

Tax cut killed Democrats block Reagan proposal, but promise their own cut for 1981

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Senate Democrats, pledging to design a "responsible" 1981 tax reduction of at least $20 billion, Thursday killed a Republican attempt to pass Ronald Reagan's tax cut proposal.

On a 58-38 vote split along party lines, the Senate rejected the GOP proposal, which Democrats called an election-year gimmick by Republicans. Later a proposal by Sen. William Armstrong, R-Colo., to "index" personal income taxes to inflation so taxes would go up and down with prices was defeated 54-33.

Chairman Russell Long, D-La., of the Senate Finance Committee said there was no "dire emergency" to pass a tax cut that would not go into effect until next year. "We don't have to go off half-cocked," he told his colleagues.

"The vote came after Democrats moved to reclaim control of the tax cut debate by promising a reduction bill by Sept. 3.

The pledge, delivered one day after Reagan and congressional Republicans said they would push for an immediate tax cut, represented the first time Democrats in Congress publicly and unconditionally promised tax relief in 1981.

Reagan assailed the Democratic pledge as "pitiful."

"This rivals Jimmy Carter's empty rhetoric for sheer cynicism," he said in a statement. "What are they waiting for and where have they been all these months?"

Republicans, led by Sen. Robert Dole of Kansas, Thursday introduced the Reagan plan for a 10 percent across-the-board tax reduction for individuals as an amendment to a bill to raise the government debt limit.

"It's not just some gimmick that's been pulled out of the air for a press conference. It has a strong foundation," said Dole, who successfully used another temporary debt ceiling bill last month to kill President Carter's oil import fee.

He said adequate hearings had been held by the Joint House-Senate Economic Committee, which has recommended a modest tax cut to take effect by the summer.

The bill, raising the debt ceiling to $525 billion through February, passed 54-49 after the tax amendment failed.

The $22 billion GOP tax cut proposal included cuts for individuals as well as an accelerated schedule for business tax writeoffs. The Democratic proposal would total $20 billion to $25 billion.

Democrats did not say when during 1981 their tax cut — aimed at business more than individuals — would take effect. Republicans said theirs would start Jan. 1.

Democratic leader Robert Byrd called the GOP proposal a "simple Simon, Thirder 'ol solution" and an election year "gimmick."

He charged Republicans were trying to violate regular budget procedures and circumvent congressional committees by hastily bringing the difficult issue to the floor.

Byrd told reporters he appointed a 20-member Democratic task force to recommend an economic program and instructed the Finance Committee to begin hearings to produce a tax cut bill by Sept. 3.

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, chairman of the Democratic tax force and head of the Joint Economic Committee, said Democrats would not "resort to political one-upmanship in seeing who can cut taxes the first or the fastest."

The resolution prepared by Bentsen and 40 other Democrats said "the best interests of the nation should be placed first to assure that any tax cut is meaningful and beneficial to all Americans instead of rushing into an ill-considered and inadequate program for the purpose of trying to please some partisan political advantages."

Says oil dominated summit Carter returns home

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter returned Thursday from a European economic summit he said was dominated by the politics of oil.

Carter, appearing tired from his rigorous eight-day trip, said the western allies were united in their condemnation of the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan but that the life blood of their economies — OPEC oil — was the central issue of the Venice summit.

"The rising price of oil is crippling and damaging not only to developing countries but to underdeveloped countries," Carter said on arrival at Andrews Air Force Base.

"The one word that permeated all our discussions was oil — the smell of oil," Carter said.

"Oil politics is literally changing our relationships." The president met with the leaders of nine countries and said all the leaders realized they would require "painful sacrifices" in the 1980s.

Carter, welcomed home by Vice President Walter Mondale and other administration officials, praised what he called the remarkable unity of America's allies in demanding that the Kremlin withdraw all its forces from Afghanistan.

The allies view the Soviet invasion last December as a threat to world peace and agreed that there must be "total withdrawal" of all Soviet forces. A "token withdrawal" of Russian troops has "little significance," he said.

Carter indicated a "step-by-step withdrawal" of Russian troops would be acceptable — if it — and Economic Belgrade, Carter had suggested a "transitional" arrangement with the Soviets leading to a complete pullout of their forces and the return of Afghanistan to popular rule.

Moscow rejected the withdrawal proposal out of hand.

During his trip Carter visited Yugoslavia where he said "The new government seems to be strong and in control," following the death of Josip Broz Tito, and of course we agreed to give them our support."

ACLU files suit charging sex discrimination in draft bill

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The American Civil Liberties Union Thursday filed suit seeking to strike down the draft registration law Congress approved one day earlier on grounds of sex discrimination.

The class action suit, filed in U.S. District Court for the District of Columbia in the name of 16 young men affected by the registration law, charges that by applying only to men and excluding women, the new law is unconstitutional.

ACLU spokesmen admit the sex discrimination claim is a legal lever by which they hope to have the entire legislation declared unconstitutional.

Final congressional approval was given the bill on Wednesday and it is expected to be signed by President Carter shortly.

First registration of 19- and 20-year-olds probably will begin July 21 at U.S. post offices. Failure to register is a felony and carries maximum penalties of a $10,000 fine and five-year imprisonment or both.

"This lawsuit arises out of our general opposition to draft registration," said ACLU director Ira Glasser. "We think that this lawsuit is now the best way to stop draft registration entirely."

Selective Service System director Bernard Rostker and Post Master General William Bolger are named as defendants.

"We believe that under current rulings on sex discrimination by the U.S. Supreme Court, draft registration for men only is unconstitutional," Isabelle Katz-Pinzer, ACLU counsel in the suit and director of the ACLU's Women's Rights Project, told a news conference.

"It is to exclude women; the government must show that their exclusion is closely and substantially related to an important government purpose," she said. "The government cannot make such a showing in this case."

Another pending suit, a nine-year-old sex discrimination challenge to the draft which originated during the Vietnam war, is scheduled to go to trial next Tuesday in Pennsylvania and the matter could be resolved there.

Ms. Glasser and Ms. Pinzer said the ACLU opposes peacetime registration and conscription of both men and women.

"We also believe that if Congress were faced with the choice between including women or abandoning draft registration, they would abandon draft registration," Glasser said.

Ms. Pinzer said women have performed capably in the all-volunteer armed forces and are being graduated from the military academies. She also noted that Carter, Rostker and Secretary of Defense Harold Brown have all called for inclusion of women in draft registration.

Wilderness area bill wins Senate approval

WASHINGTON — The Senate Thursday approved a compromise bill creating a 2.2 million acre River of No Return Wilderness area in central Idaho.

The bill now goes to the House, where passage is expected as early as next week before the July 4th recess, according to a spokesman for Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho.

On a voice vote after only a few minutes of discussion, the Senate accepted the bill hammered out earlier by a House-Senate committee.

The bill provides for a wilderness spanning roughly 2.2 million acres, including the former Idaho and Salmon River Breaks primitive areas and

1 year's work fell to wrecking ball

CHICAGO (UPI) — Carlos Rodriguez spent $22,000 and one year of his life in a run-down house in a neighborhood that needed a face lift. It took the city wrecking crew half an hour to knock the house down.

Rodriguez, 24, a carpenter, bought the house for about $1,000 from the federal government as part of a program run by the Department of Housing and Urban Development to upgrade city neighborhoods.

He's been rehabilitating homes in borderline low-income neighborhoods for years — virtually rebuilding them from the ground up — and then selling them at a modest profit.

This time, Rodriguez hired a subcontractor to make major changes in the house that included putting in more than 100 sheets of plaster board, building front and back porches, replacing plumbing fixtures, putting in new windows and a new floor.

The gas and electricity had already been turned on and Rodriguez planned a last coat of paint for some of the rooms because the family that agreed to purchase the house for $28,000 had requested a change.

But when Rodriguez got to the house to finish the work all he found was a vacant lot.

That was in February and Rodriguez, with the help of his attorney, Todd Musburger, is still trying to discover who authorized the demolition of the house and gain some compensation for the loss.

The city filed suit against HUD to have the house torn down, but that was before Rodriguez took over the deed to the house and began his work. Rodriguez was never notified any legal action was pending against the property.

Richard Flando, regional counsel for HUD, says the agency didn't agree to the demolition and never received a bill for it. Under standard procedures HUD must give the city permission to demolish any house it owns and pay the demolition.

HUD said the city had no right to raze the house. But records show HUD agreed to the razing. HUD lawyers say if Rodriguez wants to collect anything, he will have to sue the federal government.

"It's ridiculous anybody should even have to get a lawyer let alone go to court to settle a case like this," said Musburger. "Anybody with an ounce of common sense could settle it. It's obvious. They tore down his house. They owe him something."

Did Symms' silver tip make money for friend?

TWIN FALLS — At the same time he was sitting on two subcommittees with authority over silver and other commodities, Rep. Steve Symms, R-Idaho, was privately advising a fellow congressman to purchase silver.

According to a front page story in Thursday's Dallas Morning News, Symms gave the advice to Rep. Jim Collins, R-Texas, in 1979, the year the price of silver shot from $6 an ounce up to nearly $50 an ounce.

According to Thursday's Dallas Morning News, Symms in 1979 urged Collins to enter the silver market.

The Dallas paper, which reports Collins as having made $160,000 in silver futures, quotes Collins as saying he began buying silver in 1979 "on the advice of Steve Symms, a friend of mine in Idaho."

The Dallas paper also quotes Collins as saying he also received advice on silver from Nelson Bunker Hunt.

Symms, who made nearly $10,000 that year by speculating in silver, earlier told the Times-News he had ended all involvement with silver speculation in 1979. Symms has also repeatedly denied he ever used information from his positions on the two subcommittees for either his own personal financial benefit, or the financial benefit of others.

Symms specifically denied earlier he ever leaked information to either of the billionaire Hunt brothers, of Dallas, Texas, who are now under investigation by several congressional committees and one federal regulatory agency for allegedly attempting to corner the world's silver market.

Nelson Bunker Hunt is on the national finance committee of Symms's U.S. Senate Campaign.

Reached in Boise, Symms' Press Aide Andrew Shirmmeister said the Times-News "was comparing apples and oranges."

"Steve has never been in a position to use his congressional office or his membership on those subcommittees for personal gain because those subcommittees that he sits on don't produce the kind of information he would personally benefit from."

"I think your question about divulging secrets is the wrong question," Shirmmeister said.

"The question should be, why does Steve Symms encourage people to invest in silver? First, because he's a firm believer in free enterprise and economic growth. Second, because he represents is the largest silver producing district in the country. Third, Steve's always been an advocate of hard money assets investment because the people in Washington that control congress are constantly devaluing paper money with their reckless spending."

"He's always encouraged people to invest in the productive side of the economy, including silver."

Shirmmeister said he didn't know if Symms had any personal dealings with Collins. Contacted in Washington, a secretary with the Subcommittee on Domestic Marketing, Consumer Relations and Nutrition told the Times-News that while the jurisdiction of the subcommittee is flexible, the subcommittee has held general price hearings on overall commodity prices.

A staff member with the Mines and Insular Affairs Committee rules that his subcommittee has responsibility for several areas, including "mining interests generally, mineral resources of the public lands, and proposed long range domestic minerals programs including availability of domestic minerals to fulfill all domestic requirements."

Overthrust firms join in alliance to aid impacted areas

EVANSTON, Wyo. (UPI) — Three major energy companies, hoping to "set an example for companies and communities throughout the nation," formed an association Thursday to ease the effects of their industrial projects on Evanston and other communities sitting along the energy-rich Overthrust Belt.

"Today our companies are taking a step not required by state or federal statute, but which we believe is our responsibility to our host communities," said Robert Bizal, government affairs director for Amoco Production Co.

"This association is unique. We intend this association and the activities it will undertake in the future to set an example for companies and communities throughout the nation who may be faced with large-scale industrial development."

Chevron Inc. U.S.A. and Champlin Petroleum Co.

joined Amoco in the project, which is called the Overthrust Industrial Association. The Overthrust Belt is a Rocky Mountain geological formation that experts believe contains large energy deposits.

Amoco, Chevron and Champlin combined plan to spend more than $500 million on natural gas processing facilities alone in the area in the next five years.

Bizal said the association will help local governments maintain the quality of life, partly through planning for growth before revenue from taxes on the projects starts to come in.

He also said the association will help communities meet "increased demands for increased public services."

Amoco and Chevron have given Evanston $500,000 to help schools, medical facilities and law enforcement agencies adjust to the influx of large numbers of construction workers.

This summer, about 1,000 construction workers are expected to be involved in construction of Chevron's $300 million natural gas processing plant near Evanston.

Meanwhile, the governors of Utah, Wyoming and Idaho held a powwow Thursday to discuss ways to deal with rapid development of Overthrust Belt energy resources in their states.

They ended the session by electing Gov. Scott Matheson of Utah as chairman of an informal compact between the three states to investigate ways to cope with massive oil and gas exploration in the region.

Wyoming Governor Ed Herschler said one recently developed Overthrust Belt well in his state cost $7 million to drill, but was such a massive find that the exploration and drilling costs will be recovered in four months of production.

Most of the Overthrust drilling has occurred in Wyoming, where 47 producing wells have been discovered in recent years. Six producing wells are located in Utah. Eight wells are being drilled in Idaho, although none have yet begun to produce.

Herschler said Overthrust development will bring herds of new people into southwestern Wyoming. The population of the Evanston area will double within the next decade, he said.

About 1,800 construction workers are expected to move into the Evanston area during the next few months, he said, to work on two natural gas processing facilities being built by the oil companies.

"And that's just the beginning," he said.

The three governors said the Overthrust development will have far reaching socio-economic effects on the entire region, and they were establishing the informal cooperative to deal with those problems.

Friday briefing

Family found slain

HAYS, Kan. (UPI) — Three children were found stabbed to death in an apartment Thursday and their mother apparently was electrocuted in a bathtub, police said.

Police briefly questioned the Richard Rhoads, husband and father of the victims, but declined to comment on the interview except to say that Rhoads was released and not considered a suspect.

The three children were found stabbed in the family's apartment and Mrs. Rhoads apparently was electrocuted by a hair dryer in a bathtub.

Mrs. Rhoads, 27, had filed for divorce Monday, according to court records.

Bodies of the children were found in a kitchen with a knife found lying next to the children in their mother's bed.

The mother's nude body was found in a half-filled bathtub along with a plugged-in hair dryer.

The bodies were found by a babysitter who normally took care of the Rhoads children while their mother worked as a waitress at a local restaurant.

Airlift to Thailand expected

NEW YORK (UPI) — President Carter will approve an emergency airlift of American weapons to Thailand to help it repel Vietnamese military attacks from Cambodia, ABC News reported Thursday.

ABC said the shipment, requested by Thailand, will include artillery, mortars, machine guns, ammunition and radar equipment to help Thai soldiers withstand attacks by Vietnamese troops across the Thai-Cambodian border.

The arms will be moved immediately in Air Force C-141 transport planes from supplies originally promised to other nations, it said.

The report says State Department officials will also urge Carter to give the Thai government emergency funds to provide relief for Thais who have fled villages under Vietnamese attack.

The state said the supplies had already been ordered and the delivery was being expedited.

