Shortfall seen in U.S. Social Security fund

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The government said Thursday recent hikes in payroll taxes have failed to cure the Social Security system's short-term financial woes.

It warned the program could face severe money-troubles in the next century.

In their annual report, the system's trustees said the program that pays basic benefits to 35 million retirees and survivors is running at a loss, and the trust fund used to make up the difference will dry up late next year.

The report said an overall deficit can be avoided if Congress approves transferring money to the Old Age-Survivors Insurance program from surpluses in Disability Insurance and Medicare programs. Social Security Commissioner William Dwyer said he was optimistic Congress would agree shortly.

The report said 1977 changes made in the law that imposed hikes in payroll taxes were expected to cure the system's financial ills, but they failed because of unexpected inflation.

"Since 1977, however, the economy has behaved in ways that few anticipated and the financial ills, but they failed because of unexpected inflation."

JBS group attacks plant control bill

WASHINGTON — Idaho Senator Frank Church supporting legislation which would establish federal control over the marketing of certain varieties of vegetables.

"No," he cries.

"Yes," counters the North Carolina-based National Sharecropper Fund and The Review of the News, a publication under the corporate ownership of the John Birch Society.

The issue is the revision of the Plant Varieties Protection Act of 1970, which was created to give the holder of certain new vegetable varieties the exclusive right to promote and market the seed. A decade ago, Congress bowed to pressure from major soup companies such as Heinz and Campbell's, and excluded tomatoes, peppers, carrots, celery, cucumbers and okra — all principle ingredients of many varieties of soup.

The soup companies' interest has waned over the years, as they have come to realize that prices for those commodities covered by the legislation have not increased. The U.S. Department of Agriculture has suggested rounding off the corners of that law through congressional amendments which would cover the six missing species.

Sen. Church, carrying one version of the Carter administration's plan to the Senate. Enter William P. Hoar, a columnist for The Review of the News, the John Birch Society-operated publication. Hoar, a contributing editor for The Review, said he received a letter from a South Carolina reader who asked if it is going to be illegal to grow vegetables in his backyard.

Hoar's in his column, "The Right Answers," told his audience the legislation would make it against the law to "grow certain varieties of (vegetables)." Church has cried foul, and called the response "not exactly the right answer."

Officials ready for record fire season

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Seventeen young men and women on summer duty with the Sawtooth and Humboldt National Forests are ready to take on what could be a record fire season.

Forest officials say current conditions have all the earmarks of one of the most hazardous seasons in several years. Vegetation is extremely heavy due to spring moisture.

To prepare for what the summer has in store, new firefighters on the Sawtooth and Humboldt National Forests are undergoing a week of intensive fire training. The young workers who have reported for duty with the Twin Falls, Cassia and Jarbidge ranger districts were getting some first-hand experience Thursday at the Birch-Olen campground.

"We now have to provide 40 hours of training for all employees who will be working in fire control," said Jim Frumty, assistant ranger on the Twin Falls district of the Sawtooth. "We stress safety in the class sessions and try to give them some experience in the field."

Frumty, along with Dave Boyd of the Burley district and Robert Tonill of the Jarbidge district of the Humboldt, have been instructing the firefighting crews, who will be permanently assigned to the three districts this summer.

The first three days were spent in classroom sessions featuring lectures, slides and movies of actual fires.

Thursday the crews took to the forest, cutting a fire line just above Birch-Olen campground on Rock Creek.

Boyd explained the fire line, resembling a two-foot wide trail, is a permanent one. Each year it is improved and maintained.

A new fire line was also cut by the trainees, giving them experience in what they might be required to do under pressure of a fire.

"We keep this cleared path between the campground and the hillsides," said Frumty. "If a fire starts in the campground, hopefully this will keep it from spreading to the rough mountainside above. If it starts on the mountainside, this might save the campground."

Working in fire-proofed clothing in the hot sun, several of the student workers said they would hate to be on a fire line in hot dry weather.

During the afternoon Thursday the trainees put on some small fires, using a pump assembly to boost water from the creek.

"Some of these youngsters have never used a shovel or a machete, and at least they are getting acquainted with these tools of their trade," Boyd commented while watching them cut a new fireline.

Tonill said when the young workers return to their respective districts, they will receive additional training in firefighting as well as other jobs they will be performing in the field.

Tonill said his fire crew will stay in Buhl, the district headquarters for the Jarbidge district.

"The district officials said it is no longer unusual for about half of the firefighter crew members to be women."

"It's just about the same as with the men. Some do a real good job, and others are not too reliable," Frumty said.

On all three districts, as well as elsewhere in the two forests, vegetation is unusually thick and high for this time of year. The district representatives said training in safety and firefighting techniques may be especially important this year. Once the vegetation dries, there will be an over-abundance of fire fuel, and one small match could result in a disastrous forest fire.

The knee-high grass in the Glen Birch campground is still so green and damp forest officials had difficulty starting a test fire for the training.

"It won't be long, however, before this grass ripens and dries out and we will have a major fire hazard. We have had two lightning fires already this year in the Sawtooth, both in the north," Frumty said.

Kimberly sets its own 75th party

KIMBERLY — Kimberly will celebrate its own 75th anniversary July 18 and 19, with many activities scheduled in the city park.

The celebration, being organized by the Kimberly Chamber of Commerce, will be held in conjunction with Kimberly Good Neighbor Days. The celebration will be highlighted by a parade through the city center and a barbecue in the park.

The celebration will kick off Friday with a community potluck dinner. The dinner will begin at 7 p.m. in the city park. A historical pageant, featuring a Kimberly birthday cake, has also been scheduled for Friday night. The location of the pageant will be announced at a later date.

Saturday's celebration kicks off in the city park from 6 a.m. to 9:30 a.m. Tickets to the breakfast cost $2.25 for adults and $1.25 for children under 12.

A carnival, featuring amusements and rides by Arcway Shows of Treasure Valley, will begin at noon and will run until 4 p.m. The carnival will also feature booths from local civic organizations.

The parade will begin at the LDS church parking lot at 10:30 a.m. and will proceed through town, circle the park and return to the church.

Saturday events include a horse shoe contest, a bike, trike, and hot wheels race for children 12 to 15 years old, a baby crawl race, a pie eating contest for children 15 years or younger, a hose laying and barrel push contest between area fire departments, sack and three-legged races and an adult pie eating contest. All of the events will be held in the city park.

Other events include a 4:30 p.m. barbecue and a 7 p.m. concert by the Oldtime Fiddlers, both in the park. A $5 statuette called "Jubilee Jack" is being sold in order to finance the barbecue.

Mayor Rosalie Whitehead said a dance is also being organized for Saturday night.

Navy plane under attack

Newhouse News Service

WASHINGTON — The Navy's newest jet fighter, the supersonic F-18, has failed to meet several critical specifications, and those failures threaten the plane's combat effectiveness.

After 15 months of tests, the F-18's range and acceleration remain well below what the Navy said it needed when the program began, and numerous other technical problems have yet to be solved despite huge cost overruns.

Between September 1979 and March 1980, the estimated cost of 1,377 F-18s that the Navy wants to buy increased to 29 billion from $11.8 billion. Most of that increase is due to inflation, but at least $1.1 billion is the result of program changes.

Technical problems and cost overruns led Rep. Bruce F. Vento, D-Minn., to charge last week that the plane "needs a basic redesign."

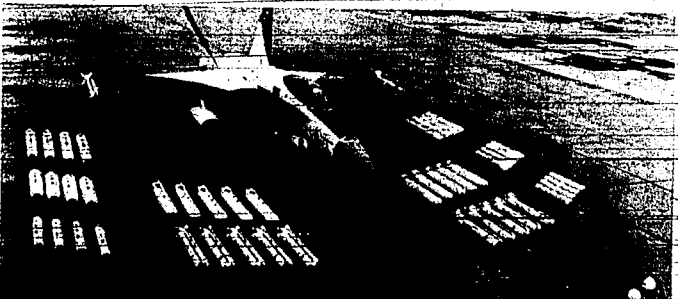

An investigation by Newhouse News Service, which began a month before Vento publicly criticized the program, has revealed a number of serious technical problems.

The plane's acceleration from Mach 0.8 (eight-tenths the speed of sound) to Mach 1.8 at 35,000 feet is 25 percent below specification, making it comparable to the aging F-4, one of the planes it was planned to replace. The F-18 is supposed to accelerate between those speeds at that altitude in 110 seconds. The best it has done is 137 seconds.

Routinely, the plane will not be slower than speeds, but such speeds will be necessary if the aircraft is to perform well in aerial combat against other fighters.

Design specifications call for a combat radius of 400 miles. That is, the F-18 is supposed to be able to fly 400 miles, engage an enemy aircraft, and have enough fuel left to return to its home field or aircraft carrier.

The 11 test aircraft have missed the required range by 4 percent, achieving an average range of 394 miles, according to sources close to the program.

Costing over $9 million a plane, the Navy's F-18 Hornet is under attack for not meeting design specifications. Shown here surrounded by its armament, the plane's combat quality is in question.

The F-18 — How good is it?

By comparison, the F-16, the Air Force's approximate equivalent of the F-18, has an acceleration time of 90 seconds and a combat radius of 600 miles. The F-18 weighs less and has larger engines than the F-16, but is plagued with engine problems that keep many of the Air Force planes grounded much of the time.

At least part of the F-18's acceleration and range problems apparently result from a 1,600-pound increase in the weight of the plane, as originally planned.

Tests of the F-18 have uncovered other problems: The roll rate (the time it takes the plane to roll 360 degrees in flight) is below specifications at high speeds; fuel has leaked from tanks in the fuselage; and faster-than-expected takeoff speeds are necessary before the nose wheel will lift off the runway.

Mechanical problems have caused at least two accidents on takeoffs and landings at the Navy's Patuxent River, Md., test facility. In one accident, a crack in a landing gear axle lug caused a test aircraft to move off the runway just after landing. In the other accident, a different test plane's starboard main wheel and tire plane fell off during takeoff, forcing the pilot to circle until the runway was reached. No one was injured in either of the accidents.

The Navy has not responded to a three-week-old request for interviews with F-18 program managers, nor has it answered a series of questions submitted in writing through the chief of naval information's Pentagon office.

On Wednesday, the Navy released a "fact sheet" detailing the program's successes in response to queries from Newhouse and other news organizations.

Among the items cited were four days of successful carrier landing tests aboard the USS America last fall; missile launches aboard drones which have been "unqualified successes"; more than 2,600 flight-hours of engine operation with only one in-flight shutdown; and an inertial navigation system three times more accurate than required, and "an overall level of performance that makes the F-18 'superior in acceleration and maneuvering to any Navy aircraft.'"

Last fall's carrier tests are described as "the most successful and earliest sea trials (for a new Navy plane) in modern times." The F-18 is planned as a replacement for both the F-4 fighter and the A-7 attack jets in Navy squadrons, and the Marine Corps F-4 fighter and A-1H support squadrons. The Marines, however, are lobbying hard in Congress for the British-designed AV-8B — short-takeoff-and-landing "Harrier" as a replacement for their fighter squadrons.

If the Marines are successful; replacing their A-1Hs with Harriers would reduce the total F-18 purchase, therefore increasing the cost per plane to the Navy, which has already ordered 1,000 in 1979 to $3 million today.

One of the Navy's major selling points to Congress for the F-18 is that it will be less costly to operate than the planes it will replace because it will need fewer parts and fewer maintenance personnel.

The plane can be converted from a fighter to an attack aircraft, or vice versa, in about an hour by changing the weapons it carries.

However, a congressional General Accounting Office assessment of F-18 operational costs released earlier this month charged, "Personnel and test equipment costs will be much higher than originally projected."

Personnel requirements are now being based on its maintenance man-hours per flight-hour. Instead of the original design goal of 11, according to the General Accounting Office.

Planning for the new aircraft began within the Navy in 1974. In May 1975 McDonnell Douglas Corp. of St. Louis was selected as the prime contractor, with Northrop Corp. of Hawthorne, Calif., as the major subcontractor for the frame and General Electric Co. building the engines in Lynn, Mass.

The first test model was flown Nov. 18, 1978, and the first production model recently was delivered to the Navy at Patuxent River where it is being prepared for additional testing.

Congress appropriated funds for the first 25 production models last year and is expected to approve a Carter administration request for 48 more F-18s this year.

It takes almost four years from the time it is originally ordered to build each plane. Since the beginning of the program, the Patuxent River test facility has been controversial within the Navy and Marine Corps.

The plane was not the first choice of either of the services. The Marines wanted Harriers, which can operate from roads or unimproved landing strips near front lines. "Church is not backing off of this bill," a good piece of legislation," Corlett said. "It's simple; it protects developers of new varieties and it clarifies a system that excludes six vegetable varieties."

Stansbury, the Senate Agriculture Committee, new economist, said it is uncertain if there will be further hearings or an attempt to move the bill through the Senate this year.

Cubans refused panderer

ORLANDO, Fla. (UPI) — Seven Cuban refugee women were forced to work in a citrus grove when they refused to dance nude at their sponsor's club, a central Florida "refugee resettlement group" charged Thursday.

The women, ranging in age from 19 to 27, were also advised they could earn $25 a night as prostitutes, said Christa Matulevicius, coordinator of Central Florida Refugee Assistance, Inc.

Ms. Matulevicius said the women were taken by their sponsor, Linda McGough, to the China Doll Club — a bar featuring nude dancers, in which she was also a dancer.

Ms. Matulevicius said the girls, who arrived about two weeks ago from the Eglin Air Force Base "tent city" with hopes for good jobs and comfortable living quarters, were stunned when taken to the dark bar and told what they were to do.

"These are Catholic girls. Two of them are virgins," said Ms. Matulevicius. She said all refused to work at the lounge and were sent to the groves where they picked oranges and lived in a squalid camp for the next week. They were supposed to be paid 65 cents a box, but none received any money, she said.

Pryor has trouble breathing

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Comedian Richard Pryor, deeply burned over the upper half of his torso and suffering from pneumonia, has encountered more difficulty breathing and his doctor Thursday recalled a pulmonary specialist to the case.

"Richard Pryor is in critical condition and very, very ill," said Dr. Richard Grossman, director of the Sherman Oaks Burns Center.

"I can't overstate the seriousness of Mr. Pryor's injuries," he said. "We are very concerned with complications," the doctor said.

Egypt warns Libya, Soviets

CAIRO, Egypt (UPI) — Egypt warned the Soviet Union and Libya Friday they were "playing with fire" in building a naval base for Russian ships just 13 miles from the Egyptian border and in stirring up Arab nations against the Cairo government.

The authoritative newspaper issued the warning in a commentary on the completion of the Soviet-built Bardia naval base. In a Mediterranean harbor in Libya 13 miles west of the Egyptian frontier, which is ready now to receive Soviet 700-mile vessels.

Earlier this week, Egypt put the entire 700-mile long border area with neighboring Libya under martial law for one year because of what President Anwar-Sadat called a need to be militarily prepared and to seal off the frontier against infiltrators.

Collie rescues drowning man

ST. HELEN, Mich. (UPI) — Police credit a large collie dog with saving the life of a suburban Detroit man who nearly drowned along with a companion in a boating accident this week.

Police said the two men were fishing in Lake St. Helen, on Tuesday when their 12-foot boat capsized, throwing Ricky D. Auman, 19, and Robert Polovich, 18, both of Sterling Heights, into the water.

Polovich told police he was floating in the water when the dog swam out to him from shore. He said he grabbed onto the collie and the animal towed him safely to the shore.

"When they got on shore, Polovich said the dog ran but we're looking for him," a Kalamazoo County sheriff's deputy said Wednesday. "That dog deserves a citation."

Sheriff's department divers recovered Auman's body late Tuesday.

Radioactive gas venting set MIDDLETOWN, Pa. (UPI) — Robert C. Arnold, vice president of Metropolitan Edison Co., said Thursday venting of krypton gas into the atmosphere from the crippled Three Mile Island nuclear plant would begin June 22, weather permitting.

Arnold said purging of the 57,000-curies of radioactive krypton trapped in the reactor building since the March 28 accident last year would begin at 8 a.m. He said if weather conditions did not permit accurate measurement of the gas release, the purging would be postponed.

that was billed by a staff assistant as exploratory. "There remains a lot of confusion over the cataloguing process and the certification," explains Dale Stansbury, chief economist for the full agriculture committee.

"This legislation is in no way conceived on the basis of establishing roadblocks for anyone who wants to grow anything in their own backyard," Corlett said. "The John Birch Society is trying to 'turn this into a campaign issue. It just isn't.'"

The key thrust of the legislation, Corlett says, is to give an individual who develops a new, better, high-yield hybrid of a tomato, carrot or celery, for example, to control its promotion and marketing for 18 years — confirmation with International Standards Organization.

Congressional Quarterly, a respected, independent magazine that monitors congressional activity, reports that Stansbury fears the certification process for these six varieties will wipe out smaller seed companies, "some of which are being bought up by large corporations with these fears are rooted in the concern that new hybrids are developed through the use of chemical compounds and then aided by pesticides, making society increasingly dependent on manufactured products.

Tied in to some of the shareholders' and environmentalists' concerns is the fear that dependence on the certified varieties of vegetables will decrease production and reproduction of those varieties that have survived the strains of time, and the blight of centuries of potentially devastating disease.

"Church is not backing off of this bill," a good piece of legislation," Corlett said. "It's simple; it protects developers of new varieties and it clarifies a system that excludes six vegetable varieties."

Stansbury, the Senate Agriculture Committee, new economist, said it is uncertain if there will be further hearings or an attempt to move the bill through the Senate this year.

Gen. Jones confirmed as military boss

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate Thursday night confirmed the nomination of Air Force General David Jones to a second term as chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff despite criticism he has been weak in dealing with President Carter.

The vote was 92-9. Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., said his opposition to another term for Jones was based on the deteriorating state of American armed services, as well as upon Jones' support for the SALT II treaty with the Soviet Union.

"The job of chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff is not just to salute when the president gives an order," Helms said. "The job of the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff is to say, 'Wait a minute, Mr. President, you are making a mistake.'"

In confirmation hearings Jones denied that he struck a deal with Republicans not to request his nomination for a second two-year term. However, Helms said in exchange for no GOP opposition, Jones had agreed to resign if Ronald Reagan is elected president.

In the Armed Forces Committee hearing, Jones denied he had made any such deal.

Hiroshima survivors tell of nuclear horror

Death penalty vote killed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Senate Democratic leader Robert Byrd flexed his parliamentary muscle Thursday and forced Republicans to abandon their push for restoring the federal death penalty for capital crimes.

Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., and his GOP colleagues found no alternative but to give up the fight, though earlier test votes indicated Helms had enough votes to win.

But, however, was before Byrd reached into his bag of parliamentary tricks.

Helms had tried to attach the death penalty measure to a $2.1 billion Justice Department authorization bill.

In the end, the Senate decided by voice vote to recommit the authorization bill to the Senate Judiciary Committee. The panel promptly purged the measure of both the Helms death penalty amendment — and additions Byrd had offered to set a trap for the GOP.

Then the bill passed the Senate 86-3 and was sent to the House. The three negative votes were cast by Helms and Sens. Harry Byrd, D-Va., and William Proxmire, D-Wis.

The fight heated up Wednesday night when Byrd told Helms he personally supported the death penalty but did not want it as a rider on the Justice Department measure.

He promised to call up the death penalty proposal as a separate bill in July or August if Helms would withdraw his amendment. Helms refused the deal.

After losing two attempts to sidetrack the death penalty amendment, Byrd bought himself time by adjourning the Senate and pushing back the final vote on the Helms amendment until Thursday.

By Thursday morning, the chamber leader, known for his parliamentary expertise, had devised a complex plan to hamstring Helms and his GOP supporters.

Arnold howls of protest from Republican leader Howard Baker, Byrd offered two amendments to the Justice Department authorization bill. Both measures already had passed the House and the GOP had vowed to filibuster each one on the Senate floor.

One of the measures is the Fair Housing Act, regarded as the strongest civil rights bill to come before the Senate since the mid-1960s. The other would limit the influence of political action committees in federal elections.

Each had to be acted on before the Helms death penalty amendment could come to a vote.

Senate Democrats quickly rallied behind their leader with a 53-41 near party-line vote against tabling, or killing, the first of the Byrd amendments. That left Republicans with a choice — accept the amendments they consider offensive or filibuster them but jeopardize the death penalty amendment in the process.

"We're playing Russian roulette," Baker protested to Byrd. "We've got every emotional issue likely to come before this body on this measure. This is a heavy shell."

Baker also chided Byrd for gumming up the legislative process just because he had lost two votes to Helms and his supporters.

"He won," Baker said of Helms. "Why not let him go on and win? There's not a single provision in the rule book of the Senate that says Jesse Helms can't win."

Highway Trust Fund is in the red

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. Highway Trust Fund is in the red for the first time in its 24-year history and a federal gasoline tax increase is needed to put it back in balance, Transportation Department officials said Thursday.

Since the 1960 fiscal year began Oct. 1, the fund has taken in $5.1 billion and paid out $5.5 billion. The fund has a balance of $12.1 billion but has obligations — money committed to the states for uncompleted projects — of $14.1 billion, Federal Highway Administration officials said.

On Wednesday, Transportation Secretary Bill Goldschmidt said that as one of his first acts in "the first year of the Carter administration's second term," he will recommend a boost of one or two cents in the four-cent-a-gallon federal gasoline tax.

A highway agency spokesman said the fund's problem is a gradual decline in gasoline use, compounded by the ravages of inflation.

Construction costs have jumped 336 percent since 1968, the spokesman said.

"You're getting less money in here, and also your money is buying less," he said.

He said the agency is also urging states to increase their maintenance programs, which is a state responsibility.

Since 1958, when the interstate program began on the basis of 90 percent federal funding, most of its resources have been spent by states on constructing their segments of the interstate, he said.

Maintenance on primary and secondary roads suffered as a result, the spokesman said. "As a consequence, a lot of them are in pretty bad shape now," he said.

A growing percentage of those maintenance costs have been borne by the federal government through a loophole in the law. This year, or the primary system, states have obligated $1.15 billion, and of that, $190 million was for the "restoration, rehabilitation and repaving" loophole, which is 18 percent of the total.

The percentage is even higher on the secondary system, where out of $271 million obligated, $58 million is for "three-R" work.

The interstate is 93 percent open now, at a cost of $76 billion. The official estimate is it will take another $104 billion to complete the work.

Compounding the problem is that some of the earliest segments are in need of major repairs, while some states that have a substantial amount of work yet are being squeezed by cutbacks in the fiscal 1981 budget.

Nuclear war feared

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — Former Swedish Prime Minister Olof Palme joined other leaders Thursday in warning that nuclear war probably would mean the end of civilization and, possibly, the entire human race.

"There would be no continuation after a nuclear holocaust," Palme said in a statement prepared for delivery to the U.N.-sponsored non-governmental conference on "The Arms Race and the Human Race."

"Our civilization, as we know it, would be destroyed after a nuclear war between the superpowers," he warned.

"Perhaps all human beings would be wiped out at once," he said. "Perhaps only 10 per cent would be killed immediately, as one strategist has calculated.

"But it means that about one-third of the population of Europe and North America would be ob-

Representative denies deal in Abscam probe

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sources said Thursday Rep. John Murtha, D-Pa., named but not charged in an Abscam indictment, may be allowed to plead guilty to a reduced charge if he agrees to resign from Congress and testify against two senior House members in the bribery scandal.

There was speculation the reports Murtha still could face prosecution in the sweeping scandal were motivated by attempts to pressure the third-term House member to turn witness against Reps. Frank Thompson, D-N.J., and John Murphy, D-N.Y.

"It's absolutely false," said Murtha's lawyer, Walter Bonner.

Advised of the reports of possible plea-bargaining, Bonner grew irate.

"I'd like whoever made that statement to get up publicly... I'm ready to go on television with him right now," he said. "They've taken a decent guy and hurt the hell out of him. I am incensed, you bet I am.

"If they think he's guilty, they should have indicted him. Nobody indicted him, for obvious reasons."

Murphy and Thompson were indicted on bribery and conspiracy charges Wednesday for allegedly accepting $50,000 bribes from an FBI undercover agent and a bureau informant posing as associates to wealthy Arabs in the Abscam probe.

The indictment said it was "part of the conspiracy" that Murtha was joining Murphy and Thompson in plotting legislation helping the Arab businessmen enter the country. But sources have said Murtha never accepted any payoffs.

His testimony is particularly critical to the government's cases against the two powerful House committee chairmen because neither has been proved to have accepted any cash directly.

Joint Chiefs member calls for renewal of military draft

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Adm. Thomas Hayward, the chief of Naval Operations, said Thursday the all-volunteer system is slipping into failure and that he supports a return to the military draft.

Hayward is the first of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, who include the heads of the Navy, Army, Air Force and Marines, to support compulsory conscription.

He told Pentagon reporters that while he first supported the all-volunteer military concept when he got his job two years ago, he has changed his mind. He said voluntary military service is "gradually slipping into a failure mode."

"In watching things go by for a year and a half, I've shifted ground," Hayward said.

