DUBLIN, Ireland (UPI) — The president of the International Olympic Committee said Thursday it never was feasible to consider canceling the 1980 Moscow Summer Games, but he admitted most of the medal winners will be staying home.

Lord Michael Killanin told a news conference 85 countries so far have indicated they will compete at Moscow. Twenty-seven countries have declined invitations to compete and 31 nations so far had failed to reply, he said.

Killanin said, however, 73 percent of all gold medal-winning countries at the 1976 Olympic Games were staying away and 70 percent of all medal winners — gold, silver and bronze — from 1976 would not compete.

Despite those figures, the IOC president said it never was feasible to consider canceling or postponing the 1980 Games to protest the Soviet Union's incursion in Afghanistan.

Killanin also told the news conference special financing may be made available to athletes in need of funding.

"This money will come from a fund known as the 'Olympic Solidarity Fund' which already has over $1 million available to it," he said.

Killanin did not rule out the possibility of accepting late entries or special participation categories for athletes whose countries are not taking part in the games.

He also said the question of a permanent site for the Olympics is "under active discussion."

Killanin said Greece had offered a permanent site to the IOC and the council was examining the possibility of establishing "an extraterritorial site free from political interference in an effort to depoliticize the games in the future."

"Sport should never be used for political purposes," Killanin said.

Killanin said the U.S. call to boycott the Olympics was strictly a political move.

"Afghanistan and such things are beyond me," he said. "These are political matters. I would not be a party to any breach of the contract to hold the Games in Moscow."

Killanin also denied suggestions the boycott issue convinced him to decide against seeking re-election as president of the IOC.

"Eight years is a sufficiently long term in office," he said.

Ellenberger denies guilt

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (UPI) — Former University of New Mexico basketball coach Norm Ellenberger, facing both federal and state charges stemming from the school's athletic scandal, pleaded innocent Thursday in state district court.

Ellenberger said he was anxious for trial — "the sooner, the better" — to begin after July 4 on 22 counts charging fraud and filing of false public vouchers.

The charges, including one count of defrauding the Lobo Boosters Club of more than $2,500, were contained in an indictment issued last week by the Bernalillo County Grand Jury.

Named along with Ellenberger in a 44-count indictment were his former assistants, Manny Goldstein and John Whisenant. Most of the charges against all three men involved travel expenses for which they billed the university.

In the federal case, Ellenberger is charged with mail fraud, wire (telephone) fraud and interstate travel in aid of racketeering (paying for altered academic transcripts of athletes).

Ellenberger has pleaded innocent to those charges also, and the case is in the midst of motion hearings.

U.S. District Judge Juan Burelaga said he would decide sometime in the next few days whether wiretap evidence involving Ellenberger is illegal.

Knowles takes Declo cage job

HAGERMAN — Ron Knowles has accepted the head basketball coaching job at Declo High School.

Knowles, who served as head football and basketball coach at Hagerman for the past six years, will replace Gary Swan who left Declo to assume the helm at Burley.

Knowles said his specific coaching assignments will be head basketball and head girls track coach.

"I expect that I'll have some assistant duties in one of the fall sports, either football or volleyball," he said.

Knowles said that while he had enjoyed his stay at Hagerman, the demands of being head coach in two major sports had worn him down somewhat and cut into time he'd like to spend with his family.

Libert likes football when there's a hole to run

He popped free up the middle and, being one of the quickest in the state, breezed into the end zone 40 yards away.

He jogged back, flipped the ball to the center and then turned to Twin Falls Coach Bill Jones and brought the house down.

"Hey, Coach Jones," he asked with a wide grin, "is that what they call a hole?"

One must remember that in two years of playing — some of the time sidelined with injury — Libert walked off the field a football winner just once.

He was, doubtlessly, the biggest, fastest back in Idaho with the least amount of yardage — however you figure out the formula.

Now Libert, who is headed for a track scholarship at College of Southern Idaho, wasn't being catty about the situation. He knew that his class and teammates were banging into people much bigger and stronger most of the game. He just couldn't help remarking on it.

"When I looked up and saw that hole I couldn't believe it," he said. "There it was, four yards wide. I was so surprised I almost didn't get there. I almost stopped. The other times I'd carried the ball. It was one quick look, then close your eyes and run straight ahead."

It is a situation that makes Libert probably the most eager of the 60 boys who'll take the field at 8 p.m. Saturday at Bruin Stadium.

"I love to run behind this line," Libert said.

Head Coach John Billez of Gooding later in the practice suggested that Libert start looking for daylight and using his speed to get there.

"You don't have to try to run over the first red shirt you see," Billez laughed.

"What is this daylight?" Libert replied with a laugh.

There were, of course, a few Twin Falls linemen on the field when Libert made his comical remark. But they also joined in the laughter.

"I can't blame him," said 150-pound guard Nick Fischer. "He had three years of football and probably never did see a hole."

"I'm looking forward to Saturday night," Libert said.

"I've always wondered how it would be to break a long run. Not a touchdown run, just a long one. I'd like to score a touchdown. I love to run behind this line. Now I'll see if I can be a runner."

Libert says he has no regrets about his football career at TFS. He took his lumps and kept coming back as have all the boys who have endured the scorn of a 1-20 varsity career.

"I wish we could have won a few more games. I think we could have. We couldn't beat Borah and Capital and some of the big teams like that but we had our chances to win some games and couldn't do it."

"Also," he added with a smile, "it would have been nice to at least have scored against Borah."

When you go to the all-star game Saturday night, you might take a look along the west all-stars bench.

Somewhere in that knot you'll see Al Baxter of Buhl. Baxter is the only guy on the sidelines who wants absolutely nothing to do with the game. He'll be gratified if he never has to step across the sidelines.

Baxter is the trainer for Buhl High School and has helped the west through just about all its drills and, of course, the previous two all-star games.

He'll be there for two reasons.

First, as a youngster, he was benefitted by the Shriners' Childrens Hospital in Salt Lake City. The hospital is scheduled to receive all the proceeds from the game.

Baxter reports he was born with a defect in one of his legs and as a child had it corrected at the hospital.

He told that story a year ago when the teams made the trip to visit the facility. No one believed him so he went to the business office and asked them to look it up in the records. Sure enough, there he was.

"I feel like I'm able to pay them back a little for that," Baxter says of his three year's as trainer for the game.

But that's only one reason.

"The other is I don't want one of those young men to get into trouble and not have anyone around who can help him."

This also could be Baxter's swan song as a trainer. The press of his personal life and the hope of taking on a new commercial endeavor in the near future make it doubtful he'll have the time to devote to athletics next year.

