

Recession unbalances budget, leaves $61 billion deficit

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Formerly abandoning its hope for a balanced budget, the administration Monday forecast a $61 billion federal deficit this year. That would be the second largest in history. The forecast was $20 billion in red ink for 1981. The administration estimated a 7.7 percent tax cut this year, although the nation's unemployment rate is likely to rise from the recent 7.7 percent to 8.5 percent by the end of the year and remain that high all during 1981.

In its mid-year budget and economic update, the administration forecast a decline in inflation to an 8.5 percent rate during the second half of this year, which would mean a rise in interest rates from the beginning of the year to the end.

It projected inflation at just under 10 percent during 1981.

In its updated budget, the administration raised its estimate of the federal deficit for 1981 — the current year — from $26 billion projected last March to $61 billion. The highest deficit in the nation's history was $36 billion in fiscal 1976, at the close of the Ford administration.

For fiscal 1981, which starts Oct. 1, the administration had predicted a surplus of $16.5 billion. It has now changed this to an estimated deficit of $28 billion.

These changes result from a combination of higher outlays and lower revenues than expected, the administration said.

It said spending has increased for three reasons:

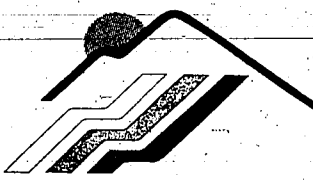

- Higher outlays for unemployment compensation and other programs due to a "deeper than anticipated" recession.
- Higher spending for defense, reflecting more rapid spending in some programs and higher costs for pay, fuel and other purchases.
- Unanticipated events such as the eruption of Mount St. Helens and the influx of Cuban and Haitian refugees.

Meanwhile, revenues were reduced because of lower income taxes and payroll taxes due to the recession and refusal by Congress to approve President Carter's proposed 10-cent-a-gallon-oil-conservation fee.

Briefing reporters, Budget Director James McIntyre said the administration still opposes enactment of a tax cut this year.

"It is likely that a tax cut will be desirable in 1981," McIntyre said, "but it is not appropriate to propose one now."

Highest in Idaho Sewer fee rises for Twin Falls

By MARTY TRILLHAASE
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls sewer system users will begin paying the highest rates of any city residents in Idaho on Aug. 1.

The City Council voted Monday to increase residential users fees by $4 a month and non-residential fees by $6.63 per month.

The council also voted to adopt a consent decree ending a lawsuit pending against the city by the Environmental Protection Agency. But the council attached a provision to the document requiring the EPA to certify to city officials that it will fund its consent sewer plant modification project.

Funding of that project has apparently hit a snag, city officials were told earlier this week by the city project consultants.

The fee increase, to be charged over a 16- to 18-month period, was implemented to raise the city's 10 percent funding share of the estimated $7 million sewer plant modification project.

Residential users previously paid $3.25 per month and commercial users paid .43 cents per thousand gallons of waste water sent into the system. Governments and school districts paid 33 cents per 1,000 gallons of waste water sent into the system.

According to a survey of the major Idaho cities now operating secondary sewage treatment plants, Twin Falls is now charging the highest rate in the state. The survey, taken by Nampa City Engineer Larry Bledsoe in the last two weeks, shows the next highest flat rate charged by Idaho Falls. The eastern Idaho city charges $5.50 per month to all residential users.

Lewiston charges a flat $5 per month, Pocatello charges $3.25, Coeur d'Alene, $3.20, and Moscow, $3. Other cities charge different rates based on the amount of water consumption. Boise, for example, charges a maximum monthly fee of $2.50 for 1,500 gallons and Nampa charges a maximum of $5.75 up to 1,500 cubic feet.

The council approval of a consent decree from EPA hinged on the federal agency's agreement to cover any expenses the city incurs from cost overruns on the sewer plant modification project. It means the EPA will drop its lawsuit against the city for the plant's failure to meet discharge limits, if city officials agree to the consent decree's conditions.

City officials attached the funding certification provision after Ed Coyer of James M. Montgomery Consulting Engineers Inc. of Boise, the city's project consultant, said EPA had run about $700,000 short of funds for the project.

