A nation of nations

© 1980, The Washington Post
WASHINGTON — Arabs have immigrated to Detroit; Salvadorians to Washington; Haitians to Miami; Kurds to Nashville. America on this Fourth of July is more than ever a nation of nations.
 At least a million immigrants and refugees will pour into the United States this year — perhaps as many as any year in America's history. Some 700,000 will come legally. Soviet Jews, Vietnamese boat people, Cuban political prisoners. Hundreds of thousands more — no one knows for sure how many — will sneak over the Mexican border by fly into airports as "tourists," and melt into the economy as illegal aliens.
 Irish potato famine; Hungarian revolution, Indochinese war — the United States, — however — ambivalent, — has always served as the safety valve for international crises, welcoming more immigrants and refugees than all other free-world nations combined.

 American prestige may be dwindling in the eyes of global leaders, but for the oppressed or "poverty stricken" people of the world this country remains an irresistible magnet. Four million a year get in line to come to the United States. Waiting lists for certain types of visas are backed up 11 years.
 A Kettering Foundation study in the early 1970's reported that a third of the people in Latin America want to immigrate here. Indochinese refugees in Thailand overwhelmingly choose the United States over other countries.

 The unexpected flood of 112,000 Cuban boat people this spring coupled with the continuing influx of Indochinese at the rate of 14,000 a month, focused sudden public attention on immigration.
 With the freedom fad on its shores, the Carter administration "woke up to discover it didn't really have an immigration policy. As Victor Palmieri, the State Department's refugee coordinator, put it: "We can't afford to take them all in. We can't keep them out."
 America has historically welcomed "the huddled masses yearning to

Area accidental deaths lead state

By LARRY SWISHER
TWIN FALLS — South Central Idaho has one of the highest accidental death rates in the nation.
 More residents per capita die in accidental deaths than in the rest of Idaho, and the rate of such deaths among Idahoans is well above the national average.
 Although accidents, including traffic fatalities, are the third or fourth leading cause of death for all ages, and the leading cause of death for those under age 45, they have not received nearly the amount of study or attention as the top killers — heart disease, cancer, and stroke.
 Because a relatively high percentage of the population in the Magic Valley is killed in accidents, state health workers in the region have long been interested in learning why and in discovering

Twin Falls County will pioneer study on children's accidents

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls County will be one of three sites in the country for a pioneer study of child accident prevention.
 Funded by the U.S. Center for Disease Control, the program will test methods for helping parents of preschool-age children prevent injuries.
 Participation by the parents is voluntary, and the unique study of 1,200 children is slated to run for five years beginning this fall. The other projects are in Maine and North Carolina.

 Barry Kling of Twin Falls, South Central District Health Department health educator and director of the project, said the national center was looking for three determined areas to study how the deaths and injuries might be prevented.

 "A rule of thumb in the health industry is that for every person who dies from an accident, 100 other people are severely injured or disabled."
 In Twin Falls County, in the only year studied in depth so far, a figure equal to 10 percent of the population suffered an injury that required hospital treatment.

The costs in terms of treatment, time off from work, workmen's compensation, disability — and personal suffering are large.
 As Helen Krause, a health worker in Twin Falls who is studying the problem, says, "Just the word 'accidents' means they aren't supposed to happen. How many happen needlessly?"

Now the U.S. Center for Disease Control has started a program to study methods of preventing accidents among preschool children.
 South Central Idaho's high accidental death rate and the fact its health district has been a leader in collecting data led to its being

Carter cancels credit controls

Will renew if spending spree

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter and the Federal Reserve Board, saying their anti-inflation credit controls have served their purpose, Thursday removed the remaining controls on credit and bank loans.

A White House statement said that because of the controls, use of credit by both business and consumers has declined, speculation in commodity markets has slowed, interest rates have fallen sharply and inflation in general has begun to ease.

Removal of the controls, imposed March 14 by President Carter and the board and then halved in May, was made possible "because they have accomplished their purpose," the White House announcement said.

Rep. Henry Reuss, D-Wis., chairman of the House Banking Committee, said "the board was clearly right in removing controls over consumer credit" as an anti-recession tool.

 But he said the board was "clearly overlooking to the banks" by lifting controls on them and allowing credit to be diverted from such areas as agriculture and housing. "The Federal Reserve ought to stiffen its back against the big banks, and not go limp when we need it most."

Rep. Frank Annunzio, D-Ill., chairman of the House banking committee on consumer affairs, said the controls had been successful in reducing inflation. "But if lenders begin churning out millions of credit dollars again, we will never see an end to inflation."

At the same time the White House warned the action "should not be taken as a signal for the resumption of a profitless credit, by consumers or by business, and that the president would reimpose controls if necessary."

Jobless rate drops but jobs do also

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Unemployment dropped slightly in June. But, more significantly, the number of jobs declined by a half million as the recession spread to more sectors of the economy, the U.S. Labor Department said Thursday.

In Idaho the unemployment rate in June hit the highest level since April 1975, climbing to 7.7 percent, state Employment Department Director Scott McDonald said.
 That precisely matched the national unemployment rate which edged down from 7.8 percent in May to 7.7 percent last month. At the same time the nation's labor force declined by 600,000 persons in June, the department said.

Janet Norwood, head of the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics, said the accompanying drop in the number of jobs "confirms that a sharp deterioration in the economy accelerated during the second quarter of 1980."

A statistical quirk is responsible for the apparent contradiction of a hand-in-hand drop in both unemployment and employment.

The unemployment figure shows what percentage of the labor force — made up of all those who are either working or looking for jobs — is looking for work but cannot find it.

Mrs. Norwood explained the labor force declined — at least on paper — in June because many of the nation's high school and college age youngsters began looking for jobs in May of this year, earlier than they normally do.
 This caused a jump of 725,000 in the labor force in May, and that contributed to the sharp rise in the unemployment rate from 7 percent in April to 7.8 in May.

Seasonal adjustment is supposed to smooth out these monthly quirks, but Mrs. Norwood said in this case these adjustments apparently were not enough.

As a result, she said, the figures probably exaggerated the un-

Area jobless rate is brighter

TWIN FALLS — Delaying talk of a recession, the Magic Valley unemployment rate fell in June, according to Idaho Department of Employment figures released Thursday.

Craig Hobbey, labor market analyst in Twin Falls, said the seasonally adjusted unemployment rate in Twin Falls, Jerome and Gooding counties fell 4 of one percent in June to 5.7 percent, at the same time, unemployment in the state increased by 3 of one percent to 7.7 percent.
 Unemployment in Idaho is at its highest level in more than five years.

But in the Magic Valley, lower interest rates are stimulating some business activity and farm activity is in full swing, Hobbey said. Most of the Kellwood Co. layoffs were reflected in last month's unemployment rate, while June saw people going back to work in some food processing industries.

The Magic Valley unemployment rate is about 1.5 percent higher than it was last year at this time. But during that time the unemployment rate for the entire state has increased about 3 percent, he said.

Judge Cunningham plans retirement

TWIN FALLS — Judge James M. Cunningham of 5th District Court in Twin Falls said Thursday he will resign Sept. 1.
 Judge Cunningham said he reaches age 65 at that time and will be resigning to "do some of the thousands of things I haven't had time to do."
 Judge Cunningham has been termed one of the best lay judges in the state, having worked his way up from a court reporter to attorney to county prosecutor and finally district judge.
 He accepted the appointment as district judge in July 1967 in Twin Falls and has held the office since.
 Although he is not required to retire at age 65, Cunningham said, "I don't happen to hold with the philosophy of those who are bent on dying in harness." He said he will continue to maintain his home in Twin Falls and take a day at a time as it comes.

 "I have enjoyed my work as district judge, and anytime you get to this point, you are sure to have some mixed emotions. I do have those regrets at leaving, but I am looking forward to it as well," he said.
 The Idaho Judicial Council has announced it will accept applications for filling the vacancy left by his resignation and also for an additional judge position in the 8th Judicial District.
 Applicants must be licensed to practice law in Idaho. They must submit their applications by July 21 for the Twin Falls judgeship and by Aug. 4 for the Pocatello position. Application forms may be obtained from clerks of the two district courts or from Don Burnett, executive director of the Idaho Judicial Council, P. O. Box 4645 in Pocatello.

 The state Legislature, in its last session, authorized an additional judge position in the 6th District with headquarters at Pocatello. The new position in Bannock County is to be filled effective Jan. 1, 1981.
 Burnett said the council will meet to interview prospective nominees with a meeting tentatively set for August in Twin Falls. Following receipt of applications, the council will circulate a questionnaire to the bar association members in each district and to the general public concerning qualifications of the applicants. The applicants will then be notified of the interview dates.

 chosen for one of three injury prevention pilot projects.
 The South Central District Health Department headquarters in Twin Falls, first looked into the problem in 1975, after a dramatic jump in accidental deaths in the region.
 Every year since then, the district has been collecting information on accidents and accidental deaths for Twin Falls County residents through the help of Magic Valley Memorial Hospital. For the rest of the region, the district only has broad statistics.
 The number of accidental deaths in the region has never been as high as it was in 1974 and 1975 (about 95 deaths per 100,000 population), but it stays consistently higher than the state as a whole.

Krause, the district's epidemiologist, said the hospital makes its emergency room reports available. From them, the district compiles the kinds of injuries and where they occurred. One fact missing until recently has been the age of the victim, but that is now coming in.
 Attempts to explain why Magic Valley has a high accidental death rate are only speculation "until we learn who's having the accidents," Krause said. Traffic accidents appear to be the main villain, although other kinds of accidents may also be more common than the rest of the country.
 The district has studied only one county, Twin Falls, in depth, and for only one year, 1976. About half the region's population of 124,000 lives in the county.

 The 23 deaths and their causes were: 13 auto accident, four drowning, four falls, three motorcycle, two drugs, two gunshot, and one each, auto-pedestrian, bicycle, electrocution, and tractor.
 Those deaths occurred predominantly to persons under the age of 30 and over the age of 50.
 Statistics on accidental deaths kept by the state of Idaho divide them into motor vehicle accidents and all others. In 1979, the national accidental death rate was 47 per 100,000 people; in Idaho, 68.8; and in the Magic Valley: 77.

Motor vehicle accidents accounted for 23.6 of those nationally and 39.9 in Idaho. Other accidents accounted for 23.3 nationally and 22.6 in Idaho.
 Dave Amick, traffic safety specialist, said western states tend to have higher rates because "people travel a lot farther to get to where they're going."
 In addition, people in rural areas drive faster, which makes accidents more severe. Idahoans and other residents of, relatively sparsely populated states are on the road longer and travel at high speeds longer than in other states.
 "The less the population the more opportunities for those who do travel to get into an accident," he said. "Most accidents occur in urban areas, while most of our fatal accidents occur in rural areas."

 Amick said that is reflected in both the death rate per population and per vehicle miles traveled.
 A recent study of six western states found the most populated more closely approaches the national average of traffic fatalities per vehicle miles traveled.
 Amick said in the states with higher rates than Idaho, the population is smaller or more separated by distance.
 Isolation sometimes contributes to delay in discovering even if someone is injured. Accidents while working in a farm-fall fit this category.
 Types and locations of accidental injuries do not correspond to those of accidental deaths. Most accidents occur in the home but most fatal accidents occur on the highways.

 Krause said the study also discovered other patterns. Deaths to drivers under the age of 25 occurred in July and August, and accounted for more than 70 percent of the county's traffic fatalities.
 Alcohol was associated with almost 70 percent of the deaths.
 She said three things cause accidents: equipment, environment and people. Learning what will work to change or help change those factors is the goal and that can only be accomplished by acquiring solid information about accidents, Krause said.

 monstration sites in the country to study injury prevention methods.
 The center near Idaho, and especially the district, has a data collection system for injuries, so Idaho was one of the first.
 The district's rates of death for accidents is the highest in state, which itself has a higher rate than the nation.
 For 1975-77, the accidental death rate in Idaho was 46 percent higher than the national rate. The district's was 75 percent higher than the national rate.
 "The whole state has a problem and we have a worse one," Kling said.

 Kling said there have been very few studies of accident prevention methods and that little is known whether it is practical on a community-wide scale.
 There are 90 many government studies on this, Kling said. "Here is a major cause of death in the country and very little is known."
 Preschoolers were a logical target group for the test project, Kling said. Accidents are the No. 1 cause of death in the nation among people up to the age of about 45.
 "The most important thing about the project," Kling said, "is that we are going to work with parents to help them prevent accidents involving their kids in the home and in cars. The study is secondary."

 Small groups of eight to 12 parents will be given an educational program and a follow-up session in a host home. There will be no "scare tactics or gory films," Kling said.
 "We will talk about specific things they can do in their homes to make them safer for kids," he said. "It will be practical, down-to-earth, and action oriented."

In the second session a short-time later, health workers will talk with parents about their experiences.
 "We want to find out whether the program works," Kling said. "We think it does. That's why we're testing it."
 The rates of injury will be followed over the course of five years and compared to those of children of a second group of parents who do not receive the educational sessions.
 The project is limited in the number of people who can be given the educational program. "Every thing stays the same, except that a few people get intervention," Kling said.

 If it does not work "we don't want to waste millions of dollars," he said. "If it works, we know it is worth it."
 Kling said in many cases it is known what people ought to do to prevent accidents, but the question is how they can be helped to do it.

"It doesn't take a major accident to hurt a small child loose in a car," he said, adding if children are in safety seats injuries can be cut in half.
 "It's just a matter of getting people to do it," he said.
 Kling said interested parents of any age preschool children can contact the district office, 734-5900. Confidentiality will be carefully maintained, he said.
 The funding of approximately $45,000 a year comes from the Center For Disease Control via the Idaho Bureau of Consumer and Health Education.

Friday briefing

Deadly holiday predicted
 By United Press International
 Firecracker blasts and jam-packed highways marked the opening of the busy Independence weekend Thursday and the National Safety Council warned both could be deadly.
 The Council estimated 500 to 600 people will be killed and another 25,000 to 28,000 will suffer disabling injuries between 6 p.m. local time Thursday and midnight Sunday. Council officials also warned fireworks are a potentially deadly hazard and could leave thousands of people permanently disabled.
 Phil Dykstra, manager of the council's Home Safety Department, said 80 percent of all victims of fireworks accidents are under 19 years old and males, victims outnumber females 3-to-1.
 He said more than 3,500 people were injured by fireworks between July 1 and July 8 last year but no deaths were reported.
 Police across the country braced for heavy traffic on highways leading to major resort areas. Authorities increased patrols along the most-traveled Interstate highways and warned the nationwide 55 mph speed limit would be strictly enforced.

Earlier, the Tass news agency reported that President Leonid Brezhnev had sent a congratulatory telegram to President Carter to mark the holiday, the first known direct communication between the Kremlin and the White House since the early days of the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan some six months ago.

Abscam guilty plea entered
 WASHINGTON (UPI) — A 67-year-old New York businessman pleaded guilty Thursday to charges he conspired to trade the political influence of Rep. Richard Kelly, R-Fla., for bribes from undercover agents in the FBI's Abscam investigation.
 The charges against William Rosenberg, who entered his plea in U.S. District Court in Washington, did not name Kelly but said the congressman accepted $25,000 from an undercover agent on Jan. 8 in a New York hotel.
 Rosenberg became the first so-called "middleman," who allegedly led undercover agents to congressmen in the sweeping scandal, to enter a guilty plea and promise to turn prosecution witness. In return, the government agreed not to prosecute him further.

 breathe free" and this is part of the national identity. "The bosom of America is open to receive not only the opulent and respectable stranger," George Washington said in 1783, "but the oppressed and persecuted of all nations and all religions."
 Nonetheless, from the 19th century "yellow peril" scare, prompting laws excluding Asians, to recent efforts to limit immigration officials to deport Haitians, each new immigrant wave has brought political backlash.
 Today, with unemployment bearing eight percent, the thought of spending millions of dollars to resettle outside the United States in California and Texas, lawsuits have been filed to stop the states from granting medical and other social services to illegal aliens.
 The rub is, it is not since every American — Indians excepted — is descended from an immigrant, and many quite recently. The 1970 census found that 34.5 million Americans were either foreign-born or had one or more foreign-born parents.
 While some unions complain that illegal aliens and new immigrants steal jobs from American workers, studies show that many of the jobs they take are low-paying ones that Americans don't want — domestics, dishwashers, lettuce pickers. Entrepreneurial Cubans are credited with reviving Miami's economy in the 1950s and creating more jobs for everyone. Soviet Jews have rejuvenated Brooklyn neighborhoods that were turning into slums.

 Some economists see an increase in immigration as a boon to the economy. Because of the recent slide in the American birthrate, the number of workers in the U.S. labor force is expected to decline from 1982 onwards as fewer young workers come of age.
 One thing has changed dramatically since the years when Ellis Island served as the gateway to America for millions of refugees fleeing Europe's economic woes. Unlike their predecessors, the new immigrants are increasingly from Third-World countries, challenging American society to broader racial and cultural tolerance.
 Meanwhile, attitudes have changed in the past two decades. The idea of the melting pot, in which all nationalities would blend into a homogeneous stew, is no longer fashionable. Instead, ethnic has become chic. American women dress in Mexican skirts and Indian shawls, cook with schools. Ethiopian, Afghan and Vietnamese restaurants are the rage in Washington and other big cities. Arab bread is sold in the Safeway. The most popular Bicentennial event in the small Midwestern towns four years ago was the ethnic festival.

 Immigrants are more inclined than ever to cling to their heritage. Spanish-speaking Mexicans, Puerto Ricans and Cubans have created cities within cities in such places as Miami and San Antonio. There is a culture which doesn't wash away with the passage of generations, a culture that demands equality with Anglo America.

3 die in gunfight inside car

ROSEMead, Calif. (UPI) — Three men were shot and killed Thursday in a gunbattle inside a parked car.
 The two men sitting in the car's front seat were pronounced dead at the scene and the third, who was sitting in the back seat and was apparently the assailant, died later at a nearby hospital.
 The victims, all Asians, were not identified until their families could be notified.
 Sheriff's deputies said the cause of the gunfight, which erupted as the car was parked on a residential street about 10 miles east of Los Angeles, was not known.

