

Idaho heads for $9 million deficit

BOISE (UPI) — Unexpectedly small tax state collections, unprecedented appropriation of surplus state funds and congressional purse-tightening have pushed Idaho toward a $9.7-million budget deficit, tax officials said Monday.

"There's going to be some red ink appearing," said Russell Westerberg, head of the Associated Taxpayers of Idaho, after the final 1980 budget surplus figure was announced Monday.

State Auditor Joe Williams said earlier in the day that the state's general fund surplus for fiscal year 1980 was $6.5 million — $1.7 million less than had been predicted.

This shortfall, coupled with a downturn in the economy that dropped state tax collections $10.5 million below projected levels and the Legislature's unprecedented use of two years of surplus money to fund on-going programs, almost certainly will hit the state with at least a $5.5 million budget deficit, Westerberg said.

Adding to the gloom is the predicted congressional action that would deprive Idaho of $4.2 million in revenue-sharing funds.

"If that figure (the $6.5 million surplus for 1980) is accurate, we will be short five and a half million," said Legislative Auditor Bruce Balderston.

Various final state income figures no estimates — were used in arriving at the general fund surplus total.

Only an unexpected, abrupt surge in the economy and the linked tax revenue could lessen or eliminate the deficit, he said. If this does not happen, he said, the governor will be forced to order state agencies to hold off on some spending or the Legislature will have to raise state taxes.

Westerberg said that the economic problems and the state's use of the 1979 $10.1 million surplus — and the additional gamble on the mistakenly projected 1980 surplus to help balance the 1981 budget — are to blame for the impending deficit.

Both Westerberg and Williams indicated the state might be in even bigger financial trouble in fiscal year 1982. "Next fiscal year it's going to be even tougher," Williams said.

Westerberg also said the state deficit could be compounded by several million dollars if the federal government scuttles revenue sharing funds.

State budget planner Larry Seale said it was almost certain that Congress will cut $4.2 million from Idaho by withholding revenue sharing funds — meaning the deficit easily could hit or exceed $10 million, particularly if the economy continues to deteriorate.

"If the economy continues at its less than customary pace, the deficit will be there and can only become greater," Westerberg said.

Next year the Legislature will re-examine its prediction that state general fund revenue for fiscal year 1981 will total $330 million — and if it is revised downward the lawmakers will be faced with "dramatic" spending cuts, Westerberg said.

"There aren't too many actions I can think of to cover it (the deficit)," Balderston said. "My guess is we will hold back on appropriations this fiscal year."

Exemption deadline arrives

TWIN FALLS — Today is the last day taxpayers can file for a homeowner's exemption.

Twin Falls County Assessor Bill Clark said his office will continue to accept applications until 6 p.m. The assessor's office is located in the Twin Falls County Courthouse, 425 Shoshone St. N.

Clark said between 9,000 and 10,000 property owners have filed for the exemption. An estimated 15,000 property owners in Twin Falls County are eligible for the exemption, he said.

The Legislature this year passed the exemption providing that 20 percent of the first $10,000, whichever is less, of a home's market value will be subtracted prior to being taxed. On a $50,000 home, the exemption amounts to $10,000, Clark said.

The Legislature's action is limited to this year only.

More red ink ahead for Carter

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The 1981 federal budget will be in the red by $25 billion to $30 billion instead of a $18.5 billion surplus estimated by President Carter last March, it was reported Tuesday.

The recession, accelerated spending by the Defense Department, and the congressional defeat of Carter's oil "choke" fee contributed to the swelling deficit.

Unidentified administration officials told the Washington Post the budget figures Carter will send to Congress next week do not provide for a 1981 tax cut.

It is likely the president will eventually propose cutting taxes about $35 billion next year, but he does not wish to do so now because he "wants to slow down any push by the Republicans for an immediate tax cut," an official said.

Carter's economic aides expected the new budget would include provisions for a $25 billion tax cut but the president rejected the proposal at a meeting Sunday, the Post reported. Carter wants time to study the proposed tax cut to ensure it will spur long-term economic growth and held back inflation, an official said.

The administration economic forecast will show the recession hitting its depth by the end of the year but with unemployment rising from the current level of 7.7 percent to as high as 9 percent in early 1981.

The officials said the recession will reduce tax receipts by about $10 billion below earlier estimates in fiscal 1980.

Women lack votes for platform fight

DETROIT (UPI) — Republican women failed Monday to find the 27 GOP Platform Committee votes needed to force a convention floor fight over planks favoring a constitutional ban on abortion and selection of judges who share that view.

The Republican Women's Task Force, seeking to eliminate all mention of abortion from the platform, said it now will try to round up six state delegations to back its position.

That would force a roll call vote when the convention considers the platform tonight.

The conservative-dominated, 106-member platform committee gave formal approval to the 1980 platform, which calls for "support of a constitutional amendment to restore protection of the right-to-life for unborn children."

And in another controversial plank, the Republican platform statement also pledges the GOP will "work for the appointment of judges at all levels of the judiciary who respect traditional family values and the sanctity of innocent human life."

GOP faithful cheer Reagan on arrival

DETROIT (UPI) — Sensing big election victories in November, joyful Republicans gave Ronald Reagan a hero's welcome and former President Gerald Ford a standing birthday ovation Monday.

Those actions wound up the first day of the party's 1980 national political convention.

The GOP gathered 4,000 strong to present Reagan the presidential nomination he has sought for 12 years. Polls showing Reagan would defeat President Carter easily erased the last vestiges of the GOP's Watergate depression.

There were stirrings of party-dissidence behind the scenes at the convention as conservatives threatened to rebel if Reagan picked a moderate running mate.

But in the bunting-covered convention hall the delegates joined in a joyous love fest for the 69-year-old conservative former governor of California.

Within an hour of arriving at the convention, Reagan moved to make peace by agreeing to meet with such varied factions as women-activists outraged at the party's ending support for ERA and former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, on the outs with conservatives because of the Panama Canal treaties.

"All of us know why we're here — the need for a crusade here today," Reagan told his followers at a hotel rally shortly after his arrival. "In our hearts we are determined to make America great again."

In the opening day of the 32nd gathering of Republicans to pick a presidential candidate, they came to praise Reagan.

Ford, Sen. Richard Lugar, former Treasury Secretary William Simon, former Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld and Sen. Nancy Landon Kassebaum trooped to the red, white and blue podium to acclaim their candidate and condemn the Carter administration policies they said brought the nation into recession at home and disgrace abroad.

And through it all the like-minded delegates in white cowboy hats, wearing purple sashes with "Reagan" on one side and the name of their state on the other, cheered and cheered.

Anderson's support looks shaky

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A poll of Americans who say they will vote for independent John Anderson in November shows they are younger, richer, more liberal and better educated than those supporting either President Carter or Ronald Reagan.

The survey, published today in the Los Angeles Times, revealed that Anderson supporters are less likely to say they are "pretty certain" to vote for him in November than backers of Carter and Reagan. They are not as likely to stay with Anderson after thinking more about the election.

Although Anderson is running a close third in a three-man race — the telephone survey of 1,466 registered voters gave Reagan 40 percent of the vote, Carter 30 percent and Anderson 25 percent — the poll noted indications that many voters still do not take his candidacy seriously.

Only 8 percent of Anderson's supporters and 3 percent of all voters said they thought he really could win the presidency.

Overall, 46 of the voters predicted Reagan will win; 42 percent said they thought Carter will be re-elected in November.

Less than half of the voters thought the president should debate Anderson and Reagan together, while more than two-thirds said he should meet Reagan in a face-to-face debate.

The demographic breakdown of Anderson's supporters showed that 23 percent are under 30, compared to 21 percent of all voters; 45 percent have family incomes exceeding $25,000, compared to 38 percent of all voters; 31 percent call themselves liberal, compared to 22 percent of all voters; and have attended college, compared to about a third of all voters.

The survey suggested that Anderson's supporters are involved in a type of "protest vote" against the presidential choice they expect to be offered by the Democratic and Republican parties.

Their overall impressions of both Carter and Reagan were noticeably lower than other voters and most of those favoring Anderson did not correlate their support to his stand on specific issues.

Between 40-45 percent of those who plan to vote for Anderson said they supported liberal Sens. Eugene McCarthy and George McGovern and Rep. Morris Udall in the 1968, 1972 and 1976 elections.

Forced by Justice Department action Billy Carter registers as Libyan agent

WASHINGTON — Billy Carter was forced to register as a foreign agent for Libya Monday.

In doing so the president's brother acknowledged accepting $220,000 from that country's radical Arab government.

The Department of Justice described the $220,000 as "compensation" Carter received for services he performed for the Libyans. The president's brother, who consented to register as an agent in the face of a department civil suit, said the funds were part payment of a half-million-dollar loan he had sought from the Libyans.

The suit alleged that Carter would continue to represent the Libyans illegally unless the court issued an injunction restraining him. Carter said, however, that he is not now engaged in or considering any activities for the Libyans.

Carter could not be reached for comment.

White House officials conceded that the action was likely to further alienate Jewish voters from the president. However, Ray Jenkins, a spokesman, maintained that the suit was "a private matter between the Justice Department and a private individual who happens to be the president's brother."

At the Republican National Convention in Detroit, Sen. William V. Roth, R-De., said he will seek a Senate investigation of Carter's relations with the Libyans as soon as he returns to Washington next week.

The Department of Justice suit took note of Carter's relationship with the president's Jewish voters two "big publicized" visits Carter made to Libya in September, 1978, and August, 1979, the suit said. "The presence of the brother of the president of the United States at events commemorating the Libyan Revolution was important to Libya in order to obtain maximum coverage of the event by U.S. media entities and to create the appearance of approval by the United States of the Libyan Revolution."

On this point, Jenkins said: "The White House in no way assisted Billy in his representation, if any," of Libya, which has a reputation for bankrolling international terrorism.

In addition to the $220,000, the suit said Carter accepted gifts and two all-expense-paid trips to Libya from the Libyan government.

Carter, in his registration statement, said the gifts included four gold bracelets valued at about $400; a saddle exceeding $2,000 in value; a $100 serving platter; a $50 ceremonial sword; a $150 suit of clothes and a native odd and clothing valued at $140.

Rattler just wasn't thirsty

BLACKFOOT (UPI) — A Bingham County man who was found in a hospital bed after he tried to make a rattlesnake drink beer, police said Monday.