France tests neutron bomb

PARIS (UPI) — France has conducted preliminary neutron bomb experiments and could decide in two years whether to begin work on the powerful nuclear weapon, President Valéry Giscard d'Estaing disclosed Thursday.

The first tests have been carried out, Giscard told reporters. "A decision on whether to produce this weapon will be made in 1982 or 1983 in the current planning schedule or two years after those dates if we decide on a long range planning schedule."

Neutron bombs are tactical nuclear weapons designed to destroy life but not buildings and materials. They produce a smaller explosion and less heat than traditional nuclear bombs but release 10 times as much radiation.

French defense officials said the experiments included tests of components of the neutron bomb, but not of the entire device.

Concern voiced over invasion

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A State Department spokesman Thursday expressed U.S. concern at reports that Israeli forces have occupied three positions in southern Lebanon.

"These reports concern us and we are looking into them," spokesman Tom Reston said. "Our support for Lebanon's sovereignty and territorial integrity is well known, as is our opposition to intervention there from any source."

Asked what the United States is doing to prevent such intervention, Reston said, "Once we have looked into the reports, then we will determine what our next steps will be."

Oil cutoff threatened

By United Press International

Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin declared Thursday that a united Jerusalem "forever" will be Israel's capital.

Kenneth promptly warned that Jewish control of the holy city could result in an oil cutoff to the West.

"We informed the world that... Jerusalem is the eternal capital of the land of Israel and the Jewish people," Begin told delegates, including Americans, attending the closing session of the Zionist General Council in Jerusalem.

Begin made no mention of plans to move his office to Arab eastern part of Jerusalem, a city that is holy to Jews, Christians and Muslims.

The plans for the office move have been protested by the United States and Egypt. Even the Vatican has entered the dispute by calling for international status for Jerusalem.

Girl sues parents over lockup

SANTA ANA, Calif. (UPI) — A 16-year-old girl who claims her parents had her locked up in a mental hospital in an effort to force her values and lifestyle on her filed a $3 million false imprisonment lawsuit Thursday against her parents and the hospital.

Attorneys said the suit also seeks to establish two legal precedents.

"That parents cannot involuntarily commit minor children to a private mental hospital without a prior hearing."

"That doctors affiliated with profit-making hospitals cannot make neutral decisions on whether patients should be admitted or released."

Judy Reeds claimed in the suit that her parents, Robert and Elizabeth Reeds of Mission Viejo, Calif., knew she was not mentally ill when they decided to have her locked up against her will at Capistrano by the Sea Hospital in Dana Point, Calif., last March 12.

Instead, she claimed, they hoped to modify her thinking and behavior so she would embrace their values and stop seeing her boyfriend.

S. Africa invades Angola

By United Press International

A 3,000-man South African invasion force backed by fighter planes, helicopters and tanks has taken up positions inside Angola, killing almost 400 civilians, Angola charged Thursday.

In Ererotia, South Africa lent credence to the Angolans' reports by acknowledging a South African helicopter crash on May 25. Events that led to the aircraft's crewmen killed in an ensuing ambush. But a military spokesman said he would make "no comment" on the Angolan claims.

Mexico invades over shrimp

HERMOSILLO, Mexico (UPI) — Angered by the alleged removal of a highly prized strain of experimental baby shrimp, Mexican Marines have seized a joint U.S.-Mexican farm research station.

Naval cadets were stationed Wednesday at the Puerto Penasco experimental unit, operated jointly by the Universities of Arizona and Sonora, on the Sea of Cortez 60 miles south of the Mexico-Arizona border.

University of Arizona officials recalled the school's nine researchers following the takeover saying it would be impossible for them to conduct joint research "under military duress."

Farm Director Jose Infante said the dispute surfaced last week when Arizona staffers flew 150,000 baby shrimps from the farm to another of their research farms in Hawaii.

The baby shrimp were highly valued since researchers devoted years to developing a new type of shrimp that can be bred quickly and profitably in artificial tanks, Infante said.

First major crowds to cheer Carter were in Portugal

On the final leg of his trip Carter lavishly praised the Portuguese in a luncheon toast.

"Your actions and your words demonstrated that people who value freedom cannot stand idly by while others' rights are ruthlessly suppressed."

"It is no wonder that Portugal was among the first of the world's nations to recognize and respond to the threat (of aggression in Afghanistan and official terrorism in Iran)," he said.

Portugal was the first ally to impose sanctions on Iran, and just as quickly took punitive action against Moscow after the Afghan invasion.

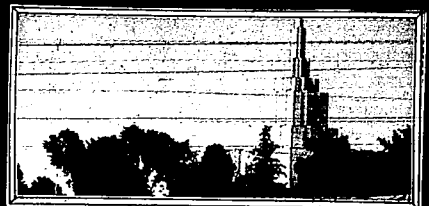

The crowds that greeted Carter in Portugal were the most enthusiastic he encountered on a trip where stringent security kept the welcomes small and low-key.

"Car-ter! Car-ter!" chanted 100 Portuguese students when he left the 16th Century Jeronimus Monastery where he had laid wreaths at the marble tombs of poet Luis Camoes and explorer Vasco da Gama.

Carter, obviously pleased by the change from "so-what" to sudden enthusiasm, waded in shaking hands with Portuguese civilians and 500 children from the American school in Lisbon who mobbed him.

Keith Williams opened the first leg of the 1,960-mile re-creation

Pony Express re-creation begins first leg of journey

ST. JOSEPH, Mo. (UPI) — A young blacksmith on a horse named Reuben carried a Bible and a pouch of mail across the Missouri River and onto the Kansas prairie Thursday in the first leg of a 1,960-mile relay over the fabled Pony Express trail.

Admonished to stay sober and ushered out by whoops of supporters and fellow riders, Keith Williams, 29, a former cowboy and ranch hand from Agency, Mo., spurred his horse westward from the historic Pony Express stables for a journey scheduled to end on Independence Day in Sacramento, Calif.

"I wanted to holler myself to start it off, but I had to concentrate so I wouldn't run over anybody," Williams said.

Williams was the first of more than 350 riders who will carry the special mail pouch, or mochilla, like the ones borne by Pony Express riders 120 years ago.

The Pony Express, a glorious frontier experiment that quickly outlived its usefulness, began April 5, 1850, and survived only until Oct. 26, 1861.

But during its short, legendary existence, it provided the only speedy mail service across the West until the coming of the telegraph and the transcontinental railroad.

The National Pony Express Association, based in Pollock, Calif., is sponsoring the re-enactment, but the riders are volunteers along the route.

The association hopes the trail will eventually be designated a National Historic Trail, a status accorded other legendary paths west such as the Oregon Trail and the route of Lewis and Clark.

Williams and his fellow riders expect a tough trip, even with the 100-mile individual rides reduced to more reasonable 5-mile stints in the saddle. Temperatures in the Midwest plains reached 100-plus in some areas and highways and barbed wire fences made the westward dash dangerous.

The record journey was 7 days, 17 hours set in March 1861 when President Lincoln's inaugural address was dispatched to the gold fields.

Plenty of pennies in local area despite reported national shortfall

TWIN FALLS — There is no penny hoarding in Twin Falls, according to local bankers.

Curtis Eaton, president and chairman of the Twin Falls Bank and Trust, said he sees no signs of increased demand for pennies.

Kenneth Newman, vice president and manager of the Twin Falls branch of the First Security Bank of Idaho, said some hoarding appeared to be getting started a few months ago, but the price of copper has fallen since then.

Thursday, the price of copper was about 90 cents a pound, Newman said, the price would have to reach about $1.00 a pound, before a pound of pennies would be worth more than $1. But that didn't stop someone from calling the bank a few months ago asking to buy $5,000 worth of pennies, he said.

The bank refused to sell that many pennies, Newman said, when fears of a shortage first surfaced several months ago, the Federal Reserve told banks not to sell pennies except to customers who use them in their normal course of business.

Newman said he can't understand why someone would want to invest in pennies anyway. "You can still make close to 10 percent on a long-term savings account," he said. The price of copper would have to get above $1.60 a pound before a penny hoarder would start making any profit. And while waiting for the price of copper to soar, he asked, where is a person going to put $5,000 worth of pennies?

Workers hit by radiation

BUCHANAN, N.Y. (UPI) — A broken cable attached to a nuclear measuring device caused two workers to sustain excessive radiation at the Indian Point No. 3 nuclear power plant in New York.

The employees were exposed to 5.7 and 4.5 rems, respectively. The NRC limits radiation to 3 rems over a three-month period and, in jobs like these held by the two workers, 12 rems over 12 months.

Why Have New Yorkers Donated $151,570 to Frank Church's Re-Election Campaign?

Could it be in return for Mr. Church's 1975 support for the massive taxpayer bailout of New York City, the bankrupt bastion of the Eastern Liberal Establishment?

Could it be in return for Mr. Church's critical vote to give away our Panama Canal, and to pay your tax dollars to Panama to take it? (Church's vote helped bail out New York's big banks from their shaky loans to Marxist Panamanian dictator, Omar Torrijos.)

Could it be to keep Mr. Church in the Senate because when the chips are down, New Yorkers know his vote can always be counted for big-spending, budget-busting programs?

Could it even be due to the extremely favorable coverage Mr. Church receives for his very liberal voting record from Idaho's largest newspaper, the New York-based Idaho Statesman?

Or, could it be that New Yorkers know that New York never had a better friend than Frank Church?

Regardless of why Frank Church has been lavishly rewarded by New Yorkers, Idaho citizens need to know that Mr. Church has already taken $151,570 from people who live more than 2,000 miles away from Idaho.

$151,570 is an awful lot of money! New Yorkers had to have reasons to give such a sum to a Senator supposed to represent Idaho, but what are they...

ONLY FRANK CHURCH KNOWS FOR SURE!

Anyone But Church (ABC) Project is a citizens' group with more than 3,000 supporters right here in Idaho who bring you this message because they believe Idaho voters need to know why such money has been poured into Mr. Church's campaign coffers.

Script telling who shot J.R. stolen

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The Los Angeles Herald Examiner announced Thursday the newspaper has acquired a copy of the stolen script that reveals who shot J.R. Ewing, the principal character in the "Dallas" TV series.

It was revealed Wednesday that someone had broken into the MGM Studios offices of Lorimar Productions, in suburban Culver City, and stole several "Dallas" scripts which might contain the identity of the fictional character who took a pot shot at J.R.

The detective investigating the theft now wants to talk to the publishers of the Herald Examiner, who called a news conference to discuss their acquisition.

J.R. would-be-killer has become a cause celebre throughout the United States and England since the Texas billionaire was shot down on the series' final show of the season last March.

A very real crime, however, was committed earlier this month when the office of the show's executive story editor, Arthur Lewis, was burgled, and the closely-guarded scripts for the fall season taken.

A spokesman for Lorimar said Thursday, "We've already learned that the thief is trying to sell the scripts. Our offices have heard from several national newsmen which deal in scandal, saying they've been approached and offered the scripts for a large sum of money."

But the Lorimar spokesman appeared to be unperturbed by the theft. "Even if the thieves do sell the scripts and the identity of the guilty party is revealed, we wouldn't comment or deny its accuracy."

"There are still enough machinations in the plot of 'Dallas' to intrigue our audiences."

"The scene revealing the identity of J.R.'s assailant has not been filmed yet, and there's no reason why the culprit couldn't be changed around in the event there is a premature revelation of the would-be-killer."

Daughter of famous spy entered same line of work

The renowned spy Mata Hari had a daughter, Bjinda McLeod. She, too, was a spy—a double spy. A triple spy, even. She spied for the Japanese in Java. She spied for the United States. And she spied for the Indonesian underground. After World War II, she spied in China and in Korea. I don't know who paid her by that time. Maybe everybody. It gets pretty mixed up. But as was her mother, she was caught and shot.

LIVING HIGH

Q. Whereabouts in this country do people live year-round at the highest altitude?
A. On White Mountain in California. It's 14,246 feet. The White Mountain High-Altitude Research Station of the University of California operates high on its side.

Among suicides, the men outnumber the women by three to one.

Q. How big was the biggest turtle ever?
A. About 11 feet long and a dozen feet wide at the flipper. Long extinct, that one. It was called the archelon.

Q. What's the epithet on William Shakespeare's tomb?

ALCOHOLICS

Statistics show the highest incidence of alcoholism occurs among individuals in the 34 to 36 year old age bracket. Oil industry seeks wider land access

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — The oil industry needs greater access for development of domestic oil and gas, the president of the American Petroleum Institute said Thursday.

Much of the oil and gas left in the country and most of the shale oil and coal that could be used for synthetic fuels is on millions of acres of federal lands in Alaska, offshore on the east and west coasts and in the Rocky Mountains, Charles DiBona said in an interview.

"What we're saying is that you can't lock that up," DiBona said. "We want to continue to produce oil and gas in this country and we simply have to be able to go into those areas."

"You can't lock up those lands and then expect to see the decline in production stopped," DiBona said.

DiBona offered that suggestion as one of several alternative actions he said could result in a reduction of as much as 50 percent in oil imports by 1985.

The nation also needs to double its use of coal, to permit all of the nuclear plants in licensing to go on line, and to develop synthetic fuels, he said.

Such actions would increase domestic production to the point where the nation would be able to cut daily imports from the current level of about 8 million barrels to 4 million to 5 million by 1990.

"The government is not asking to release them without a price," DiBona said. "The government should be compensated for use of any of these lands by the industry. But they simply have to make them available."

On other subjects, he said Americans have an adequate supply of gasoline.

"We have enough stocks of gasoline in the United States," said DiBona. "We've got close to 40 million barrels of gasoline more than this time last year. It's an all-time record for this time of year."

He attributed that mainly to conservation efforts by the public, which he said has used about 10 percent less than last year.

"There's very substantial conservation on the part of public response to higher prices," DiBona said.

"We're still on the razor's edge of supply in the sense that any one of the major suppliers from which we import could suddenly supply us less."

Potts appeal rejected, execution set next week

ATLANTA (UPI) — Federal Judge William C. Kelley Thursday rejected a condemned killer Jack Potts' latest bid to avoid execution next week.

A federal judge in Macon, Ga., hearing a similar appeal filed on Potts' behalf by other death row inmates, took the case under advisement.

Potts' attorney, Joe Nurse, said he would appeal immediately to the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans.

Potts, 35, who insisted he was not "loving" with the courts with his off-again, on-again appeals, is scheduled to be executed next Thursday.

Potts originally was to have been put to death June 5, but on the eve of his execution he decided to appeal and O'Kelley granted him a stay. Two days later he was back in court to say he didn't want the stay and wanted only to die in peace.

O'Kelley's voice was edged with impatience when Potts again

All quiet on the Thai front

MAK MUN, Thailand (UPI) — Vietnamese invaders pulled back across the Thai frontier into Cambodia Thursday and Thai soldiers settled in for an uneasy truce, peering over trenches at the 600-200 yards away in expectation of fresh attacks.

At the same time, Thai protesting the Vietnamese incursion gathered outside the Vietnamese Embassy in Bangkok where Hanoi Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach was making an unscheduled visit. They chanted, "Dog Eater, Go Home."

The 150 protesters carried banners reading, "Big Mouth Eating Refugee Food," and "You Beat A Few French, You Beat A Few Americans. Thai People Will Crush You For Good."