Coyer said President Carter's freeze on public works funding has left the agency with its 1979 funds, meaning the agency has only $3.3 million on hand. That means the city will bid the project in two stages, with the $700,000 sludge dewatering project bid at a later date, he said.

Bledsoe acknowledged the likelihood the remaining bulk of the project will probably be bid higher than the $5.3 million limit. City Manager Tom Courtney said the user's surcharge plus other city funds would allow it to cover any additional costs for about eight months, as long as EPA can later reimburse the city for those costs.

In other matters, the council received tentative 1980-81 city budget which recommends using $225,000 of an estimated $365,000 in anticipated revenue sharing funds for the sewage plant project.

The budget also reflects the city receiving an additional $20,000 in property tax revenues under the Legislature's 4 percent growth factor. The factor is allowed to counties taxing below 1 percent of total market value in a county.

Draft registrants signing up amid protests across U.S.

By United Press International

Construction workers singing "God Bless America" crashed a rally by 150 anti-draft demonstrators in front of Boston's federal post office building Monday.

It was one of several protests marking the first day of President Carter's military registration program.

Police intervened to avoid a violent confrontation between the two groups, and arrested 20 of the anti-draft activists who were chanting "Hell no, we won't go!" — dragging some to waiting police wagons by their hair.

Related stories on pages A3, A9

Another nine protesters were arrested in Greenfield, Mass., and eight in Hartford, Conn.

Elsewhere around the country, anti-draft protesters formed human barricades, held silent vigils and chained themselves to locks at post offices. About 1,000 demonstrators chained a cordoned-off section of Broadway in New York City for a sing-along rally with folk music.

In San Francisco, Charles Rohrbacher, 26, and Rob Boudenjin, 36, locked themselves in the doors of a mission district post office just before it was to open at 9 a.m. Police arrested the protesters.

Selective Service officials said the first day of registration for nearly 4 million 18- and 20-year-old men proceeded without much difficulty or delay despite the protests. In New England, registration was reported light by most postal officials contacted by UPI.

"All offices report it trickling in," said Jean Babcock, a postal public information officer in Boston. "There's no great flow. It's about one an hour in most places."

In the government's only official response to the protests, Attorney General Benjamin Civiletti issued a statement saying, "Young men should know one thing very clearly: This law is in full effect" and it will be legally enforced.

The Boston demonstration occurred shortly before noon as protesters held signs and attempted to block the entrances of the federal post office building despite near 100-degree heat and threats from construction workers.

The hardhats then invaded the rally staging "God Bless America." Police persuaded them to return to their construction site across the street and shoved the demonstrators away from the main doors of the post office building into the street.

The protesters sat down on the hot pavement and began singing Vietnam-era songs and chanting "Hell no, we won't go!"

About 10 protesters managed to reach the Post office building's second-floor registration offices and blocked the entrance there for less than an hour before they were removed by U.S. marshals.

Later, 20 protesters were arrested when they got too close to a side entrance of the massive, gray downtown skyscraper. Police dragged many of the demonstrators to waiting police wagons by the hair.

Federal inspectors arrested nine people who blocked the entrance of the Greenfield, Mass., post office. Eight people were arrested in Hartford, Conn., for refusing to leave the city's main post-office and charged with trespassing.

However, mostly peaceful demonstrations prevailed throughout the country.

In St. Louis, a 76-year-old European immigrant joined about 75 protesters gathered at the main post office for a peaceful midday demonstration and rally against registration for the military draft.

Herbert Spiegelberg, who is from Germany, joined younger people wearing black armbands and waving red flags. He carried a sign reading: "No registration, no draft, no war."

Outside the U.S. Post Office in Albany, N.Y., members of the Albany Peace Coalition set up a table and disseminated information on alternatives to registration and the draft. Counsel was also available on how to avoid being drafted.

House votes order probe

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House voted Monday to create a special commission to investigate the World War II order that uprooted 120,000 Japanese-Americans from their homes and forced them into internment camps for the duration of the war.

Although the bill would authorize only an investigation, it could open the way for Japanese-Americans to file financial claims against the United States.