Officers said the man, identified as Paul Galegos, was at Union Pacific Park in Blackfoot Saturday when a friend told him he had a pet rattlesnake. Galegos told his friend he wanted to see the snake, so the creature was released in the back of a pickup truck.

Police said an observer suggested someone should try to get the snake drunk. Galegos began tapping the snake on his head with one hand, holding a can of beer in the other.

Officers said Galegos attempted to pour beer through the snake's mouth when it reared to strike, but the snake got past the beer and sank its fangs into Galegos' thumb.

The victim was taken to Bingham Memorial Hospital and was kept throughout the weekend for treatment.

Galegos' friend took the snake outside town and released it into the desert, police said.

Ford pledges full support for Reagan's White House bid

Thousands jammed the lobbies and balconies of the cavernous Renaissance Center Hotel to greet Reagan on his arrival. Then Reagan and his group which had flown from California moved into the set of 70th floor penthouse where he and Ford will make his crucial vice presidential decision.

Reagan insisted he had not made his choice. He came to town under intense pressure from the moderates to pick former Ambassador to China, Bush and from the conservatives for Rep. Jack Kemp.

ers and delegates — perhaps numbering in the hundreds — will visit the penthouse to give Reagan their views. Then he will go into seclusion, likely taking counsel from his wife Nancy, and make a final choice. On Reagan's list were Bush, Kemp, Lugar, Rumsfeld, Simon and Rep. Guy Vander Jagt, who will deliver the convention keynote speech Tuesday night. The highlight of the opening day in the Joe Louis Arena was Ford's welcoming address, which sparked the first prolonged standing, cheering ovation of the Republican meeting. "President Ford, we love you," shouted one delegate whose voice rang throughout the convention hall. Speaking on his 67th birthday, the man who narrowly beat Reagan for the 1976 GOP nomination promised to do "everything" he can to help his old foe reach the White House and said President Carter has "got to go." The former president couched his pledge to be the No. 1 volunteer in Reagan's army with a stinging attack on Carter's foreign and domestic policies. "We've got a lot of work to do and you are looking at one volunteer who will try harder, work longer and speak with more conviction to get this country a competent president again," Ford said. Though he stayed out of the 1980 political wars, Ford emerged as the architect assigned to help Reagan build the bridge between conservatives and moderates at the convention. He first led those in urging Reagan balance his ticket with a moderate conservative — outraged because former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger had been invited to speak at the convention. "President Ford's advice will be very seriously listened to," said Reagan's campaign chairman William Casey.

Bush ends presidential race

DETROIT (UPI) — George Bush, a front runner for the Republican vice presidential nomination, officially withdrew from the presidential race Monday and asked 559 delegates he won to support Ronald Reagan.

Bush said the former California governor has "gone the extra mile" for him.

Whether that extra mile might lead to the vice presidential nomination was uncertain, but Bush and a top political adviser reiterated he was not running for the job.

Adviser Dean Burch, a former GOP chairman with strong ties to the party's right wing, told the delegates Bush came to Detroit simply to release his delegates and speak to Reagan-controlled delegations from eastern and industrial states on behalf of the Californian.

investigate his way into the vice presidency," Burch said.

"It's known to all we're going to run a straight-up operation. If he is chosen, marvelous. If he is not, that's a decision Governor Reagan has to make and that's his decision."

He did suggest that the Bush backers greet their candidate "with open arms" when he addresses the convention Wednesday night just before Reagan's nomination.

Seven weeks to the day after Bush quit campaigning, he formally withdrew his candidacy Monday in a letter to the Federal Election Commission stating: "I hereby withdraw as a candidate for president of the United States."

At the same time, Bush told his delegates in a series of caucuses he has paid off all his primary campaign debts, having rejected Reagan's offer of fund raising help.

The former CIA director said he developed a new perspective on Reagan since the GOP race was decided after the Michigan and Oregon primaries May 20.

"Since then, he's gone the extra mile — making Barbara (Mrs. Bush) and I feel very much wanted in the fray," he said.

Bush said he would not actively seek the vice presidential nomination. "Nobody believes it. We don't have an operation... We're not doing that. And we shouldn't do it. It's not right to do that kind of pressure stuff."

"What he is not going to be doing is a lot of machinations to somehow

Their signs read: "Nobody for President," and "No draft, no war." The demonstration lasted five minutes.

Stopping smoking goal now

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The government is phasing out research to develop a less hazardous cigarette in favor of efforts to eliminate smoking altogether, the new head of the National Cancer Institute said Monday.

Dr. Vincent T. DeVita said any future support for research aimed at improving the cigarette should come from the manufacturers.

"We have made major contributions in that area but I think that's about it," he told a news conference.

DeVita said the institute is placing more emphasis on cancer prevention. He said encouraging people to quit smoking is a major goal and he wants to see the start of an "epidemic of smoking cessation."

DeVita, who joined the institute in 1963 and most recently was head of the institute's division of cancer treatment, said he would rather see the money now spent on less hazardous cigarette studies go to behavioral research aimed at finding why, for example, teen-agers smoke.

The institute is spending $3.96 million on the less hazardous cigarette project this year. A spokesman said a total of $7.5 million has been spent since 1969 on the program with peak annual spending of $2.5 million on research into such things as the chemical makeup of tobacco, the structure of cigarettes and ways to improve filters.

DeVita said the institute also plans to continue major support of a wide variety of research projects aimed at understanding the causes of cancer.

Police union goes for Ted

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Edward Kennedy, declaring "there is still time" for Democrats to change their mind and offer him the party's presidential nomination, Monday collected an unprecedented endorsement from the International Union of Police Associations.

Kennedy told the police union's meeting it marked an important milestone because it was "the first law enforcement officers' political endorsement convention in the history of our country."

The senator, indicating he remains determined to carry his fight for the Democratic nomination to the New York convention, admitted the union's support came "during a difficult time in this campaign."

Make sure your child has shots

Maybe we take modern medicine too much for granted. What else would explain the apparent disinterest by Idaho parents in seeing to it their youngsters are protected from a number of diseases or illnesses? Could it be that they've been lulled into a false sense of security by today's advanced state of medicine?

Local health officials are both pleading for parents to get their school-age children inoculated and decrying the lack of interest by parents in seeing to it the law is met. We are considered safe from epidemics if a 90 percent inoculation rate is achieved. Yet, the statewide average does not meet that figure and in Twin Falls County last year only 77 percent of the affected parents complied with the law. For the entire Magic Valley, the figure is 86 percent.

In an effort to bump those figures up to safer levels, South Central District Health officials are urging parents to get their children inoculated now, beating an anticipated rush next month prior to the opening of school.

State law requires parents to furnish proof of inoculations to school officials for children in kindergarten through fifth grade. If you can't afford to pay your private physician for the shots—or boosters—the health agency operates a clinic each Tuesday in several Magic Valley communities. A fee of $2 will cover all shots needed and no one will be turned away even if that fee is too much.

Take advantage of these opportunities to get your children protected. We wiped out or are controlling many diseases only because of widespread inoculations. Don't fall victim to apathy or the mistaken belief that just because certain epidemics haven't occurred in a long time that the danger is past.

If you love your children, protect them.

Board decided in favor of quality

Sometimes a low bid is not the best bid. That, in essence, is what the Magic Valley Memorial Hospital board of directors decided last week in retaining a firm providing physicians for its emergency room. It's estimated the new contract will cost $130,000 more over the next three years than the lowest bid, but the quality of a known service is worth the price.

We're all concerned with escalating health care costs but it has been difficult to agree on just what those services should cost. It is a topic many will readily argue, but few want to second guess the doctor, staff or facility if they are admitted for treatment.

The board knew exactly what it had in terms of performance and service. The hospital staff concurred. As it was, the Travis Martin firm of Canon City, Colo., lowered its original bid because the board was concerned with rising costs. It was a show of good faith.

Taking into account three years of emergency room service, the quality of the service and the hospital board's intent to keep quality health care intact, we'd say they made a wise decision.

Living room delegate

© Los Angeles Times Syndicate
Chairman, Mr. Chairman.
"Will the gentlemen in the living room in his undershirt please sit down. You are out of order."
"Don't tell me I'm out of order. You know the only reason you're going through this charade is because of the television audience."
"What seems to be the problem, sir?"
"I want to see the reruns of Charles's Angels. Why can't you people hold a convention in the daytime when everyone is at work?"
"That's impossible. It would mean pre-empting the soap operas, and our female viewers would never stand for that. Besides, this is a very historical moment on television. We're nominating the person who may be the next President of the United States."
"Who's that?"
"Ronald Reagan."
"No, you got it all wrong. It's Jimmy Stewart for President—Ronald Reagan plays his best friend."
"We know what we're doing. Ronald Reagan for President—the party's all sewed up. Now will you please sit down so we can get on with the speeches?"
"I'd rather see The Gong Show—" and I hate The Gong Show."

If you don't keep quiet, sir, we'll make you listen to Sen. Charles Percy."
"I'll be quiet."
"All right. Now, ladies and gentlemen, we have a real treat in store for all of you. How would all you Americans like to have the Panama Canal back? You would? Well, it's now possible. If you vote for Ronald Reagan in November, we will send you absolutely free, without any obligation on your part, the Panama Canal as well as all the locks that go with it. Just think of it, the canal that you've always dreamed of is yours, once you put Ronald Reagan into the White House."
"Mr. Chairman, Mr. Chairman."
"Sir, we only have four hours of prime time and we would appreciate it if you'd..."
"What happened to the tax cut?"
"We're coming to the tax cut, sir, right after we return from Clare Boothe Luce. Why don't you go and take a nap and as soon as we get to the tax cut we'll wake you up."
"I don't wanna miss anything. You got right ahead with whatever you were planning."
"We have a film on Ronald Reagan as a young man."

"Beautiful! I'm glad I didn't go bowling tonight."
"And then we get to the tax cut."
"Are we going to get a tax cut and a balanced budget at the same time?"
"That's our big secret. If we told you that you might turn off the set and go to bed."
"Give me a hint."
"Well, we've shot it three different ways like they did 'Dallas' so it will be kept a mystery." In one version you get the cut and the balanced budget. In another you get the cut and a larger deficit and in the third you get the cut and the Panama Canal as well."
"Is it true Ronnie wants to give the People's Republic of China to Taiwan?"
"Ronnie's always had a warm spot in his heart for Taiwan. He has all his American cowboy boots made there."
"Doesn't everybody? Hey, do you mind speak early in case to see Johnny Carson."
"We still gotta lot of business to attend to."
"Such as?"
"Ronnie is going to do his welfare cheaters number."
"Again?"
"It still plays in Peoria."