"I believe that the all volunteer force is gradually slipping and that it

The attitude toward business

Are businessmen concerned about their image? If they aren't they should take heed of a Twin Falls Chamber of Commerce survey of high school students, in which 56 percent of the 700 surveyed believed managers of businesses are less honest than the average person. A total of 68 percent said they feel business advertising is generally dishonest. On the other hand, the survey found only 20 percent of those surveyed correctly knew that the average profit of American business is five cents on each dollar of sales after taxes. We're not sure how this survey compares with others across the nation (and plenty of them have been taken), but it would come as no surprise if the figures were similar to the national average. Most businessmen take a bum rap for a few who might be dishonest or engage in unethical practices, but that's true in any field of endeavor. Consumers tend to only remember the time they got a raw deal in dealing with a businessman, not the numerous times they get what they pay for. There is more distrust at the national level than there is of Magic Valley businesses. And the survey does show small businesses retain a high confidence level (73 percent). Still, 42 percent viewed Magic Valley ethical practices as poor. It is encouraging to note that 70 percent of those surveyed have, or are planning to take, a business education or economics course. Even more, 81 percent, said there is a need for more business education courses. There's enough in the survey to warrant further study by the Chamber's education committee and to formulate some kind of positive action plan. Perhaps there isn't much the Chamber can do about national attitudes, but it certainly can attempt to do something about how business is viewed in the Magic Valley. The survey provides the opportunity to enlist just such support from the beneficiaries of better understanding and education — the business community.

Don't hold your breath

WASHINGTON — A canoeist with a popgun was just fired a warning shot across the bow of a battleship. Or, if you prefer, a gun has threatened an elephant with reptiles. An editor of Human Events, an exciting right-wing weekly, warns that if Ronald Reagan picks Howard Baker as his running mate, Human Events may not throw its weight behind Reagan. Human Events, which does not have a spacious sense of proper Republicanism, thinks the Republicans' Senate leader is improperly liberal. It has been years since I last saw Human Events, but I remember when Human Events spotted me as a left-winger. Ten years ago I came to Washington to join a senator's staff. Before long, the keen nose of Human Events sniffed a whiff of sedition. It wrote: "Conservative staffers on Capitol Hill are becoming increasingly linked at the activities of Dr. George Will, assistant to Sen. Gordon Allott, R-Colo. They say that Will, a devoted conservative, has acquired a growing habit of aloofness toward right-of-center projects and legislation, thus dooming many of them to defeat." Sen. Allott, the powerful and respected chairman of the Republican Policy Committee, has conservative instincts, but some Capitol observers are saying that Will is playing an active role in moderating Allott's stance in such policy areas as defense appropriations and domestic giveaways. Drats. They noticed. My guilty secret is out: I adore domestic appropriations. And think defense appropriations are icky. But wasn't I a powerfulascal? My mere "aloot-ness" doomed legislation. Not bad for one member of the staff of one Republican in a Senate controlled by Democrats. Among the many things beyond Human Events' understanding is the limited power of staffers, at least those working for conscientious, energetic senators like Allott. Anyway, as I recall, when liberal organizations rated Allott's voting record during my three years with him, his rating fluctuated between 2 and 3 (on a scale in which 100 was liberal perfection, and 00 was creeping Trotskyism). I have recounted this sample of Human Events' nuttiness because light shed on Human Events sheds light on a Reagan problem, and an opportunity. The Human Events' ultimatum to Reagan is, of course, a trivium, but it is not quite trivial as a symptom of something significant: Reagan has long been plagued by presumptuous university professors. The hectoring of him by presumptuous cabals with lists of "unacceptable" running mates gives Reagan a chance to reassure millions by amassing a few thousands. A politician must be gifted at losing as well as winning votes, at accepting the fact that he can't please everyone, and at judiciously choosing who to lose and, in some cases, how to lose them. Baker should be high on any sensible person's list of admirable running mates. Baker is the Republican most respected by Republicans in both parties, and he would be the best Republican to debate Walter Mondale. Reagan, who really needs no new reason for considering Baker, has a new reason. The fact that some pipsqueak "purist" groups are pressuring to assert a veto right, and have concentrated their poggons on Baker, means that if Reagan chooses Baker, he will get not only an able running mate, but also a bonus: He will send a signal to millions of moderates. He will reassure them by sending the "purists" packing. Reagan sent such a signal — or at least avoided sending an opposite signal — when he disappointed those Reaganites who were trying to purge one of the Republican Party's most liked, admired and valued servants, the national chairman, Bill Brock. Brock once argued that Baker is a senator from Tennessee. Brock, like Baker, is a Southern conservative of the sort who understands how to take the Carter, the Southern sanctuary. Purging Brock would have been dumbness in several dimensions. It would have squandered talent. And it would have suggested that the Reagan organization, swollen by victory, had abandoned a rising-ginger desire to discover ideological differences where no significant ones exist. Republicans can't leave well enough alone. They survive the marathon primary season with few bruises or contusions, and then get an itch for utterly optional bloodletting. As is often the case in campaign organizations, it was unclear who was doing what with whose approval in the attacks on Brock. But this much is clear: If Reagan wins the presidency, one reason will be that, thanks especially to Brock, candidate Reagan was powered toward victory by a party in the pink (if Human Events will pardon the expression) of health.

Ellen Goodman

This business of 'owning'

© The Boston Globe Newspaper Co. Washington Post Writers Group BOSTON — I have never gotten a fix on owning things. I don't mean things like a car or a Cuisinart. I mean things like a beach or a mountain or an idea. Once when I was nine or ten and walking along the Maine shore, I came across a sign that said: "No Trespassing. Private Property." Even at that age, I wondered: What do these people own? The sand, the water? Do they own the land at low tide or high tide? Are the clams and the fish theirs, too? It is, when you think about it, really strange to chop up the environment into deeded pieces and call it our own. Yet it is also one of the oldest and most universal of human drives. When I bought my own house seven years ago, I thought about it all again. Why was it that I could buy a half-acre of land and not sea? Was land really more universal than now? I could walk around my backyard, I think of "my" lilac and "my" vegetable garden with pride, and yet some amusement. I am equally intrigued by the relationship between what we create and what we own. I cannot, for example, patent the idea in a column as my own, insisting that anyone who thinks I've discussed it from now on owes me a royalty. I can put a copyright on a book, but not on a way of looking at the world. If I were an artist I could own a painting, but not impressionism. I could sell a record, but not the rights to jazz. I could patent a piano or an easel or a typewriter, but never sue anyone who adopted my style at one of these instruments. Now, this week, the Supreme Court has ruled in a rather timorous, tentative voice that we can patent life. A scientist in Chicago, Dr. Amanda M. Chakrabarty, through genetic engineering produced a hungry organism to eat the oil we spill. One of the members of the court have said that he — or General Electric, to be specific — can apply for a patent to make, own, and sell this living thing. It will be theirs. Had this man discovered, rather than invented, an organism that ate up oil spills, he could not have patented it. Newton could not have owned the law of gravity. Crick and Watson could not have taken a patent on DNA. These discoveries, as the court reminded us, are "manifestations of nature, free to all men and reserved exclusively to none." It is only the act of human creation, and the creation of something tangible, useful, manufacturable, man-made — which can be exclusively owned. To be specific, as an earlier court ruled, "whoever invents or discovers any new and useful process, machine, manufacture or composition of matter or any new and useful improvement thereof may obtain a patent therefor." The patent is the deed, then, that General Electric can take out on bacteria, as if this species were a camera. They have ruled that Dr. Chakrabarty's discovery is not nature's handwork, but is his own. They have allowed us to patent life because it is "useful." It seems to me that the whole issue of ownership is here perfectly tied up with human motivation and productivity. We allow people to own something, in order that they will produce, in order that they can own something else. It is called "incentive." The Patent Act of 1793 was built on the notion that Jefferson shared with the other founders of the country, that "ingenuity should receive a liberal encouragement." In order to encourage creativity we hold out a promise of ownership and profit. In order to make profit meaningful we encourage more ownership. The thing that we have in common is the urge to put our stamp, our fence, our mark, our ego on the landscape. I think it is our powerful human motivation, and not necessarily an evil one. But the end result of this sort of reasoning is curious. It can lead to a Drake's Beach syndrome, where a few people pay up to half a million dollars for 100-acre lots near Santa Barbara and shut off 8 1/2 miles of Pacific Ocean beach to the public. I am not among the people who are freaked out by fantasies of genetic engineering run amok. But I am cautious. It is bizarre enough in itself to give people rights to life. It is an even odder business to distribute exclusive patents on our biology and project profit on genes. This is not, after all, a digital clock or a calculator. Genes are not among the constellations of the entire human continent.

Calling all Bruin Boosters

Editor, Times-News: To the residents of Twin Falls, Are you a Bruin Booster? I know school has been out only a couple of weeks but it is time to plan ahead. If any of your answers to the following questions are "yes" then you should be a Bruin Booster. 1. Are you interested in helping the high school athlete become a better citizen? 2. Are you interested in seeing that the athlete has good equipment or facilities to use? 3. Are you interested in encouraging Bruins to do better? 4. Are you interested in forming friendships with the athletes? 5. Are you interested in forming new friendships with other Twin Falls residents? These are only a few of our goals. You do not have to have kids playing. You can "adopt" a Bruin and encourage him or her through their career. We are joining a new athletic conference this year. We would like to get our Bruins off to a great start so come join us. We are having our election to the Board of Directors for the coming year at our monthly meeting Tuesday, June 24, at 6 p.m. at the Teacher's Lounge at the High School. We will also be signing up new members. We want to extend a special invitation to all those parents and friends of the new incoming sophomores to come and join us. Be a Bruin Booster. As he was regaining consciousness, he saw a car park at the curb. He was too weak to get up, but he could see two well-dressed couples get out of the car. They didn't even glance at him. They just stepped over him and went into the restaurant. He later said, "For all they knew, I was dead or dying. But they didn't even bother to look. What's happening to people? They watched a beating — as if at a spectator event

© Chicago Sun-Times (Field News Service) CHICAGO — It wasn't the kind of thing you expect to see in a food store in a nice neighborhood. In a tavern, yes. Or on one of Chicago's meaner streets. But you don't expect to see a wild-looking guy beating hell out of his girlfriend in front of the dairy case in a grocery store on Devon Avenue. Along that stretch of Devon, there are nice shops, not many bars, decent restaurants. Oh, it has a few walking bookies and some thrives from City Hall. But in general, it is a respectable residential neighborhood. So Alice Nelson was flabbergasted when she walked into the store one recent evening to pick up a few groceries. "There was this guy standing over his girlfriend, a young Oriental woman. She was lying on the floor screaming and crying. He had her by the arm and he was yelling at her to shut up. "But the whole time, he was slapping her and tearing at her clothes. So she screamed, and that would make him mad, and he'd tell her to shut up, and then he'd hit her, and that would make her scream." "The manager was yelling at them to get out of the store. So he started dragging her toward the door. "He looked like he was on something, dope or liquor — I don't know what. But he seemed up in the clouds and kind of dazed. "And the girl kept screaming and crying: 'Somebody help me.' " Mrs. Nelson looked around at the other customers, expecting somebody to do something. There were about 15 people there, including several men. She was horrified by their cool reactions. "Some of them were smiling. They acted as if they were looking at something funny. I couldn't believe it. Here is this tiny girl being beaten in front of their eyes, and they were smiling. And all the manager of the store cared about was getting them out of there. He didn't seem to care if the guy was hurting her — he just wanted him to beat her up somewhere else. "Finally someone did something. A small man dropped his bag of groceries, pulled a small tube out of his pocket, ran up to the woman-beater, and sprayed something in his face. "I could have been Mace. Or, more likely, it was probably a can of men's hair spray. In either case, Mrs. Nelson says it didn't bother the big truck. "She was still screaming for help, and she was running to his car and got a baseball bat out of his trunk and gave it to the one little guy who had tried to help — the one who had sprayed him in the face. "So he took the bat and he snuck up behind the guy and hit him across the back with it. "This gave the girl a chance to jump up and try to escape. But her boyfriend tackled her from behind, and resumed slapping her around. "The one man who tried to help her was with his wife and baby, and his wife was trying to get the other man to help him. All it would have taken was a couple of guys to put him off the girl, but no one would help.

"I swear, four of them stood there smiling and laughing like it was funny." The little man who had tried to help gave up. He didn't do it by himself, so he and his wife and baby got in their car and left. "By now, the young man had wrestled his battered girlfriend into the parking lot. So Mrs. Nelson hoped that someone would come by, see what was happening, and help. "People were stopping and watching. They crossed the street to watch. A couple of them stopped their cars. There must have been 25 or 30 people out there, and you know what? They watched it like it was a movie. One old guy pulled into the lot with his wife and got out of the car and was laughing. "Eventually, the police arrived and took the couple away, presumably to let a judge settle their dispute. But Mrs. Nelson angrily says: "It was sickening. There were so many people who could have stopped this guy. All it would have taken were two or three men. He wasn't that big. But nobody would get involved."

"You hear all the time about women getting raped or murdered, and after seeing something like this, it's no wonder. Galantrity is definitely dead." That may be. Or it may be that we have become such a nation of spectators that people just stand around and watch something like that as if, in Mrs. Nelson's words, "it was a movie." Or a sporting event. After all, it did have lively action. And action is what turns people on. "Most people are fascinated by violence, even carnage. I stopped at an accident on an expressway once, to see if I could help. "The inevitable papers block formed. I watched the faces of the motorists and their passengers as they went by and looked at the smashed cars and the bloody people slithering on the side of the road. Their expressions showed far more fascination than sympathy. A few laughed. "Who knows what he made them like that. You can get a dozen theories: a steady diet of violence on TV, in movies, sporting events, rock concerts, on the front pages. The Me Generation. The Kitty Genovese —

Study — Soviets need more troops to win in Afghanistan

Friday, June 20, 1980 Times-News, Twin Falls, Idaho A-5

LONDON (UPI) — The Soviets must have planned the invasion of Afghanistan at least four months in advance and an early withdrawal or reduction of their invasion forces appears unlikely, the authoritative International Institute for Strategic Studies said Thursday.

It estimated the Soviets would need between 250,000 and 400,000 troops instead of the present 85,000 to wipe out the Afghan guerrillas fighting them.

"What seems likely is an ever increasing involvement by the Soviet Union in maintaining a government of her preference in Kabul and providing it with a minimum of authority," the Institute said in its annual Strategic Survey.

The Institute is an independent center for information and research on the problems of international security, defense and arms control in the nuclear age.

The survey said the Soviet Union's "swift and effective entry into Afghanistan must have been planned at least four months in advance" of last December's invasion.

"If the Soviet leaders planned to extend pacification into the foothills in an effort to wipe out the guerrilla forces operating in the mountains," it said, "a far larger force would be needed (estimates range from 250,000 to 400,000) and even then success would not be assured."

"It appeared unlikely," the survey said, "that the Soviet forces in Afghanistan would soon be withdrawn or even reduced."

The survey also predicted Iran, when the current crisis eases, would seek re-establishment of ties with the West and U.S. supplies for refurbishing its armed forces.

The survey did not predict an early Soviet move toward the Indian Ocean or the West's vital Persian Gulf oil resources, "but" it said, "Iran's uncertain future might provide the Soviet Union's security obsessed leaders with another case in which Soviet state interests demanded military action against neighboring territory."

"Even in the unlikely event of a total withdrawal of Soviet forces from Afghanistan," it said, "there would be no return to the previous situation."

The survey made these other main points:
 • The immediate prospect for East-West arms control seems "bleak," but Moscow and the West will move again sooner or later toward negotiations.

• New American strategic programs will reduce U.S. strategic vulnerability and increase that of the Soviet Union.

Afghan rebels seek general strike

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (UPI) — Afghan insurgents have called for a general strike by shopkeepers, students and other Kabul residents in a new challenge to Moscow's grip on Afghanistan, rebel spokesmen in Pakistan said Thursday.

The spokesmen said "shabnama," or night letters, were distributed in the Afghan capital warning shopkeepers and other Kabul residents in a new challenge to Moscow's grip on Afghanistan, rebel spokesmen in Pakistan said Thursday.

The guerrillas also appealed for support of students, many of whom already are skipping classes to protest the Soviet occupation. Others stay home because of a rash of poisoning incidents directed against schoolchildren.

The general strike comes amid signs that the pro-Soviet Afghan government of Babrak Karmal is concerned about reports reaching the Afghan population describing political intrigue in Kabul.

Radio Kabul reported that several members of the Afghan Cabinet were touring the Interior of Afghanistan to appeal to the people not to listen to rumors.

The tours follow reports that Karmal attempted to commit suicide in his official residence last Friday, but was dissuaded by his Soviet advisers. The reports said the 53-year-old president was confined to his presidential palace and could not leave without Soviet permission.

Indian ethnic violence flares

NEW DELHI, India (UPI) — Five persons were killed and six others injured Thursday in a resurgence of bloody ethnic clashes in the northeast Indian states of Tripura and Assam, officials said.

In New Delhi, a government minister told Parliament state authorities had been alerted to a Chinese-trained terrorist group allegedly planning a liberation war in the same region and other Indian areas.

Authorities in Agartala, capital of the Hindu state of Tripura, said armed tribesmen backed to death two Bengalis, guarding their homes in the western half of the state and injured six others.

In Gauhati, capital of Assam, police said two people died in clashes between local Assamese and migrant Bengalis, and one person was killed by police firing on the warring groups.

Home Ministry officials in New Delhi said the two incidents were not directly related, but the seven-month campaign in Assam to deport Bengali settlers encouraged Tripura tribesmen to unleash last week's orgy of killings.

Officials and police estimate 1,000 to 3,000 people died and thousands were left homeless in the massacres, which were confined to eastern Tripura.

Journalist reports use of nerve gas

BOSTON (UPI) — Possible evidence of the use of nerve gas by Russian troops in Afghanistan was turned over to the U.S. government by an American journalist who spent more than a week with rebels in the war-torn nation, it was reported Thursday.

An 80-round filter taken from the air intake system of a Soviet scout car was turned over to Pentagon specialists by Calen Greer, a former Marine, free lance for "Soldier of Fortune," a magazine written for mercenaries, the Boston Globe said.

If the filter had been used in the field, experts may be able to analyze the type of gas reportedly being used by Soviet forces.

Greer, who briefed House Armed Services Committee member William Dickinson, R-Ala., about his findings, also brought back samples of the Soviet Union's most modern weaponry, the Globe said.

The items included the filter, a hand-held missile launcher, sticks of a napalm-like incendiary, ammunition from a new Soviet assault rifle and hundreds of rounds of Russian armor-piercing ammunition.

Some of the weaponry was kept by the magazine for examination by its own experts.

"It's a very great concern to me if, as it seems, our intelligence community has been unable to gather as much information as we are lance writer like Mr. Greer," said Dickinson in an interview with the paper.

"I can't tell whether the CIA knows any more than the DIA (the Pentagon's Defense Intelligence Agency), but I've asked them to come in a tell me what they know," he said.

"I'd be very concerned if I found they didn't know as much as this man does. What particularly concerns me is the evidence of Soviet use of gas in Afghanistan," said Dickinson.

"If the intelligence community can now confirm that the use of nerve gas it should be made public and Congress should respond by appropriating the necessary funds to acquire a defensive capability, as well as an offensive capability for deterrent effect," he said.

Greer, a resident of Canon City, Colo., spent 11 days in April with Moslem rebels south of Afghanistan's capital, Kabul.

Grenada PM escapes bomb

ST. GEORGE'S, Grenada (UPI) — A bomb blast, apparently aimed at Prime Minister Maurice Bishop, one of Fidel Castro's closest Caribbean allies, exploded in a cricket field Thursday, killing at least two people and wounding 20 others.

Bishop was not injured.

Bishop, Grenada Governor-General Sir Paul Scoon, the official British representative, and other members of Grenada's socialist government were about to address a crowd estimated at between 800 and 1,000 people at Queen's Park when the blast occurred.

Bishop's Cuban-trained People's Revolution Army cordoned off

Queen's Park, a cricket field just north of the capital city and stopped cars to search them.

Eyewitnesses reported the bomb seemed to explode on the speaker's platform where Bishop and Scoon were sitting, but senior army officials told UPI none of the dignitaries was hurt.

Bishop, who took power of the nutmeg-growing Eastern Caribbean island in a March 1979 coup, describes himself as a socialist, maintains close ties to Castro and is embarking on various projects, including construction of a new airport, with Cuban help.

Soviet gas experts in Eritrea

BOONN, West Germany (UPI) — Hundreds of Soviet experts in chemical and gas warfare have arrived in Ethiopia in the first stage of a new offensive against Eritrea, Eritrean rebels have charged.

Five representatives of the Eritrean People's Liberation Front said 200 Soviet experts have arrived in Ethiopia to help launch the offensive.

The Soviet-backed regime of Col. Haile Mengistu Mariam is turning to chemical and gas warfare after 5 years of unsuccessful attempts to defeat the Eritreans in conventional battle, the EPLF charged.

"We are appealing to governments, political parties and humanitarian organizations around the world to stop the poison warfare," said EPLF spokesman Ermias Debesalu. "But we know that the weapons are all ready to be used. We are expecting an intense conventional battle."

The EPLF delegation now is touring European capitals to bring attention to the war in Eritrea, which is seeking independence from the Addis Ababa government.

About 150,000 of the 4 million Eritreans are thought to have died in fighting Soviet-backed Ethiopian forces since the first fighting in the province, located along the Red Sea, in 1975.

Debesalu lamented the lack of publicity of the Eritrean situation, especially since the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan and the taking of the American hostages in Iran last year.

"The hot issue is oil," Debesalu said. "But what people don't realize is how desperate the Soviets are to hold onto their bases in the Horn of Africa. Now they will use chemical and poison gas against us to keep them."

NETWORK EXODUS
 Soviet dancers don't defect in numbers much greater than those riddling the ranks at CBS, and Marvin Kalb is the latest to bolt. The veteran diplomatic correspondent — a CBS mainstay for 17 years — is going to NBC because, CBS says, the network won't guarantee him a set number of appearances on the Evening News. The hedge, started last year when mandatory retirement forced Richard Salant out as head of CBS News. He joined NBC and has been hiding away his old staff ever since. KING'S COURT

 New York tailor Vincent Santilato, who sews for the stars and every year produces his own "10 Worst Dressed Men" list, has a new client who'll never fit the category. He says he got a crash order Tuesday from London to deliver three white cotton tennis skirts by Friday so that Billy Jean King will be well-dressed for Wimbledon. Says he, "I do some ladies' work. It's not my line. But this one will be fun. She's a difficult fit and she's gonna be on television."
BUONA PERFUME TOO
 Sophia Loren is looking back and moving forward at the same time. She's in Rome, reliving her early years as she films her life story, "La Buona Stella" — which translates as "The Good Star" — for NBC-TV. But as soon as the shooting is over, in September, she'll tour the United States with a brand new job — promoting a new Coty perfume called "Sophia." It's said to be the first ever hand in its creation. FRIEND INDEED

 Mary Crosby, who plays the scheming mistress of the vile and villainous J.R. Ewing on "Dallas," says Larry Hagman really helped her overcome the nervousness that afflicted her first bedroom scene with him. Bing Crosby's daughter says

DIAMIN FAN CLUB
 Thirty-five thousand screaming fans proved Tuesday that they love reggae superstars Bob Marley and the Wailers in Sweden, but Marley's choice of role models isn't likely to get him nominated for a Nobel Peace Prize. Said the controversial pot-smoking Rastafarian in an interview with the Swedish newspaper Expressen, "I'd Azima was the tops — the best thing to ever happen to Africa."

Carson quips mark report on hospital

BURBANK, Calif. (UPI) — Johnny Carson has returned to the "Tonight Show" with a few quips about his hospitalization for a painful leg condition. "NBC was great," he said Wednesday night. "They even offered me a guest leg."
 "And we have wonderful insurance coverage here at NBC — Blue Shaft of Etna. But when you are with Blue Shaft they do cut a few costs."
 "Instead of being wheeled into X-ray, you are wheeled into the parking lot, a little yellow booth in the parking lot."
 "Going to the hospital is an experience. Believe me, the hospital is no place to be when you're sick."
 "But the 57-year-old entertainer said it was good to get back."
 Carson entered Cedars-Sinai Medical Center June 2 for tests to determine if he would need a surgical bypass to provide blood circulation to his left leg and foot.
 Following a week of tests, doctors determined surgery would not be necessary after an artery dilation procedure cleared the blockage that was restricting the flow of blood in the leg.
 The procedure involved insertion of a tiny balloon into the artery to compress plaque that had built up on the interior of the artery wall.
 "It was very fortunate," Carson said, "I avoided surgery, which I didn't particularly want."
 Carson took a moment "to thank all the people who sent all the letters and telegrams."

Safer saws sought

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Chainsaw manufacturers have been warned by the government to make their products safer.
 The Consumer Product Safety Commission Wednesday voted to order its staff to work with the industry on a plan that could result in safer chains being installed on saws as early as this fall and to have its staff come up with mandatory safety standards for chainsaws.

Pro-marijuana group seeks order barring pot eradication

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A marijuana law reform group asked a federal court Thursday to block the funding of government efforts to find and eradicate marijuana fields being cultivated in the United States.

The suit was filed in U.S. District Court for the District of Columbia by the National Organization for the Reform of Marijuana Laws, (NORML), which has been waging a decade-long fight to remove criminal penalties for personal use of marijuana.

Principal focus of the suit, said NORML lawyer Peter H. Meyers, is a pilot surveillance and eradication program in California in which three federal agencies — the Drug Enforcement Administration, the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration and the Customs Service are working with state law enforcement agencies.

"This is the first civil suit brought to protect Americans from overzealous enforcement of marijuana cultivation laws," Meyers said in announcing the suit.

"The privacy of people who live in the surveillance areas is being invaded by high technology aerial photography, helicopter overflights and other unreasonably intrusive law enforcement activities," Meyers said.

He said the eradication program would have a harmful impact on California's economy because marijuana is one of the state's top cash crops worth between $300 million and $1 billion a year.

The suit seeks to use principles established in its 1978 challenge to the Mexican-U.S. marijuana eradication program which sprayed the herbicide paraquat on Mexican marijuana fields.

In that suit NORML charged the government had not filed a proper environmental impact statement, for the program in Mexico.

The suit filed Thursday also charges the government with failing to consider numerous environmental factors in the eradication program, including possible harm to the residents of the area as well as harm to endangered species, national parks and forests and wildlife habitats.