The bill, passed 279-109, now goes to the Senate, which has passed a similar measure.

Alaska senators divided in first lands debate

©The Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — Alaska's senators opposed each other Monday as the Senate opened its long-awaited debate of more than 100 million acres of public land in that state.

The land contains some of the nation's most stunning scenery and also its most beautiful energy and mineral resources.

The debate, a classic confrontation between environmentalists and developers, centers on how much of the land should be preserved in its natural state and how much should be made available for economic exploitation.

The Senate Monday considered two competing proposals.

One bill, the product of the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee, would put about 105 million acres in the national parklands system. It is supported by Sen. Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, Gov. Jay Hammond and, in general, miners, oil companies and other developers.

The rival proposal, sponsored primarily by Sen. Paul E. Tsongas, D-Mass., and Sen. William V. Roth Jr., R-Del., would cover about 155 million acres, and is backed by the Carter administration and a well-organized coalition of national and Alaskan environmental groups.

A third element in the struggle is Sen. Mike Gravel, D-Alaska, an unpredictable maverick who does not want any bill at all.

While President Carter, Secretary of the Interior Cecil D. Andrus and an array of Senate leaders were calling the Alaskan land proposal the conservation issue, and opportunity, of the century, Gravel condemned it Monday as an error that might put the economic security of the United States in jeopardy.

"I feel that we as a Senate and we as a nation are making one of the biggest mistakes in our history," Gravel said during a speech that lasted 3 hours and 10 minutes.

Gravel argued that either proposal would lock up for all time a vast treasure-house of oil, mineral wealth and the like, just to please a tiny minority of "preservationists and no-growthers."

"Alaska is just a passing victim in this," he said. "What is at stake is the economic viability of this nation. A small group of Americans, about 2 percent, want to open up the cover of this treasure chest, take out the wilderness, and then slam the lid of that treasure chest."

The debate between the Energy Committee bill and the Tsongas-Roth version is not so much over the different amounts of acreage, but how strictly the lands are classified for preservation and the continuity of units that are formed.

Solar heat fuels argument at PUC hearing

BOISE (UPI) — Representatives of Washington Water Power Co. and the Idaho Citizens Coalition engaged in a tense dispute Monday about the feasibility of solar heating.

The Idaho Public Utilities Commission acted as referee in an exchange of testimony engaged in by John F. Szabaly, a Washington State University engineer representing WWP.

The PUC is studying ways of using solar energy in Idaho to combat energy shortages and high utility bills.

Szabaly argued that widespread installation of solar hot water-heating equipment in Washington and Idaho would be inefficient, too expensive for homeowners and might drive up electricity rates.

In questioning Szabaly by Ray Givens, counsel for the citizens group, caused protests from Szabaly, WWP attorneys, and warnings from PUC President Conley Ward Jr. for both sides to control themselves.

Other testimony, presented by PUC consultants, said the future of solar heating is bright in Idaho, although several roadblocks need to be removed.

Szabaly said "one cannot rely on solar heating" during the winter months in Washington and northern Idaho. "The reliable vendor of solar heating equipment will acknowledge it is not feasible from November to February or March, the engineer said.

He decline in use of electricity for water heating in the summer, Szabaly said, would lower the annual electricity load factor and therefore probably cause hikes in electricity rates.

"Because solar heating supposedly would be nonexistent in the winter and that season's peak demand would not be reduced — power plants would have to be built in their programmed schedule whether solar heat becomes widespread or not," Givens twice sought to ask Szabaly whether more water stored behind hydroelectric dams in the summer as a result of lower electricity demand could be put to other energy-producing uses, but Szabaly and WWP attorneys objected to the questioning because it was not the engineer's area of expertise.

Szabaly said there was a popular misconception that solar energy does not use natural resources and saves large amounts of fuel. He said solar systems require much steel, copper and aluminum.

John Fleischer, assistant director of the Idaho Education Department, testified as a PUC consultant. He has installed a $15,000 solar heating system in his Boise home.

"I really think that it does not appear to be in the best interest of the utility companies to have ... solar energy systems operating in homes," Fleischer said. "It takes away their livelihood. That's one reason (solar energy development) is being held back."

