

President Carter vetoed the debt ceiling bill which contained a prohibition on his oil fee surcharge.

House overrides veto of oil fee prohibition

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter Thursday vetoed legislation that would kill his 10-cent-a-gallon gasoline fee, and appealed to Congress not to encourage energy consumption in America by reversing his action. The House promptly voted 335-84 to override the veto — 89 votes more than required. The veto message now goes to the Senate, where a vote was scheduled for noon Friday.

If at least two-thirds of the senators present vote to override the veto, the dime-a-gallon gasoline fee imposed by Carter last March will be dead.

Cheering broke out on the House floor when Carter's veto message arrived. The dispute began in March when Carter imposed a 10-cent-a-gallon fee on imported oil, helping oil companies pass the fee along to consumers by raising gasoline pump prices 10 cents a gallon. A federal court later blocked imposition of the dime price increase.

Carter said that "it doesn't help for public officials to stand up and make speeches about conserving energy and controlling inflation and controlling unemployment, unless they are willing to face the political heat when the time comes to make a tough decision for the benefit of this country."

"I believed it was the right decision when I made it and I believe it is the right decision now," he said. He called the measure "good public policy" and a "common sense" way to cut foreign oil imports and domestic energy consumption, and a vital part of his anti-inflation package.

The House remained in session Thursday afternoon, so it was prepared to take an immediate override vote. The Senate was not expected to vote until today afternoon.

If Congress does override Carter's veto, it will be the first time a Democratic Congress has done so since Democrat President since 1952, when Congress overrode Harry Truman's veto of the McCarran-Walter Immigration and Nationality Act.

Asked how he would react to a congressional override, Carter replied he would withhold comment until "I have to face that decision."

The gasoline fee never has gone into effect at the pump because a U.S. district judge last month ruled it unconstitutional. Congress, not wishing to take any chances, voted to kill it while the administration's appeal was pending.

The House, by a voice vote, completed final congressional action Thursday afternoon on the measure — swiftly approving a Senate decision to link the gas fee legislation to the public debt ceiling — and sent it to Carter's desk.

It appears there will be no immediate cash crisis from the veto of the debt ceiling, although the Treasury Department immediately canceled the sale of all treasury notes. Congressional sources said Treasury Secretary G. William Miller told them financial problems would not develop until next Tuesday at the earliest.

Opponents of the gas fee said the wide margins of approval Wednesday — 376-90 in the House and 73-16 in the Senate — show Congress could do so in this case.

But Senate Republicans were having second thoughts on the issue, according to assistant GOP leader Ted Stevens of Alaska.

Stevens said Sen. Henry Bellmon, R-Okla., who voted against killing the fee, was making "a good case" for upholding Carter's veto on grounds an anticipated $10.3 billion in revenue from the fee could be used to lower other taxes.

Stevens said Bellmon was "a bellwether" of GOP thinking on the budget, because he is the senior Republican on the Senate Budget Committee and his views thus would get close attention.

The Republican whip also said senators who were absent when the Senate voted to repeal the gasoline fee would be "a factor" in whether the 34 votes needed to sustain Carter's veto can be mustered.

Committee OKs 'Wilderness' compromise

WASHINGTON — A House-Senate conference committee Thursday approved a compromise Idaho River of No Return wilderness bill which includes a special access provision to allow coal mining in the West Panther Creek region. The agreement, which has been chastized by Republicans, was the product of backroom negotiations last week by key Democrats, including Rep. Morris K. Udall, D-Ariz., the chairman of the House Interior Committee, Rep. James Santini, D-Nev., the chairman of the Interior subcommittee on mines, and Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho. The West Panther Creek proposal will establish a 39,000-acre special mining management zone within the River of No Return wilderness.

Overall, the wilderness area will include about 2.2 million acres and will be the largest in the lower 48 states. In a statement issued after the conference, Church said he was "delighted" with the outcome. "The final bill meets every one of my major objectives and creates not only the finest wilderness area in the American West, but puts to rest a smoldering controversy that has raged for years," he said. "Generations to come will view this as the crown jewel of the American wilderness system."

Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho, and Rep. Steve Symms, R-Idaho, have both indicated they will not sign the conference committee report. At this point, it is merely a public act of protest, since the House and Senate are both expected to pass the agreements reached in the conference when the bill comes to a vote later in June. It will take staff about two weeks to get the paperwork on the bill together so that it can be presented for those votes in the House and the Senate. The agreement over the West Panther Creek provision came after a new round of legislative maneuvering between the House and Senate. The size of the West Panther Creek area.

The House legislation contained a map-reference error that eventually was solved by including 63,396 acres in the area. But in the conference today, only 29,000 of those acres were included in the special management zone and the rest was designated wilderness. The "special mining management zone" that the conferees agreed to.

School budget

Proposed general fund revenue will top $7.5 million for 1980-81

By LARRY SWISHER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls School District general fund budget will top $7.5 million in 1980-81, if projected revenues materialize. The budget, as prepared by the administrator, is to be presented in a public hearing before the school board Tuesday night at 8 p.m. in the administration building, 201 Main Ave. W.

Following the hearing, the board will adopt the budget with changes or modifications, if any. The budget is available to the public at the administrative offices.

Superintendent James Sawin stressed the budget "is not an actuality, but an educated projection based on what we think is going to happen next year."

The big factor in determining the amount of money available will be the number of students.

Estimated state funding, which is figured largely according to student enrollment, provides about 70 percent of the district's general fund revenue in the proposed budget. Local property taxes provide slightly less than 16 percent.

Sawin said basically the same enrollment as this spring, about 6,400 students, is projected for next school year.

Public hearing set Tuesday at 8 p.m. at 201 Main Ave. W.

The proposed budget for 1980-81 estimates total general fund revenue and carry-over at $7,588,000, compared to $6,394,000 in the budget for 1979-80.

The new budget includes the 4 percent increase in local property tax revenues allowed under this year's 1 percent law. The district's property tax revenues have been frozen for two years under the 1 percent at $1,153,932.

"The 4 percent is in there," Sawin said. "I don't know whether we're going to get it or not and won't know until next fall."

Under the law, local governments in areas where property taxes are below 1 percent of market value will be allowed to increase revenues up to 4 percent. Whether Twin Falls fits that category won't be determined finally by the State Tax Commission until the fall.

If the revenue is not there, we will cut back in certain parts of the budget," Sawin said. The 4 percent growth factor would provide about $46,000.

The budget includes new staff for the 10 classrooms under construction at the district's five elementary schools. Ten elementary teachers will be hired, increasing the number of certified personnel to about 912. Also the equivalent of 1½ custodians will be added to take care of the new additions.

Spending plans in various categories were prepared on the basis of a number of factors, including needs in each department and school, the teacher contract settlement and total spending categories.

Here are some budget highlights:

- Teachers' salaries: Spending in this category is projected to increase 13.25 percent over the budget for this past year, from $3,595,400 to $4,072,240.
- Teaching supplies: This relatively small budget category was an item of negotiations between teachers and the district in this spring's contract bargaining. The new budget calls for a 25 percent increase in spending over 1979-80, up to $246,800.
- Transportation: Busing of students will cost the district about 37 percent more next school year, $387,330 compared to $277,000 this past school year, according to projections.
- Administration: The increase here is about 14 percent, from $203,000 to $231,756.

- Textbooks: Planned spending for textbooks increases from $81,150 to $83,895.
- Building maintenance and operation: A large increase of almost 38 percent brings planned spending from $74,900 to $1,019,500. Superintendent Sawin said the district cannot any longer put off certain projects in this area, which it has been unable to take care of for two years under "very stringent" budget conditions. This includes work on heating systems.
- Capital outlay: Spending in this category will rise in order to equip the 10 new classrooms being added to the district's five elementary schools. The budgeted amount is $147,800 compared to $58,200 this past year.
- Plant facility fund: Thanks to increased property valuation, revenue from a 2-mill, 10-year special levy will go from $105,000 in 1979-80 to $254,000 in 1980-81. An example of the uses of this money are the new elementary classrooms. This fund and the following one are separate from the district's general fund.
- Bond redemption and interest fund: At $635,800, expenditures remain about the same for paying interest and redeeming bonds issued to construct the new O'Leary Junior High School.

Defense cost estimate may keep MX in Utah, Nevada

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Pentagon estimates it would cost an extra $3 billion to base the controversial MX missile system in New Mexico and Texas as well as Utah and Nevada, a senior defense official said Thursday.

For less money, the United States could alleviate the impact of the strategic missile system on local communities in Utah and Nevada where the Pentagon prefers to base the missile system.

Considerable political opposition has developed in the two southwest states to being the sole sites for the vast movable missile bases.

Defense Secretary Harold Brown met Thursday behind closed doors with members of the Senate Armed Services Committee to discuss the $2 billion MX system and other strategic programs.

Meanwhile, another defense official told reporters the Pentagon continues to favor basing the MX solely in Utah and Nevada on federal property. The Pentagon has ordered a study on "split-basing" which is expected to be completed by July.

In advance of its completion, high defense officials caution that spreading the MX system into the two other states would have negative ramifications.

"Possibly as many as 10,000 residents of Texas and New Mexico would have to be relocated.

"Texas and New Mexico land is more productive than an agricultural standpoint than sites in Utah and Nevada. The federal government is reluctant to take this land out of production.

"The Pentagon would have to buy additional command and control aircraft if the system spreads over a four-state area. The MX system, like the Minuteman missile system, may be fired by a command aircraft which is constantly in the air.

The estimated price tag involved in these adjustments would amount to about $3 billion, defense experts estimate.

They argue it would cost significantly less to ease the impact of MX in Nevada and Utah.

The Pentagon is banking on the hope that Congress will agree eventually with this argument.

There are fears in the defense establishment that if the Pentagon is forced to proceed with "split-basing" the administration's political problem will only be enlarged because two more states will be involved.

That, in turn, could adversely affect the deployment of the first MX missiles — currently projected for 1988 — and only prolong the "window of vulnerability" which the United States faces from Russia.

Kennedy vows to continue the fight

Ford offers full support to Reagan

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Edward Kennedy, after meeting with President Carter for more than an hour, said Thursday he will continue his quest for the Democratic presidential nomination.

"I have every intention of continuing in this campaign as a candidate and to continue to press the issues," Kennedy told reporters outside the White House.

Kennedy said he still expects to be the Democratic nominee.

"I'm planning to be the nominee," he said, and when asked if he had a prayer of beating Carter, he said "yes, more than a prayer."

Kennedy apparently urged Carter three times to debate him publicly, but when asked Carter's response, he said the dialogue "appears unlikely."

Kennedy indicated he would continue his fight for the nomination on the floor of the Democratic National Convention in New York in August; and also indicated he would fight for his positions in both the convention's rules and platform committees.

Carter named Richard Moe, Vice President Walter Mondale's chief of staff, and Kennedy named Paul Kirk, one of his top aides, to keep communications open between the two camps — especially on convention platform and rules issues.

RANCHO MIRAGE, Calif. (UPI) — Gerald Ford promised Thursday — after a strategy meeting with his bitter rival of four years ago — to "wholeheartedly campaign" for Ronald Reagan in the presidential race this fall.

"I am firmly convinced Governor Reagan can be elected," Ford told reporters following a 90-minute meeting with Reagan at his desert resort home.

He said he would help any way Reagan thinks is "essential," but neither man said what that would involve.

"Ron Reagan and I have had a very, very constructive meeting," Ford said on the 13th green of the Thunderbird Country Club golf course, "and we anticipate that it will be the first of many in the weeks and months ahead."

"Our relationship is vitally important for me to wholeheartedly campaign on his behalf. I feel very strongly that we have to make a change in the White House."

"I am honored and delighted," said Reagan. "It's going to be of the utmost help to me to have the counsel and advice of the former president during my presidential campaign."

Reagan did not ask Ford to be his running mate.

Computer error said Soviets fired their ICBMs

WASHINGTON (UPI) — For the second time in seven months, a computer at the nation's missile warning center Tuesday erroneously put U.S. strategic forces on alert against a Soviet missile attack on the United States, the Pentagon disclosed Thursday.

The error was caught within three minutes and neither President Carter nor Defense Secretary Harold Brown were informed, although the White House Situation Room was aware of the false alarm.

On Nov. 9, 1979 a test tape was accidentally fed into a computer at North American Aerospace Defense headquarters in Colorado Springs, Colo., which simulated a Soviet missile attack.

That error also was detected in a matter of minutes.

The latest false alarm indicated an attack on the United States by submarine-launched rockets, officials said.

In the latest incident, Pentagon spokesmen said the Ross said crews of some B-52 strategic bombers and some FB-111 bombers were alerted while U.S. strategic missile crews were put on a higher state of alert.

"They were sent out and ordered into their planes," Ross said. "They did proceed to turn over engines."

None of those planes was launched before the order to stand down came through.

At Hawaii, an unarmed E-3 command post aircraft took off.

The United States maintains one command post aircraft, called The Looking Glass Plane, flying over the central United States 24 hours a day ready to launch U.S. strategic missiles if ground control is destroyed.

The United States maintains three satellites in stationary orbits at an altitude of 22,000 miles which detect, with infrared sensors, the hot exhaust plumes of rockets launched by the Soviet Union.

In this case, these and other complementary sensors apparently did not confirm the false alarm generated by the computer at NORAD's missile warning center.

The Pentagon spokesman acknowledged the United States was concerned with the error and was investigating it thoroughly.

He also emphasized that U.S. strategic warning officers — quickly spotted the mistake.

"The system is designed to make sure our retaliatory forces cannot be tripped on the ground and to make sure they cannot be launched without cause," Ross said.

"In that sense, the system worked

Wilderness bill supports Church

Wednesday allows prospecting and exploration for cobalt and its associated minerals as a "dominant use of the land."

The agreement favors the position supported by Udall and Church, to the extent that the area remained wilderness with cobalt mining allowed, rather than open for multiple purposes, with cobalt and wilderness as dual purposes.

It was a plan challenged by Symms, who again attempted to alter the agreement, but was defeated by the Democratic majority.

Symms wanted the area left out of wilderness and managed by the U.S. Forest Service as multiple-use land, "there could be no confusion about the rights of mining companies to operate in the area."

"I realize that this is not the best of all worlds," agreed Santini, "and the gentleman from Idaho (Symms) knows I would have desired a proposal similar to his."

Santini indicated that the necessity of the conferees to compromise their position, to meet the goal of making federal cobalt strikes in the West Panther Creek region accessible, required the agreement.

"The land managers will start making it more difficult for miners, and it will be back to square one," Symms said, categorizing the proposal under consideration as one which left "too much" to the discretion of the government officials.

The conferees agreed on a series of other differences between the House and Senate versions of the legislation, which resulted in an increase of 45,000 acres of wilderness and a decrease of 44,000 acres.

The conferees declared it a "wash" and accepted the compromises, including a trade off of wilderness areas, including 33,000 acres at Elk Creek (in the southeast section of the proposed wilderness area in the Sulphur Creek drainage) and excluding 40,000 acres at Little Jacket-Forge Creek and Furnace Creek-Castle Creek (in the southwest section of the wilderness area in the Camas creek watershed).

The members of the conference appeared to agree that most of the potential cobalt was outside the perimeter of the wilderness area and therefore unaffected by the proposals.

"The important thing here is to make sure that this wilderness area is explorible in the future, if we find the material and the need," said McClure.

Udall said that some of the questions raised by the minority, Symms and McClure, especially were moot because there is "just a chance that there is cobalt there."

UN orders Israel to pay
UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — The U.N. Security Council Thursday adopted a resolution calling on Israel to compensate the victims of recent anti-Palestinian violence in the West Bank.

The United States abstained in the vote, which was 14-0 in favor of the resolution.

Israeli Ambassador Yehuda B. Blum said the council's professional concern "would be more credible, had it not been for the 110 murders and attempted assassinations of Arabs not cooperating with them."

He noted Israel had condemned the West Bank violence and added the Jewish state had been in forefront in the fight against international terrorism.

Arab delegates stressed that Israel's occupation of Arab lands had been the root cause of the unrest in the area.

The resolution adopted by the Council was more moderate than a previous one drafted Tuesday that called for sanctions against Israel.

The Arabs also omitted reference to Israel's "illegal" occupation of Jerusalem, which would have been unacceptable to the Carter Administration.

Sadat threatens war
CAIRO, Egypt (UPI) — President Anwar Sadat warned Thursday Egypt would go to war against Ethiopia if it does anything to obstruct the flow of waters from the Nile River to Egypt.

Sadat spoke hours after publication of a newspaper interview in which Egypt's army chief of staff said the danger of Soviet-backed aggression was "knocking on our doors" from Ethiopia in the south and Libya in the west.

"If Ethiopia takes any action to block our right to the Nile waters, there will be no alternative for us but to use force," he said.

His reply was to what he called a "Soviet-inspired" memorandum the Ethiopian Marxist state sent to the Organization of African Unity recently charging Egypt with blocking the water share by diverting it to Sinai. The Ethiopian charge implied Egypt would give some of the water to Israel, a charge categorically denied by Egypt.

Croatians bombed statue
NEW YORK (UPI) — Croation terrorists, who claimed responsibility for bombing a diplomat's home in Washington this week, also apparently were to blame for the Statue of Liberty bombing the same day, investigators said Thursday.

The Croation and Tito extremists who demand independence from Yugoslavia, sent letters to the New York Times and NBC News claiming the bombing.

Evidence gathered at the museum showed that the bombing there fit a pattern set in other attacks by the Croations, an FBI agent said.

"The letter indicates that the Statue of Liberty was chosen to draw attention to the political and economic rights of the Croation people."

No one was hurt in either the Washington or the New York explosion, but authorities say at least 50 people have been killed during Croation acts of terrorism around the world since 1972.

Potts may not be executed

Friday, June 6, 1980 Times-News, Twin Falls, Idaho A-3

ATLANTA (UPI) — An attorney for Jack Potts, the condemned killer who waited until the final hours before agreeing to an appeal that spared him from the electric chair, said Thursday the dramatic maneuvering "wasn't a con."
 "He was terrified yesterday and we were terrified yesterday," said Joe Nursey, a member of the anti-death penalty Defense project. "I've been talking to Jack Potts for 2 1/2 months and I can tell you it wasn't a con."
 Nursey said now that Potts had decided to fight his case, he need not fear being put to death.
 "There are substantial errors in the case," said Nursey, referring to Potts' 1975 conviction for the kidnap-slaying of Michael Priest, a young auto mechanic who begged Potts for his life.

 "We are going to get this case reversed. Jack Potts will never die in the electric chair."
 Potts had only about 15 hours to live when he relented Wednesday and told his attorneys to go ahead and file an appeal. Previously, he said he had no desire to continue life behind bars.
 A statement approved by Potts and attached to the application for appeal said the condemned man discovered he could "use" the media attention he drew when he shunned the appeals route. The statement said it was part of Potts' campaign to improve prison living conditions.

Politicians only want re-elected

That guttural sound coming out of the East is the U.S. Congress beating its breast over the killing of President Carter's oil-import fee.

Both the House and the Senate have effectively defeated the measure, so much so there are enough votes to override a presidential veto, which the miffed president dutifully cast Thursday.

Underneath all that bleating is the simple fact the U.S. remains without an effective energy policy. And in this election year, the politicians are more interested in being re-elected than they are in coming up with an answer to the problem.

The only thing for certain at the moment is that Carter's planned 10-cent-a-gallon surcharge on gasoline will not become a reality. But during the debate on the oil fee, several oil-producing nations announced another round of price hikes. Furthermore, Saudi Arabia is considering upping its per barrel cost again in an attempt to prevent even steeper hikes by the world cartel.

The fact is American motorists are going to be paying more per gallon, the U.S. Congress to the contrary.

Try looking at the energy situation from a foreign point of view. How can we expect Allied support when the president, already beleaguered on practically every foreign and domestic front, loses another battle with his own Congress? We expect to be viewed as a leader, yet that leadership is woefully lacking.