NEW YORK (UPI) — A man — and not his 125-pound Great Dane — was found guilty Thursday of second-degree assault for punching a woman in the face, authorities said.
 James Brown, 34, a cleaning service employee of the borough of Queens, had claimed that his dog had barked against the woman's face as she was bending over.
 As a result of the blow, the unidentified woman was hospitalized — for treatment of — four bone fractures around the left eye. Doctors also wired her jaw.
 The woman testified that she was walking with her 8-year-old son and their Husky Dec. 15 when Brown's Great Dane began to scuffle with her dog. She said Brown punched her in the face after she complained that the Great Dane was not leashed.
 The defense's request to introduce Brown's dog into evidence was rejected.

 In 1776, America's Declaration of Independence was proclaimed.
 In 1836, former Presidents John Adams and Thomas Jefferson both died — on the 50th anniversary of their signing of the Declaration of Independence.
 In 1960, the U.S. flag officially grew to 50 stars after admission of Hawaii into the Union almost a year earlier.
 In 1977, a bus hijacker killed two hostages and a day later staged at Kennedy International Airport in New York. He later surrendered and released 14 other hostages.

Today's weather

No hail, we hope, but rain is forecast

Twin Falls, Gooding, Jerome, and Bunker. Expect mostly cloudy with widely scattered afternoon and evening showers or thundershowers today and Saturday. Lows 50 to 35, highs near 80.
 Halley, Camas Prairie, and Wood River Valley:
 Variable clouds and mild with scattered showers or thundershowers today and again Saturday afternoon and evening. Lows in the mid 40s, and highs in the mid 70s.
 Northern Nevada:
 Chance of showers near the Idaho-Nevada border in this afternoon, but mostly sunny both today and Saturday.
 Synopses:
 Moist and unstable air Thursday continued to flow over Idaho from the southwest, although this was gradually moving eastward. Showers and thundershowers appeared in many areas in the afternoon and evening, but most of the heavy showers with gusty winds were in the southeastern portion.
 Although variable cloudiness prevailed over Idaho in the afternoon with scattered showers over southeast Idaho and the central Sawtooth mountains, winds and rainfall were both light.

 Cloudiness kept temperatures around the state from 5 to 10 degrees cooler than Wednesday.
 For instance, temperatures at 2 p.m. were generally low to mid 70s.
 Spraying winds of 10 to 15 mph will increase to 7 to 11 mph by noon today.
 Pan evaporation is expected to be 27 of an inch today and 30 of an inch Saturday.
 Having outlook indicates mild with only a chance of brief showers.
 Highest temperature in Idaho Thursday was 84 at Boise and Caldwell. Lowest reported temperature was 45 at Fairfield.

Elderly fall to heatwave

By United Press International
The poor, infirm and elderly are the main victims of an unprecedented Sun Belt heat wave blamed for more than 120 deaths that dragged into its 11th day Thursday.

Through the South the deaths of 123 people — most of them elderly — were directly or indirectly caused by the heat wave, including the first death reported in Mississippi since temperatures reached 100 degrees there three days ago.

In Texas, authorities said 31 deaths were caused directly by the heat and 47 were related. Arkansas reported a total of 17 heat wave deaths; 22 were recorded in Oklahoma; 4 in Kansas and 1 in Missouri.

Again Thursday, oven-like temperatures were recorded.

At 3 p.m. in Texas, Dallas-Fort Worth recorded 108 degrees. It was 113 at Wichita Falls, 104 at Abilene and 101 at Waco.

The reading of 113 degrees at Wichita Falls broke the old record for the date of 107 degrees set in 1931. It was the 10th consecutive day that a new record daily high had been set, and the forecast predicted a reading of 115 degrees before the day was over.

For most residents of the Southwest, the most air-conditioned region of the nation, the solution is simple: Shut up the house, turn the air conditioning to "high," stay inside and do as little as possible.

Many elderly residents, however, feel time is a bigger danger than the heat. Some have preferred to board up their homes' windows and remain inside. Instead of taking advantage of emergency shelters, they are taking their chances with heat stroke, concerned authorities report.

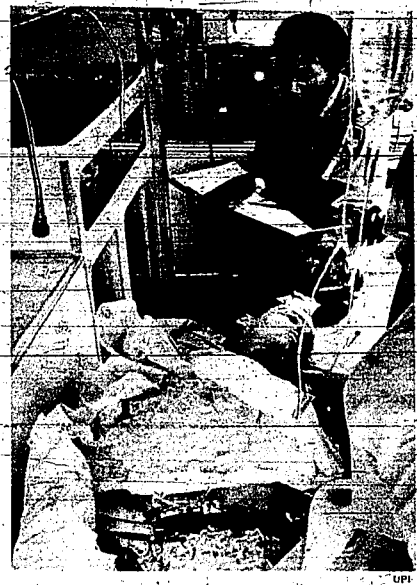

Many can only afford fans, which one medical official said only "blow hot air."

"The elderly are helpless, and they realize they're helpless against those uncontrollable elements," said Bill Lane, chief field agent of the Dallas Medical Examiner's office. "They defend themselves the best way they can."

Mae Anderson, 73, said she can't read and hasn't heard about emergency cooling-off shelters in Dallas.

She keeps her windows closed, she said, because "It runs across my mind that I might get robbed."

A Dallas medical examiner, Dempsey Gordon, said he was sent to check the body of an elderly man who died in an apartment equipped with portable fans.

Paramedics have taken to packing heatwave victims in ice

Foreigners flock to volcano to see devastated landscape

TOUTLE, Wash. (UPI) — Mount St. Helens has become an international attraction, drawing tourists by the hundreds, some from as far away as New Zealand and Russia.

Camera carrying tourists have come to Toutle, a small community at the north base of the volatile mountain, hoping for a glimpse of the destructive powers of nature.

The old Spirit Lake Highway ends about a quarter mile east of town, disappearing into a river of dried mud, ash and debris where the Harry Morgan Bridge used to be. A trickle is all that is left of the Toutle River near the town and downed timber lies in a tangled mass of limbs and roots.

Looking south, the devastation is worse. The Toutle River's south and north forks met just south of the bridge and mudflows from both channels merged upstream into a mammoth wave of destruction.

"It's unbelievable. You have to see it to believe," said Frank Murphy, visiting the area this week with his wife, Ruth, from Maryland.

Names in a guestbook at a Toutle souvenir stand indicated visitors from Illinois, New Zealand, Florida, Austria, Australia and Russia came to see the mountain.

Cowlitz County sheriff's deputies hoped the view of the destruction near the Harry Morgan Bridge would satisfy the curious and serve as a reminder that the cataclysmic May 18 eruption could happen again.

"It's just the same as before," said Cowlitz County sheriff's deputy Mike Clancy, managing a roadblock on South Toutle Road.

"You can't really keep the people out, but they're crazy to go in there."

Aids will fight volcano myths

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — Beginning Monday, a Portland advertising firm will begin a nationwide campaign aimed at dispelling beliefs that the Pacific Northwest is covered under tons of ash from Mount St. Helens.

Theme of the two-week campaign financed by a $150,000 grant from the federal Pacific Northwest Regional Commission, is "Exploding the Myth," said Keith Petzold of Petzold and Associates.

"Reports have been, through the the national media, that (the Pacific Northwest) is covered under tons of ash," Petzold said, pointing out that conventions were cancelled in areas untouched by ash.

Sudden storm kills 3, triggers looting

By United Press International
The temperature was blistering hot and the sun glared down from a cloudless sky. In seconds, arctic chilling tinged the air, and the sky turned black and green.

Thunderstorms racing across the Mississippi River from Missouri Wednesday killed at least three people and injured more than 100. Looting plagued sections of Illinois and Missouri. National Guard troops were ordered to duty and curfews were imposed in some areas.

Estimates of storm damage in Illinois alone ran to $20 million.

Seven-year-old Gayla Musgraves was boating with her family on Kincaid Lake near Murphysboro, Ill., when the surprise storm hit. The boat pitched over in 80 mph winds and the child drowned.

Four-year-old Sandra Sue Erwin — wading in 18 inches of water that covered a downtown street — was swept into a storm sewer in Evansville, Ind., drenched by nearly 9 inches of rain in three hours.

Authorities Thursday were searching for her body.

Tornadoes and high winds raked parts of Kentucky. A wind-felled tree toppled onto a mobile home in Kentucky's Edmonson County, killing Frank Bishop, 52.

High winds ripped the roof off a motel at Lake of the Ozarks, Mo., and flung it into a resort swimming pool, seriously injuring 5-year-old Greg Deffenbaugh, who was playing with friends.

"It happened so fast," said Carol

Houser, 27, a maid at the resort. "People yelled for the kids to get out of the pool. Greg was running but the wind got him."

"He was blown backward and he couldn't walk. Then the roof fell on him."

New rains hit eastern Missouri Thursday.

Winds gusted to 100 mph in parts of southern Indiana and southern Illinois.

Floods and power outages were widespread. Authorities in Illinois reported more than 90 injuries.

The storm swooped down on the area virtually without warning.

"The temperature was blistering hot and within a split second turned ice cold," said Sparta, Ill., Civil Defense director Jack Scheper. "The sky went from bright to black and green."

Twenty-one National Guardsmen were called into West Frankfort, Ill., to guard against looting.

July 4: Renew the pledge

After 204 years of being free, July 4, 1980, is an appropriate time to take stock of liberty and independence.

This holiday should mean much more than firecrackers, picnics and apple pie. But the fear is that the significance of July 4 seems to be a little more remote with each passing generation.

Winning freedom — and keeping it — has not been easy. The Declaration of Independence sets down the principles of a free America but, it has taken a terrible toll to keep those intentions intact.

Defining "freedom" has never been a simple task. One man's freedom is another's dilemma. The courts continue to struggle with the mounting challenges to the laws of the land. Decisions are either lauded or despised. As society changes, there is pressure for the law's interpretations to change.

There are those who fear our freedoms are being slowly, but surely, eroded: freedom of the press, freedom of speech; equality. Government is feared more than any other institution with intruding on America's freedoms — with the passages of laws, regulations and restrictions. That trend, however, seems to be slowly reversing.

Those wonderful goals of life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness are ideals which the country must forever seek to attain. But such ideals are never really won in the final sense. It remains a continual process, tempered and honed by each passing generation.

Too often, however, we forget the lessons of the past. One of America's closest links to its ideals has been the family unit and the demise of the family unit has been one of this country's most disheartening developments.

Still there is hope. There must be hope. The observance of the Fourth of July should rejuvenate our souls. Let's celebrate and toast our freedoms — while remaining steadfast in our commitment to keep them.

If nothing else today, recite the Pledge of Allegiance, then sit down and reflect about what patriotism means and what you can do to see that pledge prevail.

"Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty."

Thomas Jefferson

Celebrating in the Magic Valley

Magic Valley residents are fortunate to have so many local communities involved in celebrating the Fourth of July.

It's an opportunity to get out and join in with friends and neighbors, perhaps renew old acquaintances and make new friends. From Jackpot to Hailey, Hagerman to Buhl and to Rupert, there are activities ranging from parades to rodeos, queen contests to hollering contests.

In short, if there's something you really want to do to enjoy this Fourth of July, you'll find it in one of the Magic Valley's friendly communities.

File it under government waste

Government has a penchant for duplication and waste.

Take the Senate's just-released study on the nuclear mishap at Three Mile Island. The report blamed everybody in site but made no specific recommendations, all at a cost of $500,000.

Although Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo., said the subpanel took pains not to duplicate other TMI studies, the fact is this one didn't tell us anything not already discovered. It concluded that all agencies involved can be blamed for an inadequate response.

The study, we conclude, is a prime candidate for Sen. William Proxmire's Golden Fleece Award.

Lessons of growing up

© Boston Globe Newspaper Company. Washington Post Writers Group

BOSSY — he is growing up. This is not exactly a news bulletin, he tells the woman on the bench next to him. It's what children do. It's their thing.

Still, he says, facing the baseball diamond, he thought this growing up would all be gradual. Instead, his kids seem to lurch from one age to the next the way the oldest takes the corner in his driving lessons. They shift from one gear to the next with the most unnerving sound effects.

He remembers when his oldest was only three. The nursery school boy holding his hand said hello to someone on the street. How could he know someone the father didn't know? Even then, he felt these tiny electric shocks of independence.

Now they were going through rites of passage again. The oldest is getting his license. The youngest is heading for junior high school.

On cue, the 13-year-old came up to bat. In a matter of weeks, months, the boy had gotten it together. He was in the stance, the eyes. It was as if his body had been preparing for today's final exam. He passed it with a solid double.

The father watched him, as only parents watch their own. Too proud one minute, and too critical the next. To be a parent is to know excess. But today he felt something else, between wonder and wistfulness, between love and loss.

Maybe, he says to the woman, he is going through a kind of adolescence himself. Maybe parents go through a second one with their kids: caught here between the pleasure of seeing them grow and the pain of letting them go.

He chronicles the little things. The projects they bring home from school have changed. A kitchen-block table replaces the first raw-wooden-block candlestick. A 16-page civics paper replaces the crayons. The boy heading off for camp once had anxiety, now he has a list and extra socks.

While they talk and watch, the team changes. The father's eyes sweep by to pick up a glove and beads for third base. Someone hits a line drive at him and the boy drops it.

The father is on his feet in a second and then back down again. He tells the woman: Two years ago the boy would have been in tears; now he recovers quickly. The woman tells him: Two years ago you would have been compulsive coaching; now you are a spectator.

Yes, he says, we are both growing up. But, he adds grumpily, the difference between my son and me is that I have been his age and he has never been mine. The man laughs. This is a difference that makes no difference.

Yes, once upon a time, this man thought he knew a great deal about fathering. He had, after all, been a child, had a father. He pictured himself guiding his children around the potholes of his own youth. He would pour everything he had learned about life into their heads so that they would be protected from the world.

He thought his life would be a foundation that they would build on from where he left off, like skyscrapers.

But his children are more like he had been than like he wished he had been. Now, gradually, he was beginning to accept what Doris Lessing once wrote, that "this son, all of them would have to make the identical journey he and his contemporaries had made; to learn lessons, exactly as if they had never been learned before."

In turn, he was learning the lessons his father had learned before him: about the intensity of feeling and wanting for his children, about the need for letting go. The game ended. The lanky youngster sipped over. He handed the 42-year-old man a glove and a ball. He took $3 to buy pizza with the team and took off. Half-way across the field, the boy yelled, "Hey dad, thank for coming."

The man waved after him: "It was okay. It was what happens. They grow up."

Indian fishing issues

The controversy over Indian fishing at Rapid River is one of the consequences of the declination of Idaho's wild salmon and steelhead runs by dams. We are quarreling over the remnants of a once-magnificent resource.

Hundreds of miles of streams where salmon and steelhead once existed have been blocked by dams. And the dams built in the 60s and 70s on the lower Snake have created a deadly obstacle course for seagoing fish from Idaho.

The Indians should be wise enough to recognize the importance of allowing the fish returning to Rapid River to reproduce so the run can be maintained.

This Rapid River run was established with the help of a hatchery. The hatchery was built to offset, partly, the destruction of wild runs of salmon and steelhead that once reached as far up the Snake as Salmon Falls.

The Indians, however, can point out that it is the white man who built the dams that destroyed most of the fish. With fewer dams, there would be large numbers of salmon and steelhead returning to Idaho, for both Indians and non-Indians.

Northwest fishery agencies have hopes that the runs can be revived. Additional hatcheries are being built.

Passage problems are being studied. Even if the plans succeed, however, we will never see the likes of the wild salmon and steelhead runs we once had.

What has happened to our salmon and steelhead runs has also happened to some of our trout fisheries. With salmon and steelhead decimated, trout fisheries are more valuable. Trout habitat under assault from a number of directions.

The legislature voted earlier this year to water down the water quality requirement for dissolved oxygen below dams. While the results are not fully predictable, fishery biologists believe trout numbers, size and vitality will drop.

Some proposed dam projects, notably on the South Fork of the Payette River and at Eagle Rock below American Falls dam, would harm valuable trout fisheries.

Decisions by the State Land Board on proposed riverbed leases and proposed dredge mining applications will be important to trout fisheries on my miles of streams. So will a decision of the Idaho Department of Water Resources on applications to alter streams for dredging.

The basic issue at present is how the Land Board, the Land Department and Water Resources enforce existing laws. We have good laws on the books to protect streams. The critical question will be how the laws are enforced.

Idaho sportsmen have won two victories this year on stream fisheries. One was a legislative decision to maintain a minimum flow in Silver Creek. The other is Congressional action on the River of No Return wilderness. The River of No Return legislation will help protect quality of hundreds of miles of streams for salmon, steelhead and trout.

It includes an important addition to ban dredge mining on part of the Salmon River, and on the Middle Fork of the Salmon and its tributaries. The Idaho legislature rejected legislation similar to this amendment this year when a majority on the Senate Resources Committee refused to consider the bill.

Idaho Indians and non-Indians are all in the same boat concerning salmon and steelhead. We have lost most of what we once had because of destruction of habitat.

If habitat for trout is sacrificed, a step at a time by such decisions as the one on oxygen, we could eventually be in the same position with wild trout. The development at any cost philosophy that destroyed most of our salmon and steelhead is still very much alive in Idaho politics.

State Sen. Ken Robison, D-Boise, is the editor-publisher of the Idaho Citizen.

Patriotic reflections on flags, legends and liberty

© Universal Press Syndicate SCRABBLE, VA. — Who could have a Fourth of July without flags? They are flying high this weekend at our home in the Blue Ridge mountains, flags of the glorious Revolution, and they bear legends for the ages.

One flag depicts a coiled snake, and its legend sounds a warning: "Don't tread on me. A second carries the symbol of the pine tree, and its legend is a prayer: "An appeal to heaven: The third calls out with a single word, 'boldly' to every schoolboy: purple: Liberty!"

These were the great themes of the American Revolution; they echoed and symbolized those eloquent declarations that every schoolboy knew. The American colonies, declaring themselves to be free and independent states, went to war to preserve the liberties of free men. They took arms, "with a firm reliance on the protection of divine providence."