Solar heating consultant Steve Baker, Eugene, Ore., told the commissioners Idaho's potential for solar energy development is "very high" because the sun shines enough to provide an average 50 to 60 percent of hot-water heating needs in the state.

But high costs, uncertain technology and a lack of availability hamper the development of the sun's energy in the Gem State, consultants said.

Richard Sparks, representing Solar Development Inc., a Pocatello manufacturing firm, said Idaho has been lagging behind all other Western states because of a lack of public information and the restricted availability of financing for solar projects.

An employee of CH2M Hill, an Idaho engineering company, said technology dealing with solar collectors needs to be improved to increase efficiency, but more immediate cost cuts could be made by widespread mass production of solar collectors.

David Law, manager of Oregon-based A-1 Heating's new solar energy division, said coordination of solar components and their marketing so far has hit a brick wall, but development of the energy resource should smooth out with experimentation.

Rain dampens plains, breaks heat

Rainstorm makes Dallas driving difficult

By United Press International
Rain doused parts of the sun-baked southern Plains Monday for the first time in a month.

It loosened a sweltering stranglehold that has killed nearly 1,200 people, wiped out crops and livestock and is certain to send food prices soaring.

Nearly three-quarters of an inch of rain splashed over areas of northwest Oklahoma, providing welcome relief. If not an end — to the heat wave and drought.

The early morning low temperature dipped to 78 degrees in Tulsa, Okla., the first time in 24 days the mercury had fallen below the 80-degree mark. Little Rock, Ark., recorded a late-morning reading of 78 under cloudy skies. Readings had hit 100 by noon on most days last week.

Residents of the Mississippi Delta town of Belmont got relief from the heat — too much for some folks. Seven inches of rain fell during the morning, forcing more than 100 families to flee their homes. Stores were sandbagged to keep out the murky waters.

But the uncommon heat wave was far from over and showed every sign of expanding.

New York City awoke Monday to temperatures in the upper 80s and by early afternoon the thermometer hit 100 degrees, the city's second consecutive day of triple-digit heat. The city's emergency medical services crews said 20 people were treated for the heat, but no deaths were reported.

Conditions were ripe for 100-degree readings in Dallas-Fort Worth for the 29th consecutive day.

At least 1,175 heat-related deaths have been reported since the beginning of the heat wave last month. Missouri has been hardest hit with 201 deaths, followed by Tennessee with 143 and Arkansas with 127. Texas, which has suffered through the longest and hottest stretch, reported 96 deaths.

Police in Kansas City, Mo., counted 23 heat victims during the weekend, raising the city's heat-death toll to 108. In St. Louis authorities reported 109 deaths but one official said the deaths may have peaked.

"To be blunt about it, the old and the weak have died off," said Karl Reid, deputy director of the city's disaster operations center.

Billions of dollars in crops, cattle and poultry have been wiped out by the blistering heat. Food industry officials said prices would rise substantially if conditions immediately returned to normal.

In Texas alone, agriculture Commissioner Reagan Brown said losses could reach $2 billion unless adequate rain comes within the next two weeks.

The flow of commerce was threatened along the Mississippi River. Coast Guard officials said barges have begun scraping the river bottom because water levels have fallen so low.

Coast Guard spokesman James Redmond in St. Louis said barges may start running aground, choking off river traffic, if water levels drop any further.

But, as expected, entrepreneurs are making money. Marsha Welton, 30, the wife of a Dallas doctor, said she has sold 7,000 "I survived the heat wave" T-shirts at $8 each. She said she got her inspiration while wearing her "I survived the Chicago Blizzard of '79" T-shirt.

Rhyme time as heat ends

— WICHITA, Kan. (UPI) — National Weather Service forecasters here had a reasonably pleasant prediction Monday, and celebrated what appeared to be the end of a heat wave in rhyme.

In an ode to the heat wave, the NWS forecasters had this to say:

"Horrid or Torrid, it's spelled the same — HOT!"

"T. is for the times it topped one hundred — 28 of the last 27 days."