Carter announced his import fee intentions March 14—Nearly three months later the program is killed—once can never charge the Congress with jumping to conclusions or acting hastily. The result is more time spent on the politics of the situation rather than the realities.

No wonder so many primary election voters opted for "none of the above."

Ideology retrospective

© The Boston Globe Newspaper Co. Washington Post Writers Group BOSTON—It is 17 years now since I graduated from college.

Seventeen, I know, is an awkward age for retrospectives: We are only supposed to look back at our lives by decades and go through rituals of remembrance by fives.

But this week, I want to step out of place and back in time. You see, one of my younger "sisters," Diana Shaw, spoke at the Harvard commencement. There, she criticized her elders for adopting male values and pursuing male success.

"Contemporary feminism," she said, "has taught us to reject the values conventionally associated with our sex. She went on to add that, 'We are expected to pursue the male standards of success, while remaining 'feminine' according to male standards.'" be the first generation of superwomen.

Well, by our fifth reunion, our tenth reunion, surely by our fifteenth, the class of 1963 began to see how conservative that "radical" idea was. We had been urged to change ourselves, but not very much else. We had moved out beyond the old strictures of the "female" world to a wider one, but we hadn't changed that world very much.

The half-formed "feminism" of the early sixties had, in fact, taught us that if we wanted to have it all, we would have to do it all by ourselves. It taught us to find "fulfillment" and single sex in name and living arrangements. Hers is virtually integrated, or is it absorbed?

You see, in Cambridge, too, women have given up something exclusively their own, to gain places and privileges which were largely male. But in Cambridge, too, women have adjusted to the institution more than they have altered it. There are more undergraduate women on campus now, but they are Harvard women.

Perhaps that is the way it always is with the "new" people.

It has proved simpler—though not simple, Lord knows—for women to begin traveling traditional routes than change those routes. It is simpler to dress for success than to change the definition of success.

In the years between our graduations from the same campus, our alma mater exchanged its name in return for promises of equality. I am a Radcliffe graduate; Shaw is a Harvard woman. The name Radcliffe lingers on now like an appendix.

My college was coed in class and single sex in name and living arrangements. Hers is virtually integrated, or is it absorbed?

But in Cambridge, too, women have adjusted to the institution more than they have altered it. There are more undergraduate women on campus now, but they are Harvard women.

It all sounded oddly familiar, at least to this elder, seventeen-year-old I was at this campus when the women still had a separate college called Radcliffe. When we were undergraduates, my classmates and I were told that we were in the vanguard of women.

Our new college president, Mary Bunting, had great expectations of us. We were the women who would—in fact, should—have dazzling careers and brilliant, satisfied husbands and remarkable, well-adjusted children.

To state that this was elitist is to underestimate it. But we were assigned by virtue of our diplomas to a place at the cutting edge of change. We were to

Through the 1970s we argued about what kind of equality we wanted. Did we want equal access to the same system or the power to change it? Can you only change the system by becoming a part of it? Once you are in, does it change you instead?

I discovered that it is easier to fit in than to re-structure. When the "higher" one, the one with the most tangible rewards, it is easier for women to reach "up" than to convince men of the virtues of simultaneously reaching "down."

We need all the choices we can get

The latest looney tune news coming out of Campaign 1980 is that the Democratic National Committee will make a major effort to keep independent candidate John Anderson off the ballot.

No dollar figure has been confirmed, but the Democrats evidently will spend as much as they think necessary to negate Anderson in as many states as possible. Now, isn't that a positive development in American politics?

The whole thing's one big contradiction: The White House poo-poo's Anderson's chances on one hand while the party will push to cut him off at the pass.

The Democrats are going to have enough trouble re-selling Jimmy Carter to the American people. Let alone stopping John Anderson.

In this election, we need all the choices we can get.

Will FTC get message?

© Universal Press Syndicate WASHINGTON—After 13 months of bills, amendments, hearings, backroom deals and roll call votes, Congress last month approved a new three-year lease on life for the Federal Trade Commission.

The act is intended to send a message to the FTC to mend its ways. My guess is that the message will be largely ignored.

No other agency of the federal government has demonstrated in recent years the sheer, unbridled arrogance of the Federal Trade Commission. Time after time, the FTC's bureaucrats have launched blunderbuss attacks upon various industries, subjecting their victims to monstrous costs in time and money.

Often these attacks have been inflated by malice and tainted by prejudice.

Examples: On the basis of a mere handful of complaints, an FTC report eventually would condemn the commission proposed a sweeping Trade Rule Regulation for the funeral industry. From the outset, the proceeding reflected the malicious animus of one super-bureaucrat.

Without even formulating a proposed rule, the commission threatened to regulate "children's advertising" on TV. The FTC's chairman was so prejudiced in favor of regulation—this was before one word of evidence had been received—that he was compelled to disqualify himself from participating in the case.

In the Great Cereal Case, the FTC contrived a novel theory of "shared monopoly." When the presiding judge retired after a couple of years of fruitless hearings, the commission at once rehired him on a lucrative extra-legal contract. When the defendant-companies bitterly complained at this unprecedented procedure, the contract was rescinded. The proceeding has cost the manufacturers hundreds of thousands of dollars to produce their own patented products.

In another unprecedented action, the commission set out to revoke the trademark "Formica," on the untested notion that the FTC had some inherent power to seize private property in this fashion.

In St. Paul and Minneapolis, the commission launched a fishing expedition against several Health Maintenance Organizations (HMO). One demand alone called upon a small HMO to produce 2,700 different documents. Congressman Bill Frenchman, who presides over the proceedings, treated "like some kind of criminals."

In Columbus, Ohio, heedless of possible consequences, the FTC intervened to prevent the sale of the troubled Federal Glass of Columbus company. The intervention was intended to preserve competition. It had precisely the opposite result. Federal Glass went out of business and 1,500 persons lost their jobs.

The FTC has flittered away its resources in attacks on petty targets—the health-spa industry, for one example. Repeatedly, the FTC has invaded areas of state responsibility, the regulation of insurance, for one example. With a staff of nearly 1,700 persons and an annual budget of $71 million, the commission has become, in French's phrase, "a rogue agency run amok." The authorization bill just enacted would restrain the FTC with fetters of straw. Under this act the harassment of funeral homes will continue. Proceedings on children's television are not blocked, but merely briefly suspended.

The act requires new analysis of the costs and benefits of proposed regulations, but the provision is vain; any low-grade bureaucrat worth half his pay will be able to magnify speculative benefits and to diminish probable costs. The act does nothing to halt the maddening practice by which the FTC hires friendly witnesses to prepare evidence in support of its own resolutions. Indeed, by fixing a ceiling of $50,000 in payment to any one such witness in a year, the act may have fixed a costly logjam.

True, the act does provide for a legislative veto. If both houses of Congress disapprove a Trade Rule Regulation within 90 days after the FTC promulgates the TRR, the FTC would have to start over. Let us not hold our breaths until the veto power is successfully invoked: Too many elected lawmakers have abdicated their own legislative responsibility and yielded that power to the FTC instead.

In brief, the FTC has won, and its cost will shake me down. All the Irish ever contributed to this country was municipal corruption. By the way, do you know why Irish wakers last three days?

Why?

Let's redefine refugee label

Editor, Times-News: When a politician from the United States comes from Cuba proclaiming "I found a friend in Fidel Castro," he also claims friendship with Nikita Khrushchev and Leonid Brezhnev.

The man who thinks Russia removed all missiles from that outpost is not naive, but a fool. Today Castro is sweeping his streets and prisons, his asylums, and sending them freight-pald to this shore where at last report 325,000 refugees have come for a taste of the latter remnants of freedom.

Fidel Castro is crazy like a coyote. He is ill advised by Russians as to how to embarrass and stir spies into our defense plants. We already have more than 300,000 unemployed with 11 percent of our people on welfare.

The influx of 65,000 Cubans will add thousands to that number living off the honest taxpayer. The label of "refugee" must be re-examined.

The outbreak of Cubans at Fort Chaffee, Ark., indicated just what I have said time and again. Among these are professional agitators smuggled in to create turmoil and unrest. It is the work of Russia as Castro's chief advisers. We need a change before it's too late.

A statement that many are finding work at jobs the U.S. citizen is unwilling to take because welfare pays better is to our shame. One of the greatest burdens today is the overload of leeches posing as government employees. Thousands are performing no useful service. The taxpayer so short-sighted or lacking backbone to make his protest heard is a pitiful commentary to continued freedom.

Let's stop right here and take a look at the greatest pool of dishonesty in America—the United States Congress. To cap it by name those found guilty of every named crime, of coveting, betraying their country, of passage of laws designed to entrap and protect themselves is a waste of time. We ourselves are greatly to blame for kowtowing to the straw dummies set up for us to bow before. Seniority, millions in world travel, every known expense at their fingertips. The glib voter swallows it and gulps it down, knowing that should the opportunity arise he would be the same thing.

Phil Slobb: 'Don't want them foreigners comin' here'

© Chicago Sun-Times The national polls show that an overwhelming majority of Americans oppose admitting any Cuban refugees to this country.

I've conducted my own poll, and it has the same results.

My poll was limited to only one person—my friend, Phil T. Slobb. I didn't have to poll anybody else because he has always been an accurate barometer of public opinion.

The poll consisted of the following questions and his answers:

Should this country have let in the Cubans?

"Hell no. We should never let in any kinds of foreigners."

None.

"That's what I said."

What are your feelings about Poles?

"We shouldn't have ever let them in. The big dummies can't even speak English—on the bus a few nights ago, and it was loaded with a lot of scrub ladies going home and they were all jabbering in Polish. Why do we let them come here and scrub the floors of our office buildings when we could hire good Americans to scrub floors. Did you hear about the two Polacks who hijacked a submarine? They asked for a million dollars and two parachutes. Hah!"

What about Italians?

"If we had kept them out we would have never been wound up with Al Capone and Paul Ricca and other bums like that. We should never let in another Italian. Hell, what do we need them for? We can cook our own spaghetti. You know why Polish jokes are so short? So Italians can understand them."

And the Irish?

"Are you kidding? The micks are nothing but a bunch of political crooks. What have they ever done except run for office so they can steal my tax money. And the ones who didn't run for office became cops, so they could shake me down. All the Irish ever contributed to this country was municipal corruption. By the way, do you know why Irish wakers last three days?"

Why?

"So they can make sure the guy is dead, and not just drunk."

Do you have any feelings about Lithuania?

"Yeah, those people are all dumb as the Polacks, and they're twice as mean. The day we let the first Loogin in this country, the average IQ in America dropped by 10 points. Do you know how a Lithuanian pilot navigates an airplane?"

How?

"By reading street signs."

How about Bohemians?

"Look, those people are all the same—Bohemians, Serbians, Yugoslavians, Latvians, Hungarians, Slovaks, they're cheapskates, and all they want to do is stick a lamb on a stick and toast it, drink beer and play loud music on their mandolins. You can't even pronounce their names. They're as bad as the Polacks and Loogins. You know how you can tell the mother-in-law at a Bohunk wedding? She's the one on her knees, picking up the rice."

I don't suppose you care much for the Greeks?

"What do I need a Greek for? I know how to fix a hamburger. I went in a Greek restaurant once, and they were all jumping around to that Zorba music and snapping their fingers, and when I ordered some cheese they set it on fire. You know how many Greeks it takes to screw in a lightbulb? One to put in the bulb and the other one to burn the place down for insurance."

And the Chinese?

"No, no, no, of any kind. Chinks, Japs, Koreans, Vietnamese, none of them. We're always having a war with one kind of gook or another, so why do we let them in. And the rats they screwed up our economy with their little cars and TV sets. I say, no more gooks. You know what sound a Japanese camera makes? Crick."

What are your feelings about Jews?

"What do you think my feelings are. Every used car I ever had, I bought from a Jew and they were all clunkers."

What about the French?

"These people eat snails, and anybody who eats a snail is a creep. I won't be bothered to ask you about blacks."

"Don't bother. You couldn't print it."

But they didn't ask to come here.

"Then they should leave."

I don't suppose you care for our Hispanics, besides the Cubans, Mexicans? Puerto Ricans?

"That's right. I don't care for them."

You know why a Puerto Rican can't use a checkbook? Because it's too small for him to spray his name on.

Hah! Pretty good, huh?

Historians gather, then, that you think this country should not have let anyone in except the early English settlers.

"I wouldn't have let them in either. Who do you think the hillbillies are? If the English hadn't come here, we wouldn't have had nearly as many hillbillies as we have now. We've had hillbillies in this country for 200 years, and what have they contributed? They invented stock car racing and the demolition derby, that's all. If we hadn't let the English in, we wouldn't have had peanut picker in the White House."

Then there's nobody you like.

"I like Americans."

What kind?

"The kind that are already here. Like me."

Old manuscript by Einstein found at bottom of old safe

NEW YORK (UPI)—A rare manuscript of Albert Einstein's has turned up in a bunch of old papers at the bottom of a dusty safe.

No one knew what was inside the huge safe sitting in the basement of the Brooklyn Jewish Center, but it was old and in the way," said Stanley Bresnick, the center's executive director. "This safe was an impediment. I decided to get rid of it a year and a half ago."

He made a few telephone calls and finally found a professional safe-cracker who agreed to pry open the safe and cart it away for free. "The center—could it be—contains whatever they were, and he would keep the safe."

Among the fading papers found inside was a manuscript written by the physicist on graph paper, corrected in his own hand and signed twice.

"I knew immediately that it was something special. But I had no idea it was this valuable," Bresnick said.

He later learned that Einstein donated the manuscript to the Brooklyn Jewish Center's American Library of Nazi Banned Books on Dec. 22, 1934.

"The library was started in response to Hitler's order in 1933 to burn all books that were not to his liking, including all books written by Jews," said Larry Rutter, a rare book expert at Phillips Fine Auctioneers & Appraisers.

"The 10-page German manuscript, 'The Compatibility of the Field Equation—in the—Unified—Field Theory,' will be sold by Phillips on Wednesday. The proceeds will pay for renovation of the Brooklyn Jewish Center.

"I think it will bring more than $25,000," Rutter said. "It's extremely important because it's a first draft by Einstein on the unified field theory. Anything Einstein ever wrote is valuable."

Court gives nasty words protection

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (UPI)—The Rhode Island Supreme Court has ruled that four-letter words share equal protection under the First Amendment, and people can't be prosecuted for shouting them at police.

The court's ruling, released this week, was in the case of a Woonsocket teenage girl convicted in Superior Court of disorderly conduct for shouting vulgarities at policemen who were arresting three youths for throwing rocks at pedestrians and cars.

Department store customers cautious but some manage money for fashion

By JAMES A. WHITE
 United Press International
 Consumers are displaying recession worries in trips to the department store.
 However, their caution still leaves room for buying necessities plus some of the latest fashions, retail sales figures for May indicated Thursday.
 With the exception of a 15.9 percent gain posted by K mart over a year earlier, the largest department store chains showed only modest sales increases in May. Sears, Roebuck, the industry leader, suffered a 4.3 percent decline.
 Sears blamed the slump on its biggest sales area, the Midwest, where cutbacks by the auto and steel industries have severely blunted the regional economy. Sears also said its credit sales were down nationwide, reflecting consumer reaction to the credit curbs imposed by Washington in mid-March.

 Gains recorded by most other retailers were slim after inflation is taken into account but not so weak as to indicate that a feared collapse in consumer buying has developed yet.
 J.C. Penney said shoppers appear to be concentrating on necessities but have enough left for fashion items. Women are snapping up "preppy" coordinated apparel and men are adding western-style clothing to their wardrobes, said Penney, the third-ranked retailer.
 No. 2 K mart noted strong May sales for gardening and patio items with the approach of summer. Sporting goods also were popular, a sign Americans may be planning close-to-home vacations.
 In another economic development Thursday the 13 percent prime rate was matched by more major banks moving in drabs and drabs.

Joining the handful of banks that first made the 1-point reduction in the rate for top-business borrowers Wednesday were Security Pacific National Bank, First National Bank of Boston and Bank of New York, all among the nation's 20 largest banks.
 First National of Greater Miami outdid its larger counterparts by reducing its prime rate to 12 1/2 percent from 13 1/2 percent.
 Having fallen from a record high of 20 percent since April, analysts say the prime rate is nearing a low point for this year. But some think it has at least a little more ground to give, including John R. Toral, vice chairman of Manufacturers Hanover Trust Co., of New York, who predicts the prime will settle in the 10-11 percent area by year-end.
 That's promising for businesses needing bank loans during the recession and it offers some hope for consumers. Consumer rates follow the overall trend of those for business although the retreat in borrowing costs is slower for the individual.

 Elsewhere in the economic pipeline, coffee drinkers can expect higher shelf prices within weeks following wholesale coffee price hikes of 15 cents a pound adopted by several of the nation's leading roasters.
 The increases to $3.23 a pound have been announced over the last two weeks by General Foods Corp., Procter and Gamble Co. and Hills Bros., the industry's top three roasters. The normal lag time for wholesale increases to reach the consumer level is a month.
 A spokeswoman for Hills Bros. cited higher prices for raw imported green coffee beans for the increase from $2.06 a pound but another coffee firm, Coca-Cola Co., said it will hold the $3.08 price at least until July.

Hecla offer may bail Atlas out of troubles

WALLACE (UPI) — A proposal by Hecla Mining Co. to become a partner in a property owned by Atlas Mining Co. may bail the latter out of its financial difficulties with commodity brokers.
 That is the claim in a report to shareholders signed by Atlas President Frank J. Frankovich.
 Frankovich's report and proxy statement, dated May 30, describes events in the silver futures market leading up to a suspension of over-the-counter trading in Atlas stock last April, and claims Hecla has proposed to buy an 80 percent interest in an Atlas property adjacent to Hecla's Lucky Friday Mine in Mulligan.
 The proxy statement says, "Hecla has proposed to buy an 80 percent interest in the Atlas property for $1,550,000 down plus $25,000 in additional cash over a period of time. Atlas would retain a 20 percent net profits interest in this property."
 In his cover letter, Frankovich claims, "The Hecla proposal will assure development of our property, and it appears to provide the means of reaching a compromise agreement with Bache (the firm of Bache-Halsey-Stuart-Shields) if that should prove desirable."
 But is there such a proposal from Hecla?
 William Grismar, financial vice president of the 89-year-old Wallace company, would release only the following statement about the proposal:

Frankovich describes: "Hecla officials have been holding discussions with Atlas Mining Co. at Atlas' invitation concerning acquisition of the mining properties by Hecla. If negotiations result in definitive agreements, further analysis will be forthcoming."
 Grismar declined to "confirm" or deny the reported 80-20 split, cash arrangements or any other specifics of the agreement as represented by Frankovich.
 Frankovich denied in the proxy statement any of the $2.5 million claimed by Bache for losses sustained on the commodities market when silver collapsed in March. Frankovich had been trading with the Bache office in Spokane, Wash.

Contract at mine ends Saturday

KELOGG (UPI) — A three-year labor contract between the Sunshine Mining Co. and the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers expires Saturday.
 So far, one negotiating session has failed to produce a new agreement.
 The IBEW Local 73, based in Spokane, Wash., represents 20 mine electricians at the Sunshine Mine.
 At Teller, assistant business agent of the local, said the electricians "probably would extend" their existing contract with Sunshine for a while until the decision is reached on a wage proposal from the mine office, which arrived in Teller's mail Monday.

 "We're not on strike yet. We're really sure where we stand," Teller said.
 The electricians have honored a picket line set up March 14 by the striking United Steel Workers of America Local 5089, but unlike the steel workers, the electricians can draw no strike pay during the dispute.

Teller said IBEW members have been denied unemployment benefits, and added "generally were worse off than they (the steel workers) are."
 One of the key disputes between Sunshine and the steel workers is over contract language pertaining to the honoring of another union's picket line.
 Steel workers are holding out for a renewal in their contract of a clause giving them the right to honor the electricians' picket line as the electricians have honored theirs.