What has become of those themes today? They still engage us in political debate. But do they exhibit the same vitality they exhibited 200 years ago? Let us consider.

"Don't tread on me! — Back in January, after the Soviet Union invaded Afghanistan, President Carter issued a warning: "Let our position be absolutely clear: An attempt by any outside force to gain control of the Persian Gulf region will be regarded as an assault on the vital interests of the United States. It will be repelled by use of any means necessary, including military force."

On this Fourth of July the question may be soberly raised: Do we have the same — more to the point, do we as a people have the will — to back up the president's warning? We have let our Navy waste away to half its capability of 1960; in the draft arena of strategic weapons, we have become a vulnerable No. 2. We have treated our servicemen so shamefully that seven out of every 10 recruits refuse to re-enlist for a second term. Perhaps the old legend should be revised: Please don't tread on me.

What of the role of religion in our national life? Once it ranked large. Jefferson's fervent Declaration invoked divine providence. The Articles of Confederation came into being, or so the authors asserted, because "it hath pleased the Great Governor of the world to incline the hearts of the legislatures, to approve the said articles." In agreeing to the Constitution of 1787, several of the ratifying states demanded an amendment guaranteeing the free exercise of religion.

Wife of his for Vermont's Successive court decrees have imposed an antipathetic neutrality upon our public institutions. Let no germ of fanaticism in Maryland, in order to qualify for federal aid, must strip every religious symbol from its walls. Baccalaureate ceremonies vanish from our public schools. Children are forbidden voluntarily to join in prayer in their classrooms. Church membership barely holds its own. When we pledge allegiance to the flag — in itself, a slowly vanishing custom — we speak of "one nation, under God."

Do we speak with our lips, or with our hearts? And what of liberty? Americans "fierce love of liberty" in Burke's phrase, once ignited and sustained the flame of revolution. That flame burns not so brightly now. The rule runs that once led a hope of success to the risk of failure have somehow been softened, free marketplaces yield to regulated marketplaces. There are times, watching the third flag ripple in the wind, that I wonder if its legend should be amended in favor of a comfortable word: Security!

Our national anthem is unique in one regard. So far as I know, it is the only anthem that ends not with an assertion but with a question: Does our banner still wave "over the land of the free and the home of the brave"? My own answer is, yes. By any measure of comparison, we are indeed free. And despite the pusillanimous howls of a few contemporary boys, there is no reason to doubt the essential bravery of our people. But taking one thing with another — on this Fourth of July, let us say our prayers, and sing our anthem, and take a thoughtful look at the flag behind — and at the road ahead.

FBI papers jury splits on verdicts for mob chiefs

CLEVELAND (UPI) — A federal court jury Thursday found two underworld leaders guilty of bribing an FBI clerk to obtain secret government documents, but the main prosecutors most wanted to convict reputed mob boss James T. Licavoli was acquitted.

The jury said the incident was only the second time in the agency's history an FBI employee has turned over confidential papers to organized crime figures. The documents were taken from the Cleveland FBI office in 1977-78.

Found guilty on two counts of bribery were mob lieutenants Anthony D. "Tony-Lib" Liberatore and Thomas "Tommy" Lanci. Liberatore, a convicted police-killer and once a member of the FBI's "Ten Most Wanted List," was a major political appointee of former Cleveland Mayor Ralph Perk.

The jury acquitted Licavoli, once a member of Detroit's notorious "Purple Gang," and reputed mob lieutenant John P. Calandra Sr.

As the verdicts were announced in the jam-packed courtroom, the tense atmosphere was broken only by soft sobbing from a relative of Lanci.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Abraham Foretz, chief prosecutor in the case, appeared angry and frustrated regarding the acquittals of Licavoli and Calandra, but declined to discuss any of the verdicts.

Liberatore will remain free on $500,000 bond and Lanci will remain free on $350,000 bond. Their attorneys vowed to appeal the convictions.

The defendants were accused of participating in a plot to bribe former FBI file clerk Geraldine Rabinowitz and her husband, Jeffrey, to steal secret documents on underworld activities.

The Rabinowitzes were key witnesses in the three-week trial. They pleaded guilty two years ago to two counts each of accepting bribes for the papers. They said they took nearly $16,000 in bribes.

Prosecutors contended the bribery of the couple was linked to the bomb slaying of Cleveland racketeer Daniel J. "Danny" Greene, in October 1977.

GOP confab faces piles of garbage

By United Press International
Shirley Munson, shouldering a picket sign Thursday outside the Detroit museum at which she has worked for 28 years, warned Republican National Convention delegates to expect mountains of garbage, idled buses and angry demonstrators.

Cabs were at a premium and buses at a standstill in Detroit on the third day of a city workers' strike.

A walkout of policemen and firemen in New York averted and a wildcat strike that left garbage piling up in the streets of New Haven, Conn., ended Thursday.

The Detroit strike threatened to disrupt the GOP National Convention, set to open July 14.

"The city can't be too worried about the convention," said Mrs. Munson, a senior personnel clerk at the Detroit Institute of Arts. "Otherwise, they'd settle."

Though bus drivers were not among the 9,000 strikers, bus mechanics were and all bus service was halted.

More than 200,000 bus riders were forced to hitchhike, borrow cars or walk to work. The strike also halted garbage pickups and other services but did not affect police, fire, court or airport operations.

One man who usually catches a bus to work said he put on a pair of sneakers and hitchhiked.

"I'm surprised how many people have helped me out," he said. "It's about 25 miles to work and I only had to walk three or four."

Contract talks between the city and striking Council 25 of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees recessed just before 6 a.m. EDT and were to resume at 10 p.m.

"The progress has been very slow and (there is) not much of it, but there is some of it," a union spokesman said.

In New York, city and union negotiators announced tentative agreement on a two-year contract Thursday, just hours before 44,000 uniformed workers, including police, firefighters and sanitation workers, planned to walk off their jobs.

"Everybody comes out of this with honor and dignity," Mayor Edward Koch said as the agreement was announced.

The uniformed workers achieved their single most important goal — winning raises higher than the 8 percent annual hikes recently won by a coalition of 235,000 municipal employees, most of them civilian.

While the two contracts were expected to cost a total of $1.62 billion, Koch said he believes the city has the money to pay for them.

Mine strikers enjoy benefit fund reserve

PHOENIX, Ariz. (UPI) — More than 60 percent of the nation's 39,000 striking copper workers are receiving vacation pay and are in no immediate danger of financial hardship, according to a union leader.

Cas Alvin, spokesman for the 26-union coalition that struck copper companies in eight states this week, said many of the companies allow their workers to schedule their paid vacations during the strike.

Alvin said nearly all the strikers have money available to last out the four-to-six week strike he is predicting.

"Nobody will die," he said. "There'll be no walling in the streets."

Alvin said the average union worker has three weeks of vacation pay due. He also said union benefits would be sent out to the workers if the strike lasts longer than three weeks. Strike benefits are based on need and said a union member with a large family could possibly receive $250 a week, Alvin said.

While admitting "there were no big issues" separating the two sides, Alvin forecast "a quiet" holiday weekend at the bargaining table.

Alvin said the companies would benefit from a strike, using the time for maintenance and construction work at mines and smelters.

Wages and cost-of-living increases were the stumbling blocks that led to the strike, which began at 12:01 a.m. Tuesday.

The unions, whose members now receive an average wage of $10.23 an hour, are seeking about a 50-cent an hour boost over a three-year contract along with improved fringe benefits while management's last salary offer was about 70 cents an hour.

Nearly half of the striking workers are in Arizona, but also affected are union members of mines and smelters in Washington, Utah, Nevada, New Mexico, Texas, Maryland and New Jersey.

GUESS WHAT, DAD?

Shirley Leventahl, a 46-year-old Cape Town, South Africa, grandmother, had a storm? She says she went home from work early — and gave birth to a baby girl. Which was a bit of a shock, since she had no idea she was pregnant. Says she, "I thought I had put on a little weight recently but I never thought the weight was a baby." And from Mrs. Leventahl's daughter Elizabeth came what may be the understatement of the decade — "Boy, was dad surprised when he got home."

BY THE BOOKLET

These days, anyone with college-bound offspring needs a lift, and because her national column, "Education Today," was instrumental in helping people find one, UPI's Patricia McCormack has been given the American Legion's Outstanding Service Award. The legion publishes a booklet titled "LIT," a guide to scholarships and career financing. New York State Legion Commander Al Merino says her column on the booklet triggered "tremendous national newspaper reader response."

NORTH STAR

They should have inscribed the 17th star in Hollywood's Walk of Fame with a maple leaf, but even without that Canadian identification, Anne Murray took her honor in style. She was escorted to the podium by two Royal Canadian mounties and a bagpipe player to hear Los Angeles Mayor Tom Bradley proclaim "Anne Murray Day" in his city.

the rocks, Glenn Campbell and country singer Tanya Tucker are making no secret of their romantic liaison. But Campbell still is smarting under charges he stole his best friend's spouse. Says he, in People magazine, "I didn't steal my best friend's wife. They were already apart — and anyway, Mac and I were never friends. I played some golf with him in Los Angeles."

A L.A. CARTE

John Rockwell really didn't plan a mob scene. He just wanted to initiate his new West Hollywood restaurant, Rockwell's, in high black-tie style. What he got Tuesday was a celebrity packed crowd of around 800, a block-and-a-half traffic jam and mass claustrophobia. Said comic Jack Carter, surveying the mass of humanity, "It's just a few thousand of his closest friends." Growled a much elbowed fellow guest, "He has too many friends."

THE MOOD IS NUDE

Now comes a gift for the person who has everything — but doesn't want to show it on the beach: Gloucester, Mass., inventor William Taylor is offering the "Skinny Dip Clip" — an egg-shaped foam float to anchor the bathing suit of the closest skinnypiper who hungers for nudity after wading into the water. The little float keeps the suit nearby and ready to don again when the swim is over. It retails for $5.95, Taylor says it's an "unsuitable gift for anyone."

Court ruling clears trial for doctor

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (UPI) — A criminal trial against the doctor who allegedly overprescribed drugs to the late Elvis Presley and 10 other patients does not constitute double jeopardy, a criminal court judge ruled Thursday.

Attorneys for Dr. George C. Nichopoulos, who was indicted on criminal charges for overprescribing uppers, downers and painkillers for the rock star, said they would appeal Judge Bernie Welman's ruling.

The attorneys also charged the only reason criminal charges were brought against Nichopoulos was because he treated the famous singer, who picked up his last batch of pills from the doctor the day before he died.

"No physician ever brought before a licensing board has been subsequently selected for civil prosecution," said John Thomason, attorney for the doctor. "Nichopoulos was selected simply because one of his patients was Elvis Presley."

Defense attorneys also filed a motion to dismiss the indictment against the white-haired physician — on the basis of an April 1980 state Supreme Court ruling that said the presence of prosecutors in a grand jury proceeding was improper. The criminal court judge took the motion under advisement.

African woman fined for enjoying bigamy

PRETORIA, South Africa (UPI) — A judge found Mrs. Louisa Theron guilty of bigamy despite her plea that her first husband threatened to shoot her if she left and her second husband said he would suffer a heart attack if she refused his proposal.

Mrs. Theron, 25, burst into tears Wednesday when Judge Pieter Du Bruyn convicted her and fined her $250 or 200 days in jail for bigamy.

Theron pleaded guilty to the charge but hoped that she would be excused because of the unusual circumstances.

Mrs. Theron said she was left no choice and had to marry both men to "prevent a disaster."

The prosecution proved, however, that her first husband never owned a firearm and did not know how to shoot and her second husband never had a heart attack but was only pretending.

Small bears facing death sentences

LONDON (UPI) — Peter, Paul and Mary were put to death last year. And Tiddlywinks, who is only 6 months old, is under a death sentence unless the London Zoo can find someone to give him a new home.

Also under death sentences are Milk and Honey, two 18-month-old bear cubs who the zoo in London's Regent Park says it has no room for.

Their plight made the front pages of Britain's press Thursday in headlines that left no doubt that Londoners were shocked at the decision of their zoo to kill animals for which it has no room. A spokesman at the zoo said Peter, Paul and Mary, American black bears bred in the zoo in 1978, were put to sleep last year because their den was overcrowded.

Milk and Honey, both with their milky white baby fur, and Tiddlywinks, the youngest cub in the zoo, also may have to be destroyed if homes can not be found for them.

"We are in touch with zoos in this country and Europe to try and find homes for them," the zoo spokesman said. "Every year we have surplus stock and unfortunately there are times when no other zoo can take them."

The spokesman said bears are the most difficult animals to place because their care is expensive. But he said that other animals, including lions, also have been destroyed in the past.

Sloppy housekeeping good sign of creativity

A scholar who has made a study of creative people contends many of them are inclined to be sloppy housekeepers. They accept disorder in their daily lives, because they're searching for a higher order, says this writer. Memorize this, my dear, before tossing it into the cobwebs.

You can kill time at stoplights, too, by counting all the famous people who've used first initials with their middle and last names. F. Lee Bailey, F. Scott Fitzgerald, J. Edgar Hoover, J. Paul Getty, J. Carroll Nash, J. Robert Oppenheimer. That's all I can think of right now.

That food mogul of yesterday Henry Heinz was already producing for more than 37 varieties when he chose the trademark name for his Heinz company. He just liked the sound of 37.

TO FIX A RECORD

Q. Is there any way to fix a music record that has been warped by heat?

A. Possibly. Put it between two plates of clear glass, expose it for a while to the sun, then cool it—as is recorded between glass in a study place with some sort of weight such as a heavy book on it.

Q. Where's the country called Walrusia?

A. Nowhere. That was one of the sarcastic epithets tacked onto Alaska in 1867 at about the same time it was called "Seward's Folly" and "Icebergia."

Q. Do jellyfish melt?

A. Sort of. They evaporate.

REAR VIEW

Forty-three percent of the grown women in this country are dissatisfied with their rear-view appearances in triple mirrors. They are not proud of the findings in a survey by a national magazine. Men were less concerned with this matter. Only 20 percent of them groused about their backside. This is a worry about which many care more than I.

James Euland Jr., born using nosedrop fertility drugs, is shown off by his mother UPI

Nose drops bring fertility

CHARLESTON, S.C. (UPI) — The discovery of a simple method utilizing nose drops to aid conception in women who do not respond to more common fertility drugs was announced Thursday by Medical University of South Carolina researchers.

Doctors presented 6-month-old James Euland Jr. at a news conference and said he is believed to be the first baby born in the United States as a result of the experimental treatment.

Doctors Shaila Phanseey, Raghavan Nair and H. Oliver Williamson said the therapy is less likely to produce side effects, such as multiple births and ovarian cysts that are associated with some fertility drugs currently in use.

Side effects are less likely in theory because natural hormones rather than synthetic fertility drugs are used to directly stimulate ovulation, she said.

Dr. Phanseey, an instructor in obstetrics and gynecology, said a synthetic variety of a brain hormone known as LHRH (LH-releasing hormone) is being used with a common fertility drug, clomiphene, to induce ovulation in her patients.

LHRH is used to stimulate the pituitary gland to produce two natural hormones necessary for ovulation.

Other scientists have administered LHRH by injection, but patients must go to a medical facility three to four times a day for at least four days for as many months as necessary to achieve conception, she said.

By administering LHRH intranasally in larger doses, she was able to eliminate the need for injections after first stimulating a patient's ovary by having her take clomiphene orally, Dr. Phanseey said.

A patient can administer the nose drops at home, resulting in a saving of time and money. The only other known use of the drug intranasally has been in Israel, she said.

The inability to ovulate causes 30 to 40 percent of the infertility in women, she said. The unusual method is being tried only on women who do not ovulate and show no response to commonly used fertility drugs, she added.

Five of the eight women she has administered the drug to have ovulated, and three have conceived. Two patients, including the mother of James Euland Jr., delivered healthy babies, and one aborted after three months but Dr. Phanseey said the miscarriage was not caused by the treatment.

John Paul endorses strike rights

SAO PAULO, Brazil (UPI) — Pope John Paul II went to the industrial heartland of Brazil Thursday, where he told thousands of workers in a soccer stadium the Catholic church supports their right to strike.

They responded with joyous cries of "Liberty! Liberty!"

The pope flew into Sao Paulo, South America's biggest city with more than 7 million people and its massive industrial center, on the fourth day of his 12-day, 9,000-mile tour of Brazil, where crowds estimated at up to 2.5 million people greeted him.

Despite a light rain and temperatures of 50 degrees, cold for the tropics, immense crowds lined the 10-mile motorcade route from Congonhas airport to the military airbase where the Polish pontiff celebrated an outdoor mass in honor of a 16th century Spanish missionary who founded Sao Paulo.

More than 1 million people, who had to walk several miles in mud to get to the site, attended the mass. The crowds shouted "John, John, John is our brother."

Beginning April 2, some 250,000 metalworkers and autoworkers in Sao Paulo began a strike for higher pay and better condition that a government labor court declared illegal. The local Catholic church supported the strikers and drew rebukes from the government.

In his speech the pope outlined what he called "the Christian formula for a just society," saying it includes job security, fair pay and the right to join unions and strike if necessary.

The pope said governments that ignore these requirements and do not promote an equitable distribution of wealth risk destruction from within.

The workers called him "companion" or fellow worker and screamed "Liberty! Liberty!" as he spoke.

But he tempered his remarks by saying that social injustice does not justify violent revolution.

Reader's Digest promo fined

WILMINGTON, Del. (UPI) — A federal judge has fined Readers Digest $1.75 million for a "subscriber's sweepstakes" mailing that violated a government order to stop misleading direct-mail advertising.

U.S. District Judge James Latchum ruled Thursday that Readers Digest continued to send potential subscribers fake checks or take currency as prizes in a "subscriber sweepstakes" letter even after it signed a consent decree to stop the deceptive practice.

Readers Digest officials said they would appeal the ruling and fine, which they termed "entirely inappropriate."

Latchum ruled that Readers Digest was guilty of misleading advertising by mailing fake checks made out to the addressee on each envelope. The outside envelope falsely indicated to the recipient that he had won a large amount of money. But the letters merely offered chances to win the amount if the recipient subscribed to Readers Digest.