The situation is that we have defeated the forces and pushed them back to Cambodian territory," battlefront commander Col. Prachak Savaranchit told reporters.

But at Mak Mun two miles inside Thailand, Thai army commanders said about 10,000 fresh Hanoi troops were massing along a 50-mile front and they expected clashes there.

"We expect the Vietnamese will launch new attacks against Phnom Chat in the next few days because the Vietnamese are moving more forces into the area," Prachak said.

The area pinpointed by the regimental commander is controlled by the Khmer Rouge.

Many of the Vietnamese troops were using the same American-made weapons, captured during the North Vietnamese takeover of South Vietnam and Saigon in April 1975.

Soviets asked to end conflict

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United States Thursday moved firmly in Washington and Bangkok in an effort to get Vietnamese armed forces "to cease and desist" their military attacks on Thailand.

Soviet Ambassador Anatoly Dobrynin was summoned to the State Department and asked to urge the Kremlin-backed Hanoi government to end its intervention.

In Bangkok, U.S. Ambassador Morton Abramowitz met with Vietnamese Foreign Minister Nguyen Duy Trinh to express "deep concern" at the Vietnamese attacks on Cambodian refugee camps on the Thai side of the border.

State Department spokesman Tym Reston said the United States was giving priority consideration to a Thai request for immediate shipments of ammunition, artillery and small arms in view of the tense border situation.

The purpose of the Dobrynin summons, the spokesman said, "was to talk to the Soviets and to urge them to urge the Hanoi government to be restrained in its behavior and cease and desist from further attacks by its armed forces on the territory of Thailand."

Poisoner denies charge, but asks for speedy execution

HOUSTON (UPI) — A man sentenced to die for poisoning his young son's Halloween candy to collect insurance money Thursday requested and received an early execution date.

State District Judge Frank Price scheduled Ronald Clark O'Bryan, 35, to die by lethal injection on Aug. 8. O'Bryan appeared in the Price court for formal sentencing after exhausting regular appeals.

On June 2 the U.S. Supreme Court rejected the last, regular appeal — by O'Bryan's lawyers. They were expected to seek other appeal routes.

O'Bryan told Price he still maintained his innocence.

"The case was 100 percent circumstantial, not in fact or applicable law, but rather in speculation, accusations and the intense need for a scapegoat," said O'Bryan, who promised to trust his case to God.

"I now must appeal to a higher authority and trust they will see through what the court calls the dispensing of justice, when in actuality it is the dispensing of injustice in the grandest form, the taking of a human life."

O'Bryan was convicted in 1975 of the Halloween 1974 killing of his son, Timothy, 8. Police said O'Bryan gave candy to his son in order to collect $31,000 in insurance.

Witnesses said similar pieces of candy were given to O'Bryan's daughter and other neighborhood children. They were not harmed.

Bride says sexual torture keyed need to kill husband

LYNDON, Kan. (UPI) — A bride of one year portrayed at her murder trial Thursday both as a woman tortured sexually by her man, who married and as a woman who deliberately planned the Christmas killing of her husband.

Deborah Davis, 22, sobbed quietly as her defense attorney told the court the husband she admits killing allegedly had forced her to have an abortion at the age of 18.

The attorney also said Ms. Davis' husband had "stuck pins in her breasts," used a cattle prod to punish her and had shackled her in a hole near their Overbrook, Kan. farm.

But it was not as a victim but as cold-blooded killer that prosecutor Michael Hines described Ms. Davis, charged with shooting her husband, James Currutt, 38, in the head as he lay asleep in the couple's bed.

Hines said in his opening statement that Ms. Davis had talked with others about sexual abuse that allegedly began a month before the killing and allegedly had asked a neighbor to help her kill Currutt. Hines said that indicated the killing was willful, deliberate and premeditated.

"Evidence will show Ms. Davis planned—thought about, set up, and eventually killed her husband," Hines told the six woman, six-man jury.

But Ms. Davis attorney, state Sen. Elwaine Pomeroy, said his client was an impressionable teen-ager from Hinsburg, Mo., who arrived in Overbrook in 1975 to fulfill a dream of living self-sufficiently on a family farm.

Instead, Pomeroy said, she found total domination by Currutt, who forced her to get a job and surrender the money. Pomeroy said the defendant would testify that the sexual abuse by Currutt began on her 18th birthday and resulted in a pregnancy Currutt made her end with an unwanted abortion.

The defense attorney said Ms. Davis married Currutt in May 1979, partially because she was afraid to back out and partially because she hoped he would change his ways.

Governor disclaims fears

TMI plans radioactive krypton venting

HARRISBURG, Pa. (UPI) — Gov. Dick Thornburgh said today that this weekend's scheduled venting of radioactive krypton gas from Three Mile Island was safe, and he would visit the nuclear plant as a measure of confidence in the operation.

"I want to take this opportunity to reaffirm my own personal conviction that we have nothing to lose from the venting, that no one should change work or recreational plans during that process," said Thornburgh.

The venting has been a controversial aspect of the decontamination of Three Mile Island since the utility, Metropolitan Edison Co., first proposed it last November.

Thornburgh said, however, he did not expect any civil disorders or people to flee their homes because of the venting. Previously, some public officials—and worried citizens had predicted violence and a mass exodus during the venting.

The proposal was approved by the federal Nuclear Regulatory Commission June 12, and the NRC today denied a request from a coalition of anti-nuclear groups, Three Mile Island Legal Fund, to reconsider its decision.

Members of the Legal Fund said they would go to court in Washington Friday to request an injunction against the venting. The Legal Fund said there are dangerous aspects of the plan that weren't given full consideration in the approval.

The venting of 57,000 curies of krypton-85 from the reactor containment building was proposed Nov. 13 as a means of starting a swift decontamination of the interior of the structure that houses the crippled Three Mile Island nuclear furnace.

That generator was where, on March 28, 1979, there was a temporary breakdown in the cooling system that keeps the uranium-fueled reactor core from dangerously overheating and sending radiation into the atmosphere.

Thornburgh said he has been confident in the venting process on a consensus of some pro-nuclear and anti-nuclear organizations which certified the operation as safe.

The venting was scheduled to begin at 8 a.m. Saturday and last from 2 to 4 weeks. In addition to Thornburgh, Reps. Robert Walker and Don Ritter were also scheduled to be present at the beginning of the process.

Met-Ed—Vice President Robert Arnold said he would move his wife and two children into a house trailer beside Three Mile Island Friday and stay there for the duration of the venting to express his confidence in the safety of the project.

At Families conference

Catholics say coalition votes are unauthorized

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The two Roman Catholic members of the largest interest group coalition in the White House Conference on Families dropped out of the association Thursday, accusing it of opposing church-supported recommendations.

The U.S. Catholic Conference and the National Conference of Catholic Charities charged delegates from the Coalition for the White House Conference on Families were told to oppose church-supported stands on abortion and other subjects at the Minneapolis conference.

"It assumes a public position in opposition to that of some of its members," Lally said in announcing the withdrawal.

He said both the U.S. Catholic Conference, the action arm of the nation's Roman Catholic Bishops, and the National Conference of Catholic Charities would continue to support the White House Conference itself but would no longer work with the coalition.

The 54-member coalition represents diverse interest groups such as the American Red Cross, the National Association of Social Workers, the National PTA, the National Council of Churches, the National Organized Woman's League, Planned Parenthood and the Synagogue Council of America.

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Richard Pryor was removed from a critical list Thursday and doctors encouraged that the comedian's severely burned upper torso was accepting skin grafts, upgraded his condition to serious.

A spokesman for Sherman Oaks Community Hospital, where Pryor, 39, was rushed earlier this month suffering from third degree burns, stressed the status change was tentative and could be downgraded again if complications were observed.

License lapse worries him

GLEN BURNIE, Md. (UPI)— One of the Americans being held hostage in Iran wants his driver's license renewed.

He says he is "in no position" to obtain the forms needed to renew his Maryland driver's license, but he wrote to ask state officials to bend the rules and give him a new license anyway.

L. Bruce Laingen, U.S. charge d'affaires at the American Embassy in Tehran, sent a letter dated June 6 and postmarked Tehran to the Maryland Motor Vehicle Administration saying he does not want his driver's license to expire while he is away.

"I noticed ... that it's due to expire on Aug. 6," his letter said. "Since I am in no position to obtain the blank forms required for renewal, is it possible for you to act on the basis of this request?"

The Motor Vehicle Administration said yes in a letter sent Wednesday to the Foreign Ministry in Tehran, where Laingen and two other Americans are being held.

It also sent a photograph of a Christmas tree in the control room of MVA headquarters that holds a sign saying, "TII Our Hostages Come Home."

Laingen, of Bethesda, Md., is among the 53 Americans who have been held hostage by Iranian militants since Nov. 4.

"It says something about the spirit over there," said MVA spokesman Steve Horvitz. "Here's a guy who has been held captive for eight months and is under a tremendous strain and he's worried about his driver's license."

Motor Vehicle Administrator William T.S. Bricker said the letter that state law for military personnel allows Laingen to present his driver's license 30 days after his return and it will be renewed.

While the law only applies to the military, Bricker said he believes it can be applied to Laingen as well.

Newspaper gives look at hostages' daily life

By United Press International

A Tehran newspaper gave a rare glimpse Thursday of the living conditions of the 53 American hostages.

The report said Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini asks about them daily.

Reports from Tehran quoted the newspaper Donyayeh Iran as saying the hostages — in their 26th day of captivity — eat American food, read the latest U.S. newspapers, write letters home and make periodic telephone calls as long as 15 minutes to their families.

"Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini inquires about their health and conditions," the newspaper said.

The newspaper mentioned comparisons made by President Carter with the capture of the late Italian prime minister, Aldo Moro, who was kidnapped and later killed by the Red Brigades terrorists.

The Moslem militants have not killed their hostages nor have they asked for a ransom, the newspaper said.

"Where have you heard that a drop of blood has fallen from the nose of any one of the hostages?" Donyayeh Iran asked.

It said, "The hostages are served traditional American foods and have access to English, French, Spanish and German books and the latest American magazines and newspapers."

"They enjoy the Iranian and international radio and television news and do Swedish exercises daily. They are consistently under medical care."

"The hostages receive their mail regularly (sometimes delivered by the International Red Cross) and they write and send letters to their relatives."

"Once in a while, they have telephone conversations with their families as long as 15 minutes each, long distance to America."

The hostages captured in the Americas embassy last Nov. 4 were dispersed to 14 cities around Iran after the unsuccessful American rescue attempt, according to the revolutionaries.

NATO wants Soviet pullout

ANKARA, Turkey (UPI)— NATO ministers, led by Secretary of State Edmund Muskie, bluntly told the Soviet Union Thursday that its invasion of Afghanistan shook the foundation of detente and only a "total withdrawal" of Russian troops could resolve the East-West crisis.

Speaking at the close of NATO's two-day ministerial meeting, Muskie said the 15 allies had agreed unanimously on the need for an "immediate, unconditional and total withdrawal of foreign troops from Afghanistan."

The nine-page final communique said, "The Soviet invasion of Afghanistan has done serious damage to detente."

But the NATO members did not delineate any action if the Russians did not withdraw the estimated 85,000 troops in Afghanistan, NATO Secretary General Joseph Luns said the 15 member countries did not decide to aid the Afghan "national liberation fighters," as Muskie described them.

Muskie, who conference sources said made a positive impression on his NATO colleagues, said NATO had not been "seduced" by reports of partial troop pullouts and in fact "there has been evidence of an increase in Soviet troop strength."

Although Muskie described the meeting as "comprehensive and successful," conference sources reported continuing differences among alliance members concerning the role of the Palestinians in Middle East peace negotiations, arms control and the future of NATO's divided southern flank.

Muskie opposed a French-proposed draft of the final communique including a reference to the need for "Palestinian self-determination," which he succeeded in having stricken and replaced by a bland assertion about NATO guaranteeing the "legitimate rights of the Palestinian people."

Luns said NATO will move ahead immediately on early stages of deployment of 672 medium-range nuclear missiles but the final communique noted NATO would be open to practical measures to restore a "balanced situation" in nuclear forces.

Conference sources said Greece and Turkey failed to make any substantial progress toward resolving their disputes; Greece's return to the military wing of NATO, from which it withdrew in 1974 after the Turkish intervention in Cyprus, was still a long way off, the sources said.

In a separate communique the NATO foreign ministers unanimously condemned Iran for its "flagrant and illegal holding of U.S. diplomatic personnel" but took no specific action against the Iranian government.

Kremlin tactical shift trades rifles for tanks

By RICHARDS, EHLICH

KABUL, Afghanistan (UPI)— The Kremlin is pulling out Soviet tanks, heavy weapon units and missiles from Afghanistan only because they are useless in fighting Afghan guerrillas, U.S. military analysts say.

Six months after Soviet forces invaded Afghanistan with 800 tanks and installed the pro-Soviet government of President Babrak Karmal Dec. 27, Soviet military planners realize what they needed was light infantry to fight a counter-guerrilla war.

The much-ballyhooed Soviet withdrawal of one division of troops and 100 tanks is seen as part of this Soviet change in strategy. While some tanks are pulling out, most of the rest sit in the sun — of little use in a war where guerrillas attack from steep rocky mountains and then fade into the night.

The U.S. analysts say the Soviet withdrawal is merely a change of tactics and types of forces needed to battle the rebels. The heavy units are replaced with ground troops who can be dropped into remote trouble spots by helicopters, they said.

Soviet casualties total about 10,000 men — including about 1,000 to 2,000 who died fighting the Moslem guerrillas, U.S. analysts say.

The Soviets also have lost about 800 armored vehicles, including tanks and personnel carriers, they say.

"The insurgency is stronger now than when the Soviets first invaded. And politically the Soviets have not been able to establish broad-based popularity for the Afghan regime," one analyst said.

He said the Russians have been unable to prevent rebel infiltration.

"The Russians hold Kabul and most communication lines, but the rebels are now better at mining the roads," he said.

not been "seduced" by reports of partial troop pullouts and in fact "there has been evidence of an increase in Soviet troop strength."

Although Muskie described the meeting as "comprehensive and successful," conference sources reported continuing differences among alliance members concerning the role of the Palestinians in Middle East peace negotiations, arms control and the future of NATO's divided southern flank.

Muskie opposed a French-proposed draft of the final communique including a reference to the need for "Palestinian self-determination," which he succeeded in having stricken and replaced by a bland assertion about NATO guaranteeing the "legitimate rights of the Palestinian people."

Analysis

"And more Afghan army troops have deserted to the guerrillas. The Afghan army is in shambles," he said.

The Soviet solution to these problems is to use sledgehammers to swat flies, he said.

"If the Soviets draw fire from a few houses in the countryside, they blow up the whole village," the analyst said.

"They kill a lot of civilians that way, which is bad for the Afghan morale. It's counterproductive."

"And all the insurgents get away. The Soviets hope to break the people's will to resist by bombing villages, but this only hardens them."

So though the Russians have not yet "pacified" Afghanistan, they are not losing ground. If they want to secure a region, they just move in force, one analyst said.

On the other hand, the rebels are improving their insurgency but are still not winning the war.

"The rebels lack — except for Islam as a unifying force — the ability to carry out tribal elements. They're scattered from Pakistan to Iran."