Reagan and the ERA

© Universal Press Syndicate
DETROIT — There must be 10,000 scribes in town, gathered together from the 50 states and a dozen foreign capitals, and we're getting desperate.
With nothing left to say about a Republican vice presidential choice, the press corps has been driven to its penultimate last resort: the platform. The ultimate last resort, of course, when all else fails, is a contest over rules. That point won't be reached. But for want of hard news, the scribes have been making molochs: They have been slaver over the fight—"or 'batttle,'" or "struggle," or even the "shoot-out"—over a plank dealing with the Equal Rights Amendment. That is how bad things are.
My own fervent conviction is that nobody gives much of a damn about the ERA anymore. This is an old bone with nothing left to gnaw on. Except for a hard core of millitants for, and millitants against, everyone else has gone home. Not a single state has ratified since Indiana in 1977. The movement is dead in the water.
But we have to write about something. Another you get the cut and a larger deficit and in the third you get the cut and the Panama Canal as well."
"Is it true Ronnie wants to give the People's Republic of China to Taiwan?"
"Ronnie's always had a warm spot in his heart for Taiwan. He has all his American cowboy boots made there."
"Doesn't everybody? Hey, do you mind speak early in case to see Johnny Carson."
"We still gotta lot of business to attend to."
"Such as?"
"Ronnie is going to do his welfare cheaters number."
"Again?"
"It still plays in Peoria."

Republican Party reaffirms its support for ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment. How can the party back away from that commitment without actually retreating?
It ain't easy. There wouldn't be a problem if it weren't for Ronald Reagan. Last January Our Leader waxed eloquent on his record as governor of California in promoting equal rights for women: "We enacted laws to prohibit discriminations, and the issuance of insurance; to permit a woman to obtain credit in her own name; to give the wife equal rights with regard to community property; and to equalize the wife's rights in administering the estate of a deceased spouse."
Then the governor took a breath: "However, I do not believe that the 'Equal Rights' Amendment to the federal Constitution is the answer to the problem." Trouble with that step of the speech is that Ronald Reagan added, quite accurately, that the proposed amendment "would not in itself redress inequalities."
The amendment would serve only to increase the legislative powers of the courts. His better idea would be annually to review federal laws that subvert women's equal rights, and to work for their revision or repeal.
This is the approach that some of us have been urging all along. It makes sense to me. By its own terms the ERA would not become operative until two years after ratification. At that time an era of interminable litigation would begin, as one test case after another was filed in the courts.

The amendment is not self-executing. Unlike other recent amendments, such as the 28th guaranteeing 18-year-olds a right to vote, the ERA is woefully unclear. Who really knows what is meant by "equality of rights under the law"? It would be up to judges to say—and 114 judges still are trying to figure out what is meant by "equal protection of the law."
The Reagan approach offers a wise, prudent, attainable plan for gradual correction of the ills that remain. He is proposing that normal political processes be permitted to work their way in this area of explosive emotions. Let gender-based laws be isolated and examined; most of them it will be found, are largely innocuous. Free of the pressure for constitutional change, legislators should be able systematically to revise or to repeal those statutes that sanction significant, invidious discrimination.
It is immaterial, or so it seems to me, what the platform writers finally come up with. The platform that is adopted here in Detroit is not binding upon Republican candidates for state legislatures—anyhow—and state legislators are the only ones who have a vote on ratification of the ERA. In brief, the platform fight is much ado about mighty little. But if you have to fill up 800 words to meet a deadline, it will suffice.

A real-life heroine

Helen Gahagan Douglas tribute

By THEO LIPPMAN Jr.
© The Baltimore Sun
(Field News Service)
Helen Gahagan Douglas, who died last month at age 79, led a life so romantic, meaningful and rewarding that not even Sidney Sheldon would make up a heroine like her.
Helen Gahagan was a Brooklyn millionaire's daughter. She was starting on Broadway when there still was a Broadway in the early 1930s. By 1930, when she was appearing in a play called "Tonight or Never," she was an international star of drama and the concert stage, having successfully toured Europe as an opera singer.
She also was named one of the world's 10 most beautiful women in some silly poll—but she was so beautiful that the title stuck.
Her co-star in "Tonight or Never" was Melvyn Douglas. They fell in love during that run and were married, to live happily ever after.

More than a pretty face, Mrs. Douglas was in the vanguard of liberalism in the 1930s. She toured East Asia and was one of the first Americans to speak out about the dangers of Japanese militarism.
On concert tour again in Austria in the late 1930s, she canceled her contract to come back home and speak out against Hitler. On domestic issues, she was among the leaders in having been among the first of migrant workers in the decade of the dust bowl and the Okies.
She maintained these interests the rest of her life. After serving four fruitless terms in the House of Representatives during the 1950s, she continued to lecture and write on liberal themes through the 1950s, 1960s and 1970s. She was an alternate to the UN General Assembly in the 1950s, led a special U.S. delegation to Liberia in the 1960s.
For all her successes, liberals remember her best for her one failure.

She lost a Senate bid to Richard Nixon in 1950. That was the campaign in which Nixon among his agents libeled her as a "Pink Lady," distorting both the issues and her record. She saw the dark underside of Richard Nixon more than two decades before Watergate. She tried to warn us.
It was in that campaign that the most enduring political sobriquet in modern times was coined. Nicknames come and go. Mostly they days they go. Nicknaming is a dying art. But Helen Gahagan Douglas and her supporters picked up the phrase "Tricky Dick Nixon" from a small weekly California newspaper and made it a national catch phrase.
Nobody listened, then or later, and the next thing anybody knew, Tricky Dick was president. The next thing anybody knew, he was an unindicted co-conspirator.
Helen Gahagan Douglas said, came as no surprise to her.

Will Vander Jagt's no-notes, no-text speech inspire?

© The Washington Post Company
DETROIT — Guy Vander Jagt, the Michigan Republican keynote address (July 15), says, epigrammatically, "If you were trying to talk some girl into marrying you, you wouldn't need notes."
Actually, I know politicians who would need a Teleprompter, but Vander Jagt's valid point is this:
It should not seem as strange as it does that he will speak to the convention, and the country, without notes, let alone a text. You might say he is counting on timely inspiration, but what does "inspiration" mean?
Someone asked Anton Bruckner, "Master, when were did you think of the divine motif of your Ninth Symphony?" Bruckner replied: "Well, it was like this. I walked up the Kahlenberg, and when it got hot and I got hungry, I sat down by a little brook and unpacked my Swiss cheese. And just as I open the greasy paper, that darn tune pops into my head!"

Ah, but Bruckner's head was trained to cause tunes to "pop" into it. And Vander Jagt's head is similarly trained for political themes.
His parents emigrated from the Netherlands to Cadillac, Mich., where he was born. At age 17, while at a church summer camp, he was told that a Presbyterian congregation in nearby Ruston, Mich., was without a minister. He drew 18 of the faithful to his first sermon as temporary pluck-bitter.
For that sermon, he prepared one page of notes. For his second, he prepared two pages; for his third, three. Then he spotted the trend, and vowed: Never another note. By the end of his stint, 80 souls were hanging on his flowing words.

He went from Yale Divinity School (that mother-of-statesmen—Gov. Jerry Brown, Senators Gary Hart and Jack Danforth) to the University of Michigan Law School, then to Congress, which, of course, exists to bring man's laws into conformity with God's.
He is a leader of the Republican campaign against the electorate's quadrennial myopia, against the idea that a "presidential year" is only that, and for the idea that "Congress is the culprit." He has overseen the unprecedented and successful television ads flaying "the Democratic Congress" and urging "Vote Republican — For a Change." The ad featuring an actor portraying House Speaker Tip O'Neill as a buffoon received a remarkable 75 percent recall rating among viewers.

The ads were run in Cincinnati as often as they were run in other cities around the nation; twice as often in Toledo, and not at all in Columbus. Follow-up surveys discovered that the $5 million campaign achieved striking attitudinal changes, as measured by responses to questions such as: Do you intend to vote for the Republican congressional candidate? Would America be better off with more Republicans in Congress? Are Democrats to blame for, by just about everything? 1980.
Republicans need to gain 50 seats in 1980 to take control of the House. In 1968, bouncing back from the Goldwater debacle, Republicans gained 47 seats. And 1968 conditions may be even better for Republicans.
Now, as in 1968, there is an unpopular President — more unpopular, especially among Democrats, than Lyndon Johnson was in 1968 — and an unpopular Congress of the same party. And there is evidence that now, for the first time, a majority of Americans understand that Democrats have controlled Congress since Hector was a pup. (An astonishing number of Americans have so little faith in their government system that they assume Republicans must have controlled Congress when Nixon and Ford were presidents.) On that topic, especially, words "bring 'n' bid" to Vander Jagt's lips.

Some speakers make you fancy you are in fifth century Athens. Most speakers make you wish you were. Hobbes said a democracy must be "an aristocracy of orators." Today we know that a democracy is not an aristocracy of any kind, least of all that of oratory.
"Gone is rhetoric in the grand style,"

the style of Gladstone or Wesley who held vast crowds for hours, the style of Burke and other parliamentarians who spoke extemporaneously. They know that the surest key to successful speaking is knowing one's own mind — and having a mind to know.
You may think the Republican Party today shows its own mind a tad too well, that it is unusually confident because it is unwarrantedly confident that it has solutions to all problems. However that may be, Vander Jagt was the proper choice for keynote, not only because of his speaking skills, which are peculiarly his, but also because the confidence from which those skills spring is the Republican mood on the eve of battle. Republicans are pawing the ground like war-horses, and Vander Jagt is their bugle.

Business moves to aid refugees

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The American business community set out Monday to raise $40 million for Cambodian refugee relief.

A Democratic congressman proposed a major reform of federal aid for refugees already in the United States.

George Stinson, chairman of National Steel Corp., said an intercorporate committee is seeking support from all "Fortune 500" companies, the nation's largest, and another $300 million or more.

He said the effort for Cambodian relief is being coordinated with a similar drive among union members led by the AFL-CIO.

Meanwhile, Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., called Monday for Congress to "supplant the bulk of the existing welfare programs with a federal, no-interest loan program for refugees."

Aspin estimated current refugee welfare programs would cost at least $1.3 billion this year.