The judge found that Readers Digest continued the practice even after it signed a consent decree in 1971 to stop deceptive advertising practices.

Latchum ruled that the large fine was needed to deter future deceptive practices and to uphold the authority of the FTC. Latchum also reasons that the fine was not excessive because it was only slightly more than Readers Digest spent to send the direct mailings.

Readers Digest spokesman John M. Allen said, "Readers Digest strongly disagrees with the decision of Judge James Latchum that any of its sweepstakes mailings violated a 1971 cease and desist order with the FTC, which the judge himself branded as 'not a model of clarity.'"

"The mailings, both of which were discontinued over five years ago, were sent to many millions of Americans, and, as the government agreed, not one person complained to either the FTC or the Digest that he or she had been misled or confused," Allen said.

Contamination found that made town sick

AUSTIN, Texas (UPI) — The Texas Department of Health reported Thursday that three of the seven wells that provide water for the city of Georgetown contain fecal coliform bacteria.

Two weeks ago more than half the city's 10,000 residents developed diarrhea and other stomach problems.

The Williamson County health director told residents to boil their water — a recommendation repeated following discovery of the cause.

Earlier Thursday, the Georgetown Chamber of Commerce was telling people the water was safe to drink.

MR. AND MRS. BRUCE E. SMITH

Nelson-Smith

TWIN FALLS — Joan Louise Nelson and Bruce E. Smith, both of Coos Bay, Ore., exchanged wedding vows June 14.

The service, written by the bride, was held in the Ohme Gardens in Wenatchee, Wash., with the Rev. William Williams, pastor of the Community church in Waterville, Wash., officiating.

The bride is the daughter of Harold and Margaret Nelson of Waterville and the bridegroom is the son of Vernon and Lorayne Smith of Twin Falls.

The bride wore a gown of ivory chiffon with a soft spray of sequins and pearls on the gulfure lace bodice and cap sleeves. The gulfure lace covered her cap, and the veiling, train and pleated skirt were trimmed in matching lace.

Kathy Brueske of Othello, Wash.,

was matron of honor. January Pfeilla of Cheney, Wash., was bridesmaid. J.O. Williams of Junction City, Colo., served as best man. Don Schmidt of Walla Walla, Wash., was usher.

Rod Morris of Coquille, Ore., sang at the ceremony and the reception. The trumpet procession was played by Neil Nelson of Texas, brother of the bride.

A reception held following the ceremony at Franklin House in Wenatchee, Wash., also marked the wedding anniversary of the bride's parents.

The bridegroom's parents hosted the rehearsal dinner in Wenatchee June 13.

Following a wedding trip to Lake Tahoe, the newlyweds will live in Coos Bay, Ore., where he is an education consultant for the Oregon Education Association.

MR. AND MRS. PATRICK O'TOOLE

Harwood O'Toole

JEROME — Debra Dee Harwood and Patrick W. O'Toole, both of Jerome, exchanged wedding vows June 7.

The ceremony was performed at the Jerome Nazarene Church with the Rev. Floyd Young officiating.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Farrell Harwood and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald O'Toole, all of Jerome.

The bride wore a gown of white organza with an empire waistline, featuring a bodice of lace with seed pearls and sequins, long sleeves accented with lace and a flounced hemline with a chapel train. Her two-tiered fingertip veil was capped with lace and seed pearls.

Lynda Harwood, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Donalyn O'Toole, sister of the bridegroom, and Kathy Woods of Twin Falls.

Pat Rediker of Jerome was best man. Tim Carroll of Boise and Don Jones of Jerome were groomsmen.

Shannon and Cathy O'Toole, sisters of the bridegroom, were candle-lighters.

Charlotte Henley of Jerome was flower girl and Scott DeBerard of Jerome was ringbearer.

Chris Webb was soloist, accompanied by Flora Rice on the piano. Janet May was organist.

A reception was held in the church fellowship hall with Velma Maddox and Betty Young as reception hostesses.

Kathy Hambleton of Ontario, Ore., cousin of the bride, was guest book attendant.

Connie Hemple of Twin Falls and Sandy Harwood of Boise, aunt of the bride, were in charge of the gift table. Jeannie Henley and Cal DeBerard were gift bearers.

The stairway wedding cake was cut and served by Virginia Hambleton of Ontario, aunt of the bride, and Ruth Ridgway of Pocatello, cousin of the bride. Susan Somerset and Mary Lou Adfield, aunts of the bridegroom, served refreshments.

Special guests were Mr. and Mrs. Howard Bevens of Jerome and Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Hale of Blackfoot, grandparents of the bridegroom, and Rev. and Mrs. Clyde Dilley of Notus.

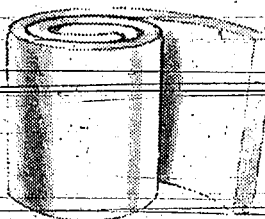

Following a wedding trip to the Oregon and Washington coasts and Vancouver, B.C., Canada, they will reside in Pocatello, where he will attend Idaho State University.

Phillips-Allen

KING HILL — Kristy Phillips and James Allen, both of King Hill, exchanged wedding vows June 7.

The ceremony was performed at the home of the bridegroom's parents in Nampa with Pastor Arnoe Spenk, minister of the Menonite Church of Indian Cove, officiating. He was assisted by Mr. and Mrs. David Phillips of King Hill, the bride's brother and sister-in-law.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Phillips of Glenn Ferry and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Eldon Allen of Nampa.

Attending the couple were Mr. and Mrs. Ray Smith of Kuna, the bridegroom's sister and brother-in-law.

Following the ceremony a buffet dinner was served in the Allen home.

They will reside in King Hill where he is employed by Larry Draxler of Rasadene Valley, south of King Hill.

Bell-Murray

TWIN FALLS — Sheri Lee Bell of Jerome and Lee Murray of Twin Falls exchanged wedding vows June 14.

The ceremony was performed at the Christian Center in Twin Falls with the Rev. Sheldon Slagel officiating.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Bell of Jerome and the bridegroom is the son of Jan Ward of Jackpot, Nev., and John Pilman of Crescent Valley, Nev.

Susan Klingler of Twin Falls was maid of honor. Gene Stigall of Twin Falls was best man. Cheryl and Jane Oegen, cousins of the bride, were usherettes.

A reception was held in the Christian Center following the wedding.

Reception assistants were Mrs. Ray Hayes of Jerome, Lauri Church of Kimberly and Mrs. Frank Bell of St. George, Utah, the bride's grandmother.

Guest book attendant was Tracy Klingler of Twin Falls.

Special guests were Mr. and Mrs. Frank Bell of St. George, Utah, the bride's grandparents.

Following a wedding trip to Nevada, they will reside in Twin Falls. She is employed at Times-News and he is employed in Nevada.

Pitsch-Berg

TWIN FALLS — Barbara Christine Pitsch of Twin Falls and Clifford Wayne Berg of Albany, Ore., exchanged wedding vows June 28.

The ceremony was performed at the Immanuel Lutheran Church in Twin Falls with the Revs. Arthur J. Cressmer and E.J. Bernthal officiating.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Pitsch of Hardin, Mont., and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Berg of Hoopie, N.D.

The bride wore a long-sleeved gown of white nylon organza over moire taffeta. The gown had an off-the-shoulder lace collar and a chapel train. She wore a white hat with a lace band and a yellow rose. The gown was made by Mrs. Shirley Heldemann.

Organist was Ruth Schepman of St. Paul, Minn.; vocalists were Jim Warner, Lon Ruhler, Karen and Korene Walters and Kirklan Walters, all from the Immanuel Lutheran congregation. Trumpeter was Brent Reinke.

Banner designer was Marvin Munter and the banner creator was Jane Kaes. Debbie Gunderson was the banner bearer.

Mr. and Mrs. Dean Ruhler hosted the reception at the church and Mr. and Mrs. Eldon Walters hosted a buffet supper later in the evening at their home. The rehearsal dinner was hosted by Mr. and Mrs. Keith Lierman.

The new couple will reside in Albany where he operates an air-filter cleaning business and she is teaching.

Dear Abby

Bachelor's fascination with hefty women needs trimming

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
© Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I am a 29-year-old bachelor with a problem concerning my preference in women. I am not a weirdo or kook who goes in for kinky sex. I am a normal, fairly successful professional man.

To get to the point, normal-size women do nothing for me. It takes a fat woman to really turn me on. I don't mean one who is pleasantly plump. I mean a very obese woman — and the bigger the better.

The most satisfying sexual experience I've ever had was with a woman so fat that her belly practically hung down to her knees. (I never knew exactly how much she weighed, but she had to be at least 400 pounds.) Most men would probably have found her repulsive; but to me she was wonderfully exciting. Of course, I'd never be seen in public with such a woman.

I am not proud of the fact that I am ashamed to be seen with women whom I find fascinating in private. Should I see a psychiatrist about my unusual preference?

—WITHHOLD NAME AND CITY
DEAR WITHHOLD: Yes, since you are ashamed of your preference and probably would be happier were you able to function as well with a "normal-size" woman, I see nothing wrong with your fascination for fat females, but there is something cruel and exploitive about using them only as sex objects.

DEAR ABBY: I think anyone who starts his lawn mower before 8 a.m. should be shot! Whatever happened to common courtesy? What if a neighbor was up all night with a sick child? What if a neighbor works the night shift? What if a neighbor has a long-awaited, well-earned day off, and wants to catch up on a few extra hours of sleep?

I've never heard of anyone getting a prize for the first lawn mowed in the morning, and I've been at it for 35 years. "Love thy neighbor" included consideration of this sort. Please print this; the offending neighbor never misses reading your column — nor do I.

—SLEEPY-TIME GAL
DEAR GAL: According to my mail, the early-morning mowing problem is a chronic pain in the ear to many. I don't recommend shooting at sunrise; anyone who mows at that hour, but your complaint is valid, so call on your neighbor and ask (civily) for a little more consideration.

DEAR ABBY: Whenever I ask my wife how she feels, she says, "I'm tired." Abby, I am so tired of hearing her say she's tired, I am at the end of my rope.

I help with the cooking and cleaning and make no special demands on her, so I can't for the life of me understand what she has to be so tired about. Is this normal?

Please don't suggest that I stop asking her how she feels, because if I do she will think I no longer care. We have been married almost 25 years.
—CARING HUSBAND

DEAR CARING: Everyone gets tired — occasionally — but — to be chronically tired is not normal. I urge you to insist that your wife see her doctor for a thorough physical checkup before she gets too tired to go. Her chronic fatigue could be due to boredom — poor nutrition, insomnia, insufficient exercise, menopause or a symptom of a serious medical problem. Don't put it off.

DEAR ABBY: I am 15 years old. Many times I have started to write to you about my problem, but I always end up throwing the letter in the wastebasket. Can't I have my family summed up my problem with these three questions: 1) What is a friend? 2) How do you get friends? 3) How do you keep them?

—FRIENDLESS
DEAR FRIENDLESS: A friend is someone who likes you and wants nothing of you but friendship. He doesn't like you less when you're crabby, moody or mean. He understands you. He can tell you when he thinks you're wrong. Without worrying about losing your friendship. And he forgives you without making a big deal out of it. You "get" friends by being the kind of person you want for a friend. You "keep" them by continuing to be that kind of person.

If you put off writing letters because you "don't know what to say," get Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Send $1 plus a long stamped (25 cents) self-addressed envelope to ABBY, Letters Booklet, 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

Lammers says his firing is for old charges

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

FILER — Filer Police Chief Randy Lammers said Thursday evening he is being fired for charges he has already answered.

He said he received a list of charges late Thursday from the Filer City Council stating why it demanded his resignation Tuesday night.

"There is nothing new. I have already been reprimanded or have taken punishment, if you will, for all of these things," Lammers said.

The charges, delivered to Lammers' home by the mayor, are the same ones for which he was given a five-day suspension without pay last month, he said.

Lammers said the council has charged him with failing to bury stray dogs disposed of by his department's members; failing to pick up dogs reportedly running at large in the south part of town; failing to notify Police Commissioner John Glandon before attending a four-day homicide school; failing to immediately notify Glandon about an alleged shooting incident; and failing to advise the council about a policy on fire arms and allegedly changing the date on the policy to indicate he did not have such a policy following the firing of a warning shot by a Filer officer.

He said he plans to have his attorney review the charges. He is currently suspended with pay until July 22, when he will answer charges in an executive session hearing.

When the council placed him on suspension Tuesday night, they also accepted the resignation of another police officer, Ron Moore. This leaves the department with only two police officers.

City officials say police coverage will continue without interruption through the holiday weekend with some emergency help from the Twin Falls Sheriff's office.

City officials had hoped to obtain help from off-duty police officers from Twin Falls, Buhl or the county. However, the plan did not materialize.

Police Chief Tim Qualls of Twin Falls said he has issued a directive to his men telling them they cannot work as police officers in other towns or for other law enforcement agencies on off-duty time.

"I did tell Alexander (Filer City Councilman Leland Alexander), when we were talking about helping officers in Filer complete training courses; that we would try to help out with coverage while the men were in class. This doesn't mean they are available to work under the present circumstances," Qualls said Thursday.

Councilman Robert Fort said acting police chief Gary Cushman is negotiating with two officers who may be able to help fill in.

In the meantime, Cushman will be on call with whoever assistance the sheriff's office can give.

Cushman will take the Filer police car home, and he has a portable radio for calls from the sheriff's office in the event of a serious problem.

"We will screen the calls so he doesn't have to go out at night or on off-duty time to answer a dog complaint or some minor problem. We don't want people to think he is working 24 hours without sleep, as he does have time to sleep even though he may be on call," Fort said.

The other Filer police officer who is still working, Ron Romero, resides in Buhl, and while he is also on call for emergency needs, he is too far away to respond immediately.

Chief Deputy Sheriff T. M. Kendrick of Twin Falls County said he contacted Sheriff James Munn who is on vacation and was advised the county will help out as much as possible and would assist in Filer in the event of an emergency.

"We are pretty short handed right now ourselves with vacations and a minimum staff and we just don't have the manpower to do much more than emergency help," Kendrick said.

Acting Police Chief Roy Lapray said he had not been contacted by Filer but said his department could help only in an emergency. Police Chief Ben Ekurt of Buhl resigned early this week, leaving that department one man short.

Fort said he is optimistic the city will be able to hire additional help immediately to fill the one vacancy and to have the other filled depending on the outcome of the July 22 hearing.

Jerome mayor states position on police chief

By RON ZELLAR
Times-News writer

JEROME — Jerome Mayor Marshall Everheart called a press conference Thursday to explain his reasons for asking Police Chief James McGowan to resign.

Everheart said he was reacting to a Times-News editorial that claimed he had not proven his case against McGowan. But the mayor added that he would abide by the Jerome council's 3-1 decision supporting the chief and would attempt to work with him "for the near future."

The mayor gave the following reasons for requesting McGowan's resignation:

- The new chief "made no attempt to become acquainted with the community or his police department."
- McGowan showed a "total lack of leadership" in not holding regular departmental meetings and in "allowing morale to slip to the point that five men resigned without bringing it to the attention of the council."
- And, Everheart said, McGowan "contributed to the problem by 'spending all his time consulting with (Sgt. Del) Low' and by refusing to assign Low to another shift as requested by the disgruntled officers."

The mayor emphasized that the five officers who met with the council last week had resigned their positions — not threatened to resign. He said two of the officers later changed their minds, and the others were asked to withdraw their decision until the council's Tuesday meeting.

Everheart said he and police commissioner Glen Capps met with McGowan Wednesday morning and discussed the council's questioning, including the use of firearms, pursuit of criminals and emergency situations outside the city.

He played a tape recording of a portion of the session, stating that the segment indicated that McGowan had no clear policy on the three critical areas.

Such policies are especially critical, Everheart said, if the chief replaces veteran officers with untrained recruits.

Everheart also said he requested an attorney general's opinion and confirmed that mayors have the primary responsibility for law enforcement in a city. He said he will not try to run the department but he will continue to seek answers from McGowan on policy questions.

He said the city has received a Boise lawyer's request for information regarding the employment of two officers dismissed by McGowan, adding that the request might indicate a lawsuit is pending.

McGowan, contacted after the press conference, said that he has followed previous policy in regard to firearms, pursuits and outside emergencies. He said he had instructed Sgt. Ernest Coats to provide the two newest members of the department with copies of the policies.

The chief said he has answered the council's request and noted that he has met repeatedly with several businessmen who came to him with specific problems.

McGowan said he would like to spend more time out in the community but that he has been "consumed with other things" in recent weeks.

Idaho code mentions mayoral police powers in three references.

"Mayors are charged with 'superintending control of all officers,' with preserving order and with seeing to it that ordinances are 'complied with and enforced.'"

McGowan may delegate authority, as in the case of appointing a councilman police commissioner, but court decisions indicate mayors do not have the power to appoint or release policemen.

Before $2.4 million in federal aid is given Rock Creek cleanup change required

TWIN FALLS — The work plan for cleaning up Rock Creek will have to be refined slightly before $2.4 million in federal money will be made available to local farmers.

The money, earmarked for Rock Creek under a Rural Clean Water Program, will be used to share the cost with individual farmers of installing conservation practices to reduce the pollution of Rock Creek. The project is one of 13 funded by Congress earlier this year.

Rich Yankey, district conservationist with the Twin Falls office of the Soil Conservation District, said work plan for cleaning Rock Creek had to be approved by a committee from the U.S. Department of Agriculture in Washington, D.C., before the money could be released. But after studying the project proposal recently, the committee asked for several revisions.

"We haven't been notified officially, but we were forewarned," Yankey said.

Some of the changes will just require rewriting, Yankey said. The basic approach and techniques for cleaning up Rock Creek were not questioned.

Yankey said the biggest problem appears to be clarifying how much and by whom various federal agencies will be paid for providing technical and support services for the project.

Despite the need for revisions in the work plan, Yankey said he expects the money to be in hand and ready to use for conservation practices by fall.

In the valley

Hit-and-run victim critical

HAGERMAN — A Hagerman man is in critical condition in a Boise hospital following a hit-and-run accident Wednesday night on U.S. Highway 30.