"This is an advantage to the Soviets. It's not like Vietnam where the Viet Cong had a unifying ideology and China supplying them with massive weaponry. However, their will to fight is great. They're warlike mountain people used to carrying firearms. But they lack political direction and modern weapons. The rebels can't afford armor. They don't have supply lines."

"But when you consider what is against them, their insurgency is impressive."

Luns said a dispute between the United States and West Germany over Bonn's proposal of a three-year freeze on Soviet and NATO nuclear missile deployment in Europe had been allayed.

Muskie left Ankara immediately after the conference for Kuala Lumpur where he will represent the United States at the two-day meeting of the Association of South East Asian Nations.

'Plotters' shot in Iran

By United Press International

A firing squad executed two Iranian army officers Thursday for allegedly plotting to overthrow Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini.

Revolutionaries also arrested five persons on charges of planning high-level assassinations, reports from Tehran said.

Iran said its artillery destroyed four Iranian military positions in renewed border fighting.

The reports of increased anti-regime activity within Iran coincided with a machine gun attack at dawn Thursday on the headquarters of the Mujahideen Khalq, a leftist group which was condemned by Khomeini Wednesday — when he scored "urban infiltrators" and other politicians seeking to undermine the Islamic revolutionary regime.

Khomeini's criticism seemed aimed at political opponents of President Abolhasan Bani-Sadr, a moderate who has said he favors release of the 53 American hostages, who were in their 26th day of captivity.

"Nine people in all were reported executed Thursday, including a woman accused of having illegal relations with government officials during the reign of ex-shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi."

The Kuwaiti news agency KUNA reported from Tehran that two army officers — identified by the official PARS news agency as Gen. Mohsen Zadegan and Lt. Abbas Gholi — were shot to death by firing squad from an armed forces plot, dubbed "Operation Ouysham," which sought to depose Khomeini and reinstate the shah.

Jerome police request their chief's firing

JEROME — Jerome Mayor Marshall Evehart said Thursday he anticipates some resolution of a police leadership controversy by Saturday. Police and council sources confirmed that five members of the city's seven-man force indicated Wednesday they might resign if the council does not fire Police Chief James McGowan.

The ultimatum was reportedly issued during a closed-door meeting between the council and the officers Wednesday night.

The officers claim McGowan is responsible for a low department morale, and that he has consulted primarily with one man, Sgt. Del Low, since accepting the position in March. Evehart declined comment on the Wednesday-meeting, saying only that he expects further developments before the weekend. He said a meeting may be called at which council members as observers will not participate.

Councilman Ralph Peters confirmed that McGowan will call a meeting of department personnel to outline his objectives to the men. Peters said the ultimatum Wednesday was not unanimous. And he added that councilmen were ruffled by Thursday morning radio news accounts implying that reconciliation between the officers and the new chief is no longer possible.

"There sure are some factions at work here somewhere," Peters said. "I didn't think after the meeting the situation was all that bad."

The five officers are Capt. Ernie Coats, Detective Don Barkley, Andy Hines, Dale Rettig and Darrel Cameron. Coats was quoted as saying the men would rather not comment on the meeting until the council takes some action.

McGowan dismissed two other officers in April for what he termed "general incompatibility." The two, Jay Burk and Richard Haynes, said McGowan accused them of undermining the department.

A third officer, Harvey Hines, resigned June 5 and issued a strongly worded statement to the council criticizing McGowan's job performance.

Donehue hearing decision continued 2 weeks for more expert testimony

By RON ZELLAR
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Medical witnesses said Thursday a Jerome physician may have been unable to stop seeking sexual contact with young boys even though he knew such conduct was illegal.

Boise psychologist J. Fred Hurst and Salt Lake City psychiatrist Dr. Louis Moechnig testified for the defense in the first day of a sanity hearing for William C. Donehue.

Donehue, 30, is charged with 11 counts of law behavior for allegedly trying to stimulate 14-year-old male patients, and with one count involving a 19-year-old male.

Donehue practiced family medicine and gynecology in Jerome from December 1979 until April.

He pleaded not guilty by reason of insanity during an arraignment before 8th District Court Judge Theron Ward June 17 in Jerome. The hearing Thursday was continued to allow two more specialists to appear.

The leadoff witnesses portrayed Donehue as a man with extremely high intelligence who did well in school but suffers from incomplete psychological development.

Moechnig, senior consultant at LDS Hospital in Salt Lake City, testified that he examined Donehue twice and determined that he is a bisexual with a preference for males.

He said early family experiences, including a father who praised athletic ability in contrast to Donehue's academic achievements, may have triggered a halt in the defendant's social development.

In the course of the examinations, Moechnig said Donehue revealed homosexual contacts in his high school years, at a college fraternity and in the Navy, where he accepted an early-release rather than face a military trial.

Psychiatrists do not consider homosexual activities between peers evidence of mental deficiency, he said.

Donehue also revealed instances of sexual contact with juveniles, however, and faces sentencing in Ohio after pleading guilty to third-degree sexual assault involving a 12-year-old patient during his residency there.

Moechnig and Hurst testified separately that, in their opinion, Donehue suffers from pedophilia, a condition in which adults compulsively involve children in their sexual activity.

Hurst said he conducted several psychological evaluations, and found Donehue's intelligence quotient to be over 140, or within the upper 2-3 percent of the United States population.

Donehue's attention span, concentration, memory and cognitive skills are all normal, Hurst said. Yet he exhibits a complete absence of mood or depression regarding possible prison sentences in two states.

The two witnesses advised against a prison term, noting that inmates convicted of sex offenses with minors often become the targets of homosexual harassment while incarcerated.

Moechnig said the negative impacts of a prison sentence might prevent Donehue from ever advancing beyond his psychological barrier. Instead, he recommended psychoanalysis coupled with drugs to curb the defendant's sex drive, and aversion therapy to modify his sexual behavior.

Both witnesses said it is conceivable that Donehue could improve enough after three or four years of therapy to return safely to private practice.

Moechnig, however, suggested that Donehue channel his talents into research or pathology. If acquitted, such fields, he said, would allow him to perform useful functions while undergoing court-appointed therapy.

Jerome County Prosecutor Eugene Fredericksen noted in questioning that a fine line exists between antisocial behavior and the "mental disease or defect" which is cause for acquittal.

He noted that homosexuality has been removed by psychiatrists from the list of mental diseases. Yet pedophilia, which can include homosexual acts, remains on the list.

Moechnig said pedophilia involves acts done by one person to another, rather than by mutual consent. He said an age difference of 10 years or more is common, although the key factor is the victim's emotional immaturity.

In response to a question from Judge Ward, who will decide the sanity issue, Moechnig said the 19-year-old man may have been sufficiently immature to meet the definition of pedophilia.

Conversely, he said, any of the three 14-year-olds cited in the 11 new count charges could be mature enough to raise doubts about mental disease.

Fredericksen and defense attorney Greg Fuller estimated the final two witnesses — one each for the prosecution and defense — will be able to appear in 10 days to two weeks.

Hailey recall vote July 29

HAILEY — The Hailey City Council Tuesday scheduled a recall election July 29 for Councilman Wordell Rainey.

A recall petition aimed at removing Rainey from office was certified by City Clerk Constance Ellway last week.

Petition organizers charge that Rainey and two other councilmen have taken arbitrary stands that caused the developers of Northridge Subdivision to sue the city for $1.5 million.

Rainey vowed he will fight the recall, noting that he was elected on a platform stating that he would oppose plans for a new shopping center on the Northridge site.

Father-Donald Fraser resigned last month prior to the filing of a petition in April for what he termed "general incompatibility." The two, Jay Burk and Richard Haynes, said McGowan accused them of undermining the department.

A third officer, Harvey Hines, resigned June 5 and issued a strongly worded statement to the council criticizing McGowan's job performance.

Region IV

Pedestrian plan gets aid priority

By STEPHANIE SCHOROW
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A plan to improve conditions for pedestrian shoppers in Ketchum was given top funding priority by the Regional IV Development Association Thursday.

In its regular June meeting, the association prioritized requests by five agencies for funding by the Economic Development Administration's 304 grant program. The EDA has about $200 million matching federal funds available for Idaho programs, according to Tom Fleming, association executive director.

The requests considered by the association were:

• Top priority: A request for $20,000 by the city of Ketchum to begin building — a downtown pedestrian system that would include sidewalks, street furniture, landscaping and public lighting. Sun Valley/Ketchum Chamber and Resort Association director James Gray said the money would merely begin improvements, which he felt were necessary to lure more shoppers to Ketchum.

• Second priority: The Wood River Resource Conservation and Development Council has applied for $20,000 for a feasibility study to determine if Gooding and Lincoln counties and the Blinco Magic Valley Meal Packing Co. may use waste material for energy production to save natural gas.

• Third priority: The city of Shoshone has requested $12,000 for a feasibility study to determine its business and industrial development possibilities and outline a development strategy. This application was turned down by the state last year, and the city is resubmitting its request.

• Fourth priority: The Sun-

Valley/Ketchum Chamber Resort Association is asking for $20,000 to develop a marketing plan utilizing particularly rail systems, and trade shows to increase tourism in the area.

• Fifth priority: The Iron Ltd. has requested $36,000 for a feasibility study of transportation systems, particularly rail systems, for commuters and tourists to the Ketchum/Sun Valley area.

The development association will now send the requests to the state economic development administration. About 75 percent of the funds are provided by the federal government, about 25 are provided by the state.

The state's decisions will be announced next month.

In other business, the association set the annual dues assessment to the counties at 5 cents per person in the county plus 30¢ — the same rate as last year. The 1980 dues for Twin Falls County are $2,621; Jerome, $20; Blaine, $705; Camas, $343; Cassia, $1,225; Gooding, $823; Lincoln, $408; and Mindoka $1,210. The association's total budget is $9,387.

The association also gave favorable comment to a variety of grant and loan requests by other organizations to federal and state sources, including:

- $27,000 for South Central Community Action Agency Food and Nutrition program; $1.5 million for the drainage project in Burley;
- $35,900 for a one-megawatt generator which the Canyon Springs Company that would utilize the Perrine Coulees;
- $1,042 for a Department of Health and Welfare Injury Prevention Demonstration Project; and $29,600 for land acquisition for the Jerome County Airport.

The association now passes these requests on to the appropriate funding authority.

Will include several natural energy sources

Solar conference Saturday

TWIN FALLS — Although it is called a solar energy conference, the title may be misleading.

Solar energy, according to the Solar Energy Association of Idaho, includes wind, water, wood, biomass, alcohol and sun power.

Like other alternative energy advocates, the group points out that wind, rain and plants will not exist without the sun.

The year-old association will hold its first annual conference Saturday at the College of Southern Idaho under the sponsorship of its Magic Valley chapter.

Chapter President Earl Brown of Twin Falls said the public is encouraged to attend and participate.

"We will have a lot of information on several different topics," he said.

"We're a non-profit organization that has been established to promote and educate people on alternative energy sources, particularly solar. But in our bylaws solar is defined as just about anything remotely related to the sun.

"That may be stretching it a bit, but we wouldn't have rain if not for the sun evaporating water into clouds."

Discussions, speeches, workshops, displays, movies and a tour will make up the event, which lasts from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. in the Fine Arts Building.

Registration begins at 8:30 a.m. The cost is $3 for adults and $2 for students and is free for children and SEAI members. To join the association contact the association.

In addition to a number of speakers, the conference has scheduled the following events:

- Five films, which will be shown throughout the day on different aspects of solar and wind power.
- Two possible tours — one to an underground house in Twin Falls and one to a solar house in Jerome.
- Displays of commercial solar energy systems.

Workshops on how to finance alternative energy projects and on legal issues.

Regarding the workshops, Brown said, "Part of what we're trying to do is determine some direction for the association and if members want to get involved with recommending or formulating legislation."

He said one workshop will discuss a proposal before the Idaho Public Utilities Commission that would allow power companies to loan money to customers for solar installations.

Starting off the conference Saturday morning will be the keynote speaker, Bob Lorenzen of the Eugene (Ore.) Water and Electric Board, who will discuss how Oregon has handled solar legislation, such as access laws.

Brown said the association is a grassroots organization, first mandated under a Department of Energy program.

Filer selects new principal

FILER — Filer High School's new principal will be Larry Roberts, elementary and high school principal at Harrison, Idaho.

Roberts has signed a contract with the Filer School District and is expected to arrive in about two weeks, Superintendent Ray Baker said Thursday.

The new administrator comes from the Kootenai-School District — in northern Idaho and has seven years of experience.

Also now confirmed is the new head teacher at Hollister Elementary School, Randy Rutledge of Lancaster, Calif., who recently received a master's degree in elementary administration.

By the end of the week, the district should also know who will be its new high school math and social studies teacher, Baker said.

Other positions to be filled are part-time secretary for the district and full-time clerk in the school board.

Here's a water story to wet the imagination

By DAVID MORRISSEY
Times-News writer

BOISE — It may just be a coincidence, said Russell Renk.

But Renk, a state environmental engineer with the Department of Health and Welfare, insists the story is true.

A Portland contractor he knows, who repairs private and public water systems, gave up drinking unprocessed water some five years ago.

"He was finding rats, and all sorts of things in water pipes," Renk said.

After becoming convinced impurities from the animals and other objects were finding their way into drinking water, the contractor gave up drinking "raw water."

"Now he only drinks water that's been processed or boiled, like in coffee or coles," Renk said.

And the result?

"Well, he hasn't been sick in those five years."

Renk is one of several state officials concerned over water quality this month, though most are hoping to find it less drastic way to avoid impure water than the course taken by the Portland contractor.

The cause for their concern is a July 1 deadline, under the federal Safe Drinking Water Act, for adoption of new water standards.

Under the act, all Idaho cities must adopt an ordinance requiring "cut-off" or "check-valve" devices which prevent contaminated water or bacteria from returning to the water supply once it has been discharged as waste.

Renk explained that when water pressure in a main water line decreases, creating a partial vacuum, it is those check valves which prevent discharged water from being pulled back into the drinking water supply.

A faulty water cut-off valve in a Meridian supermarket's storage room recently resulted in the contamination of that city's drinking water.

That incident could have been avoided if back-flow prevention devices had been installed, state officials insist.

The measure is a federal law, but is enforced in Idaho under regulations drafted by the 1977 state legislature. While those new regulations do not specifically apply to residential users, cities may include homeowners to abide by the regulations in some cases. Residential water users with yard sprinkler systems or who have private wells and are hooked up to city water supplies, could be required to install the cut-off devices, said Mike McSorley, coordinator of public water supplies for DHW.

So far, only about a dozen Idaho cities have complied with the new regulations, although many are in the process of drafting ordinances.

According to Renk, budget restrictions mean adoption of the new water quality procedures will take time. The city of Twin Falls is drafting a new ordinance and may meet the July 1 deadline, he said. But compliance throughout the Magic Valley may be no better than 20 percent of the region's municipalities by July 1, he added.

By the end of the year, "perhaps 80 percent" of the Magic Valley cities and towns will have the new ordinance, he said.

The state is not "pushing" for compliance by the July 1 deadline, especially in regard to smaller cities that may have limited money and technical resources, McSorley said.