Under his proposal, refugees "would get money to resettle and to start up new lives. But that money would not be a gift. They would be expected to repay it over succeeding years."

Stinson said the corporations are responding to the Cambodian situation in part because of its uniqueness and vastness.

"Not only is this a massive problem dealing with the refugee camps on the Thai border, but the thing that sets it apart from other refugee problems is that almost everything — the entire infrastructure of the nation — has been wiped out," Stinson said.

Aspin said a loan program for refugees would be less expensive than current welfare programs and would "help sort out the refugees who are simply looking for a free ride."

Aspin called reports that refugees get free cars and weekly spending allowances "pure baloney," but "it's still true that refugees are eligible for a whole shopping cart of aid when they've never paid a penny in taxes."

Sub-based MX dozen years away

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A new study for the Pentagon said Monday it seems feasible to deploy the controversial MX missile on small submarines off U.S. coasts, but not before 1992.

The land-based MX is to be deployed initially in Utah and Nevada in 1989.

The overall tenor of the latest report on small submarines appeared to confirm the Pentagon contention this is not an acceptable alternative to basing the 200 MX missiles in the Southwestern states.

The unclassified study, prepared by System Planning Corporation for the Pentagon, was released at the request of William Perry, deputy secretary of defense for research and engineering.

The cost of deploying MX missiles in capsules attached to the outside of small subs would cost $39.8 billion, compared to $3.3 billion for adjusting the missiles in Utah and Nevada.

Defense officials said they are also working on another study of basing half of the 200 MX missile force in New Mexico and Texas as well as the two other states.

Britain pays tribute to revered Queen Mother Elizabeth

LONDON (UPI) — Queen Mother Elizabeth, who has no challenger for the title of best loved woman in Britain, rides in an open carriage to St. Paul's Cathedral today for a service of thanksgiving for her long and exemplary life.

The "Queen Mum" as she is affectionately known, will ride with her grandson, Prince Charles, heir to the throne, behind a colorful escort of palace cavalry with gilded helmets and gleaming breastplates to the highlight of her 80th birthday celebrations.

Although Queen Elizabeth II's mother will not turn 80 until Aug. 4, many local festivities marking the event have already been held and are scheduled.

Tuesday's service at St. Paul's, mother church of the Church of England, is the national commemoration.

Nearly the entire royal family will travel by carriage in procession from Buckingham Palace to the great cathedral, — Christopher Wren's masterpiece.

Princess Margaret, Princess Anne, the Duke of Gloucester and his family, the Duke of Kent and Princess Alexandra of Kent and their families will ride in the first four carriages.

Another sovereign's escort of household cavalry on black chargers will precede Queen Elizabeth in a carriage with her husband, Prince Philip, and their sons, Prince Andrew and Prince Edward.

There are no rules where the Queen Mum is concerned. A sovereign's escort of the household guards is only for reigning rulers but, as usual, an exception is being made for her.

Services of thanksgiving in St. Paul's are also usually reserved for reigning monarchs or other events of major significance in the life of the nation.

The Archbishop of Canterbury, Dr. Robert Runcie, primate of the Church of England, will deliver an address but there will be an ecumenical theme.

A large turquoise banner, specially commissioned for the service, bears the words: "All shall be well, all manner of thing shall be well."

The saying is attributed to one of the Queen Mother's interests, Dan Julian of Norwich, a 14th-century woman who recovered from a serious illness after seeing visions.

The Queen Mother will later wave to crowds from the balcony of Buckingham Palace which she refused to leave during World War I. One of the many incidents that endeared her to the people.

With Howard Da Silva, she headlined a screening Sunday in New York of the old Alan Ladd version of "The Great Gatsby" — a promotion for Beverly Lint's new paperback, "Ladd: A Hollywood Tragedy." Said Miss Winters, of contemporary film scripts, "You have a choice of being in outer space, naked in bed or cutting up people."

The Rev. Bill Spivey never preached a sermon hotter than the one inflicted upon his parishioners Sunday by thieves. They broke into his Austin, Texas, church and stole his 10,000-BTU air conditioner. Spivey says he always preaches hell and damnation, but that "I had never expected to experience in on Earth, in my own church." He says the 70 faithful who braved the "historic" heat wave "baked like they were in an oven," and prayed for a return of the cooler.

John Malar surveyed the birthday present sent to him by his brother, and graded, "I'll get him for this. Boy, will I get him for this." The present ignored the threat. It was busy moving and trampling the grass in the lawn of his Chicago home. A hand-lettered sign with the 10 shorthorn steers said "John, if you like manure so much, here's a never ending supply. Happy Birthday! Sam." The last time Sam had a birthday, John sent him manure — 27 tons of it.

BOUNCING BALL

The role of the paralyzed artist in "Whose Life Is It Anyway?" is turning into something of a theatrical volleyball. Bill Galt wrote it first for a man, and Tom Caste played it in London and on Broadway. Then Mary Tyler Moore took over, changing the gender, but not the rave reviews on the Great White Way. Now comes Richard Dreyfuss with yet another gender change to turn it into an MGM film. He's a just-wrapped-up Rastafar's "The Competition," costarring Amy Irving and Lee Remick.

House found, but whose?

HOUSTON (UPI) — A small frame house reported missing to police was found almost seven miles from its original site by a detective and its originator.

Detective Joe Seckler of Harris County's Sheriff's Department said a man who had read of the missing house and the $200 reward offered for it remembered seeing the house being moved near his home, jumped in his dune buggy and searched Sunday until he found it.

Seckler said a 40-year-old lithograph printer was found repairing the house, but that he produced papers showing he had bought the house from a real estate salesman.

Seckler said the printer and the owner of the house, Byron W. Friserson, now have to determine who owns the home.

What's what

Old Blue true Western hero of cattle trails

The great cattle years of the Wild West, when drovers pushed trail herds from Texas to Kansas, only lasted about 20 years. The lone produced a lot of fictional heroes. But maybe the most heroic critter was a lead steer called "Old Blue." For almost a decade-half the era—this animal led the rest-through passes, by water holes, to the slaughterhouses. Steers followed Old Blue for some reason. He had that fairly rare quality called command.

In China's Peking is an air raid shelter that holds 10,000 people. But that's not the item. The item is that in their practice drill they can fill it with all 10,000 people in just six minutes. I don't know how they do that.

Microbiologists no longer use the word microbe. Too unscientific.

W. C. FIELDS
Q. How many bank accounts did the great comedian W. C. Fields have?
A. Nobody knows. His executors located fewer than 50. But Fields had told friends he had more than 700. He kept no records of deposits, except in his head, he said. Those familiar with Fields' peculiarities believe he was telling the truth.

Q. If the skate blade of an ice skater melts the ice as it glides over, that ice has been told how come the whole skating rink isn't soon awash with water?
A. Because ice melted under pressure re-solidifies when the pressure is removed. It's a phenomenon called regelation. You see it when you make a snowball.

GREATEST MOVIE
What's the greatest motion picture ever made? When a public television network program put that query to its viewers, the film to win far and away the most votes was "Citizen Kane." "Star Wars" ranked in the upper fifth of the nominees. And also ran included "2001," "Fantasia," "Gone With the Wind," "High Sierra," "Casablanca" and "African Queen."

Two people engaged to be married in the Soviet Union have to wait a month after they get their license before they can go through the ceremony. About 12 out of every 100 such couples call it quits during that waiting time.

No professional baseball player can be paid more than $2,400 per season. That's what the National League rule stated. Eighty years ago.

Dear Abby

Cutting roots of parents by moving may wither the vine

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
© Universal Press Syndicate
DEAR ABBY: Please print this as an open letter to all well-meaning daughters and sons who bring a widowed parent like NEAR them, setting mama or papa up in a small, cheerful apartment—with a good address. They seem to think that is sufficient.

These older single parents have left behind friendships of many years, with roots deeply imbedded in a community of familiar faces, places to shop and places to go.

Newly, suddenly, they're thrown into a strange, unfamiliar setting where they are expected to make new friends and "start over" in the twilight of their lives.

Well-meaning children should first try to get their parents into an apartment complex where there are many elderly people like themselves. They should find out what is offered in the way of activities for the older person, and also entertain for them, inviting the parents of their friends.

Young people haven't the foggiest notion of how difficult it is for a lone parent to "start over" in a strange environment. And to do it. Being old myself and having been through such a move, I can feel for the newcomer. I pray this makes your widely read column.

"84" IN SOUTH CAROLINA
DEAR "84": One prayer answered.

Thanks for a letter that could help many.
DEAR ABBY: All the letters about the nursing profession prompt this letter, which happens to be my problem.

We have a very fine 16-year-old son who wants to be a nurse! Abby, he is bright and ambitious, but his choice of a profession is a big disappointment to his father and me.

How can we convince him that nursing is a profession for women, not men?

—MISSOURI PARENTS
DEAR PARENTS: Although currently most nurses are women; more and more men are entering the field, and for a good reason: Many male patients are much more comfortable with a male nurse than a female.

Fortunately, many young people today are selecting their careers based on their own interests and abilities rather than on which sex is dominant in a given field—witness the number of female physicians, engineers, lawyers.

Don't discourage your son from becoming a nurse. Be grateful that he has chosen a profession that is so important to the well-being of so many people.

DEAR ABBY: My roommate, Anita, and I are faithful readers of your column and would like you to referee an argument for us.

A few days ago, Anita borrowed a typewriter from a girl on our floor, and while Anita was using it, a key broke.

She told the owner of the typewriter that it had broken and said she would take care of having it fixed. Nothing was said about who would pay for its repair.

The charge for repairing the typewriter was about $20. Anita feels that she should not be expected to foot the entire bill because she insists that she was using the typewriter correctly when the key broke, and therefore it wasn't her fault.

I think that since the typewriter broke while Anita was using it, she should pay for fixing it.

She agreed to wait for your answer before returning the typewriter. What do you say?

—DOUBLE-SPACED IN N E R K E L E Y
DEAR SPACED: Even though,

Anita may not have been responsible for the breakage, the typewriter was in perfect working order when she borrowed it and should be returned in the same condition.

(If you put off writing letters because you don't know what to say, get Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Send $1 plus a long, stamped U.S. self-addressed envelope to ABBY, Letters Booklet, 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.)