SEC eases rules

Washington (UPI) — The Securities and Exchange Commission voted Thursday to relax rules of national stock exchanges which limit off-board transactions by their members.
 The rules currently prohibit most stock brokerage firms from buying and selling listed securities — for clients — over-the-counter — that is, off the floor of the exchange.

Bafflegab often boomerangs

© Field Enterprises, Inc.
 "It is the responsibility of each and every department head to properly arrange the affairs of this organization such manner that each salaried employee, including himself, will receive the full vacation to which he is duly entitled."
 Translation: Each department head must make sure that the annual salaried employee under him gets his full vacation.
 "We solicit any recommendations that you wish to make and you may be assured that such recommendations will be given our careful consideration."
 Translation: Please give us your suggestions. We shall consider them.
 Compare merely these two examples of bafflegab as compared with simple, clear writing that delivers the message so it can be easily understood. As a corporate executive employing you, a June college graduate, which writer would you hire?
 The answer is in a way, unexpected: Companies single out "communications skills" ahead of production, financial or marketing abilities, as their most important requirement — thus being able to write simply and clearly actually can be the key to your getting a desired job in the first place and an essential to steady promotion.
 It's not only time and energy that may be wasted by those to whom the bafflegab messages are directed. Big sums of money can be involved because of errors made by those who fail to grasp the meaning of letters, reports and memoranda.

 Consider the case of the missing hyphen. A written order called for radioactive rods to be cut in "ten foot-long pieces." (Notice the omission of any hyphen.)
 "Did this order mean 'ten foot-long pieces'?" Or did it mean "ten-foot-long pieces?" The cutter interpreted the order minus the hyphen to mean 10 pieces each a foot long — and the misunderstanding cost the company involved a bundle of money.
 Now can you begin to learn how to write simply and clearly? Here are 10 principles developed by the Gunning-Bueller-Clear-Writing Institute in Santa Barbara, Calif.:
 (1) Keep sentences short.
 (2) Be simple, not complex.
 (3) Avoid your vocabulary.
 (4) Develop extra and unneeded words.
 (5) Use active, not passive verbs.
 (6) Use terms your reader can picture.

 (7) Tie in with your reader's experience.
 (8) Write the way you talk. A conversational tone is one of the best avenues to good writing.
 (9) Make full use of variety.
 (10) Write to express, not to impress.
 (11) Present your idea simply and directly.
 A Fog Index and Readability Yardstick to test clear writing was developed by the late Robert Gunning. The index is calculated by averaging the number of words per sentence in a selected passage and then counting the number of words with three or more syllables in every 100 words — add the two figures together and multiply by .4. The resulting figure is the same as the number of years of education, up to 17, that a reader needs to understand the passage.
 Try applying the Fog Index to the material and instructions you read as well as to your own writing. It will tell you how clearly you express YOURSELF when writing.

 A tip: When your boss picks up your written report on any subject, assigned or not, he wants to know: "What is this all about?"
 He doesn't want your resume or details of your research. He doesn't want to be argued into a conclusion.
 But your conclusions first. Then follow with the details to document your conclusions. Then he will have the facts upon which you based your conclusions and he will reach his own decision.
 As a lifetime enemy of "professional" lingo in which one writer tries to impress his peers with his superior knowledge rather than to inform you and me, and as a devoted disciple of explaining the most complicated theories of economics in words any reader can understand, I submit this report with delight. If you take it seriously, it may help you more in your career than what seem far more complicated toils.

Final Cuban sealift boatloads land in U.S.

KEY WEST, Fla. (UPI) — The Cuban sealift that has brought nearly 110,000 refugees to American shores appeared to be nearing an end Thursday, but one arriving skipper said he was in thousands more still are waiting to flee Cuba.

The captain of a refugee-laden shrimp boat said only 15 more American boats remained in the Mariel, Cuba, harbor when he left, but a Cuban official told him thousands of Cubans were waiting to flee the country.

"I spoke to an immigration official in Cuba and he said there were plenty of people still waiting to come out thousands — not prisoners, family members," said Robert Wetzork, captain of the 78-foot shrimp American, which docked Thursday afternoon with 278 Cubans aboard.

A U.S. Customs official who asked not to be identified said the late arriving boats carried many refugees with shaved heads indicating they had recently been inmates of Cuban prisons.

"It looks like that's what's coming in on the last wave," he said.

Wetzork said that 151 of his passengers were "escortia" (low life), including 50 convicts from Pinar del Rio Prison in Cuba's westernmost province.

"They talked about what they had done wrong ... stealing and minor things like that," Wetzork said. "But if you say 'down with Castro' (in Cuba), you're thrown in prison. So to consider all these are escortia is wrong."

As he left the Cuban embarkation port, Wetzork said, he counted 15 American boats remaining — 17 two big shrimpers and the rest mostly mullet boats and smaller pleasure boats."

Radio Havana reported that the Peruvian Embassy in Havana — where the exodus of almost 110,000 Cubans began Easter weekend — was empty.

Boats poured into the old Navy Base docks through the night and into the morning — then halted abruptly.

By noon, 43 boats had docked carrying 1,567 refugees. That swelled to 109,191 the number of Cubans who had fled their country in the 46 days of the sealift.

A Radio Havana report monitored in Miami said Cuban officials entered the Peruvian Embassy in Havana Wednesday and found only 33 persons remaining of the 10,800 who jammed into the walled courtyard seeking a way out of Cuba.

The remaining persons included the 25 who crashed through the wall around the embassy in a hijacked bus on Good Friday and set in motion the events that led to the sealift.

Radio Havana reported that those 25 had been denied permission to leave Cuba. They were allowed to remain in custody of Peruvian embassy officials but were moved to another building, the radio station said.

Deweese backers to ask for review of vote

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Backers of Deputy Sheriff Buddy Deweese as a sheriff's candidate said Thursday they will ask the Secretary of State's office to assist them in getting a review of May 27 primary election ballots in Twin Falls County.

Deputy Sheriff Buddy Deweese said Thursday he has still not made a decision about whether to accept the Democratic nomination for sheriff.

Both Deweese and Twin Falls County Democratic Chairman Marjorie Stetten say they are willing to take County Clerk Richard Pence at his word. Pence has said he will swear Deweese received at least the minimum five votes needed to qualify him to file for the office on the Democratic ticket.

"If Pence is willing to give us a written statement to this effect, it would be adequate," Deweese said.

However, he said he has ten days in which to decide and he has not yet decided.

Deweese, who was promoted as a write-in candidate on the Republican ticket in the primary election by a group of friends and supporters, received 295 votes. This was not enough to nominate him on the Republican ticket in competition with three other candidates but he needed only five Democratic tickets to file for the nomination for that party as there was no candidate appearing on the Democratic ballot.

Several of Deweese's supporters said they wrote him in the Democratic ticket as a back stop move to keep him as a general election candidate if he chooses to run.

The exact number of votes he received on the Democratic ticket, however, remains a mystery. Pence said it is almost impossible to tell on the automatic voting machines how many of the 295 votes were Democratic and how many Republican.

Mrs. John Heck, a member of the Deweese write-in committee, said she plans to contact the Secretary of State's office today to ask the staff's assistance in requesting Pence check the ballots to find at least five votes. She said she believes it would be possible to find the minimum number.

Pence said the voting machines do not always make the proper notation on the ballots to indicate party.

Wednesday the Times-News checked out a voting machine at the Sawtooth School. A write in vote was made on each of the parties shown on the machine. When the small section of paper that records write-in votes was removed from the machine, each name shown on the write in paper was accompanied by some small perforations in the margin. On the Democratic vote there were four small holes in the paper because the Democratic candidates were listed on the fourth row of the machine. The Republican write-in was accompanied by two small holes and the two other parties by one and three.

Russell Wilcock, who handles the maintenance of the machines, said the perforations are made by a small spool type mechanism with a sharp cogged attachment. He said there are no few write-ins cast the mechanism becomes a little slow and sometimes doesn't function perfectly. He said the maintenance instructions say not to oil the machine, but he said the machine used by the Times-News had been given a slight application of oil prior to the election and worked perfectly. He said he also oiled the machines in one other precinct and that precinct election officials said they assisted a number of voters in casting write-in votes.

Wilcock and Pence have both stated they feel Deweese received at least the necessary five votes, but as yet there is no official record to prove their contentions. Deweese backers say if he files on the Democratic party, they want to make sure everything is proper and they would feel better if the proof is provided.

A check of the paper rolls of the machines would probably take no more than an hour as the 96 machines seven or eight had no write-in votes cast. Officials would need to look at between 80 and 90 pieces of paper.

Supporters of Deweese say they think at least 5 votes could be found with perforations positively indicating the Democratic party as the machines would obviously function properly part of the time and some were oiled and known to be in good working order.

Police Gun incident ends peacefully

TWIN FALLS — Dewey Dee Wilder, 23, of Hansen, was in custody Thursday on charges of aggravated assault, carrying a concealed weapon and possession of controlled substances.

The man was arrested in Twin Falls Wednesday night by city police when they were called to 530 James St. on a domestic disturbance.

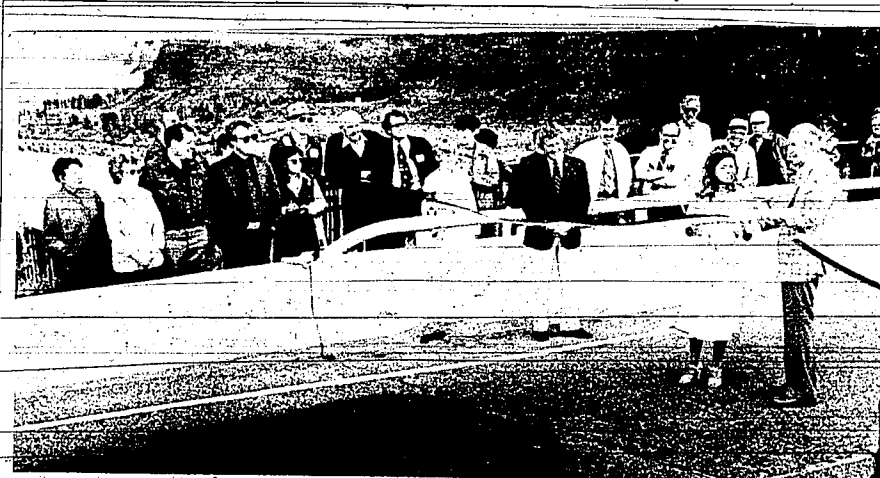

Police said they were met at the door by Ron Mason, who handed them a .38 revolver. He said he had taken from the suspect. Mason alleged the suspect had come to his home and threatened to kill him.

In arresting Wilder, officers found a 25-caliber handgun in his jacket pocket.

Wilder was taken into custody and his automobile impounded. Police Chief Tim Qualls said a routine inventory of the impounded vehicle produced a paper sack containing pharmaceutical pills and tablets.

Magistrate Daniel Mechl set bond at $22,000 and Wilder was in custody pending arraignment on the three charges.

Qualls said investigation is continuing and other arrests may be made in connection with the controlled substance charge.

Mayor Hank Woodall got some red, white and blue-ribbon help Thursday morning from Miss Twin Falls, Jenny Ball, at Perrine Bridge ceremonies commemorating the city's 75 years. More pictures of other opening day events are featured on page C1 of today's paper.

Tisdale appeals 10-year sentence

TWIN FALLS — A 5th District Court sentence of 10 years in the state prison on charges of voluntary manslaughter has been appealed to the Idaho Supreme Court by defendant Charles Patrick Tisdale.

Tisdale, 32, of Twin Falls, was charged with first degree murder in the shooting death Aug. 17, 1979, of David William Nylander. He pleaded guilty to the reduced charge of voluntary manslaughter on April 18, 1980, and was sentenced to 10 years in the state prison.

His attorney, James F. May, appealed the sentence on behalf of Tisdale.

Nylander was fatally shot in the neck as he sat in his car in the Tisdale driveway after giving Tisdale's wife a ride home from a local night club.

Nylander, an Idaho Falls resident, was pronounced dead at the scene and Tisdale taken into custody at the scene of the shooting.

Massie tops forklift drivers in Hyster rodeo

TWIN FALLS — James Massie of the Gallatin Valley Seed Co. of Twin Falls piloted his forklift to victory in the Hyster rodeo at the Blue Lakes Mall Thursday.

Massie outmaneuvered 24 other drivers in the competition sponsored by Arnold Machinery Co. of Twin Falls as part of the city's 75th anniversary activities.

The rodeo consisted of two events, and although Massie won neither, he had the best combined score for the day.

The first event was the slalom, in which drivers carried a loaded pallet through a slalom course, put it down, drove around it, picked it up again, and then drove backwards through the slalom. Drivers lost points for knocking over gates, which were constructed of pallets. Roy Williams of Henningson Cold Storage won this event, followed by Jim Hawkins of the Hawkins Co. and Don Runkle of Keystone Seed.

The second event, the Water Gate, in which drivers carried a container of water on a pallet through a series of obstacles, was won by Ron Goertzen of Hany Seed. Don Lent of Sun Seeds finished second and Dave Lapray was third.

In the overall competition, Massie was followed by Gene Hoshaw of Gallatin Valley Seed and Kent Bates of Green Seed Co. in Kimberly.

Winner of Boise Cascade won the tender Loving Care award for being easiest on his machine.

Massie received three, one-ounce bars of silver for his victory, and his company received a free forklift tuneup. Hoshaw received two, one-ounce bars of silver and Bates one, one-ounce bar.

Prizes and machinery were provided by Arnold Machinery.

Featherston, third grade; Jodie Featherston, fourth grade; Blair Aus, fifth grade; and Louise Hook, sixth grade, all of Twin Falls.

Winners of the best float awards were Gary Halverson, pre-school; Cami and Mike Cooper, and Jean Gray, second grade; Jeff Johns, third grade; Gene Grey, fourth grade; Julie Davis, fifth grade; and Steven Kohler, sixth grade, all of Twin Falls. The name of the first grade winner was unavailable.

Children's parade attracts 230 youngsters

TWIN FALLS — More than 230 children Thursday took part in the Kid's Parade as part of Twin Falls' 75th anniversary celebration and 14 of them won home prizes.

The parade featured children from pre-school through sixth grade. It was sponsored by Twin Falls Jaycees and Kiwanis members.

The parade stretched from the City Park to the downtown Sears store. Most of the entries were related to the theme of Twin Falls' pioneer days, including covered wagons and wheelbarrows, and cowboy and Indian costumes.

First-place prizes were awarded in each grade for the best float and costume entry. Prizes were donated by Ernst Home Center, K-Mart, the Lynwood Shopping Center King's store, Meadow Gold and Bonanza.

Winners of the best costume awards were Chad Schlermer, pre-school; Delma Alonza, first grade; Jamie Denton, second grade; Steve Udall will speak on the opening day of this year's Institute of the American West conference in Ketchum June 18-21.

Udall will discuss land use in the intermountain states Wednesday at 9:45 a.m. in the Geneva Room at the Alpenrose Hotel.

The second day of the conference will be devoted to a discussion on western art and how it has portrayed the western landscape. The keynote address will be delivered by Peter Hassrick, director of the Buffalo Bill Historical Center in Cody, Wyo.

Historian Willan H. Goetzman will speak on the third day of the conference, which will center on the history of human attitudes towards the land and water of the region.

The final day of the conference will be led off by an address by Utah poet Brewster Ghiselin. Following Ghiselin's address, conference participants will discuss alterations in the West's landscape that are taking place today, such as the proposed M-X missile system and coal-fired power plants.

Hines third cop change in Jerome

JEROME — The third officer since March has left the Jerome Police Department over disagreements with new Chief Jim McGowan.

Officer Harvey Hines resigned Thursday morning, McGowan confirmed.

"He indicated it was a personal thing between him and me," the chief said, declining to comment further.

Hines also declined comment on his resignation, saying he plans to express his feelings at an upcoming City Council meeting.

McGowan fired Sgt. Dick Haynes and Patrolman Jay Burk in April, citing "general incompatibility" with the two. The new chief, a former San Francisco police officer, was hired March 1 by the Jerome City Council.

BLM wants Sage out

BOISE (UPI) — The Bureau of Land Management wants to remove 14,000 acres of federal land in the Jim Sage area from further consideration for wilderness designation.

Bob Buffington, state director of the BLM, said Wednesday the bureau's study of two parcels in the Jim Sage area south of Burley indicates the land lacks essential wilderness characteristics. However, before the decision becomes

Volcanic ash may be altering Idaho's weather patterns

National Weather Service in Kimberly. "Basically what scientists are saying is that all the ash circling the earth caused weather to turn much cooler than normal."

In an article in the June 1979 issue of Weatherwise, magazine, Hughes writes that in addition to the 1916 ash clouds, intense sun spots during the six year period also contributed to the unusually cold weather.

However, Marshall stressed, Idaho's cool weather this spring actually isn't that unusual.

"People have very short memories when it comes to weather," Marshall said. "This spring really isn't very much different from last year."

"In our area, comparing yearly figures to average temperatures isn't very realistic because we live in an

Area of extreme fluctuations

area of extreme fluctuations," he continued. "Our average temperatures are like adding up a bunch of extreme temperatures and dividing by two. They really don't tell us much about how the weather should be."

Marshall pointed out that even if Mount St. Helens has caused slightly cooler temperatures, it has nothing to do with the spring rains.

"The precipitation had to be there in the first place," Marshall said. "Maybe the cooler temperatures cause it to fall earlier, but even that is considering an awful lot of maybes."

Galkin agrees with Marshall that this spring's weather isn't that unusual for southern Idaho. He cited 30 degree days recorded in July and August from the turn of the century through the 1920s.

The National Weather Service forecast for June calls for light rainfall and near normal temperatures.

"In the first four days of June, we will have an unusual amount of precipitation and above normal temperatures that will probably even out over the next 26 days," Galkin said.

Forecasts for July and August call for above average temperatures, but no forecasts are given for precipitation. However, these forecasts are given only 60 percent odds for accuracy.

Average temperatures tallied from 1951 through 1973 for the three summer months are: 64.5 in June, 72.7 in July and 70.4 in August. Average highs are: 73.8 in June, 90.4 in July and 88.1 in August.

Will tell country the region isn't buried in ash North Idaho businessmen worry over tourist trade

SANDPOINT (UPI) — Worried merchants in the Idaho Panhandle say they will try to tell the nation that the region is not smothered with abrasive ash spewed by volcanic Mount St. Helens.

They say tourists are needed desperately; the water is clear, the fish are biting and the towns are bustling again.

This comes after weeks of fighting against the ash. Much of it was knocked down and washed away by a series of rain storms, but the ash still concerns health officials.

The problem, businessmen and state officials say, is reports about the choking fallout from the Washington state volcano have caused droves of potential tourists to stay home at a time when summer visits ought to be reaching their peak.

Added to recent timber industry cutbacks and other economic slgishness, the tourism slump is threatening to wreck the Panhandle economy. It is being said. Traditionally, North Idaho's leading industry is logging, followed by tourism.

Local business and government leaders huddled with a state tourism official at Sandpoint Thursday to discuss how to spend some $80,000 in state and federal funds to combat the allegedly inaccurate image of the region that's been painted following the May 18 volcanic explosion.

The consensus was to use the money for a public relations and advertising campaign.

The reports coming in indicate that you're all bolting your water here," said Steve Wilson of the state Tourism Bureau, who traveled to Sandpoint from the state capitol at Boise in southern Idaho, which was untouched by the dust.

"In fact, only one town in the entire northern Idaho region had to boil water at all because of surface water pollution from the ash that showered much of the Northwest, Wilson said.

Resort and motel owners said time was of the essence because most July and August reservations normally are placed during the next two weeks.

They said they're getting cancellations instead of reservations. One resort operator said a party of 25 cancelled its Memorial Day booking, and another party of four called off plans to spend the entire summer on Lake Pend Oreille because it feared the effects of the ash.

Wilson said the advertising campaign would focus on the fact that a series of rain storms had knocked down and washed away large batches of ash. Tourists would encounter no problems.

Court decisions on lands might be light, Leroy says

BOISE (UPI) — Recent Supreme Court decisions outlining how states may choose lands owned by the federal government might have little drastic effect on Idaho.