Instead, the state agency is seeking understanding of the new regulations, and is sponsoring workshops and water testing schools, McSorley said.

According to Renk, the new regulations will apply to all water systems that have 10 or more connections. Among facilities likely to be covered by the new regulations are sewage treatment plants, chemical, oil and other industrial plants, hospitals and mortuaries.

'Sickout' staged at 18 dams in four Northwestern states

PORTLAND (UPI)—About 300 operators and maintenance personnel at 18 hydroelectric dams in four Pacific Northwest states staged "sickouts" Thursday.

"They were protesting a wage scale they say is below the promised comparable wage offered in private industry."

The personnel are non-union and have no official spokesman.

But one employee, Hank Wilson, Unmatta, Ore., told a Tri Cities television station, "wage comparability" was the key to the sickouts that is keeping 60 per cent of the personnel home this week.

"He said power rate people—those in private industry—as well as in government—periodically review all wages and try to assure Civil Service employees comparable wages with the private sector."

The federal wage freeze this year, however, placed a 7.02 per cent ceiling on increases, leaving the government workers an estimated $1.74 per hour behind their peers, according to Wilson.

All of the employees perform similar duties on some 30 public and private dams along the 1,100 mile Snake-Columbia river system and its tributaries that stretch—and wind through Montana, Idaho, Washington and Oregon before emptying into the Pacific Ocean.

U.S. Army Corps Spokesman John Ulrich, Portland, said there's nothing the government can do until at least Oct. 1, which is the end of the fiscal year, and even then it's a matter of how the president rules.

"Under the current wage statute, which the president has us operating under, he sets the figure. For federal employees that's the law. We've met that figure or seven per cent."

In the private sector, however, the wage ceiling is voluntary and therein lies the disparity.

Even with the wage-freeze explanation, an operator who asked that his name not be used, said the plans at this time call for the sickout to continue until midnight Sunday.

"The corps has pushed people to the point where we want to protest," he said. "The 4.66 per cent wage increase Monday (which brought the total for the year to the mandatory 7 per cent, according to Ulrich) triggered the sickout because the workers, a non-union group, don't negotiate their wages and expected about a 12 per cent hike."

Dams working with supervisory personnel only include Libby, Chief Joseph, Lower Granite, Little Goose, Lower Monumental, Ice Harbor, McNary, John Day, the Dalles and Bonneville.

All eight dams in the Willamette system are in service without maintenance personnel.

They are Detroit, Big Cliff, Green Peter, Foster, Cougar, Lookout Point, Dexter and Hills Creek.

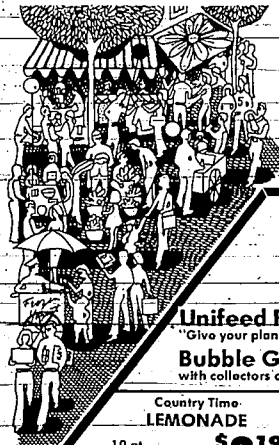

"The problem we've encountered so far is that the operators have no known spokesman or organizer," Corps spokesman Oral Dugger, Walla Walla district spokesman said.

"All we know at this time is what we read or hear in the media."

"It's a requirement of Civil Service that if they are sick they have to get a doctor's written excuse."

Grand Coulee Dam, the uppermost power producer in the system which is not under the Corps' jurisdiction, also had a sickout last weekend which ended by Monday.

Ulrich said a meeting was scheduled sometime Thursday at the St. Joseph dam between Seattle District personnel and operators.

Old No. 1246, a fixture at the Woodland Park Zoo since 1953, is being moved from its site to begin the journey to Grand Canyon National Park in Arizona. The locomotive is being taken out of retirement to become part of a historical railroad running from Williams, Ariz., to the park on a rebuilt stretch of the old Santa Fe Railroad.

Utah tax limit fans believe ballot possible

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — Supporters of a plan to enact a "Proposition 13" tax limitation measure in Utah say they have now gathered enough signatures to place the issue on the November ballot.

H. Austin Belnap and Mark Anderson, organizers of the Utah petition drive, Wednesday presented the documents to the secretary of state for verification of signatures. They said 57,000 names had been gathered, 3,000 more than would be needed to call for a referendum.

Under terms of the proposal, home appraisals in Utah would be rolled back to 1977 levels. Taxation of those houses would then be limited to 1 percent of their 1977 value.

Belnap said the measure includes a provision to account for inflation. Officials would be permitted to increase the appraised value of a house by up to 2 percent each year.

Analysis said the proposal would reduce property tax revenues in Salt Lake County by about one-half.

Tax rebels stepped up their efforts to impose a tax limitation law in Utah similar to California's Proposition 13 after property in Salt Lake County was reappraised in 1978. Since those homes had not been appraised for ten years, many house values rose dramatically, prompting complaints from residents that the reappraisal resulted in unfair and unrealistic property taxation.

Colorado forest fire traps recreationists near Eagle

EAGLE, Colo. (UPI) — A fire raged across more than 2,000 acres in White River National Forest Wednesday, charring 500 acres of spruce an hour and trapping a dozen outdoor recreationists, the U.S. Forest Service said.

George Morris, forest service spokesman, however said the trapped persons were not in danger. He said the fire was burning on both sides of a road they used to enter the forest and the group camped at higher ground overnight until the blaze moved away from the road.

"There is plenty of room for them from the fire," he said. "Our helicopter pilot talked to them earlier, and it was determined that there was no danger."

Meanwhile, Morris said about 200 firefighters from throughout the region arrived throughout the night to begin battling the blaze at dawn. He said no earlier attempts had been made to "extinguish" the blaze that started Wednesday afternoon in an inaccessible area between Emerald and Crescent lakes.

The Forest Service spokesman said the blaze posed no threat to private property.

Navy study pans MX submarine plan

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — A report compiled by the U.S. Navy has concluded that proposals to base the controversial MX missile on small submarines is seriously flawed and would delay deployment of the nuclear weapons system until at least 1992.

Brig. Gen. James P. McCarthy revealed the results of the study Wednesday in Salt Lake. Naval opposition to the submarine plan is even stronger than that voiced previously by the U.S. Department of Defense, he said.

The report concluded that basing the MX on light submarines is not technically feasible, would be more costly than a land-based system and would delay deployment for at least six years, the general said.

Opponents of President Carter's plan to locate 200 MX missiles in the Great Basin of Utah and Nevada suggested the plan as an alternative to a land-based system.

Called the Shallow Underwater Mobile mode, or SUM, the proposal would place missiles on small submarines which would patrol a 200-mile strip of water about 100 miles off the east and west coasts of the United States.

McCarthy said the SUM plan would require much larger subs than envisioned by proponents. He said the technology necessary to produce such submarines is still "problematic" and creates a "significant" technological risk.

In addition, the sea-based system would be more costly than hiding the missiles in concrete bunkers on the Great Basin, he said. Defense analysts estimate the land-based system would cost at least $33 billion presuming it is carried out according to present plans.

The submarine system could not begin to operate before 1992, the general said. Current plans for MX call for deployment of the first ten land-based missiles by 1986, with all 200 missiles operational by 1990.

Indian severance tax fought by oil firms

CHEYENNE, Wyo. (UPI) — Seven oil companies are seeking a federal court injunction to prevent the Arapahoe and Shoshone tribes from collecting severance taxes on minerals produced on the Wind River Reservation in west-central Wyoming.

The companies maintain in a motion filed this week in U.S. District Court that they should not have to pay the taxes until the U.S. Supreme Court decides the legality of a similar tax adopted by the Jicarilla Apache tribe in New Mexico.

They claim they cannot be assured of obtaining refunds if it turns out the tax is invalid.

The tribal councils of the Arapahoe and Shoshone adopted the tax in 1978 but it was not scheduled to take effect until April 20 of this year, with the first payment due July 20.

It amounts to one half of 1 percent of the well market value of all oil except tribal production.

Dear Abby

Adultery by another name

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
© Universal Press Syndicate
DEAR ABBY: I'm a healthy, scapable, easy-to-get-along-with 59-year-old widower whose wife died eight months ago.

I am a Catholic but haven't been to church in years and don't want to talk to a priest.

I am seeing a very attractive woman who is 58, never married and is still a virgin. She is apparently normal in all respects, enjoys kissing and heavy petting, but refuses to go all the way for religious reasons. She insists that her religion (also Catholic) does not allow her to complete the sex act without marriage, for to do so would be committing adultery. I know she is not holding out as a means of getting a husband.

I tried to explain that adultery is engaging in sex with a partner other than one's legal spouse, so as long as neither one of us is married she wouldn't be committing adultery. However, I can't seem to get through to her.

I am not the type to pick up girls at bars; neither would I go to a house of prostitution. I was married for 38 years and am a one-woman man. I don't want to marry yet, and perhaps I may never marry again, but I don't want to end my sex life while I am still able to enjoy it.

Is there anything in the Catholic religion that prohibits voluntary sex between unmarried adults?

DEAR PERPLEXED: PERPLEXED DEAR PERPLEXED: Yes, there are several Biblical injunctions against fornication. Read, for instance, the seventh chapter of 1 Corinthians.

DEAR ABBY: I understand that there are more psychiatrists in Beverly Hills, Calif., than plumbers. That seems incredible. Is it true? And if so, why?

DEAR CURIOUS: It's true. Their sicks are OK, but their heads are clogged up.

DEAR ABBY: Somewhere out there a couple is bringing home their newborn adopted baby. This letter is for the baby's new grandmothers:

I know you are happy for the couple, but you're having doubts about the baby's "real" or biological mother. I am that girl's mother.

It has been an agonizing ordeal for her as well as for us — her family. I made sure she ate properly, took her vitamins and iron and was cared for by the best doctors in our area.

We all knew from the beginning that giving up the baby for adoption was the right decision, but as the time drew closer to delivery, our selfishness got in the way and we wanted to keep the baby even though it would have been a hardship financially.

For a teen-ager, my daughter showed remarkable maturity and unselfish love for this child-to-have given it a mother and father through adoption. This is my first grandchild, and I will not be able to spoil it, but you can, so please love it enough for both of us. — A GRANDMOTHER

At Wit's End

He's older and perhaps wiser

By ERMA BOMBCEK
© Field Enterprises, Inc.
My son graduated from college last week.

As he swayed down the aisle looking for the world like a Supreme Court judge who needed a haircut, I couldn't help but reflect on the wisdom he had amassed in four years.

The very experience of being away from home and having control over his life had given him insights that would sustain him for the rest of his life.

FRESHMAN YEAR: Dirty underwear is unisex and even under the most ideal conditions (under the bed, covered by dust, in the back of a car) will not reproduce itself.

Classmates who owe you money drop out of school in their freshman year to get in touch with their feelings at Big Sur.

The first mouse in the dorm is "run" and gets your mind off a paper on "14th-Century Diplomacy." The second mouse is not as cute. The third mouse is not a given and the mouse is an incentive to clear the dishes off the table from September. SOPHOMORE YEAR: When you're wearing a car, you're taller, more attractive, and wittier than you are when you're just wearing your glasses.

Students who write their parents get numbered in the will. Them that don't are never quite sure.

Creative writing is not a required course for balancing your checkbook. The deposits should at all times exceed the withdrawals.

Acute ring-around-the-collar is always indicative of the presence of ring-around-the-neck.

JUNIOR YEAR: A freshman girl never stands so tall as when she slopes to do your laundry.

Pursue every ranch as if it were female, pregnant, and crazy to come home with you in your luggage.

Use a few big words once in awhile so your parents will think they're getting their money's worth.

SENIOR YEAR: Eighteen unpaid traffic tickets can stand between you and success.

Articles from the library sent to your home telling you that unless you return "Erotic Dreams and What They Mean" you will receive a blank diploma, can throw your mother into cardiac arrest.

No one who hasn't unpacked from his freshman year and used Play Doh to fix the plumbing ever got his room deposit back.

I cannot remember what he got the degree in... but he looked older and wiser somehow.

Now you know...

The licensing is the result of a site visit this week by Ed Burns, chief of the Bureau of Substance Abuse, to KVA's house and the Women's Crisis Center.

Full licensing will be issued to the two facilities to provide social model detoxification, intermediate care programs and outpatient services. The center is the only one in Magic Valley licensed to provide these services, Meyers said.

Weather remains in spotlight at Wimbledon

WIMBLEDON (UPI) — Drenching thunderstorms, lightning again made more jumpy on Wimbledon than rackets since Thursday, slowing the world's premier tennis tournament under a stream of water.

On four occasions play had to be stopped because of rain, bringing the number of weather stoppages for the week to eight. Before the heavy storms hit in mid-afternoon, though, former champion Jimmy Connors and Billie Jean King and Evonne Goolagong Cawley all scored straight sets victories to advance to the third round.

Of the 96 matches scheduled for the day, only 21 were completed. In four days, there have been only 113 contests finished, behind last year at this time and 96 less than in 1977, raising dark speculation that, for the first time since 1973, the tournament would have to be extended into a third week.

The start of play in the water festival now being dubbed Wimbledon was moved up two hours to noon Thursday (7 a.m. EDT) because of all the rain earlier in the week, but the opening match still couldn't begin until 12:40 because of more rain.

When they were able to take to the wet court, Connors, King and Goolagong wasted little time getting right back off. Connors, the third seed, required only an hour and 12 minutes to beat Sherwood Stewart, 6-0, 6-2, 6-1. King, seeded fifth among the women, disposed of Anne Smith, 6-3, 7-6 (7-3), in 1:16; and Goolagong—the fourth-seeded—routed fellow Australian Jenny Walker, 6-2, 6-2, in 46 minutes.

The only other seeded player able to finish an early match was No. 11 Greer Stevens of South Africa, and that was an accomplishment in itself. After being postponed two previous days because of rain and darkness, Stevens finally got in her opening round match by beating American Paula Smith, 6-1, 6-4.

In matches that were halted because of the day's third storm, second seed John McEnroe, isolated on Court 3, stood at 2-2 in the first set with young Australian Terry Rocaert, and Dick Stockton won the first set from Ilie Nastase, 6-4.

The rain that has plagued Britain for the last few weeks has hurt the preparation of most of the players, who don't ordinarily have that much opportunity to practice on grass.

"Like everybody, I've been struggling to find practice time," said Connors. "It's been difficult, not just for me but for everyone."

Sill, Connors says he feels in excellent shape, and he certainly appeared to be in his brief workout with Stewart, a tall, bearded Texan. Connors whipped through the first set in 20 minutes, and Stewart was able to hold his service only once throughout the match.

"The odds are against me, everyone tells me," Connors said in assessing his chance of repeating his 1974 Wimbledon title. "The way I look at it, every time I go out I have a chance to win, otherwise there'd be no point in my going out."

King, playing at Wimbledon for the 20th consecutive year, had trouble with her service, committing seven double faults, two of them coming in the first game when she lost her service.

But the 36-year-old New Yorker, who keeps weights in her hotel room for exercising, fought back to win the next four games and take control of the set.

King jumped ahead 3-1 in the second set, only to have Smith rush back to take control. In both the 10th and 12th games Smith had a set point, but King eventually forced the tiebreaker, where she easily took command by winning six of the first seven points.