Health

Less sugar if hypoglycemic

By LAWRENCE E. LAMB
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.
Dear Dr. Lamb,
I am a hypoglycemic person and my doctor tells me to eat more sugar and more carbohydrates. I'm now 215 pounds and getting bigger by the day. I'd like your diet on this.

Dear Reader,
The type of hypoglycemia (low blood sugar) that you have may make some difference but most of the time doctors recommend that individuals who have problems with low blood sugar should avoid sweets, particularly sugar and starches. These individuals should get their carbohydrates from bulky and raw vegetables and raw fruits.

I am sending you The Health Letter number 3-9, Low Blood Sugar: Hypoglycemia. Other readers who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, City Station, New York, NY 10019. The Health Letter I'm sending you gives the details of the symptoms of low blood sugar and the principles used in dietary management.

Many patients who have hypoglycemia tend to become markedly overweight. The constant overproduction of insulin stimulates them to eat to raise their blood sugar to normal levels. This is true even if the low blood sugar is caused by a tumor of the insulin-producing part of the pancreas.

If you may have gained from the above remark, there are many different causes for hypoglycemia. The treatment varies. Obviously, if a person has an insulin-producing tumor, the proper treatment is to remove it. On the other hand, if a person has so-called reactive hypoglycemia secondary to diet or problems related to absorption of food, then the proper approach is usually to change the diet.

Dear Dr. Lamb,
I'd like some information on not being able to perspire. I'm 23 and have had this problem since puberty. It affects my arms, hands, knees and feet. I cannot go out into the sun or humidity for any length of time. I saw a doctor and he told me to stay away from salt and to use strong sun screens and take pills to open my pores. What, if anything, is this doing to my system? Is this a rare problem and can I ever get completely cured? Will I ever be able to spend the day at the beach?

Dear Reader,
Absence of perspiration is a rare condition. Sometimes it can affect the whole body or it can affect localized regions. Perspiration is an important mechanism of cooling the body. In fact, at the onset of a heat stroke a person may stop sweating, which is a signal that he's not eliminating body heat.

You should see a neurologist. Sweating does depend on the presence of functional sweat glands in the skin. It also depends on nerve stimulation of the glands to secrete sweat. Various defects in nerve fibers and nerve systems can cause an absence of perspiration. There are also some skin diseases which can cause it.

Avoid exposure to the heat until the neurologist. You may have a very poor tolerance to heat because your ability to eliminate body heat has been compromised.

Safety tips for farms

CHICAGO, ILL.—June, July and August could be thought of as Children of Summer.

Unlike the offspring of the Spring, Fall and Winter families, the Summer Kids on farms and ranches are unusually carefree and spirited. They stay up very late and only go to bed when chased by Mr. Moon.

The Children of Summer don't have to go to school so they work and play doubly hard. Sometimes they get a bit restless.

During harvest time, they flirt dangerously with the blades of combines and tractors and romp in the grain bins.

At play, they go swimming in deep water without using a flotation device.

These Summer Children don't want to be bogged down with protective head, foot, eye or ear wear during these hot, dusty days.

They also don't want to wear safety belts when riding in the car.

Although not quite so outgoing, Summer Parents share some of their children's habits.

That is why the National Safety Council's Farm Department and the U.S. Department of Agriculture have come up with four themes for safety emphasis during the summer months: Safe Harvest of Small Grain; Water Recreation; PPE (personal protective equipment) Protects; and Safety Belts Save Lives. The variety of subjects reflects the variety in the lives of farm families during this busy season of work, play and travel.

The Council has provided farm families with the following safety tips:

1. For safe harvesting, it says to operate and maintain harvesting equipment as directed in instruction manuals; make sure workers are competent and know how to do the job safely; keep all machine shields and guards in place while operating and stay clear of unshielded moving parts.
- Also, stop the machine and turn off the engine before unloading, inspecting or servicing; adjust machine ground speed to surface, crop and visibility conditions; keep children away from the harvesting equipment, the combine's discharge auger, grain bins and tanks; and wear protective safety gear.
2. In the area of water recreation, the Council advises farm and ranch residents to swim on at least to float well enough to survive in water; poor or beginning swimmers stay out of deep water; step carefully on docks, banks, and at poolside to avoid slipping; supervise small children in the water; have fully-inflated rescue equipment handy; learn first aid and safe boating rules and limit drinking while boating.

3. Personal protective equipment can reduce the number and severity of farm accident injuries and occupational illnesses, the Council notes. Some key safety points for farm workers include protecting the head with a hard hat when performing construction work, trimming trees, repairing machinery and doing other jobs with head injury risks; wear a bump cap for everyday farm tasks; protect vision with impact-resistant safety eyewear; protect hearing with acoustic ear muffs or inserts when operating noisy farm equipment; protect lungs with respiratory equipment appropriate for the job and hazards; use a dust mask or filter respirator when working in dust, spray painting or handling moldy hay.

Dow average soars by 900 mark on institutional spree

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Dow Jones Industrial average pierced the 300 level in climbing to a 22-month high Monday.

It advanced as institutions went on a buying spree when they found second-quarter earnings were not as bad as expected. Trading was active.

The Dow average, a 521-point move Friday, soared 14.22 points to 306.55, the highest level since it hit 307.74 on Sept. 8, 1973. The Dow has climbed more than 140 points since March 1974.

The New York Stock Exchange index zoomed 1.24 to a record 68.68 and the price of a share increased 60 cents. Advances routed declines, 1,201 to 380, among the 1,699 issues traded at 4 p.m. EDT.

Big Board volume rose to 45,500,000 shares from 39,310,000 traded Friday, a strong indication that cash-laden institutions were busy.

Analysts said they thought the market was discounting the recession and that many were waiting for the government to cut taxes in this political year.

Boasting the market was the spreading belief that the Federal Reserve will ease credit in the near future to fight the recession. It has not given any sign yet, however.

Observers were impressed with the breadth of the advances and market's leadership. General Motors and IBM were among the pacesetters.

Composite volume of NYSE issues listed on all U.S. markets and over the counter at 4 p.m. totaled 69,940 shares, up from the 43,983,500 traded Friday.

The American Stock Exchange index rose 3.52 to an all-time high of 310.12 and the price of a share jumped 20 cents. The National Association of Securities Dealers' NASDAQ OTC index gained 1.70 to a record 166.52.

At 4 p.m., National Semiconductor was the most active issue, up 1 1/2 to 28 1/2. Some observers believe the stock is underpriced.

IBM was the second most active issue, up 2 1/2 to 64 1/2 in the wake of its higher earnings report late Friday. General Motors was third, up 1 1/2 to 51 1/2.

Among the other leaders, General Electric rose 1 1/2 to 54 1/2, Xerox 3 to 60 and Westinghouse Electric 1 1/2 to 25 1/2. Westinghouse reported first-quarter earnings of $1.06 a share, compared with $1.06 a year ago.

Gold-mining stocks came under pressure as bullion prices skidded on foreign exchanges and the dollar improved. Dome Mines lost 2 1/2 to 96 1/2, Homestake 2 1/2 to 62 1/2, Campbell Red Lake 2 1/2 to 54 1/2 and ASA Ltd. 2 1/2 to 51 1/2.

Indiana Standard rose 3 1/2 to 62 after the company reported it had made a new gas find in the Overthrust Belt in southwestern Wyoming.

Morrison-Knudsen climbed 2 to 30 1/2. The company attributed its rise Monday and its 3 1/2-point gain last week to the government's enactment of a $21 billion synthetic bill.

On the Amex, advances topped declines, 426 to 186, among the 807 issues traded at 4 p.m. Volume at that time totaled 6,720,000 shares, compared with 5,190,000 Friday.

Gulf Oil of Canada was the most active Amex issue, off 1/2 to 29 1/2. Beverly Enterprises followed, up 1/2 to 15 1/2 in trading that included a block of 141,700 shares at 15 1/2. Houston Oil & Minerals was third, up 1 1/2 to 31 1/2.

Sundance Oil, which plunged 2 1/2 points last week, shed another 3 to 60 1/2. The company revealed Friday it was unable to find anyone to buy Sundance. Also, the firm was subject to unfavorable comments in Barron's, the weekly business magazine.

Quality Inns climbed 3 1/2 to 13 1/2 in active trading. The company has agreed to merge into Manor Care for $14.25 share. Manor Care lost 1 to 17 1/2.

Grain futures

CHICAGO (UPI) — Wheat, corn, oats and soybean futures closed up the daily trading limit Monday. The Chicago Board of Trade said: wheat up 20 cents; corn up 10; oats up 6; and soybeans up 10 cents.

Predictions that the potentially crop-damaging heavy rains would not mean a rise in the fall crop for prices and soybeans future prices, however.

Wheat futures had strong commission houses bid to cover normal crop and delivered product contracts related limit gains, though there was some commensurate crop action and proportional returns creating a time.

Hansen board settles payment discrepancy

By STEPHANIE SCHOROW
Times-News writer

HANSEN — The Hansen School Board resolved the question of whether Title I payments to the district superintendent were proper by declaring the issue "compromised, tabled and closed."

The resolution, passed with one dissenting vote Monday night, also stated "all parties hereto have contributed to the payment of (Title I) monies by mistake, perhaps including past boards."

The board issued a statement, saying "this controversy should be compromised by putting it at rest, and by working to establish administrative safeguards to insure that the board not only be advised but pass upon similar expenditures in the future."

Hansen Superintendent Garth Miller and secretary Janice Annala had come under fire for receiving about $300 each out of federal Title I funds — in addition to their yearly salary — for their work administering Title I programs in the 1977-78 and 1978-79 school years.

The board's attorney, Daniel Slavik, contended such payments were improper without board approval.

Disagreement arose over whether the board, by signing the paychecks allocating funds to the two, had given its approval. Miller said the board had board members said they were unaware where the money was going.

A special meeting with outgoing board members on the issue was called to order at 7 p.m. The board immediately went into executive session until 7:40 p.m.

On emerging, board chairman Robert Pettygrove read a statement saying board minutes showed no "express authorization" of Title I payments and present board members did not know that Title I monies were being paid in addition to salaries.

Whether this was the failure of the board or administrative personnel, "may never be known for sure," the statement said. But because both parties "failed to communicate," each "must assume some responsibility."

When asked if Title I payments would continue to be paid to administrators, Pettygrove said the new board would decide that. But he said Title I funds would not be paid unless the board gives its approval and "I don't think the board will approve it," he said.