"O. is for the only day it shined."

"R. is for the records that were broken."

"R. is for the records that were tied."

"I. is for the innocent who suffered."

"D. is for the days it baked and dried."

"Together that spells weather that was torrid, that was horrid, was deployed and decreed."

Billy took Libya woe to top

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Billy Carter met with White House national security adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski upon learning he was in trouble with the Justice Department for his financial ties to Libya, the White House said Monday.

Brzezinski's spokesman, Alfred Friendly Jr., said Billy Carter talked with Brzezinski in the White House on June 11.

The Brzezinski meeting was only hours after Billy Carter talked with Justice Department lawyers, and nine days after the government learned about a $200,000 payment from the oil-rich North African nation.

At the Justice Department meeting Billy Carter learned the government was studying whether he violated the Foreign Agents Registration Act.

Friendly said Billy Carter did not tell Brzezinski about the $220,000. However, he said said Brzezinski suggested the president's brother see White House counsel Lloyd Cutler. Cutler recommended Billy Carter hire a lawyer.

Friendly stressed that Brzezinski did not discuss the meeting with President Carter.

Friendly confirmed he earlier told the Washington Star that Billy Carter probably wanted to consult Brzezinski because he is the president's national security adviser and the matter had to deal with foreign policy apparently.

Friendly said he did not know whether Billy discussed his Libya ties with Brzezinski previously. Brzezinski was not available for comment.

Three days after the meeting with Brzezinski, Billy Carter filed a court consent decree under which he agreed to register as a Libyan agent for accepting $20,000 of a promised $500,000 from the radical Arab government. He said he took the money as a loan, because he couldn't get a bank loan.

The Justice Department took under consideration a request from Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., for copies of documents detailing Billy Carter's relations with Libya.

Dole also requested Judiciary Committee Chairman Sen. Edward Kennedy to order a congressional investigation. A Kennedy spokesman said the letter has been sent to the full committee for consideration, Wednesday.

Draft registrants trickle in across nation despite protests

Peaceful protests were also held in front of post offices in the upstate New York communities of Rochester, Buffalo, Schenectady and Troy. Members of the Troy Peace Coalition held up signs that read: "Draft beer, not people."

At a noon rally at the downtown Federal Building in Los Angeles, People's Party candidate Barry Commoner challenged Carter to debate him on the draft.

On Saturday, Supreme Court Justice William Brennan stayed a lower court ruling which had found registration discriminatory and thus unconstitutional, and ordered it to begin. A decision by the full Supreme Court is expected later this year. Those who refuse to register face a possible five-year prison term, a $10,000 fine, or both.

In Rhode Island Monday, protesters filled the front door locks of 30 post offices across the state with a putty-like substance and carried anti-war and anti-business signs.

Postal officials had to clean the locks before they could open the buildings and some postal officials were forced to use back doors.

Someone or some group of people jammed up the locks in the front doors. Providence Postmaster Harry Kizirian said. Still, he said, "we were open for business this morning."

Some signs protesters carried were reminiscent of the Vietnam War demonstrations of the early 1970s. In New York City, about 200 demonstrators marched in near 100-degree heat and chanted "Hell no, we won't go! We won't fight for Texas!" Four women chained themselves to a U.S. Post Office desk in Kansas City, Mo., but several registrants simply stepped over them.

The demonstrators, calling themselves the Kansas City Selective Servers, set up a blockade in front of the registration desk. Swaying back and forth and carrying placards, seven protesters joined hands to set up "a spiritual blockade."

Eight protesters were arrested when they burst into the Hartford, Conn., post office to disrupt operations. Many of the anti-registration demonstrations were conducted by those too old to be registered, but in Sioux Falls, S.D., postal officials had to turn away a 68-year-old volunteer.

"He was born in 1917," said a clerk. Selective Service System spokesman Brayton Harris said that registration appeared to be "going very well" at 54,000 post offices nationwide. Registration cards collected from the post offices will be forwarded to the six regional offices of the Internal Revenue Service.

500,000 won't enroll, draft opponents claim

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Leaders of the anti-draft registration movement Monday predicted as many as 500,000 young men may fail to register in the next two weeks.