"People have been asking me ever since I was 23 when I would retire," said King, who is seeking a record 21st Wimbledon crown. "I'll go on playing as long as I still like it, as long as I want to play, and as long as I'm gaining something from it."

Goolagong, who lost to King in both the 1972 and 1975 Wimbledon final, also is confident of her chances.

"I'm as keen as ever," she said. "If I didn't think I had a good chance, I wouldn't be here. If I'm playing well at a time, I know I can beat anybody."

Still a privilege

Tennis is still too much fun for King to consider retiring

WIMBLEDON, England, (UPI) — As Billie Jean King walked onto "center court" Thursday, she thought to herself, "You're a lucky girl, still playing like this."

"For me, it's a privilege," she explained later, and that as much as anything sums up the legendary saga of one of the world's most extraordinary athletes.

At age 36, her knees resembling a battleground thanks to the surgeon's scalpel, and with nothing more to prove on the tennis court, Billie Jean King continues to play with the enthusiasm of a kid.

"I don't think I've ever been low on motivation," she said after a 4-6 singles victory over Texan Anne Smith that carried her into the third round of the Wimbledon Championships. "People have been asking me ever since I was 23 when I would retire."

"I'll go on playing as long as I still like it, as long as I want to play, and as long as I'm gaining something from it."

And so she is playing her for the 20th consecutive year.

"I plan my knee operations around Wimbledon," she joked, seeking to extend her all-time record of 20 Wimbledon championships.

She has gotten down on herself many times, such as a year and a half ago when she underwent ankle surgery that sidelined her for a few months.

"Rehabilitation has taken the most out of me," she says. "If you've ever seen an athlete go through rehabilitation after a knee operation, that's tough."

But she always finds a way to lift herself, and her latest boost came from watching Jack Nicklaus win the U.S. Open two weeks ago.

"Sometimes you lose your motivation," she admitted. "But then I look at Nicklaus and I get re-inspired. It was nice to see that kind of thing happen. That put on the 17th hole (a 20-foot birdie putt that clinched the title for Nicklaus), I'll never forget it. That was the whole ballgame. He knew he won it."

In 1975, after beating Evonne Goolagong Cawley in the final for her sixth Wimbledon singles crown, King said she no longer would play competitive singles. She soon realized that was a mistake.

"The next year when I came here I was just a sparring partner for some of the other girls, and I didn't like it," she said. "It wasn't helping my doubles. I felt I was letting my partners down. And I don't like just playing doubles. I'm not busy enough. I don't like sitting down. I want to feel productive."

Billie Jean King is nothing if not productive. She has set up a miniature weight room in her hotel room, enabling her to exercise daily, and in addition to the singles, she also is entered in the women's and mixed doubles.

She'll continue to maintain such a schedule as long as the kid-in-her-realizes-how-lucky she is to enjoy the privilege.

Pate fires six-under par 66 to lead Memphis

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (UPI) — Jerry Pate reeled off a 6-under-par 66 to claim the first-round lead Thursday in the heat and humidity of the Memphis Open at Colonial Country Club.

"It was hot. That's the way it is down here," Pate said after stepping out of the 55-degree heat. "I think I play well in hot weather."

The 26-year-old Pensacola, Fla. golfer, runner-up in last week's Canadian Open, got his first birdie on No. 5, a 199-yard par 3, and then ran off a string of three birdies starting at No. 8.

He picked up another stroke with a birdie on the 18th hole and ended his round with a birdie on No. 18.

Lee Trevino, who won back-to-back Memphis Opens in 1971 and 1972, was tied for second place with Tom Purtzer and Jim Simons 67.

Trevino started slowly on the par-72, 7,249-yard south course and made the turn at 3-under after bogeying No. 14. He had consecutive birdies at No. 1 and No. 2 and added another birdie on the par-4 eighth hole.

Trevino, a native Texan, said he felt good after the Memphis heat.

"Hot — that's what I like," Trevino said. "I've been hooking my drives maybe because it was too cold... most of the tournaments we've been playing have been cold."

Simons, who was in Trevino's threesome with Gene Litter, said he was confident of doing well in Memphis after taking some time off last week.

"I feel for some reason that I play this course very well," Simons, 36, said. "I feel like I can win. I'm rested and relaxed — and I feel my game is fairly sharp."

Junior open tourney today

TWIN FALLS — For 23 junior baseball players, the next three days will be a test of ability, strength and performance.

Ranging from 11-to-12-year-olds, they have been selected from various knothole city teams, and have been asked to play on two Twin Falls teams in the second annual Twin Falls Boys Invitational tournament which gets under way at Harmon Park at 8 p.m. with two games.

Caldwell Smilpot, the defending champion, and the winner of four of the five tournaments last year, takes on Kelly Oil of Buhl at 8 p.m. on diamond 1.

Kiwans, the number one Twin Falls team, and runner-up last year, will make its debut against the Good Sentinors and the arm of female pitcher Lisa Graves at 5 p.m. on diamond 2.

Other first-round games tonight include Nampa vs. Jerome at 7 p.m. on diamond 1, Shoshone vs. Twin Falls number 2 at 7 p.m. on diamond 2, Burley vs. Valley at 9 p.m. on diamond 1 and Nampa vs. Jerome at 8 p.m. on diamond 2.

The three-day event will conclude Sunday afternoon with the consolation game beginning at noon and the championship to be decided at 2 p.m.

Kiwans Coach Bob Ellis has been working with his contingent of promising youngsters for several weeks trying to ready them for their debut tonight against the undefeated Gooding team.

"They really look good at this point in the season," he said during the team's final practice session Wednesday night. "We took the best of the two teams last year and have combined them to make one good one. Seven of the 11 on this team have played all-star ball before. But you can never tell what a team is going to do until they get into competition. This weekend they'll be tested."

Although the team has lost many of the top players off last year's runner-up team that lost to the Caldwell team four straight times in a variety of tournaments, Ellis is ready to make another strong run at the Boise valley team.

"I'm not worried about them this year at all," he said about Caldwell. "We have some good kids, and no team is unbeatable. I think we can beat Caldwell. We don't have the power that we had last year, but we've got a bunch of pokers."

"The 11 boys — making up the Kiwans team — will be trying to unseat the Caldwell team will be Gene Starr, 11; Rob Ellis, 12; Tom Prater, 11; Nick Baumer, 12; Nick Qualls, 12; Scott Anderson, 12; Casey Bartholomew, 12; Robbie Holman, 11; Doug Newberry, 11; Chris Pratt, 12; and Tony Sheets, 12.

Making up the number two Twin Falls team is Shane Orr, 12; Rob Orr, 11; Shane Kraft, 12; Dionne Connell, 12; Bruce Anderson, 12; Delbert Benkula, 12; John Clausen, 12; Gary Stringer, 12; Kevin Ames, 11; Rick Horner, 11; John Davis, 11, and Pete Ceist, 11.

Sherk opens one-stroke lead with early 69

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (UPI) — Cathy Sherk fired a 4-under-par 69 Thursday to grab the first-round lead in the $125,000 LPGA tournament at the Locust Hill Country Club in the Rochester suburb of Henrietta.

"It was one of my better rounds," said Sherk, a second-year player from Ontario, Canada. "I've been 69 before, but anytime you get it under 70 and especially 4-under-par is really good."

Tied for second place were Pat Bradley and Murie Broer, each at 3-under-par 70. Eva Chang of Carlsbad, Calif., was alone in third place at 2-under-par 71.

"I was strong in aggressiveness that allowed her to notch seven birdies and three bogeys on route to her 69."

"That's the way I've been taught to play. You go for the pin when you're in the fairway and you go for the hole when you're on the green, and if you're five under you try to make it to six under."

Bradley, who won the event in 1977, said she was "pleased with her round" and "enjoyed playing" at Locust Hill.

Bradley has finished seventh or better seven times in tournaments this year.

Broer, 41, said she was surprised at being tied for second. "My thoughts for this week were to go out and enjoy my game," she said. "I'm just going to go out and play each day and try to do my best," she added.

In a three-way tie for third place at 1-under-par 72 were Martene Floyd, whose brother, Raymond, plays on the men's tour, Cathy Whitworth and Pat Meyers.

Defending champion Jana Blalock was in an 11-way tie for fourth place at 73 even-par.

Five golfers withdrew during first-round play including Donna Caponi-Truck, the leading money winner this year with over $138,000, who complained of a stiff neck after sustaining a shoulder injury Tuesday.

Cathy Thompson of Springfield, Miss., was penalized two strokes for "slow play" by LPGA officials. A number of "slow play" penalties were handed out last week at the Lady Keystone Tournament in Hershey, Pa.

Round 2 in the 72-hole tournament, with a top prize of $18,750, gets underway Friday.

Howard sisters dominate 400-meter sprint

EUGENE, Ore. (UPI) — When Sherri Howard won the 400-meter final at the U.S. Olympic Track and Field Trials and her kid sister Deneen finished third, it set an Olympic record — two members of the same family on an Olympic team in the same event.

When you consider how long the Olympic Games have been going on, the record seems even more remarkable.

Games, which will be held in the Howard girls' backyard in Los Angeles.

At 16, Sherri is a year older than Deneen but right behind them and moving up are Tina and Artra. If all goes well, the four have a chance to be on the 1984 Olympic team and at the very least two could make it.

Sherri, Deneen, Tina and Artra represented three quarters of the Howard family of six girls. The two older sisters — Gina and Darlene — played basketball for Los Angeles State after competing in track during high school.

To say the family is athletic is telling only half the story. First, there is their mother — the former Barbara Polk. As a high schooler in Sherman, Texas, she and her sister plus their cousins — the Chamberlain sisters combined in 1957 to set national records in the 40 and 800 relay. And the father, Eugene, was a retired Air Force sergeant — was a talented high school baseball player in Detroit. He also competed in the military.

While Eugene and Barbara are modest about their off-springs' success, they are nevertheless proud of their sports abilities and classroom achievements. More than that, they are delighted success hasn't spoiled any of the flock.

The four now involved in track all have distinctive personalities and there is no reason to mistake one for the other. And academically, counting the two older ones, all the girls so far eligible have made the National Honor Society.

As a warmup to the Trials here, Deneen, Tina and Sherri will relay Thompson running the first leg, won the 1,000-meter sprint at the California State High School Championships and set a national prep record of 3:37.88, beating the old mark of 3:39.62 they set only the week before in the Los Angeles City championships.

Eugene Howard was there, as he is for all the meets his daughters run in. He hardly ever says a word to them, being content to watch from the stands and cheer. He also listens while he watches and what he hears about his girls pleases him even more than their success.

After watching them in a meet recently, he told a reporter: "People tell me at meets what the other kids are saying. They don't say 'there's those Howard girls — they think they're so good; they're those Howard girls — they're really good and really nice, too.'"

Sherri won the 400 here in 54.45 with Gwen Gardner, an old friend of the Howards, second in 51.68 and Deneen third in 51.70.

The Angler's Corner

Size is great but action isn't at Henry's Lake

Reports from Henry's Lake indicate the fishing is very slow. Of more than 40 anglers fishing the Slary Springs-A Frame area last weekend, only a few fish were caught and weighed. Although these fish were relatively large (between 3 and 8 pounds), the hours spent on non-productive fishing was most likely quite a feat.

fishing excellent. For the moment, you can forget fishing from noon to 6 p.m. There is just about zero activity during that period. The bag limit is three trout less than 12 inches and one trout over 20 inches. Typical catch will probably be between 14 and 18 inches so don't plan on any great trout dinner.

will prove why the Railroad Ranch is so well known around the country. A European expression among fishermen is "Petri Hill". The phrase means "Hall to Peter," the fisherman. According to Gordy Young, director of the Federation of Fly Fishermen, fanatical fishermen throughout the west have begun to adopt the greeting as a closing in their correspondence.

But this 64-page handbook really is a valuable gift for the person who thinks the mysteries of waving the long rod are truly unmanageable. The step-by-step illustrations are well done, as are the drawings showing how to tie basic knots. Fly fishing techniques for trout, bass and panfish are also well covered.

Everyone's happy now that Palmer's back

BALTIMORE (UPI) — Pitcher Jim Palmer calls his new $1.25 million two-year contract with the Baltimore Orioles "very fair" and Orioles owner Edward Bennett Williams apparently agrees. Williams said he was "happy" with the contract Palmer signed Wednesday after pitching the Orioles to a 3-1 victory over the Toronto Blue Jays.

Manager Earl Weaver is signed through the 1982 season. "I like the area, I like the guys and Earl and I have been getting along this year," Palmer said. Williams (General Manager) Hank Peters, myself and Ed Keating (Palmer's agent) have reached agreement on demonstrates that (Williams) is going to try to stay competitive in today's market," he said.

American League Courageous crew still confident of victory

NEWPORT, R.I. (UPI) — Ted Turner's Courageous was resting in a slip at the Banister's Wharf Thursday while the 12-meter's helmsman and crew were out on Rhode Island Sound sizing up their closest competitor in America's Cup preliminaries.

There is no question that we are still knocking a few burrs off our techniques," said O'Meara. But a new mainsail would also put Turner in a more competitive position. Freedom has a fuller, brand new Keivar mainsail. Courageous is sailing with a Dacron main leftover from the 12-meter's 1977 Cup defense against the Australians.

"There is nobody that has an edge," said Courageous operations manager Martin O'Meara, asked Thursday which 12-meter looked the best among the three U.S. contenders. "I don't have two years to spend screwing around on Twelves," said Turner Wednesday after winning three straight heats.

Nuggets retain Moe to bolster NBA crew

DENVER (UPI) — The Denver Nuggets, searching for ways to rebound from their dismal play in the NBA last season, Thursday announced the hiring of former San Antonio Spurs head coach Doug Moe as an assistant coach. Moe, 41, is the 41-year-old Moe. Nuggets officials left no doubt he would be able to move into the head coaching job if it became necessary. That position now is held by Donnie Walsh, who urged the hiring of his former North Carolina University teammate.

since the team's poor play of last season, but added: "If I don't do it, someone else will have to help the franchise. Moe, an assistant coach for the Nuggets in the 1974-75 and 1975-76 seasons, returns after a 3 1/2-year stint as head coach of the San Antonio Spurs: He was fired March 1 when the team was struggling with a 33-33 record. He led the club to two Central Division championships. "I enjoyed my time in San Antonio, but I just never felt appreciated," Moe said. "It's difficult to explain, but it was a different situation. "I'm taking the job hoping I can be of help. They (the Nuggets) ran into trouble last year because the chemistry was as bad as you possibly could get. Donnie has already taken some steps in the right direction to correct that. I'm here to win. I just can't take losing."

'Banned in Boston'

Fiddlers, pickers in celebration

POCATELLO — An all-Idaho folk and country musicians concert will take place July 4 at Idaho State University's Davis Field. Beginning at 1 p.m., the Red Hill Independence Celebration will feature the best of Idaho's fiddlers, pickers and guitarists. Musicians will include the Braun Brothers, John Hansen, Steve Eaton, Rosalee Sorrels, and many others.

The concert is a production for the ISU summer program and is being coordinated by program assistant Valerie Robinette.

Robinette said the concert is a "chance for people of Idaho to see first-hand and all in one place the quality of music Idaho musicians are producing today."

Each of the acts will play a half-hour to an hour of music; with the concert ending at 9 p.m. Following the concert, the Pocatello Jaycees will display fireworks off Red Hill above Davis Field.