It asks the court to order a halt to the funding of the program until the government considers environmental, health, social and economic impacts in a formal environmental impact statement.

Illegal drug use skyrockets in last 2 decades

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sixty-eight percent of young adults aged 18 to 25 have tried marijuana and one in three have sampled cocaine or harder drugs such as heroin, two government studies showed Thursday.

The studies released by the Department of Health and Human Services show cocaine to be growing in popularity second only to marijuana.

They show one in three young adults aged 18-25, one in six youths below 18 and one in 17 adults over 25 are current users of marijuana. But current use of marijuana by persons under the age of 18 has stabilized, one study said.

The figures are based on interviews conducted from August of 1979 to January of 1980.

about the rapid rise in illicit drug use over the past few years are well founded," said Health and Welfare Secretary Patricia Harris.

She ordered the National Institute on Drug Abuse to "intensify its ongoing efforts on the prevention of drug abuse, specifically the prevention of drug use by young people."

She also said that social acceptance of marijuana use must be eliminated.

The NIDA said the figures in the two reports may be conservative since they were based on interviews at households and do not include run-aways or those who live on military bases, at college or in prison, all environments where drug use tends to be higher.

The studies show 33 percent of persons in the 18-25 age group have tried cocaine or harder drugs such as heroin or hallucinogens — up from 3 percent in 1959.

Oregon court orders juvenile hearings open

SALEM, Ore. (UPI) — The Oregon Supreme Court has ruled that the state's constitution requires juvenile hearings to be open to the press and public.

In the landmark case, the court in a 5-1 decision said the public and press have a right to attend juvenile court hearings for Michelle Gates, a 13-year-old Portland girl accused of murder.

The court said in its decision Wednesday that Oregon's juvenile code statutes allowing a judge to bar the public from juvenile court hearings are unconstitutional.

Gunmen turned back in attack on embassy

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Unidentified gunmen burst into the British Embassy in Baghdad Thursday on the eve of Iraq's first elections in 22 years but were shot and killed by crack government security forces who stormed in less than an hour later, Iraqi authorities said.

The gunmen described only as "criminals" fired several shots and threw two hand grenades without injuring any of the embassy's British and Iraqi employees, the state-owned Iraqi news agency said. They held no hostages and there was no indication they made any demands.

Iraqi security forces moved in after getting the approval of the British ambassador, the agency said.

It said three gunmen were involved but in London, Foreign Office officials said a fourth gunman surrendered to Iraqi police after his colleagues were shot and killed.

The agency said investigators were concentrating "not only on their identities, but also on the identity of the party behind them."

Iraqi authorities said the action "seems to be a desperate attempt to attract attention especially at a time when Iraq is preparing for its Peoples Council elections."

The parliamentary elections, the first since the overthrow of the monarchy in 1958, are due to begin Friday. Up to now, the country has been governed by the Revolutionary Command Council headed since last year by President Saddam Hussein.

The news agency linked the attack with a wave of unrest and several bombing incidents, which authorities said were aimed at disrupting the elections in which 840 candidates are vying for 250 parliamentary seats.

The parliament will be empowered to debate the government's internal and foreign policies, question Cabinet members and recommend the dismissal of ministers.

A man injured when police opened fire on a crowd Tuesday during S. Africa's worst racial violence in 4 years is given assistance

Uneasy calm returns to S. Africa, 42 dead

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (UPI) — An uneasy calm settled Thursday over the mixed-race townships surrounding Cape Town where at least 42 people were killed and more than 200 wounded in two days of bloody clashes between protesters and police.

Hospital sources said the toll might reach 60 dead.

No official damage figure had been compiled but city council officials and local shopkeepers estimate it would top $6 million.

Police Minister Louis le Grange told reporters in Pretoria—the official death toll stood at 29 dead and 141 injured. However, an independent survey found at least 42 dead and 200 injured.

Le Grange said 69 of the injured had stab wounds or were injured in stoning incidents and added that his men did not use knives or stones to quell the unrest, the worst since the 1976 Soweto riots.

It was Monday's protest marking the fourth anniversary of those riots that sparked the latest bloody wave of racial unrest.

Sources in the mixed-race townships claimed most of the rioting was the work of gangs of hoodlums who terrorize the townships at night.

Municipal workers and shop owners in the 20 square-mile area housing an estimated one million people began their massive cleanup operation Thursday 12 inches of shattered glass lay in parts of Hill Road, in Elsie's River, scene of some of the fiercest rioting. Workers removed makeshift barricades of burned tires, drainage pipes and logs and started demolishing the wrecked and gutted shops.

In the nearby township of Bishop Lavis, residents waited outside the Galaxy Cinema Cafe to buy bread as most of the shops in the area stayed closed, fearing further trouble.

Meanwhile, the boycott of mixed-race schools in the Cape Town area was suspended as schools closed for a three-week vacation. Thousands of high school students have stayed away from classes since the end of April, protesting unequal education.

But school principals were not optimistic the students would all return to their desks when the vacation ends.

Bani-Sadr continues attacks against hard line opponents

TEHRAN, Iran (UPI) — Taking the offensive against his fundamentalist critics, President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr shuffled the armed forces command Thursday while the news agency published a revised transcript of a conversation implicating hard-line Moslems in an alleged coup plot.

Bani-Sadr's newspaper, The Islamic Revolution, published a second transcript of what it said was a taped conversation between an unidentified person and Dr. Hassan Ayat, a prominent official of the Islamic Republican Party, the fundamentalist alliance that controls the Iranian parliament.

Ayat was the official cited in the first transcript published Wednesday and although he denounced its publication as a distortion and an "American plot," he did not deny making the remarks attributed to him.

In the new transcript, Ayat was quoted as telling Bani-Sadr he was a flatterer of a plan to force Bani-Sadr's resignation by political means or, if that failed, by force.

Ayat accused Bani-Sadr, who is on record as favoring the release of the hostages, of "following the American line" and said the fundamentalists must organize themselves to undermine him.

In the most damaging part of the transcript, he is quoted as saying that the fundamentalists must be prepared to resort to force, and must start training under the cover of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's popular militia movement, the "army of 99 percent."

"We must think of the day when we want to attack," Ayat was quoted as saying. "We must be trained, we must have the possibilities."

The Islamic Republican Party, which controls enough seats in parliament to determine the outcome of its debate on the fate of the hostages, said in a statement that Bani-Sadr, a key party leader, did not represent its official views. It accused the moderates led by Bani-Sadr of hatching a "conspiracy" to discredit the fundamentalists.

Differences between the two groups maneuvering for control of the government have deepened since the parliament elected last May began arguing over the choice of a prime minister and inching towards its debate on the hostage crisis, not expected to begin until late next month at the earliest.

Political analysts said they saw the publication of the tapes as an attempt to put the fundamentalists on the defensive.

In a related development, Bani-Sadr shook up the armed forces command, appointing a new chief of the joint armed forces staff to replace Gen. Mohammad Hadi Shadmehr, who resigned.

Shadmehr, who was named as "supreme advisor on military affairs," was succeeded by Gen. Vajollah Fallah, formerly commander of the army.

Gen. Ghassem Ali Zahedi had succeeded Fallah as army chief and Air Force Col. Javad Fakhr was appointed commander of the air force.

The shakeup appeared to be part of Bani-Sadr's efforts to consolidate his power as president and "supreme commander" of the regular armed forces, by reorganizing the fundamentalist challenge. But it was not known if it was related specifically to the allegations that the fundamentalists were planning to establish their own secret military force.

DC10 pilot was disoriented

WELLINGTON, New Zealand (UPI) — An optical phenomenon known as "white-out" disoriented the pilot of an Air New Zealand DC 10 and caused the jet to crash into the side of a volcano last year in the Antarctic, aviation officials said Thursday.

All 257 people aboard, including passengers from the United States, Australia, Japan and Europe, died when the jet, on a one-day round-trip scenic flight from Auckland, smashed into the slopes of Mount Erebus on Nov. 28.

"White-out" is an optical phenomenon that occurs in polar regions in which the snow-covered ground blends with a white clouded sky to mask the horizon, destroying all sense of direction, depth and distance.

The crash report released by the Transport Ministry showed the crew descended below authorized heights and, as conditions deteriorated, mistook their position and flew toward the 12,450-foot volcano rather than away from it.

The airplane hit the volcano under full power, the report said. The "initiating factor" in the crash was the decision of pilot Capt. Jim Collins to make a visual descent below the specified minimum safety height in contravention of the airline's briefing and aviation guidelines.

Despite what the report calls the "frequent queries and mounting alarm" of the two flight engineers, the pilot and first officer decided too late to climb out of the area.

The aircraft's ground proximity warning system had already begun its "whoop, whoop, pull up, pull up" warning, but this only gave a 6.5 second alarm before impact, an insufficient time to allow for pilot response, the report said.

The report also criticized co-pilot Greg Cassin for not adequately monitoring the flight's actual position in relation to the topography. It said Cassin was preoccupied with contacting the McMurdo (Antarctic) Ground Stations.

Divorce Lifeline to provide counseling

BOISE (UPI) — An agency designed to help people face the crisis of divorce or separation will hold its first public meeting in Boise Tuesday and program director Kay Carter says she has received a steady flow of calls — many from men.

Divorce Lifeline will provide small group counseling and free monthly public information meetings, which will bring in experts to speak on subjects related to personal crises caused by the breakdown of a marriage or other long-term relationship.

The June 24 meeting will feature John Dawson, a certified marriage and family practitioner, who will discuss some of the problems a single adult faces with new found freedom, feelings of inadequacy and self-esteem.

Ms. Carter said a major problem people experience when a divorce or separation is eminent is a "tremendous feeling of failure."

She said our society, communities and families see divorce as a "terrible thing" and thus when a divorce occurs, a person feels they have personally failed.

Such feelings of inadequacy and low self-esteem make it difficult for persons to function or cope with everyday responsibilities, such as raising children or dealing with a job, she said.

"The first thing we try to do is help people understand that first of all, they're not alone," Ms. Carter said. "Thirty-eight percent of first marriages and 43 percent of second marriages end in divorce. We try to make people see they certainly are not alone."

She said the counseling center attempts to help people understand what happened in a relationship — what led a couple to become involved with each other and what caused the breakdown.

"They can begin to look at the relationship in less of a personal way, in more of a critical way," she said. "We want to help persons learn more about themselves and have a growth experience."

Ms. Carter said some divorces are caused by "severe social kinds of problems" such as alcoholism or drug abuse, but "many relationship breakups are not the result of something so obvious."

Ms. Carter said since World War II, there has been a "diminishing of family cohesiveness."

"It became vogue in the '60s that young people had to leave home to establish their own independence," she said.

She said the lack of emotional support from the extended family — grandparents, uncles, aunts, siblings tended to break down relationships.

Ms. Carter agreed that people do not seem to have the same commitment to long-term relationships as in the past, but said that is not necessarily undesirable since counseling and other techniques have discovered it is not always healthy to stay in a relationship.

"People stayed in relationships in the early 1900s that in many cases people today wouldn't call very gratifying," Ms. Carter said.

She said the agency has received a steady number of calls asking about the program. She said she was "surprised" by the number of male callers. Half or more of the inquiries have been from men, she said.

The agency will conduct long-term and short-term counseling groups to help those considering separation and those in the process of divorce face their problems. Ms. Carter said participants would be interviewed to discover their needs and placed in groups of persons with similar problems. Groups will run from eight to 10 persons in size, she said.

Participants also will be charged for counseling. Ms. Carter said fees will run about $50 per month for a single, medium-income person, $40 per month for families of two to four persons, $30 for families of five to seven persons and about $20 for families of eight or more.

The Boise center is the fourth Divorce Lifeline operation to open. Ms. Carter said. The first center was opened in Seattle with others later springing up in Spokane, Wash., and Victoria, British Columbia.

The agency is funded by the Presbyterian churches of the West Coast. Ms. Carter said funding from other agencies such as the federal government and local businesses will be sought after the agency is established.

"Although the agency is affiliated with the Presbyterian Church, persons of all religions are welcome, Ms. Carter said.

The 1980s will see Bill Bliss bring back the important evening gown, left, and the Carole Lombard look

Fall fashions safe and sane

By MARYLOU LUTHER
©The Los Angeles Times

NEW-YORK — In bad times, you must make irresistible clothes." — Oscar de la Renta

"Sex sells." — Norma Kamali

"The new direction in clothes? Wear them, enjoy them, forget them." — Geoffrey Beene

"New style starts with rock 'n' roll." — Betsey Johnson

"People want less because they can afford less." — Halston

"Clothes that cost a lot simply have to look it." — Bill Bliss

"Clothes are becoming romantic — a timeless, forever kind of romantic." — Ralph Lauren

"Clothes are our first environment and thus an adjunct to successful living." — Bonnie Cashin

"Sportswear doesn't have to be mannish." — Perry Ellis

These ideas behind the new clothes for next fall are as diverse and wide-ranging as the clothes themselves.

"A little romance here. A lot of safe and sane there. Some frosting for the let-em-eat-cake set. And a lot of just plain bread and butter. Some soft clothes for hard times. Blouses for those who've lost their shirts. And hems that go up and down with the primate.

As if to repress the depression, designers are offering some of the most uplifting clothes in years. Some examples:

• The New Romantics. Both Ralph Lauren and Perry Ellis are designing sportswear with a touch of romance, a kind of staking the moors brand of sportswear complete with Lord Byron jackets (Lauren) and Heathcliff capes (Ellis). Mid-length skirts (Lauren) and wide-legged, skirt-like pants (Ellis) lend a new femininity to these 19th century updates.

For evening, the new romantics are based on "the old romantics, but brought into 1980 with some dot designing and accessorizing. Oscar de la Renta's Hapsburg-inspired clothes, for instance, do not look so authentically Austrian, or Hungarian, as to be mistaken for costumes, a scroll-embroidered velvet and leathers work believably with tweedy wool sweaters. The French berets add just the right counterpoint to the Tyroli trims and frog closings.

• Less for Day; More for Night. The champion of this concept is Halston, whose evening fireworks for fall are some of his most explosive ever. The designer lights up his chiffon gowns with beading that looks like Fourth of July sparklers. His knee-length tulle evening dresses also project their own kind of crazy dazzle in such colors as firecracker red or lavender over pink. And his double-layer organza blouses and jackets (previewed by Liza Minnelli at the Academy Awards) set new standards in ruffling.

• The New Glamour Girls. Norma Kamali comes up with a new view of sexy in her body draperies worked in wondrous tiers and levels.

Kamali's glamour girls get their own Kamali-escorts-for-fall as the designer offers some of her classic Kamalis for men. Some examples: sleeping bag coats, bomber jackets, jodhpurs.

At Anne Klein, Donna Karan and Louis Dell'Ollo revive the Old Hollywood with their 1980 versions of Carole Lombard. This new role model for luxe sportswear wears a cashmere topper over tailored cashmere pants, a Cashmere cardigan and a silk blouse.

Suit makers have the blues

By PATRICIA SHELTON

(Field News Service)

Men's suit manufacturers have a large case of the blues and the blues this summer.

That's what's keeping most of them in business—blue, gray, tan and beige.

But the suit men's blues are making the sportswear and furnishings manufacturers' cup runneth over.

Modern men has been caught on the fact that he can be a blue jay, pigeon or marsh wren one minute and a peacock the next by simply changing his shirt and tie, and, if he wants to really strut, his shoes and his pocket square.

He also has caught on to the fact that he can look like Mr. Dullard, blending into the corporate image five days a week, and turn right around and be one of the bright ones five weeknights and around the clock on weekends — on or off the golf course.

With the deluge of conservatism in tailored clothing, leisure duds and furnishings are becoming more daring in color, pattern and fabric.

The stigma is off guys who wear yellow pants and bright floral sport shirts on their own time, or wear a loud shirt with a pair of jeans. They will not be banished to Miami Beach, Fla., or Las Vegas. This year, they can even wear white shoes with light socks if they can take a French accent, as in Charles Jourdan.

As for business dress, it makes a lot of sense to take the safe, conservative route on big-money items.

Active life is possible for MS sufferers

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
© Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: This is in response to PREPARED FOR THE WORST, the woman with MS (multiple sclerosis) who was told by her doctor that eventually she would be paralyzed and confined to a wheelchair.

How right you were to tell her not to accept her doctor's gloomy prognosis. She was debating whether to tell her 13-year-old about her disease in the hope that she might be more cooperative and understanding — yet she didn't want to frighten or upset her younger children.

I think all her children should be told.

She should also contact her local MS society. Members will invite her to meetings and put her in touch with other MS victims and provide her with a lot of helpful information.

PREPARED FOR THE WORST should also read "The Pursuit of Hope," an excellent and inspiring book by Miriam Olesberg, a Pulitzer journalist, herself a person with MS.

I know firsthand about MS because I have it, too. My 8-year-old daughter and 11-year-old son were told what I have and how they can help. They are among my greatest assets. Without their help and my husband's constant assurance, I wouldn't be able to do the things I do today. I'm a substitute teacher, Brownie leader, team mom for my son's baseball team and active in my church and PTA.

I manage to keep my home going and keep up a moderately active social life. I realize that someday I could be paralyzed and in a wheelchair. But right now I am not, and I intend to use to the fullest everything I have. Every day I fight to keep my body on its feet and walking. It's a struggle, but it's well worth the effort when I see what I can still accomplish.

—PAT HERMAN
OXNARD, CALIF.

DEAR PAT: Thank you for a wonderful letter. I received hundreds of letters from those with MS, and all were in complete agreement that no one should expect the worst and resign himself to a wheelchair. They also told me that telling the children and asking for their help brings the family closer together.

For those who want more information about MS, write to the National MS Society, 206 E. 42nd St., New York N.Y. 10017.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I both work in jobs covered by Social Security. We have three young children. I know that if my husband becomes disabled or dies, the children would get monthly Social Security payments. Would the children be able to get any benefits if something happens to me?

—ALICE

DEAR ALICE: You have the same rights and benefits under Social Security as your husband.

If you became disabled or die after working long enough under Social Security, your children can get monthly Social Security checks until age 18 or 22 if they go to school full time and remain unmarried.

If you have a child disabled before age 22, your disabled child would get monthly checks as long as disability lasts.

DEAR ABBY: I chuckled over the letters from women with deep voices who were constantly called "sir" on the telephone.

My telephone voice is also misleading. Very often when I answer my telephone, the calling party will say, "May I please speak to your mother, honey?" This happened only yesterday, so I replied, "My mother is 78 years old, and I am 56. What can I do for you, HONEY?"

—LITTLE GIRL VOICE, DENVER

DEAR ABBY: I am very upset and hope you can shed some light on a problem concerning our son who is now 19. (I'll call him Mike.)

About five years ago I found several pairs of girl's panties hidden under Mike's mattress. I was shocked and told my husband about it. He spoke to Mike, who explained that he and a neighbor boy had found them in a trash can behind an apartment building. His father told him to get rid of them, and nothing more was said about it.

All through high school Mike was active in sports, music, clubs, etc. He was very popular with boys and girls. He is now in his sophomore year at college and has been going steady with the same girl for two years. (I'm sure they're doing more than just holding hands.)

Mike is now home for summer vacation. While cleaning his closet, I found a bra, panties and garter belt stuffed into his tennis shoes! I asked him what they were doing there. He got red in the face, said they weren't his and accused me of snooping. Believe me, I was not.

—Abby, I am sick: Can our son be a homosexual? He seems so normal.

Please help me: I don't know how to handle this.

—WORRIED INST. PAUL

DEAR WORRIED: Apparently your son had had a fascination for female undergarments since adolescence. Don't be upset. It does not mean he is a homosexual: Many males share this kind of behavior and function normally as men.

If your son feels that he has a problem, he should get professional help. (The University of Minnesota has an excellent Human Sexuality Department.)

And it might relieve your mind and your husband's to look into the program, too. The more you understand about a subject, the less worried and upset you will be.

DEAR ABBY: When I became pregnant four years ago — at age 43 — I was surprised and certainly not prepared for another child. (I had three grown children.) My sister-in-law gave us an old beat-up baby bed she had had in her basement for years. My husband sanded it down and painted it, and it looked like new. We used it until our baby outgrew it, then we sold it along with some other used furniture.

When my sister-in-law heard that we had sold the bed, she demanded that we give her part of the money we got for it. Abby, that baby bed was junk when she gave it to us, and nothing was said about returning it. Do we owe her anything?

—STEAMED, DAYTONA BEACH

DEAR STEAMED: If she gave it to you, all you owe her is a "thank-you." CONFIDENTIAL TO LOVING SISTER IN BREMERTON, WASH: If you truly want to help your brother get well, let him know that you love him, are confident that he will recover and admire him for finally going into therapy. Offer no suggestions. To tell a person who is undergoing psychoanalysis that all he needs to get well is "common sense," and that permitting his doctor to probe into his early unhappy childhood is causing his depression, is doing him more harm than good.

Sightseers line up for a trip through the White House, one of the many tourist attractions in Washington, D.C.

Tourists must pick, choose

Much to see in D.C.

WASHINGTON, D.C. (UPI) — One puzzle for visitors to Washington, D.C., is that there is so much to see and do that even the most dedicated sightseers must pick and choose.

Most visitors to our nation's capital include the White House, Lincoln Memorial, Washington Monument and the Capitol building high on their list of must-sees.

But odds are that many of them will end up spending most of their time at the Smithsonian Institution, the vast complex of buildings along The Mall housing priceless historical, cultural and other treasures — some 70 million items, according to some estimates.

They include such diverse articles as Francis Scott Key's Star Spangled Banner, gowns worn by every First Lady since Martha Washington, George Washington's false teeth, the Wright brothers 1903 Kitty Hawk "Flyer," the Apollo 11 moonman's command module, the 44 1/2-carat Hope Diamond, a lunar rock, the world's oldest fossil (estimated at 3.1 billion years) and a stuffed 13-foot, 2-inch high African elephant which is the largest on record.

Probably the most popular of the Smithsonian — with adults as well as children — is the National Air and Space Museum, on Independence Ave. between 4th and 7th Sts. S.W., which hosted some 12 million visitors alone last year.

In this spacious modern showcase for the evolution of aviation and space technology, there are 24 galleries featuring such historic milestones as Kitty Hawk, Lindbergh's Spirit of St. Louis, John Glenn's Friendship 7 and the spacecraft in which Neil A. Armstrong and Edwin E. Aldrin, Jr. landed on the moon.

There also are rockets, satellites, spacemen's suits, an F-1 engine from the Saturn 5 that launched astronauts to the moon, and the moon rock that can be touched in the walk-through Skylab Orbital Workshop.

I made my first visit to the museum — which was opened in 1976 — for the premiere showing of the film "Living Planet" sponsored by the Johnson

Wax Co. — and produced by Francis Thompson, who won an Oscar for his documentary "To Be Alive" which was the highlight of the same company's exhibit at the New York 1964-65 World Fair.

The film, which opens with a splendiferous shot of the earth from outer space, takes viewers on a thrilling 30-minute aerial odyssey over five continents on an Imax screen about 60 feet high and 75 feet wide. There is an admission charge of 50 cents for adults and 25 cents for children to the semi-circular theater with rows of sharply-banked seats. The best seats are high up in the rear.

Children — and adults — can learn more about space, the stars and planets in "Worlds of Tomorrow," a 30-minute light-and-sound presentation on the 70-foot domed ceiling of the Albert Einstein Spacearium in the museum. Admission to the showing is 50 cents for adults, 25 cents for children.

Vince Granatelli checks under hood of $750,000 turbine-driven sports car he built

Granatellis' new turbine car will never become obsolete

VAN NUYS, Calif. (UPI) — The First Family of automobile racing have come up one of the most exotic, expensive and exciting passenger cars in the world.

But it's not the $750,000 price tag or the 200 mph-plus top speed that has excited Andy Granatelli and his son, Vince. Their turbine-engine Corvette is more than the ultimate sports car.

The Granatellis are convinced they have come up with a legal, practical, virtually maintenance-free passenger car that will run on anything from perfume to kerosene to liquor.

"It is one of a kind — the first successful turbine-driven passenger car," Granatelli said. "And it wasn't built by General Motors or Ford or Chrysler. It was built by my son."

"One has to wonder why Detroit isn't coming up with something like this."

"There is no radiator, no hoses, no fan belts, no water, no antifreeze and you only change the oil every 100,000 miles. You can drive the car for a lifetime and it never needs a tuneup or overhaul."

"That's why Detroit doesn't want to build a car like this — it won't become obsolete."

Granatelli says that with a limited budget ("I agreed $750,000 is a lot, but not with a project like this," his son developed a revolutionary automobile.

"And who else has the expertise other than the Granatellis?" he says immediately.

The black and silver Corvette looks conventional, but whirring beneath the hood is a Pratt and Whitney gas turbine engine, which idles at 20,000 rpm. Granatelli points out that "the engine only weighs 290 pounds."

"It is perfectly safe," he said. "It is street legal. And the emissions are very low, less than a piston engine."

"It takes off like a rocketship but it is as docile as a regular car. And it has no brake problems associated with turbo cars."

"One of the big advantages is that you are not limited to one kind of fuel. This will burn anything from perfume to kerosene to vodka to bourbon."

Asked about mileage, Granatelli was rather evasive. "After all, the car is for sale — 'in the neighborhood of $750,000.'"

"We didn't build the car for mileage," he says. "It really depends how you drive it. The car does over 200 mph. And it does zero to 55 mph in 2.85 seconds. It's just like taking off in a Lear jet."

"Riding in it is the thrill of a lifetime."

Clams off his menu

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (UPI) — Clams are living data banks of ocean ecology — some of them living on ocean floors for up to 150 years, a University of Florida expert on clams said Wednesday.