In a status report Thursday to the Lieu Lands Committee, Idaho Attorney General David Leroy said it might be several months before the court's decision in a Utah case was finalized.

"We need to avoid precipitous action" while the state of Utah petitions the high court to rehear the crucial case pitting it against the federal government," Leroy said.

The 5-4 Utah decision announced last month — and the state's 6-2 Supreme Court decision — indicated the U.S. interior secretary has discretion in refusing or approving state's applications for land, he said. But they also said the secretary can't be arbitrary.

Leroy termed the Utah ruling "somewhat of a setback" for the state of Idaho and other western states in negotiations for land transactions with the federal government.

He said the Supreme Court is being "extremely protective" of land-retention policies the Interior Department has been practicing the past several years.

Idaho-Senate President Pro-Term Reed Budge, R-Soda Springs, urged the committee not to immediately accept the government's current offer of lieu lands as a result of the Utah decision.

"We should hold firm on our position at least until this case is finally settled," Budge said.

Leroy said the court ruled that states aren't entitled to "gross" gains in lieu lands selections from the federal government.

State Public Instruction Superintendent Jerry Evans said he thought the state would be able to proceed in its effort to gain maximum profit on the lieu lands transactions as it did before the Utah decision.

"As long as we're close" to equal value between land the federal government took and land the state is taking in return, Evans said, there will be no difficulties.

He said he felt the Supreme Court would not disapprove of transactions where property values are "reasonably" similar. "As long as it's not grossly different, we will be able to stay within the decision" when it becomes final, he predicted.

Indians may ignore salmon ban

LAPWAI (UPI) — Nez Perce Tribal fishermen say the practice self-restraint and custom conservation measures, but appear content to disregard a state-proposed closure of Chinook salmon fishing on Rapid River near Riggs.

"I don't think the people who are now fishing are going to over-fish the run," Nez Perce Tribal Executive Committee Chairman Wilfred Scott during a special meeting Wednesday with Gov. John Evans; other tribe members and officials of the state Fish and Game Department.

With the Fish and Game Commission recommending closure Friday at midnight of all Rapid River Indian fishing, Evans traveled to Lapwai hoping to secure some indication from the tribe that such a closure would be honored.

Contentions between state officials and the tribal members occurred last year when the Fish and Game Commission enacted emergency closure of Rapid River to Indian fishing to protect the dwindling fish population. The meeting in Lapwai Wednesday was designed to keep similar situations from occurring this year.

Fish and Game Department biologists predicted a poor return of Chinook to the Idaho Power Co. hatchery at Rapid River. They say the return could be worse than last year's record-low return of 3,049 adult salmon.

"The commission has recommended closure," Evans said. "But before we do anything unilaterally, we wanted to come here and ask your advice."

Despite the tribe's reluctance to agree to honor Rapid River closure this year, the two sides did appear to reach some accord to work out future differences.

"We're going to have to start working a little more in coordination," said tribe member Gordon Highgate.

"We have common interests and common goals," Evans said.

Scott re-emphasized the tribe's treaty right to self-regulation, reminding Evans that the tribal committee recently passed a resolution that, in effect, says the tribe — not the state — will oversee matters pertaining to Indian hunting and fishing within the boundaries of the 1855 Nez Perce treaty. Rapid River is within those boundaries.

Congressional action on Birds of Prey unlikely in '80

BOISE (UPI) — Final congressional action on the U.S. Interior Department's proposed expansion of the Snake River Birds of Prey Area likely will not occur this year, Idaho Attorney General David Leroy said Thursday.

Leroy told the Legislature's Lieu Lands Committee the understood Congress would not begin committee meetings on the proposal until late this year or early in 1981.

The attorney general also predicted Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus would lobby for quick consideration of the plan, which would expand the raptor refuge from 30,000 to about 600,000 acres.

During today's committee meeting, Idaho Public Instruction Superintendent Jerry Evans rapped the proposal, which was patterned after a revised plan submitted this spring to Andrus by Gov. John Evans.

The schools chief said the governor cut some 110,000 acres of the Interior Department's original proposal, but did so by deleting mostly private acreage well inside the area's boundaries.

"He did a pretty good job cutting some more off around the edges, but that did not make the proposal dramatically different," Jerry Evans said.

He said the state Land Board still has not endorsed anything proposed by the governor or the federal government on the expanded refuge.

The superintendent also reaffirmed that the board has no intention to instruct the state Lands Department to study packages of federal land the state might want to choose in exchange for state land within the birds area. The Republican-controlled board rejected the governor's land-study proposal last fall in an effort to delay finalization of the birds of prey area expansion.

Evans calls for revision in tax prepayment legislation

BOISE (UPI) — A new Idaho law, which allows companies to pay taxes in advance to local governments rocked by a sudden industry and population boom, needs to be fixed, what its framers intended, a state official said Thursday.

Public Instruction Superintendent Jerry Evans said he probably would propose an amendment to the Legislature in 1981 to correct the bill passed last winter.

Designed principally to allow Cyprus Mining Corp. to help the city of Challis absorb a severe population impact from a new mining venture in the area, the law has been found to be flawed, Evans said.

He said under the law the Challis School District "would be taking quite a chance" if it built a new school with the pre-paid taxes. He said the procedures allowed under the law would endanger the district's future operating funds used for capital expansion.

"I don't know why it slipped by me," Evans told the Legislature's Lieu Lands Committee. He said he was raised serious objection to the bill when it was before the Legislature, but since it was passed both officials of the Challis School District and the mining company have told him the statute was flawed.

"It doesn't do at all what they thought it would," Evans said.

Despite big gains in work force total in 1970s

Female pay status lagging

BOISE (UPI) — Although the number of women in Idaho's labor force has dramatically increased in the past decade, the state's female workers have not attained equal economic status with men, the Idaho Employment Department reports.

A report published by the department indicates that from 1960 to 1977 the number of women increased from 28.7 percent of Idaho's labor force to 39.7 percent of the work force.

Labor force participation rates for women also climbed from 39 percent to 50.3 percent during the same period, the report said. Labor force participation indicates the number of persons in the labor force as a percentage of the population over 16 years old.

"For the first time in our nation's history, half of the women 16 years and over are working or looking for work," the report said.

The report said the trend in the past decade toward increased partici-ation in the work force "has been for women of all ages, especially in the under 35 age group. This is the result of women making the decision to postpone marriage and/or raise a family until later in life, the report said.

Most women in Idaho's labor force are employed full-time. The report attributed this to the increasing number of families headed by women. There are 20,000 female family heads in Idaho, the report said.

Unemployment is a major problem for Idaho's women workers. In 1977, women accounted for 48 percent of total unemployment in Idaho, while only representing 39 percent of the labor force, the report said.

The report said a major factor in female unemployment is the concentration of women in jobs "characterized by low wages and high turnover."

A lack of skills and/or education prevents many women from obtaining the stable, well-paying jobs in our economy," the report said.

Most of Idaho's women workers are employed as secretaries, teachers and nurses, the report said. Those that are not working in these fields are most likely employed as service workers. Only 11.5 percent of working women are blue-collar workers in Idaho, the report said.

The department projects that clerical jobs will show the most growth until 1985. However, the report said, this trend is at the same time both promising and discouraging.

"If the trend is valid, then there will be no shortage of work for women interested in pursuing clerical careers. This trend will, on the other hand, tend to perpetuate the segregation of females into less desirable occupations."

However, women are making gains. The report says the median income of Idaho's working women rose 61 percent from 1970 to 1975.

Users fees

as such, should not be supported by taxes from the general public.

Councilman Bud Cheney says he wants to see the recreation more self-reliant.

"The only fair way to handle the thing is to determine what the cost of the program is or what the costs are in the program and then determine the appropriate amount of users and make a users fee that covers the cost of operation," Cheney said. "I've long been an advocate of that."

Still, Cheney said he would not support increasing users fees for children's programs.

Councilman Jim Smallwood agreed, saying the recreation department is one area where increased fees can be justified.

"I see nothing wrong in imposing users fees where practical, and I think that's the word, practical," he said.

Mayor Hank Woodall said he would support some fee increases for adult recreation, but he called for no increase in the adult recreation programs self-sufficient. Woodall said raising the fees by that amount could force some users out of the program.

"Another angle being pursued is charging county residents an additional fee; council members say recreation is one of the few users' fees that does not include a higher charge for non-city residents."

Just how much more non-city residents would pay has not been determined, but council members are expected to be heard discussing the matter next week, Woodall said.

Soviets cut projection of Olympic visitors

MOSCOW (UPI) — Moscow city officials admitted Thursday there would be fewer foreign guests at the Soviet Olympic Games next month than projected before the boycott movement.

But exactly how many fewer will attend was unclear as officials issued a series of contradictory figures throughout the day.

A limited survey of major Western countries showed as many as 60,000 people originally expected in Moscow may stay away from the Games beginning July 19.

Moscow Mayor Vladimir Promyslov told a press conference he expected 100,000 foreign guests in the Soviet capital this summer — 25,000 of them athletes, reporters and officials and the remainder as tourists.

"It is better with fewer visitors, they will get better services," Promyslov said, looking at the bright side.

He said that represented a "slight drop" from previous estimates.

However, a number of Soviet Olympic officials and publications in the past have predicted 300,000 tourists. That would make Promyslov's new estimate a drastic 75 percent cut from the original.

Asked about the discrepancy in the estimates, an aide to Promyslov said later that the 300,000 figure had only been "banned about" and was never considered an official estimate. He said officials all along had expected from 100,000 to 150,000 guests.

In an even later clarification, he said the mayor actually meant that there would be 100,000 foreign guests in Moscow at any given time, but they would move through the city in up to three waves — different groups visiting different cities as part of package tours.

After subtracting the 25,000 standing group of athletes and reporters, that leaves around 75,000 visitors at any given time. The aide said that figure should be multiplied by 2 1/2 to 3 times to represent the total number of visitors.

Given that formula, the figures come out to 200,000 to 250,000 — still a sizable drop from the previous 300,000.

Western diplomats said that before President Carter announced the boycott to protest the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan, Moscow expected 78,000 tourists from such major countries as the United States, Canada, Australia, Great Britain, France, West Germany and Japan. But the diplomats said only about 12,000 were now expected to attend from those countries.

Of the 30,000 Americans originally expected to visit, only 3,000 are now likely to show up, an American source familiar with Olympic arrangements said.

Western diplomats estimated that the Soviets lost a potential $38 million from the American bookings alone, although they took in $16 million in early payments.

Potential losses would have to take into account food, souvenirs and other expenditures within the Soviet Union.

The Western sources said the Soviets, by now, were probably slightly in the black on the Olympics, but have lost the opportunity to turn the Games into a big moneymaker.

direct staging of the 1976 Summer Olympics without having the "aptitudes" and must take the blame for the $1 billion deficit, an inquiry report said Thursday.

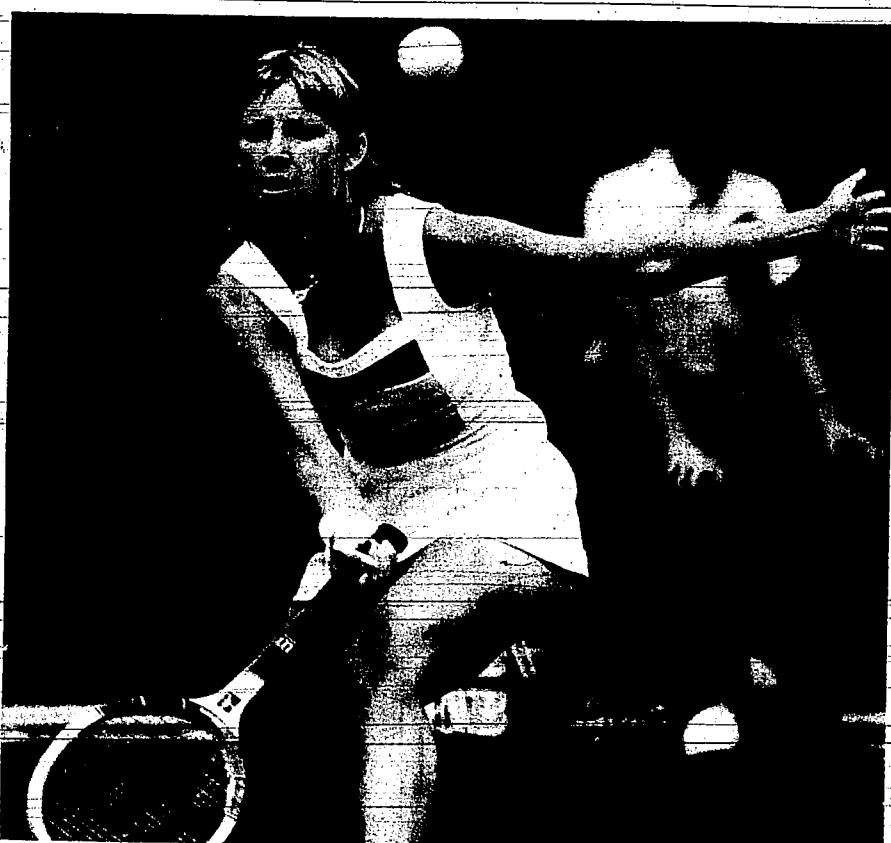

The report on a three-year inquiry by Quebec Superior Court Justice Albert Malouf said also the deficit was run up by "illegal acts, works stoppages, harassment and lack of productivity attributable to the unions and workers."

The cost of staging the 1976 Olympics was estimated at $120 million when Montreal was awarded the Games in 1970, but the final cost was more than 11 times that amount — leaving Quebecers with a $1 billion debt.

"The money is gone, we're not going to get the money back," Malouf said.

PGA Bob Shearer fires 63 to lead Atlanta play

ATLANTA (UPI) — Bob Shearer, a 32-year-old Australian who has struggled to make tour expenses the past couple of years, fashioned a brilliant iron game Thursday for a 9-under-par 63 and a two-stroke lead in the opening round of the $300,000 Atlanta Golf Classic.

Shearer, no better than a tie for 31st in 13 previous tournament attempts this year, played the back nine (where he started) of the hilly Atlanta Country Club course in 6 under and admitted, with a wide grin, "I was loving every minute of it."

"After I got three straight birdies, beginning with my second hole, I wasn't thinking about going 9-under, but I did feel I could make a good score," said Shearer. "I've got that confidence with the putter you can get a few in."

Shearer's surprising performance put him two strokes ahead of veteran Bob Murphy who had finished nearly four hours earlier with a 7-under 65.

That's nothing new for Murphy, who recently became the latest golfer to exceed the $1-million mark in career winnings. Murphy had a 64 in the opening round of the 1978 Atlanta Classic and still was two strokes off the pace.

The most disappointing golfer in the 156-man field had to be Jack Nicklaus who came to Atlanta as a tuncup for next week's U.S. Open — first time in more than seven years.

The 40-year-old "Golden Bear" has played the week prior to a "major" tournament — and started out with a 6-over-par 78.

Open favorites Tom Watson and Lee Trevino are not playing this week.

The PGA's top up the Atlanta Country Club course Thursday morn in the same fashion as they did a year ago when Andy Bean was 23 under par for the four days.

Former U.S. Amateur champ Bill Sander and Larry Nelson, who lives par only a few miles from the course, had 66s as did Mike Nicolette and Lyn Lott. Defending champion Bean had a 67 despite a string of three straight birdies and was joined there by Bob Eastwood, Terry Diehl, Larry Wadkins and Doug Tewell.

J.C. Snead had an eagle-3 on the final hole to wind up in a group of 68 shooters that included Don Pooley, Calvin Peete, Bob Byman, Mark Lye, Tom Shaw and Pat McGowan.

"We're supposed to shoot these kind of scores," said Bean. "We're professionals and this is our job. The golf course is in excellent shape, every bit as good as it was last year when I set the record. It's the kind of course that pays off when you are playing as you should and there's no reason for us not turning in a lot of scores in the 60s."

Shearer's 63 was two shots off the course record Bean set in the third round last year. The Aussie, who now plays out of Myrtle Beach, S.C., played well enough from tee to green to break Bean's record, but missed three birdie putts of four feet or less during his round.

"It is certainly the best round I've played since I turned pro and the best I've ever played in this country," said Shearer. "I did shoot a 61 on a country club course back in Australia when I was a 17-year-old amateur. But there's no comparison between that course and this one."

Shearer played well enough in 1977 and 1978 to earn more than $115,000 over that two-year period and finish in the top 60 both years. But his best finish last year was a tie for 12th at New Orleans and plagued by low blood sugar he earned only $16,517 for the year.

So far this year, Shearer, who has made only five cuts, has earned less than $5,000 but insisted his game has been improving since his former teacher, Harold Knights of Melbourne, came to this country the first of May and spent nearly five weeks working with him.

"I'll come out here Friday with confidence," said Shearer. "I can't expect another 63 but I would like to shoot a 68 or a 69."

Murphy got off to a slow start Thursday, having to scramble to save par on the first three holes. But he pulled out of the pack late in his round, running off a string of three straight birdies starting at the 15th hole.

"For some reason I started off so scratchy," said Murphy. "It was a weird feeling. I didn't have any rhythm. I kept practicing my swing."

In the NBA

'It was a good ol' meeting

CORONADO, Calif. — These may forever be remembered as the "Good Feeling" NBA meetings.

The coaches and general managers departed from Los Angeles last Friday full of praise for each other.

Now the members of the Board of Governors have concluded their meetings in an equally euphoric state. The money men breezed through an abbreviated agenda on Tuesday, wrapping up their business — which included approving a new member of the club — in time for hotel cocktails and dinner in the Grand Ballroom of the Hotel del Coronado, a time-stands-still reminder of life in a more genteel era.

Perhaps the most significant decision made by the owners was one that attracted little attention. San Diego approving a new member of the club — in time for hotel cocktails and dinner in the Grand Ballroom of the Hotel del Coronado, a time-stands-still reminder of life in a more genteel era.

The league clearly is going for the jugular. Feeling that this last season was, at worst, a good "Year 10" for the league, that the negativism that has engulfed the NBA for years had been challenged in many areas, they want to accelerate the upward movement in any way possible.

CBS initiated this trend by spending heavily to get Bill Russell as a color man. The network sensed the turnaround in league image and acted immediately to exploit it. So, too, have the NBA owners sensed a general upsurge of interest. Holding the All-Star game halfway between Cleveland and Akron would not be a big boost for the league at this point. But by holding next year's All-Star game in the home arena of a celebrity-oriented owner such as Jerry Busch, and the next year's game in the Big Apple, the league is doing everything it can to publicize it.

The approval of Ted Stepien, a 55-year-old advertising executive from Cleveland, as owner of the Cavaliers adds yet another semi-eccentric to the league. He appears to be a forceful man who can't wait to start running the team on a day-to-day basis. Loquacious to a fault, he started his benign inquisitions the other day by referring to his

19-year-old daughter, a state finalist in the Ohio competition for the Miss America Pageant, as "lacked and very good-looking," adding that, "I'm her coach."

The board approved several proposals of the competition and rules committee. They came under the heading of "rules changes," although what they are in many cases are clarifications of game conduct. Among the alterations for next year:

- A ban on all jewelry, be it necklaces or earrings. Left open was the identity of the chap who will inform Darryl Dawkins of this development. This prohibition was a recommendation of the league physicians, who felt that fallen jewelry was a potential health hazard. "A necklace breaks, and somebody slips, tearing up his knee," explained C&R chairman Jerry Colangelo. "Nobody needs that."

- When a foul occurs, the ensuing jump ball will take place at midcourt, not at the nearest foul line.
- A red light will be placed behind and above the basket to signal the end of the game (in hockey's green light) — it will be tied to the game clock only, not to the 24-second clock.

- A flagrant foul will call for mandatory ejection. There were only three flagrant fouls in 602 league games last year, and only one of the three offenders, M.L. Carr, was ejected. Now anyone so cited will be heaved out.
- The word "injury" will be deleted from the 20-second timeout rule. The rule was abused severely last year (in one Celtic game two players simultaneously faked injuries), but the coaches want the strategic tool. So each team has one 20-second timeout at its disposal per half in addition to the seven full timeouts. The difference is that a trainer doesn't have to come out and fool around the way he does now.