Al Baxter

"But we've trained a student this past year and he's going to be a good one," he says.

"I'm afraid I'll have to leave (training) but I miss associating with the coaches and these young athletes."

But he assures one and all that if he is unable to continue as a trainer, he'll still pop up in the stands as often as possible.

Because he plans on returning to a

Landreaux hikes hitting streak to 30

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (UPI) — Glenn Adams and Hosken Fowell drove in runs in a three-run sixth inning and Ken Landreaux had two singles to extend his batting streak to 30 games Thursday, lifting the Minnesota Twins to a 5-2 victory over the Chicago White Sox.

Trailing 2-1 in the sixth, Minnesota rallied with four hits and two walks, chasing loser Rich Dotson, 5-2. Adams, who drove in the Twins' first run, doubled in 14th to tie the game. Fowell singled in Adams to make it 3-2. John Castino singled home Fowell with the third run of the inning.

Landreaux' club-record streak is the longest in American League since Ron LeFlore's 30-game streak in 1976. Joe DiMaggio of the New York Yankees set the major league record in 1941 by hitting safely in 56 consecutive games. Pete Rose holds the National League record at 44.

Winner Jerry Koons, 4-5, walked three and struck out five while allowing only five hits in his second complete game. He had a one-hitter with Minnesota in 14th in the fifth before rain halted play for 1.43.

Chef Lemon's two-run triple in the sixth gave the White Sox a 2-1 lead, scoring Bruce Kimm and Mike Squitieri, who both had walked. Rich Scuderi's solo homer in the seventh made the score 5-2.

Minnesota took a 1-0 lead in the fourth on Adams' sacrifice fly after a single by Landreaux that extended his streak sent Roy Smalley to third.

Indians 5, Brewers 0

CLEVELAND (UPI) — Jorge Orta hit a two-run homer and Cliff Johnson added a solo shot Thursday night to spark the Cleveland Indians to a 5-0 victory over Milwaukee, snapping the Brewers' six-game winning streak.

Johnson, who left the game in the sixth inning with an ankle injury, triggered a two-run third with a single and scored on Tom Verzer's single to right. Duane Kulper, who singled Johnson to third, raced to third on Verzer's hit and scored on Rick Manning's sacrifice fly.

Johnson marked his third homer in the fourth and Ott homered following a single by Manning in the seventh to chase Moose Haas, 5-4.

Indiana starter John Denny, who allowed only four hits before departing in the eighth after walking the first two batters, struck out four and walked four in notching his fifth victory in nine decisions. Victor Cruz relieved and got the last six outs.

Pirates 5, Phils 4

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Ed Ott doubled home a run and later scored in a two-run fifth inning Thursday that carried the Pittsburgh Pirates to a 5-4 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies as a split of their four-game series.

The Pirates collected 14 hits, including three each from Dave Parker and Mike Easter, broke a 3-3 tie with three straight hits that sent Philadelphia starter Dick Ruthven to his fourth loss against the five wins. Ott doubled off the top of the wall in right center. Dale Berra singled to bring home Ott.

Eddie Solomon, making just his second start of the season, worked the seven innings to improve his record to 3-0. Enrique Romo pitched the final two innings to register his second save and help put Pittsburgh back into first place in the National League East.

The Pirates opened with three runs in the first, two of them on consecutive singles by Phil Gardner, Parker, Willie Stargell and Easter. With runners on second and first, two out, Ott was walked intentionally and Berra also drew a walk to force in Stargell.

The Phillies tied the score in their first. Pete Rose was safe on Berra's error, Greg Gross walked and Greg Luzinski beat out a slow hopper to short in the bases. George Vukovich drove in one run, a fielder's choice and Bob Boone knocked in the other two with a double to right center.

Four tie for Kemper lead

BETHESDA, Md. (UPI) — Dave Hill switched to his cross-handed putting stroke and birdied three straight holes Thursday to score a 2-under-par 68 and pull into a four-way tie for the lead after the first round of the $400,000 Kemper Open golf tournament.

Hill matched Jay Haas, J.C. Snead and John Mahaffey. One shot back were Lee Trevino, Barry Jaeckel and Lindy Miller, as only seven players cracked par-70 on the 7,054-yard Congressional Country Club course.

Hill ran in birdie puts of six, six and 22 feet on the 14th, 15th and 16th holes to tie for the lead. His switch to the cross-handed putting stroke came as a surprise, rather than planned strategy.

"I just put the way I feel best," said the 43-year-old tour veteran. "I've switched back and forth from a conventional grip to a cross-handed grip and it just seems like lately I've had a better touch cross-handed. On fast greens like these, it seems a lot better."

Snead rattled off six birdies in 14 holes during the morning round, on what he called "the best day I've had off the tee this year." Snead won two pro-ams early in the week to start a hot streak after a closing-round 80 in last week's Memorial Tournament at Dublin, Ohio.

"I hooked my first three drives into the trees and thought about heading back to the clubhouse," said Snead. "You might say my disposition wasn't the best about them. I was about ready to go looking for the bear and one more bogey and I'd whipped him."

Snead played the back nine in three-under, the best score of the day on that side.

Mahaffey also credited his driver for his steady round, which included three birdies and a bogey. He dropped in a 15-foot downhill on the 21st-yard, par-three second hole and then made three-putters on the eighth and 14th to overcome a bogey on the 189-yard fifth that came from hitting an eight-iron into a trap.

"I'm not that long off the tee like J.C., but I was very accurate all day," said Mahaffey. "This course had a reputation for being long, but if you aren't accurate, you'll hit second shots from the rough and there's no way to hold the greens that way."

Congressional's greens were crusty dry and lightning quick. PGA officials ordered a 10-minute watering Thursday night, an order which brought laughs from several of the players.

"They didn't water Wednesday night because the greens superintendent expected a heavy dew," quipped Trevino. "I think he thought a fog might roll in, too."

Tied at even-par 70 were Ron Terry, Fred Martl, Mike Morley, Beat Baugh and Bob Gilder. Tom Watson led a pack of 15 golfers tied at 1-over-par.

Kingman to return with Cubs

CHICAGO (UPI) — Chicago Cubs' slugger Dave Kingman, sidelined for the past two weeks with a shoulder injury, is expected to return to the team's starting lineup for Friday's game with Philadelphia.

Cubs' Manager Preston Gomez, whose team has been in a hitting slump during Kingman's absence, said he hopes the defending major league home run leader will be recovered enough to return to the lineup against the Phillies.