Also asked what exactly had been "resolved," Pettygrove said "it's a personnel matter, resolved in executive session. I can't give more than what is there on the board's resolution."

Outgoing board member Art Bailly voted against the resolution; Cecil Stanger, Bill Allen, and Gary Bourn approved it.

Bailly said "I just didn't agree," when asked for his reaction. Asked for his response, Miller said "One is never satisfied because you don't feel you're to-blame, but I'm glad it's over."

In other business at the regular 8 p.m. board meeting, new members Richard-Youree and Deanna-Peak were sworn in. Pettygrove was re-elected chairman, Bourn clerk and Youree treasurer.

During consideration of the district's bills, Pettygrove questioned two items concerning Title I funds, and asked for a report from Miller on all Title I program funding.

Horsepower Sadie, Sally drag out South Hills timber in Walton Reynolds' firewood operation

By SUSAN GALLAGHER
Special to the Times-News

TWIN FALLS — Converting a pair of mustangs into work horses fit for a South Hills logging operation began as a game for Walton Reynolds.

Now that the Twin Falls man has had several months to harness an education in animal psychology, he says the gamesmanship "ain't" changed much. These horses still keep you on your toes all the time. They still keep you wondering what's going to happen next.

Under the guidance of Reynolds' brother and a third business partner, horses Sadie and Sally drag three to four cords of firewood from stump to landing seven days a week in the South Hills' Deadline Burn area.

Pulled by the 1,100-pound horses, logs 30 feet long swingily bump down a quarter-mile of slope most firewood seekers would consider unmanageably steep.

The advantage with horses, according to Reynolds, lies largely in obtaining hard-to-reach firewood in an area where the U.S.

Forest Service restricts access by heavy equipment. Financially, the difference between use of horses versus equipment is negligible, he said.

Sadie and Sally, acquired last January from the Bureau of Land Management in Reno, Nev., are corralled alongside a worksite trailer occupied by Reynolds' brother Ray and co-worker Rick Allen. The two men, both of Twin Falls, spend 12 hours a day harvesting burned timber, usually working each horse for half of the shift.

"They're big and clumsy, but in three or four months we had these two to the point where we could work them," said Reynolds, who paid the BLM $25 per horse to cover veterinarian's services and administrative fees. He said the horses are an estimated six years old and appear to have some domestic ancestry.

"Sally's just smart, but after two trips walking up this hill and hauling logs back, she settles down. Sadie's just the opposite. No kick, no hostility. She'll stop and go on a dime. With the other one, you'd better hold onto the reins or you'll have a runaway."

After breaking them, Reynolds prepared the horses for log hauling by having them pull a large sled around his acreage a mile west of Twin Falls. He has eight broken mustangs, one of which he might take to Sun Valley this winter to offer sleigh rides for tourists.

"You're gambling when you choose wild horses," Reynolds said. "All you can do is pick the ones you think look the best and hope you come up with something that'll work out for you."

He got his first mustang two years ago when seeking a pet for his daughter. Two subsequent selections died soon after he got them to Twin Falls.

"The fellow who examined them before I brought them home told me they looked about eight years old," he said. "The vet who examined them after they died said they looked about 18."

Reynolds said his work with mustangs has prompted a number of local people to ask that he try breaking their horses. But he has declined the offers for lack of time.

Employed year-round by a Twin Falls trucking firm, he spends his off hours supervising the logging operation, hauling supplies to the work site on Third Fork Road and tending his horses. He recently completed a corral at his place near Twin Falls and hopes to begin constructing a stable.

Reynolds said he will acquire more wild horses only if he sells some of those he already owns. Several will be kept for use by his children and others will serve as work horses. So far, he said, work projects have been confined to the South Hills logging operation begun five weeks ago.

The firewood project, offering Deadline Burn salvage for $50 a cord delivered in Twin Falls, has yet to show a profit because of start-up costs, Reynolds said.

But he is confident the financial picture will brighten before long, and he plans to seek Forest Service woodcutting permits which will keep Sadie and Sally in business until the first snowfall blankets the hills.

Minidoka contract unsettled

RUPERT — Officials of the Minidoka County School District and its teachers' organization were back at the negotiating table Monday.

The afternoon session came on the heels of the school board's rejection last Friday of a proposed salary schedule.

Assistant Superintendent Floyd Merrill said the board "counter offer" to the teachers, who were to discuss it with the executive committee of the Minidoka County Education Association.

Teachers have not been issued contracts pending a settlement of negotiations.

"Hopefully we'll have something resolved here pretty soon," he said.

Last week the school board ratified three of four tentative settlement items, rejecting the salary proposal agreed upon by negotiators and ratified by teachers.

The board, which voted 3-2, thought the salary schedule contained too many step-pay increases and wanted the number reduced from 17 to about 13. Extra pay increases are awarded as an incentive to teachers as they gain years of experience in a district.

"The teachers have negotiated in good faith," Merrill said. "And we felt like we did, too. It's just one of those things."

The new contract items accepted by both the school board and the teachers are:

- A half-hour planning period each day for elementary teachers.
- Assignment of teachers' aides to bus duty whenever possible.
- Scheduling of training sessions for teachers on other days than regular school days.

Stoplight up by Aug. 25?

TWIN FALLS — The district highway engineer says a stoplight could probably be installed at the Lincoln Elementary School crossing before the start of classes Aug. 25.

Howard Johnson, engineer for District II of the Idaho Division of Highways at Shoshone, said Monday it appears the project could be completed within a matter of weeks.

"We should be able to do it with materials we have in stock," he said.

The Idaho Transportation Board last Thursday approved installation of a hand-actuated stoplight at the crossing on Addison Avenue at Monroe Street, if the Twin Falls School District provides an adult crossing guard.

School district Superintendent James Savin said no steps will be taken until he learns details of the plan from highway officials. The next school board meeting is Aug. 5.

Transportation officials maintain that crossing guards are the best answer for improving safety at school crossings. The installation at Twin Falls would be a test project, the state board decided, which could be used at other crossings in Idaho if it is successful.

Clark beats drum for huge tax cuts

By DAVID MORRISSEY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Libertarian Presidential candidate Ed Clark Monday called for tax cuts of "tens of billions of dollars" below 1980 levels.

In Twin Falls on a Western States campaign swing, the third-party candidate blasted Democrat Jimmy Carter, Republican Ronald Reagan, and Independent John Anderson for advocating fiscal policies he said were inflationary and un sound.

"Jimmy Carter's budget for 1981 is going to be $60 billion higher than this year's budget," Clark said. Reagan's recent call for a $23 billion tax cut is merely a demand for a slice out of that overall tax increase, Clark added. "That's a $20 billion tax cut off an increase of over $60 billion."

Anderson's economic policies would also raise taxes, he said.

Clark said he would itemize the government programs to be cut — a disclosure yet to be made by other presidential candidates. That information will be released at the Aug. 7 meeting of the American Economic Council.

Included in that plan will be:

- An increase in income exempt from taxes.
- "Major cuts" in rates paid by all taxpayers.
- Accelerated depreciation rates and investment incentives.
- A balanced budget constitutional amendment.

"The rates paid by every taxpayer will be substantially cut," Clark said. "The budget will be balanced at lower levels."

Clark acknowledged in his Twin Falls stop he doesn't expect to capture the presidency this year. But he does hope to help make his party into a viable political force.

The party will likely be on all 50 state ballots, he said, and may elect several of its state candidates. "We expect to get several million votes."

In 1976, libertarian candidates nationwide received 1.3 million votes.

One state legislator was recently elected in Alaska on the Libertarian platform.

That platform often causes controversy, As Clark joked Monday, "we have something to offend everybody."

The organization argues for a radical reduction in the federal government in order to increase individual freedom. That means turning Washington into a ghost town as the federal government is reduced to essentially a laissez faire night watchman. Libertarians believe government is a necessary evil, but as an evil should be reduced as much as possible.

Under a libertarian president, government would protect individuals and their property from physical assault, either by Americans or a foreign power. Courts would enforce contracts, the law, and settle disputes.

But most voluntary actions between consenting adults would be permitted.

That means, Clark said, most federal regulatory agencies would be abolished as unwanted. Among the agencies on a Libertarian hit list are the Department of Energy, the Environmental Protection Agency, and the Occupational Safety and Health Administration.

In addition to advocating an end to most regulation of the marketplace, Clark also calls for an end to laws regulating "victimless crimes."

His administration would, for instance, legalize drugs and prostitution. Libertarians don't necessarily approve of these actions, Clark said, but they believe the right of an individual to be free to choose his manner of living is the paramount value.

"We affirm that every individual has the inalienable right to life, liberty and property, and that no one has the right to impose his or her values on others by violence or the threat of it," Clark said Monday.

Idaho Power defends hook-up rates

BOISE (UPI) — Idaho Power Co. outlined to the state Public Utilities Commission today a proposed tariff schedule that would raise the cost of service hook-ups on new customers.

Basically, the controversial proposal would give electricity-consuming society precedence over individual consumers.

J. Wesley Coryell, the utility's manager of rates and contracts, defended the revised schedule against pre-hearing charges that it would discriminate against young people and other first-time electricity customers.

The proposed schedule would hit hardest the buyers of new homes in rural areas, since charges for extension of service to relatively isolated locations would be greatest.

Meanwhile, existing electricity users would be spared from helping pay for others' new service extensions.

Coryell, opening hearings on the proposal, testified that construction of new electrically equipment and charges to the customers benefiting from that construction "will be directly related to the expected usage."

He said the company's current hook-up charge schedule is a carry-over from an era when an existing line was of benefit to increasing customers. This benefit no longer exists because of high construction and power production costs, he said.

"Given today's existing energy situation, I see no reason to burden existing rate payers with substantial costs of providing revenue-based allocations to new customers with no consequent benefit to existing rate payers," Coryell told the commission.

The proposed line-extension policy, he said, would be the best way to pass construction costs of new service to those customers causing the increased costs, without existing rate payers picking up a part of the cost.

"It will depend on whose opinion you are seeking as to whether the proposed extension schedule is fair or not," he said. "Obviously, if you ask someone who would pay more cash under the proposed tariff that under the existing tariff, they may not feel that it is fair."

"If you ask all the other customers who did not request a line extension, they would say that it was fair because they would not have to pick up a portion of the costs of the new extensions."

Idaho Power's growth probably would be slowed because the new tariff schedule likely would deter some potential customers, particularly buyers of new homes in rural areas, he said.