- The three-point play has been approved officially as a permanent part of the NBA. It had entered the league as an experiment.

Their business concluded, the moguls could all return to the business of dreaming about the checks they'll be receiving from Dallas for joining the fraternity. They might not have needed any other reason to smile.

We would have got clobbered!

BATON ROUGE, La. (UPI) — Louisiana State University's basketball team, which was defeated by the United States in the final of the 1979 World University Basketball Championship in Moscow, said it would have won the game if it had been allowed to participate in the Olympics.

"If we had been allowed to participate in the Olympics, we would have won the game," said a team official. "The Russians were an absolute powerhouse. An absolute miracle." Brown said.

LPGA Nancy Lopez tops field in championship event

KINGS ISLAND, Ohio (UPI) — Nancy Lopez Melton, helped by a practice green-putting tip, shot a 5-under-par 67 Thursday to seize the first-round lead in the $150,000 LPGA Championship.

Lopez, the 1978 LPGA winner at the Jack Nicklaus Sports Center course, which is hosting the event for the third straight year, birdied four of five holes midway through her front side, in posting a 32-35-67 score on the par-72, 6,313-yard layout.

"I really didn't feel like I was putting well on the practice green," said Lopez, who won 17 tournaments in her first two years on tour, but only one so far this year.

"Jim Wilkins (most 'hot' came up and said it looked like I was picking my putter up," said Lopez, who resides at this resort area when not on tour. "He (Wilkins) knows how I usually putt, so I took the tip out on the course with me."

Thanks to the tip, Lopez used only 29 putts and was off to the practice green following her round for more work.

Lopez's 67 gave her a two-shot lead over 17 players, Sally Little, Jertlyn Byrd, last year's runner-up, and veteran Clifford Ann Creed, all shooting 69s.

Four other players, Barbara Moxness, Hollis Stacy, Donna Horton White, and Jane Blalock, were tied for fifth at 2 under par 70, while there was a large group bunched at 1 under 71, including JoAnne Carner, still looking for her first LPGA Championship title.

Defending champion Donna Caponi Yang bogeyed three of the last five holes and finished in a large group at 72 — which also included Jo Ann Washam and Beth Daniel, last week's tour winner at New Rochelle, N.Y.

"I must have some shots and some mistakes, but I'm all right. You'll hear from me."

Little made the bird in a modest 5-under-par 65, but turned the 10th, 12th and 14th holes to go 4 under par and stand only one shot off the lead. She bogeyed the 32-yard uphill 17th, however, when she drove into the rough.

"I hate to be behind Nancy," said Little. "For her to have a start like that is a little scary."

Creed, a veteran member of the LPGA and an 11-time winner on the tour, began her nine-hole bogey, 34-35-69. Britz matched Creed's totals.

"I think I have a chance to win if I keep hitting the ball well," said Creed. "I do still come out here expecting to win."

The field of 118 will be cut to the low 70 next time following today's second round.

Sanford's showing highlights opening day of NCAA track

AUSTIN, Texas (UPI) — USC speedster James Sanford blasted into the semifinals of the 100- and 200-meter dashes at the NCAA track and field championships Thursday night and led the Trojans 400-meter relay team to the fastest time of the night.

Sanford's performance highlighted a long day of qualifying in the national championships in which UCLA and Texas also fought to push their top competitors into various final events.

UTEP, UCLA and USC are expected to fight it out for the team title to be decided Saturday night. Sanford, in his third year at USC, started the day by running the third leg on the Trojans 400-meter relay team that Memorial Stadium, site of this year's meet, and easily bested the second best time of the day — Alabama's 39.29.

Then Sanford returned to run a wind-aided 100 in the 100-meter dash with the wind blowing at 3.39 meters per second, well over the 2.00 meters per second allowed for a time to be considered for a record.

The world record in the 100 meters is 9.95, set by Jim Hines 12 years ago, and Sanford earlier this year ran a 9.88 wind-aided 100 meters.

Finally, Sanford came back to capture his heat in the 200 meters in 20.21.

Finals in the 100 meters will be held Friday, with the 200 meters and 400-meter relay titles to be decided on Saturday.

Sanford said his time in the 100 could have been faster had he not destroyed his competition through the first 70 meters of the race.

"I stepped up at the end because I knew I didn't have to press it," said Sanford. "I'm determined to win here. From here on in I'll be tough."

Sanford said he expected his toughest competition in the finals to come from Auburn's Stanley Floyd, who won his heat in 10.32.

"I think Floyd will be really tough," he said, "but Roberson (Michael Roberson of Florida State) will have to be watched, too. Jerome Beal (the defending champion from Texas) and Pataso who finished second in his heat) has been a factor all over the year and you just can't let them off."

UCLA, which jumped in front of the meet with 10 first place points from decathlon champion Mark Anderson Wednesday night, lost some momentum earlier Thursday when Anderson had to withdraw from the javelin because of an aggravated knee injury.

Anderson holds the UCLA javelin record and was expected to pick up points for the Bruins in that event.

UCLA also failed to push either of its 800 meter runners into the semifinals while UTEP qualified two in the 800 meters, one in the steeplechase and one in the hammer throw. In addition, UTEP's Bert Cameron turned in the day's best time in the 400 meters, a 45.07.

Other than Sanford's performance, USC had little about which to be excited. Only two other members of the Trojans team, pole vaulter Jerry Mulligan and 400-meter runner William Kern, advanced past qualifying Thursday.

Other top performances Thursday night came from Sydney Marce of Villanova in the 1,500 meters (3:43.47), Matt Mileham of Fresno State in the hammer throw (223.7) and Denes Paltas of Texas in the javelin (255.7).

Among the disappointments was the failure of former champion Franklin Jacobs of Fairleigh Dickinson to appear for the high jump competition. No reason was given for Jacobs' absence.

Expos rally past Cubs

MONTREAL (UPI) — Rowland Office cracked a two-run homer in the seventh inning and Scott Sanderson lost a six-hit Thursday night to lead the Montreal Expos to a 2-0 victory over the Chicago Cubs.

With one out in the seventh, Warren Cromartie laid down a bunt and was safe on first and Office followed with his first home run as an Expo. Dennis Lamp, 4-5, served up the homer.

Sanderson, who brought his record to 6-3, helped the Expos win for the 18th time in their last 24 games. He walked two and struck out eight in posting his first shutout of the season and second complete game of the season. He combined with Woodie Fryman for a shutout earlier in the season.

'Sanderson' encountered trouble in the sixth inning when he gave up two singles but forced Jerry Martin to fly out to center, ending the threat.

11th homer in the second inning accounted for the Cardinals' run.

The Mets tied 1-1 in the second on a triple by John Stearns and Henderson's infield out.

Twins rained out.

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (UPI) — The Minnesota Twins' game with the Toronto Blue Jays was called off Thursday night because of the threat of severe weather.

The game will be replayed Sunday as part of a double-header starting at 1:15 p.m. CDT.

All of southern Minnesota, including Met Stadium in the Twin Cities, was under a formed watch from 5 p.m. to 11 p.m.

Royals 8, Rangers 0

ARLINGTON, Texas (UPI) — Frank White hit a three-run homer to pace a 14-hit Kansas City attack and Dennis Leonard pitched a three-hitter Thursday night to give the Royals an 8-0 victory over the Texas Rangers.

White's third-inning shot, his second home run of the year, came off starter Jim Kern, 2-4, and followed a triple by U.L. Washington and a walk to Willie Wilson to make it 3-0. Kern gave up a home run to Amos Otis, his first, in the fourth to raise the score to 4-0.

Thursday's Sports Transactions

Chicago's Steve Garvey hit a two-run homer in the seventh inning to lead the Cubs to a 2-0 victory over the Montreal Expos.

The Mets tied 1-1 in the second on a triple by John Stearns and Henderson's infield out.

Twins rained out.

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (UPI) — The Minnesota Twins' game with the Toronto Blue Jays was called off Thursday night because of the threat of severe weather.

The game will be replayed Sunday as part of a double-header starting at 1:15 p.m. CDT.

All of southern Minnesota, including Met Stadium in the Twin Cities, was under a formed watch from 5 p.m. to 11 p.m.

ARLINGTON, Texas (UPI) — Frank White hit a three-run homer to pace a 14-hit Kansas City attack and Dennis Leonard pitched a three-hitter Thursday night to give the Royals an 8-0 victory over the Texas Rangers.

White's third-inning shot, his second home run of the year, came off starter Jim Kern, 2-4, and followed a triple by U.L. Washington and a walk to Willie Wilson to make it 3-0. Kern gave up a home run to Amos Otis, his first, in the fourth to raise the score to 4-0.

Ranger to miss 5 weeks

ARLINGTON, Texas (UPI) — Right-handed pitcher Danny Darwin, who moved into the Texas Rangers starting rotation because of injuries, will miss about five weeks because of a fractured knuckle suffered in a brawl with Chicago White Sox fans, team officials said Thursday.

Darwin, who had the lowest ERA (2.13) and best winning percentage (.800 with a 4-1 record) among regular Texas pitchers, was scheduled to pitch Thursday night when the Rangers opened a four-game series against Kansas City, leader in the American League West.

Darwin was one of the first players to come to the aid of outfielder Mickey Rivers, when he was harassed by two Chicago fans after the Rangers had split a doubleheader at Comiskey Park.

Rivers was en route to the team bus for a trip to the airport when the melee started. Darwin, infielder Pepe Frias, first baseman John Ellis and outfielder Jim Norris quickly left the bus to help Rivers and were joined by about seven other players. More fans also joined the fight.

The fight was broken up by about 20 members of the stadium's security force.

Evert reaches French Open finals

PARIS (UPI) — Defending champion Chris Evert Lloyd, getting mad at herself after dropping the first set, staged a relentless recovery Thursday to outgrip Czechoslovakia's Hana Mandlikova, 6-7, 6-2, 6-2, to gain the final of the $500,000 French Open tennis championships.

Evert's opponent in Saturday's final will be Romanian Virginia Ruzici, who earned her crack at the $42,500 first prize with a 7-6, 6-1 victory over Australian Dianne Fromholtz.

The 25-year-old American, steeper and a better court tactician, played more consistently than her brilliant but erratic opponent in the 2-hour and 2-minute center-court match played in 100 degree heat.

Evert, who has now lost only one of her last 159 clay court matches, said, "I felt clumsy today, particularly in the first set. I wasn't really in the groove. After losing the first I got mad at myself and tried to be as aggressive as possible, hitting the ball hard and even coming to the net to volley."

"Hana's aggression won the first set," added Evert, who had a set point but finally lost the tie-break 8-6.

"Chris really began to concentrate in the second set," Mandlikova said later.

Evert was concentrating so hard on winning that "Mandlikova inadvertently served the first game in the second set after the tie-break instead of her opponent. But none of the officials or either of the players realized the mistake.

"I looked up at the scoreboard and saw the light against Hana's name to indicate her turn to serve and I couldn't figure it out because I was tired from the opening set," Evert explained.

But the blunder favored Evert. She broke her opponent's serve and then raced to a 3-1 lead. Evert broke serve again in the seventh game after two badly-placed forehands by the Czech girl and then rounded off the second set in 34 minutes.

The American forged ahead 4-0 in the deciding set before Mandlikova recovered by taking the next two games. But Evert broke serve again and then clinched a place in the final by winning on her third match point.

"The final will be easier for me mentally because Hana is so unpredictable and usually more dangerous than Virginia," Evert said.

Eighth-seeded Ruzici, the 1978 Italian and French Open champion, showed her fine forehand touch against Fromholtz, who was also beaten in last year's semifinals.

Ruzici said the crucial point came when Fromholtz was leading 4-3 in the first set and 30-0 on Ruzici's serve.

"But then I served an ace and this seemed to give me confidence,"

Ruzici said. "I got back to 30-0 and then got stronger throughout the set."

Ruzici won the tie-break 7-1 and then with a series of neat cross court lobs and finely angled forehands took the second set.

The odds are stacked against Ruzici in the final, however. The Romanian has met Evert nine times in her career and lost every time.

In the men's semifinals today, Bjorn Borg meets Harold Solomon and Jimmy Connors plays Vitas Gerulaitis.

Jackson shooter held on bail for $50,000

NEW YORK (UPI) — A 25-year-old man accused of firing three shots at New York Yankee slugger Reggie Jackson was ordered held on $50,000 bail Thursday.

Manhattan Criminal Court Judge John T. Bracey led an attorney for Angel Viera of New York that the prosecution had presented a "strong case" for the attempted murder charge, and he sent the case to the grand jury.

Bracey denied Viera's request to drop that charge, as well as charges of reckless endangerment and weapons violations.

Viera claimed he was "frightened" when Jackson and two men, one wielding a club, chased him down an east side street early Sunday.

Viera was arrested following a dispute with Jackson, who was unable to drive his car down the street because Viera's vehicle was blocking it. The two exchanged racial epithets and Viera reportedly threw bottles at the baseball slugger.

Jackson had two men chased Viera, who police charged, drew a gun and fired three shots at his pursuers.

Reds think they can repeat as champions

CINCINNATI (UPI) — Cincinnati Reds manager John McNamara has told his players they are the best in the National League West and can repeat as division champs.

The Reds, idle Thursday, open a seven-game homestand tonight. Cincinnati San Diego for four games, and then Pittsburgh for three games.

Cincinnati trails NL West leader Los Angeles by two games, but McNamara said he told his players in a meeting this week, "So what if we're two games behind, it's still early in the season."

"I haven't seen a club we've played in our division that's better than we are. If the guys on this team are willing to make sacrifices, give 100 percent of what they have, they can repeat as title winners."

The Reds have been hit hard by injuries already this season, but McNamara says they can overcome.

"Injuries are part of the game," he said. "We had them last year and we overcame them. My belief is that the team that wants the title most, the one that plays with intensity, will wind up the winner."

On the current injured list is Tom Seaver, who will not be able to pitch in the San Diego series.

Seaver says the pulled muscle in his left buttocks is feeling better, "but I'll still miss one pitching turn. There's no sense rushing back the way I did last year."

Against the Padres, the Reds plan to pitch Frank Pastore, Mike LaCoss, Paul Moskwa and Charlie Leibrandt.

Second baseman Junior Kennedy, sidelined recently because of a bad big toe, figures to return to the lineup Friday night.

Codex rated 2-1 favorite to take Belmont

NEW YORK (UPI) — Angel Cordero Jr. didn't flinch at the battery of microphones and television cameras pointed in his direction Thursday morning at the draw for the 121st running of the $228,700 Belmont Stakes.

He didn't mind the series of questions on the Preakness and his questionable ride aboard Codex, or the fact that the crowd buzzed in anticipation of another incident when Codex and Genuine Risk drew side-by-side post positions as a field of 10 was drawn for the 1 1/4-mile race.

In fact, the talented rider seemed to thrive on the attention.

"Look, if I was going to be scared by controversy I would have retired five years ago," said Cordero.

On Saturday, Cordero once again will be aboard Codex when the big California colt seeks to prove his victory in the Preakness wasn't a fluke. Conversely, Genuine Risk will be out to prove she could have been a Triple Crown winner if it hadn't been for the incident on the far turn at Pimlico in which Cordero allegedly used Codex to cut off her path to victory.

And Rumbo will be out to spoil the showdown.

Codex, who Wednesday was upheld as the winner of the Preakness when the Maryland Racing Commission denied the appeal by Genuine Risk's owners, drew post position No. 2 in the Belmont and was tagged the 2-1 choice. Genuine Risk, the Kentucky Derby winning filly, drew the rail and was established as the 4-1 third choice behind Rumbo at 10-1.

Also entered were Rockhill Native (10-1), Comptroller (8-1), Super Moment (8-1), Temperence Hill (15-1), Joante's Chief (50-1), Pikotazo (15-1) and Bing (50-1).

"I don't see any problem, but if Codex and Genuine Risk get married I hope they name the foal 'Controversy,'" quipped Cordero. "I just hope they don't fall in love in the starting gate."

Cordero laughed at accusations made by Jacinto

Vasquez — Genuine Risk's rider — that he used "rodeo tactics" in the Preakness.

"I'll come out Saturday with my cowboy hat and my lasso," he joked, but added: "I'm not going to be 'more cautious.' I'm going to ride the same way I've ridden for the past 20 years. Codex is one of the best horses I've ever ridden. Whatever happened in the Preakness is behind."

Certainly handicappers feel Codex is the horse to beat in the Belmont, although this will be the first time the big colt has raced without benefit of the pain-killer "bute," which is against New York racing rules.

"It gives the horse an advantage of being able to bounce back after a race and be ready for the next race," said trainer Wayne Lukas. "We use bute 100 per cent of the time and we're doing all we can to get Codex ready without it. He's a well-muscled colt, something like a Larry Combs or a Pete Rose and it takes him some time to warm up."

"But I feel very confident you'll like the way he travels over this track."

Another California horse, Rumbo, has also indicated he likes the strip at Belmont and put in a strong gallop Thursday morning.

"He just skipped over the track," said trainer Ray Bell. The complete field for the Belmont, which will be televised by CBS beginning at 9 p.m. MDT with post time of 3:42, listed from the rail out:

Genuine Risk (Jacinto Vasquez), Codex (Angel Cordero, Jr.), Temperence Hill (Eddie Maple), Bing (Jean Cruguet), Comptroller (Ramon Encinas), Pikotazo (Ruben Hernandez), Rockhill Native (John Oldham), Rumbo (Bill Shoemaker), Super Moment (Laffit Pincay) and Joante's Chief (Angel Santillan).

All will carry 126 pounds with the exception of Genuine Risk, who receives a five-pound sex allowance.

Bears may have to play on the road all year

CHICAGO (UPI) — Chicago Bears officials said Thursday they may have to play all their 1980-81 home games on the road if the Chicago Park District does not soften its rental demands for Soldier Field.

The Park District is trying to get a long-term lease with the Bears to serve as the basic financial element of a multimillion-dollar renovation. The Bears have offered a $1-per-ticket surcharge in addition to the 12 percent of gross ticket sales they already pay.

The district is asking for a $1.50 surcharge.

Owner George Halas met with Mayor Jane M. Byrne and Park District President Raymond Simon Thursday morning and later held a news conference to discuss the impasse.

"It's impossible to do what they ask," Halas said. "It's impossible to sock the fans for more money."

Halas said he has been negotiating leases since he asked Bill Vecek Sr. for a 50-year lease in Wrigley Field in 1921. He said the current situation is "a bit untasteful and a little bit embarrassing to me."

Bears General Manager Jim Finks said the Park District would get about $1,427,000 from the 12 percent cut of ticket sales plus the $1 surcharge the Bears are offering. Proceeds from parking concessions and indoor advertising would bring the district's total take to about $2.2 million, Finks said.

"If the proposal the Bears have made, which would generate approximately $2 million, is not enough, then, yes, we'll play on the road," Finks said. "If they are relying upon one tenant to cover the expenses (of renovation), they're wrong."

"If they expect the Bears to go beyond that, there's not a chance for us staying," Finks said. "I think the offer the Bears have made is more than our fair share."

Halas said the mayor told him, "We'll keep on talking." There has been no decision when to meet again but there is no deadline.

However, Finks said, "We're going on the assumption Soldier Field will be available" for the coming season.

"If worse came to worst, I'd like to see us play in Soldier Field and eliminate the renovation."

Coe runs fast 800 meter race

LOUGHBOROUGH, England (UPI) — Triple world-record holder Sebastian Coe, making light work of a cold wind and a crumbling cinder track, Thursday ran the second fastest 800 meters in the world this year when he clocked 1 minute 45.00 seconds at a local track and field meet.

Coe's time was well outside his 11-month-old world record time of 1:42.3, but only East German Andreas Busse has gone faster this year with 1:44.8 and that was in far better conditions.