"It's still a day-to-day thing," Gomez said. "Dave took a shot at the hospital on Wednesday and if he responds, he'll be back in the lineup." Kingman appeared twice as a pinch-hitter in the Cubs' series with the Montreal Expos. He walked with the bases loaded in Tuesday's game and popped up to right field in Wednesday's game that was suspended due to darkness.

Kingman injured his shoulder after scoring against the San Diego Padres at Wrigley Field.

Winds sky LPGA scoring

NEW ROCHELLE, N.Y. (UPI) — Amelia Rorer, Alicia Miller and Gail Morse, three non-winners with 10 years experience among them, posted the only sub-par rounds Thursday to share the first-round lead in a $125,000 LPGA tournament with one-over-par 71.

Swirling winds under a deceptively placid blue sky confounded veterans and rookies alike, sending scores spiraling. Out of a field of 91 pros and three amateurs, only Amy Alcott, Beth Daniel, Lori Garber, Sally Lark, JoAnn Washam, Debbie Austin and Sandra Post managed to match par on the 6,410-yard, par 72 Wykagyl Country Club course, putting the seven in a group one shot off the lead.

Four more players, including No. 2 money earner JoAnne Carner, were another stroke back.

Two-time defending champion Nancy Lopez Melton, still struggling with a swing problem she sent her through the worst round of her career two weeks ago, parred only one hole on the front nine, where she fumbled to two double bogeys and two bogeys and finished back in the pack with a 7-over-75.

Morse, a third-year pro from Albany, N.Y., playing in one of the last groups of the day, fired three birdies on the last six holes to grasp her share of the lead. The 26-year old hit a couple of sand traps to go 2 over after nine holes but sank a 25-foot birdie putt on No. 10 to start her rally.

"I had a brand new set of woods and I had no idea what I was going to do with them today," said Morse. "It wasn't a perfect round but I played a good consistent round which is what you have to do on this golf course."

Rorer, whose best finish in five years on the tour was a tie for fourth place two weeks ago, posted her fourth birdie when she sank a four-foot putt on the 18th hole, to claim a share of the lead. The 26-year old from Abington, Pa., earlier holed putts of eight, 28 and 12 feet for birdies to offset three bogeys.

"I said all I wanted to do was beat my partners," said Laura, who played with Carner and leading money earner Donna Caponi Young. "My swing is more grooved than ever before and I'm thinking as well as I ever have. My temperament is more even and I think I can become a

Bike racing season will begin Saturday

TWIN FALLS — The local bicycle racing season kicks off this weekend with the third annual Magic Valley Bicycle Club races.

A variety of races will be conducted Saturday and Sunday at the track licensed by the United States Cycling Federation (USCF) and for "open" (general public) bicyclists.

According to Dave Nelson of the Magic Valley Bicycle Club, as many as 50 licensed racers from Twin Falls, Boise, Pocatello, Ketchum/Sun Valley and Salt Lake City are expected to join a number of open racers in competing for about $1,400 in bicycle merchandise that will be awarded as prizes.

At 1 p.m. Saturday, three different road races will start and finish at Pole Line Road near its intersection with Washington Street North.

USCF-licensed senior men racers in four classes will cover a 70-mile course through the Hagerman Canyon (with two steep grades); licensed veteran, women and junior racers will travel a 42-mile course into and back from the canyon (with one steep grade); and open racers will cover a 25-mile course out and back on Pole Line Road (with no steep grades).

Nelson, who will compete as a licensed racer along with Gary Graham and Dennis Bolkin, also of Twin Falls, said he expects the 70-mile race to be won in a time of about three hours.

At 8 a.m. Sunday, one 10-mile time trial will be raced out and back on Pole Line Road by both licensed and open bicyclists.

The time trial will be followed at 1 p.m. by criterium races, open only to all classes of USCF-licensed racers. They will race around a six-lap, 10.5-mile, flat course on the College of Southern Idaho campus. All senior men will race 42 laps, while veterans, women and juniors will race 25 laps.

Said Nelson, referring to a movie shown recently on TV: "Breaking Away" was fun to watch, but if you want to see the real thing and hear the white noise of bicycles racing, you've got to see the top two classes of senior men race on a closed course."

Those two classes, he added, will compete in Sunday's final criterium race, starting at approximately 3 or 3:30 p.m.

Registration, which starts at 11 a.m. Saturday at the CSI parking lot, requires a $3 entry fee for any or all of the races.

For further information contact Nelson (733-8223), Graham (733-6869) or John Houser (733-0671).

Briefly in sports

French set team

PARIS (UPI) — France will send between 100 and 120 athletes in 12 sports to the Moscow Olympics, the French National Olympic Committee said Thursday.

A spokesman said the number might increase if the shooting and yachting federations reverse their individual boycott decisions and decide to compete after all.

The 12 sports in which French athletes will compete are track and field, swimming, rowing, boxing, canoeing, cycling, fencing, gymnastics, weightlifting, judo, wrestling and modern pentathlon.

Connors fined

PARIS (UPI) — Jimmy Connors was fined $1,000 Thursday by the Men's International Professional Council for his behavior during Wednesday's second-round match against France's Jean-Francois Caujolle in the $250,000 French Open tennis tournament.

Connors, the No. 3 seed from Belleville, Ill., received the fine for an obscene gesture and three verbal obscenities while his opponent was assessed $200 for hitting a ball out of the court, an official from the council said.

Jets sign five

HEMPSTEAD, N.Y. (UPI) — The New York Jets Thursday announced the signing of five draft picks, including second-round choice Darrol Ray of Oklahoma, and waived three veterans.

Besides Ray, a 6-foot-2, 205-pounder from Oklahoma who will be given a shot at the starting free safety berth, the Jets announced the signing of third-round pick Lance Mehl, a linebacker from Penn. State; sixth-round pick George Visger of Colorado and Tom Schremp of Wisconsin, both defensive linemen; and ninth-round choice Joe Peters, a defensive end from Arizona State.

Overrun report due

MONTREAL (UPI) — The long-awaited report on a three-year inquiry into the $2 billion cost overrun on the 1976 Olympic Games will be given to the Quebec government Friday, but probably will not be made public until next week.

"My report will be given to the Quebec cabinet (Friday) and I expect they will study it over the weekend," said Quebec Superior Court Justice Albert Malouf, who headed the 34-month, $3.4 million commission.

Cuban defects

SAN JUAN, P.R. (UPI) — The head coach of Cuba's national swimming team has asked for political asylum in the United States after a sports meet in Puerto Rico because he says he became convinced through his travels around the world that Cuba's Communist system of government "isn't the best."