"It's kind of hard to think of eating something that's older than yourself," said Dr. Douglas Jones, a UF geology professor who has quit eating clams and clam products out of respect for their age.

"You may be eating something that was around before your grandparents were born," he said. "I can't face the idea of eating them anymore after working with them for so long (six years)."

Jones' work consists of examining the shell layers of the Atlantic surf clam — and the mahogany clam to determine their age and discover new facts about the sea environment in which they grow.

Currently, he is more interested in the mahogany clam since the fishing industry is just beginning to harvest it, he said.

"Because the mahogany does not grow to consumable size as quickly as the surf clam, the federal government is trying to prevent a clam shortage by limiting the catch and regulating the number of times fishermen can go out," he said.

A clam produces a dark line on its shell every year, the researcher said. By collecting live clams and counting their bands backwards, Jones can assign a specific calendar year to each band.

"Just like the rings on trees, wide bands show that the year was good for growth while skinny bands indicate a bad year," he said.

Some scientists believe that clams produce smaller lines every day, but Jones disagrees.

Fats study draws criticism

BOSTON (UPI) — High levels of some fats in the blood stream do not directly increase the risk of heart attacks while cholesterol does increase the danger, a study said Wednesday.

But the article, which came on the heels of a controversial report on dietary cholesterol and heart disease, was criticized for suggesting high blood levels of triglyceride fats can safely go untreated in otherwise healthy people.

The latest study, published in the New England Journal of Medicine, reviewed 33 research papers on the relationship of high levels of triglycerides to the incidence of coronary heart disease.

Triglycerides are chemicals made of fatty acid and glycerol that store food energy, move through the blood stream and are deposited in body tissues. The spare tire worn about the waist of many Americans is mostly triglyceride.

Dr. Stephen B. Hully, of the University of California, San Francisco, said there is not enough evidence to show coronary heart disease or coronary artery disease occur as a direct result of large amounts of triglyceride in the blood.

But Dr. William P. Caselli, director of the Framingham (Mass.) Heart Study, said triglyceride is so closely related to other factors that increase the risk of heart disease, it is misleading to consider it independently.

A report last month by the National Academy of Sciences' Nutrition Board, almost universally criticized, recommended only people at high risk of developing heart disease need to restrict their intake of cholesterol.

Hully's report, which he admits could be just as controversial, challenges the NAS recommendation. The review indicated there was a high correlation between increased intake of cholesterol and heart attacks.

"I think the chief message is that with this present state of knowledge it seems to us to make sense to measure serum cholesterol — to treat that as a risk factor related to heart disease," Hully said. But Hully, one of four investigators on the project, said a person who comes in for a checkup "without a major medical problem does not need to worry" about triglycerides.

"It seems to us not to be appropriate to measure or treat triglyceride levels in otherwise healthy individuals for the purpose of preventing coronary heart disease," he said in a telephone interview.

Since no direct link was found between high levels of triglyceride and heart disease risk, the group suggested screening and treatment of healthy individuals "be abandoned" until "persuasive evidence becomes available."

"If you're to use a drug as treatment for high triglycerides, it may well be that there are adverse consequences of this drug... that might produce more harm than benefit," he said.

Carter OKs nuclear fuel exports to India

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter authorized export of 38 tons of nuclear fuel to India Thursday, ignoring a confrontation with Congress over foreign policy and the national resolve to keep atomic weapons from spreading.

Carter, who in the past has taken a firm-line against nuclear proliferation, signed an executive order setting aside a regulatory ban on the controversial exports to India before leaving for an economic summit in Venice.

In signing the order, Carter overruled the Nuclear Regulatory Commission, which had recommended no fuel be sent to India.

"Approval of these exports will help strengthen ties with a key South Asian democracy at a time when it is particularly important for us to do so," Carter said in the order.

Deputy Secretary of State Warren Christopher defended the move before a joint hearing of Senate committees on Foreign Relations and Governmental Affairs.

Christopher said the State Department has no evidence India plans further nuclear tests, but he said all nuclear shipments to India would stop if New Delhi explodes another atom bomb.

In the House, Rep. Edward Markey, D-Mass., and several co-sponsors filed a resolution seeking to overturn the executive order.

Congress can veto the presidential action within 60 days by a majority vote in both houses. Markey predicted he would have no trouble mustering enough votes in the House, but said the Senate would be tougher.

Christopher said the exports serve America's vital national security interests because India is "an influential democracy in a critical region at a critical time."

The NRC last month refused to license the shipments because India has refused to accept international scrutiny of its civilian nuclear program, a step required under the 1978 Nuclear Non-Proliferation Act.

In 1974, India detonated what it termed a "peaceful nuclear explosion" with materials apparently diverted from past exports of U.S. nuclear materials.

Reagan thinks GOP can win Senate

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Ronald Reagan, the apparent Republican presidential nominee, says things are going so well the GOP may win control of both houses of Congress in November.

"In this coming election, there are 24 Democratic seats (in the Senate) up for election," Reagan said this week. "If we win nine of them, for the first time in more than a quarter of a century we will control one house of the Congress."

"But I am beginning to get even more encouraged. I think this could be a year in which if we really go at it we could just turn it all around and have the whole enchilada," Reagan said.

The Democrats control the Senate 59-41 and some GOP strategists have said there is a long shot the Republicans could seize control.

"But virtually no top Republicans have talked seriously about the GOP winning control of the House, where the Democrats have a 275-159 margin (with one vacancy). It would take a Republican victory of landslide proportions for the GOP to control the House."

Reagan press secretary Ed Gray confirmed that Reagan meant winning control of both the House and the Senate by his reference to "winning the whole enchilada."

"I've never seen the party as unified as it is today," Reagan said.

"And what is even more important, and I've met several already in the room; is that it is not only unified but there seem to be a number of Democrats who have decided that what it is we represent in the Republican Party might be what they'd like to support too."

Reagan was in Washington for meetings Thursday with top GOP congressional leaders. He spoke at one of two fundraisers where supporters paid $50 or $1,000 to munch on d'oeuvres and meet the former California governor.

Earlier Reagan met privately with the Washington Post editorial board and got a warm greeting from a crowd that gathered to shake his hands as he departed.

One of the fundraisers was for Citizens for the Republic — a political action committee set up by Reagan to help fund the campaigns of conservative candidates for state and local offices.

On Capitol Hill Thursday Reagan will meet with most of the party's House and Senate members. He is to meet privately with leaders of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce.

Reagan still undecided on VP

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Ronald Reagan said Thursday he has not yet decided on a 1980 running mate, and his chief of staff said he should not rule out moderates who take stands that alienate conservatives.

Reagan told the Chamber of Commerce his running mate should be "someone who would share in and believe in the policies I've been interested in" and "someone presidential in qualifications."

"I'm really not standing here with someone in mind and playing coy," he said. "I really haven't made that decision."

He said that after receiving full advice from his top aides and party leaders he will "go off in a closet by myself" to make the decision.

Ed Meese, Reagan's chief of staff, said at a meeting with reporters earlier in the day that the GOP platform contains planks contrary to positions taken by Sens. Howard Baker or Richard Lugar, neither would be removed from the list of potential running mates.

"I don't think the platform will rule out anyone," Meese said.

Baker, Lugar, Rep. Jack Kemp and George Bush are said to be among the top candidates on Reagan's list, although he said he "hasn't ruled anyone out."

GOP conservatives want the platform to denounce the Panama Canal treaties — which Reagan opposed — and allude to the government of Nicaragua.

Mother charged with killing her 4 children

NORFOLK, Neb. (UPI) — Stella Delores Almaraz, described as "just a beautiful woman" by neighbors, Thursday-faced first-degree murder charges in the shooting and knife slaying of her children.

Police said two of Mrs. Almaraz' four daughters were shot to death late Wednesday. The other two died of knife wounds.

Mrs. Almaraz, 29, apparently tried to commit suicide, police said. She suffered a gunshot wound to the head and was under guard at Our Lady of Lourdes Hospital on suspicion of murder.

Dead were Odella, 10, Antoinette, 7, and two Florida-Irene and Stella-Loraine, 2. Odella and Stella died of gunshot wounds; Antoinette and Laraine were stabbed. Their bodies were found in their beds.

Police said Mrs. Almaraz' husband, Anthony "Tony" Almaraz, was not home at the time of the incident, and police already were at the scene when he returned.

Neighbors said the Almaraz family moved in a year ago. They described the family as hard-working, clean and peaceful.

"They were a very loving couple," Irene Lühr, who lives across the street from the Almaraz family, "it was peace, harmony and everything beautiful. I guess they were just as clean a people as you could find any place."

"I never heard a cross word in my way or shape or form. They always seemed like real good-natured people," she said.

Ernest "Bud" Fundum, whose lives behind the Almaraz house, said the family was "probably the nicest family that ever moved into that house."

Fundum, a Post Office employee, said "She (Mrs. Almaraz) was just a beautiful woman, and those kids were so clean-all the time they could go to church any time of the day."

Are women superior?

BERKELEY, Calif. (UPI) — Women live longer than men because they are biologically superior — not because men's jobs tend to be more hazardous — a University of California researcher reports.

Men's life expectancy, which is 69 years in the United States compared with 77 years for women, is shorter because "women are simply biologically more fit than men," concluded Deborah L. Wingard in the research paper for her Ph.D.

Most studies have attributed the difference to working conditions and associated health problems.

"I thought the fact that men are more likely to have certain poor health habits, such as smoking and drinking, would explain why they die earlier," said Ms. Wingard, who was appointed last week as professor of epidemiology at the University of California, San Diego, School of Medicine.

But Ms. Wingard said when she began her research by listing 16 risk factors, her "first surprise was that women had more high-risk characteristics than men."

Risk factors used in her study included smoking, drinking, physical inactivity, age, race, occupation, socio-economic status, weight, sleeping patterns, use of health services, church and group membership and life satisfaction.

Despite the risk factors, Ms. Wingard said, "Women have lower death rates in virtually every country, at almost every age and for most causes of death."

"Even during the first year of life, male infants are 30 percent more likely to die than girl babies," she said.

Research for Ms. Wingard's dissertation, entitled "The Sex Difference in Mortality Rates," was conducted over a 5-year period during which she interviewed 2,229 men and 2,496 women, primarily residents of Oakland and Berkeley.

Police fear 3 service station attendants were kidnapped

MONCK'S CORNER, S.C. (UPI) — Three service station attendants who worked at two stations 20 miles apart on U.S. Route 52 disappeared from their jobs Thursday and police believe they were taken captive by robbers.

Bill Spain, 28, Kenneth Curtis Krause Jr., 23, were abducted from Port Oil Co. station on Rivers Avenue in nearby North Charleston while Louis Cagle, 45, was missing from a Texaco station at U.S. 52 and state route 6 in Moncks Corner.

Police Chiefs Linwood Simmons of North Charleston and R.A. Phillips of Moncks Corner said the disappearances appear to be related, but neither police agency reported having any leads or suspects.

"We have put out the description of the missing people nationwide on teletype," Simmons said. "We are conducting a manhunt north of and behind the service station on horseback and in vehicles."

"From all indications, it appears to be a robbery-abduction."

Spain and Krause apparently were abducted from the station about midnight Wednesday when the station was closing, he said. Officers found the safe and cash register open and empty, he said.

Phillips, who has known Cagle all his life, said he fears for his safety. "Every minute that passes without any word makes me more doubtful," he said. "Keeping him, he would never have left of his own free will — no way."

California chiropractor is charged with sex abuses

SANTA ANA, Calif. (UPI) — A chiropractor on trial for allegedly raping a 17-year-old girl on his treatment table more than a year ago also sexually molested a 10-year-old boy in front several times last fall, the boy's father testified.

Warren John Farnaloro, a 28-year-old El Toro chiropractor, has pleaded innocent to five counts of sex perversion. His trial opened Wednesday with the district attorney outlining the girl's alleged molestation to the jury and testimony of the boy who said he was molested.

Prosecutor Del Wright told the jury the alleged rape of the girl took place in November 1979. He said the girl told her parents of the incident a week later, but her parents, who were close friends of Farnaloro, failed to report it to police.

The girl's parents, however, did cancel an invitation to Farnaloro to share Thanksgiving dinner with the family, Wright told the jury.

Wright told the panel that Farnaloro had an intercourse with the young woman and forced her to perform oral sex in the midst of administering a treatment for migraine headaches.

The boy, from Mission Viejo, later testified Farnaloro sexually molested him six or seven times during visits to his office last fall.

Stocks suffer sharp setback from profit takers, adjusters

NEW YORK (UPI) — Stocks suffered their worst loss in three weeks Thursday.

The market, after churning most of the day, calmed in late afternoon as profit takers and portfolio adjusters. Trading was moderately active.

The Dow Jones Industrial average, a 20-point winner since late March, and a 2.34-point gainer Wednesday, slid 11.01 points to 870.90, the worst loss since it shed 14.07 points on May 29.

Because of its big gain the past couple of months, the Dow is vulnerable to profit taking. And with the end of the quarter approaching, the market moves tend to be erratic as institutions make adjustments and leadership changes almost daily.

Brokers said takeover situations were in the spotlight Thursday.

The New York Stock Exchange index plunged 0.26 to 65.53 and the price of a share decreased 41 cents. Declines topped advances, 1,038 to 480, among the 1,876 issues traded at 4 p.m. EDT.

Big Board volume totaled 38,200,000 shares, down from the 41,900,000 traded Wednesday.

Key Carter program

Senate OKs synfuel bill

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate Thursday passed legislation that authorizes $20 billion for synthetic fuel development, a key part of President Carter's energy package designed to reduce America's dependence on foreign oil.

The legislation now goes to the House, where no serious opposition is expected, then to Carter for his signature.

The Senate vote was 78-12. Senate Democratic leader Robert Byrd called passage "a victory for the United States, a victory for energy independence, and a victory for peace."

The nation's energy crisis "underlies our problem of inflation. It impinges upon our national security," Byrd said.

With each barrel of foreign oil we import inflation, we import unemployment, and we put our trade out of balance," he said.

Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., praised a provision that requires the present 10-year synthetic fuel production program reserve, designed to ease the impact of any interruption of Middle East oil shipments.

The bill would establish a federally chartered, quasi-independent financial enterprise called the United States Synthetic Fuels Corp. Its goal: American production of 500,000 barrels of synthetic fuels daily by 1987.

It would be run by seven directors and 300 employees would be hired to carry out its operations.

Under the measure, Carter also would be required to resume filling the strategic petroleum reserve at a minimum rate of 100,000 barrels a day. The reserve was created earlier to assure continuation of vital operations if oil imports from the Mideast are disrupted.

Carter temporarily stopped filling the reserve when western allies complained that storing oil had an inflation effect. The program was also criticized by Saudi Arabia which also criticized the reserve.

The new synthetic fuels corporation would provide financial assistance for private synthetic production of fuel obtained from coal, shale, tar sands, hydrogen and biomass — all of which can substitute for natural gas and petroleum.

issues on all U.S. exchanges and over the counter at 4 p.m. totaled 42,338,440, down from the 44,442,928 traded Wednesday.

The American Stock Exchange index shed 4.59 to 284.28 and the price of a share eased 29 cents. The National Association of Securities Dealers NASDAQ index lost 4.46 to 156.73.

At 4 p.m., City Investing, a 114-point winner Wednesday, was the most active NYSE-listed issue for the third consecutive session, losing 1 1/2 to 27 1/2 in trading that included a block of 500,000 shares at 28. More than 1 million City Investing shares were traded on the Pacific Stock Exchange Wednesday.

Citicorp was the second most active NYSE-listed issue, unchanged at 42 1/2. It had 200,000 shares crossed at 23% on the Midwest Exchange. NLT Corp. was third, up 1 1/2 to 21 1/2 in trading that included a block of 272,000 shares at 20.

Most energy issues lost ground. Kerr-McGee, a 1 1/2-point loser Wednesday, skidded 3 to 71 1/2. The firm has denied speculation that it was a takeover candidate daily by 1987.

Fullman, which late Wednesday forecast a second-quarter loss, dropped 2 1/2 to 27.

Burlington Northern lost 3 1/2 to 69 1/2 and St. Louis-San Francisco Railroad 2 1/2 to 67 1/2. The Supreme Court earlier this week refused to lift a lower court's temporary stay that is blocking the merger of the two railroads.

Stanley-Skogmo gained 1 to 39 and Wickes 3/4 to 14 1/2. The firms signed a definitive merger agreement.

RCA Corp., which Wednesday fired its president, Maurice R. Valentine, dropped 1 to 22 1/2 in active trading.

On the Amex, declines edged advances, 328 to 224, among 769 issues traded at 4 p.m. Volume at that time totaled 5,630,000 shares, compared with 5,110,000 Wednesday.

Hoston Oil & Chemicals was the most active Amex issue, off 4 to 28 1/2 in trading that included a block of 100,000 shares and 105,000 shares both at 30. Husky Oil followed, off 3/4 to 15. Imperial Oil class A was third, off 1/2 to 36 1/2 after a block of 100,000 shares at 37 1/2.

Ply-Gem gained 1 1/2 to 9 1/2 in active trading. The company is negotiating to sell Ply-Gem to a private group of investors for about $11 a share.

Textile pact set

DANVILLE, Va. (UPI) — Dan River Inc. has reached a tentative contract agreement with its unionized employees, officials of the giant manufacturing firm said Thursday.

The pact, which must be ratified by the membership of United Textile Workers Local 2487, will be voted on at a mass meeting Sunday.

The unionized employees have been working without a contract since May 23, when the old agreement expired.

Neither the company nor the union would reveal the terms of the proposed new pact until after the vote is taken.

Dan River, Virginia's second-largest employer, has about 10,000 workers.

Western artists given praise at Sun Valley

By RON ZELLAR
Times-News writer

KETCHUM — Artists like Frederic Remington have done more than conservationists to help save the West's scenic vistas and free-flowing rivers, says a historian of the National Parks Service.

Romanticism is the region's insurance policy, Alfred Runtz told participants in "That Awesome Space," the third annual conference of the Institute of the American West held here.

Environmentalists are perhaps 30 years on more away from their goal of convincing the public to save land for its own sake, Runtz said. In the meantime, images of the West created by early painters are helping both ranchers and environmentalists to preserve the land, they cherish.

"The West that appeals to the American imagination may not have existed," he said. "Still, it has been far easier to embrace and descend."

Albert Bierstadt's larger-than-life murals of Yosemite Valley led Congress to designate the nation's first scenic preserve, Runtz said, while Thomas Moran's depictions of Yellowstone prompted creation of the first national park.

"These actions had nothing to do with ecology," he noted. "They were preserving freaks and novelties — geysers that would top those that Europe had to offer."

Painters created a cultural heritage for a nation that had none of Europe's history but longed for a saga of its own, he said.

Ranchers, farmers, and sheepherders benefit as well from this pastoral heritage, he said. Ranchers and conservationists have joined forces to prevent mining in the northern Colorado Rockies region. Among their weapons is the myth that Indians of the area were in tune with their environment.

Runtz is presently assistant director of the Institute of Environmental Studies at Baylor University at Waco, Texas, but will begin a new job this fall as assistant professor of Western art at the University of Washington.

Another art historian, Peter Hassrick, director of the Buffalo Bill Historical Center at Cody, Wyo., said depictions of the idealized Western man remain popular because they are symbolic of the American dream.

Remington once advised an associate to "put every person on horseback and let the blood flow deep," Hassrick said.

Yet Western art of the 19th and 20th centuries is as different as the times, he said, and as varied as the artists themselves.

The conference continues today with a critique of recorded Western history. Final sessions Saturday focus on changes taking place on the Intermountain landscape. Sessions are held at the Alpenrose Hotel at Ketchum and are open to the public.

Building bids low at college

By LARRY SWISHER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — It appears now is a good time to build a building. The College of Southern Idaho Thursday received 10 bids from contractors to build a new vocational education building for the college, and four of these were at or below the architect's estimated cost of $1.4 million.

That means CSI will be able to have all the facilities it wanted instead of reducing the size of the new, geothermally heated building.

Once completed, the new vocational building will bring all CSI programs on campus for the first time in its 15-year history, according to Orval Bradley, CSI vocational director.

Interest Construction of Salt Lake City submitted an apparent low bid of $1,354,500. A final decision to award the job will be made today after a review by the Idaho Commissioner of Public Works in Boise.

Construction should begin in two or three weeks, and the contractor will try to have a roof on the building before the snow flies.

The three next lowest bids were: $1,370,000 by Neal Russell Construction of Boise, $1,378,500 by C.M. Co. of Boise, and $1,405,563 by Bateman-Hall Inc. of Twin Falls.

Nellen & Co. of Twin Falls turned in the highest bid, $1,518,500. One contractor's bid was not opened because it exceeded the $3 million ceiling.

"It looks like we got it all," said Bradley.

Flexibility was added to the bidding process in case construction costs for the entire facility exceeded CSI's funds, said Ed Peterson of the college's architectural firm, CTA Architects of Boise.

Plans were drawn up for a basic building and four alternatives of larger and larger size. Contractors submitted base bids with additions for each alternative.

After opening the bids, Peterson said it appeared all alternatives could be added to the basic bid and that the total appears "fall within" the architect's estimate.

The bid does not include the cost of an estimated $800,000 in equipment, both existing and yet to be purchased, Bradley said.

The facility — CSI's 11th major building and third vocational building — is located on the northwest part of campus next to the Voc-Tech Center.

The new building's only source of heat will be 100-degree underground hot water from a second geothermal well to be drilled nearby. CSI drilled its first well last year on another part of the campus.

Major funding for the building comes from a $50/50 matching grant from the U.S. Economic Development Administration.

Vocational programs to be housed by the new, single-level structure are diesel and farm equipment mechanics, recreational vehicle and small motor mechanics, plant maintenance mechanics and commercial culinary arts. It will also contain classrooms, a computer center and a commons.

The programs, except culinary arts, are now located in a rented building on Kimberly road. The food program, which trains bakers, meat cutters, chefs, and others, is located in various buildings and has no specific training facilities now, Bradley said.

CSI held its first classes in 1965, using Twin Falls school classrooms until the campus could be started.

24 teenagers are spending the summer months doing odd jobs through Buhl's YCC camp

By LARRY SWISHER
Times-News writer

BUHL — The time for blisters is over. Now they're growing calluses. The Youth Conservation Corps is at work again in and around Buhl, where 24 teenagers spend eight weeks of the summer building, fixing, painting, cleaning up trash, earning money, learning, making friends.

The program is run jointly by the U.S. Forest Service and Bureau of Land Management. The Buhl camp is a BLM project. The teenagers do a number of "public works" projects, similar to what the Civilian Conservation Corps did during the Depression.

Their day begins at 6 a.m. when they are roused from beds set up in two classrooms at Buhl High School, one for the 12 girls, one for the 12 boys. The night before they had to be on campus by 9 p.m. and in bed at 10.

The rules are strict for the 15- to 18-year-olds, and adult chaperones sleep in the dorm rooms.

Camp coordinator Bob Humphries, a Buhl High School science teacher, said he "raises them like my own kids" and the teenagers and staff members soon become like a family.

"Regimen is not something teenagers love," but the Buhl students say they came for other reasons. The camp rules do appeal to their parents, and Humphries will tell you some kids need and want order in their lives.

"I have fired kids for having grass on them," he said.

Why did they come? "For the experience." "To work outside." "To meet new friends." "For the money." "To get rid of our parents."

Two youths at a time have kitchen duty for a week. Then two others take their turn.

The four group leaders, usually teachers and college students, plan the day's work.

Many of the teens have never had a job before. Humphries said this fact helps explain what may seem a "terrible" ratio of staff members to students.

"This is education in a practical sense," he said. "They want to learn. They're getting paid for it."

Humphries said he was told one boy at the camp was in the principal's office 47 times during the school year. Since the start of the camp June 9 he has become hardworking and enthusiastic.

"Maybe now he thinks, 'this education is not so bad. It's not something they're trying to shove down my throat,'" he said.

After applying for the YCC, students are selected by lottery from a four-county area. The teenagers pay $2 a day from their salaries for room and board. They earn the minimum wage of $3.10 an hour for six hours of work a day.

Two hours a day, they learn about the local environment and ecology and can earn half a credit of science.

During the week they live at the high school or in field camps. They go home on weekends.

Stark Miller, 18, just graduated from Buhl High School. She will use the money she earns for college.

Terry Carpenter, 15, of Twin Falls, learned about the camp from her older brother who attended.

"I think it's fun," she said. "You learn how to do a lot of things and how to work with other people."

Phil Hayes helped make benches for the F.H. Buhl monument being built at the entrance to the new Buhl High School and has put up fences.

Melinda Priddy, 17, of Rupert, has been helping to complete a fence started by the YCC last year to enclose about 40 acres on the Clear Lakes grade north of Buhl.

Eventually, a recreation area will be built including picnic grounds and a nature trail.

"I like the outdoors, although I'm more of a forest area person," she said. "We've also been cleaning up garbage. I'll tell you most of us are not going to litter anymore."

The Buhl camp is operating with reduced funding this year. To compensate, a staff member has been cut and more projects will be tackled "close to home" to save on travel expenses.

The camp is supported by the Buhl School District which hires some staff members and provides facilities.

The students take pride in what they accomplish and that can improve their confidence, Humphries said.

"I have seen some remarkable things happen among the kids," he said. "We get some troubled kids and they sort of come out of it."

One past student had been in a mental hospital and began relating to others because of the camp. Another, a high school dropout, decided to go back to school after taking the camp, he said.

Building confidence in their abilities and making the students feel like individuals is "a lot of the effect" of the camp, Humphries said.

He said he tries to run it like a family and his staff has the same attitude. A lot of students come from homes without that atmosphere, he said.

The YCC kids probably do better work and at less cost than regular hired labor because they take more pride in their handiwork, Humphries said.