Coe, who also holds the world record for the 1500 meters and one mile, plans to run another 800 meters in next Saturday's Northern England championships before tackling his first 1500 meters of the season in Stockholm June 26.

Gretzky wins most valuable NHL award

MONTREAL (UPI) — Teen-age superstar Wayne Gretzky capped his stunning first season in the NHL Thursday by winning the Hart Trophy as the league's most valuable player and the Lady Byng Trophy as the most gentlemanly player.

The Edmonton Oilers center, who turned 19 on Jan. 26, thus becomes the youngest player ever to win the prestigious Hart award, and the youngest ever to win two awards in one season.

Hall of Famer Bobby Orr, born

March 20, 1948, remains the league's youngest award winner ever. He won the Calder Trophy as the league's MVP in 1967 when he was 19, two months younger than Gretzky. Orr was the previous youngest Hart winner in 1969-70 when he was 22.

Montreal Canadiens captured the James Norris award as the league's outstanding defenseman for a second time. His teammate Bob Gainey won the Frank J. Selke Trophy as the top defensive forward for the third straight year.

Ray Bourque of the Boston Bruins, who had one of the best rookie seasons in league history, won the Calder Trophy as the most outstanding rookie. Veteran, Larry Robinson of the

In winning the dual award, Gretzky laid claim to being the most talented youngster in NHL history, certainly the best since Orr joined the league in the 1966-67 season.

Baseball owners ratify players' pact

CHICAGO (UPI)—Major league baseball owners took less than 90 minutes Thursday to vote 21-5 to ratify the basic agreement hammered out last month to avoid a strike by players.

Ray Grebey, who represented the owners in the negotiations, said the settlement was outlined to the 26 owners and there was little discussion of the terms.

He said teams voting against the proposal, which was initiated by representatives of the Players Association and the owners on the morning of May 23, were St. Louis, Oakland, Minnesota, Cleveland and San Diego.

"There was a great spirit of support and understanding that prevailed throughout the meeting," Grebey said. "We gave our presentation point-by-point and after about a half hour's worth of discussion the vote was taken."

St. Louis Cardinal President August Busch was apparently the most militant opponent among the owners, maintaining they should have stood firm on the key players' compensation issue.

Kuhn to form agent committee

CHICAGO (UPI)—Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn Thursday expressed confidence a soon-to-be formed committee to discuss players compensation will be successful if "given the chance to work."

However, Kuhn, speaking after baseball owners ratified the Basic Agreement proposal agreed to last month, would not speculate whether the issue will lead to a baseball strike next spring.

"It is given a chance to work. I think this committee will be able to come up with a concrete proposal," Kuhn said. "I would rather not get into the business of predicting whether there will be a strike or no strike."

"He insisted that we stand firm on it or have a strike," the negotiator said. "It was an honest difference of opinion."

Gene Autry, owner of the California Angels, had circulated a letter urging the owners not to accept the proposal but when it came time for the Angels to vote, Executive Vice President Buzzie Bavasi wound up voting for the proposal.

Dan Galbreath, owner of the Pittsburgh Pirates, said, "This sounds a little corny but I honestly believe that the victory was for baseball, rather than the owners or the players. I think for the first time we got together with both parties and worked something concrete out."

The players' compensation issue was the major roadblock to both sides reaching agreement until just hours before the players' May 23 strike deadline.

Under the provision, a study committee made up of two players and two general managers will convene no later than Aug. 1 to review the current method of awarding compensation to teams who lose free agents.

The committee will study the system through the November free agent draft and submit a joint report or separate reports by next January.

If changes are recommended, bargaining would begin and if an agreement is reached, it would be made part of the basic pact.

If the two sides can't agree, the owners may put into effect the compensation clause they proposed during the six months of negotiations. It would involve awarding a major or minor leaguer to clubs that lose what is considered a "front-line" free agent.

But if the owners take that option, the Players Association may reopen the discussion on the player selection provision and again threaten to strike.

The association would have to notify the owners of the reopening by March 1, 1981 and also inform them of when the players would strike. Such a strike would have to start no later than June 1.

Pebble Beach '82 host

FAR HILLS, N.J. (UPI)—The 82nd U.S. Open will be held at the Pebble Beach Golf Links in Pebble Beach, Calif., June 17-20, 1982, USGA President Will F. Nicholson Jr. announced Thursday.

Generally rated as the most scenic course ever to host the Open, Pebble Beach has been the site of one previous U.S. Open and six other USGA events.

Robertson to coach Pistons

PONTIAC, Mich. (UPI)—Scotty Robertson was named the 18th coach in Detroit Pistons history Thursday and put himself on the spot by saying last year's team which won only 16 games could turn into a winner "this year."

"I like this team," Robertson said of a Pistons' squad that went 16-66 under first Dick Vitale and then Billie Aubato, who look over when Vitale was fired in 12 games into the franchise's 23rd year.

"I think we can win. I'm not talking about down the road — I mean this year," said Robertson, 50, who left a job as assistant to Del Harris of the Houston Rockets to sign a multi-year contract for an undisclosed salary to coach the Pistons.

The native of Fort Smith, Ark., who made his college reputation with a 10-year 18-88 record at Louisiana Tech, was the first coach of the New Orleans Jazz but lost that job when the expansion team got off to a 1-14 start.

He moved up from assistant to compile an 11-15 record with the Chicago Bulls when Larry Costello was fired as their coach at the end of the 1977-78 season. He also assisted Cotton Fitzsimmons at Louisiana Tech, was the first coach of the New Orleans Jazz but lost that job when the expansion team got off to a 1-14 start.

"Now I'm back at the top. Detroit, regardless of its record, is tops to me. I think the talent, I like the direction. I like the ownership and (General Manager) Jack McKeon are going in," Robertson said.

Curtis Cup play opens in England

CHEPSTOW, England (UPI)—Britain and Ireland women golfers have gone "American" in a bid to end a 20 year-losing sequence when they take on the United States in the 21st Curtis Cup match today and Saturday.

The home team will play the 1.68 inch ball, while the Americans, given a free choice, will probably opt for the 1.62 inch "British ball."

American captain Nancy Syms, surprised to find the bi-annual match being staged on a lush, tree-lined circuit on the St. Pierre course instead of the customary links, commented "It all depends on the weather conditions but my team enjoys the extra length they get from the moist ball and I've left it up to them. Most of them plan to use it."

For the British and Irish, captained by Carole Comboy, the big ball is a must.

"Our professional advisors Geoff Cotton and John Stirling both stressed during our preparation how much it suits the parkland course and is a natural one to use," Comboy said.

"The premium here is on accuracy, not length, and all our teams have been practicing with it."

Just what can affect the mass exodus of top amateurs to Britain's new professional circuit has had on women's golf will be crystal clear in the next 48 hours.

Comboy's five new members in her lineup and only Mary McKenna, Tegwin Thomas and Carole Geldwell have previous cup experience.

Syms, 41-year-old veteran of three cup contests, a qualified pilot and a competitive marathon runner, reckons she possesses one of the outstanding U.S. teams.

"It's got more quality strength than any I have been associated with," she said.

Syms could be right, especially if the 19-year-old babe of the team, Lori Castillo, lives up to her advance publicity.

Carter opens family confab

BALTIMORE (UPI) — President Carter, sidestepping controversial issues, opened the White House Conference on Families Thursday with a call for making American homes "a place of love and stability."

To 600 delegates who listened respectfully, but with little aplomb, Carter mixed reminiscences of his own family with broad outlines for stronger family structures.

"I grew up in a strong, loving family," he remarked in his keynote address to the conference, which grew out of an early promise during the 1976 campaign. "Our deepest joys today are the times when all of us are together."

About 150 cheering schoolchildren stood along the pier to welcome Carter when his helicopter landed at Fort McHenry on a warm, cloudless afternoon. Carter, smiling, walked over to them and shook hands for a few minutes.

The president urged the conference to be "the catalyst for a new awareness in government of the importance of families and the needs of families."

"Where government involvement is helpful, let it be strengthened," he said. "Where it is harmful, let it be changed."

"We do not want government in our kitchens, bedrooms and living rooms, monitoring and controlling family life."

But he said government actions affect families in many ways:

"When we get control of inflation, it touches every family. When we bring down interest rates it touches every family. When we improve education and health, it touches every family."

"When we insist on equal justice and equal rights, we help the American family. When we work for a secure nation and a peaceful world, we help the American family."

Carter did not lay out any specific agenda — such as proposing day care or other family-related programs.

While acknowledging that more families today are one-parent households, the president made no direct comment on some issues that provided discussion in conference planning — for instance, whether homosexual couples and single people living together constitute families.

But he said every family is unique and the love of family can be found in many circumstances.

He also quoted a story his brother, Billy, told during the 1976 campaign: "I've got a sister about 50 who spends every weekend on a motorcycle. I've got another sister who is a Holy Roller preacher, my mother joined the Peace Corp at 68, I have a brother who thinks he's going to be president. I'm the only sane one in the whole clan."

Two tourists who were parked at an unguarded roadblock on the road to Spirit Lake that fateful morning of May 18 said they outraced a cloud of volcanic debris and hot ash flows that swept others to their deaths.

Gil Baker, a professional photographer, and Kathie Baker described their escape in a car at speeds of up to 100 miles per hour as a cloud of debris descended. They said they left the roadblock with a black cloud surrounding them "like a tunnel."

"We're 99 percent sure it's him," said Richard.

The victim, Robert Landsburg, 49, Portland, Ore., was known to live in the area at the time of the cataclysmic eruption and had been listed as missing ever since.

Landsburg said searchers found a wallet containing his brother's identification in a knapsack on the ground near the body.

"The latest body, tentatively identified as that of a missing photographer, was found Wednesday three miles west of the steaming mountain near the headwaters of the south fork of the Toulou River."

Skeptical military helicopter crews were persuaded by the victim's brother, Richard Landsburg, to search the devastated blast area one

Scientists say volcano still dangerous

VANCOUVER, Wash. (UPI) — Geologists warned Wednesday that the relative quietness of Mount St. Helens for the past several days "may be a lull in the past."

Jim Hall of the U.S. Geological Survey said the volcano also had been increasing its earth-shaking activity before it blew up May 18, devastating a 450-square-mile area.

Researchers found the body of a 22nd victim of that blast which survivors said sent a thick ash cloud like "boiling oil, bubbling high" racing down the mountain at speeds nearing 100 miles an hour.

The latest body, tentatively identified as that of a missing photographer, was found Wednesday three miles west of the steaming mountain near the headwaters of the south fork of the Toulou River."

Skeptical military helicopter crews were persuaded by the victim's brother, Richard Landsburg, to search the devastated blast area one more time. They found the body a few yards from the front end of an automobile which was sticking up out of the volcanic ash.

Landsburg said searchers found a wallet containing his brother's identification in a knapsack on the ground near the body.

Drug $ addicts banks

WASHINGTON (UPI) — So many billions of dollars in illegal drug profits are flowing through Miami that some banks have become "addicted" to the cash, Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., charged Thursday.

"Miami is virtually drowning in cash from drugs," Proxmire, the chairman of the Senate Banking Committee, said during hearings on the effect of South Florida's $7 billion annual illegal drug trade on banks.

While other areas of the country report currency shortages, an estimated $6 billion in surplus cash sits in the Federal Reserve this year by the Miami area "is at least twice as large as the surplus reported in all other Fed offices combined," said Proxmire.

Proxmire said the banks and the entire economy of the region have been corrupted. "Not only are millions of Americans addicted to drugs, many banks are addicted to drug money," he said.

Former Miami federal prosecutor Jerome Sanford testified that six to 10 Miami area banks are the main outlets for "laundering" the drug money. A multitude of methods are used to make it difficult to trace the cash.

Sanford said one scheme involves setting up a phony "bank" in the Bahamas — out of reach from U.S. banking regulations — and transferring drug cash from a Miami bank by wire as a "bank-to-bank" transfer exempt from reporting requirements.

The only bank Sanford named was the National Bank of South Florida in Hialeah, Fla., — described by one former employee as a "laundermat" which, according to witnesses who Sanford quoted, received money from depositors "bringing cash into the bank in large sums in paper bags, shopping bags, attache cases and other containers — that smelled funny."

Banking regulations violations found by auditors in 1977 resulted only in the misdemeanor prosecution of one bank official, who was acquitted, he said.

Sanford said there is no "tangible, patent proof" that some banks may be owned by drug traffickers.

Cancer insurance attacked

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Cancer insurance policies pay at most 25 percent of the costs of treating the disease and are twice as expensive as comprehensive group medical insurance, according to a study released Thursday.

And, the study said, firms selling cancer policies tend to exaggerate the risks of cancer and the benefits of such insurance protection.

The study estimated cancer insurance pays on the average no more than $3,700 of the $17,000 cost of treating the disease over three years.

At best, the study said, 29 percent of the costs are covered.

The lowest payoff by a comprehensive group policy for a cancer ailment, said the study, was 29 percent of the cost, while group insurance can pay as much as 71 percent.

In one case cited by the study, a patient whose bills were $12,713 got $3,638 through a cancer policy, while a typical group insurer would have paid $11,383.

Part of the reason for the gap between benefits and the total cost of the ailment, said the study, is the low hospitalization benefits in cancer policies and no coverage for outpatient services.

The study said while promotional material being used by cancer insurance companies "accurately explains the premium, the risk of cancer and the benefits provided by the policies are not adequately explained."

Some policies, said the study, tell prospective buyers cancer is the leading killer of school-age children but "Children of school age are very unlikely to die of any cause and if they do die, the chances are four times greater for accidental death than for cancer death."

National health insurance predicted

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Health and Welfare Secretary Patricia Harris predicted Thursday that government-backed national health insurance will be a reality "in our lifetime."

"In my opinion the major impediment to the speedy adoption of national health insurance is a concern that the health care cost rise is inexorable, and that the best way to control health costs is by limiting coverage and access to health care," she said.

But the government's role in both improving more access to medical care and in controlling costs "is here to stay," she said.

"It may take two months. It may take two years. It may take two decades, but it will come," she added. "It may come in pieces; it may come in total, but full health insurance will come, and in our lifetime."

Scout center in use though unfinished

TWIN FALLS — The new Boy Scout Center in Twin Falls isn't finished, but that isn't keeping it from being used.

Del Hanks, executive director of the Snake River Area Scouting Council, said a grand opening and ribbon cutting for the center won't be held until construction is finished and the center is paid for, which will probably be during the summer. But the center has been open and operating since Jan. 15.

"We moved in before the carpet was in," Hanks said. The early move saved money, though, he said.

Wednesday the center was turned over to the Twin Falls Chapter of Lions International, who made one of the largest single contributions toward building the center.

The Lions held their regular weekly meeting in the second-story rooms in the center. After lunch and other club business, Hanks spoke to club members.

He thanked the Lions for the $5,000 contribution and he let them know the money has been used almost entirely to buy materials needed for the center. Virtually all of the labor needed to build the center has been donated, he said.

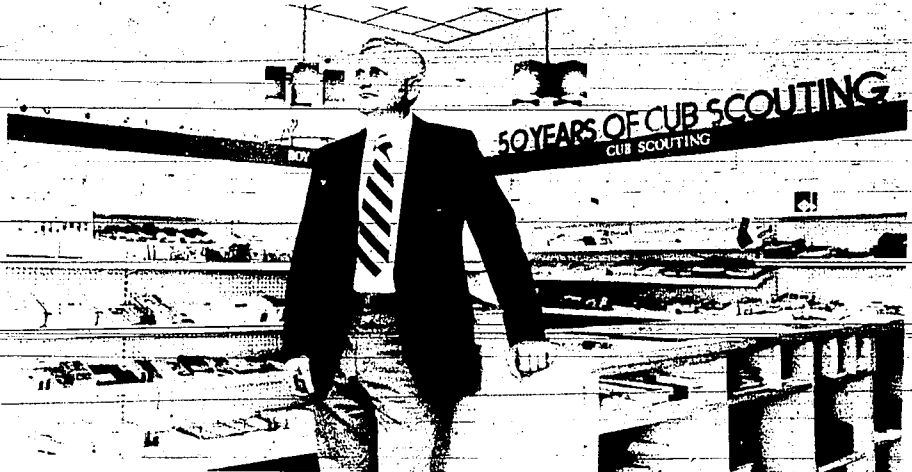

"This is your building," Hanks said. "It's here to serve the community."

The Boy Scout Center sits on a 2.7 acre lot on Falls Avenue East. The outside of the building is brick and wood. Landscaping and a parking lot still need to be completed.

Inside, the building has offices for Scouting executives, equipment to put out monthly mailings, meeting rooms, and a store with all the merit badges and handbooks Scouts need.

It will serve as the nerve center for Scouting in the Magic Valley. Hanks said, "A lot of people don't realize how big Scouting is. It's the largest youth program in the Magic Valley," he said. There are more than 5,000 Scouts and 1,800 adult volunteers who keep the program running.

Hanks said the Boy Scouts still need $39,000 to finish the work on the center and pay for it. The completed facility will be worth about $300,000, he said.

FIRST AGAIN

According to figures just published by the U.S. Government, Amana® refrigerators — in 5 of 8 different size categories — from 12 to 25 cubic feet — have the lowest estimated yearly operating costs.

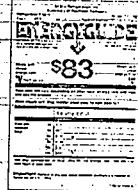

Amana is first again with money savers. Money savers like our 2-2½" Energy Saver refrigerators. And our larger Free-O-Frost® refrigerators — our 23 cubic foot freezer-on-top model and our 25 cubic foot side-by-side model.

To save energy, our 2-2½" refrigerators are packed with extra insulation. Up to two full inches of foam wall insulation around the refrigerator section. And up to two and a half inches around the freezer. Conventionally insulated refrigerators give you only about one and three-quarters inches around both sections.

And every Amana refrigerator features a 3-position Energy-Saver control. It lets you match the operation of the refrigerator to the humidity conditions in your home. Starting May 19, every newly-manufactured refrigerator will be labeled with estimated yearly operating costs for you to compare. So check the costs for yourself. Then check with your Amana retailer. # At Wit's End Advertising not such bad idea

By ERMA BOMBECK

© Field Enterprises, Inc.

I have never underestimated the power of advertising.

Promise people anything — squeaky hair, sweet breath, clean laundry or relief from embarrassing itching — and they'll trample you to death on your way to the store.

Even in the area of selecting a husband or a wife, advertising seems to be gaining in popularity.

A bachelor in Georgia lettered a big sign that read: "WANTED, GOOD WIFE, NEW OR USED, NO COLLECT CALLS," and displayed it on Route 137. As far as I know, he's still interviewing.

Another ad, with a little more sophistication, was placed in a newspaper by a man in Wisconsin. He advertised for a woman not taller than 5-5, weighing no more than 115 pounds, a non-smoker, infrequent drinker, frugal, aggressive, studious, a late sleeper who preferred a house temperature of not more than 65 degrees. He preferred an agnostic and was willing to negotiate for not more than two children. His responses were in the hundreds.

Some people feel this is demeaning to an institution like marriage. I disagree.

The benefits of advertising should be obvious. At least you know where you stand better to find out at the top that your husband plans to keep the thermostat at 65 and under than to go through life feeling like you're living in a House of Wax.

How many women would have gotten stuck with ring-around-the-finger had they known their men had terminal ring-around-the-collar? Pin-strip cameras are fun... but a one-step husband to a woman who likes it dance is something to deal with.

Let's stop kidding ourselves. We're grown up. We know what we want out of marriage and should give as much as we get. It's not as if we do when we're buying any major purchase like a car or an airline ticket.

My husband said he wished he'd have asked for a guarantee of parts or at least more extensive insurance to cover me. During the first six months of our marriage, I had my tonsils-out, extensive dental-work mumps, and my feet worked on.

Quite frankly, I would have examined the 50-50 clause a little closer. I didn't realize the bathroom and the children were always to be in my part of the house.

If we had both known what "Marry now... pay later" meant... maybe we'd have read the ads and shopped a little.

Memorial fund established

MOSCOW—A Fry Memorial Fund has been established at the University of Idaho from a $85,869.47 contribution.