A spokesman for the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service in San Juan said Eulogio Antonio Alberto, 29, also said in his application for political asylum that he wants to work where he wants and not where he is told to go by the Cuban government.

"He said life in Cuba was too regimented," the immigration official quoted Alberto as saying.

North's two-club opening was forcing in the Acol system. They were playing John's two-heart response was possible so after asking for diamonds North bid seven diamonds. The game was rubber bridge and he wanted to score his honors. West made an injudicious double. He was 99 percent sure to set diamonds, but he might not be able to beat seven notrump.

When it got back to Collins he rescued seven hearts. North left it in even after East doubled. He knew that if he bid 7NT he would have a chance, but John did take full advantage of East's naivete.

East started out by ruffing the first diamond. John overruled, led a spade to dummy and played another high diamond. East ruffed again. John overruled, went back to dummy and played another diamond. East ruffed with the 10. John overruled, played his ace of trumps to drop the king and queen and made the 10. John's absurd grand slam contract.

By Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag

Here is another hand from England. South was John Collins, one of the world's best dummy players.

East started out by ruffing the first diamond. John overruled, led a spade to dummy and played another high diamond. East ruffed again. John overruled, went back to dummy and played another diamond. East ruffed with the 10. John overruled, played his ace of trumps to drop the king and queen and made the 10. John's absurd grand slam contract.

Park concerts, show slated

TWIN FALLS — The summer season of concerts and shows in City Park is in the making.

The Twin Falls City Band begins its 75th season of weekly concerts in Park June 5 at 8:15 p.m. The band is one of the few remaining city bands in the country.

According to Ted Hadlev, music director and conductor, the first two concerts will observe Twin Falls' 75th anniversary by contrasting what city bands used to play and modern pieces. Thursday's concert will feature a light overture of Rodgers and Hart, Sousa marches and contemporary music.

The Dilettante's annual Fourth of July revue will be directed by Terry Rowe. Auditions will be held Monday at 7 p.m. at the Presbyterian Church. The public is invited.

Park concerts, show slated

TWIN FALLS — The summer season of concerts and shows in City Park is in the making.

The Twin Falls City Band begins its 75th season of weekly concerts in the park June 5 at 8:15 p.m. The band is one of the few remaining city bands in the country.

According to Ted Hadley, music director and conductor, the first two concerts will observe Twin Falls' 75th anniversary by contrasting what city bands used to play and modern pieces. Thursday's concert will feature a light overture of Rodgers and Hart, Sousa marches and contemporary music.

The Dilettante's annual Fourth of July revue will be directed by Terry Rowe. Auditions will be held Monday at 7 p.m. at the Presbyterian Church. The public is invited.

Real-life married, the Lesleys' on-stage marriage is a true switch in

Director Ed Britt: actor trainer.

Company One's 'Barefoot'

By STEPHANIE SCHOROW
Times news writer

TWIN FALLS—The couple in an upcoming production of "Barefoot in the Park" will act out their anger and live their affection.

The roles of Paul and Corie Bratter, a pair married for six days, will be portrayed by Curt and Jenny Lesley, a couple married for seven years.

In Company One's last play of the season, a lively comedy by Neil Simon ("The Goodbye Girl," "Chapter Two"), an impulsive butterfly and a slick-in-the mud discover how to live with each other, according to director Ed Britt.

"Everybody needs to find common ground. Corie and Paul have been married six days; they've never found common ground before," Britt said. "They have to search for it. Corie learns she can't be crazy all the time, and Paul learns not to be straight all the time."

The play was transformed to the screen some years ago with Robert Redford and Jane Fonda starring in the lead roles.

At a recent run-through, Jenny, with her straight blonde locks held neatly with a clip, and Curt, with his frizzy mane, looked like they should swap roles.

Curt, for example, is a "natural comedian" and he will be playing a fairly straight-forward role, Britt said. Jenny is playing "a dingbat, to use an Archie Bunker word, and she is not dumb herself."

But director Britt, self-described as an "actor trainer" feels the couple's roles will be "good for them." Moreover, he said they have the right "kind of look" for their characters, which helps make them believable.

Being actually married hasn't hurt, either, especially with the kissing and hugging scenes, which are acted (acted?) with enthusiastic vigor.

The two have also "worked off each other" in another dramatic battle of wits: as Kate and Petrucio in Shakespeare's "Taming of the Shrew," presented at high schools by the company.

The rehearsals have turned into family affairs. The Lesley's four-year-old son and seven-month-old daughter attend, and Nancy Hundley, who plays Corie's long-suffering mother, sometimes takes them along. Times News Twin Falls (radio) 1/1/78

Corie Bratter (Jenny Lesley) expounds through a drunken haze to Victor Velasco (Art Frantz) in 'Barefoot in the Park'

Bob DeLashmuff/Times News

brings her nine-year old daughter. A mild-mannered german shepherd, belonging to Jan Lambert, who plays a telephone repair person, tags along.

The plays also stars Art Frantz as Victor Velasco, the couple's irrepresible neighbor, and Jan Olsen, as a delivery man.

The impromptu audience at rehearsals generally doesn't affect the stage action -- until baby Megan choked on a cookie and the entire cast broke off in the middle of a reading to rush to her aid.

The Lesleys say their marital circumstances enhance their acting. But the conflict expressed so wittily in the play does not extend to their marriage. "Not yet," Jenny said. "I'm still waiting." Occasionally a line from the play creeps into their conversation with friends.

Both have appeared in other Company One productions. Curt has been in "The Haunting of Hill House," "Death of a Salesman," "The Doll's House" and "The Lion in Winter." Jenny has been in Hill House and "Godspell."

They joined the company about three years ago when both of them showed up at an audition. "We expected to be on the stage crew and we wound up in the play," Curt said.

The play, the third and last play of the season, wraps up six years of existence for the company. Although admittedly, Simon is not one of Britt's favorite playwrights, the company decided "it was time to do a Simon."

"Simon is always fun to work with," Britt said.

Especially when one is working with the real thing.

The play will be performed June 5, 6, and 7 at 8 p.m. at the Holiday Inn. Admission is $3.50 or $24.95 per couple for dinner and the show.

Boston Ballet makes first tour in China

By JAN ZEIGLER

BOSTON (UPI) — The city that gave the United States a revolution will also be the first to bring American ballet to China since the Communist takeover in 1949.

The Boston Ballet left on its historic tour Tuesday, performing in Peking, Shanghai and Canton before moving on to Hong Kong, Italy, Rome, France and Algeria.

The Boston troupe will also be the first ballet company from any country to be televised by the Chinese.