Much of the work "nobody else wants to do," he said, including cleaning up garbage dumps, building fences and making trails.

Last week the Buhl students picked up eight pickup trucks full of trash from an illegal garbage dump near Buhl.

Humphries said nationwide it is estimated the YCC nets 87 cents in real value for every dollar spent.

2 persons die from injuries

TWIN FALLS — Two Magic Valley residents have died of traffic injuries suffered earlier this month.

A Wendell woman who was injured in a one-car accident in Jerome County June 11 died Wednesday afternoon in Twin Falls, and a Burley man died on Tuesday night, the result of a June 3 accident.

Linda Eileen Shirey, 32, of Wendell, had been in critical condition in the intensive care unit at Magic Valley Memorial Hospital since early June 11. She was a passenger in a car driven by Jerred Irish of Jerome. The vehicle went out of control on Highway 93, two miles north of Interstate 80 and rolled over one and one-half times. Shirey was pinned under the vehicle and suffered internal injuries. Irish escaped serious injury. State police say the accident is still under investigation.

Leland Ray Olson, 64, of Burley, died Tuesday evening in the Cassia Memorial Hospital. He suffered internal injuries in a car and motorcycle accident on Tuesday, June 17, on 27th St. in Burley about 4:30 p.m.

Jerome accident victim critical

JEROME — A 19-year-old Jerome man is listed in critical condition following a two-motorcycle accident near Jerome early Thursday.

Robert F. Otto was transported to St. Alphonsus Hospital at Boise shortly after the accident at a rural intersection three miles north of Jerome. He was being treated for head injuries in the hospital's intensive care unit.

A hospital spokesman Thursday night said Otto had shown slight improvement and would remain listed in critical condition for the first 24 hours as a matter of procedure.

A spokesman for the Burley Police Department said the motorcycle ran a stop sign and hit the side of the van, said Jerome County Deputy Sheriff Bill Reed, who investigated the accident.

The driver of the van, Charles Henry, 44, of Hazelton, was not injured in the crash.

Reed said no citations have been issued pending further investigation.

Forgery case ruled mistrial

TWIN FALLS — A mistrial was declared Wednesday afternoon in 5th District Court in the forgery trial of Zoe Ann Ramsey of Twin Falls.

Raymond "Red" Ward, who had ordered the mistrial after only the first prosecution witness had been called.

Prosecutors James May and Jon Shindluring, for the defendant, moved for a mistrial declaration, stating motions were in the record stating reference should not be made to any prior cases against the defendant.

The witness, when being questioned by Deputy Prosecutor James Meservy, made reference to these instances.

The jury was dismissed and the matter argued before Judge Ward, who said he had no choice but to declare a mistrial.

Ward said he questioned the deputy prosecutor about the matter and was told the witness had been advised not to go into details about past cases, but Meservy told the judge it was out before he could stop it. The court will set a new trial date and another 12-month jury will be selected.

Ramsey was on trial in connection with an alleged forgery of a $300 check at Safeway in Twin Falls April 26, 1978. The check was drawn on the Idaho Bank and Trust Co., American Falls. Ramsey pleaded innocent to the charge in April 1979.

Twin Falls budget cuts reduce street equipment needs

By MARTY TRILLHAASE
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The City Council's decision to contract out a major street improvement project this year means about $136,000 in equipment will either lie idle or won't be used as much as originally planned.

That fact has led some council members to question whether the city should sell street equipment it will not use if the city continues to use contractors for major improvement projects. If the equipment lies idle, the city would lose money because the machinery would depreciate in value, they say.

"At a work session earlier this week, council members rejected the idea of selling the equipment this year. They did not rule out such action in the future, particularly if the council continues to contract out street work next year."

Councilman Chris Talkington proposed selling the equipment this year to avoid losing money as the equipment's value depreciates.

But Mayor Hank Woodall disapproved that, saying contractors are finding the cost of buying new equipment so high that they will pay at least as much for the equipment next year as they would now.

Woodall said the council should wait another year because the present fiscal crunch may be alleviated by the legislature when it meets next year.

Should the city face another year of frozen property tax revenues, the city may wish to lease its equipment to private contractors, Woodall said.

"If we need it again, we could go back and use it," he said.

According to city records, the city street department's equipment is valued at about $40,000. That includes all equipment, much of which would still be used by the department regardless of whether major projects are farmed out to contractors, such as staff automobiles, street sweepers, forklifts, and air compressors. The estimate is a conservative one, used for insurance purposes.

City Engineer Gary Young said the one major piece of equipment that will lie idle as a result of the council's decision is a new street chip spreader. The machine was purchased in 1977 and is valued at $28,000. However, other pieces of equipment including dump trucks and compaction rollers, which are used in seal coating streets, will be used less, he said.

The streets department has been targeted for extensive reductions in the 1980-81 city budget. The council is proposing eliminating nine of the 19 full-time employee positions in the department in order to balance the budget under the 1 percent initiative.

By contracting out a $125,000 street seal coat project for this year, the council plans to reduce the need for manpower, even though estimates from the engineering department show city crews can do the work more cheaply.

Talkington has opposed the plan on those grounds, adding the city's estimates do not reflect the added depreciation costs of equipment that will now lie idle.

"The council originally began thinking of this as a way to save money. That isn't mentioned anymore. We can't go with these machines — contractors can do it better. Well, a specification is a specification."

Energy

Evans urges Pacific Northwest to work together in solving regional problems

COEUR D'ALENE (UPI) — Compromise and cooperation among utilities, citizens and governments in all affected states are needed to solve the Pacific Northwest's energy problems, Gov. John Evans said Thursday.

Speaking to members of the Northwest Public Power Association, Evans said he strongly believes the region must unite to find new energy sources and meet demands.

But, he said, the concerns of Idaho and Montana must be considered because they "are the energy states that supply the water used to create the power for their own populations and the greater populations of Oregon and Washington."

Utilities and government also must encourage public involvement in attaining the region's future energy needs, Evans said, because citizens have a right to be heard in the decisions that affect their lives.

"Our energy future must be based on a partnership of government, private citizens and business, including industries and utilities," Evans said. "The solutions to our energy dilemmas will not be found by any one sector alone."

"Public and private power systems both have equally important roles to play in supplying our energy needs. Because we must work for common goals, many of the past differences

Lightning hits sewer pump

BURLEY — Damage estimates ranged from $2,500 to $5,000 Thursday after lightning struck a meter box on the Burley city sewer lift station building.

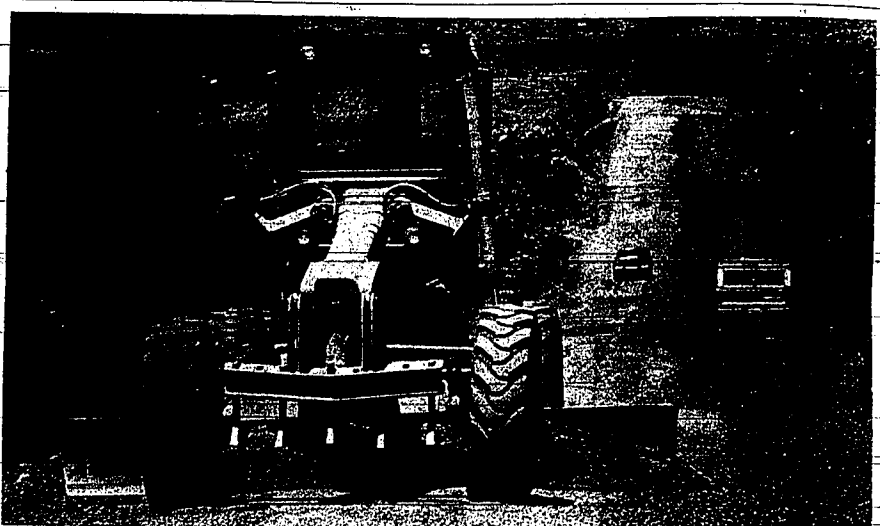

Burley Water Superintendent Bob Martin said the lightning hit about 7:45 p.m. Wednesday, knocking the meter box from the building and across the yard.

Martin said the lightning burned out the electrical panel that controlled the pumps in the lift station. The building is located at Highland Avenue and Fifth Street.

He said the city was planning to put in a new electrical system, and since damage did not extend into the pump motors, city crews were able to work out an electrical bypass and put the station back into operation on a temporary basis about 5 p.m. Thursday.

He said repairs will probably run about $2,500.

Fire Department officials, who estimated damage at about $5,000, said when the fire engines arrived, the fire was already under control and was confined to the electrical panel.

In Harper's magazine article

Idaho called Marxist entity

BOISE (UPI) — A story in the latest issue of Harper's magazine calls Idaho "about the closest thing to a pure Marxist entity as can be found on this imperfect planet."

The story, entitled "Consorting with Arabs," details attempts by Libya to influence Idaho elected officials in hopes of obtaining military transport planes from the U.S. government.

Idaho's Legislature, the cover story says, "Goes for months at a time without doing anything important."

The magazine jabs the state's governor, two congressmen and two senators.

The Harper's article said Libya attempted a few years ago to turn Idaho into its "client state" and use its top elected officials to obtain U.S. military transport planes.

Former Boisean L.J. Davis, who wrote the article, described Gov. John Evans as a "large, vague, pleasant man who bears a close resemblance to Clark Kent."

Davis said Sen. Frank Church is "a free-enterprise Democrat" and "Idaho's closest personification of a socialist."

Sen. James McClure, the Harper's piece said, is a "traditional conservative who regularly thumps the tub for fiscal responsibility."

The story told how Rep. George Hansen was sentenced in 1975 to spend time in prison for campaign finance violations, "but beat the rap when his lawyer moved the judge to compassion with the words, 'I hesitate to say this, Congressman Hansen was stupid, but he wasn't evil.'"

Rep. Steve Symms, Idaho's other Republican congressman, was termed "a former apple farmer whose speeches and press releases suggest he doesn't believe poor people should be citizens."

Idaho's news media also got a slap in the story. "In Idaho, the papers just don't print a lot of news. A few good reporters exist, mostly young and mostly looking to leave the state. All they know about Libya is where to find it on a map."

The article talked about the "Libya-Idaho Connection," in which the Libyan government offered Idahoans lucrative farm deals and education contracts to the University of Idaho.

Symms, who opened communications on the trade deal, was one of a group of Idaho elected and agriculture officials who went to Libya, 6,000 miles from that country's expense, McClure also went.

The story said that during a visit to the Idaho Statehouse, and a meeting with Evans in May 1977, Libyan delegation leader Ahmed al-Shabati said he was on the verge of buying $5 million or more in Idaho grain.

But it said Shabati was more interested in talking to Evans about obtaining eight C-130 transport planes. Libya had bought from the U.S., but were stored in Georgia. Three U.S. presidents had embargoed the shipment of the planes because of Libya's support for international terrorists.

The story said Evans thought the Libyans wanted him to pressure Church, then a senior member, and now the chairman, of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, into helping the Libyans get the planes.

It also said Symms and McClure kept the Libyans' hopes alive by lobbying Washington to have the embargo lifted.

NAMPA (UPI) — A new worm-hunting ordinance passed by the Nampa City Council bans the use of electric prods to collect worms on city property.

However, the measure permits the use of flashlights to collect the crawling creatures.

Residents of the city who use the flashlight method to hunt worms were concerned the week after the city council passed the ordinance. But city officials say the flashlight users shouldn't worry because the law doesn't affect them.

The ordinance was proposed June 2 when outraged residents objected to a man using an electric prod to hunt for worms at the municipal cemetery. The law was passed Monday night because council members said the prods were dangerously dangerous and already have caused the death of one Idaho man.

Mount St. Helens

Volcanic dome rises some 20 feet a day

VANCOUVER, Wash. (UPI) — A volcanic dome swollen 190 feet above the crater floor of explosion-torn Mount St. Helens is rising at the rate of 20 feet per day, U.S. Geological Survey scientists said Thursday.

Occasional red spots glowed in the inverted-bowl shaped 650-foot-wide jumble of upheaved volcanic cinder and rubble which has grown high enough to be visible over the crater's shattered north lip.

The volcano's May 18 eruption blasted an enormous opening in the northern crater wall, leaving it thousands of feet lower than the other sides.

Clear weather above the mountain gave scientists-in-aircraft a chance to more accurately measure the dome and they revised its height to 190 feet, down from earlier estimates of nearly 300 feet.

The rising dome could burst with gaseous explosions at any time, but ultimately it signals the birth of a new summit built out of the volcano's throat, said USGS spokesman Pete Rowley.

Formation of a new peak equal to the 9,677-foot symmetrical cone that previously existed, however, could take hundreds of years.

"Although it seems to be growing rapidly, there's nothing unusual about the rate of growth," Rowley said of the dome's steady rise. "It's typical of dome growth."

He and other scientists have repeatedly warned that the plug in the volcano could be blown apart by future eruptions, though the dome formation stage often means the end of explosive volcanic activity as a mountain rebuilds itself.

The volcano, which shuddered with earthquakes before and after three major explosions in the past 4 1/2 weeks, has dropped to near zero seismic activity.

Earthquake recording machines have had "flat lines for the past few days," said University of Washington geophysics department spokeswoman Christina Boyko.

"We had what we interpreted to be a couple of little avalanches at about 10 p.m. Wednesday and since then, everything is flat lines and blank."

Meanwhile, Skamania County Coroner Robert Lueck said he will issue presumptive death certificates for at least 15 persons missing and presumed dead on the ash-covered slopes of the volcano, which may have killed as many as 60.

The official missing list now stands at 45. Twenty-two bodies were recovered after the first big eruption and two other victims died later in hospitals.

No deaths or injuries were reported from two subsequent eruptions on May 25 and June 12.

Bodies of 10 recovered from two plane crashes

ASPEN, Colo. (UPI) — Rescuers dug into 12 feet of snow Thursday to remove four bodies — the last of 10 people killed in a double airplane crash in East Maroon Pass.

The crashes occurred late Wednesday over the 14,156-foot peak in the Elk Mountain Range separating Aspen and Crested Butte. The site was discovered by searchers looking for one of the planes, which was overdue at the airport.

The planes, a six-passenger Cessna 310 and a four-passenger Cessna 182, crashed about a half mile apart on the snow-covered pass, Pitkin County Sheriff's deputy Tom Snow said. The crashes occurred 12 air miles southwest of Aspen.

Initial reports indicated the two aircraft had collided, but investigators speculated Thursday the smaller plane crashed first and the six-seater went down on the mountain side while surveying the damages. "The cause is unknown at this time.

Investigators from the National Safety Transportation Board are at the site along with members of the Aspen Mountain Search and Rescue team," Snow said.

Deputy Lorri White said authorities were trying to determine what direction the planes were headed. She said the distance between the two crashes indicated the Cessna 310 may have crashed while checking the first-aid center.

Neither plane caught fire, but the smaller plane burrowed about 12 feet into the snow, he said. A steep hiking trail provides the only access to the site and National Transportation Safety Board investigators had to be airlifted in.

The six-passenger Cessna 310, fairly intact despite the crash, was piloted by Bob Pimantell of Crested Butte.

The passengers were Brenda Boyd, Michael Pokress, Ellen Pokress, Betsy Hubs and David Freedman, all of Aspen.

The smaller plane was piloted by Jeff Kest with Pat Palangi, Tom Spillane and Rudy Cadenyi, all of Aspen, accompanying him, Snow said. The Cessna 182 was en route from Aspen to Gunnison.

Friends waiting for the smaller plane at Gunnison reported it missing to Aspen's Sandy Airport and Dick Arnold, a pilot with the Pitkin County Air Search and Rescue Group, spotted the two sets of wreckage.

Snow said the Cessna 310, rented from the Gunnison airport for a flight to Aspen, had not been reported missing and had filed no flight plan. Both planes took off at about the same time.

Indian political involvement pushed at national congress

RENO (UPI) — Indians must take part in the American political system if they expect to solve their problems, delegates to the National Congress of American Indians' midyear conference were told Wednesday.

"Politics affect the very essence of our being," said Vice President Delfin Lovato. "The problems confronting our people demand we be active."

He said if Indians are to defend their rights and sacred principles, they must influence national parties, the party candidates and even the courts.

"It's a battle to maintain the status quo. Political parties must know Indian people have awakened and we intend to participate from this point on," he said.

Republicans and Democrats claimed their parties had done the most for Indians over the years. Citizens Party spokesman Kevin Govey, however, said the Carter administration's budget is a detriment of the poor. He said former Republican administration appointments to the U.S. Supreme Court had done severe damage to Indian rights. He said independent candidate John Anderson was "rather good" on Indian issues.

Ed Johnson, a regional vice president in the NCAI, said he liked the Citizens Party "But the Republicans and Democrats are going to be around for a long time and we must try to work with them."

Mel Tonskael, a congressional candidate in Washington and member of the Colville tribe, said he is running as a Republican "but you can't tell the difference between Republicans and Democrats, once they get back to Washington D.C."

Second time on 5-year-old charges

AIM leader Banks, 4 others indicted

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — American Indian Movement leader Dennis Banks and four others were indicted a second time Wednesday on five-year-old charges involving possession of dynamite and firearms.

The seven-count indictment against Banks, his wife Darlene Pearl Nichols, also known as Kamook Banks, Kenneth Moses Louthard, Russ James Redner and Leonard Peltier reinstates charges first filed after an exchange of gunfire involving state police near Ontario on the eastern border of Oregon Nov. 13, 1975.

The indictment accuses the five of illegal possession of explosives and firearms with obliterated serial numbers.

The five were to have one on trial in May 1976 but U.S. District Court Judge Robert Belloni nixed the government could not introduce evidence about the 350 pounds of dynamite, which officers claimed was seized from a car used by the defendants, because the explosive was destroyed before defense attorneys inspected it. The government refused to try the case without that evidence and U. S. District Court Judge Robert Belloni dismissed the charges.

The government appealed the ruling and Belloni's decision was reversed last year by the 9th Circuit Court of Appeals.

U.S. District Court Judge James Redden will hear motions in the case Monday. Trial is tentatively set for Sept. 3.

Banks, now 42, has been teaching at an Indian-Mexican college near Davis, Calif. He fled to California after being indicted in Oregon because he feared extradition to South Dakota, where he is sought as a fugitive because he failed to report to begin serving a sentence imposed in connection with a demonstration at the Custer County Courthouse in 1973.

California Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. has refused to extradite Banks to South Dakota, where Banks asserts he will be killed.

Redner has been teaching in South Dakota.

Peltier is serving a life sentence for a 1970 conviction of killing two FBI agents on a South Dakota Indian reservation. He escaped from the Lompoc, Calif., federal prison last year but was recaptured.

One of the original defendants in the case, Annie Aquino, was found dead in South Dakota in 1976. Officials said she died of exposure but attorneys for the defendants claimed she had been shot to death.

Hoax works on man, 85, riding bus

DES MOINES, Iowa (UPI) — Police say someone on a cross-country bus trip apparently convinced an 85-year-old Italian-speaking man he had arrived in San Francisco a bit ahead of schedule.

Officers spotted Antonio Albertazzi of Pittsfield, Mass., wandering down Keesauqua Way on Wednesday. After some trouble, they determined he was looking for the Golden Gate Bridge.

"We drew him maps and did everything we could to try to get him to understand that this was Des Moines, not San Francisco, but we couldn't get through to him," officer Joe Fusaro said.

Fusaro said he established the man's identity through a friend who spoke Italian and contacted a daughter in Pittsfield. Albertazzi was scheduled to be flown home Thursday.

Fusaro said Albertazzi told them he was traveling cross-country on a bus to visit a friend in Cloverdale, Calif., when someone persuaded him that he had arrived in San Francisco.

"The friend who he was going to visit in Cloverdale had told him he had to cross the Golden Gate Bridge to get from San Francisco to Cloverdale, so he was looking for the bridge," Fusaro said.

The incident was reminiscent of that of Erwin Kreuz, a west German brewery worker, who gained international fame when he spent several days in Bangor, Maine, in October 1977, mistaking it for San Francisco.

American quality of life judged first in world in humanistic study

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Take heart, Americans! The United States is still the best place in the world to live.

A study of "quality of life" in 50 nations found that, despite our environmental, economic and social problems, the United States ranks first in overall fulfillment for its people.

The researchers used every standard of "quality" they could identify and measure in their study. They acknowledged that "spiritual" factors are involved in "quality of life," but excluded these because they could not figure out a way to measure and compare them.

The study was prepared by Claude F. Anderson of the Electric Power Research Institute in Palo Alto, Calif., and Ben-Chieh Liu, of the Midwest Research Institute, Kansas City, Mo. In their elaborate "model" for computing quality of life they used five main categories of human satisfaction — social, economic, health and education, environmental, and national vitality and security. There were a dozen subcategories, and each of those was broken down into a number of factors.

"Every measure was given a relative 'weight' based on an international public opinion survey on what people considered their most important concerns."

"For example, in the category of 'social' quality, which accounted for 24 percent of the overall measure, the subcategories were 'satisfaction of basic human needs, standard of living,' 'informed citizenry with modern conveniences' and 'welfare and independence.'"

Both positive and negative factors were weighed. A nation received a positive score for the number of acres of land per capita, but lost points if the population was concentrated in large cities. The number of motor vehicles in use per mile of road was a negative item.

In the 50-nation overall results, Canada ranked second, Australia third, Sweden fourth and the USSR fifth. Next were Norway, New Zealand, Switzerland, Denmark, East Germany, Czechoslovakia, Japan, the United Kingdom and the Netherlands.

Countries at the bottom of the scale in quality of life were Saudi Arabia, Chile, Iraq, Iran, Lebanon, Mexico, Monaco, Jamaica and Libya. At the bottom were Ireland and Taiwan.

The study showed that a country's average national income per capita is not the best measure of quality of life. For example, Kuwait ranked first in gross national product per capita but was 38th in the overall ranking.

Western Airlines to offer London flight

DENVER (UPI) — Pending final approval by the president, Western Airlines will begin offering non-stop service between Denver and London and will offer a 90-day introductory rate.

The Civil Aeronautics Board Tuesday approved Western's application for the route while turning down a similar application by Continental Airlines. The CAB will submit a written order to President Carter by July 1, who then has 60 days to make a final decision.

Officials of Western said they did not know when the new service will begin, if it is finally approved.

Western proposed five weekly roundtrips, with two on the nights originating and terminating in Las Vegas. Next summer, Western said it would fly the Denver-London route daily, with five trips a week originating in Las Vegas and two in Phoenix.

Edgar Hamilton, CAB spokesman, said Western's bid was approved over Continental because Western's proposal was "more realistic in terms of routes and fares."

Western said its projected introductory rates would be $449 one-way first-class, $354 for business class, $229 for economy and $199 for advance purchase excursion fares.

The normal rates proposed by Western were $556 one-way first-class while Continental proposed a rate of $628.

UNM Ellenberger's trial winds down Canadian lead goes to Burns

ROSWELL, N.M. (UPI) — The defense rested Thursday in the federal fraud trial of former New Mexico basketball coach Norm Ellenberger after one day of presenting evidence in its favor and the case may go to the jury today.

Final arguments were set for this morning and the case could go to the jury in the afternoon. The U.S. Attorney's office had predicted the trial which began on Monday — would go 10 days.

Ellenberger testified Thursday he knew about the eligibility problems of player Andre Logan but did nothing to stop illegal efforts to make Logan scholastically eligible.

He also testified he felt compelled to circumvent NCAA regulations because of pressures to fill the 18,000-seat University Arena for basketball games in Albuquerque.

"I knew about the (transcript) and thought it would help Andre," he said. "I felt compassion for him. He had no reason to be in that situation and I thought by putting the transcript in for a short period of time to keep him eligible, I wasn't hurting a soul."

Ellenberger's attorney, Leon Taylor, asked the former coach if he had intended to defraud anyone.

"Absolutely not," replied Ellenberger. "I was just helping a young man."

Ellenberger spoke in a high-pitched voice, using some of the hand gestures and emotional expressions he was known for as UNM's head coach for the past seven years.

He is charged with five counts of mail fraud, and one count each of wire fraud and interstate travel in aid of racketeering.

The charges are connected with alleged attempts to change the transcripts of basketball players so they would become eligible to attend UNM and play for the Lobos.

Another defense witness, Dr. Charles Briggs, testified that money was offered to assistant coach Manny Goldstein if he would take all the blame for the scandal.

Briggs, an Albuquerque optometrist and a close friend and business partner of Ellenberger, admitted under cross-examination that the offer was made to Goldstein late last year if he would accept full blame.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Don Svet suggested in cross-examination that the offer was made by Briggs and included a $300 monthly payment. But Briggs said he was not a party to that offer, nor was Ellenberger.

Briggs testified that while visiting the university one day, Goldstein took him to his car and showed him several blank transcripts he had "lifted" from Mercer Community College in Trenton, N.J.

Briggs said Goldstein told him that if there was any problem in obtaining extra credits for players, "all I need to do is find an IBM typewriter."

The prosecution rested its case Wednesday.

Taylor maintains that if any rules were broken, they were Western Athletic Conference or National Collegiate Athletic Association regulations, not federal laws.

Wednesday's testimony was dominated by Goldstein, who testified about a wiretapped conversation between himself and Ellenberger concerning arrangements for a phony transcript for player Craig Gilbert from Oxnard Junior College in California.

Taken from an FBI wiretap of a conversation last November, the tape indicated that Ellenberger did not appear to know about a degree from Oxnard which Goldstein said he had gotten for Gilbert.

On the tape, Ellenberger seemed puzzled about the conversation and asked Goldstein if there would be any problems about Gilbert's eligibility.

"Don't worry, coach," Goldstein said. "I'll take care of it and will say a word to the NCAA."