The gift was made from the estate of Helen E. Fry of Sacramento, Calif., in memory of her husband, Marvin Fry, who earned a bachelor of science degree in electrical engineering at UI in 1918.

The fund, according to Dr. Ernest Hartung, director of development for the University of Idaho Foundation, must be used for improvement of academics. "It has the flexibility to enable us to meet our academic needs where they are greatest. We hope this fine contribution will be the first of many to this fund to help us improve and advance the special academic programs at the University of Idaho."

Rosenbaum-Linderman

MR. AND MRS. ROBERT K. LINDERMANN

Buhl — Jann Lisa Rosenbaum of Buhl and Robert Keith Linderman of Twin Falls exchanged wedding vows May 17.

The ceremony was performed at the First Christian Church of Buhl by Dr. James Huckaba.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Rosenbaum of Buhl and the bridegroom is the son of Sharon Linderman of Twin Falls and the late Robert Keith Linderman.

The bride wore a floor-length gown of white organza with French chantilly lace. The gown featured a Queen Anne neckline, lace sleeves and bodice sprinkled with miniature pearls and the skirt had an apron overlaying of ruffled fluting and lace. She wore a halo hat of matching chantilly lace and applied flower trim.

Teresa Knopp was matron of honor. Tam Linderman, sister of the bridegroom, Ann Rangen, Lori Huffaker and Chris Bonar were bridesmaids.

Brandy Adoll, cousin of the bride, was flower girl.

Jim Lindsey was best man. Brad McElliot, Brent Perkins, Steve Daigh and Rod Rosenbaum were groomsmen.

Sandi Solis and Brent Newman were ringbearers.

Michelle Bonar was organist, Terry Lechner and Cindy Farmer sang.

Candlelighters were Holly Brodeen and Leitha Solis.

A reception following the ceremony was held in the social room of the Christian Church.

Jamie McElliot registered guests and Wendy Rosenbaum was in charge of passing out the favors. Jackie Frey and Paula Wevers were in charge of gifts.

Lavon Bonar and Darcy Adoll, aunts of the bride, served the wedding cake. Virginia March and Ardel Black, aunts of the bridegroom, were in charge of coffee and punch.

Following the reception, a wedding dance was held at the Elks Lodge in Twin Falls.

Special guests were Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Rosenbaum and Mr. and Mrs. George Farmer, grandparents of the bride, and Mr. and Mrs. Homer Linderman and Sarah Guenther, grandparents of the bridegroom.

Following a trip to Jackson Hole, Wyo., they are making their home in Twin Falls where he is employed by the Globe Seed and Feed Co.

Test tube pregnancies are failure

NORFOLK, Va. (UPI) — The nation's first test-tube baby clinic has been unable to obtain pregnancies with two more women, raising to nine the number of failures it had since opening three months ago, an official said Thursday.

"We're disappointed, but we're not discouraged at this point," said Dr. Jack Rary, the geneticist for the clinic conducted by Eastern Virginia Medical School at Norfolk General Hospital.

Rary said the two most recent failures occurred during the past several weeks, following the seven that were reported in early April.

The researcher said he did not know the specific reasons for the last two unsuccessful patients; but said overall the nine have failed for "a variety of reasons."

He said, "One had excessive scar tissues (on her ovaries) that prevented the taking of an egg and another didn't ovulate regularly, making it difficult to retrieve the egg at the exact and needed time."

Other clinic officials declined to elaborate, citing the facility's policy not to disclose specifics of the in-vitro and in-vivo fertilization attempts.

Rary said seven eggs fertilized in laboratory dishes were placed in the uterus of several of the initial nine patients, but it was unknown whether any attached to the uterus wall before leaving the women's bodies.

"What we do know is that none of the eggs are on the walls now," he said. "The only thing I can say for sure is that none of the nine original patients are pregnant."

Although the World Health Organization defines a pregnancy as a fertilized egg in a woman's uterus, others, including clinic officials, maintain a pregnancy is not achieved until the egg attaches to the wall.

Rary said in-vitro fertilization had been attempted on some of the nine women, in-vitro fertilization on others while a few were dropped from the program before a fertilization was tried for medical reasons.

Under in-vitro fertilization, an egg is taken from a woman, fertilized in laboratory dish with sperm from her husband and then placed in the woman's uterus.

With in-vitro fertilization, the egg is taken from the woman's womb and placed directly in her uterus where fertilization is attempted.

Both procedures are designed to by-pass blocked fallopian tubes that render the women infertile.

Rary said some of the initial nine have joined a second group of women for a second attempt at the two procedures.

The initial pregnancies were attempted in late February, March and April.

He said additional fertilizations were done during the past several weeks, "but I don't know of any pregnancies yet."

Arthritis cause still mystery

ATLANTA (UPI) — Researchers from the University of Texas said Thursday they have evidence that susceptibility to rheumatoid arthritis is controlled genetically, but the cause of the disease still is a mystery.

Dr. Peter Stastney, a professor of internal medicine, said the study may make it possible to identify people who are susceptible to arthritis and begin preventive treatment.

"We have clearly demonstrated that the genetic marker for rheumatoid arthritis is linked to a particular chromosome and is transmitted through heredity," Dr. Stastney told colleagues at the Arthritis Foundation's annual national scientific conference.

Stastney stressed his team's research has not concluded that rheumatoid arthritis itself is genetically controlled, but that certain genes can predispose a person to developing the disease.

He also said future investigation may show a link between arthritis and diabetes.

Stastney said the genetic marker that characterizes people as susceptible to rheumatoid arthritis also shows up in people with diabetes, suggesting a link in predisposition between those two diseases.

He said study of arthritis genetics might lead to more information on diabetes.

"We hope to find out more about how these genes interact," he said. Scientists do not know exactly what causes arthritis, but they suspect it may be a virus that acts on people with a certain genetic make-up, he said. Genes are the transmitters of inherited characteristics.

Stastney's study came from observations of 12 families, each with at least two members having rheumatoid arthritis.

The doctor said he and his team will continue collecting data to try to prove conclusively that susceptibility to rheumatoid arthritis is genetically controlled. He said the present study gave a clear indication, but was not large enough to provide conclusive proof.

Stastney said the next step is to try to track down the specific gene that controls arthritis susceptibility.

Four physicians from the Magic Valley area were approved for permanent licensure during the meeting of the Idaho State Board of Medicine May 12.

Dr. Gerald C. Bauman of Caldwell, chairman of the board said Dr. Dennis Banks, of Ketchum was licensed in neurosurgery; Dr. Gregory N. Schaefer of Mountain Home in obstetrics and gynecology; Dr. Richard F. Paris of Sun Valley and Dr. Grant C. Van Houten of Twin Falls, both in family practice.

Michael Briggs of Twin Falls, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Briggs was initiated into the University of Idaho Chapter, Phi Kappa Phi, the national scholastic honorary. He has also been accepted into Washington State University's College of Veterinary Medicine this fall. He will work as a keepers aide at Woodland Park Zoo in Seattle this summer.

Brian Todd Lundy, a 1978 graduate of the College of Southern Idaho; and son of Mr. and Mrs. James Lundy of Mackay graduated from Utah State University at Logan Saturday as a member of Ta Beta Pi, a scholastic engineering fraternity. The membership is reserved to the top one-fifth of the graduating class. He is also a member of Sigma Alpha Epsilon and as a mechanical engineer will begin working June 2 at the Hercules Aerospace facility in Salt Lake City.

Kent Rohweder of Twin Falls has been awarded the $300 J. Woodson Creed memorial scholarship at the College of Southern Idaho. He will attend the University of Idaho next year where he plans to major in pre-medicine. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Al Rohweder of Twin Falls. The late Dr. Creed, his family and friends made the scholarship available. Dr. Creed was a prominent pathologist in Twin Falls.

Recipients of the Mary Hall Nicolls scholarship fund at the University of Idaho include four Magic Valley students. Awards of $1,000 each were given to Rita Grafte of Glenns Ferry and Nancy Blozham of Hazelton. Returning students receiving scholarships include Patricia Thomas, a senior and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Will Thomas of Gooding. Graduates receiving scholarships include Lori Doolittle, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Doolittle of Kimberly.

MARY ANN SWEET

Sweet will head local chapter

TWIN FALLS — Mary Ann Sweet of Morningside School was recently elected president of the local Delta Kappa Gamma Society International. Delta Kappa Gamma is the largest group of women educators in the world, united to assist women who want to pursue education and improve their professional status.

Other officers elected were Carolyn Erickson, first vice president; Sue Remaley, second vice president; Mary Ann Fisher, secretary, and Helen Iverson, treasurer.

Fisher, associate professor of physics at the College of Southern Idaho, was elected president of the Idaho Academy of Science for next year. She is also one of 30 women from the Delta Kappa Gamma Society chosen to attend the first Golden Gift Seminar at Baylor University at Waco, Texas, this summer.

Sister Rosemary Boessen, founder of Mount Home for Girls in Buhi, was one of 10 people in Idaho who received the Jefferson Humanitarian Award this spring. She is a member of the Delta Kappa Gamma Society and will be the inspirational speaker at the organization's convention June 12-15 in Idaho Falls.

Dr. Lamb

Many people have lived useful lives despite epilepsy

By LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D. (News-Service Enterprise Association)
Dear Dr. Lamb:
I had two seizures very close together. I was hospitalized and given a brain scan and an EEG. The brain scan was normal but the EEG (brain waves) was "abnormal but not epileptic."

My doctor put me on Dilantin and Phenobarbital. I did all right for a while and then I started having trouble with my writing, spelling, and thinking of certain words I wanted to use in conversations.

A new EEG was taken and the doctor changed the Phenobarbital to Depakene. It seems to be helping, but I worry about taking so much medicine.

I hope you can give me some idea why all of a sudden I would have two seizures. I'm 24 years old and female and I'm fairly nervous. I went to my present doctor in the first place because I had trouble with my arms jerking for no reason and no warning. He put me on Serax. I'm so tired of being sick and in the hospital. Will this ever go away and can I get off medication? My doctor also told me not to drive a car for a year. Do you agree?

Dear Reader,
People can have convulsions from a variety of causes, for example from inadequate circulation to the brain, heat stroke, severe fevers and even severe low blood sugar.

Sometimes it's hard to pinpoint exactly what causes convulsions, but with the minimal information provided in your letter there's a strong probability that you do have epilepsy. Finally, probably what your doctor thinks too, and the reason he has given you are those intended to be used to control or prevent convulsions. Some doctors shy away from telling their patients they have epilepsy.

I suppose that's important in some instances, but the truth is there should be no social stigma to saying a person has epilepsy. Some of the best minds in history have been people who have been epileptics. Two classic examples are Julius Caesar and Alexander the Great. There are also important musicians, philosophers and outstanding people from all walks of life who have lived with epilepsy.

I'm sending you The Health letter number 10-8, Epilepsy: You Can Have It, Too. It will give you a better appreciation for the problem. Other readers who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long stamped self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10018.

If a person has Grand Mal epilepsy, it's common for it to start in early adult life without previous episodes. Fortunately, in almost all cases, the convulsions can be controlled or prevented. This doesn't always happen overnight and determining the best combination of medicines for a patient sometimes requires a period of trial and error. The result is that almost all individuals who have epilepsy can expect to lead as normal and as happy a life as if they didn't have it at all.

Yes, your doctor is wise. In asking you not to drive a car for a year. This period of time is needed to make sure that your medicines are controlling the seizures and to protect you from having one while you're driving.

Dear Abby

Honesty is best, if child is mature enough to handle facts

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
Copyright 1980, Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Some years ago, I was raped and became pregnant. I gave birth to a baby boy, but under the circumstances I couldn't bring myself to raise him. My best friend — I'll call her MINNIE — was happily married but wasn't able to bear children, so she and her husband adopted my son. That decision worked out well for all of us. I visited them often and watched the boy grow up in a fine environment.

Here's my problem: In Minnie's eyes, the boy is now old enough to understand the circumstances of his birth, adoption, etc., and they want to tell him the entire story. They think he has the right to know all the facts of his birth, including the fact that I am his mother and his father was a rapist.

I have always felt that honesty is the best policy, but in this instance, I don't think the boy needs to know all the facts. Because of this disagreement, I am no longer speaking to Minnie and her husband.

—WAITING IN SARATOGA
DEAR WAITING: Honesty is always the best policy. You don't say how old the boy is, but he should be told only as much as he can comprehend. Most young children can understand adoption, but the other details of his birth should not be disclosed until he is sufficiently mature to handle them. (P.S. I question the wisdom of telling a child his father was a rapist.)

DEAR ABBY: I am married to a physician. We recently attended a medical convention where there were about 3,000 physicians present.

Maybe it's because lately we have all become so weight-conscious, but I was really shocked by the number of fat physicians I saw there. More than half the doctors were visibly overweight (my formerly svelte husband included).

—DEAR WIFE: In a survey of 900 family physicians, sponsored by the American Academy of Family

Physicians, 62 percent of the M.D.s who responded said they wanted to lose weight. More than one-third of that group wanted to lose more than 10 pounds, but 69 percent said they had not followed a specific weight-loss diet in the last six months.

(P.S. Two-thirds recognized the necessity of controlling their sugar and cholesterol intake, but only a little more than 50 percent said they themselves followed that advice.) Physician, heal thyself!

DEAR ABBY: Melvin graduated from high school at the top of his class last June. He was offered a scholarship to a very fine university, but he turned it down to go to a local college. Everybody thought he was crazy. He admitted to me he didn't want to go away to college because he gets —We sent Melvin to summer camp when he was 11, and he came back after one week so thin and pale he didn't look like the same boy. He said he got so homesick he couldn't even sleep or eat.

Melvin is not an only child. But he is my youngest and has always stayed very close to me.

He doesn't have many friends and has never asked a girl for a date on his own, but he has dated girls when someone fixes him up. He reads a lot and doesn't mind being by himself all the time.

I want Melvin to go away to college this fall, but every time I bring it up he begs me not to talk about it. I think it would be good for him to go away, but how can a mother push her son out of the house when he begs to stay?

—MELVIN'S MOM

DEAR MOM: It's not uncommon for a 11-year-old to be homesick, but when he reaches college age he should have matured sufficiently to overcome it. If Melvin has not been evaluated by an expert, he should be. Don't push him out of the house, but do insist he have a frank talk with a doctor.

CONFIDENTIAL to those who have sent for Abby's booklets. Please, please be patient. I am literally deluged with orders and am getting them out as quickly as possible.

New idea offered on overweight

CHICAGO (UPI) — Doctors who for years preached overeating is the prime cause of obesity may have to eat their words.

New research shows that, in some cases, overweight may result from the body's inability to burn excess calories.

The new theory, outlined in the current Journal of the American Medical Association, tends to explain why some people get fat while others eat at will without gaining a pound.

The normal body, it said, combats excess calories taken in by the calorie-burning process is centered in the body's small store of brown fat — heat-producing tissue that gets its name from its brownish hue.

But researchers found some people lack the physical ability to burn the excess calories. Instead, the extra calories are stored — and the people get fat.

The new theory is proposed by Dr. Michael Stock and graduate student Nancy Rothwell, at the Queen Elizabeth College in London, a group led by Dr. George A. Bray of Harbor University of the California-Los Angeles Medical Center, and others in both England and Canada.

Research on both rats and humans showed overeating induces calorie burning — apparently centered on brown fat. Such diet-induced burning of calories may be a primary factor in maintaining normal body weight, researchers said.

It appears that one possible explanation for the development of obesity in man is that certain people without the capacity to turn on dietary-induced thermogenesis may be those who store food as fat, whatever their intake, rather than burning off calories in heat, said Bray.

But researchers still don't know what controls the mechanism that causes the "brown fat" to burn calories.

Cancer drugs said effective

BOSTON (UPI) — A one-year study with cancer drugs, before and after treatment of advanced head and neck tumors, keeps some patients disease-free for better than two years, a study by the Sidney Farber Cancer Institute reports.

Twenty-one patients were given high doses of methotrexate and folic acid to shrink their tumors. In 11 patients the cancer mass shrank enough to allow treatment with surgery or radiation.

Findings presented Thursday at the American Association for Cancer Research indicated nine of the 11 patients were free of disease after their radiation or surgery. They also were given four weeks of follow-up cancer drug treatment.

In contrast, only three of the 10 patients who did not respond to chemotherapy were able to be successfully treated, the researchers said.

The report said all of the patients were followed for two years. Five of the nine (55 percent) remained disease-free for the two-year period and were still alive, the investigators said. Only one of the 10 who did not respond to chemotherapy was still alive.

The combination of before-and-after drugs with other therapy was called induction chemotherapy.

TWIN FALLS - GET READY!!!

WE ARE DOING IT AGAIN AT JOHN CHRIS MOTORS THIS WEEKEND!!!

INTRODUCING THE GREAT AMERICAN 10¢ SALE

Beginning Friday, June 6 and ending Saturday, June 7 every used car and truck on sale for some of the greatest prices you have ever seen.

ALL PRICES ARE ONE DIME IN FACT!

Saturday at 3:00 P.M. We will sell one of our cars for just 10¢ RIGHT! 10¢!! We're not saying which one. We will say this. Whoever is sitting in the right car at 3:00 P.M. Saturday will buy that car for 10¢. You can claim the car you think will sell for a dime starting at 9:00 A.M. Saturday, June 7. Go to the car, get inside, and wait. Eat lunch, take a nap. We'll let you know at 3:00 P.M. Saturday. The name and serial number of the car is in our sale.

Gary weds; songs; Ted wins

DOONESBURY WEDDING: Nobody knows yet if Zonker Harris and his iconoclastic crew will be invited to the wedding, but they should be. Gary's groom created them. An NBC spokesman says Pulitzer Prize-winning cartoonist Gary Trudeau and the network's "Today" show co-host, Jay Payton, will tie the knot June 14 in a simple ceremony not far from Trudeau's New Haven, Conn., home. It's a first marriage both for the 29-year-old Miss Pauley and the 32-year-old Trudeau who keeps Washington finching under the goad of his satiric comic strip "Doonesbury." Published reports say the couple met several years ago. Miss Pauley interviewed Trudeau and wound up with a steady date.

RED, WHITE AND BLUES: Maybe it's the situation in Iran. Maybe folks are tired of feeling guilty. But patriotic songs — in Nashville, at least — seem to be enjoying a vogue unequalled since Johnny got his "Zero" in World War II. Johnny Cash has just released "Song of the Patriot." Billy Joe Clayton is out with "Don't Tread on Me," and Frank Rich has penned a warning called "Warning, U.S. America." Charlie Daniels' "In America" stormed the May 1 Academy of Country Music Awards and was rush-released to radio to demand by the time Capitol came to really roll the calendar back to Pearl Harbor days. His latest — "Uncle Sam Wants You."

THE PAPA VOTE: The race for the Democratic nomination is closer than the one for most "celebrated father" laurels. Come Father's Day, Ted Kennedy will be the champion in a walkaway over Richard Carter. Carter's candidacy is being celebrated is open to question, but Kennedy is No. 1 in a Forum magazine editors' poll on the subject. Carter comes in sixth, behind the Massachusetts senator, Phil Donahue, Henry Fonda, Dustin Hoffman and Tom Seaver. Seventh through 10th places go to Dick Van Feltton, Mick Jagger, Michael London and New York Gov. Hugh Carey. Publisher Albert Z. Freedman explains about Kennedy, saying "Despite all his political duties and campaigning, he still tends to his responsibilities."

SPRING FEVER: It's spring again. Steve Kurachi's mother can tell. Her 28-year-old son wants to row his boat to England. Kurachi, who hailing from Oregon, Utah, is about as far from the sea as a sailor can get. He will tackle the Atlantic in 15-foot fiberglass boat christened the Army J, after his wife. He expects the journey to take 80 days, and it won't be his first. He tried it in 1977, but had to quit after a storm swamped his water supply. Kumi Kurachi, his mother, insists he will make it this time. Maybe then he'll get it out of his system. It happens every spring, the birds go north and Steve wants to row across the ocean."