"It's exciting," said artistic director Virgil Williams, who founded the ballet in 1964.

The dancers, she said, have been attending lectures, museums, demonstrations and have had a couple sessions with doctors on adjusting to different climates, foods and long travel hours.

Dancer Stephanie Moy, whose parents are from Canton, already knows one Chinese and is studying two more. While on the mainland, she hopes to contact an aunt and a couple of cousins she has never met.

"We're all very up for this," she said.

Credit good advance work for the trip. Board chairman Maryellen Cabot first proposed the idea, two days ago during a visit to China.

The Chinese have viewed several of her company's performances since and according to an embassy spokesman in Washington, decided the Boston company would be suitable for their facilities.

They also thought the company was "young, fresh and versatile," Ms. Williams said.

The Chinese specifically requested Boston's tradition version of Cinderella, which premiered four years ago.

Like the other Boston productions, it uses simple scenery and props because there is little money and space for the lushness found in other company performances.

'Coppelia' to cap it

Patrick Sullivan/Times-News

Swanilda (Gigi Moss) and Franz (Cole Garrison), above, perform the wedding adagio in "Coppelia," the grand finale of Beverly Hackney's Ballet School annual dance recital June 3. Over 100 ballet students will be showcased in various sketches in the recital, to be held at the College of Southern Idaho Fine Arts Auditorium at 8 p.m. "Coppelia" will be a full-scale, but simplified, production. Peg Jardin's 45 tap and jazz dance students will round out the program. Tickets are available from Mrs. Hackney's students. Admission at the door is free.

Cinderella choreographer Ron Cunningham said maybe that also appealed to the Chinese.

"We have to work harder to make things work," he noted.

Despite the simplicity, the preparations still sound mind-boggling. At least 1,000 pounds each of scenery, costumes, and sound systems, theater set-up and supplies had to be shipped. Cos-tures and 600 pairs of shoes are also on their way east.

Special lightweight sets were designed by Lawrence K. Sammons, who said he had to stick to old-fashioned drop rigs because that's the only style Chinese houses can handle.

Other productions the Chinese will see include La Fille Mal Gardée, choreographed by Bruce Wells, Paul Taylor's Aetereo, and Swan Lake. Wells said it is the first time his piece will be exposed in the East.

"It will be seen by more people than any production of La Fille Mal Gardée anywhere," he said.

Violette Verdy, who will join the ballet in September as co-artistic director, will join the tour in China as an observer. Ms. Verdy, currently artistic director of the Paris Opera Ballet, formerly danced with the American Ballet Theatre and the New York City Ballet.

Ms. Williams said the most important thing about the trip is that it makes Boston more a part of the process. It made a call there

"It's not besting somebody else; it's part of the creative process. It's something for America."

Pulitzer Prize in Drama: insultingly not national

By DAN SULLIVAN

LOS ANGELES — I was on the phone in New York, talking with one of the members of this year's Pulitzer Prize drama jury.

What, I asked, were some of the other plays that had been considered before deciding on the winner, Lanford Wilson's "Talley's Lot"?

Well, he said, one strong contender was the play he knew I'd been pulling for — "Children of a Lesser God." Another was the Negro Ensemble Company's "Home." And somebody had mentioned "Bent."

"Other than that," he said apologetically, "I mean — what else was there?"

I would have mentioned six or seven plays I'd seen or read over the year that the panel might have been interested in. But the new plays that seemed to fall within the Pulitzer Prize's general range. (It is supposed to go to "a distinguished play by an American author, preferably to cover the literary and dealing with American life.")

But I saved my breath, for none of these plays met the basic unspoken qualification for the Pulitzer Prize in Drama. They hadn't been produced in New York.

It is the only Pulitzer Prize that isn't a national award, although the nation perceives it as one. The major journalism Pulitzers this year, for instance, went to the Philadelphia Inquirer and the Boston Globe. The Pulitzer in music was for a piece that had its premiere in St. Louis — David Del Tredici's "In Memory of a Summer Day." But when it comes to the drama Pulitzer, if the piece hasn't made it to New York, it is out of the running, at the gate.

Why? Because the Pulitzer Prizes go back to 1917, and in those days the American theater and the New York theater amounted to the same thing — the best of the latter was the best of the former. You get the feeling of the period from Burns Manville's introduction to his first Best Plays volume in 1920:

"The aim has been to cover the theatrical season in New York, the theory being that by doing so we cover at least the physical source of supply of the drama in America. There are, it is true, a number of productions of new plays made each season outside New York...but in nine cases out of 10 they are preliminary showings of plays intended later for the New York market, and, being worthy, they invariably reach New York within a season of their production..."

Broadway offered 150 new plays and musicals that season. By 1927, the number had risen to 200. Clearly, New York was the power plant, the energy center of the American theater. That included the serious theater that the Pulitzers were supposed to recognize. Broadway meant O'Neill, an early winner, as well as the Follies. Since New York was also the seat of the Pulitzers, it was both convenient and equitable to limit the drama competition to what was seen on or off Broadway. Every play of substance eventually would be...

This no longer squares with reality. New York is still the busiest theater town in the country, although the bulk of the new work happens Off Broadway. It is no longer the only theater town in the country. New plays are getting first-class productions and finding appreciative audiences all along the regional theater grid, from the Mark Taper Forum in Los Angeles to the Actors Theater of Louisville where the energy is national. But these plays do not necessarily show up in New York.

Yet the selection process continues exactly as it did in 1917. This is akin to restricting the journalism Pulitzers to articles and editorials published in New York newspapers — not only parochial, but insulting to the profession at large. And the theater profession is starting to protest.

Peter Zeisler, director of Theater Communications Group, representing the regional theaters, calls the Pulitzers "an extension of the Broadway commercial apparatus — they're about hype, not excellence." Arthur Ballet, director of the theater division of the National Endowment for the Arts, calls them "30 years out of synch with reality" and "a closed door to the rest of the nation."

Both recently wrote letters to the Pulitzer office at Columbia University urging a major overhaul of the process. I made a call there myself the other day, to talk with Richard Baker, the Pulitzer administrator.

He informed me that the written stipulation that the winning play be performed in New York was gone from the Pulitzer guidelines, dropped some years back. Regional theater productions therefore were eligible, technically, if any of the three-person drama jury happened to run into anything interesting out of town.

There are many ways the drama Pulitzer could go. What's clear is that it has to forget 1917 and stop making vague noises about logistics. Change is possible and necessary if it wants to become an American award, and not just a local one. If not, it should acknowledge how narrow its margins are.