ILE BIZARD, Quebec (UPI) — George Burns, his putter working better than pain-killers, fired a four-under par 66 Thursday to grab a one-stroke lead in the first round at the $50,000 Canadian Open Championship.

Burns, plagued by a painful shoulder injury for the past two months, suffered one bogey while coxing five birdies from the rain-soaked 6,629-yard course at the Royal Montreal Golf Club to finish just one stroke shy of the record set by Jack Nicklaus and Tom Weiskopf in 1975.

"It's amazing how the pain goes away when you're playing well," said Burns, who is ranked sixth on the PGA money list this season. "I am surprised at how good I played. The shoulder injury has bothered me a lot but I made some long putts in the early going ... and it didn't seem to bother me."

Johnny Miller, rekindling a comeback that flickered at last week's U.S. Open, shot a three-under 67 to complete the day one stroke back of Burns in a three-way tie with Georgian Tom Valentine and the 1976 Phoenix Open champion Bob Gilder.

Hale Irwin, still searching for his first victory of the season, shot a solid two-under 68 and was 11 strokes off the pace with five other players including Jackie Gleason Classic winner Leonard Thompson.

Vanceever's Jim Nelford, Roger Klatt of Barrie, Ontario, John Dent of Augusta, Ga., and Australian Bob Shearer were also bracketed at 68.

Burns, winner of the Bing Crosby title earlier this year, sank birdie putts ranging from eight to 20 feet despite being unable to put in a full practice Wednesday because of his shoulder injury.

"I wasn't sure how long I could go today because of the pain," he said. "I have been able to play thanks to some medication. But I haven't been able to practice as much as I would like to."

"But a few good putts helped to make the pain go away."

Heavy rains that fell Wednesday softened the rock-hard greens at the 117-year-old course, and the scores fell accordingly. A total of 17 players managed to break par.

Leading PGA money winner Tom Watson put in an uneventful round of two birdies and one bogey to finish three strokes behind Burns, tied with six other pros including Ben Crenshaw.

"I'm not particularly happy with the 69," Crenshaw said. "I'm happy with the score but not the way I scored. I seem to be going past the hole and having to make good putts to come back."

Nicklaus did to stretch the glory of his U.S. Open victory last week — a total of 11 bogey at the 18th hole to finish one-over 71.

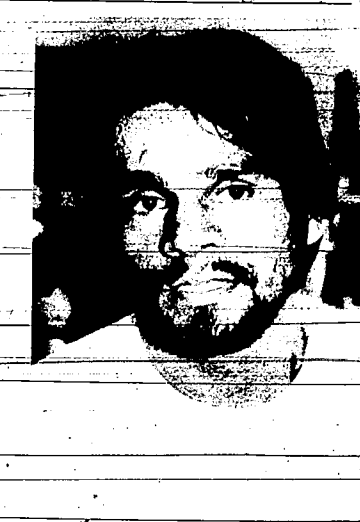

Nicklaus, who used his 17-year-old son Steve as his caddy, was not pleased.

"I don't know what possessed me," he said. "I drove in along the edge of a lake but it didn't carry and went into the water. I'm reasonably satisfied with my score."

Lee Trevino, winning for his fourth Canadian Open title and his third in the past four years, also carded a 71 to stand six strokes off the pace.

They're ready to SQUARE OFF

SUGAR RAY LEONARD

©1980, The Washington Post

"I do not know what I will do the night of the fight in Montreal. I am to be at ringside. But I do not want to be there. I will be there because Roberto is my friend and he wants me to be there. I have seen only one of his fights, and I did not like it. The possibility of Roberto getting hurt is what I do not like. I will be at ringside, but my eyes, they will look at the ground."

Rubin Blades, a friend of Roberto Duran, June 5.

MONTREAL — The day of the fight is the longest day. The fighter waits.

He waits in his room.

The day of the fight is the end of the work, the months of training, the weeks of talk.

It is time, on the day of the fight, to wait.

Ray Leonard will wait in his room on the 21st floor of the Hyatt Regency hotel here.

His brothers, Kenny and Roger, will be with him, as will his friend and confidante, Jacks Malone — and his father, Clarence. They will wait with the fighter. No one else will be in the room.

friends on fight day. False friends, they only hang around if you win. Rubin didn't want to come, but I told him, 'Rubin, he wants you, he needs you, he needs his friends.'

They'll have Duran's room open for Panamanian dignitaries, too. Omar Torrijos is supposed to drop by. A big-shot colonel in the Panama army already is here. Freddie Brown and Ray Arce, Duran's manager, like to have the big shots drop by. "Roberto looks up to them," Arce said, "and he'll tolerate them coming by, too, because it breaks up the monotony. He starts getting cranky."

Leonard sits in his room, waiting.

Duran stalks the room.

"Dempsy was a nervous wreck," said Arce, 30, in boxing since 1977 and the holder of 18 world championships, including Benny Leonard, Jack Dempsey and Roberto Duran. "Dempsy wanted out of the cage, and this guy, Duran, is like that. After he paces around awhile, I say, 'All right, sit down and rest now.'"

It is not fear that moved Dempsy, moves Duran. Not physical fear.

"This is a fearless individual," said Arce, an Olivier look-alike with a touch of the actor's rhetoric in him. "Why should he fear an opponent when he doesn't even know one opponent from another? He doesn't care who the other man is. He doesn't have an ounce of fear for his person. It is a fear of anxiety, the fear any actor has of getting out there and performing properly."

"Consider the average actor. He doesn't know if he's coming or going the last half-hour before the curtain goes up. It is the same with a fighter. It is my job to get him ready for that last half-hour when he cannot get himself ready."

This will be an open-air fight in the Olympic Stadium. Arce is worried about the chill in the night air at 10:40, fight time. How to dress his fighter? Will they play the Canadian, American and Panamanian national anthems while the fighters wait in the ring? How far is the walk from the dressing room to the ring? Is the walk across ground likely to be damp? Must he, as he has before, put rubbers over his fighter's shoes?

"The tension has been building for months," Arce said. "All the training, all the talking. Now comes the fight, now is the moment of anxiety, now the fighter is in the ring. And what if he has to wait through three national anthems? For Christ's sake, he's waiting and waiting and waiting — and he's out there naked!"

Waiting and waiting in the hotel room, the fighter changes. "His mood is all right," said Freddie Brown of Duran two weeks ago, "and it'll get worse as it goes along."

Duran is a sweatshirt.

In the room he will get cranky. They'll leave him alone a while. He'll lie down on a bed. When he gets up, he'll be better. He'll play some dominoes. Hit his bongo drums. Think of Leonard. He'll think of what Leonard said.

The day the fight was announced, Leonard said he didn't want to beat Duran, he wanted to kill him. In those words: kill him. Leonard since has said he spoke only in Duran's frame of reference, that Duran is always using the word "kill," and so he used it against Duran, just to help sell tickets.

"It shocked me to hear Leonard say 'kill him,'" Arce said. "I was disappointed in him personally. Look, you shouldn't say that to a guy like Duran."

Duran ended his first championship fight with a low blow that left Ken Buchanan writhing on the canvas. The low blow was delivered after the bell. It was neither the first nor the last of the unseemly devices Duran perfected in the street fight of his ghetto orphan's life.

"If Leonard said that to Duran on the street," Arce said, "he would not live to see the next moment. Leonard is said to be an intelligent man, but to say that he is asking for trouble. You don't go up to Duran with venom in your soul and say 'kill him.'"

"Duran will carry that into the ring. What happened was not that Leonard offended Duran, he just added inspiration for Duran to really annihilate Sugar Ray Leonard — and if he can, he will. While he is waiting all day for the time, Duran will remember 'kill him.'"

Duran will remember, too, Arce's fight strategy. The old master isn't saying what the strategy is: "It should be no surprise, though, if Duran, ever the raging bull, charges and presses Leonard unmercifully."

Leonard is ready. He won't look at any more film of Duran. None of that in the waiting room Friday. He knows what to expect. "Duran won't suddenly go to 6-foot-tall with four arms," said trainer Angelo Dundee. "We know what the other guy will do. If he zigs, we know he zags."

Kenny Leonard will be watching his brother's eyes.

"He changes," Kenny said.

In the ring Ray Leonard is not sugar.

"His eyes," Kenny said. "Look at his eyes. He looks really serious. Everything changes."

Leonard and Duran, testing each other, will stand face to face at about 10:40 Friday night. "If Duran spits in Ray's face, like they say he will, Ray will spit back," Dundee said, and Ray Arce said of that possibility, "Then it would be the damndest thing you've ever seen in the middle of a ring. Nobody is going to make a fool of Duran. He is a tough son of a bitch in every sense of the word."

When the ring is cleared, leaving only the fighters between the ropes, Dundee will speak to Leonard, saying, "Face the guy, look at him, see what he's going to do."

And Arce will speak to Duran, saying, "Just remember everything we've talked about."

The waiting then will end.

They'll watch television some. Mostly, they'll talk. Not about the fight. Anything except the fight with Roberto Duran, anything but how important this welterweight championship fight is. They'll talk about what they'll do after the fight. Kenny is getting married June 28. They'll talk about that.

"Serious, everything is serious," Kenny Leonard said. "Be no playing of any kind on fight day. We'll be in the hotel room, looking at four walls. Be in there all day. Room service all day. Ray won't eat. Can't eat much. A cantaloupe, maybe."

The fighter waits for the time to fight.

He waits in his room with the people he knows. No false friends on fight day. No bandwagon people. Just the ones he can trust, the ones that believe in him, the one he draws strength from.

Will he be good enough in the fight? Brave enough? Strong enough? Short of war, prize fighting asks more of a man than anything else. It asks unique athletic skills, extraordinary stamina and strength, and unending courage.

And he waits for the time of the test.

Dempsy was a caged lion, prowling and angry. Louis couldn't sit still. Marciano, an aberration, slept. All sat in the dark and watched films of fighters. He talked on fight day, but softly.

Roberto Duran will play dominoes with Rubin Blades. "I want Rubin in the room," said Freddie Brown, the fighter's trainer. "Rubin loves him, and he loves Rubin. No false friends on fight day. False friends, they only hang around if you win. Rubin didn't want to come, but I told him, 'Rubin, he wants you, he needs you, he needs his friends.'

Waiting and waiting in the hotel room, the fighter changes. "His mood is all right," said Freddie Brown of Duran two weeks ago, "and it'll get worse as it goes along."

Duran is a sweatshirt.

In the room he will get cranky. They'll leave him alone a while. He'll lie down on a bed. When he gets up, he'll be better. He'll play some dominoes. Hit his bongo drums. Think of Leonard. He'll think of what Leonard said.

The day the fight was announced, Leonard said he didn't want to beat Duran, he wanted to kill him. In those words: kill him. Leonard since has said he spoke only in Duran's frame of reference, that Duran is always using the word "kill," and so he used it against Duran, just to help sell tickets.

"It shocked me to hear Leonard say 'kill him,'" Arce said. "I was disappointed in him personally. Look, you shouldn't say that to a guy like Duran."

Duran ended his first championship fight with a low blow that left Ken Buchanan writhing on the canvas. The low blow was delivered after the bell. It was neither the first nor the last of the unseemly devices Duran perfected in the street fight of his ghetto orphan's life.

"If Leonard said that to Duran on the street," Arce said, "he would not live to see the next moment. Leonard is said to be an intelligent man, but to say that he is asking for trouble. You don't go up to Duran with venom in your soul and say 'kill him.'"

"Duran will carry that into the ring. What happened was not that Leonard offended Duran, he just added inspiration for Duran to really annihilate Sugar Ray Leonard — and if he can, he will. While he is waiting all day for the time, Duran will remember 'kill him.'"

Duran will remember, too, Arce's fight strategy. The old master isn't saying what the strategy is: "It should be no surprise, though, if Duran, ever the raging bull, charges and presses Leonard unmercifully."

Leonard is ready. He won't look at any more film of Duran. None of that in the waiting room Friday. He knows what to expect. "Duran won't suddenly go to 6-foot-tall with four arms," said trainer Angelo Dundee. "We know what the other guy will do. If he zigs, we know he zags."

Kenny Leonard will be watching his brother's eyes.

"He changes," Kenny said.

In the ring Ray Leonard is not sugar.

"His eyes," Kenny said. "Look at his eyes. He looks really serious. Everything changes."

Leonard and Duran, testing each other, will stand face to face at about 10:40 Friday night. "If Duran spits in Ray's face, like they say he will, Ray will spit back," Dundee said, and Ray Arce said of that possibility, "Then it would be the damndest thing you've ever seen in the middle of a ring. Nobody is going to make a fool of Duran. He is a tough son of a bitch in every sense of the word."

When the ring is cleared, leaving only the fighters between the ropes, Dundee will speak to Leonard, saying, "Face the guy, look at him, see what he's going to do."

And Arce will speak to Duran, saying, "Just remember everything we've talked about."

The waiting then will end.

Cubs deny deal for Sutter near CHICAGO (UPI) — Chicago Cubs General Manager Bob Kennedy Thursday denied his club was close to exchanging for three players. The key in the deal for the Cubs would have been the acquisition of highly touted third baseman Mickey Hatcher.

The snafu in the deal, according to reports, was that the two teams could not reach agreement before midnight Los Angeles time (2 a.m. Chicago time) last Sunday.

Kennedy said the Cubs were not close to making a deal to trade away Sutter, who took over the major league lead in saves by recording his 15th in Chicago's 5-2 victory over the Cincinnati Reds Thursday at Wrigley Field.

"There were a lot of stories, there always are around trade time," Kennedy said. "We weren't as close to deals as many of the reports were made to believe."

Sutter said he was aware of the report that had him going to the Dodgers but admitted he wasn't expecting to trade with the trading deadline rapidly approaching.

It could be the 'Brawl in Montreal'

MONTREAL (UPI) — Faced with the biggest buildup for a fight since the famed "Thrilla in Manila" in 1975, Sugar Ray Leonard and Roberto Duran are tangled tonight for the World Boxing Council welterweight title in what may be regarded as the "Brawl in Montreal."

The 24-year-old Leonard, 27-0, won the championship with a 15th-round technical knockout of Wilfredo Benitez last November.

Duran, who turned 29 Monday, has won 69 of 79 fights. He fought an undisputed king of the lightweight division for nearly a decade before voluntarily giving up his title to move up to the welterweight division.

Duran's only loss was to Esteban de Jesus in a 16-round non-title bout at New York in 1972. He avenged it by knocking out de Jesus twice in later fights.

Seats for closest front-viewing of the fight are still available in both Pocatello and Boise.

The fight will be shown at Idaho State University's Reed Gymnasium tonight. For more information contact the ISU information office.

In Boise, the fight can be viewed at the Western Fairgrounds. Tickets are available at three outlets in Boise — Idaho Sporting Goods, The Bouquet and McEl's Sporting Goods.

The fight begins at 7 p.m. at both places.

Many boxing experts regard the Oct. 1, 1975, "Thrilla in Manila" heavyweight confrontation between Muhammad Ali and Joe Frazier as the greatest fight in the modern era. Tonight's duel between the lightning-fast Leonard and the relentless Duran could be a scaled down replay of that historic fight, won by Ali in 14 rounds.

The money, in fact, probably will exceed it. Leonard will receive $5 million for his bout and additional interests could bring his purse as high as $8 million, the richest payday in boxing history. All earned $6 million for the Manila fight. Duran will receive $1.5 million tax-free.

The fight is scheduled to begin at 8:35 p.m. MDT at the 70,000-seat Olympic Stadium. Neither fighter is expected to have any difficulty in making the 147-pound weight limit at the official weight-in tonight.

Leonard remained a 9-5 favorite despite the fact that Duran appeared as quick and as sharp in recent workouts as he has in years. Duran harbors a genuine dislike for Leonard, bordering on hatred. It was triggered by a remark Leonard made three months ago when the fight was announced.

"I don't want to beat Roberto Duran," Leonard told a packed press gallery in New York, "I want to kill him."

The statement was most uncharacteristic of Leonard, who has built his image as the clean-cut American boy from Palmer Park, Md., who worked his way to an Olympic gold medal and an eventual world championship. It's effect has been to spur Duran to put himself in possibly his best shape ever for a fight.

"There was a very stupid thing for him to say," said Duran. "I don't go around boasting and I don't like people who do."

Astros set home record

HOUSTON (UPI) — Nolan Ryan and Joe Sambito combined on a one-hitter and Jose Cruz knocked in two runs Thursday night to lead the Houston Astros to a club-record 12th straight home victory with a 2-0 decision over St. Louis Cardinals.

Garry Templeton got the only hit, a bloop double that hit on the left field line, in the fifth inning. Cruz, 5-5, evened his record for the first time since early in the season.

In the Astrodom stadium, the right-hander has pitched four shutouts, two by himself and two with relief help. Ryan struck out seven before being replaced by a pinch-hitter in the seventh inning and Sambito pitched the final two innings for his sixth save.

Astro's shortstop Rafael Landestoy led off the first inning with a triple off loser Bob Sikes, 1-6, who allowed just five hits in seven innings. One out later, Landestoy scored on Cruz's sacrifice fly to right field in the sixth. Landestoy led off with an infield single, advanced on Terry Puhl's sacrifice and scored when Cruz drove a single into left field.

The Braves, trailing 3-0, tied the score in the fourth when Jeff Burroughs hit a two-run homer, his first, and Luis Gomez doubled in Hubbard.

The Pirates opened the scoring in the third when Robinson singled home Dale Berra, who had doubled, and they added two runs in the fourth on an RBI groundout by Lee Lacy and a sacrifice fly by Berra.

Flanery, who has now hit in nine straight games, followed with a looping fly ball that eluded shortstop Larry Bowa and fell into left field as Montez, who was running on the pitch, raced home with the decisive run.

Reliever Dennis Kinney, 2-1, went two innings to pick up the win and reliever Kevin Sauter, 3-1, took the loss. Rollie Fingers pitched the final two and 2 1/2 innings to earn his eighth save.

Dave Winfield had staked the Padres to a 3-0 lead through four innings with a two-run single in the first and a sacrifice fly in the third. Bake McBride tied the game 3-3 in the fifth with his fourth home run of the year after a single by Manny Trillo and a walk to Pete Rose.

Braves 4, Pirates 3

ATLANTA (UPI) — Glenn Hubbard doubled twice and Nolan Ryan led the sixth inning Thursday night to pace the Atlanta Braves to a 4-3 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates for a sweep of their three-game series.

Giants 4, Mets 3

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Jack Clark, who earlier hit his 12th home run, tripled in Joe Stairs in the 10th inning to give the Giants a 4-3 victory Thursday over the New York Mets.

Strain beat out an infield hit with one out off loser Neal Allen, 3-5, then Clark hit a high fly to right field that hit the top of the fence and bounced away from Joel Youngblood. The Mets tied it 3-3 in the ninth on a double by Elliot Maddox, a single by Steve Henderson and a sacrifice fly by Joel Youngblood.

Cubs 5, Reds 2

CHICAGO (UPI) — Mike Vail's RBI single walloped two out in the seventh inning snuffed a 2-2 tie and gave the Chicago Cubs a 5-2 victory over the Cincinnati Reds Thursday.

Vail's single came off reliever Tom Hume, 3-6, and scored Jesus Figueroa, who had led off the inning with a walk. Figueroa went to second on Ivan DeJesus' sacrifice and after Bill Buckner was intentionally walked, Vail delivered his single to left field.

Chicago starter Mike Kruczek, 5-7, pitched the first seven innings to gain relief from Bruce Sutter, who shut the Reds out over the last two innings, recorded his 15th save.

Yanks club California

NEW YORK (UPI) — Lou Piniella's two-run pinch hit double in the sixth inning Thursday night lifted the New York Yankees to their seventh straight victory, a 7-5 decision over the California Angels.

Rudy May, 2-2, the third Yankee pitcher, picked up the victory while reliever Dave Lemucy, 2-7, took the loss. May struck out eight in 4 1/3 innings of relief.

California jumped on starter Ed Figueroa in the first inning, scoring an inning on a walk to Rick Miller, an infielder by Figueroa on an attempted pickoff and singles by Dickie Tom, Rod Carew and Carney Lansford.

Ken Nettles tied the score at 2-2 with a two-run homer in the 10th, in the first inning, but California took the lead in the second when Fred Patek scored on left fielder Bobby Murcer's error.

Red Sox 2, Mariners 0

BOSTON (UPI) — Tony Penz and Jim Rice drove in runs in the sixth inning to break the eight-inning pitching of Bob Stanley Thursday night, leading the Boston Red Sox to a 2-0 victory over the Seattle Mariners.

The victory was Boston's third straight and 10th in its last 10 games while the Mariners lost their fifth in a row, their longest losing streak of the year.

Stanley, 6-5, struck out three and walked one en route to his first shutout of the season and the third by the Boston staff. He allowed runners to third base on three occasions in going the distance for the fifth time this year.

Twins 5, Tigers 1

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (UPI) — Jose Morales belted a grand slam and Duane Lusk allowed six hits over 7 2/3 scoreless innings Thursday to lead the Minnesota Twins to a 5-1 victory Thursday over the Detroit Tigers.

With one out in the third, Morales slammed Dan Schatzeder's 2-1 pitch over the 410-foot sign in right-center to put Minnesota up 4-0. Morales' third homer scored Butch Wynegar and Ken Landreau, who had singled and Ron Jackson, who reached first on an error by third baseman Tom Brookens.

Darrell Jackson, 4-4, struck out eight and walked two before being relieved by Doug Corbett with four men on in the eighth. Schatzeder, 2-6, gave up eight hits in four innings.

The Twins added another run in the fourth when John Castino singled home Ron Jackson, who had singled.

Orioles 4, A's 3

BALTIMORE (UPI) — Pinch hitter John Lowenstein sparked a two-run seventh-inning rally with a run-scoring single and Eddie Murray blasted his fifth home run Thursday night in sparking the Baltimore Orioles to their fifth straight victory, a 4-3 decision over the Oakland A's.

Lowenstein, batting for Lenn Sakata with two outs, lined a single down the right field line off loser Rick Langford, 4-7, that scored Mark Corey to tie the score 3-3. When first baseman Jeff Newman tried to get Lowenstein, who broke for second on a throw to the plate, the throw struck Lowenstein in the back of the neck and Al Bumbry raced home with the tie-breaking run.

Brewers 10, Rangers 4

ARLINGTON, Texas (UPI) — Shortstop Ed Romero, who had only four hits since being called up from Vancouver June 1, went 3-for-3 and scored three runs Thursday night to lead the Milwaukee Brewers to a 10-4 victory over the Texas Rangers.

Ben Oglivie added his 18th, a two-run blast into the left field seats, for Milwaukee in helping Bill Travers raise his record to 5-3.

Milwaukee overcame an early one-run deficit with a three-run third off Bryan Allard, 0-1. Jim Gantner singled, went to second on a wild pitch, moved third on an infield hit by Romero and scored on an error by Allard that allowed Charlie Moore to reach base. Don Money singled in Romero and Ceil Cooper delivered Moore with a sacrifice fly. Romero doubled home a run and Money singled in two in the fourth. Oglivie's homer came in the fifth.

©1980 Boston Globe
MONTREAL — The truth about the "secret" cogulant that saved Rocky Marciano in his second fight with Freddie Brown, the remains locked in the head of 75-year-old Freddie Brown, who kept Marciano's nose from falling off that night in 1954 and who will do the same for Roberto Duran tonight if necessary.

Brown, Duran's trainer and the late Marciano's cutman, is recognized as one of the best cornermen in boxing, largely because of the repairs he administered Marciano in the second fight with Charles (Sept. 17, 1954, New York) Marciano's nose was gashed severely in the third round.

"But by the time the doctor got up there, the bleeding was stopped," recalled Ray Arcel, Duran's co-trainer who happened to be Charles' trainer. "Freddie told Marciano that he could just two more rounds so he better knock Charles out."

In the eighth, Marciano did just what he had to do. He was the one who was the "secret" cogulant. Brown tried to laugh it off, but the legend grew, and eventually someone offered $5,000 for the formula. Brown readily sidestepped questions about the "secret" cogulant.

"I try to tell people," said Brown, "that you have to be fast and cool. You put maybe 50 seconds to do your work. Fast and cool is the secret."

Brown was in Vito Antiofermo's corner last November and was generally credited with keeping him in the fight after his early battering from Marvin Hagler.

Of the many fighters Brown has trained, Duran is one of the least notable. So Brown's role Friday night will probably be instructional. But even without blood he has been known to be useful. The first time Marciano fought Joe Walcott (Sept. 23, 1952, Philadelphia) his eyes blurred in the sixth round, and Brown flushed them clear. When Antiofermo won the middleweight title from Hugo Corro, the split decision was about to be announced for Corro. But Brown demanded that the scorecards be recounted, and the second tabulation found Vito the winner.

Muhammad Ali isn't fighting tonight, but that didn't stop the champ from offering his opinion.

Hard-to-pin-down Ali likes Leonard's chances

MONTREAL (UPI) — Muhammad Ali shied away from making a choice in tonight's Sugar Ray Leonard-Roberto Duran welterweight title fight, claiming he didn't know enough about either man, although he said it's usually a good idea to pick a boxer over a puncher.

"I mean Leonard," he said. "I'm with him," said Ali, implying the 24-year-old welterweight champ had his support, although not necessarily his vote.

All was invited here by officials of the Olympic Stadium where the 15-round bout will be held and the three-time heavyweight champion was to be the guest of honor at a special dinner Thursday evening. He said, however, he would not remain to see the fight.

"I'll watch it on closed-circuit TV in Reading, Pennsylvania," Ali said. "It's not good for me to show up at big events like this. I'm too popular."

Pressed repeatedly for his prediction of the fight, Ali revealed he had never seen Duran fight and had watched Leonard only a few times.