Also, some companies wanting to build large energy-consuming facilities might be driven to locate their operations outside Idaho Power's service area to avoid the stiffer tariff charges, Coryell predicted.

But it will have little effect on small commercial construction, since the added cost to the customer would be insignificant compared to the other costs to the customer," he said.

The prices of input, new-homes would go up, and "these price signals are appropriate, since they convey signals to the customers that they are imposing additional costs on society, and someone must bear these costs," he said.

Another argument made by the company was that the existing seven-page hook-up schedule is confusing to consumers and puts a severe administrative burden on Idaho Power.

Boy found

TWIN FALLS — A Kimberly boy who was the subject of a search Tuesday night was found later that same night hitchhiking in Twin Falls.

Phillip Gerberding, 8, was reported missing near Rock Creek Canyon, about two miles east and three and one-half miles south of the sugar factory, at 9 p.m. His father, Phillip Gerberding, reported the boy missing after a fishing trip.

Twin Falls Sheriff James Munn summoned the sheriff's search and rescue unit and notified local radio and television stations. Munn said he broadcasted announcement led people to alert his office that the boy had been seen in town.

Munn said the boy was found at a Twin Falls grocery store, about five miles from the area where he had been reported missing, at about 11:30 p.m.

Kimberly Police said Umphenour Saturday was driving in Kimberly when he was stopped by Patrolman Doug Lindemoed at 11 p.m. for allegedly drunken driving. Police Chief James Campbell said Umphenour was allegedly uncooperative and Lindemoed was forced to physically detain him. Sometime during the incident, Umphenour allegedly exhibited a knife and damaged Lindemoed's pistol holster. Lindemoed was not injured during the incident, Campbell said.

Campbell declined to elaborate further on the incident, saying he did not want to release the information prior to the case going to court.

"I really can't because we don't want to prejudice anybody if it goes to trial," Campbell said.

Jerome doctor now in jurisdictional dispute

By RON ZELAR Times-News writer

JEROME — A Jerome doctor facing trial on 12 counts of sexual misconduct is being held in Salt Lake City jail in an apparent jurisdictional dispute.

William C. Donehue, 30, was admitted after his arrest as a patient at the Salt Lake Veterans Administration Hospital. While there, he underwent psychiatric treatment and agreed to stay at the facility pending completion of legal proceedings against him in Jerome County.

Donehue was scheduled to return to a Toledo, Ohio, court in May for sentencing on a previous charge of third degree sexual assault. But his Jerome attorney, Greg Fuller, said Ohio authorities agreed not to seek extradition as long as he remained in the Utah hospital.

The agreement has apparently been voided, however; Fuller said Monday, Toledo prosecutor attorney Tom Tolcer requested that Donehue be arrested, and he was picked up at the VA hospital by Salt Lake City officials July 14.

Fuller said the Ohio official apparently felt Donehue was being allowed too much freedom by the hospital.

Donehue had driven with his wife to attend two hearings in Jerome, and in addition was interviewed on at least two other occasions outside the hospital by psychologists hired by Fuller and Jerome County Prosecutor Eugene Fredericksen.

Fuller said he has been attempting to reach an agreement with Ohio authorities to allow Donehue to remain in jail in Jerome until legal proceedings in Idaho have been completed.

"I don't know what's going on," Fuller said. "I know they have my client behind the 8-ball. I'm just trying to give him his day in court."

Secor could not be reached for comment Monday.

A Boise psychologist and a Salt

Lake City psychiatrist testified for the defense in the first day of a Twin Falls sanity hearing July 2 that Donehue suffers from pedophilia, defined as a compulsion to involve children in sexual activities.

The hearing was scheduled to re-examine whether the prosecution and defense could schedule two remaining witnesses, also psychological experts.

Donehue is charged in Jerome County with taking sexual liberties with four male patients age 14 and 18. The Ohio sentencing resulted from the state's guilty plea stemming from an examining room incident involving a 12-year-old boy.

Darrow to head Castleford board

They'll bury ash to Dixie melody

MOSCOW (UPI) — A New Orleans-style funeral is being planned Thursday for the last remains of Mount St. Helens.

Officials said the last portions of ash from the May 18 eruption have been gathered up in the streets and will be placed in a casket and then escorted out of town and buried.

A diademed band will accompany the casket.

One official said the idea is to lay to rest the notion that the area is still buried in ash.

CASTLEFORD — The Castleford School Board has elected a new chairman, Curt Darrow.

At the board's annual reorganization meeting last week, former chairman John Cothran turned the gavel over to Darrow, who was re-elected to the board for a term in May. Trustee Lawrence Quigley was elected vice chairman.

Superintendent Edward Schenk said the board Tuesday approved sending kindergarten classes from 135 to 180 days. Kindergarten had started about nine weeks after the beginning of school.

The feeling of the board, Schenk said, was that more time is needed to do "all the things we're trying to do."

Pre-registration for kindergarten at this spring showed about 22 students will be enrolled this fall; the superintendent said. That means the half-day classes will probably be held in the morning.

If more than 25 kindergartners show up, the district plans to split the class and also hold an afternoon session, Schenk said.

The board also approved a nine-week trial for a brand new program in the high school at the urging of union supervisor Norma Chandler, he said. Students who participate will come to school in the morning at the same time and the meals will be "hands-on" instead of prepared dishes.

Schenk said the district had previously surveyed students and found "quite a few" had no breakfast or only a light one. He noted students living far from school have to rise very early to travel to class.

The district still has to fill two teaching vacancies, science and music, but should do so in a few days, he said.

The school board also approved the 1980-81 budget, which was published and presented at a public hearing last month.

No charges in fatality
JEROME — No charges will be filed in the death Friday of a Jerome girl struck by a car while riding a bicycle near her home.

Jerome County Sheriff Elza Hall said Monday he has ruled the death accidental.

The child, Deanna Meunier, 9, apparently pedaled out of a driveway into the path of a car driven by Wendell Terrell Terrell Huddleston on the Bob Barton Highway 7 1/2 miles southwest of Jerome.

Hall said skid marks indicated the vehicle was traveling at or near the maximum posted speed limit, but he said the evening sun also made it difficult for the driver to see the youngster.

The mishap occurred at about 7 p.m. Friday. Parents of the girl are Mr. and Mrs. Clive Meunier of Route 3, Jerome.

Killanin leaves IOC with emotional speech

MOSCOW (UPI) — Lord Killanin, in a final emotional speech as president of the International Olympic Committee, Monday told the leaders of the world's amateur sports that political interference could hurt future Olympic Games.

Killanin, speaking from the stage of the six-tiered, red and gold Bolshoi Theater, told the opening of the IOC's 83rd session six days before the Moscow Olympics begin that athletes were becoming more and more "the victims of sports administrators and politicians."

On Wednesday his successor will be elected and will take over in the concluding days of the Games. The candidates for the presidency are Juan Antonio Samaranch of Spain; James Worrall of Canada and Lance Cross of New Zealand; while Switzerland's Marc Hodler said he will decide Tuesday whether to run as well.

Killanin told the audience of 75 IOC members, as well as the leaders of International Federations and National Olympic Committees that the repercussions of the Olympic boycott "both nationally and internationally, on the Olympic movement and the Games, and also all non-professional sport, will be felt for years to come, the more so if politicians continue to make sport for their own ends."

Diplomats of countries that boycotted the Games were not invited to the ceremony.

Sergei Pavlov, the Soviet Sports Minister, and Vasil Kuznetsov, the first deputy vice-president of the Soviet Union, also made speeches. Kuznetsov steered clear of mentioning the western boycott but Pavlov alluded to it briefly.

"Today as never before, all of us feel that there are forces in the world which seek to destroy the Olympic movement and prevent the holding of the Olympic Games," Pavlov said.

Killanin, who took over from American millionaire Avery Brundage after the ill-fated 1972 Munich Olympics, said he was sorry that it had been impossible to allow individual athletes from boycotting countries such as the United States, Canada or Japan to enter the Games.

"Many of us would have liked to have found a way of making direct entries for these current Games, and we have received pathetic pleas from individuals and teams asking for help, but the IOC executive decided this was impractical and would further undermine the complex situation of the National Olympic Committees," he said.

The 65-year-old Irish peer criticized the speech made by the then U.S. Secretary of State Cyrus Vance at the IOC session before the Winter Olympics at Lake Placid, N.Y., in February in which Vance called on nations to boycott the Games in Moscow.

"I regret that political overtones were introduced at the opening of the 82nd session in Lake Placid earlier this year," Killanin said. "This, I believe, was counter-productive."

He said one of the main failures of his eight-year presidency was the fact that no women had been elected as IOC members.

But IOC sources said the first women members might be elected during this session over the next four days.

America's Tenley Albright, the 1968 Olympic figure skating champion, was being touted as a replacement for one of the two U.S. members, 82-year-old Douglas Roby.

Killanin also called for the selection of the 1988 Olympic site to be postponed one year until 1987 when the IOC will be meeting in Rio de Janeiro. "My reason for this is that I believe it would be a good thing to give a little time for the dust to settle."

He also said it would give the IOC time to consider seriously the idea of returning the Olympics to a permanent site in Greece.

Americans passing up 1980 British Open

MUIRFIELD, Scotland (UPI) — Until Arnold Palmer made a successful pilgrimage in 1961, the British Open was much more foreign territory to American golfers.

Then came the awakening and with the indomitable spirit of adventurers, American pros not only discovered the world's oldest and most traditional Open championship, they virtually adopted it and dominated it.

Now, it seems despite such courtesies from the governing Royal and Ancient Committee as moving the tournament back one week to accommodate Americans, the pendulum is swinging back. There is no longer such a rush of enthusiasts from the United States to play in the event.

That point was driven home with emphasis in the last few days when some 17 Americans, all of whom had indicated they would come to the Open beginning Thursday, sent their regrets. The list included such excellent players as Hale Irwin, the third-round leader of the Open last year; Lee Elder; Jerry McGee; Lanny Wadkins; Jack Renner; and Howard Twilley.

Among the other absentees are Ray Floyd, John Fought, Ed Sned, Tom Purtzer, and John Schroeder, but they would have been faced with two rounds of qualifying Sunday and Monday to earn a berth in the championship.

The mass of defections has been the major topic of discussion early this week and there was concern whether this was a portent of the future. The cost of travel has become prohibitive, and it is estimated that the cost of this trip is costing up to $10,000 for him and his wife, Linda, and for those pros who desire to acclimatize themselves to the unfamiliar and most exacting conditions of the British Open means three weeks away from the profitable U.S. circuit.