WTBS children's show debuts June 2

ATLANTA — WTBS will premiere "Super Station Funtime," a two-part entertainment/education package for young people, June 2.

Hosted by Super Station broadcast personality Jerry Homan, the WTBS-produced program will air in two one-hour parts, from 7-8 a.m. and from 3-4 p.m. (EDT). The morning segment will cater primarily to young children and early grade schoolers, while the afternoon show will be geared for youngsters up to junior high school age.

"Super Station Funtime" incorporates a variety of short film features, including the classic "Little Rascals" and "Three Stooges" along with Edgar Kennedy, Leon Errol and an assortment of "Laughs Classics" funnies.

Designed to enlighten as well as entertain, each program will also contain an Encyclopaedia Britannica film for young people, ranging in scope from anthropology to zoology.

Host Jerry Homan will portray an array of comic characters in short bits to entertain, instruct and act as transitions into the diverse elements of the program. Sketches will include "Rudy's Grill," in which Homan plays a German chef who demonstrates easy-to-make snacks, and "Info with Joe," featuring Homan as a garbageman who expounds on timely topics.

Encyclopaedia Britannica films are part of WTBS' new 'Super Station Funtime' show

TV critics horrified

'Dallas' finale on BBC news

By LEONARD DOWNIE JR.

LONDON — The most dramatic story on BBC television's showpiece 9 o'clock news Monday night was not the insurrection in South Korea, the manhunt for the murderer of an aged retired vicar in Southern England or the prison escape of a legendary London gang leader.

Instead, it was the shooting of a Texas oilman who has become Britain's most popular television villain — J.R. Ewing of "Dallas." Staid BBC news televised a replay of the brutal, unsolved crime in the Ewing's penthouse offices in downtown Dallas that about 25 million Britons had watched "live" just minutes earlier. This horrified television critics and upholders of the traditional high standards of BBC news, but delighted millions of this nation's incurable Dallas addicts.

The imported bigger-than-life American soap opera is so popular here that BBC, fighting a ratings war with the rival commercial television network, held back this season's climatic episode for Monday night's spring holiday prime-time viewing, weeks after American television viewers had already witnessed the shooting.

BBC was rewarded with an audience amounting to nearly half the country's population. Pubs, restaurants and highways emptied as "Dallas" fans flocked faithfully to their tellies.

After offering odds on which of J.R.'s enemies had finally decided to do him in, the William III chain of betting parlors (gambling on everything is legal in Britain) had been inundated with small wagers totaling more than a quarter of a million dollars by Tuesday afternoon.

"Dallas fever!" proclaimed Tuesday's banner headline on Britain's largest selling newspaper, the Rupert Murdoch-owned tabloid Sun. With a circulation of nearly four million, it takes the pulse of working-class Britain so accurately that it is the first paper read each morning at 10 Downing Street.

Most of its front and two other pages Tuesday were devoted to the "Dallas" phenomenon, including three stop-action photos of the shooting and an editorial cartoon in which a bedside Ronald Reagan is comforting the fallen fictional oil baron in his hospital room and pleading, "Don't die, J.R., I want you for vice president."

"Who shot J.R.?" Was also a big story in Britain's other three national tabloids. But The Times, the stiff-upper-lipped "noticeboard of the establishment, ignored this social uprising. And the television critic — of the equally high-brow Guardian scolded, "I have a message for BBC news: Dallas is not real."

But the program's extraordinary hold on the British public is measurably real. Its audience grew steadily over the years until it regularly topped 20 million for each episode this spring in a nation of 56 million people. BBC spokesmen said their switchboards were literally overloaded Monday night by callers demanding to know who shot J.R. and when the series would reappear in the fall.

Actor Larry Hagman, who plays J.R., was voted this month the top-drawing male character on British television. He was mobbed by reporters and fans on a recent publicity tour here, during which his white Stetson hat, cowboy boots and gold-plated walking stick became as familiar as Churchill's cigar. Gossip columns have been filled with eccentric details of his jogging, dieting, wearing of disguises and refusal to speak to anyone on Sundays.

Hagman told British reporters from his home in Malibu-Beach, Calif., Monday that "As far as I know the scriptwriters haven't yet decided themselves" who shot J.R. "It's not something I'd bet on," he said.

British bettors have put a lot of money on a "Dallas" character who was supposed to have been killed in a plane crash this season, Dusty Miller, the rich cowboy lover of J.R.'s long-suffering wife, Sue Ellen. He's now the 6-to-4 favorite as J.R.'s assailant, according to bookmakers at William Hill.

J.R.'s jilted mistress, Kristin, and cheated business associate, Vaughn Leland, are next at 4-to-1 odds. Fading fast is Sue Ellen herself, now a 16-to-1 longshot, apparently because she became too obvious a suspect.

'Ben Casey' to make comeback

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — In what may be television first, "Ben Casey," the old medical show starring Vince Edwards, will return to the tube next season (with Edwards in the title role) as a regularly scheduled weekly hour-long drama.

The show originally aired on ABC-TV from 1961 to 1966. Producer Robert Hamner said the all-new series will focus on Dr. Ben Casey 15 years later in his career.

Hamner, who said he will announce a network affiliation soon, purchased rights to "Ben Casey" from Bing Crosby Productions.

Q: Is Al Pacino sorry he starred in "Cruising," that controversial movie about the homosexual underground? — O.P. of Bloomfield, N.J.

A: Al told his good friend, producer-director Norman Jewison, that he's still upset about the reaction to "Cruising," in which he plays a cop hunting for a sadistic killer of homosexuals. Not only did the organized gay movement jump on the movie as exploitive, the critics didn't like it much and, judging by the poor box office, the public wasn't wild about it either. In any event, he is crusting on to other things and is sharpening his craft in a theater workshop in New York.

Q: Wasn't Jimmy Caan's divorce from his second wife a bitter one? And what about custody of their child? — B.R. of Miami.

A: There is no longer anything particularly bitter about the divorce. In fact, Jimmy and model Sheila Ryan are friends now. A while back Sheila filed a $7.5 million suit claiming Jimmy injured her when he struck her during an argument. But later, Jimmy apologized and Sheila dropped the suit. She has custody of their son, Scott, 3, but Jimmy has unlimited visitation rights. The argument and alleged attack happened when Sheila came to Chicago to pick up his father.

Q: We hear Faye Dunaway is giving the gate to her current boyfriend because he wants to get married and she doesn't. Is she that opposed to the institution of marriage? — A.W. of Albany, N.Y.