Hank Rodabaugh, 59, was flown to St. Alphonsus Hospital after he was struck by a car shortly after 10 p.m. while walking across the highway in Hagerman, according to Gooding County Sheriff Robert Aja.

Aja said a juvenile suspect has been identified in the case but has not been arrested pending the condition of the patient.

Storms damage some crops

TWIN FALLS — Potatoes and barley on farms between Burley and Oakley were damaged by storms Friday.

Severe storms were reported across the Magic Valley, including short periods of hail in Twin Falls, but there were no reports on whether the storm caused any crop damage in the Twin Falls area.

William Galkin, from the U.S. Weather Service in Kimberly, said hail appears to have been confined to Twin Falls. The Kimberly station only received .01 inches of rain during the afternoon, he said.

Beans could have been damaged by the hail, he said. They are still young and tender. Sugar beets and corn are probably hardy enough to resist damage, Galkin said.

Burley Agricultural Extension Agent Richard Garrard said the area between Burley and Oakley was hit by storms Thursday night and again Friday afternoon. He said farmers there reported barley fields "flat as a pancake" and potato fields where almost all the foliage had been stripped from the plants.

In contrast, both Jerome and Gooding counties enjoyed pleasant, sunny afternoons. Galkin said the weather was nice "almost everywhere but here."

Jury rules boy's fall in canyon a homicide

JEROME — A Jerome County coroner's jury ruled Thursday the death of a 31-year-old Jerome boy found in the Snake River Canyon was a homicide.

A statement prepared by Jerome County Coroner James Babcock and County Prosecutor Eugene Frederickson after the death of Brandon Rekow was "committed by a person or persons unknown."

The coroner's jury heard evidence Wednesday in a 10½-hour, closed-door session looking into the boy's death. Jurors also traveled to the scene of the death.

Babcock said death was caused by a fall into the canyon. He declined to elaborate.

The seven jurors reached a verdict at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, but Babcock withheld the results, saying he needed to confer with the state's Attorney General Eugene Frederickson about procedures to follow before releasing the findings.

Rekow was found by his stepfather during a helicopter search May 20. The body and the boy's bicycle were located at the base of a 20-foot cliff about six miles from his home.

The boy was last seen leaving his home southwest of Jerome on his bicycle about 8 p.m. May 19.

Babcock's statement said the Jerome County sheriff's office and the prosecuting attorney are continuing their investigation.

Second decision due July 17 on Melon Valley projects

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — County Commissioners will announce a second decision July 17 on the proposal for two planned small developments in Melon Valley.

Early this year, the board of Twin Falls county commissioners approved the two housing developments in spite of appeals by residents of Melon Valley. The county Planning and Zoning Board had recommended the approval and the commissioners granted permission for the Royal Crest development. The commissioners approved the Sun Trap Ranches housing development after an appeal from the developers to a Planning and Zoning recommendation for denial.

Ray and Doris Couch, representing their own interests and those of other property owners in the area, filed a district court action to block the two developments.

District Judge Theron W. Ward remanded the case to the county for another hearing for any new evidence and testimony.

A new hearing was held Thursday at 10 a.m. by the county commissioners for new evidence and information from opponents and proponents.

Owners of agricultural land and ranches in the Melon Valley Thursday continued to object to the two projects as "urban invasions of agricultural areas. Several reiterated their belief that the granting of the projects was in direct violation of county planning and zoning regulations.

Roy Couch said the two PUDs would add 147 homes to the valley, more than doubling the present population.

"The type of people this project will bring to the area will be a different type than those hard working families of limited means who originally settled Melon Valley and who still live there. They will outnumber us and be able to outvote us on such things as costly road improvements and other undertakings needed to serve a larger population," Couch said.

Marjorie Slotten of Twin Falls said it is the duty of county government to protect all areas of the county against urban invasion of agricultural areas and to preserve the agricultural base of the county.

Lloyd Shewmaker of Kimberly said the preservation of agricultural land, including that needed to support the area's livestock industry is vital to the economy of the area. He said this was one of the main purposes of the county's comprehensive land use plan. The farmer and livestock producer said the county is already overrun with five-acre housing sites, adding the PUD proposal is just a means of getting around the five-acre and 20-acre minimum size parcel in various areas.

Ranchers and farmers in Melon Valley for the Royal Crest developers, objected to testimony from anyone living in Kimberly, but Merl E. Leonard, commission chairman said any resident of the county would have an opportunity to speak.

Ranchers and farmers in Melon Valley listed a number of concerns including traffic on existing poor quality roads, their cost to improve should the roads be widened and improved, pollution of wells and streams from subsurface sewer systems, overcrowding of schools and a general incompatibility of housing with agricultural uses.

"I have plans for a small feedlot on my property, but I can't risk the investment if there will be dense housing nearby," said Robert Jaynes, who owns land near both proposed developments.

"I know this would bring objections from the new home owners. I already have been told my farming operation is not too desirable," Jaynes added.

Harry Harms said he has irrigated and fished in the area for many years. He said the irrigation-water seeps into the creek in many areas and if irrigation water does this the septic tank drainages cannot help but "end up in the creek."

Randall Morgan said the impact on the agricultural land from 147 new homes has not been fully assessed.

"You need only look to Blaine County to see what you are getting into," he said. "I think the entire county will be the loser, not just those of us on adjoining land."

Al Collins, president of Royal Crest Development Corp. said his company is not taking out agricultural land but giving the area more farm and than it now has by about 50 acres. He said the clay which prevents ever grass from growing on about 50 acres of the proposed site is being removed for building a dam. This is being replaced by a foot of good top soil for pasture development, he said.

Collins said the development will be an asset to Melon Valley with a pressure irrigation system utilizing water from Mud Creek, Silver Creek and new wells.

He said the system will be managed by the homeowners association. There will be miles of rail fence, hundreds of trees planted and roses along the fence lines, Collins explained. His firm, he said, has already spent $100,000 for irrigation improvements and $25,000 on a dam that will provide a small lake for wildlife benefit and protection.

"His development, he said, calls for 99 homes, with about ten to be built each year, extending the project over about 10 years.

John Priestner, Buhl engineer working with the project, said the proposed development by Royal Crest is an "enormous dream." He said it calls for only the highest quality in every way.

"It is refreshing to come across this type of development. Royal Crest has tried to meet every requirement and to meet the desires of the people in the area," he said.

He said the health department has specific regulations and has carefully tested the area. The project will meet all waste water disposal standards and will create no problems, he said.

Several land owners in the area, including Kenneth McDonald and Thaine Roberts, voiced support for the development. Roberts said development will come, and the two proposed projects offer a chance for high quality development.

Those testifying for and against Royal Crest plans supported their testimony also held true for the Sun Trap Ranches project.

U.S. appeals court reverses decision on Sawtooth case

BOISE (UPI) — The 9th Circuit Court of Appeals in San Francisco has reversed a U.S. District Court for Idaho decision on a constitutional challenge to creation of the Sawtooth National Recreation Area.

In a notice received in Boise Thursday, the appeals court judges said the lower court improperly dismissed a suit filed against the U.S. Agriculture Department and the supervisor of the Sawtooth National Recreation Area.

A three-judge panel convened in Idaho to consider the lawsuit ruled to dismiss the case in 1977, saying the suit raised the same issues that were brought up in two earlier lawsuits.

But, the San Francisco court said the third lawsuit was valid because it raised a new question, which had not been addressed during previous court proceedings.

The lower court now must re-consider the lawsuit and issue a ruling in the challenge to regulations governing the recreation area.

The three lawsuits all have been filed by various owners of land within the recreation area, which was created by an act of Congress in 1974. The landowners in their first lawsuit claimed Congress acted unconstitutionally in delegating its authority to the Agriculture Department.

The agency was charged with developing regulations designed to transfer land inside the recreation area's borders from private landowners to the federal government.

The three-judge panel sitting in Boise in 1976 ruled the constitutional challenge was not valid. The landowners subsequently filed a second lawsuit, which the three-judge panel then ruled invalid, dismissing both suits.

Sale of horse brings $105,000 lawsuit

TWIN FALLS — A lawsuit seeking $105,300 as the result of the sale of a Quarter Horse June 3, 1978, has been transferred to 5th District Court.

The case was transferred from Boise after attorneys requested a change of venue.

Gerald and Joann Conrad and their daughter, Nancy Conrad, are asking damages from "Thane" Lamson of Filer, his partner, Dean H. Parker, and the firm of Parker and Lancaster Auction Sales, Mr. and Mrs. Conrad, residents of Gem County, say they offered a Quarter Horse, Deslens Dick, for sale through the auction company owned by Lancaster and Parker and the horse was sold for $5,700.

They charge the auction sales concern failed to wait for the payment to clear the bank or to obtain proper guarantee of the check paying for the horse before turning over the registration papers to the new owners. The Conrads allege the new owners took the horse to British Columbia, Canada, and then stopped payment on the check and have refused to make good the payment or to return the horse to them.

Nancy Conrad was to use the payment from the horse for college expenses and has suffered anguish and loss of benefits as a result, the complaint states.

The Conrads ask for $5,700 for the horse purchase price, $20,000 for Nancy Conrad for mental anguish and damages, $77,100 punitive damages and $2,500 attorney fees.

The sun is barely visible through smoke and haze of Colorado's largest forest fire near Eagle

By Colorado Gov. Richard Lamm

Caution urged in forests

DENVER (UPI) — Gov. Richard Lamm Thursday appealed to Colorado residents and visitors to take extreme care while visiting the state's parched forestlands over the July 4 holiday weekend.

Lamm said the state still was trying to recover from three fires that destroyed more than 11,000 acres of timberland, including one fire that was the largest in state history.

U.S. Forest Service officials were carrying out mop-up operations at three sites — a 10,000-acre blaze in the White River National Forest near Eagle, an 850-acre fire in the Gunnison National Forest and a 640-acre blaze in the Grapaho-National-Forest-near-Grand-Lake. Two of the three fires were man-caused.

Authorities said the mop-up operations were going well and many of the firefighters were being sent home. Lamm noted there had been a rash of fires along the Front Range and other parts of the state in the past two weeks, including the Denver metropolitan area.

"Colorado has a very high (fire) danger," Lamm said. "We've had all kinds of different factors leading to this situation, not only a very hot spell but also a wet spring which allowed a lot of undergrowth to accumulate."

"We simply have a situation in Colorado where there is a very high potential for significant fire at a time when we've just finished fighting the state's most serious forest fires."

"It's a very significant problem. The only way we're going to do anything about it is have people help."

AGs conference Help sought to find missing tabs Hansen among speakers man on cross-country trip

ELKHORN — Former Idaho Congressman Orval Hansen will be among the speakers at the 1980 conference of Western Attorneys General.

Hansen, now an attorney with a Washington, D.C., law firm which specializes in handling energy subjects, will moderate a panel on the role of nuclear energy in the Western states.

The subject of the three-day conference, scheduled to begin at the Elkhorn resort on July 9, will be "Energy and the Public Lands."

The conference membership is composed of the attorneys general of the 13 Western states plus the American territories of Guam and Western Samoa.

Idaho Attorney General David Leroy will host this year's conference. Among subjects which will be discussed at the Elkhorn gathering are energy exploration and development, nuclear waste disposal and the sagebrush rebellion, Leroy said.

In addition to Hansen, speakers at the three-day gathering will include Lynn Coleman, general counsel of the Department of Energy, and Frank Gregg, national director of the Bureau of Land Management.

TWIN FALLS — The father and sister of a missing St. Louis, Mo., man have asked Twin Falls area residents for assistance.

Michael Francis Fallert, 27, disappeared last month on a trip from the home of his sister in California enroute to St. Louis.

Teton County Sheriff Tim Trout reported the missing man's pickup truck was found there June 18. Officials in the sheriff's office said Thursday the pickup was first sighted on June 18 and was brought to Driggs a few days later. It contained other personal items such as clothing.

Since that time, his credit card has been used for purchases in several areas.

Teton County authorities said the latest use was June 25 in Moran, Wyo., close to Driggs, but it was also used in an errand-palmer including Twin Falls on June 14, Idaho Falls, and Bozeman, Mont.

Members of the family and officers are anxious to learn any information possible about Fallert or about anyone using his credit card and have asked area residents with possible information to contact local police or Sheriff Trout at Driggs.

Teton County authorities say they have searched the area where the truck was found abandoned but have come up with no clues to the missing man. An officer said it appears the vehicle was driven there and abandoned in a forest campground near Victor and they fear foul play.

The family says Fallert was not the type to take off without contacting family members. He was due back in St. Louis on June 14, the date his credit card was used in Twin Falls.

His 1976 Ford Courier pickup was mustard color with Missouri plates and a plywood cover over the bed.

Fallert is described as 5 feet, 11 inches tall, stocky build and weighing 190 pounds. He has hazel eyes, dark brown curly hair and a full beard, dark except around his mouth where it is a lighter color.

Some reports have indicated his credit card was used by two men, although the family said he was traveling alone and knew no one in the area between California and St. Louis. One of the purchases was at a jewelry store. Teton officers said, but the family reported Fallert disliked men's jewelry and never wore it.

Authorities said the mop-up operations were going well

Cocaine trial verdict is guilty

HAILEY — A Ketchum man was found guilty in 5th District Court Tuesday of possessing cocaine with intent to distribute the illegal drug.

A jury found Roger Kim Fairfield guilty as charged, at the end of a two-day trial. Fairfield listed a North Fork address as the site of his arrest in February 1976.

Judge Thevon Ward ordered a presentence investigation in the case.

Couple sues for $121,000 damages

TWIN FALLS — Injuries from an automobile accident Nov. 1, 1979, have resulted in a $121,000 lawsuit in 5th District Court.

James W. and Helen Cobb of Twin Falls have brought suit against Richard Charles Capps after Mrs. Cobb allegedly suffered permanent injuries in a rear-end accident in which her car was struck by the Capps vehicle.

The complaint charges Mrs. Cobb had stopped to make a left turn when hit by the Capps vehicle.

Since the accident, she said, she has had continuing medical expenses and has suffered permanent injuries and has been forced to take time away from her work.

The couple asks $400 medical costs plus future expenses, $1,000 for loss of wages, $100,000 general damages, $10,000 loss of consortium for James Cobb and $10,000 attorney fees.

Olympic gold—a numbing, totally pleasant euphoria

"The first Russian I shook hands with had a smile on his face," said Mark Johnson, who had scored two of the U.S. goals. "I couldn't believe it. I still can't believe it. We beat the Russians."

SUN VALLEY — Four months have passed and Mark Johnson still can't believe it. The U.S. ice hockey team's 4-3 win over the Soviet Union in the 1980 Lake Placid Winter Olympics continues to seem a dream. Nor, says Johnson, can he yet believe the gold medals he and his teammates captured with their 4-2 victory against Finland — a game played two days after their shocking upset of the Russians, a game in which Johnson scored the final, clinching goal after the U.S. entered the third period trailing 2-1. "The medal is back in Madison," Johnson said last Saturday, referring to his home town in Wisconsin. "No, I don't think it has the significance now that it will as I go on, because it's still hard to believe. People consider me a hero but I'm trying to continue my life as it was prior to the Olympics. And it's really tough to do."

"You went back to your home town and once they knew you as just a player or a person and all of a sudden you were a star or a hero. It was a tough adjustment. People think you change, but you've just got to be yourself."

Maybe in twenty years or maybe next year or maybe tomorrow, I don't know when it's going to hit me that I actually won a gold medal."

Johnson, appearing tanned and well-rested but not entirely at ease, was speaking with a group of reporters in a plush conference room in the Sun Valley Lodge.

Seated to his right in a soft, brown leather sofa was his father, Bob, hockey coach at the University of Wisconsin and a member of the six-man advisory committee that helped Coach Herb Brooks pick this year's Olympic team. Johnson also served as coach of the 1976 U.S. Olympic hockey team.

To Bob Johnson's right was Art Berglund, general manager of the Broadmoor World Arena in Colorado Springs, Colo., and president of the U.S. team that competed four winters ago at Innsbruck, Austria.

The 17½ was in town for the fourth annual Bob Johnson Hockey School, conducted from June 21 to July 1 at the enclosed rink behind the lodge. This year's school attracted nearly 140 hockey players, ranging in age from nine to 17 years, from the intermountain west, the northwest and from cities as diverse as Las Vegas, Nev., and Atlanta, Ga.

All-stars American League spiced by new faces

NEW YORK (UPI) — Fourteen first-time All-Stars — fully one half of the 28-man American League roster — will be part of the AL squad Tuesday night when the AL tries once again to overcome the National League in the annual All-Star Game at Los Angeles' Dodger Stadium.

Manager Earl Weaver Thursday added 15 players to the AL roster, including three Milwaukee Brewers and two each from the New York Yankees, Detroit Tigers and Texas Rangers.

First baseman Cecil Cooper, shortstop Robin Yount and outfielder Ben Oglivie — the league's leading home run hitter with 21 — were selected by Weaver from the Brewers. Third Baseman Gralg Nettles and second baseman Willie Randolph were selected from the Yankees and will join elected starters Reggie Jackson and Bucky Dent and pitcher Rich Gossage to form the largest contingent from one club.

Milwaukee and Boston have three representatives each, with five teams placing two players and six clubs placing one each.

Catcher Lance Parrish and shortstop Alan Trammell were picked from the Tigers, while Weaver also tabbed third baseman Buddy Bell and outfielder Al Oliver from Texas.

Also selected by Weaver were Kansas City catcher Darrell Porter, California Angels second baseman Bobby Grich, Baltimore outfielder Al Bumbry, outfielder Ken Landreaux of Minnesota, Cleveland outfielder Jorge Orta and Rickey Henderson, Oakland's first outfielder.

The full roster includes 11 left-handed hitters and nine righties with a combined batting average of slightly over .300.

Three of the eight elected starters, Kansas City third baseman George Brett, Milwaukee second baseman Paul Molitor and Boston outfielder Jim Rice, are out of action with injuries but are expected to sit on the bench with the squad.

Hernandez, Hendrix put on NL roster

NEW YORK (UPI) — Keith Hernandez, the league's defending batting champion and current leader, and George Hendrix, the major leagues' leader in RBI, were named to the National League's All-Star team Thursday by Manager Chuck Tanner.