Still, there remains a strong U.S. delegation for the 109th edition of the British Open led by Watson, the favorite; Jack Nicklaus; Ben Crenshaw; and Lee Trevino, the winner the last

Howe for President?

DETROIT (UPI) — The Republican National Convention may belong to Ronald Reagan, but the streets of Detroit are still Gordie Howe's.

The legendary hockey player, who was elected to introduce a film about the GOP's first night session, was the man of the hour when he left an afternoon rehearsal.

"I've seen a lot of important people today, but you're the most important I've seen," a police officer providing convention security told Howe as he shook his hand outside Cobb Hall. "I used to come see you practice when I was a kid."

Shouts of "Hey Gordie," "Welcome back, Gordie," and even "Gordie Howe for President" were heard as he walked up Jefferson Avenue.

Howe, 52, who was the National Hockey League's only playing grandfather before retiring from the Hartford Whalers last month, took it all in stride.

He said he was still pretty well known in Detroit, where he played 25 seasons, and still had a summer home nearby.

"It was a hockey crowd down here, however. I'm a Canadian citizen," he said.

But giving a speech to thousands of delegates, alternates and guests had Howe a bit rattled.

"I'm nervous and it's driving me crazy," he said. "I'm not used to that kind of thing. But it's quite a pat on the back that they should include me."

Howe won't be turning his appearance into a new political career, however. "I'm a Canadian citizen," he said.

The superstar said he had supported former President Gerald Ford and ex-Michigan Sen. Robert Griffin and a call to arrange a meeting with Ford had wound up with him being invited to introduce the speech on Joe Louis, the boxer for whom the convention hall is named.

For Howe it will mark a return to the spotlight in the Detroit Red Wings' new home, the same arena where he thrilled a crowd with his return in last season's all-star game.

He said he still hadn't quite gotten used to the idea of retiring and facing the prospect of not having to get in shape for hockey for the first time in 33 years.

"You feel kind of funny after you've said it. You realize it's the last time. But I was very lucky for it to go this long."

Even if he were an American citizen, Howe said there'd be no way he'd ever go into politics.

"That's not my kind of world," he said. "It's too tough."

Liberty track meet begins Wednesday

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Distant runner Henry Rono of Kenya and hurdler Renaldo Nehemiah are among six world record holders heading the field for the Liberty Bell Track and Field Classic Wednesday and Thursday at Franklin Field.

The international meet marks the only domestic appearance of the U.S. Olympic Team. It has attracted a field drawn from more than 30 countries, including the Summer Olympics in Moscow.

Rono, the holder of world marks in the 5,000-, 5,000- and 10,000-meter runs as well as the 3,000-meter steeplechase, will compete in the 5,000-meter run collegiately at Washington State, meets a field that includes Matt Centrowitz, winner of the U.S. Olympic trials.

Nehemiah, a longtime Franklin Field favorite dating back to his performances for the University of Maryland, is the top competitor in the 110-meter hurdles, in which he holds the world record and the best time this year (13.26 seconds).

New Zealand's John Walker, who once held the world mark in the mile and is the current record holder at 2,000 meters, will compete in the 1,500-meter run against a star-studded field that includes Steve Scott, who holds the year's best time at 3:35.11 clocked at the Olympic trials.

Two other competitors in the meet hold pending world marks — West Germany's Guido Kratschmer (decathlon) and Dietmar Mogenberg (high jump) and Gary Decker (110-meter hurdles).

Kratschmer scored 8,649 points in the decathlon, where his top challenger should be U.S. Olympic trials champion Bob Cottman.

Mogenberg high jumped 6 feet, 8 1/2 inches for the pending world mark and will compete on the same high jump course where Dwight Stones twice broke the world record in two-month periods in 1976. Olympic trials champion Benn Fields of the

1980 Olympic basketball team Possibly the best U.S. team ever

No words were necessary to describe how the members of the United States men's basketball team felt toward the boycott of the Summer Olympics. A banner hanging high above the floor inside Indianapolis' Market Square Arena last month when they met a group of National Basketball Association all-stars said it for them. "Let The Russians Play With Themselves."

Of all the American athletes who will not have an opportunity to test themselves against the rest of the world this month in Moscow, the basketball players are the ones with the least to prove. After winning the gold medal in eight of the nine competitions since basketball became an Olympic sport in 1896, the United States would have been a solid favorite to defend the championship if it won at Montreal in 1976 despite the Soviet Union's ominous homecourt advantage.

Although other countries have improved during the last four years, the United States would have entered a team that many consider its best ever. The team had best various squads of NBA all-stars in four of five games and then defeated the 1978 U.S. Olympic team last month in a starting lineup of Indiana's Isiah Thomas and Kansas State's Rolando Blackman at guards, De Paul's Mark Aguirre and La Salle's Mitch Brooks at forwards and Kentucky's Sam Bowie at center. Among the reserves were Kansas' Darrell Valentine, North Carolina's Al Wood and Notre Dame's Bill Hamill.

"I certainly wouldn't bet against this team," said United States coach Dave Gavitt, Providence

College's athletic director. "We have 12 first-round draft choices."

But while that team no doubt would have contended for the gold medal, it would have paled in comparison with the one that would have represented the United States had there been no boycott. Before the boycott, Gavitt had assurances that college seniors Darrell Griffith from Louisville, Kevin McHale from Minnesota and Mike O'Koren from North Carolina, Junior Albert King from Maryland and freshman Ralph Sampson from Virginia would try out for the team. Others who were considering participating in the trials before the boycott were Purdue center Joe Barry Carroll, Kentucky's Kyle Macy and UCLA's Kiki Vandeweghe.

"The team that eventually was selected plus the influx of those other guys would have given the United States a super team," said Billy Frazier, an NBC college basketball analyst and an international amateur basketball observer. "They would have won in Moscow despite the conditions and the hostile crowd and everything else."

Even the team that was selected at the trials two months ago in Lexington, Ky., could have won if it had been able to play its style. "It would have depended on whether Gavitt could have turned it into a 90-foot game," Frazier said. "We have vast superiority in the backcourt in depth and ability with Thomas and Valentine. The Soviets have only one guard. He's solid, but he's not in their caliber. But even though the United States was blessed with speed, quickness, agility and defensive aggressiveness, it would have suffered from a lack of muscle. "We wouldn't want to get into a power game with the Soviets or the Yugoslavians," Frazier said. Bowie is 7-1, but weighs only 217. The 6-7, 214-pound Brooks was the team's only true power forward.

"Our biggest advantage would have been talent," Gavitt said. "Our biggest disadvantage would have been the game we play. FIBA (Federation of International Basketball Association) officials never give us any breaks. But if the games had been reasonably officiated, we wouldn't have had any problems physically."

The players do not feel they would have been intimidated. "I would love to play the Russians anywhere, anytime, in a playground, in Red Square," Aguirre said.

That now becomes the challenge of Yugoslavia, the only team with an opportunity to beat the Soviets since seven of the 12 teams that originally qualified for the Summer Olympics are involved in the boycott. The Soviets also are favored to win the gold medal in the second year of women's basketball competition now that the United States, the silver medalist in Montreal and the champion at the pre-Olympic qualifying tournament at Varna, Bulgaria, in May, has withdrawn.

Yugoslavia's man, who finished second to the United States in 1974, have beaten the Soviet Union 13 times in their last 14 meetings, including the semifinals at Montreal.

Sommer five wins Rupert pro-am title

RUPERT — Devon Sommer of St. Anthony, backed by a couple of young Rupert players, led his team to victory in the Rupert pro-am golf tournament Monday.

The Sommer crew, composed of Rupertites Jeff Corey and Dennis Seward plus St. Anthony amateurs Richard Renke and Ed Harrigold, carried a 22-under par 120 to win the best ball portion of the one-day tournament.

Pocatello Pro Denny Howell and amateurs Bill Olson, Steve Rackow, Jack Corr and Merv Ling were second at 122 while Jerome pro John Peterson and Rupert amateurs Tom King, Bruce Nelbau, Bob Nielsen and Steve Saunders closed at 123.

Jack Olson of Boise paced the pro division with a one-under par 70 while Jackpot's Bill Downs and Howell shared second at even par 71.

In the amateur division, Mike Stoddard and Dr. David Ricks, both Boise, went one way in the 6-2 division at 75 and 77, respectively. Pat Bauman of Ketchum was third with a 77.

In net, Denny Seward of Rupert took top honors with a 68 while Pocatello's Bill Olson had a 69. Bob Nielsen, Gordon Seward, both Rupert, shared third with 70s.

In the upper handicap division, a four-way tie developed for the gross leadership at 84. Sharing the title were Larry Bauman of Ketchum, Sharty Worman of Burley, Bill Nichols of Rupert, and Ed Harrigold of St. Anthony.

Steve Anton of Rupert ran off with the net division with a 64, one stroke ahead of Allan Killian of St. Anthony. Joe DeBlaquiere of Rupert claimed third with a 69.

McNamara signs pact

CINCINNATI (UPI) — The Cincinnati Reds Monday announced that Manager John McNamara signed a 1-year contract for the 1981 season.

Terms of the contract were not disclosed.

McNamara has managed the Reds since the start of the 1979 season and took them to the division title last year. The Reds were eliminated by the Pittsburgh Pirates last season for the National League pennant.

"I've had one-year contracts since I started playing and managing," McNamara said. "It was a surprise, a pleasant surprise."

The agreement — between McNamara and Reds President Dick Wagner — was reached the morning following the All-Star game in Los Angeles, but not announced until Monday.

trumps, lead a second trump to his ace, lead the jack of clubs and let it ride. If West would be fine. But if East held the trump, East held trump 3-1, he would get to force dummy twice with diamonds before a club trick could be established. He would have to lose a trump trick. So he cashed one of dummy's trumps and led a club from dummy. East was in and could do nothing to upset South's apple cart. If he tried to force dummy with diamonds, South could ruff the first time and trump trick would establish a trump trump for South. Some of you readers are going to ask: "Suppose West held the club queen? Couldn't he lead a heart and force South to lose a heart trick?" The answer to that one is that South was a really good player. He knew that East held the ace of clubs so he led the king from dummy. East had to win that trick but it did not matter where the club was. South would get his clubs set up before a heart could be led to force a heart trick. (NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.)