"I don't know enough about either one to make a prediction," he protested. "I know Sugar Ray Leonard can box and you usually pick a boxer over a slugger. Remember me against Sonny Liston? And me against George Foreman? Those were fights where I was a boxer against a slugger and you know how it came out. But I can't make a pick for this fight because I don't know enough about the two fighters."

Asked how he felt about the possibility Leonard might make anywhere from $5-10 million for fighting Duran, Ali said:

"The most I ever made from one fight was $6 million," he said, referring to his 14th-round knockout over Joe Frazier in Manila in 1975. "If Leonard is gonna make $10 million, that's good. It's hard to believe. He gonna keep $10 million? I wish him good."

All said that Angelo Dundee, who has handled him for years and will work in Leonard's corner Friday night, should help the welterweight king keep his title.

"I think Angelo Dundee makes a difference," he said. "If Leonard should get in trouble, Dundee will know what to do. I got into trouble in my first fight with Liston, got something in my eye between rounds and didn't know what to do but Dundee pushed me out."

Commenting on all the pre-fight excitement with regard to whether Leonard could beat Duran or the other way around, Ali said that's customary in major title fights like this.

"People like to be mystified," he said. "You're having your greatest thrill now trying to decide who's going to win. After the fight, no one will care. It was the same in my fights. Who's gonna win, Ali or Liston, Ali or Foreman? What's on Mars?"

Verbal punches Battle of nerves preceded showdown

©1980 Chicago Sun-Times
MONTREAL — In boxing, psychological warfare has become as effective a weapon as the jab, uppercut and hook.

"Duran says he's going to murder you, champ," an aide told Leonard.

"Oh yeah?" said the champion. "Tell Roberto, I'm going to kill him, too."

Wednesday afternoon the fighters came within 10 feet of each other during a mock weigh-in. Leonard mounted the scales, smiled and raised his fists as his weight of 147 pounds was announced.

Next came the bearded challenger. As he rose, Duran, behind the cover of a grim face and dark eyes that glared icily, launched a sneak attack.

"Two more days!" Duran said to Leonard while shaking two fingers for emphasis. Leonard seemed surprised and glanced around him to make sure Duran was speaking to him.

"Two more days!" repeated Duran, still glaring at Leonard. "Don't forget!" Leonard, seated between trainers Angelo Dundee and Dave Jacobs, said nothing. He responded with a warm smile.

When All talked down his opponents — talk so loud and fast that they could hardly get a word in. Then, after All would talk his opponents tired, he would box them to sleep with a referee shouting a 10-count.

When All talked down his opponents, he did it with a smile. Even when he raised his voice and acted angry, a twinkle in his eye gave him away. But Leonard saw no smile on Duran's face and no twinkle in his eyes. Duran came off as one mean dude.

"Psychological stuff won't work on Leonard," Dundee said, "because he's been hit by the psychology tricks of the Czechoslovaks, the Russians, Italians — you know — Japanese, all kinds of psychology. It's not going to work, it's going to be who the best guy is that night. And it's pure and simple to me who the best guy is going to be. Leonard."

"My guy is not a programmed fighter. He'll be ready for whatever Duran throws at him. He's not afraid of Duran. And if Duran throws any of the low blows people say he throws, then he who gets hit shall receive it. So sayeth our camp and so sayeth Sugar Ray Leonard."

Ray Arcel, one of Duran's trainers, said his fighter was a little angry about some of the things Leonard reportedly had said about him. "That's why he said what he said," said Arcel. "He wasn't trying any psychological warfare."

"Two more days," Duran shouted one final time at Leonard, who was leaving the stage.

Apparently, Leonard had enough. He turned toward Duran, who was shouting at him, and grabbed his fighter by the arms and tried to restrain him. They couldn't. Leonard, 24, retaliated.

"I love you," he said, smiling. Then he kissed the right palm and blew the kiss in the direction of Duran.

Friday night, there will be no kissing, no smiling and very little, if any, talking. Leonard and Duran will meet face to face to fight.

FIGHT NOTE: An electrocardiogram on challenger Roberto Duran last Thursday failed to give him an acceptable rating. But after an intensive, two-hour checkup Tuesday at the Montreal Cardiology Institute, Duran was given an "excellent" rating.

Former champion John Tate hopes to start comeback

MONTREAL (UPI) — John Tate had to prove the critics wrong once before and now it's time to do it again.

There were those who doubted Tate would ever be a heavyweight contender after he was flattened in the Montreal Olympics in 1976 by gold medal winner Teofilo Stevenson of Cuba. But Tate won an endless battle with a weight problem and established himself as a contender with a first-round demolition of Duane Bobick.

Tate then knocked out both Kallie Knoetze and Gerri Coetzee in their native South Africa to win the four-man tournament set up by the World Boxing Association to determine Muhammad Ali's successor as heavyweight champion.

Tate finally had achieved credibility and a multi-million dollar payday awaited him when Ali decided to end his retirement. But the dream crumbled last March when Tate, well ahead on points, made the mistake of chasing Mike Weaver in the 15th round of a title fight in Knoxville, Tenn., Tate's hometown.

Tate's desire to give the fans a knockout victory resulted in disaster when Weaver knocked him out with a paralyzing left hook.

The multi-million dollar dream is gone — for now — and Tate will return to the ring next tonight when he faces Canadian champion Trevor Berbick in a 10-round preliminary to the Sugar Ray Leonard-Roberto Duran World Boxing Council welterweight title fight. Tate is expected to receive $100,000 for facing Berbick.

After a recent workout, Tate blamed his poor eating habits for the loss to Weaver.

"I made a mistake and let myself get too far out of shape," said Tate. "I was 275 pounds just three months before the Weaver fight and in three months I got down to 232. But I was just too weak to go the distance. I took off too much weight too fast. People talk about me having a glass chin because Stevenson knocked me out and then Weaver beat me. I don't have a glass chin. When you're totally exhausted like I was, I don't take much to knock someone out."

"I thought I did as well as I could in that fight. It was a little depressing but, I just have to go out and win my title back."

The first step is against Berbick, a knockout specialist who is 14-1 but is largely an unknown outside of Canada. Berbick's only loss was a first-round knockout by Bernardo Mercado. Tate knocked out Mercado in two rounds.

"I think this will be a good test for me," said Tate, now 20-1. "People call it a comeback fight but I don't see it that way. I just lost a fight three months ago. It's not like I've been away for a couple of years. I don't know much about this guy Berbick. But I know that he's a champion and I'm not."

Tate has been on a strict diet and hopes to weigh 224 for the fight Friday night.

"It's a big fight for me," he said. "I'm fighting to prove to myself and the world what I really am, the heavyweight champion. Mike Weaver has borrowed my title and I'll be asking for it back real soon."

LPGA tour Warm crowd, stiff field face Melton

HERSHHEY, Pa. (UPI) — Nancy Lopez Melton is sure to be the sentimental favorite but she figures to get lots of competition when the $100,000 LPGA Lady Keystone Open gets underway today at the Hazywood Club.

Lopez, who met her husband at this tournament two years ago and lived near Hershey until he left his job as a Harrisburg sportscaster, won the 1978 Lady Keystone to the delight of a partisan crowd. But she has been in the throes of a 1980 slump, winning just one tournament.

One of her chief competitors for the $15,000 first prize over the 6,388-yard, par-72 West course at Hershey is expected to be JoAnne Carner, the No. 3 money-winner on this year's LPGA tour.

Carner started the season on a hot streak by picking up four victories in the first seven tour events. The early success had to be substantially beating her since her 1979 season was cut short by a wrist injury.

Aussies to go to Moscow

MELBOURNE, Australia (UPI) — The Australian Olympic Federation (AOF) Thursday confirmed its decision made four weeks ago to send a team to the Moscow Olympics.

In a statement released after a meeting lasting about three hours, AOF President Syd Grange said the federation's executives voted to reject a last minute personal bid by Prime Minister Malcolm Fraser to reverse their 6-5 decision of May 23 to attend the games.

The statement did not indicate the margin of vote Thursday.

Grange said the Australian team will march behind the Olympic flag and not the Australian flag during the opening ceremony.

There was no immediate comment from Fraser, the leader of the Federal Opposition Labor Party, Bill Hayden, said the AOF "had made a sensible decision."

The AOF's 11-member executive board had earlier met with Fraser and other cabinet ministers for two hours at his Melbourne office, where he argued for a reversal of its earlier decision.

There was some doubt whether the executives could constitutionally alter its decision without calling for a full meeting of the AOF, for which 30 days notice must be given.

Fraser had indicated he would ask the executives to pressure individual sporting bodies and athletes to withdraw from the games. If it could not reverse its decision alone.

The Australian team has been hit by withdrawals from both officials and competitors since the AOF announced its May 23 decision.

Two executives, John Howson and Kevin Gosper, who is also a member of the International Olympic Committee, said they had voted for a boycott and withdrew from the Australian contingent. Howson was the team manager at the 1976 Montreal Olympics and Gosper is a former Olympic silver medalist and chief executive-elect of Shell Australia, which was the main sponsor of the Australian team before withdrawing its support some weeks ago.

Several teams already have withdrawn from the Australian contingent. They include the men and women's hockey teams, women's volleyball, equestrian, yachting and shooting teams.

Top sprinter Valerie Boyle, a triple silver medalist in three previous Olympics, and star swimmer Tracey Wickham, world record holder for the 400 and 800 meters freestyle, dropped out of the team.

Other athletes to withdraw are pentathlon champion Alex Watson, swimmer Mark Morgan and veteran swimming coach Forbes Carlile.

Pro racquetball play begins

CHICAGO — Only racquetball's diehards are playing the sport these days, and those are the people who will have to turn out in significant numbers if the Women's Professional Racquetball Association national championship that opened Thursday at Killshol Limited is to be a success.

Plenty is on the line in this one, both on court, in suburban Bloomington, and behind the scenes. Just four months ago the women touring professionals were competing unhappily on the National Racquetball Club tour. Under the WPROA banner, they objected to the NRC prize money ($6,000 per stop as compared with $15,000 for men) and times of their matches. The suburban Skokie-based NRC, headed by Bob Kender, the generally acclaimed "father of racquetball," ousted the women from its tour after they scheduled a tournament of their own.

Since then the WPROA has held some small tournaments, but this one — the WPROA's first-season climax in the NRC's backyard — will be a strong indicator of whether the women can go the way of their counterparts in golf and tennis and become an independent economic force.

The professional division carries a $10,000 prize fund and will be conducted by Prime Time Promotions, a relatively new Chicago area tournament promotional group headed by real estate broker Gary Damo. Amateur divisions, to be conducted along with the professional event, have drawn approximately 225 recreational players.

This week, however, the women will have to stand on their own merits in a tournament with a more well-balanced field than the men's NRC nationals provided in Las Vegas three weeks ago.

Marty Hogan had little trouble winning his third straight title in that one and has since been rewarded with a four-year contract with Catalina Sportswear worth $1 million and a three-year contract with Leach Industries, a racquet manufacturer, for another $500,000.

None of the women competing at Killshol enjoy the 22-year-old Hogan's earning power.

The WPROA's best known performer is Shannon Wright, who has won five national titles and was a feature of the Chicago Sun-Times-Wendy's-Wilson Shootout event earlier this spring.

Wright, 23, was upset in last year's NRC semifinals by eventual champion Karin Walton of San Diego. Now, however, Wright looks on that loss as "the best thing that could have happened to me."

"It seems like every time I've lost in racquetball, that's been an indication that something is wrong in my life," she said. "Now I'm much happier with myself."

Wright, bothered recently by an ankle injury, comes into the WPROA nationals seeded only third. Heather McKay, a 38-year-old Canadian who has built an international reputation in squash, is the top seed following a 21-7, 21-0 defeat of Wright in a WPROA event at Fishkill, N.Y., earlier this month. Sarah Green of Las Vegas is seeded second.

Tennis

Austin wins

EASTBOURNE, England (UPI) — Tracy Austin made the best comeback of her career Thursday, battling past Czechoslovakia's Hana Mandlikova and into the semifinals of a $125,000 women's tennis tournament.

The second favorite for Wimbledon was down a set and 0-3 against the brilliant 18-year-old Czech but staged a spectacular recovery to win 1-6, 6-3, 6-2.

"I didn't think I could win midway through that second set," said Austin. "It's the best comeback I've ever made."

The slightly built Californian was made to look little more than a novice by the magnificent stroke play and superb timing of Mandlikova and was grateful to have picked up one game of the fourth — from the first 10.

Austin should have an easier time today when she meets Peanut Louie from San Francisco, who got through with a 6-4, 4-6, 6-4 victory over Dianne Desfor.

Holland's Betty Stove, fresh from her victory over Martina Navratilova, was herself ousted by South Africa's Greer Stevens, who went through to the semis 6-3, 6-3. Stevens, who saved three match points on her way to a 3-6, 7-5, 7-3 victory over Dianne Fromholz.

Ramirez out

SURBITON, England (UPI) — Unseeded Chris Lewis of New Zealand stunned Mexico's Raul Ramirez, No. 1 seed, 6-4, 6-2, Thursday in the quarterfinals of the men's $50,000 pre-Wimbledon grass tournament at Surbiton.

After a hesitant start, Lewis, the 1975 Wimbledon junior champion, took command of the match from Ramirez, who turns 27 today. The 29-year-old New Zealander broke Ramirez' serve in the seventh game of the first set and again in the first and seventh games of the second.

Lewis now faces Ramirez's doubles partner, third-seeded Brian Gottfried, who defeated fellow American Hank Pfister, 6-4, 6-6.

Pfister, 26, led 5-2 in the second set and seemed on the way to extending the match to a third set but his temperament got the better of him. Gottfried, who is unseeded — at Wimbledon, fought back to 6-6 and won the tie-breaker, 7-0.

An ill-tempered display by Australian left-hander Brad Drewett marred his match with Lewis, with Austrian Peter Feigl. Despite winning the first set after a tie-breaker during which he blasted a 15-year-old ball boy for moving while he was serving, Drewett was not in control of his emotions or his tennis and eventually lost 7-6, 4-6, 4-6.

Feigl's opponent in tomorrow's semifinal will be Sandy Meyer, who surprised second-seeded Bill Scanlon, 7-6, 6-2.

Two advance

VIENNA (UPI) — Italy's Paolo Betolucci staged off three match points, then rallied to oust second-seeded Gianni Occhipinti, 6-2, 6-7, 7-6.

Thursday's second-round match of a $50,000 men's tennis tournament.

In other matches, top-seeded Tomaz Smid, dribbled fellow Czechoslovakian Jiri Trebec, 6-0, 6-1. France's Christophe Roger-Vicelin, topped Gabriel Urpi of Spain 6-0, 6-3, and Spaniard Fernando Luna downed Helmar Stieglitz, the only Austrian to advance to the second round, 6-3, 7-6.

Stieglitz, trailing 0-3 in the second set, rallied for a 5-4 lead but dropped the tie-breaker 7-5.

A withdrawal

WIMBLEDON, England (UPI) — Frenchman Yannick Noah, the No. 12 seed, — Thursday — withdrew from Wimbledon because of a thigh injury, organizers said.

Noah was the second seeded player to withdraw because of injury. No. 11 Harold Solomon withdrew Tuesday.

Noah injured his leg playing Jimmy Connors in the French Open Championships three weeks ago.

Both players will be replaced by lucky losers from the qualifying tournament.

Olympics

Soviets say they'll dominate — MOSCOW (UPI) — The Chairman of the Soviet Sports Committee said in an article published Thursday that the Soviet Union and East Germany would dominate the Moscow Olympics.

Writing in the Communist newspaper Pravda, Sergei Avdeyev said he regretted the competition could not be sharpened with entries from the United States, West Germany and Japan who are boycotting the Games.

"As at Montreal, the real favorites for the medals at the 22nd games will come from the Soviet Union and East Germany," he said. "A number of sports are likely to be grimly contested by entrants from other countries, specifically Cuba's boxers and track and field athletes, Romania's girl gymnasts, the Czechoslovak soccer team and Bulgaria's wrestlers and weightlifters."

The Soviet Olympic team will consist of 560 athletes and will have entries in every event.

Afghan team defects to rebels

— ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (UPI) — A former member of the Afghanistan national basketball team said Thursday the team had refused to participate in the Moscow Olympics and had joined anti-Soviet rebels based in Pakistan.

Karim Dad said in a telephone interview after arriving in Pakistan that the 12-member team decided in Kabul last week by unanimous decision to refuse a directive from the Soviet-backed Afghan government ordering them to participate.

However, the International Basketball Federation and the International Olympic Committee pointed out that the Afghan basketball team had not qualified for the Olympic tournament and had not been invited to participate in Moscow at any stage.

Geska sweeps Thunderbluff races

— TWIN FALLS — Chuck Geska of Buhl swept all three super stock races to highlight an evening of racing at Thunderbluff Raceway Wednesday night.

The victories in the heat, trophy and main event races extended Geska's lead in the season point standings.

In the bobby class, Terry Harbaugh won the trophy and main event races to take over first place from Johnny Lee in that division. Lee smashed his car during the evening and wasn't able to continue.

Mini-stock driver Dirty Don continues to lead that division. Results of Wednesday evening's races:

- Heat — Chuck Geska, Buhl; Bob Powers, Twin Falls; Steve Fahrnwald, Twin Falls.
- Trophy — Chuck Geska, Buhl; Jim Rhoades, Twin Falls; Bob Powers, Twin Falls.
- Main — Chuck Geska, Buhl; Lyle Thorpe, Twin Falls; Boyd Harms, Wendell.

Showers predicted for outdoorsmen

— TWIN FALLS — Afternoon thundershowers are predicted for the mountain this coming weekend.

Sawtooth National Forest Service officials recommend hikers seek shelter and stay away from open areas and solitary trees when lightning threatens.

On the Fairfield District, Baumgartner, Pioneer, Bounds and Canyon campgrounds new hot water available. Roads have been graded but are beginning to get dusty.

Logging trucks are now running over Couch and Fleck summits, Monday through Friday.

Forest service officials say fishermen are reporting good catches in both Smoky Creeks.

The Ketchum District reports Trail Creek summit road is open now but is still very rough. The road over Dollarhide summit is still closed due to snow drifts.

About Gulch and Fox Creek trails are recommended for day hikers. Side roads are beginning to dry out somewhat but are still muddy in spots.

On the Sawtooth National Recreation Area, campgrounds are all open now and fees are being charged. Campers are advised to use developed campgrounds until the ground dries out.

The Redfish Lake Visitor Center will open this weekend, and programs will start the following week. Some trails are partially open in the Wilderness Zone but are still snowcovered in the higher elevations. Snowline is at 7,600 feet.

On the Twin Falls Ranger District in the South Hills, woodcutters are urged to check with the Rangers' office before attempting to enter a cutting area.

Many of the roads in the higher elevations are still very soft and muddy. The Monument Peak road is still blocked with snowdrifts. Snowdrifts on the Oakley-Rogerson road have melted enough now to allow access for vehicles. The road is open but still very soft.

On the Burley District, Lake Cleveland and the upper campgrounds on Mount Harrison are still snowbound and not expected to be open until the first week in July. The best access into the City of Rocks is still from the Almo side.

Indians' Thornton on disabled list

— CLEVELAND (UPI) — The Cleveland Indians placed first baseman Andre Thornton on the 21-day disabled list Thursday, leaving the club one man short of the regular-season limit of 25 players.

Thornton, who underwent knee surgery earlier this year, will undergo surgery again Monday at Lutheran Medical Center to remove torn cartilage and repair possible ligament damage in his right knee. He will be lost to the club for the season.

W. Germany, Belgium in finals

— ROME (UPI) — After 12 matches spread over eight days, favored West Germany and unheralded Belgium have emerged from the pack of eight nations to advance to Sunday's finals of the sixth European soccer championship.

West Germany, perhaps the best team in the world at present, clinched its place in the finals for the third consecutive time after only two games — beating defending champion Czechoslovakia 1-0 and Holland 2-2. The Germans then rested three key players to coast to a 0-0 tie against 100-1 longshot Greece.

Belgium's berth in its first international competition final was sealed in the last game of the playoff series when it held 1968 champion Italy to a scoreless draw in a brutal contest Wednesday.

Bermuda yacht race to begin — NEWPORT, R.I. (UPI) — An international fleet of 165 ocean-going yachts were gathered for today's start of the biennial 65-mile Bermuda Race — a classic passage through the legendary "river in the sea."

The start was scheduled for 1 p.m. off Brenton Reef south of Newport in Rhode Island Sound.

The Bermuda Race rarely has been a grueling passage, but has earned a reputation as one of North America's toughest yachting events because it takes the fleet through the unpredictable and meandering Gulf Stream.

"That's the excitement... the stream," race chairman Vincent Monte-Sano of Mamaroneck, N.Y., a veteran Bermuda racer, said Thursday. "It's a part of the legend."

KENNETH A. HALL, Administrator, Division of Public Works, P.O. Box 300, Twin Falls, Idaho, June 16, and Friday, June 20, 1980.

NOTICE OF EMERGENCY AND REGULATORY ACTION

Pursuant to Sections 87-503 (b) and 87-504 (b)(2), Idaho Code, notice is hereby given that the Department of Health and Welfare, State of Idaho, has invoked emergency procedures for rule-making, The Action under Cockett Number 692-8002, involves the amendment of rules governing "Eligibility for Financial Assistance." Title 7, Chapter 1, Rules and Regulations of the Department of Health and Welfare, in accordance with Attorney General's Opinion 80-17, emergency promulgation is necessary to insure that the State of Idaho, Department of Health and Welfare, does not risk losing all Federal Financial Participation (FFP) for the Medicaid program in Idaho at the Department of Health and Welfare.

The rules which were adopted by emergency procedure on May 19, 1980, and filed by the Department on the 20th day of May, 1980, expire at the end of one-hundred and twenty (120) days, on the 18th day of September, 1980.

In addition, notice is also given pursuant to Section 87-503 (a)(1), Idaho Code, that the Department of Health and Welfare, Division of Welfare, proposes to amend these emergency regulations as permanent rules, under Cockett Number 80-13001. The following is a descriptive summary of the substance of the proposed emergency, the intended permanent action and of the principal issues involved:

3-4115 ABORTION AND CONTRACEPTION. The following sections are proposed for amendment to allow the Department to expend Title XIX funds for abortions to terminate pregnancy of victims of incest, for women for whom two licensed physicians have certified the medical necessity of such a procedure for physical, emotional, psychological, intellectual factors and the woman's age relevant to the health-related well being of the pregnant woman.

(a) Proposed for amendment to specify that abortions may be provided for clients when medical necessity, rather than only when the pregnancy, if carried to term, would result in the death of the woman.

(b) Proposed for amendment to substitute "medical necessity" in lieu of the criteria of "endangerment of life."

(c) Clarification of Eligibility for Financial Assistance.

(d) Proposed for amendment to require the certification of two physicians as to the medical necessity for an abortion.

(e) Physician's Certification Proposed for amendment to eliminate the requirement

Pursuant to Section 87-503 (a)(3), Idaho Code, the right to review a rule-making hearing is limited to twenty-five (25) or more interested persons, an association, or a governmental agency. The request for inclusion of a statement of the direct interests of the petitioner(s) in the subject matter of the proposed rule-making is hereby denied.

DATED—the 23rd day of May, 1980.

WILLIAM STRAM STATHAM, Custodian of the Records Procedure Section, Department of Health and Welfare, 450 West State Street, 8th Floor, Boise, Idaho 83720.

PUBLISHED: Friday, June 13, and 20, 1980.

that the physicians certify that the life of the mother is in danger.

(f) Proposed for amendment to eliminate requirements concerning "interested persons."

(g) Proposed for amendment to provide for resumption of hearing in conjunction with repeal of Manual Subsection 3-4115 (d) (1).

(h) Payment of attorney's fees and costs to subsidize enforcement of "medical necessity" for the "endangerment of life" on physician's certification.

Within the time limits specified below, any person can review the text of the proposed rules in the Office of the Custodian of the Records or in any of the Offices of the Department or the Office of the Assistant Attorney General, Health and Welfare Division, located in Coeur d'Alene, Lewiston, Caldwell, Boise or Twin Falls, Idaho.

Idaho Falls. Copies of the proposed rules will be made upon request, at no charge to the requesting party. Any interested person can submit written comment regarding the proposed rule-making which must be directed to the postmarked, or delivered on or before June 25, 1980.

No rule-making hearing(s) will be convened unless a signed written request for a hearing is submitted personally to the Custodian of the Records or a county clerk on or before June 20, 1980.

BRIDGE Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag

Straightforward slam win

Oswald Jacoby in age. The others all in their early 20s and younger than Alan Sontag. They got off to a fast start in the final match when West stuck in a super-weak jump overcall.

Russ, who played brilliantly throughout the whole tournament, had to do a good deal of work to bring in the slam. But with the aid of the hint given by the jump overcall he got there.

He won the diamond lead with the ace, led a heart to dummy and then led dummy's jack of trumps. East played low in the spade suit before West's king. A club was returned and won in dummy.

Now came the key play. He led a second trump and finessed his eight. Bep, dummy with a diamond ruff and a further trump finesse. The team is an unusual age group—Bud and Russ are reasonably close to

The team of Bud Reinhold, Russ Arnold, Bobby Levin, Jeff Meckstroth and Eric Rodwell won this year's Vanderbilt. The team is an unusual age group—Bud and Russ are reasonably close to

Christian concerts planned

TWIN FALLS — A summer-long "Concert in the Park" series begins Saturday. The series is sponsored by Christian Radio of Magic Valley, Inc., and will begin at 7 p.m. each Saturday through August 23 at City Park.

The concert series will feature local Christian artists and groups who will perform varying types of music including inspirational, gospel, country, popular and contemporary songs.