Hernandez finished only third in the voting for first basemen and Hendrix was 11th among outfielders according to the nationwide balloting announced yesterday.

Shortstop Garry Templeton and catcher Ted Simmons, St. Louis Cardinal teammates of Hernandez and Hendrix who have expressed displeasure with the fans' voting were left off the squad by Tanner. Templeton had said he would not play in the game if he didn't finish first among the shortstops and Simmons said the fans' voting was "a joke."

Dave Concepcion of the Cincinnati Reds was chosen as the backup shortstop and Gary Carter of the Montreal Expos and John Stearns of the New York Mets were picked as supporting catchers for starter Johnny Bench.

Also named to the squad were infielder Garner of the Pittsburgh Pirates, Ken Reitz of the Cardinals and Pale Rose of the Philadelphia Phillies. The outfielders picked by Tanner were Jose Cruz of the Houston Astros, Ken Griffey of the Reds, Dale Murphy of the Atlanta Braves and Dave Winfield of the San Diego Padres.

The 51st All-Star game will be played Tuesday night in Los Angeles.

Holmes takes umbrage at Ledoux' remarks during press conference

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (UPI) — Heavyweight boxing champion Larry Holmes and challenger Scott Ledoux nearly traded punches Thursday before their coming title bout, as harsh words led to threats and open-handed jabs.

At a news conference to promote Monday's fight, Holmes lunged for Ledoux, jumping onto a table separating them before being restrained by handlers. The two exchanged open-hand swipes without making contact.

Holmes, undefeated owner of the World Boxing Council crown, charged Ledoux after the challenger said he would "take his life" in the ring.

"You watch your mouth in front of my wife," shouted Holmes, seated with his wife, Diane, and their 4-month-old daughter, Kandy.

"You should praise the ground I walk on to get the opportunity of your life," he added. "I'm taking chump change to fight you."

Ledoux, getting his first shot at a title, stormed over to Holmes' table when the champion kept interrupting his manager, Joe Daszkiewicz, at the podium.

"You talk to me, boy?" Ledoux called out before the confrontation developed.

Later, Ledoux, of Crosby, Minn., accused the Boston, Pa., native of making it difficult to draw a good crowd to Minnesota's first title bout.

"I don't like this sucker and I'm going to hurt him bad," he said.

Holmes, 34-0 and shooting for a seventh straight title defense by knockout, said Ledoux would be lucky to last more than eight rounds. Ledoux's record is 26-3-4.

"Scott Ledoux to me is a tune-up fight and you know it, so there's no sense me hanging you no live," Holmes said. "If he goes eight rounds against me, he's lucky."

"I try to be a nice guy. I stay quiet. But sometimes you've got to let the people know. All Ledoux is going to do is beat me Everlast glove."

Holmes will earn an estimated $1 million for the fight, while Ledoux will pick up about $500,000. Regarding rumors of a planned bout between Holmes and former champion Muhammad Ali, a spokesman said a site and date remain unannounced.

In his turn at the podium, Holmes said of Ledoux, "He's a grass and I'm the lawn mower. My wife is gone now."

Boxer may be allowed to die

MONTREAL (UPI) — The family of lightweight boxer Cleveland Denny appeared to resign themselves Thursday to his inevitable death and summoned relatives to see him "one last time" before removing artificial support systems that have kept him alive since he was knocked into a coma 13 days ago.

"Maybe he has decided that if God wants him to live when they (doctors) take off the respirator, then he will live," a close family friend and adviser, Lynnwood Farr said.

"But before anything is done," his father, brother and sister have been called in from New York to see him tonight or early tomorrow morning," Farr said.

"Essentially, it's giving them a chance to see Cleveland one last time."

Authoritative medical sources at the Maisonneuve-Rosemont Hospital have decided that if God wants him to live when they (doctors) take off the respirator, then he will live.

Farr said doctors believed Denny would die within 20 minutes so an hour after the respirator was disconnected.

"All the respirator does is force oxygen into his mouth, so that the heart muscle keeps pumping," Farr said. "But there is absolutely no brain activity at all."

"We have known since the Wednesday after the fight that Cleveland was dying," Farr added.

Denny, a member of the Guyana Olympic boxing team who elected to stay in Canada after his nation withdrew its competitors from the 1976 Montreal Olympics as part of a black African protest, was knocked unconscious June 25 by Canadian lightweight champion Gaetan Hart, 26, of Buckingham, Quebec.

Denny never came out of the coma. It was the second tragic ring accident involving Hart in as many fights. On May 7, one of his punches sent boxer Ralph Racine, 24, of Niagara Falls, Ontario, into a coma with a brain injury that ended his fight career.

Racine is undergoing rehabilitative therapy in hospital in Hamilton, Ontario.

"The neurosurgeon, who operated on Denny was the same one who operated on Racine," Farr said. "He said to me, 'Is it possible for the same guy to do the same injury to the same spot in two fights?'"

"He (the surgeon) was amazed that it could happen twice the same way."

Farr said the gravity of Denny's injury was confirmed June 25 when a brain scan, done at a second Montreal hospital showed that the force of blows to his head caused so much swelling that the vital brain stem which governs physical activity was shifted.

"The legal right to decide on further treatment, or its withdrawal, belongs to Denny's wife, Clarine, 24, who married the fighter three years ago and bore him a son five months ago."

But Farr said she had deferred any decision until the inevitability of death was accepted by the fighter's mother, Mrs. Dorothy Denny.

"Described as very close to her son, the mother clung to hope, seeking further medical advice before apparently reaching a final conclusion."

Farr was restrained in his comments about Hart. "The only blame that I attach to him was his comment after the fight, along the lines of 'too bad about my fighter.' But it was said as if he was just a baggage," Farr said.

"He has not been in touch with anyone in the family and never went to the hospital," he added.

Farr said the Denny tragedy proved the necessity for better controls in boxing.

Evert ends Navratilova's Wimbledon reign

WIMBLEDON, England. (UPI) — Teetering on the brink of no return, Chris Evert Lloyd fought back with a remarkable display of pressure-free tennis to stop defending champion Martina Navratilova, 4-6, 6-4, 6-2, Thursday and gain the Wimbledon women's final for the sixth time.

There were no such surprises in the men's division as Bjorn Borg, detained only slightly when he committed two uncharacteristic errors in the second set, derailed unseeded Brian Gottfried, 6-2, 4-6, 6-2, 6-0, to gain the final.

Borg, in quest of a record fifth consecutive title, will meet either Jimmy Connors or John McEnroe on Saturday. Connors gained the semi-finals Thursday when he ousted Roscoe Tanner, last year's losing finalist, 1-6, 6-2, 4-6, 6-2, 6-2.

After trailing 3-1 in the second set with three break points against her in the fifth game, Evert took advantage of a stunning triumph over the woman who had beaten her in the last two finals.

"I have to say I didn't feel nervous out there for the simple reason everyone counted me out along with Evonne (Coolidge) Cawley and Billie Jean King," said Evert, who meets Goolagong in Friday's final. "I knew this would happen with Martina and Tracy (Austin), getting so much publicity."

"Evonne and I very quietly went through the tournament. This was my first time on Center Court, so I certainly didn't feel nervous."

Evert defeated Goolagong for the second of her Wimbledon crowns in 1976 and has beaten her in their last six meetings.

Midway through the second set, neither Evert, nor the partisan Center Court crowd which has adopted her as an honorary Briton, had any realistic hope for her future in this tournament.

"At that point, when it was 1-3 and she had three break points, I felt so down," Evert said. "I was frustrated because I wasn't doing what I wanted to do. I hadn't played well and I hadn't followed my game plan to be aggressive."

But, feeling little pressure on her as the underdog, the third-seeded American gamely held on and broke Navratilova in the sixth game to even the set. In the 10th game, at 30-15, Navratilova was guilty of two consecutive double faults, then, with Evert at advantage, came the controversial call.

"A job by Evert was, in the opinion of Navratilova, '3 or 4 inches over the line,' but when there was no call from the linesman," she continued the point; Navratilova eventually drove over the baseline herself, giving Evert the break and the set.

"Asked how the call affected her, Navratilova said, 'Maybe a lot, maybe nothing. But if it had been done, a lot of things could have happened.'"

The two rivals exchanged service breaks for the first four games of the final set, but Evert also broke in the sixth and eighth games, winding up the one-hour and 46-minute duel on her fourth match point with a job that Navratilova overcame with a break.

"It was just attitude," Evert said of her comeback. "So many times when I played Martina and lost the first set my spirits went down and I'd get really disappointed with myself."

"Today I had a more positive attitude. Mentally and emotionally I didn't give up."

Gottfried, after breezing through his first five matches without dropping a set, really had no chance against Borg, who, rang up his 34th consecutive match victory at 28 minutes and 59 seconds through the first set in 28 minutes and 59 seconds. He had only one error, with two unforced errors to give Gottfried the critical break in the 10th game of the second set.

From 3-2 in the third set, Borg strung together nine consecutive games, and that was the match.

Tanner, accounting for five of his 16 aces in the opening set, looked like he would blaze a trail to glory. Connors won only 13 points in the set, which lasted just 19 minutes.

After winning the second set with breaks in the sixth and eighth games, Connors had a scare in the seventh game of the third set when he slipped and appeared to hurt his left knee. Although he shook it off, he lost the set when Tanner broke in the ninth game.

But Connors, playing with extreme confidence, jumped off to a 3-1 lead in the fourth set, then achieved the only service return in the sixth game with a passing service return.

"I scared me more than anything else," Connors said of his knee. "When I went down I twisted it around, and I almost lost that game from 40-15. Once I forgot about it, it was okay. It didn't bother me after the first three or four points."

Connors said the key for him was that, starting with the fourth set, his return of service was very effective. "I didn't miss any returns unless he boomed them by. The fourth and fifth sets were as well as played all week."

"My job is to be in good shape," he said. "I'm probably in the best shape I've been in for years. From 11 to play five sets today, five sets tomorrow and five sets Saturday."

McCovey leaves 'em cheering in S.F.

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Willie McCovey said goodbye to the hometown fans Thursday the way he knows best — with his bat and a wave of the cap.

The 42-year-old McCovey, one of a select group of players in baseball history whose career spanned more than a decade, had an RBI single in helping the Giants beat the Cincinnati Reds 4-3 in his final San Francisco appearance. McCovey officially ends his career in Los Angeles on Sunday against the Dodgers.

A crowd of almost 40,000 gave McCovey six standing ovations totaling almost eight minutes. In the eighth inning, he left the game and was replaced by rookie first baseman Rich Murray, who embraced him as the crowd roared.

McCovey, who may have earned a place in the Hall of Fame, had not looked forward to his final San Francisco appearance because he thought it might prove too emotional an experience.

Basically a shy man, McCovey had sought to end his career on a quiet and subdued note and he seemed overwhelmed that so many people would turn out for his final appearance.

"I felt good about all those people taking the time on a weekday to come out," said McCovey. "I am happy I was able to provide them with something to cheer about."

McCovey said he had no tears or goosebumps, but added, "I don't know how it will be Sunday. That absolutely will be my final game and right now I don't want to think about it. I wanted today to be kind of normal, but it didn't turn out that way. I feel like the guys put out a little extra and that made me feel very good. It's not like they don't try all the time, but there was a little something extra this time."

Dodgers 5, Padres 4

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Dusty Baker singled home Reggie Smith with two out in the 10th inning Thursday to give the Los Angeles Dodgers a 5-4 victory over the San Diego Padres.

Smith walked with two out and Steve Garvey singled him to second on his third hit of the game. Baker then fired a shot to assure the victory.

Pirates 5, Cubs 3 PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Jim Bibby, selected to the National League All-Star team, scattered eight hits over 8 1/3 innings Thursday night for his 10th victory of the season to lead the Pittsburgh Pirates to a 5-3 victory over the Chicago Cubs.

Dale Berra doubled in the Pirates' first run in the second and Mike Essler had an RBI double and Bill Madlock an RBI single in the third. In the fifth, John Miller walked, stole second and scored on a throwing error by Lenny Randle. Phil Garner singled in the Pirates' fifth run in the sixth.

Astros 5, Braves 3 ATLANTA (UPI) — Denny Walling and Terry Puhl cracked solo home runs Thursday night, helping the Houston Astros snap Atlanta's four-game winning streak with a 5-3 victory over the Braves.

The Astros built a 3-0 lead in the sixth inning off starter Tommy Boggs, 3-4. Walling drilled a leadoff three-run, fifth-inning Thursday night to lift the Boston Red Sox to a 5-2 triumph over the Baltimore Orioles.

Perce singled home a first-inning run to push his American League-leading Red Sox to 61. Carl Yastrzemski lined his 11th home run, a blast to right, in the ninth inning to close Boston's scoring.

Seattle 13, Royals 2 KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — Larry Cox, who entered the game hitting .176, singled and homered, drove in two runs and scored three others Thursday night to propel the Seattle Mariners to a 13-2 rout of the Kansas City Royals.

Cox hit his fourth home of the season to start the seventh as Seattle battered All-Star pitcher Larry Gura, 10-4, for 12 hits and six runs in 7 1/3 innings. Jim Anderson also homered for the Mariners off Gura.

Seattle set season-highs with the 12 runs, 17 hits and its seven-run inning in the eighth that sent the Royals to their fourth loss in the last five games. Every Seattle player in the lineup scored at least one run. Tom Paciorek and Anderson each had three hits with Benitez knocking in three runs and Cox and Anderson two apiece.

Twins 10, Texas 3 BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (UPI) — Rick Soffel hit a solo home run, Ken Latta cracked a record-three triples and John Castino had two hits and two RBI to lead the Minnesota Twins to a 10-3 homer, his third of the year, and Cesar Cedeno and Alan Ashby collected RBI singles. Atlanta drew two within 3-2 in the bottom half on back-to-back homers by Dale Murphy, his 14th, and Chris Chambliss, his 10th, off starter J.R. Richard. 10-4. It marked the first time in 135 1/2 innings that Richard had surrendered a home run.

Mets 7, Expos 2 NEW YORK (UPI) — Lee Mazzilli hit a three-run homer in the second inning Thursday night to power the New York Mets to a 7-2 victory over the Montreal Expos behind the combined five-hit pitching of Ray Burris, Tom Hausman and Jeff Reedman.

In the opener, Mazzilli opened a 1-0 lead in the second when Gary Carter doubled and eventually scored on Garry Parrish's sacrifice fly. In the bottom of the inning, starter Charlie Lea, 2-3, walked Mike Jorgensen with one out and Steve Henderson's grounder was booted by shortstop Chris Speiser.

Phils sweep Cards ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Bob Walk tossed a five-hitter for the first complete game of his career Thursday night, lifting the Philadelphia Phillies to an 8-1 victory and a double-header sweep of the St. Louis Cardinals.

In the opener, Philadelphia scored a 2-1 victory behind the four-hit pitching of Dick Ruthven. The two victories, combined with Montreal's 7-2 loss to New York, moved the Phillies within one-half game of the Expos in the National League East.

Baylor powers Angels past Chicago

CHICAGO (UPI) — Don Baylor went 4-for-5, scored twice and had two RBI to lead the California Angels to a 7-3 victory Thursday night over the Chicago White Sox.

White Sox starter and loser Rich Wortham, 4-4, was removed after being struck in the left ear by Joe Rudi's leadoff single in the second inning. Wortham was taken to a hospital for precautionary observation. Rudi, who was removed in the eighth inning after crashing into the outfield wall, scored on Bob Clark's double.

Indians 7, Yanks 0 CLEVELAND (UPI) — Wayne Garland pitched a two-hitter and rookie Joe Charboneau drove in four runs Thursday night to enable the Cleveland Indians to score a 7-0 victory over the New York Yankees before a crowd of 73,096.

It was the largest crowd in the major leagues this season. The previous high of 61,753 was set in Cleveland in the home opener on April 19 against Toronto. It was also the largest crowd in the big leagues since 1973.

Garland, 3-1, showing he has recovered from a torn rotator cuff, struck out five and walked three to register his first complete game of the season. He allowed a single by Reggie Jackson in the fourth and a single by Joe Lefebvre in the ninth.

Boston 5, Orioles 2 BALTIMORE (UPI) — Dave Stapleton, Carlton Fisk and Tony Perez struck RBI singles in a victory over the Texas Rangers Thursday night. Winner Roger Erickson, 3-5, gave up eight hits and all three Texas runs in the six innings he worked. Doug Corbett finished and recorded his eighth save.

Tigers 8, Jays 5 DETROIT (UPI) — Richie Hebner hit a two-run homer in the first inning and capped a four-run sixth with an RBI single Thursday night to lead the Detroit Tigers to a 8-5 victory over the Toronto Blue Jays.

Hebner Pat Underwood, 2-5, earned the victory with 3 1/3 innings of three-hit relief as Toronto lost its fourth straight game and ninth in its last 10 games. Hebner hit his seventh home run of the season after Steve Kemp walked in the first. His RBI single in the sixth raised his RBI count to 56 on 57 1/2 hits.

A's 7, Brewers 5 MILWAUKEE (UPI) — Tony Armas rapped out four hits and Rob Piccolo and rookie Jeff Cox had three apiece Thursday night in a 7-5 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers.

The Brewers took a 3-0 lead in the first on an RBI double by Gordon Thomas and a two-run homer by Sixto Lezcano, his 13th of the season. The Brewers made it 5-0 in the third with Cecil Cooper singled and Don Money drilled his 11th homer.

Seaver can't predict his return to mound

CINCINNATI (UPI) — Tom Seaver, suffering from tendinitis in his right pitching shoulder and without the "slightest idea" when he will be able to pitch again, has been placed on the 21-day disabled list, the Cincinnati Reds announced Thursday.

Seaver said it was the first time in his 14-year career that he had been put on a disabled list.

The Reds said Seaver was placed on the 21-day disabled list "as of Tuesday, July 1," the day after he last pitched — a poor performance against San Francisco. Seaver disclosed after that game he has been suffering pain in his shoulder all season. The pain later was diagnosed as tendinitis.

Seaver's place on the active roster will be taken by rookie pitcher Bruce Berenyi, called up from the Reds' Indianapolis farm club. Berenyi will make his major league debut Saturday when he starts one game of a two-night doubleheader against Houston.