A: Not by a long shot. Although Faye was married once before, she's apparently ready to try it again. Word is that she and British photographer Terry O'Neill, Faye's longtime boyfriend, are planning a trip to the altar this summer as soon as his divorce comes through. They've already leased a posh townhouse on Manhattan's East Side, and are looking for another house in Connecticut.

OBSCURING WATERGATEERS: Just before G. Gordon Liddy went on the "Good Morning America" TV show, a staffer asked him to autograph a copy of his book "Who Liddy Obligated." Then a few weeks later when John Ehrlichman was on the program, the same staffer asked if Ehrlichman would sign his name just before Liddy's. Ehrlichman obliged with this: "Gordon and I have got to stop meeting in strange places like this!"

Q: What's become of Margaret O'Brien, once Hollywood's most famous child star, and what does she think of today's movie tosy? — D.W. of Bradenton, Fla.

A: Margaret, who achieved enormous fame during the 1940s as a child star, is now 43, married, and has a 3-year-old daughter with as yet no interest in acting. Occasional stage and TV roles keep Margaret busy. She deplores the idea of kids playing sexy parts — specifically referring to Brooke Shields' acting assignments. As for favorite kid actors, Margaret likes 16-year-old Melissa Gilbert of TV's "Little House on the Prairie" and Justin Henry of "Kramer Vs. Kramer."

Q: I love to see Suzanne Somers as Chrissy on "Three's Company" but I can't imagine what she does with a whole nightclub act. Does she sing and dance very well? — K.L. of Akron, Ohio.

A: We caught Suzanne's act recently and can say she attempts both with great spirit and humor. A big part of her nightclub show has Suzanne singing a medley of theme songs from 70s TV shows — not exactly boho material — and even "Antonia the Beautiful." Fortunately, Suzanne also shows off her gorgeous legs, rolls out a screen to show "Three's Company" outtakes and takes questions from the audience. One critic quipped that Suzanne's act is like Chrissy auditioning for "The Gong Show."

DIANA ROSS
... taste of pasta and wine.

Q: Since the breakup of her marriage, Diana Ross has been romantically involved with a number of men. Has she settled down with anyone yet? — B.V. of Chicago.

A: So far, no. Diana has been linked with an interesting range of handsome squires ranging from New York TV personality Bill Boggs to Ryan O'Neal. Diana seems to be in a continental mood of late. She says she has a new Italian boyfriend, who's given her a taste for pasta and red wine, but so far she's keeping the romance very private.

Q: How's Susan Anton's romance going with actor Dudley Moore? — L.C. of Nashville.

A: Just fine, as far as we can tell. Dudley accompanies Susan on his nightclub and concert tours and she takes special pains to introduce him whenever possible during her song-and-dance act. It's an unusual match — Dudley's so short and Susan's so tall. But they are definitely an item. Dudley, by the way, is making a movie called "Arthur" with Uta Minnell.

Q: Is Farrah Fawcett's movie career just about over since her previous films bombed at the box office? — N.T. of San Jose, Calif.

A: Although her first three movies — "Somebody Killed Her Husband," "Sunburn," and "Saturn 3" — were box office losers, don't count Farrah out yet. She'll costar with Burt Reynolds and Roger Moore in a big new flick, "Cannonball." The picture looks like a biggie, and maybe it will — provide Farrah's sagging screen-career a much-needed boost.

Q: You said awhile back that Ringo Starr felt he was going to be another Charlie Chaplin. How could anybody be so pompous? — F.S. of Kansas City, Mo.

A: Ringo has been making this point for some time. His latest attempt to prove it will be in the film "The Caveman," a comedy about an early man named Atok. He accidently discovers the wheel, fire, and of course, music and how to cook. Atok also stumps the odds to the secret of walking upright.

Q: Didn't Robert Wolders, Merle Oberon's widower, make quite a killing by selling off her effects in a Christie's auction in New York? — A.C. of Valley Stream, N.Y.

A: Some two-and-a-half million dollars worth of Merle's fabulous jewels were sold off at Christie's recently. But Wolders won't receive a penny of the proceeds. Under terms of Merle's will, the money goes into trust for her two grown children, and to various charities.

Q: I'm told that whenever Steve McQueen is depressed about his career or marriage, he grows a beard. Is he wearing one now? — B.W. of Seattle.

A: It so happens that Steve did grow a beard recently on his honeymoon cruise to Mexico with his new wife, Barbara. But Steve went hirsute because he finds a beard an excellent disguise for throwing off pesty photographers and autograph hounds. During his marriage to Ali MacGraw, Steve turned into something of a recluse and did grow a very long beard. But this time, the growth is shorter and quite trim, signalling happier times.

Q: Can you tell us if Burt Reynolds and Sally Field are still together or have they finally broken up? — L.L. of Nashville.

A: That romance is definitely over. Friends say Sally finally put it to Burt on the marriage question — either fish or cut bait. But they also think the main problem was that Oscarless Burt couldn't deal with Sally's winning the coveted award. She's busy on her latest movie opposite Tommy Lee Jones, "Back Roads." Jones is in "Coal Miner's Daughter."

Q: I've heard a that Barbara Streisand, though a millionaire, is notoriously tight with a buck. True? — J.V. of Los Angeles.

A: Not if a recent shopping expedition in Manhattan is any indication. The gifted superstar sauntered into an expensive Manhattan boutique and with little difficulty chose several sets of luxurious matched luggage. Without batting an eyelash, Barbara graciously paid to the tune of four figures.

Q: We loved John Travolta and Olivia Newton-John in the movie "Grease." Will they be reteamed in a sequel? — F.W. of Phoenix.

A: Since "Grease" was opposed to be one of the top-grossing films in movie history, a "Son of Grease"-type sequel is all but certain. Word is that the follow-up will star Andy Gibb, and will take place in the 1960s (as opposed to the 50s setting of the original) and John and Olivia will reappear. But don't get your hopes too high since they'll show up in brief, cameo roles. Other stars in the sequel include Martin Mull, Jane Curtin and Robert Klein.

Q: A while ago you told us that Maria Shriver, Sargent Shriver's daughter, was going out with movie musclemann Arnold Schwarzenegger. Are they still seeing each other? — Y.M. of Lansing, Mich.

A: They are still very much together, to the chagrin of her father, who wasn't all that high on the Austrian-born musclemann in the first place. Maria was spotted at a recent fundraiser for a favorite Kennedy family charity — the Olympics for Special People, a physical fitness program for the retarded — very much on the bulging arm of Arnold. Shriver, by the way, is Ted Kennedy's brother-in-law. He was the first director of the Peace Corp back in 1963.