Tickets for the event are $2 and are available at Budget and Records in Pocatello, Idaho Falls and Twin Falls. ISU students and children under 12 are admitted free.

battles. The advantage came in subsequent long lines leading up to the box office.

Not too many movies have been banned in Boston lately. Until "Caligula," that is. Penthouse magazine's controversial $17-million look at decadent Rome was seized in both Boston and Holyoke, Mass., last week, for being in violation of the Massachusetts obscenity laws. "Caligula," which is already playing in 43 theaters throughout the United States, has aroused more anger for its admission prices than its content. Tickets for the movie cost between $7 and $10 in most cities.

Penthouse publisher Bob Guccione, who also produced "Caligula," said he'll fight the film's seizure with "the biggest array of expert witnesses the town has ever seen," including specialists in art, history, psychology, human sexual behavior and literature.

One group that Guccione probably won't invite is film critics. "Caligula" has received almost uniformly negative reviews.

What's the hot new subject in Hollywood? Unlikely as it may seem, the topic of illegal aliens is near the top of the list. First up was the Charles Bronson-starrer "Borderline," which will come out in late September, telling the story of border guards on the California-Mexican boundary line. Bronson might bump into Jack Nicholson, who will play his version of an immigration guard in "The Border," which begins shooting July 7 in El Paso, Texas, for Universal Pictures, and the revitalized RKO films.

"The Border," according to a spokesman, will dwell more on Nicholson's relationship with screenwife Valerie Perrine, than with illegal immigrants. Tony Richardson ("Tom Jones") will direct from a screenplay by Deric Washburn, who wrote "The Deer Hunter."

Chicano groups, who protested Hollywood's Latino-themed "gang" films such as "Boulevard Nights" and "Walk Proud," are reportedly planning to watch both "Borderline" and "The Border" closely.

Western art show begins Thursday

SUN VALLEY — Works by many famous artists of the American West will be on display at the Sun Valley Center's annual Western Art Room and Exhibition Thursday through July 6 in the Idaho Hall of the Elkhorn Village Inn.

The auction exhibition will be open and free to the public July 4 and 5 and will feature well over a million dollars' worth of paintings and sculpture by Russell, Selzer, Remington, Sharp, Higgins, Bama, Raphael and several others.

Also displayed will be Indian weavings and historic and pre-historic painted pottery. The exhibition will open with a champagne preview Thursday at 5 p.m.

In addition to the auction exhibition, approximately 40 of the nation's top galleries and artists will have retail displays on the 4th floor of the Elkhorn Village Inn.

Another portion of the weekend is the Western Art lecture series each afternoon of the exhibition at 3 p.m. in the Salon at the Elkhorn Village Inn. These lectures are free and will examine various topics. The entire evening of July 4 is devoted to the new collector. Over 50 carefully selected items with retail values not exceeding $1,200 will be auctioned, starting at 6 p.m.

The main auction will be July 5 at 8 p.m. following a cocktail buffet. The auction proceeds will benefit the Sun Valley Center and its Institute of the American West.

Spanish music becomes family affair

La Familia Mexicana well traveled

By STEPHANIE SCHOROW
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The name of this band is its introduction: La Familia Mexicana. The Mexican Family.

For four years, the Fernando Rodriguez family of Twin Falls has been making music that makes hearts light and feet lively.

Together they have turned their love of Spanish music into a family enterprise.

Fernando Rodriguez, patriarch of the band, plays lead guitar, sings and acts as manager. His children include Elsa, 19, who plays the drums; Chris, 17, who plays keyboard; Fernando Jr. (Freddy), 15, who plays bass; and Lori Ann, 11, who sings. Also on drums is Fernando's brother Cruz, 24, and, on accordion is Steve Daniel, 23, a family friend from Boise.

Four-year-old Rogelio and Mrs. Muldina Rodriguez are the only two family members not in the band. But they never miss a show.

At weddings, dances, and quinceañeras (a Mexican coming-of-age party for girls), the family plays popular Spanish music, with an occasional country-western, polka and rock tune thrown in.

Their repertoire ranges from bright and sassy to slow and somber, but "cumbias," a kind of Spanish dance song, are audience favorites.

Carrying their gear in a distinct green trailer ("Honk and say 'Hi' if you see us," the kids say), La Familia Mexicana has performed throughout the Magic and Treasure valleys.

Last summer, they also played at Utah's Lagoon amusement park. This summer they are planning a trip to Texas to record their first record.

Their music is a part-time occupation. Rodriguez works as a mechanic for Magic session, international; his older children, Cruz and Lori Ann, have jobs. Mrs. Rodriguez works for the Head Start program.

In a spruced-up garage behind their home, the Rodriguez try to hold a weekly practice session, but with four active children, it can be hard to get everyone together.

None of the group reads music, and they play from memory, using only a notebook with notes along with the song's words. As the family is bilingual, they can sing songs in both Spanish and English.

When they play, the small room reverberates with the gleeful sound of their instruments. Fernando has written about 20 songs for his troupe, such as "Desde aquí quevas aser," or "Watacha going to do from here?" a cumbia as saucy and defiant as its title.

Fernando and Lori Ann sing the lead, with other joining on the la, la, la, or the chorus.

Cruz and Elsa take turns pounding rhythms. Chris's high pitch

Mrs. Muldina Rodriguez (center) and 4-year-old Rogelio are the only two family members not in the band, but they never miss a show.

seem to be reflected in her lively keyboard work; while Freddy's bass is dependably steady. Steve and Fernando trade off on the accordion. In slow numbers, Lori Ann's high-sweet voice adds a child's charm to laments of love and loss.

Lori Ann often keeps a questioning eye on her father as she sings, so as to know when to join in. If she gets confused, he may point to the right place on the paper sheet with his foot, never missing a note. "When we play I'm controlling the kids with my eyes, head and feet," he says.

The young people in the band say they like to play "fast ones where people can really move around. The garage is insulated so 'the kids like to play loud.'" The father says, a remark that causes some hooting laughter from his offspring.

Originally from Texas, Rodriguez settled in Twin Falls nearly 20 years ago and all but his eldest daughter Elsa were born in Twin Falls. Once a seasonal farm worker, he attended classes at the College of Southern Idaho and began a career as a mechanic.

Versatile on many instruments, he played in bands until he began teaching his children how to play four years ago. "They picked it up real fast," he recalls. That was the start of La Familia Mexicana. Lori Ann, for example, has sung since she was seven.

The young people are paid $35 to $40 each for their work in performances but a large part of the performance fee goes to Dad, who something the others kid him about. But, as he reminds them, he has paid for several thousand dollars in band equipment.

Each family member has also been contributing money from performance fees to fund for their July trip to Corpus Christi, Texas. There they will record "Desde quevas aser" and "Paloma sin Regreso" (Dove of No Return), both written by Rodriguez.

"We'd like to get a hit song," Fernando says honestly.

While on the musical road, the family has had to battle flat tires, over zealous police, too-eager fans and a power failure that suddenly left Elsa playing alone. "Hey, who pulled the plug?" was her flustered reaction.

Once at a Blackfoot performance, the local police came screeching up to the dance hall, surrounded the building and told the band "You play one more song and we'll arrest you."

Naturally, the band wondered why all the fuss as the hall was not in a crowded neighborhood nor did the sound travel very far out of the building.

Evidently, a police supervisor wondered, too, and the next day the band received an apology from the police.

The band remembers with some merriment the time they played in the parking lot at the Green Giant plant in an end-of-the-season party. With a crowd as rollicking as the music, "they kept passing the hat," and the band ended up playing for 11 hours.

The kids say they don't mind the practices or giving up their Saturday nights. At family celebrations, they are often asked if "shouldn't another band be hired?" so the kids have a chance to enjoy themselves. "We'd rather be up on stage," Chris asserts.

"Usually, a band quits after a couple of years. We're going to keep going," Elsa said.

Blondie: pop music turning funky

(Blondie, the new wave rock 'n' roll band, is riding the crest of popularity with the single "Call Me," and a new album, "Eat to the Beat," Deborah (Debbie) Harry, the band's singer and lead guitarist, Chris Stein, her boyfriend, were interviewed by three young staff reporters for "Kidsday," the Newsday children's section.)

By JENNIFER LETTERI,
BARRY GOLUBOFF
and BARRY WALDMAN
(© 1980, Newsday)

Q: How did you start singing?
A: Debbie: I always sang, ever since I was little. It's just a natural thing. I was singing since I was 4 years old. I always copied everybody.

Q: Do you feel you'd be famous?
A: D: Yeah. I used to always threaten my mother and father. When they got mad at me or punished me, I'd say, "You'll be sorry when I'm rich and famous." They always laughed—it worked out.

Q: How did you think of "Blondie"??
A: D: People have called me Blondie for a long time. I thought that it was really American and definitely commercial...

Q: How do you feel about the way the press hyped up your looks and used them to sell albums?
A: D: I don't pay much attention to it.

Chris: You have to realize that the media in general does the world a great disservice. I think everything gets totally distorted.

D: They ain't at people who are supposedly half as smart as most people usually are.

If you were a guy and had mediocre looks and were doing the same material, do you think Blondie would still have made it as a band?

A: D: I don't know, because I don't have a real mental image of myself and I think that we really stand out as a musical group... There are a lot of bands with girls fronting that don't make it because they have crummy material. I think it's just the combination of both things. When I started to be in a pop group and really go for it, I was aware that it takes a combination of a good stage act and good music and a lot of sex and sass.

Q: Did you agree with the critics who called you punk at first?
A: D: Oh, no, I've said that many times... We never considered ourselves punk rock. As a musical term, it's very limited... We considered ourselves a pop group, pop rock.

Q: Do you feel that "Heart of Glass" was basically a disco song?
A: C: We saw it as craft work... an electric, disco-type thing. There's a lot of good funky stuff now, a lot of good black music... I grew up on black music.

Q: What's next?
A: C: We have that movie, "The Roadie," which is going to come out in the summer. We play ourselves, we play the band, and Meat Loaf is the roadie. It's a rock 'n' roll fantasy.

Q: Do you think you'll be keeping the same style or moving on?
A: C: We're really sort of going to funk now. D: You have to speak just for you and me when you say that, because we're different... We went for the idea of taking a bunch of individuals and putting them together and forming something that was a unique blend... a recognizable sound. That's what all the best groups have always done.

Q: If one member left, would it be Blondie? Is the band still tight?
A: C: It's not gonna make it or break it. The band would split because everybody wanted to pursue their own different directions.

D: The band always was tight. Our way of relating to one another is a lot like brothers and sisters, and that is that we fight like cats and dogs, but god forbid anybody should come from the outside and accuse anybody or attack anybody, then we're united.

Q: How do you feel about advertising designer jeans?
A: D: I think this is a challenge for us because we have artistic control over the commercials, so that what we make is a statement, artistic statements about us and the music world.

Q: How much do you think you paved the way for female vocalists? Did you help open anything up?
A: D: I think so. There seemed to be a general consensus of opinion among the girl groups, instrumentalists and vocalists, that the commercial success of Blondie has really helped other girls. I sort of have encouraged that.

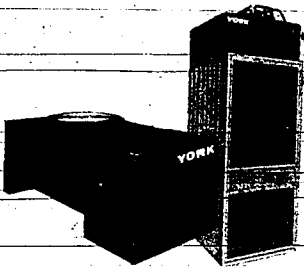

Q: What direction will music take in the '80s?
A: C: I think the way the whole new wave thing is being handled in America is obnoxious. It's overly commercialized. Everybody's picking up on it immediately and it's replacing what everybody didn't like about disco... We're going to be seeing even worse groups, even more commercial groups, labeled new wave — just synthesized groups that producers throw together and say they're new wave... D: There is a strange paradox happening in this country, and that is that we are liberated and we are totally free to hear and sample everything in the world. We are really exceptional people and yet everyone is limiting themselves to being restricted.

Larry is pungent; Jane likes Dolly

Q: What's this about friction between Jane Fonda and Dolly Parton during their first movie together? What are they fighting about? — T.T. of Phoenix.

A: Nothing that we know of. Jane and Dolly are actually getting on famously, each singing the praises of the other. In fact, Jane is planning a trip with Dolly through Parton's stomping grounds in rural Kentucky and Tennessee for that filming of "Nine to Five" is completed. As for Dolly's acting ability, Jane thinks it's good enough to justify a prediction that Dolly has a big movie career ahead of her.

Q: We hear Katharine Hepburn has been studying piano for a long time. Is she planning at this late date a career as a pianist? — L.L. of Akron, Ohio.

A: No, Kate, 70, has been taking piano lessons for about a year now, but it's in preparation for a stage role in Ernest Thompson's "The West Side Waltz." Kate's role in the play, due in Los Angeles and on Broadway next year, calls for some expertise on the 88 keys. So, being the perfectionist she is, Kate the consummate actress is attempting to become Kate the beleaguered pianist.

Q: I heard that the son of Humphrey Bogart and Lauren Bacall was studying to be an actor. Will we be seeing another Bogart on the screen anytime soon? — R.P. of Shaker Heights, Ohio.

A: Don't count on it. Lauren's son, Stephen Bogart, was considering a career in front of the camera, but has decided otherwise. Our loss, since Steve resembles his famous father. Now, says Lauren, Steve has plunged into the electronic media, working in the production end of a radio station in Connecticut.

Q: Is Barry Manilow ever going to make the jump from the concert and nightclub stage into movies? He's such a great singer, and he'd probably be even a better actor. — E.H. of Las Vegas.

A: Barry hatched plans for his movie-debut some time ago and is working like crazy in acting classes conducted by veteran actress Nina Foch. His first movie is likely to be "Encore," for which Barry has written the script and the songs. He's betting that the flick will be so good it'll be followed by many more Manilow encores.

Q: At a performance of the Broadway drama, "Betrayal," recognize Frank Langella seated in the audience. By my astonishment, Blythe Danner, who was in this play, spent Langella while taking her bows and stepping completely out of character grimed in acknowledgment. She's certainly a pro, but isn't this a breach of good theatrical decorum and a bit amateurish? — D.B. of New York.

A: We've checked with various theatrical authorities, and the consensus is that "once the play is finished, it's quite acceptable (though not top form) to acknowledge friends during curtain calls. So, Blythe's effusive behavior—singing "Let's go, known for his portrayal of Dracula, falls well within the bounds of professionalism. Incidentally, the actress finished her run in "Betrayal" just before the play closed. She flew home to California and is currently looking over scripts with just a one-week, summer-stock appearance in "Candida" scheduled for New England.

—THE GREENS YEARS: Bing Crosby really loved playing golf; in fact, he suffered his fatal heart attack just after completing a round on a course in Spain. Now after two years of work with his close friend Lee McGrath, Kathryn Crosby has finished a rough draft of a book about life with her late husband. The working title is "A Very Good Round," so you can figure when she "tells all," the 'al is going to be a lot of good things.

Q: I'm aware that city men wearing cowboy hats is the rage and a national fashion statement. I suspect this to be just a clever publicity stunt engineered to promote John Travolta's new picture, "Urban Cowboy." Right?