Just a few hours before the Reds announced Seaver was being placed on the disabled list, Seaver said that "the end of my career is not here," but the 35-year-old star admitted he realized for the first time in his life that his arm trouble could "conceivably" lead to the end of his career.

Seaver, who ran at Riverfront Stadium Thursday afternoon to keep his legs in shape, flatly declared, "The end of my career is not here." But he conceded he is feeling "tremendous emotion" in the wake of the first major ailment in his brilliant 14-year career.

"It's really the first time that I've had to face, realistically, that this conceivably could be the end of my career," he said. "It's not something that's going to happen in two weeks, though. I mean, I've got an injury and I'm going to take a good amount of time to get through this thing — to find out if I can get through it."

Minico tourney tries to get going today

RUPERT — The Minico July 4th American Legion Baseball Tournament got underway Thursday afternoon with a much abbreviated schedule.

A soggy diamond at Minico High School forced the cancellation of a 12 noon game between Focattello and the Magic Valley All Stars, but the field dried enough by late afternoon for two games to be played.

In a 4 p.m. contest in the six-team, round-robin tournament, Minico squeezed by Cody, 4-3, on centerfielder Denny Simpson's three-run homer in the fifth inning.

Later Thursday afternoon, Cody recovered to post a 12-9 victory over Burley.

Simpson's home run was the only hit Minico was able to manage in support of pitcher Glen Broadhead, who pitched into the sixth inning to earn the win.

With Minico leading 4-2 in the bottom of the seventh, Cody scored a run with two out to narrow the gap, much to the dismay of about 50 Minico fans. Cody then loaded the bases, and with a 3-2 count on the Wyoming team's number three hitter, reliever pitcher Ed Beuckstead retired him on a fly ball to right to end the game.

Minico 100-030 — 4-12 Cody 000 — 000 101 — 3-52 Broadhead, Beckstead (6) and Winmill, Brewer and Park. W — Beuckstead. L — Brewer. HR: Minico, Simpson. 2B: Cody, Brewer.

Jordanian prime minister, 41, dies following heart attack

AMMAN, Jordan (UPI) — Jordanian Prime Minister Shariq Abdel-Hamid Sharaf, the principal architect of King Hussein's anti-Camp David policy, died of a heart attack Thursday at the age of 41.

Amman radio said Hussein immediately named Hussein's Minister Kassem al-Rimawi to replace Sharaf. Rimawi quickly formed a new 21-member cabinet, which was sworn in by Hussein.

Hussein himself went on the radio to proclaim that Sharaf, prime minister only since Dec. 19, died for his country. His death could not come at a worse time.

Sharaf had held the post of chief of the royal cabinet since 1978 until his appointment as prime minister.

In a report from Amman, the Gulf News Agency said Arab League foreign ministers will go ahead with their scheduled meeting in the Jordanian capital starting Sunday despite Sharaf's death.

SHARIF SHARAF
advisor to Hussein

Sharaf was one of Hussein's closest friends and his chief political adviser. In the latter role, he helped chart Jordan's new policy of rapprochement with other Arab states and Hussein's erstwhile enemy, the Palestine Liberation Organization.

At the same time, the prime minister guided Hussein's policy of opposition to the U.S.-sponsored Camp David accords between Egypt and Israel, despite heavy pressure from Washington to join the peace moves.

Sharaf got his political start in Beirut, as a member of the Arab Nationalist Movement founded by George Habash, who was later to become leader of the Marxist Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine.

Sharaf later left the movement, reconciled with Hussein and went on to become the monarch's trusted friend and adviser.

After the 1967 Arab-Israeli war, Sharaf served as Jordan's ambassador to the United States.

Soviets bomb Afghan towns

NEW DELHI, India (UPI) — Refugee reports said Thursday that Soviet MIG fighters and helicopter gunships bombed a valley near the Afghan capital of Kabul, destroying two villages in what was described as one of the most savage bombings of the Afghanistan invasion.

One refugee claimed that as many as 5,000 people — the entire population of the two villages — were killed in the bombing last week.

The reports could not immediately be confirmed. But Western diplomats have repeated warned that refugee and rebel casualty figures are exaggerated.

According to witnesses, however, the bombing completely destroyed the two villages of Lalander and Farza in the Pagan mountains, 11 mi from Kabul, before their residents had a chance to flee.

The Soviets bombed in such a savage manner that not a single house was left standing, said one refugee.

He also said the Soviets have recently brought reinforcements into Kabul. His description coincided with a report by an Afghan army captain, who said Moscow has sent in new troops intensively trained in guerrilla warfare.

Soviet forces occupying Afghanistan since December had lacked troops trained in anti-guerrilla warfare, the army officer told a Western traveler.

The new forces arrived about 25 days ago, shortly before the Soviet Union announced a troop withdrawal, travelers from Kabul said.

Some witnesses described the new arrivals as "older" and apparently more seasoned soldiers than the 18-to-21 year old recruits who until recently appeared to constitute the bulk of the Soviet troops in Kabul.

In a related development, diplomatic travelers from Kabul said that the number of persons jailed in continuing anti-Soviet demonstrations has risen to have 5,000 — most of them students and teachers.

In Kuwait, the Kuwaiti news agency quoted Afghan rebel leader Sayed Ahmed Ghehani as criticizing the Palestine Liberation Organization and some Arab countries for not supporting a resolution.

New arms talk offer by USSR

BONN, West Germany (UPI) — West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt said Thursday the Soviet Union has offered to begin another round of arms-limitation talks with the United States despite the Senate's failure to ratify the SALT II treaty.

Schmidt said he had relayed the offer to President Carter and Secretary of State Edmund Muskie, who promised to study it "carefully and in a constructive spirit."

The chancellor said the Soviet offer, relayed to him during two days of talks in Moscow earlier this week, was significant because it marked a softening of the Kremlin's position on arms talks in two respects.

Previously, the Kremlin had insisted that the Senate's failure to ratify the SALT II agreement was holding up the start of negotiations to limit the spread of medium-range nuclear missiles in Europe. It also had been insisting that NATO scrap plans to deploy 572 new medium-range missiles before the talks begin.

Schmidt said Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev dropped both conditions during the talks in Moscow Monday and Tuesday.

Brezhnev "made the new, constructive suggestion ... to talk about medium range missiles with the United States before ratification of SALT II," the chancellor told parliament in a report on his trip.

"It seems to me there is a chance to avoid an unlimited arms race in this region," he said.

Schmidt said his foreign minister, Hans-Dietrich Genscher, relayed the Soviet offer to Carter at a meeting in Washington Wednesday.

West Germany is one of the NATO countries that has agreed to deploy 572 U.S. Pershing and Cruise missiles to counter a build-up of Soviet SS-20 medium-range missiles pointed at Western Europe.

The deployment is not scheduled to begin until 1983 and the decision to base them in Western Europe was linked to an offer to open talks with the Soviets in the hopes of achieving a reduction of missiles on both sides before then.

U.S. radio reports hit by Iranian

By United Press International

Iranian President Abolhasan Bani-Sadr accused the United States Thursday of trying to sow discord in Iran through its Voice of America broadcasts and a religious leader called for nationwide rallies July 4, when the American hostages will end their eighth month in captivity.

Tehran Radio also announced renewed executions, including those of four persons stoned to death for sex-related offenses.

The radio said revolutionary guards in the city of Kerman stoned to death a farmer convicted of having had sex with a 10-year-old girl, a municipal worker accused of adultery and seducy and two women accused of organizing prostitution rings.

A fifth male offender was shot to death — the normal mode of execution in Iran — for having "kidnaped and raped a young boy."

The Islamic Revolution, the newspaper published by Bani-Sadr, quoted the president as saying that a recent Voice of America broadcast heard in Iran tried "to sow discord" by falsely reporting an Iranian general had fled the country.

The newspaper charged the report and others it said were like it were aimed at "splitting government officials and opportunist opposition groups against the president."

Bani-Sadr, who has a record as favoring the release of the 53 American hostages, lately appears to have adopted a more militant, anti-American posture as a means of defending his authority against a challenge from France's hardline Moslem fundamentalists.

'Airplane!'

Airport movies get just rewards

By RICHARD FREEDMAN

Newhouse News Service
All those gashly "Airport" movies get exactly what they deserve in "Airplane!", a very funny spoof of disaster films by Jim Abrahams and David and Jerry Zucker, the wags who gave us "The Kentucky Fried Movie."

Aboard a seemingly doomed flight from Los Angeles to Chicago are the afflic Captain Oveer (Peter Graves), his co-pilot Roger Murdock (basketball's Kareem Abdul-Jabbar), World War II fighter pilot Ted (Robert Hays) who still feels guilty about his fallen comrades, and his dippy stewardess girlfriend Elaine (Julie Hagerty).

Behind them is a painful of moribund plot, guitar-strumming nuns, an Indian intent on self-immolation, and a clean-cut, square-jawed doctor (Leslie Nielsen) whose services come in handy.

It soon becomes apparent that everyone who ordered the fish for dinner, instead of meat, including the entire crew, will be deathly ill throughout the flight. The only trouble with the doctor is that every time he lies to his fellow passengers about the peril they're in, his nose grows longer, like Pinocchio's.

"Airplane!" concerns the efforts of Elaine to persuade Ted to take over despite his wartime traumas. Eventually the plane is successfully "talked down" by Robert Stack, Ted's wartime commander who still harbors grave, and justified, doubts about Ted's competence.

Even if you haven't seen the movies "Airplane!" is parodying, it is a joy to watch in its often inspiring looniness.

The religious zealots handing out flowers in the Los Angeles airport set the tone well before we are airborne, and throughout there are rollicking parodies of "Jaws," "Saturday Night Fever" and "From Here to Eternity" to keep the spirits up even as the plane is plummeting to earth.

Maynard Dixon's 'Buffalo Hunters' is among the many works to be sold and displayed at the Western Art Auction and Exposition in Ketchum this weekend.

Western art show not highfalutin

By RON ZELLAR
Times-News writer

SUN VALLEY — The Sun Valley Center for the Arts and Humanities would like to add a little culture to your Fourth of July weekend.

Works by many famous artists of the American West will be on display through Saturday at the center's annual Western Art Auction and Exposition in the Idaho Room at Elkhorn Village.

"This is not highfalutin art," emphasized Katherine Griffith, a member of the auction committee.

Griffith noted that Western art is often referred to as art of the common man. The exhibit will feature works by such notables as Russell, Remington, Sharp and Raphael, together with a photographic portfolio by Ansel Adams.

Interest in collecting Western art has been fueled recently by rapidly appreciating prices and a growing acceptance of the art form as an important part of American heritage, she said.

In an attempt to attract newcomers to the hobby, the auction committee scheduled a new collectors' auction tonight at 8 o'clock.

Each of the more than 50 items in the new collectors' auction was selected with affordability in mind, and to appeal to a broad audience, she said. The auction will be limited to works valued under $1,200, with many priced below $500.

Both silent and live bidding will be used, she said, with simple explanation available to first-time buyers.

Collectible Indian weavings and pottery will be included, as well as paintings and lithographs by such eminent deceased artists as Carl Bodmer, W.H. Dunton and Maynard Dixon.

Patrick Sullivan/Times-News

Jo Mora's 'Chochonee' sculpture of a Hopi Indian will also be on display at the art exposition.

"We want to demystify art," Griffith said. "People too often don't ask questions of artists because they don't want to offend, or something."

"Western art is a good place to begin," she continued, "because its theme is familiar to most people. And the more you look at art, the more you know what touches you. People who thought they weren't interested suddenly find themselves drawn into other forms as well."

The three-day event, which began Thursday, offers something for everyone, she said. Most of the events are free, including the professional exhibit, retail exhibits and art lectures slated each day at 3 p.m.

Today's lecturer is Los Angeles artist and collector Tony Berlant, who will speak on "Masterpieces of Prehistoric Painted Pottery," Saturday's topic is "Investing in Western Art," with a panel discussion headed by Denver gallery owner Sandra Wilson.

Tonight's auction will be over in time for the Ketchum-Sun Valley fireworks display, she predicted. And children who might be unimpressed by the auction can ice skate in the Elkhorn Village circle.

The main auction Saturday evening will feature two bronze recasts by Jo Mora, who began his work in the era of Charles Russell and Frederic Remington. The pieces are titled "The Smoker, Chochonee" and "Scratchin' Plenty."

Mora's daughter lives in the Ketchum area, and has authorized a maximum of 10 recasts from each of the two originals, Griffith said.

The writer, illustrator and photographer is widely recognized for his photography depicting Hopi Indian rituals. A selection of his art works is presently touring the country under the auspices of the Smithsonian Institute.

In addition to the auction and showing, she said 35 retail exhibitors will be on hand each afternoon until 4:30 p.m. on the fourth floor of the Elkhorn Village Inn.

The Saturday auction-and-buffet is sold out, she said. The few remaining auction-only tickets will be distributed Friday to persons already on a waiting list.

Consignments from the two auctions benefit the Sun Valley Center, which offers free lectures throughout the year on a variety of topics and is one of the sponsors of the annual conference of the Institute of the American West.

Book is a farce, but it grows on you

Special to The Los Angeles Times
The story of this book is almost as strange as the book's story.

Author-teacher Walker Percy found the manuscript thrust upon him by the author's mother. Despite her son's suicide at the age of 32 in 1969, she treasured his novel and finally found an ally in Percy, who contributes an inebriated but appreciative foreword to the present edition.

This strange and funny novel is unlike any book you are likely to read this year. Its central character is a gross, affected, over-educated sump, whose unfitness for modern life—develops from the outrageous to something close to the heroic. Ignatius Reilly moves through New Orleans's low life like a fat and flabulent Don Quixote, seeking honor and heroism where only comic types are to be found.

Reilly lives with his mother, leaving his great bulk out bed only for necessities or routine outrage (such as roaring disdain at TV or at awful films at the neighborhood movie house). The room is a precious mess, carpeted with affected jottings designed to become a great philosophical treatise. When Mrs. Reilly drives into a building, neatly demolishing it, and is liable for damages, she sends Ignatius off to work. The job—first at Levy's Panis, where he attempts to mobilize the black workers against the almost nonexistent management, then vending Paradise holidays—lead to a series of comic situations.

The function of the plot is perfectly traditional for comic farce: throw characters into a series of new and entertaining situations, so that all comic eccentricities will be fully displayed.

Thus Ignatius finds himself wearing a scimitar as a street vendor, or trying to give a political lecture at a homosexual party, or bringing chaos to a lewd nightclub act.

The other characters have their own comic circles as well. Mrs. Reilly's friends include an elderly suitor (always on the trail of "the communists") and several raucous female friends; the Levy family of Levy pants includes a maniac wife and a senile frascible employee, Miss Trxie; the Night-of-Joy nightclub groups includes a series of shady characters, mostly seen through the eyes of an exploited black ("Say, who you callin' boy? You ain't Scaria O'Horror?").

Some readers will find the relentless farce and the inevitable genial eccentricity a bit much; others may find Ignatius, with his grossness and selfishness, too offensive to be amusing. But the book has a surprising winning quality that grows as one reads and that hangs on afterward.

Eichorn in drama debut

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Lisa Eichorn, who was replaced by Barbra Streisand last month in "All-Night-Long," has bounced back to make her TV drama debut with a starring role in "The Wall."

Eichorn will costar with Tom Condi in the three-hour CBS-TV movie to be shown early next season.

"The Wall," based on John Hersey's novel, is the story of the final days of the Warsaw Ghetto during World War II. It will be the first time the government of Poland has participated in a project for American television.

Film based on real mystery

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Charlie Chaplin, Marjorie Davies, William Randolph Hearst and Lovella Parsons will be portrayed in "Anatomy of a Scandal," a film project based on the mysterious death of film producer Thomas Ince in the 1920s.

Peter R. Brooks and Robert M. Young announced their intention to produce the film in association with film packager Peter Sabiston. Chaplin is also to be the subject of a new film biography, "Charlie Chaplin," being developed by Marble Arch Productions as a three-hour NBC-TV movie.

Shirley's smashing, but Ali bombs

Q: What a treat to see Shirley MacLaine in a big hit movie again in "Being There." What's next on her agenda? — S.S. of Rochester, N.Y.

A: You'll be delighted to learn that Shirley (absent from the screen for five-years prior to her smashing comeback in 1977 "The Turning Point") again has her movie dance-card filled. She has finished "Loving Couples," a sophisticated romantic comedy in which she portrays an accomplished California doctor married to James Coburn, a successful surgeon. This flick, due in October, gives 46-year-old Shirley a swimsuit scene. My studio spy tells me she's never looked more glamorous and sexy than in this good, because come December, she'll be co-starring with the human decimal, Doc Derek, in "A Change of Seasons."

Q: Isn't fame and jazz trumpeter Dizzy Gillespie going to find himself in a divorce court because his wife of many years walked out after reading some epic passages in Gillespie's autobiography? — P.Q. of Milwaukee.

A: That's what some reports would have you believe, but 62-year-old Gillespie — married to Lorraine for 40 years — says differently. While on tour, Gillespie told reporters that his wife didn't like some of the episodes in his book. He said she was so angry she might even take a powder. Later, recognizing bad fate that she was away in the press, Gillespie hurried home to New Jersey, patched things up with Lorraine and pronounced that a 40-year marriage is worth a lot more than a prank.

Q: What's going with Joan Fontaine these days? — R.M. of Lancaster, S.C.

A: Well, among other things, Joan has signed to TV contract rights for a four-part book series titled "The Borodins," written by Leslie Arlen and published by Jove Publications. The first part of the historical saga, "Love and Honor," is set in Russia, Paris and New York of the early 1900s. When asked which actress should be cast in the lead if the book is filmed, Miss Fontaine suggested that since the role requires a star with natural red hair, a cross between a young Greer Garson and Vanessa Redgrave ought to do nicely.

AUTHOR: Norman Mailer was spotted recently in a waiting room at Manhattan's Port Authority — has terminal thoroughly engrossed in a paperback study by a distinguished author. You've guessed it — Norman Mailer. He was informally attired in a pair of blue jeans and a light sweater, with the cover of his book kept wide open and propped on his chest. It appeared that the gregarious, gifted Mr. Mailer was waiting to be recognized.