Q: Didn't Bing Crosby have a son by his second wife Kathryn Grant Crosby? Do you know anything about him? — J.F. of Santa Fe, N.M.

A: Bing's 21-year-old son, Harry Lillis Crosby, has been trying hard to break into acting and it looks like he's going to make it. He just made his big screen debut in "Friday the 13th." A TV pilot he did, "Fony Express," didn't make it to a series and a play, "Little Lives," didn't get off the ground. By the way, "Friday the 13th" is a Paramount film — the same production company that Bing made his first film with. Maybe that's good luck.

Jazz on charts misleading

By LEONARD FEATHER
@The Los Angeles Times

Has jazz reached a dead end, or are we simply watching the wrong signals?

Find a group that calls itself Spyro Gyra at the top of the jazz sales reports, listening to the funk or fusion of David Sanborn or Earl Klugh or Ronnie Laws, all passed off as hot jazz attractions in the marketplace, the pure of heart and loyal of belief may wonder what things are coming to.

The answer becomes clearer, and our faith is renewed, when we observe what is happening not on the charts, but in the accomplishments of musicians and record companies whose sights are set on higher goals. The most encouraging evidence came a hand last week with the release on Contemporary Records of George Cables' debut album as a leader, "Cables' Vision" (1400).

"Cables" came to prominence during his five-year stint (1971-6) as pianist with the Freddie Hubbard combo. During that time he developed a reputation as a composer of such works as "Think Of Me," which he recorded with Woody Shaw, and "Ebony Moonbeams," heard in a Hubbard album. It has been clear for some time that Cables is not one of you-off-the-wall, energy-dominated futurists, but rather an indicator of how jazz can take a logical step into the future.

In his articulate liner notes, Cables tells us that he thinks of himself as a painter with sound, "and as any artist would, I try to see with and communicate through the soul. I get that same feeling from my favorite painter, Salvador Dali. There is more to his paintings than what's on the canvas. You can feel the depth."

Do not expect any Dali-like eccentricities. There is a sense of direction to each of the six works, four of which were written by Cables. He plays piano on all but the opening track, in which his gentle electric keyboard graces the eloquent "Morning Song," "I Told You So," with its light Latin beat, finds Freddie Hubbard at his most expressive, and Ernie Watts playing, tenor in the sensitive, personal style he has no chance to demonstrate as a sideman on the Tonight Show.

Hubbard's "Byrdlike," as its title implies, is a switch back to bebop memories, written by Hubbard. A modal blues at a fast clip with continual moments of discovery, it ends with a brisk exchange between Cables and the drummer Peter Ernoine, best known for his membership in Weather Report.

"Voodoo Lady" finds Cables the composer in a vaguely West Indian groove, with Watts switching to flute to create a light, easy ensemble sound. "The Stroll" is a duo performance, with Cables and Hutcherson in an introspective tour of one another's minds. Finally the full group returns for "Inner Glow," in which Cables' contributions are masterfully interwoven with vibes and horns.

'The Black Stallion': an epic beauty

By RICHARD FREEDMAN
Newhouse News Service

Based on the much-read children's classic by Walter Farley, which with its 16 sequels has sold some 8 million copies in the United States alone, "The Black Stallion" substitutes great visual beauty and high visceral excitement for the nubby-pammy sentimentality usually afflicting movies about a boy and his horse.

The boy, Alex Ramsey, is winningly played by 11-year-old Kelly Reno, whose face sports more freckles than even the brush of the late Norman Rockwell could have coped with. The horse is played by Cass-Ole, a noble Arabian stallion with the temperament of a Toscanini and a rippling, muscular strength that gives new meaning to the word horsepower.

Alec is sailing to his home in America when the ship is struck by a storm off the coast of North Africa, his exasperated gambler father ("Big" "X") is lost in the ensuing wreck, but young Alec manages to scramble ashore a desert island, where he is soon joined by the stallion.

For the next half-hour or so, there are no words. One glorious image after another shows the boy gradually making friends with the seemingly untameable horse against the backdrop of the star-dusted coast of Sardinia, where these remarkable scenes were filmed.

The horse tramples a cobra as it slithers menacingly along the sand toward the sleeping Alec. Horse and boy frolic together in the sea, and ultimately the shy stallion submits to Alec's riding him bareback.

Then they are rescued by some fishermen and brought back to the boy's home in New York City where the now inseparable companions sleep together in the backyard while Alec's mother ("Teri Garr") looks on in resigned astonishment.

Later, Alec is trained by feisty ex-jockey Mickey Rooney to lead the stallion to victory in a match race. It's all a boy's fantasy replete with a rare lack of cuteness. But then, the film's executive producer was Francis Ford Coppola, whose sensibility is as far removed from Disneyland as it's possible to be.

Despite Rooney's riveting performance as a man who lives and breathes horses, the second part of "The Black Stallion" is a bit more conventional than the first, which achieves the kind of epic beauty for which movies were invented. The later scenes in New York (actually Toronto) are rather more idyllic than we can picture the Big Apple as even having been, even back in 1947, when the story takes place.

But when the inspired camera of Caleb Deschanel is allowed to dwell lovingly on boy and horse sporting themselves against the barren, infelicitously beautiful nature of the desert island, "The Black Stallion" reaches rare heights of pure visual poetry. For once, we have a "children's movie" that's a treat for adult eyes.

FILM CLIP: "The Black Stallion." The children's classic about a boy and a horse shipwrecked on a desert island, and then brought home to win a matel race is gorgeously brought to th screen. Kelly Reno as the boy and Mickey Rooney as his trainer are superb in a film that should appeal as much to adults as to children. Rated "G." Three and a half stars.

'Disraeli — Portrait of a Romantic'

One of the greatest and most colorful love stories of all time will be seen when "Disraeli — Portrait of a Romantic" airs on Masterpiece Theatre on PBS beginning Sunday at 9 p.m. Ian McEwan (pictured) stars in the four-part series on the astonishing public and private life of the personally grandiose pursuit of power. Aligned when he became Britain's Prime Minister and Queen Victoria's confidant, Mary Peach plays the widow he fell in love with — after he married her for her money. Focusing more on Disraeli, the man, than on Disraeli, the controversial politician who became Britain's first Jewish Prime Minister, the series reveals his early years as a handsome, outrageously attired novelist, a spendthrift who delighted in the company of beautiful women and also thirsted for power. When he died in 1881, — Queen Victoria personally laid flowers at his tomb.

Filed in part at Disraeli's estate in Hughenden, now a National Trust landmark, and at his parents' home, the Mobil-funded series was written by David Butler.