Miss Piggy will make more films

LONDON (UPI) — The Muppet Show, filming its fifth series at ATV's Elstree studios, will take a break from television after the completion of the present 24 segments to make one or two more feature films.

A spokesman for ATV said this did not necessarily mean the end of television production for the famous puppets.

"This is not to say they won't be back," said the spokesman. "But it is possible there may be a new format or other new ideas if they do decide to make still another series."

A decision on the television future of Miss Piggy, Kermit the Frog and other well known muppet characters will have to wait until then.

Meanwhile, they will appear in Muppet II, a sequel to their box-office smash first film. And after that Lord Grade, who set them on the road to international tv fame, will produce "The Magic Crystal," a pet film project of the Muppets' founder and star (as Kermit), Jim Henson.

Henson thinks so much of this project, which he devised himself, that he offered to put several million dollars of his own money into the production if Lord Grade would come up with the rest.

Carson bags $65 million in new contract

NEW YORK (UPI) — Johnny Carson will receive $65 million from NBC over the next 3 years, it was reported Tuesday.

Quoting industry sources, the Daily News said in its Wednesday editions that Carson will get a $5 million salary a year for his services as host of the "Tonight Show" plus $50 million for his newly formed production company, Carson Productions Inc.

The company will receive the money for producing the "Tonight Show" for the 3-year period, as well as at least one other series a year and several other projects.

Carson, who already owns two banks in California, will receive 15 weeks of vacation each year under his new contract.

All houses have a tale to tell

'Within These Walls' a church-production telling the stories
both good and sad

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES

Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Most everyone who has a fascination for old historic homes has pondered the stories the walls could tell of the many lives they have seen.

One old house will be disclosing its secrets of love, tragedy and humor when the LDS Church stakes at Twin Falls presents "Within These Walls" Saturday and Monday nights in the College of Southern Idaho Fine Arts Auditorium.

The play is an original story by Margaret Smoot of Salt Lake City with music by Robert Brunner, long associated with Disney Productions. It is major contribution to the LDS worldwide sesquicentennial celebration of the church founding. It also follows on the heels of the Twin Falls diamond jubilee, continuing the tribute to history.

Beverly Sturgill, well known for her work in children's theater, is drama director and Del Slaughter will direct the 25-piece orchestra. Sturgill said the Salt Lake City production and others have utilized tapes for music but Twin Falls will have a live orchestra. A 60-voice chorus, directed by Camille Cox will also be part of the Twin Falls show.

More than 100 local performers in all are working to make the production something special for the Magic Valley area. Although billed as a church program it is open to everyone and guaranteed to entertain anyone who ever moved into a new home, purchased an old house or reared a group of teenagers.

Sturgill said there are some very humorous situations and some trying ones as well as one tender love story as the inhabitants of the old house over a period of more than 100 years come and go through the script.

For example, the man who built the Salt Lake City home for his pioneer day Mormon family, had no sooner moved in than he was called by LDS Church leader Brigham Young to move to Arizona to colonize for the church.

His reluctant wife who had not even had an opportunity to put her fine china, brought all the way from England, into the house's elegant china cupboard doesn't think much of the move and a daughter reasons, "But Brigham Young said 'This is the place'."

Tom Alkin plays the original owner while Robert and Louise Crowley are the next owners, Edward and Sarah Hertridge. As one family grows and moves out and another buys and moves in, one owner is Jewish, pondering the ways of the Utah Mormon community. He is somewhat astonished to find he is a gentile to the LDS neighbors. There are three acts in the play, the first covering the period of 1850 to 1870, the second the immigrants, 1870 to 1910 and the third act from 1944 to the present time.

Throughout the production, the scenes change to reflect styles in furnishings and decor as the decades pass. Sturgill said two professional interior decorators, Tim and Sally Ward, have helped make the changes just right.

There is a modern time owner who decides to build on. In the Twin Falls production the addition is a bathroom, something easier to show on the local stage than the addition of a bedroom which was featured in the Utah show.

Among the scenes areas families will relate to are the changes in the ways of life today over those of the 1800s. There is the love story Maren, the daughter of the immigrant couple, Peter and Anna Kristina Olsen from Norway. Maren, played by Brenda Wright. There is also a touching scene in which a family bids goodbye to a young son, leaving on a church mission. Knowing they will not see him for at least two years, the actors project feelings that will touch many in the audience who have faced the same situation.

As the modern day occupants move in, there are the typical teenagers who bring rock music and motorbikes to the old home that once knew family singing around the living room piano.

With each era, music of the same period is provided by the chorus and orchestra and dancers contribute their own version.

A total of 30 teenagers participate in the show including Kevin Price, Melanie Perry, Alan Denison and others.

Margaret Smoot, Utah writer who authored "Within These Walls," has a background in arts and communication. She is a news reporter and anchor woman for KSL TV and is well known to many television viewers.

Brunner, composer for the sesquicentennial work, has 17 years experience in movie and television fields. He has worked with the Walt Disney Studios and composed a number of popular songs. Brunner received an Emmy award nomination for song writing for the score from "Castaway Cowboy," a Disney production. He was among the top 10 in the academy award competition in 1974.

Mrs. Del Slaughter, production chairman, said tickets for the Monday night performance are already nearly at the sell-out stage and if necessary a third show will be held. She suggested persons purchase tickets as early as possible so a decision can be made on the third show.

Tickets are $2 per person and are available at Crowleys Pharmacy and the Music Center in downtown Twin Falls. Curtain time is 8 p.m. both evenings.

The Empire's back, exciting as ever

By CHARLES CHAMPLIN of The Los Angeles Times

HOLLYWOOD — Very few movie sequels in history could be the result of coming out with a creative success as "The Empire Strikes Back."

The unprecedented attendance for "Star Wars" assures a lot of business — you could even argue that the spoilsports who resent all success would turn out in legions at the first whisper that "Empire" might not be up to the original.

In fact, "The Empire Strikes Back" seems to me a hugely accomplished and exciting follow-on to "Star Wars" — with a slow and extended stretch in the lategoing that will test the youngest and shortest attention spans, but with new material mixed with the familiar to rush the story forward.

The magic of "Star Wars" derived from George Lucas and his love of make-believe, of the need for childlike and hugely sophisticated, and from his myth-sized view of the absolutes of good and evil, courage and treachery. Lucas knows. Once Upon a Time, the way Hugh Hefner knows bachelor dreams.

The same sureness of vision of the movies as well as of events in a galaxy far, far away, gives force to "The Empire Strikes Back."

It is easier this time to sense the Grand Design. "Star Wars," as is now known, was Episode IV of a nine-episode, grand plot. Lucas had outlined. The first three stories are, evidently, a prelude to "Star Wars," and Episode IV was, Lucas felt, an easier and more dramatic way to start the series. "The Empire Strikes Back" is titled Episode V and indeed it feels much more like a segment of a larger story, with an ending that is (evidently) both a resolution and a beginning that leaves one of our heroes in chilling jeopardy and Darth Vader — ah, but that would be telling.

Sequels have costs and gains. A certain feeling of ominous discovery is gone forever. After all, we've been to the galaxy before. On the other hand, the action can thrust forward, freed of a lot of exploratory needs. And there is time to get a bit more deeply into characters and relationships; to embroider themes; to sketch more of that "grand" design and to link the proceedings with new creatures and characters.

"The Empire Strikes Back" suggests strongly that the Lucas imagination has hardly begun to be tested. He and his scriptwriters, the plunk and the expert Leigh Brackett and her successor Lawrence Kasdan, have in particular come up with an absolute enchantment named Yoda, a wise old guy who cannot be more than 2 feet high, standing on a lipelaw but who coached both Atec Guinness (as Ben Kenobi) and Luke Skywalker's father and is now trying to install some patient good sense into impetuous young Luke himself.

Frank Oz who is the wizard of Miss Piggy, Yoda is a green, a gawky gnomie with a wispy tansure and a deeply furrowed brow, hairy hands, a deep voice, unutterably sad and hooded eyes, a melancholy and yet penetrating smile and supernatural powers of mind over matter. He is a delicious invention and will be the best-selling doll next Christmas or I underestimate Lucas' elvin sense of merchandising.

Yoda touchingly tells Luke that the reason Luke keeps failing is that he doesn't believe. "Star Wars" and "The Empire Strikes Back," like all superior fantasies, have the quality of parable, not only on good and evil but on attitudes toward life and personal department and there is something very like a moral imperative in the films' view of hard work, determination, self-improvement, concentration and idealism. It does not take a savant to see that this uplifting tone is a central ingredient of the wide outreach of the films.

grand design.*

Lucas & Company have this time created an ice planet, Hoth, where our rebel friends are hiding from the probing nastiness of the Emperor, his black-helmeted executive officer, Vader, and their lethal forces. Snow creatures which look part llama, part kangaroo, are the outdoor transportation and there is also a snow monster that nearly sees in Skywalker, who is once again the youthfully innocent and engaging Mark Hamill.

Unquestionably the chancier departure in "The Empire Strikes Back" is to advance the idea of a romantic triangle, with Carrie Fisher as the strong-willed princess sought after, in a teasing, robust way, by Harrison Ford as Han — Solo, — but — drawn — in — the handsome but reluctant Luke. It is a construction that did wonders for Gable, Tracy and Loy among other classic screen trios and if it is kept light and urbane with the emphasis on shipship and not on amorous swains it should work nicely. Lucas I presume doesn't need to be reminded that mushy stuff was a Saturday morning turn-off if there ever was one.

The rebels are found out and have to flee (super) action sequences — the Empire — advancing with giant tanks built like elephants and needing 40-be-asses (like monumental sieges). Guinness as Ben Kenobi makes a feeble and ghostly appearance urging Luke to swamp planet Dagobah and lessons with Yoda.

Aboard Solo's Millennium Falcon, which seems to be the space equivalent of a '58 Impala, our friends, including as before Chewbacca (Pete Mayhew), Artoo-Detoo (Kenny Baker) and See Three-pio (Anthony Daniels), escape through an asteroid storm (wow) and after intervening adventures, drop in on a space outfit run by Billy Dee Williams as Lando Calrissian, one of Solo's raffish old pals. There, we may be sure, more adventures ensue, right up to a socko finish that leaves some long-term relationships unresolved.

The characters have been, as they say, fleshed out. Harrison Ford in particular has additional dimension as, perhaps, a rascal at heart who finds himself captive of his own sense of duty and honor, an anti-hero grudgingly making do as a hero.

Carrie Fisher at times seems to have a newly steely turn of mind, a spirited independence.

Hamill in these more rounded constructions is a man trying to grow, through moral choices and self-discipline.

The special effects, the work of a vast team (the credits list more than 250 individual names, plus several firms), are spectacular, but there is something a subtle but notable difference between them and the rather self-conscious space epes we have seen since "Star Wars."

Lucas' special effects here, as mind-trying as they undoubtedly were to conceive and execute, seem in the best sense to be meant to be taken for granted, to excite no more comment than a saguaro cactus in the desert.

Naturally there are laser swords; you expected slingshots? Naturally a professional gambler like Calrissian, striking it rich, would design his planet to resemble the lobby of the newest biggest hotel in Las Vegas. Naturally things look and perform the way they look and perform.

The effects work most marvelously well. It is just that the camera — somehow — does not conflict with the effects. It uses them and it does make a difference.

The music as before is by John Williams and it is majestic and exciting but, like the effects, it manages not to be overbearing or to draw unwarranted attention to itself.

Episode IV, Lucas says, will be called "Revenge of the Jedi." It completes the middle trilogy of his remarkable saga and will also complete the struggle between Luke Skywalker and Darth Vader winner to be announced later. Whether we'll ever see Episodes I, II and III, involving Luke's father, or Episodes VII, VIII and IX, which would carry the story forward another 20 years or so (the total span is 40), is not clear. What is certain is that the Lucas vision will be part of our world for years.

No face lift for Clint; George is alive

Q: Can you tell us something about Cheryl Ladd's current boyfriend? Isn't he a big-name movie producer? — K.L., Santa Monica, Calif.

A: No, he isn't. Brian Russell, whose relationship with Cheryl is pretty serious now, is a pop singer and composer. He wrote the "Aloose and Restless Me" number for Cheryl's recent TV special, and accompanied her to a special "Cheryl Ladd Day" ceremony in her hometown of Huron, S.D. The two then took off for a more exotic location — Japan, where the popular "Charlie's Angels" had a performing tour.

Q: Is it true that singer-dancer Ann Miller is really so vain that she won't allow herself to be photographed unless she's wearing a wig? — M.K., Chicago

A: Nearly, but at least one photo we know found a way around her reluctance — sheer flattery. Seems she was rehearsing recently for a special appearance when asked to pose for a picture. "Well I don't look so good without my wig," said Ann. "Miss Miller," said the photographer. "If you took any more beautiful I wouldn't be able to hold the camera." Which, was all Ann needed to hear before striking one of her famous dancing poses on a flight of stairs.

Gossip

Q: Since her famous pallimony trial, we haven't heard much about Michelle Triola Marvin. Is she seeing anyone, a regular? — Sals these days? — B.S., Phoenix, Ariz.

A: When I last checked, Michelle and Dick Van Dyke were still a twosome. Despite denials of a romance, Michelle accompanied Dick to Chicago, where, at Errol Harold Hill, he starred in the state revival of Meredith Willson's "The Music Man." Their Windy City stay was not especially pleasant. Dick was felled by bad cold and Michelle complained of a toothache. The play, however, fared much better and after the successful Chicago tryout, opened on Broadway two weeks ago to enthusiastic reviews. We haven't seen Michelle in the New York audience yet, but we're betting she shows up to encourage Dick any day now.

Q: We hear a lot about how much the big male movie stars are being paid, but how about the women stars? Who is Hollywood's biggest and how much is she being paid? — L.M.S., St. Louis, Mo.

A: For quite a long time now Hollywood's biggest box office draw has been Barbra Streisand, hands-down. For her next movie, "All Night Long," Streisand will earn a $4 million salary plus a 15 percent slice of the profits. Barbra succeeded Lisa Eichhorn, originally cast in the movie for a scant $250,000. Streisand's salary arrangement was so spectacular that her costar — Gene Hackman, no slouch in the big bucks department — promptly asked for more when Barbra's deal came to light. No figures have been mentioned, but a good guess is that with salary and percentage sweeteners, Gene ought to come out with about $2 million.

Q: How does Tatum O'Neal feel about her father's superactive love life? I'm told she's not too high on Ryan's current flame, Farrah Fawcett. Is that true? — M.R., South Bend, Ind.

A: Tatum remains pretty philosophical about Ryan's adventures, especially since he's always made clear she, at sweet 16, is his number one girl. In fact, Ryan escorted Blahm and Farrah to a Hollywood party and those present reported that all three got along splendidly.

WHAT MAKES SAMMY RELAX: Prior to a recent appearance on "Good Morning, America," Sammy Davis Jr. phoned ahead, requesting that a bottle of expensive wine be awaiting him in the green-room. The staff complied, and when the multi-talented star showed up at the TV studio, he poured a glass of wine, slowly quaffing it while holding a cigarette. Then, hanging loose, Sammy went on camera to do his interview, as charming and debonair as ever.

Q: I was surprised to see pictures of Gene Kelly in a magazine next to a series of younger women. Hasn't he been married for a long time? — S.W., Jacksonville, Fla.

A: Kelly is a widower. His wife, Jeanne, died seven years ago, and his previous marriage to Betsy Blair ended in divorce in 1967. Two children, Tim, 18, and Bridget, 17, from his second marriage live at home, in Beverly Hills, and a daughter by Blair is married and lives in the East. Kelly, who will be 68 in August, professes to like "old things" — old clothes and old values — but young women. Even so, his younger dates, says Gene, are just friends.

Q: When we saw Lauren Hutton in the movie "American Gigolo," we noticed she seemed to be straining her eyes a little bit. Does she wear glasses in private? — S.K., Rye, N.Y.

A: Yes she does, although Lauren for obvious professional reasons keeps her spectacles out of sight during modeling and acting assignments. I caught her eyeing with no strain whatever — some ultra-chic garments at a recent New York fashion show. The reason: part of her super-relaxed casual ensemble was a pair of large, horn-rimmed glasses.

ENERGY KEYNOTE: In case you think the great jazz pianist George Shearing is sensitive about being hailed as a hero, we overheard telling a friend that he was doing his part to solve the energy crisis "by not turning on the lights." And when asked why he never seemed to have circles under his eyes, George replied, "It's because I don't suffer from eyestrain."

RUDOLPH NUREYEV
... Misha wonderful

Q: Isn't there an intense, behind-the-scenes rivalry brewing between those ballet superstars, Rudolf Nureyev and Misha Baryshnikov? — G.S., Providence, R.I.

A: Not that we've been able to detect. Whatever the private feelings, Rudy and Misha realize they share a common national and artistic heritage. In fact, Rudy came to Misha's defense when a scoopy reporter asked if American ballet fans would resent Misha's appointment as head of the American Ballet Theater because he's Russian. "Baryshnikov is a man of quality," Rudy snapped, and promptly ended the interview.

A: The wheelchair is more of a gag than a necessity. George, who was in a play London's Palladium on his 106th birthday, believes in wearing out rather than rusting out as a show business personality. Now 84, George really isn't all that weak. At a live concert near Chicago recently, he was wheeled onstage, but he bounced up and delivered more than an hour of first-rate standup comedy. He looked bright, feisty and fresh, a sure sign George lives working before a live audience.

THE ODD COUPLE: When Woody Allen turned up in the audience at one of designer Ralph Lauren's fashion shows in New York, a rumor started that Woody was romantically interested in one of the beautiful models. The truth is that Woody and Lauren have become friends. The handsome Lauren has acting ambitions and would like nothing better than to launch an acting career in one of Woody's films, which he admires highly. Woody was just returning the compliment by turning up at the showing of Lauren's new designs.

ENDING IN A DRAW? John Travolta is still steadfastly refusing to cooperate with "After Dark" magazine for a story-and-picture layout on his new film, "Urban Cowboy," because he doesn't like the magazine's gay image. We have heard that Travolta has even instructed Paramount not to furnish any color portraits that might be used for a cover. So the show business magazine, which has lately been trying to straighten up that image, is considering using a painting of Travolta instead.

CLINT EASTWOOD
... Study his lines

Q: Can you tell us definitely whether or not Clint Eastwood has had a face lift? — F.T., Garden City, N.Y.

A: Reports surfaced a while back that Clint underwent a facial-needle and tuck to get rid of some lines around his eyes and nose. Eastwood firmly denied the report, and I believe him. Not only are the Eastwood wrinkles part of his stock-in-trade, but they make him look pretty good. My New Orleans spy sent next to Clint during a publicly bash for his next movie, "Bronco Billy." Word is: The Eastwood facial lines are not only in place but more distinctive than ever. Clint may have one worry, however, one that's shared by thousands of men — thinning hair. Will-bogus reports of Eastwood hair transplants be next?

Q: Probably — Hollywood's most famous "hair" magazines is that of Sidney Pottier and Joanna Shimkus. Is their union surviving well? — O.P., Rochester, N.Y.

A: From what Sidney himself says in his well-written and candid autobiography, "This Life," he and Joanna are definitely on solid marital ground. After a failed marriage — with model-dancer Juanita Hardy — and a torrid romance with Dianna Carroll, Sidney met Joanna when they starred in the 1969 movie, "The Lost Man." They lived together for eight years and produced two children. What brought things to a head was a dentist's new recruit, a dentist who questioned why Miss Shimkus was picking up children named Pottier. Finally, says Sidney, they decided to get married — on Jan. 23, 1978 — and both have never looked back.

Q: One of my all-time favorite movie stars is Van Johnson, but I haven't heard much about him lately. How does he look and how is he doing? — D.L., Seattle, Wash.

A: We saw Van recently in a touring dinner-theater production of the comedy "Send Me No Flowers," and he looked great. Great enough, in fact, for an interviewer for a major newspaper to refer to Van as "now in his 50s." Actually, the star who got his start in movies almost 40 years ago will be 64 next Aug. 25, which makes him a Virgo dependable, sincere and nice to have around. He may have gained a little weight, but he still wears his famous red socks and projects his boy-next-door image.

Q: Alice Ghostly said during a TV interview that she vividly remembers her early struggles, claiming that today she helps young performers trying to break into show business, "whenever possible. Is this merely talk, or truth? — L.B., Bowling Green, Ky.

A: Alice means it. The comedienne, whose career dates back to "New Faces of 1932" in which she sang "Boston Beguine" on stage and screen, dined with friends at a Greenwich Village restaurant the other night. She was so impressed with her young waiter, an aspiring actor, that she gave him two tickets for her hit Broadway musical, "Annie," in which she plays the mean orphanage supervisor. Then, she invited him backstage after the show, introducing him to the cast and gave him leads in pursuing his theatrical career. Incidentally, the original cast-record album of "New Faces of 1932" was selling among collectors for about $150 a copy before it was reissued two years ago.

Networks will outnumber delegates

By FRANK GREVE

Knight-Ridder Newspapers DETROIT — A riddle: What costs more to produce than "Gone With the Wind," takes two years to plan, two months to set up and is run out of 53 air-conditioned, inter-connected, custom-built trailers?

Answer: CBS's 1980 Republican National Convention coverage. Last week the marquee over the Cobo Hall convention center here offered "A Warm Welcome to Car Wash Operators." It should have continued: "... And Network Executives, Producers, Engineers, Unit Managers and Their Vast Supporting Casts."

They swarmed Cobo Hall because the Republican convention is only a month away and because bringing TV to town isn't like bringing in just any old circus. Actually, even for networks, convention coverage is unusual business.

Between July 14 and July 17, CBS, NBC and ABC will spend about $30 million on the quadrennial political extravaganza. Nearly 2,000 network personnel will vie for the greater glory of one news division or another. About 50, the known faces, will compete on the convention floor of Joe Louis arena. The invisible rest will sweat behind the scenes in Cobo Hall, adjacent to the arena.

Revenues from commercials will cover only about half the expense of the extraordinary effort. Indeed, it is only at political conventions that networks compete to lose money on often dull programming aimed at an audience half the size of the normal and ever-profitable summer re-run crowd.

The commitment is even more extraordinary in the Detroit instance, where the coronation of Ronald Reagan as the GOP presidential candidate is as inevitable as the cascades of balloons that enliven spontaneous demonstrations.

"It certainly wouldn't hurt if we had more news," said Russ Bensley, executive producer of CBS's campaign coverage.

Asked how ABC would make the Republican convention interesting, Hal Bruno, the network's top political affairs expert, answered: "Beats hell out of me."

So the larger riddle is why some network doesn't choose to make millions by offering good movies during the conventions — when the others are consumed with predictable Republican politics.

"Actually, there are four main reasons."

First, political conventions are an opportunity for networks to showcase the talents of their news divisions in head-to-head competition. No other event offers news divisions as much prime time or the chance to battle each other as directly.

Second, solid convention coverage is a public service obligation that confers prestige. ABC, which in the past often has had the coverage of the competition, can't do that this time around. Its news division, now challenging NBC and CBS for the first time, needs to be taken seriously.

Third, conventions are fun for those who cover them. Not only will network personnel outnumber and probably outstep delegates, but they will also have, in a sense, their own coverage. Coops will be scored in coverage, reputations built and adventures had away from home.

Finally, the network that wins top ratings for its convention coverage usually wins expanded audiences for its news divisions. In 1960, the Chet Huntley-David Brinkley team at NBC won the conventions and news leadership from CBS. In 1968, Walter Cronkite's strong showing helped win it back.

Now that politicians really are picked in primaries, not conventions, and now that TV audiences for the shows are smaller, that rule may not hold. ABC, however, is betting it does.

Back in the New Hampshire primary days, when it looked like George Bush and Ronald Reagan would vie as dramatically as Sen. Edward Kennedy and President Carter were expected to, ABC executives promised gavel-to-gavel coverage of both conventions.

Recently an ABC spokesman updated the vow: "We are committed to gavel-to-gavel coverage if the conventions warrant it."

Translation: ABC intends to cut back on coverage, just it, and promote itself in the process. Tentative plans would have ABC skip daytime sessions in favor of a recap after "World News Tonight." Then, producers of the ABC magazine show, "30-30," would take over, offering either live coverage from the convention floor or, if things are dull, longer, produced pieces about issues and problems facing the next president. Barbara Walters' interviews would probably be in late the 8-9 p.m. 20-30 segment.

Then, as convention action heats up between 9 p.m. and 11 p.m., ABC would turn to its special events unit for a polished, live production. It would, however, say Frank Reynolds will anchor the coverage, along with Ted Koppel, host of ABC's late night news show, "Nightline." Prime time exposure of Koppel, it's assumed, should help promote "Nightline."

The Oregon Shakespearean Festival, began its outdoor summer season with the presentation of Shakespeare's "Merry Wives of Windsor" last week. Sir John Falstaff is played by Cal Winn and Annette Heldt plays Mistress Quickly.

Country music sales rising

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — Break out the banjos and fiddles — country music sales have surpassed pop music and pulled into second-place behind rock 'n' roll for the first time in history.

While record-company executives in the music hubs of New York and Los Angeles were worrying about losing their jobs because of a sales slump this year, officials in Nashville were clicking champagne glasses. Figures released Thursday by the New Jersey-based National Association of Recording Merchandisers show that country not only enjoyed gross sales of $437 million last year — a $10 million jump over 1978 — but outstripped pop, disco and soul record sales. The increase in country music sales was in sharp contrast to a generally gloomy picture of the record industry in 1979. Gross sales dropped by more than $95 million, nearly 12 percent, to $3.7 billion from 1978 to 1979. The NARM study shows that last year, 37.4 percent of the record-buying public purchased rock 'n' roll records; 11.9 percent bought country and 11.3 percent preferred pop. Coming in fourth was soul music, up 1.5 percent from 1978, followed by disco, which gained only 2 percent in sales.