A: Not really. The city fad for cowboy hats has been spread over the last 10 years, resulting in about a 25 percent increase in urban sales, according to a spokesman for Stetson hats. It's ironic in this age of hype, but the style just seemed to evolve and catch on all by itself.

JANE FONDA
... Parton's partner

VOCAL SUPPORT: Frank Sinatra believes in friendship and the free enterprise system, and in his entertaining way has agreed to become part of a special advertising campaign for Chrysler Corp., whose chairman, Lee Iacocca, is an old pal. Frank's fee will be $1.2 million with greater rewards to come, according to Iacocca. "If we make it work." Success in selling cars, vans and trucks could mean "easily $5 million" for the singer.

Q: Isn't it true that Diane Keaton has broken up with Warren Beatty and is now dating Jack Nicholson? — W.T. of Atlanta.

A: Not quite. Diane and Warren are still smitten, but she has been seen recently with Jack. It seems that when he was in New York for the opening of his new movie, "The Shining," Diane tagged along to some screenings and a social gathering or two. Nothing's amiss, however, since Jack is not only a good friend of Warren's but is quite very much enamored of longtime girlfriend, Anjelica Huston.

Q: Why doesn't Barbra Streisand sing more in public? Is she worried that audiences think of her more as an actress than a vocalist? — M.B. of Charleston, S.C.

A: As one of Hollywood's few remaining movie queens — whose name has huge market value — Barbra prefers filmmaking to the grind of live concerts. She has no doubt, however, about her continuing appeal as a singer. Just recently she sang at a benefit concert in Los Angeles and was in great form. After a medley of songs penned by Alan and Marilyn Bergman, the audience gave Barbra such a wild reception that even faded Hollywoodites were impressed.

Q: Any truth to those wild and recurrent stories concerning Gene Simmons, of the rock group KISS, and his dates with Diana Ross? — C.L. of Lakewood, Colo.

A: For once, the rumors are most accurate; the pair is a hot and very kissy item. Gene, bouncing from his highly publicized romance with Cher, confided to a pal, "I'm crazy about Diane. This time, I really think I'm completely in love."

THE UNKINDEST CUT: Michael York, who has worn a variety of hair styles during his career, found it no trauma at all when he underwent a cutting of his wavy locks for a crew cut to take over Richard Gere's role in the Broadway play "Bent." Unfortunately, office receipts for the drama — about homosexuals in a Nazi concentration camp also suffered a cut — before Michael established himself securely in the role. Anyone need an actor with a crew cut? Actually, a national tour is scheduled for the play.

Q: I know Ruth Gordon is making a sequel to "Every Which Way But Loose," in which she is reteamed with Clint Eastwood as a tough-mouthed type. What's after that? — C.H. of Westport, Conn.

A: After "Ruth," is finished making "Any Which Way You Can," with Clint, she will continue along her irreverent way to "Monty Python's Time Machine" with the British comic troupe. Ruth's career is worthy of a time machine — judging from her recently published tome, "Ruth Gordon: An Open Book," a title that pretty much sums up her approach to life and her career.

Q: Is it true that Dyan Cannon has become — concerned — about drug problems now that her daughter, Cary Grant is reaching high school age? — G.S. of Valley Stream, N.Y.

A: Jennifer Grant, 14, whose mother is actress Dyan Cannon, is going to a school in which Dyan feels she will be least likely to be confronted by drugs and drug users. Dyan believes in taking action before it's necessary where drugs are concerned, saying, "We can't allow our children to become as mindless as carrots."

Q: Isn't Larry Hagman so tired of playing the bad guy on the "Dallas" TV show that he's now looking for movie parts to clean up his dastardly image? — C.K. of Austin, Texas.

A: Not on your life. Hagman enjoys playing J.R., the heavy, and if the finances are right will continue doing so on TV. What's more, Larry is dickering with producer-director Blake Edwards, who wants him to play an evil movie studio boss in a movie titled, aptly enough, "S.O.B." The part is not a big one, but it's pungent.

Q: We hear a lot about Robin Williams' activities during production breaks of TV's "Mork and Mindy" series but not much about the female lead, Pam Dawber. What does she do while the show isn't filming? — S.G. of Hartsdale, N.Y.

A: For a long time Pam has been taking voice lessons on the side and the work is paying off. During the "Mork and Mindy" production hiatus, Pam trekked to Ohio to play the title role in a summer circuit version of "My Fair Lady." Our spies report Pam was much better than fair in the part. And as you know, Robin has been busy in another title role — as Popeye in the upcoming movie version of the comic strip.

A COLD ROMANCE: A leading but not so young star accepted a role in a film recently in an effort to rekindle the romance she once had with the actor who plays opposite her. Alas, he's not interested anymore, and the director is going crazy trying to get a little life into the love scenes the pair have to perform for the film.

LARRY HAGMAN

Q: Is Princess Caroline of Monaco planning to start a family soon? — M.L. of Salem, Ore.

A: So far no news on the maternity front concerning the daughter of Princess Grace and Prince Rainier. Unfortunately the big talk in Europe this summer is that Caroline and her husband, Philippe, don't are not getting along that well. In fact, the heavy rollers among the jet setters are placing bets on the actual date the couple will announce a divorce.

Cowboys becoming glorified kids

By JOSEPH GELMIS

(C) 1980, Newsday

The cowboy used to be the model of the man's man. In a couple of new major movies featuring the top box office stars in America, the cowboy has become a glorified kid.

Clint Eastwood stars in "Bronco Billy," a fantasy for kids of all ages. John Travolta stars in "Urban Cowboy," a honky-tonk romance for kids who've grown older but who haven't grown up.

The films—beast-like, similitudes Eastwood and Travolta play characters who escape the tedium of dreary blue-collar jobs by acting out their common fantasy to be a cowboy.

Eastwood's Bronco Billy McCoy severs the bond with his past life as a New Jersey shoe salesman, and makes his fantasy pay—barely—as star and owner of a nickle-and-dime Wild West traveling tent show.

Travolta's oil refinery go-fer, Bud, is an after-hours cowboy at Gilley's, a hardhat playground of Houston where oil workers dress up in jeans, fringed shirts, boots and 10-gallon hats, swig beer from long-necked bottles, brawl, listen to nonstop live country music, dance the Cotton-Eyed Joe (a hopping two-step) on a cavernous 3 1/2 acre dance floor with complaisant cowgirls who compete in Dolly Parton look-alike contests while the men compete in machismo games with adult toys.

Bronco Billy has rounded up a passel of strays, saved their souls with his religion of redemption-through-creating-your-own-reality. When they grouse about not being paid for months, he's offended by their ingratitude. He supports his habit, his addiction of making-believe he's a cowboy with a new identity of trick-riding, sharpshooter. In his motley extended family of followers, he's a Vietnam deserter, who twirls ropes (Sam Bottoms), a one-armed embezzler (Bill McKinney), a bogus doctor who served time for practicing medicine without a license (Scatman Crothers), an ex-alcoholic Indian (Dan Vadis) who does snake dances by day and writes a serious book by night, and his pregnant wife, a reformed prostitute (Sierra Pecheur).

Bronco Billy is a wistful imitation of classic 1930s cowboy ball comedy. Life, says the film, is what you make it. The slow-witted but utterly sincere, self-made cowboy eventually helps an arrogant, pretentious New York socialite (Sondra Locke) escape the futile life of poor little rich girl that makes her suicidal and adopts her as a member of his troupe.

Though thematically similar, the two films have entirely different styles and intentions. Each has the obvious starting point of being mass audience entertainments. Each is middling entertainment.

"Bronco Billy" is pure lighthearted fantasy. It implies that escaping "reality" can be the sanest thing a person can do. "Urban Cowboy" is pseudo-realism, and suggests that the childish hero and heroine have been led astray by their escapist fantasies and presumably learn their lessons by film's end.

The art of "Urban Cowboy" is the art of Hollywood, The Deal. It's a package of country music—31 songs, enough to fill out the film's double-album sound track—and a young superstar repeating the formula from his first smash hit. The parallels to "Saturday Night Fever" are too blatant to be coincidence.

"Fever" was based on a New York magazine piece about a disco palace in Brooklyn where a disaffected young working-class hero pressed and straddled the dance floor, after hours of working in a dreary hardware store job. "Urban Cowboy" is more of the same pop sociology—based on a 1978 Esquire piece about Gilley's where a Texas youth blows steam on the dance floor and in masculinity contests on a mechanical bull.

Good jazz needs a good trumpet

Newhouse News Service
NEW YORK — The trumpet is one of the most romantically appealing instruments in jazz.
The two albums under consideration here both feature trumpet players of the younger generation who have achieved mastery of the instrument. One of them is already well known in jazz circles, the other a bit of a mystery outside the New York avant-garde scene. Both of these albums are capable of reaching out beyond the hard-core jazz audience to a wider audience of performers. They are not only enjoyable but extremely accessible musically.
• "For Sure!," Woody Shaw (Columbia).
• "Life's Force," Abdullah (About Time Records).
Since coming to Columbia Records in the late 1970s, trumpeter Woody Shaw has made a series of albums that have garnered him top awards in the world of jazz. He placed him at the very top of trumpet lists. He has fire, imagination, abundant technique and a steadily maturing musical conception that extends his role as a leader as well as a soloist.

What he hasn't been able to achieve is a popular following equal to that of such jazz trumpet stars as Freddie Hubbard, Donald Byrd and Chuck Mangione. "For Sure!" is a calculated attempt to widen his audience. It employs great instrumentalists and two vocalists in that attempt, and also avoids the more ambitious time signature experiments that mark Shaw's concert and club appearances.
Consequently the album is less personally Woody Shaw, more a melange of familiar and successful jazz strategies and formulas. Still, Shaw's trumpet and flugelhorn work shines throughout, distinctive enough except on "Why," wherein he seems to be thinking too consciously of Freddie Hubbard.
Shaw begins by essaying a pretty ballad, "We'll Be Together Again," with a string section in attendance. It's a lush, languorous performance, with a lovely coda. The next cut, "OPEC," is a hard swinging straight-ahead piece with good solo work from Shaw, Gary Bartz on alto sax, and Steve Turre on trombone. This straight-ahead number is also found on "Ginseng People," a medium groove sextet side that ends Side One.

In between there is Judi Singh's "Time Is Right," with the composer on vocals. If you like the breathless, flatly-on-the-word singing of Flora Purim, Singh will please you. In fact this song sounds like a pastiche of the "...Miles High" song Purim does.
Singh returns to wordlessly vocalize on "Why," which opens Side Two. It is followed by "Joshua C," a Shaw composition with a programmatic beat and approach most typical of his recent in-person work. The album closes with pianist Larry Willis's funky Latin piece, "Isabel the Liberator," in which the composer and Shaw sound particularly liberated in their solos.
The Shaw album is fine, and should help this estimable trumpeter reach a larger audience. But it lacks cohesion as an album, for it tries to present Shaw in too many situations, as if hedging bets to please everyone.

"Life's Force" is a delightful surprise. When I saw the instrumental personnel, Miles and stark black and white cover of this album, I expected a knotty, ascetic avant-garde offering. Nothing could be further from the truth, for this album sparkles with glimmering, melodic passages and romantic, rhapsodic turns.
Abdullah is a sextet with an odd configuration of three doubled instrumental groups: brass, percussion and strings. The leader, Ahmed Abdullah, is on trumpet with Vincent Chaney on French horn; Rashied Shanay plays trap drum set with Jany Hoggard on vibes; and bassist Jerome Hunter is joined in the string section by the cello of Muneer Abdul-Fatah.
The music weaves the six instruments together with maximum effect, and Abdullah's trumpet, the main solo voice, rises over the patterns with one of the cleanest, most regal tones to come along since big bands featured lead trumpets playing ballad solos.

Abdullah can also play convincing wah-wah trumpet and bend notes with felicitous wit. There are some extremely impressive lyric passages here, as well as some gorgeously modulated exchanges between trumpet and the other instruments.
The music is always accessible and appealing, whether based on ostinato vamps, Latin pedal chords or Arabic rhythms. There is even one selection, "Ohude," that suggests what can be done with the horribly commercialized New Orleans and Tijuana sounds of Herb Alpert.
This album must rate as one of the most pleasant surprises of the year. The music is complex without being demanding; the emphasis is on melodic invention, and in Abdullah, jazz has another really remarkable trumpet virtuoso.

Mao biography: easy-to-read insight

(©) 1980, Newsday

Mao Tse-tung was China's Marx, Lenin and Stalin. He was by turns a revolutionary, a general, an emperor. Mao combined Marxism with ancient Chinese wisdom to produce a dish as fiery as the cuisine of Hunan, the province where he grew up.

Revolutionaries across the globe looked to Maoism for guidance, but to Mao himself it was a weapon fashioned primarily for national regeneration. More than anyone else, Mao pulled modern China out of its age-old poverty and humiliation at the hands of foreigners and brought it to the verge of Great Power status.

For westerners, unused in tyrants who write poems, his life is not easy to fathom. But if anyone can make the man comprehensible, it is Ross Terrill. His "Mao: A Biography" is a magnificent work, as elegant as Chinese calligraphy, as cunning as Chinese aphorisms. Terrill's book is written for the general reader, but its author is a renowned specialist. He has taught at Harvard and written several well-regarded books on the world's most populous country. This one should cement his reputation as one of America's leading interpreters of China.

For years since the triumph of the Chinese Communists in 1949, Americans have had to peer vainly through a smokescreen of ideology to see China as it really is. Writers were either derided China or, against it. State Department officials wrote reports considered too sympathetic to the new regime and were pushed out of their jobs.

Right-wingers saw Mao as the anti-China. Fellow travelers went to China and came back true believers.

So free from cant, however, is Terrill's biography that it's hard to discern his political leanings. He can praise Mao's achievements and criticize his failings. All the while, he is a brilliant, but patient lecturer, telling us, "Now I know all this is very new for you, but if you stick with me, you'll discover a fascinating story." And indeed it is.

Mao was "the eldest son of a well-to-do farmer in an isolated Hunan village. The two never got along. Young Mao was a rebel from home before he learned to make a revolution." The first capitalist I struggled against," he later wrote, "was my father." By the age of 16 he left his home for good. A year later, 1911, the Manchu dynasty was toppled and the country was in chaos as revolutionaries, warlords and various local rulers contended for power. During this turmoil Mao drifted from school to school, spent six months in the army, and ended up in a teacher-training school. He did not emerge a teacher, but he found a vocation: Though not yet a Marxist, he knew he would be a revolutionary. By 1921, at the founding conference of the tiny Chinese Communist Party, the 27-year-old Mao was a leader of the party if not its leading light.

Throughout the party's long battle for primacy, Terrill shows, Mao's sights were fixed uniquely on China's needs. Unlike other Chinese Communist Party leaders took Russian advice and sought revolution in the cities, Mao turned to the countryside. When Chiang Kai-shek's Nationalists ravaged the peasantry, Mao's troops won over their hearts and minds. When party leaders questioned a later alliance with the Nationalists, Mao chose to ally with them against the Japanese invaders. Terrill writes: "The whole point of Marxism, in his mind, was to be medicine for the sick man of China. There was never any question of putting a higher value on the medicine than on the patient."

Mao's astuteness as a general earned him the leadership of the party, but the creation of the People's Republic of China in 1949 ironically made life harder for him.