SWEET SABOTAGE: It was quite a day for rhythm and blues star Stephanie Mills. First, an overager mob overran the location in New York's Central Park where she's filming a promotion for her new album, "Sweet Sensations." forcing postponement of the shooting. Then came tidings that the album — the second of her career — has gone gold, with sales in excess of 500,000. Then came Amos. That's Amos of "Famous Amos" cookie fame. Wailed Stephanie — who's struggling to keep her figure svelte for a Friday opening at Madison Square Garden — "Oooh no — I'm on a diet." She's also a certifiable cookie addict. Amos' left 34 bags.

QUOTE OF THE DAY: Spokane photographer Mark Perry, evacuated from the vicinity of running Mount St. Helens after flagging down a rescue helicopter with an old World War II signal mirror, explaining why he was risking his neck near the still active volcano: "I'm a photographer and there were things in there to photograph. It was like what Earth would be like after World War III. There's nothing alive. Everything's gray. You couldn't see 15 feet."

GLIMPSES: The latest in a recent rapid-fire series of movies for Shirley MacLaine will be Time-Life Films' "Loving Couples," in which she plays a lady doctor in a game of musical affairs with costars James Coburn, Susan Sarandon, Stephen Collins and Sally Kellerman. Rose Marie, Rosemary Clooney, Margaret Whiting — and Helen O'Connell

Daytime Emmy

Chaddy Drown of Canyonside Gallery prepares her print for this weekend's art show in City Park as part of the Diamond Jubilee Celebration

Art show celebrates 75th

'Tent City' here again

By MARTY TRILLHAASE
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS, — As much as anything, the celebration of Twin Falls 75th year signifies just how far the community has progressed since the days when it was known as "Tent City."

This weekend, "Tent City" will return, for practical as well as artistic concerns.

Against the backdrop of the past, represented by a row of at least three tents supplied by the Idaho Army Reserve, will stand as many as 200 displays of local-art work this weekend in the City Park. The two-day art show is part of the city's Diamond-Jubilee celebration and will be highlighted by an art auction Sunday.

The art show, which is open to all artists in the Magic Valley, is being spearheaded by Gary Stone of Hamberly, a professional artist who specializes in woodcut portraits.

The auction will be on Saturday, June 13, 1980.

And its potential for success says as much about the status of art among local residents as it does about the direction of western art.

"If we can make a success of this, I would like to make this an annual event," he said. Besides Stone, the artists who will be on display at the show include:

- God Eppers of Jerome, who is noted for his metal sculpture, of leaves and caricatures.
- Chaddy Drown of Twin Falls, who devotes many of her efforts in oil paintings to portraits of Indians and western landscapes.
- Merle Francis of Twin Falls, who, like Stone, works with wood-carvings.
- Charlotte Kilfoyle of Twin Falls, who through water colors, captures the early historical structures of the area.
- John Horeja of Burley, a painter who works with oils to portray landscapes, animals and children.

While he heads the exhibit as a chance to build the tradition of art-auctions in this area as a source of funding for charitable foundations and local historical preservation, Stone also views it as a chance for artists to present their growing role in the community.

"People have always viewed Twin Falls for what it is, a farming community, and although it's been slow, the people are becoming eager to buy artwork," he said.

Much of that is due to the growing appreciation among the public for art as an investment, he noted. "I think art in general is becoming more acceptable," he said. "I think its more a dictate of our times than anything else."

Another factor is the special niche western art fills in its homeland. Just as the American West finds itself moving quickly from its roots into more of a technologically advanced, as well as a threatened, society, so too does the western genre find itself moving more of the present and future than of the past, Stone said.

The historical flavor remains a source of appeal for western art primarily because it does not present the stereotypic and often false images generated by the mass media, he said. But no matter how accurate the aura surrounding the old West and the art that captures it seems, to some degree, from a desire on the part of the viewer to escape some of the unpleasantness of the present.

"The tradition is strong, but the influence from the outside is coming so fast. It's really hard for people to cope with it, and it's hard for artists to figure it out. I wouldn't want to paint a picture of a jet taking off from the airport next to a wagon. I would rather paint the wagon, and its hard to make the transition," he said. "I think artists are making that move. Eventually, they'll swing into a modern-day gas station next to a hitching post."

Whether the settings are present-day or traditional, whether the style romantic, realistic or modern, western art continues to hold its own unique stamp. That's due as much to the area from which it generates as to the brand of people who capture it, he said.

"Our influence is easily distinguished from New England or European. I guess western artists are like western farmers. They're very individualistic and very hard to organize," Stone said.

Perhaps it takes that kind of individual to present his work in a tent city, which will be there "rain or shine," as Stone says.

Still, presenting western art in a setting representative of those early days is an opportunity for artists to demonstrate their growth along with the community's, he said.

"I think what we're trying to put across is western hospitality and good of western art. I think it will be good for the general public to see how the arts have progressed in the last five years."

Coburn has 'movie' face

The beer company came to James for a 'cool' salesman

James Coburn eats, drinks and sleeps cool

By TONY KORNHEISER
 ©The Washington Post
 "Something to drink?" the waiter asked.
 "Beer," the first man said.
 "Me, too, beer," the second man said.
 "And you, sir?" the waiter asked.
 James Coburn was standing now, looking hard, like a knife stuck in an oak tree. His eyebrows were furrowed wide. His hair, the color of dust. His voice began in the basement.

"Beer," Coburn said.
 "And this, of course, was the moment you wait for, when life imitates art, when what goes around comes around, when the moon comes over the mountain."
 ("Say it, Say," "Schlitz ... Light.")
 "Whatever," Coburn said.
 ("Cut. Shoot the scene over. Coburn orders a beer. Take Two. Okay, say it, say "Schlitz ... Light.")
 "I'm on," Coburn said. "I don't drink that."

He started to laugh, laugh lines stretching from the top of his forehead to the bottom of his jaw, a distance about the length of an aircraft carrier. Deep lines. Straight and thin, like Venetian blinds. Creases, the kind you'd find in a gabardine suit after 200 pressings.

"Schlitz ... Light," he said.
 He pressed his hand to his head to keep himself from exploding.
 "When they came to me to do the commercial, I thought, 'I placed conditions which were impossible to grant,'" he said. "I demanded an enormous sum of money. I told them I'd only say the product's name; they couldn't use my name; I had to play a character." He stretched his eyebrows so high, he almost had to peel them off the ceiling. Hey, man, it's their money. "As commercials go, they were pretty good. They sold a lot of beer, man — initially. But the beer was so bad ..."

The waiter came back with Heinekens.

Coburn poured it down the middle and smiled.
 None of the following matters is He is 51 years old. He was born in Nebraska, moved near Los Angeles when he was 5, began acting after he got out of the service, always wanted to play the drums like Gene Krupa and dance like Fred Astaire, plays the flute for relaxation and is negotiating a settlement so he can divorce his wife of 17 years.

What matters is his look. He looks cool. He is one of those men who could walk out of a coal mine disaster looking like he'd just come from a second filming, at Hart, Schaffner and Marx. The man drinks cool. The man eats cool. When he chews, he uses one tooth at a time. He could probably fix an air conditioner just by laying hands on it.

What matters is his face. What a face. An all-time face. Lines. Creases. Grewles. Sir Edmund Hillary should climb his face. Large teeth. Narrow eyes. The kind of face that seems to know and chooses not to tell. A three-card monte face. A face that could be on the cover of GQ and the wall of a post office.

"My face," Coburn asked.
 "Your face, sir."
 "Well, it changes from character to character," he said. "The face is something you can't do much about. I just think of it as my, well, my face. As time goes on it just gets more and more well whatever it is. I look at my face now, and I look back at my old films and see my face then, and now, well, it seems like a different face, man."

He says "man" a lot. California.

"I didn't think I was handsome enough to be an actor of any note when I was younger," he said. "At that time you just couldn't get a job unless you were Tony Curtis. So I concentrated on character. I always played characters who were older, man, I been old all my life. But by the time I started doing movies I was 40 and by then how you looked wasn't as important as what you did. By then guys like Rod Steiger were big actors. I don't think my face limits me. I've played everything — from psychiatrists to Roddey Fickers. I know people say I'm too funky or too ethnic or too rough, but I think I can play anything. I've tried to play everything. Maybe they all come out the same."

 By now he had a long, brown cigar. Razor thin.
 Even the exhalation was cool.

The big break was "The Magnificent Seven."
 "It grew into a classic," Coburn said. "It's the only classic I was ever in. I don't think I'll ever do anything as lasting. Nothing better ever happened to me."

Talk about great faces. Yul Brynner, Steve McQueen, Eli Wallach, Charles Bronson.

"Charlie once told me that he was so poor as a kid, he had to wear his brother's hand-me-downs. Hand-me-down shirts. Hand-me-down pants. Even hand-me-down shoes. The trouble was that Charlie was bigger than his brother, so the shoes were too tight. Maybe that's how he got that face, walking around in shoes four sizes too small."
 Coburn played the guy with the knife.

"If you saw it, you couldn't forget it."
 "I wanted that part so bad," he said. "I read for the director on the last day of testing, and he told me I had a part. There was only one left — the guy with the knife. Well, I practiced throwing that knife so much, until I overthrew two other I could stick it in the knot of a tree trunk. I must have ruined two dozens sets of knives practicing. Knives were illegal in California, so they had to be smuggled in up from Juana. Man, I got so f---ing good with that knife."

From that time on, and it's 20 years now, he was always a leading man. Even a star with "Our Man Flint" films, though probably no longer a star. Just a leading man.

"What's a star, man?" he asked. "That's someone else's label. I'll tell you who I think is a star. Brando's a star. De Niro's a star. McQueen's a star. Sriesand. Bobby Dylan. " (Bobby?) "I never considered it. I wanted to work. Make movies. Act. I'm very satisfied. It doesn't matter what people say or think as long as I can make movies and work. I compromise a lot because I like to work. I'd rather work than sit around the house. I sit around as long as I can stand it, and then I pick something to do. If I have nothing else to do and it seems good — maybe a good director, a good cast, a big budget, a great location — I'll jump in there. I pick up the script and read it. If I like the story, I do it. I never read for just my character. Maybe that's why I made so many poor choices."

"Raid on Fort Holman."
 "Last of the Mobile Hot Shots."
 "Ever hear of them?" Coburn asked.

No.
 "Didn't miss much."
 "Not that there haven't been some good films. "Americanization of Emily." "Waterhole No. 3." "The President's Analyst." "Hard Times." Coburn has made a good living — now it's up to $1 million a year — making a lot of B-films and playing a lot of essentially slippery characters. Hustlers. Pickpockets. Con men. Men named "Speed." And it's okay with him. No hassles, man.

Drugs are past for Grace Slick

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Grace Slick — booze — and drugs — became synonymous during the singer's outrageous days with Jefferson Airplane and Jefferson Starship in the 60s and 70s.
 But Grace hit the Starship following a disastrous German tour in 1978 and she has now capped the bottle and dumped the drugs — not because I want to be a goodly goodly, because that's the only thing that works for me."

At 37, Grace is doing it again and she's doing it sober.
 Her biography "Grace Slick" is now in bookstores. "To me its revealing, to some it's appalling," and her new solo album "Dreams" "It was scared to death at first, but now I am more than pleased" — is in record stores.

The book details the outrageous Grace and the LP proves she still has what it takes to deliver quality rock 'n' roll.

"For the first time in 20 years, I'm doing things totally straight," said Grace, who is discussing her life these days on the talk show circuit.

"I've never done any of these straight shows," she said. "I like it, though, there's so many different lifestyles. But it is still hard to imagine Grace Slick sitting next to Julia Childs and chatting with Merv Griffin."

And many have noted the parallels in Grace's life and the motion picture "The Rose," supposedly depicting Janis Joplin's life in rock's fast lane.

'Leave it to Beaver' image sticks

By JAMES BROWN
 ©The Los Angeles Times
HOLLYWOOD — Tony Dow, 34, and Jerry Mathers, 31, both are aware — and seem profoundly unconcerned — by the fact that no matter what they accomplish in their adult lives and careers, their names will forever be associated with a television series that first went on the air when the Los Angeles Dodgers still lived in Brooklyn.

"Leave it to Beaver" actually aired over all three networks during its 1957 to 1964 run — first on CBS, then NBC and finally ABC — with the audience afforded the opportunity of growing up with Dow as the gangly, crackle-voiced older brother Wally, and Mathers as the impish, irrepressible title character, the Beaver.

In fact, many of us who grew up during that period never could understand why life couldn't be more like "Leave it to Beaver." To us, the Cleavers were the Perfect Family.

Ward Cleaver (Hugh Beaumont) was a firm yet understanding dad. June Cleaver (Barbara Billingsley) — was a Supermom personified. As for Wally and Beaver? They were our pals — the kids next door. Sure they got into trouble. Sure they had obnoxious friends like Eddie Haskell and Lumpy Rutherford. But everything always worked out. And we could never figure out why life didn't imitate television.

"I think 'Leave it to Beaver' was a show for our generation," said Dow, a quiet, introspective sort whose curly brown hair is now lightly flecked with gray. "But it was a real show about real people in a show about an adult world from a child's point of view. At that time, we were the only show that did that."

Added Mathers, Dow's gregarious opposite: "The stories we did were, in fact, taken from real life either from experiences our writers had with their kids or experiences that Tony or I had. It was a true situation comedy in that we didn't go in for set-ups or punch lines."

And it still has an impact. "Leave it to Beaver" continues to pop up in syndication from time to time and Dow and Mathers remain very much in demand for speaking appearances.

Beyond that, for the last 18 months they have been touring the country — in an original-comedy entitled "So Long, Stanley," playing the dinner theater circuit in such towns as Kansas City, Austin, Dallas and Scottsdale, Ariz.

"We'd been doing personal appearances for about three years," Dow said, "and both of them felt that it would be good to get involved with something more legitimate. So dinner theater was the way to go."

Prior to that, Dow and Mathers had taken decidedly different career paths following the demise of "Leave it to Beaver" in 1964. Dow attended UCLA and Columbia where he studied film and television production. He continued his acting career as a "guest" appearances on primetime shows and as a regular on two daytime soap operas, "General Hospital" and "Three Men in a Tub." Los Angeles Times, June 11, 1980

Wally and Beaver

Tony Dow, left, and Jerry Mathers, above, know they will be shadowed for the rest of their lives by their "first success," the "Leave it to Beaver" series.

"Never-Too-Young." Gradually, though, the roles became fewer and farther between.

"There was a period when I didn't work for five years," he said. "I had joined the National Guard during that time, so it was difficult to make myself available if a job opportunity came up. I did odd jobs, I lived in a boat and did one 'Adam-12' — I think because I was the only actor in town at that time who had short hair."

Mathers, on the other hand, made only occasional television appearances after "Beaver," concentrating on his education with a degree in philosophy at the University of California, Berkeley, then going to work at Los Angeles-based Security Pacific Bank as an operations and loan officer.

"After I finished college, I made a promise to myself that until I reached the age of 30, I would get some business experience," Mathers said. "But I never totally left acting. Even at the bank, I helped out with a series. And then when I became involved in the real estate business four years ago, I had more time to devote to other things."

During Mathers' incarceration at the bank, however, he was forced to deal with the rumor that he had been killed in Vietnam.

"What happened is the wire services picked up an item about a Mathers who was killed in Vietnam, assumed it was me and then ran with it," he said. "I don't know how it happened, exactly, but I can tell you it was a strange experience. People actually sent flowers to my house."

Mathers' premature death notice wasn't the only "Leave it to Beaver" rumor making the rounds. A few years ago, there was the whispered speculation that Ken Osmond, the actor who portrayed Eddie Haskell in the series, grew up to be porn star John Holmes. Osmond, who actually grew up to be a policeman, was not exactly thrilled with the association and he and Mathers appeared on Tom Snyder's "Tomorrow" show to set both records straight.

"It's really been a mess for Ken," Dow said, "because the rumor always seems to resurface, and he has to go in and explain things all over again."

Mathers and Dow confess to being startled at the interest that their old shows continues to generate. "It's really amazing the kind of influence it's had," Dow said. "There is a genuine fondness for the show, and when people come up to Jerry or myself today it's like they're greeting an old friend. They really go to know us."

Adds Mathers: "When I was doing the show it was on late at night, for a lot of the kids in my neighborhood to watch it, so most of them never really knew I was on television."

"But around eight or nine years ago the series came back on reruns and my younger brother saw it for the first time. He knew I had been an actor but he'd never seen 'Leave it to Beaver.' So all of a sudden I'm a celebrity in the house. And that's one of the reasons why we seem to pick up a new audience every time out. As far as I'm concerned, anytime someone remembers you it's a compliment. After all, I'm still working because of it."

Reynolds pays off

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Burt Reynolds, who remembers old friends and co-stars, has seen to it that ex-stuntman Hal Needham directs "The Cannonball Trophy" in which comedian Don DeLuise plays a featured role.

Reynolds gave Needham his directorial break in "Smoky and the Bandit" and first hired DeLuise in "The End," which Reynolds directed.

Co-starring with Reynolds in "The Cannonball Trophy" is the story of an unauthorized, wildly improbable — coast-to-coast automobile race, is Roger James Bond Moore. Los Angeles Times, June 11, 1980

'Tai-Pan' a movie

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — "Tai-Pan," James Clavell's best-selling epic novel of the founding of Hong Kong, will finally become a feature motion picture with Sean Connery playing the title role.

The $25-million production, scheduled to begin filming next year, will focus on the years from 1659-1842 after England's victory in the First Opium War.

Entertainment Enterprises will distribute the movie in the United States and Canada for producer George-Alain Vuille with John Guillermin directing.

Benji not always a star

By JAMES QUINN
©The Los Angeles Times
SUN VALLEY, Calif. — If you liked the Benji movies, you'll love the real-life story. The little-mutt-with-the-soulful-eyes who captivated audiences worldwide lives quietly in his master's home, like millions of other cherished family pets.

Benji eagerly gives and receives affection, undaunted by rave reviews in which he has been called the "Laurence Olivier of the dog world" (New York Daily News) and "truly a Chappalineque—in his emotional responses" (Memphis Press Scimitar).

The real-story began 20 years ago at the Burbank, Calif., Animal Shelter, when animal trainer Frank Inn dropped by in response to a call from an animal control official who thought he might want to adopt "a honey-brown" part-terrier who was about to be put to sleep.

Inn took the dog to his compound here north of Los Angeles, where he joined nearly a thousand other animals that Inn trained for movies and television.

For several years there was little to indicate what fate had in store for the little dog.

Benji's big break came when his master suggested to the producers of the "Petticoat Junction" television series that they enlist the show with a dog. Inn had just the right dog at home.

For the next seven seasons, Benji (then called Higgins) had a role in every "Petticoat" show, at times threatened to steal the show from Edgar Buchanan and the three starlets who played his granddaughters.

When the show finally folded, Benji was retired to Sun Valley, Inn said he never expected to work the dog again.

In 1973, Joe Camp, a young Dallas-based filmmaker who had written a script tentatively titled "Benji" visited Inn's compound looking for a dog to take the little role.

"I showed him 300 dogs at least," Inn said. "But he wasn't very impressed. But as he was leaving he spotted Benji in the yard, and right away he said, 'Now, that's Benji.'"

The movie grossed $40 million. . . . The response to the heart-warming story of the perilous adventures of the little dog with the big heart led to a second feature film and four television specials. Still a third film and a Broadway show are in pre-production.

Critics have written glowingly of the dog's ability to sulk, stalk, peep, pause, do double-takes, worry, frown and scowl.

As with most things in Hollywood, all is not quite what it seems. For one thing, the original Benji—who had retired after the first film, died in 1978 at age 19.

All subsequent movies and TV shows feature Benji II, who is the daughter of the original Benji. It took Inn three litters to breed a look-alike.

For Inn, 63, the Benji movies capped an already successful career as a top Hollywood animal trainer.

Said Inn: "It's a wonderful feeling knowing that you've made a living doing what you love to do and that what you've done has made so many people happy."