Q: Is Muhammad Ali washed up as a show his personality? — R.Y. of Bronx, N.Y.

A: Let's just say that the champ, with a pair of movie bombs behind him — "The Greatest" and TV's "Freedom Road" — is simply no longer a hot property. Even Ali, the super self-promoter, realizes that his acting future needs a shot in the arm. He manages to keep interest alive in his spectacular boxing career with a distributor, but announcements about possible bouts, with his ultimate opponent being WBC — heavyweight — champion Larry Holmes.

Q: Tell us something about the actress who plays Florence, TV's most famous maid on "The Jeffersons." Does she resent playing a domestic? — Y.L. of Portsmouth, N.H.

A: Maria Gibbs is a very together woman who enjoys her role as Florence because she feels it has eased the stigma attached to black actresses portraying domestics. Off-camera, Maria is divorced and a grandmother by one of her three children. She's also a savvy businesswoman parlaying her TV income with a print shop operation and other ventures in Los Angeles. There's reportedly a man in Maria's life, but she's not telling who.

Q: What do you think will happen to "Saturday Night Live" now that its lead talent and producer Lorne Michaels has quit? — K.B. of Chicago.

MUHAMMAD ALI
Dramatic bombshell

A: The show has a new producer, Jean Doumanian, who says she is looking forward to building on Michaels' legacy" but also making the show "grow" with fresh new elements. Since it is, in fact, a live show, we'll have to wait and see in the fall. One thing is certain, some top talent is leaving, probably including Gilda Radner, Bill Murray, Laraine Newman and Jane Curtin.

Q: Peter O'Toole was such a big name star not long ago. How come we don't hear much about him? — J.W. of Clifton, N.J.

A: Could be a combination of personal factors and picking the wrong properties. Since his long-term marriage to actress Stan Phillips failed, Peter has been unable to line up a distributor, but critical word, reports that Peter, gives a "standout performance" in a strikingly unusual role.

ATTENDING OPENINGS: One of the stories about the late columnist Dorothy Kilgallen that Lee Israel did not include in her biography, "Kilgallen," was one that Dorothy told on herself about arriving one day at St. Patrick's Cathedral in New York. An elegantly dressed man with a very familiar face greeted her at the entrance, and she, not wishing to snub a friend, responded with a warm kiss. It was a day later when she was coming out of her apartment building that she realized that her familiar-faced friend was her doorman!

Q: Isn't Lauren Bacall widely known for ignoring autograph-seekers and for being about with her fans "in public"? — J.W. of Sanford, Conn.

A: Not especially, although Lauren is known for her dislike of being pushed around by overenthusiastic autograph hounds. She makes no drummer of KISS, has left the rock world, is anyone else going to wear his "cat" mask? — F.Y. of Morristown.

A: Criss is considered certain to do periodic guest appearances with the group, both on record dates and in concert. In his early 30s, Peter intends to expand his life-style and is very busy studying acting. It's been prime that the man who faces him won't be duplicating the grotesque cat-man makeup that he made famous. We know the real reason is that Peter controls this unique makeup, therefore, anybody who wants to wear it publicly would require legal permission.

Q: Is Al Pacino seriously contemplating a trip to the altar with the beautiful German-born actress Marthe Keller? — W.H. of Baltimore.

A: Not only is Al not planning marriage, but he's no longer seeing Marthe. Seems their reconciliation attempt — which had Al flying to Europe to visit Marthe while she was making her movie "The Formula" — didn't pan out. So while she and Pacino are off to again, he is keeping busy dating actress Marybeth Hurt.

Q: What's this about the romance between Dyan Cannon and Jerry Schatzberg? — M.N. of Akron, Ohio.

A: Dyan says she finds Jerry pleasant, trustworthy and lovable, and while Jerry is the quiet type, others note that the pair would obviously like each other. Schatzberg, directed Dyan in her movie, "Honeyuckle Rose," opposite country singer Willie Nelson.

Q: Enjoy your tidbits concerning Carol? — J.W. of Clifton, N.J.

A: Carol is the complete star, always more than willing to oblige with an autograph. However, we do know of a funny exception. At a party following the recent Tony awards, Carol is approached by a man who asked her to sign his program for "The Vamp," a 1955 Broadway musical spoof of the silent screen in which she starred.

Q: Is it true that Jimmy Stewart is winding up his acting career? — M.N. of Providence, R.I.

A: No, Jimmy, at 72, has just completed a rather TV special. He plans to retire this year. In this one, he plays a janitor who dreams of a big-time career in music. One scene has Jimmy leading some 350 members of the Mormon Tabernacle Choir in a Christmas carol. Jimmy's had some experience along this line since he led the band as Glenn Miller in the classic 1954 movie, "The Glenn Miller Story."

Q: Tell us what's next in the career of Gary Coleman, that chunky-chedded tyko on TV's "Different Strokes." — O.M. of Springfield, Vt.

A: Gary, 12, a native of Zion, Ill., is a bright youngster who's hobby is trains. In addition to coming back in the fall in his popular TV series, he has filmed a TV movie, "Scout's Honor," for his own production company. What 12-year-old doesn't have his own production company? Gary's next in Chicago for the movie, "A Guy Could Get Killed Out There," about a 10-year-old boy disillusioned with city life who hides out — where else? — in a bus train station.

Q: What's this about the marriage of Elizabeth Taylor and John Warner showing signs of strain? — O.M. of Albany, N.Y.

A: You might think so because Liz and John have made headlines that may have been misinterpreted. But Liz seems so delighted with her marriage that she even wanted to change the billing in her latest movie, "The Mirror Crack'd," to read Elizabeth Taylor Warner.

Q: Now that former President Richard Nixon and his secretary of state, Henry Kissinger, are neighbors in New York City, do they ever see one another? — E.H. of St. Louis.

A: Yes, Kissinger invited Nixon to dinner at his ultra-chic River House apartment just after the president moved to New York City. Asked about what was discussed, the ever-diplomatic Kissinger refused to comment.

Q: OFE THE WALL: Louise Lasser exhibits an odd sense of humor in private life that often seems to be a direct extension of her eccentric role in the old TV series, "Marty" was brooding in a Manhattan curio shop the other day when she spotted a stuffed bird mounted overhead on the wall. "Oh, what a serene bird. Just love it," she exclaimed. — The dumbfounded proprietor did a double take, and so did customers. Reason: The "dove" she admired was a large, stuffed, blue-billed hawk, poised and looking ready to swoop through the shop!

Q: Certain stars seem so philanthropically minded that you're surprised they're not making charitable efforts. What about Barbara Streisand; is it possible that she is not very generous with her time or money?

A: No, Barbara, who is not known for her modesty, has always refused to publicize her charitable efforts. In fact, she has an iron-clad "don't publicize my donation" rule when she gives to charity. Her first contribution is a $500,000-portion of her salary from her current movie, "All Night Long," given to UCLA for cardiac research.

Hagman not quite as bad as 'J.R.'

By William A. Henry III
(©) 1980 Boston Globe

MALIBU — Larry Hagman was braying, bragging and getting his own way. He was surrounded by adoring and slightly envious family, silent and deferential servants, frustrated — and — slightly — fearful newpeople. He moved from room to room of his showplace house, a retinue meekly tagging along.

He might have been the character he plays, mean tycoon J.R. Ewing of television's hottest show, "Dallas," except for one thing: Hagman refused to talk about "my money, my sex and my children and the essence of J.R. Ewing's personality is that nothing is sacred or secret."

Hagman was holding his first meeting with the press since returning from England and signing for another season of "Dallas" with a contract his agent hints is worth $3 million.

He wasn't holding a press conference, though. He was having impromptu conversations at home starting and stopping when he wished, in between passing out facsimile $100 bills reading, "In Hagman We Trust," autographing picture postcards of himself as J.R., and signing yellow T-shirts inscribed "J.R. lives, Malibu, 62860," adding his name in letters half a foot high with a broad-tipped ballpoint felt pen.

Most of the reporters gathered up the play money and the T-shirts and three or four postcards. A few said upon question they planned to take the items to the local PBS station auctions. A couple announced defiantly they were keeping it all.

Hagman wasn't saying who shot J.R. in the final episode last season. He wasn't even saying in what episode this, coming fall his audience would learn the answer. He wouldn't say how long his character will stay in a wheelchair. But he promised J.R. will take revenge. "You know it. He's not going to let something like that slip by without a little retribution."

He said he has turned down an offer of about $250,000 from three foreign newspapers to reveal who shot J.R. His "shooting," he said, was a cause celebre from Amsterdam to Capetown. At one point he declared his candidacy for president — if the salary is raised to $5 million a year. "I am not going to take a pay cut."

Outside, on one of several decks overlooking Hagman's private beach on the Pacific, a videotape crew was recording every moment of the party. Midway through, Hagman took some of the tape in to a cassette playing machine and started watching footage of himself and his guests on a huge color television. Just through a doorway, a wide-angled photo-grapher was taking pictures of the food — a Japanese display of rice and raw fish — and dutifully writing down which were squid and which abalone.

Another photographer was snapping Hagman with his mother, musical comedy star Mary Martin, and with fellow "Dallas" actors, including Victoria Principal, who's agent kept insisting "a little more chin, Victoria, a little more chin."

Most of the guests were Hawaiian shirts or terrycloth wrappers and shorts — or blue-jeans. One woman wore a full Indian bead-dress. Next-door neighbor Burgess Meredith stopped by, and so did young actors from a couple of series.

Larry Hagman, unlike J.R. Ewing, likes to keep to himself

But the press saw little color in anyone except Hagman. Despite her loving smiles, his mother seemed miffed by that fact. "He's just a cull," she said to several sets of reporters. "I'm a living legend."

Nonetheless, she said, she now signs — autographs. "J.R.'s mother."

She was happy to reminisce about her career and eager to seek plugs for her "Some Enchanted Evening" line of designer sheets. "They're an especially nice fabric," she said. "The older they get, the better they feel." As the night wore on she retreated into the foyer. Whenever a reporter came by to talk she would grasp his hand with both of hers.

Hagman, who was asked again and again how he managed to cope with celebrity said, "I learned a lot from mother, but it was only in retrospect that I realized it."

"With my mother, though, there wasn't this mass media thing. I can come into 100 million homes all over the world, and they think of me as familiar. It's, 'Hi Larry' or 'Hi J.R.'" For her outside the stage door it was, "Good evening, Miss Martin."

Each time a cluster of reporters started to gather, Hagman would either excuse himself quietly or attract the rest by slipping into J.R.'s Texas drawl and strut. He would point toward the row of fluttering flags outside along the deck — "I collect them just for the color. There's Texas and the Republic of California and the United States — flying the highest, of course — and Sri Lanka, with the rampant bears and Korea with the yin and yang symbols."

Or he would wave an arm to take in a pom-pom of ornaments and memorabilia: Lamps shaped like geese, antique portraits, "Dallas" promotional photos, an exposed beam piled high with hats. "There's nothing here worth stealing. There are no valuables except the TV."

Or he would walk up to the shoulder-high bar dividing the kitchen and dining room, and chat with robed Japanese chefs who were broiling lobster, slicing raw salmon and coating oysters with caviar and chives.

He had lived on this narrow, sandy strip for 15 years, he said, in a house not far back from the road through a winding path and a kaleidoscope floral garden. He had bought it with wages from his last super hit series, "I Dream of Jeannie." He had decorated it with artifacts from his travels, work and family, said his sister, pointing to a sampler made by their mother. It showed a boat at full sail and the family. "A ship is a breath of romance that carries us miles away." There were photographs of his mother in stage costume, of him with his mother in a wedding dress, and of himself alone in full color, leering and apparently nude in conveniently opaque bathwater.

"He has 'a lot of acquaintances and very few friends, but my friends stick by me.' They matter more than ever, he said, because he cannot appear in public without being mobbed. Yet when he and Lorimar Productions reached a stage close to war over whether he would return to the show, a fight focused on money, Hagman retreated not to friends, but to travel. "I was in England," he said. "I told my three agents and my lawyer to negotiate and tell me what agreements we reached but not to relay to me any threats. I don't hear about the possibility of my being replaced in the role (with the explanation that J.R. had undergone a plastic surgery, a Lorimar leak suggested). If they had decided not to come to terms and had let J.R. die, I would have gone on to something else. You always go on to something else. I'm nearly 50. I don't get frightened by change."

Now that he is back on the set he is shooting interrelated scenes from six different episodes "out of sequence, probably to keep us confused as to what happens, when and how. We're not dealing with dummies and they want to keep this a secret. Although a Los Angeles newspaper created a flap last week by announcing it had obtained a stolen copy of the "Who shot J.R." script, Hagman asserted there are at least three scripted versions of the solution. All will be filmed, he said, and the final sequence "could be photographed the day it aired and made ready in six hours if we had all the right people standing by."

As guests ground rice balls into the carpets and dropped glassware on the red clay tile, several reporters asked Hagman why he bothered to have a press party at a time when his career was already generating nonstop publicity.

"I've been wanting to have this party for 10 years," he said. "I've known a lot of these people a long time, and I've been wanting them to see where I live. If I have people who write about me into my home, it changes the whole ambience of what they think and what they say."

Sun Valley Ice Show begins season

Charlie-Tickner,
Lisa Marie Allen
in opening show

SUN VALLEY — Olympic skating sensations Charlie Tickner and Lisa Marie Allen headline Saturday's show as Sun Valley opens its ice show season.

The show will include several talented skaters, a fireworks display and the traditional buffet and dancing.

Tickner is a three-time U. S. Champion and former World Champion in men's competition. A very powerful skater, he is noted for a rare combination of bold, breath-taking jumps and graceful artistry.

He failed to make the 1976 Olympic team but continued to work and established himself as America's premier male skater as he won a silver medal in this winter's Olympics in Lake Placid.

Also appearing will be ice skating's golden girl, Lisa Marie Allen, Standing 5'9". She uses her height well as she performs long, classic skating programs, setting her apart from most of her competition.

Allen was runner-up in last year's U.S. championships and placed fifth in Lake-Placid's Olympic competition.

Local skating favorites will also perform in the program. Nick Maracich will stun the crowd with a "Superman" style barrel jump. Herman Maracich will team with Dick Salter for a buzzed and top hat act, and there will be a children's number titled "Paradise Island."

Tentatively scheduled for other

Lisa Marie Allen will headline this season's first Sun Valley ice show shows this season include Jimmy and David Santee, Caitlin and Peter Carruthers, Terry Kubica and Sam Lenz.

This summer marks the 43rd consecutive year the Sun Valley

Company has sponsored the summer ice shows. The performances are considered to be the best in the western region. The show and buffets will be presented every Saturday night through

Olympic medalist Charlie Tickner also will skate in Saturday's show

August 30.

Buffet and show tickets are $24 for adults and $18 for children under 12. Redwood Room seating, (208) 822-4111 extension 2247, or will be available for $6. General admission seats are $4.50 for adults and $2.50 for children. Showtime is at 9 p.m., and the buffet opens at 7 p.m. For more information call (208) 822-4111 extension 2247, or write the Sun Valley Company, Sun Valley, Idaho, 83353.

Mick Jagger getting bored of routine

(C) The Washington Post
NEW YORK — Mick Jagger's been at it for going on 20 years. The wizard of 10, Jumpin' Jack Jive, love you live.

But the act is getting old. Seventeen albums and tens of millions of dollars later, Jagger's pattern is so set he seems tired of going, too bored to improvise. Most people with such elaborate emul would be ready to change their lives.

"It would," he says, "but I don't know how to do it."

Meanwhile, Jagger adheres to the school of unsettling celebrityhood. Keep the audience guessing, treat 'em rough. They can't always get what they want, but they get what he thinks they need — a delicious discomfort.

Here in the poster-strewn 12th-floor office of his mid-town Manhattan resort — some say Jagger's studied antagonism is as impersonal and as fascinating as snake eyes.

Elbows poking out, leaning slightly forward, he uses his whole body the way Barbara Streisand uses her nose. There's no way to make it seem ordinary, so he oozhand store. The Andy Warhol reverse-chic of a man who couldn't get thrown out of the Four Seasons in bathing trunks.

He is, apparently, in a good mood. The 17th annual Rolling Stones boys-and-girls-together album, "Emotional Rescue," has just been shipped, and a half-dozen staffers mill through the offices in the anarchical plotting of promotion. Telephones rattle while the title song air-rads from the radio. At Jagger's request, a Rolling Stone Records employee is scrambling by the figures on national airplay.

"Thank God that's finished," says Jagger, clanking down a beer bottle and jack-knifing into a swivel chair. "Now I can go and do something fun."

JAGGER, MICHAEL PHILIP. Born in Dartford, Kent, 7-26-43. Now of London, Paris, and New York, every 18 months in a cycle. Divorced; father of two 9-year-old daughters (one illegitimate). Trained in business administration at the London School of economics, privately employed, wealthy. So respectable.

Mick P. Jagger. Performing in 8 Times-News, Twin Falls, Idaho Friday, July 4, 1980

accentuates his every angularity.

A photographer arrives, and instantly Jagger is posing.

"Nobody asked about a photographer. You just announced it as a 'fall Accompl.' What are you going to shoot — a roll? Maybe less? You're not going to get a good picture, you're just going to get a snap, — right? There've been thousands of photographs, you can't get anything as good. . . . All right, let's do it. Here's a white wall."

Jagger has perfected the posture of challenge. He flings himself against a blank wall, head rigid, bad shadows, mug-shot-style. He deliberately draws his face into harsh lines. Like a threat, he stares right through the camera.

A few minutes later, Jagger cuts off the session with an emotionless "thank you." His press agent shrugs. "He knew about the photographer. He just likes to play around."

Jagger is wearing white socks and a joint behind his ear. While running shoes, a yellow shirt and turquoise pants with black stripes — all just loose enough to suggest that he picked them up at a sec-his middle name. For 18 years, Jagger has been polishing his role as the prancer-dancer-vixen of rock'n'roll. His Satanic Majesty, a street-fighting, pill-popping, rutting, strutting Dorian Gray, lithe and omnipotent and manipulative. But it's all in fun, he says.