"I expect that resistance, anger, and confusion will generate at least a 15 percent non-registration rate," said the Rev. Barry Lynn, chairman of the 54-member Committee Against Registration and the Draft.

He said the Selective Service System has already indicated if non-registration approaches that figure, the agency will go to Congress for a waiver of the Privacy Act in order to "rummage" through tax records and Social Security files looking for non-registrants.

Lynn said the 1980 registration will be "a total fiasco." "This means that on Aug. 3 — the day after registration ends — the FBI may be on the lookout for over 500,000 new felons," Lynn told a news conference.

Canada no safe haven

OTTAWA (UPI) — For the would-be draft-dodger, Canada is not likely to be the safe haven it was during the Vietnam War.

This time, young Americans who have been ordered to register for the draft face tougher immigration laws and will be given no special consideration, a Canadian Immigration official said Monday.

"They will be treated as any other immigrant," Amedee Gaudreault, an Immigration Department spokesman, said. "If they comply with the regulations they will be admitted. If they don't, they won't be admitted. It's as simple as that."

In the past, all a draft-dodger had to do to take up permanent residence was enter Canada at any border and apply for landed-immigrant status.

At the height of the Vietnam War in the late 1960's and early 1970's, hundreds of thousands of draft-dodgers and deserters settled in Canadian cities, including Toronto, Montreal, Calgary and Vancouver.

But in 1978 Canada stiffened its regulations, admitting only immigrants who accumulate a certain number of merit points before they get their landed immigrant status.

Points can be given for bilingualism, education, or job experience. "They always can come as tourists and try to stay in Canada," Gaudreault added. "But if they are found to be illegally in Canada, they will be deported."

Gaudreault said all foreign students including Americans — must show proof they can provide their full tuition and living expenses while living in Canada.

Prosecution promised

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Attorney General Benjamin Civiletti Monday warned 18- and 20-year-old men that "despite claims of confusion," the law requiring them to register for the military draft is in full effect and is "legally enforceable."

On the first day of two weeks of registration for 4 million young men, Civiletti read a statement saying the Justice Department will prosecute those who fail to register although the entire program still is tied up in the courts.

The Supreme Court has agreed to consider a lower court ruling outlawing the planned registration program because it is discriminatory for failing to include women.

The attorney general, addressing television cameras in his office, said:

"Despite claims of confusion, promoted in part by those who oppose the law, young men should understand one thing very clearly: This law is in full effect."

"All of its mandatory requirements are still in place as a result of the ruling issued Saturday by Justice (William) Brennan of the Supreme Court. The law imposes a legally enforceable duty on 18- and 20-year-old men born in 1960 and 1961 to register."

"I urge you all to do so." Department officials noted that the failure of those eligible to register, even for health reasons, would make them subject to penalties of up to five years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

President victim of Billy's bane

President Carter, who hardly needs another albatross hung around his administrative neck, is being embarrassed again by brother Billy.

Billy Carter last week was forced to register as an agent for the government of Libya, after it was disclosed he had accepted $200,000 in "compensation" from that foreign government. Published reports say the Libyans—who once tried their hand on Idaho officials—made the payments in an effort to buy influence at the White House.

The situation, frankly, is a nasty affair for the president who has been made to suffer for Billy's indiscretions with money and beer. But Sen. Robert Dole and others now are publicly requesting the president to clarify the Libyan connection and specifically, to determine whether Billy was tipped by someone in the administration as to the Justice Department's investigation of him.

The Republicans are being handed another issue on a silver platter and President Carter is once again being put on the defensive.

The president shouldn't have to be responsible for his brother's actions but Billy was both naive and stupid for seeking money from the Libyans—he calls it a loan, for accepting other expensive gifts and for making two foolhardy trips to Libya at that government's expense. The White House has painfully noted the president had nothing to do with Billy's dabbling with a nation known for exporting terrorism.

Still, the president will remain haunted by his political foes until he gets to the bottom of his brother's affair and makes it public. It's the only way he's going to get the monkey off his back.

Au revoir, y'all

© Los Angeles Times Syndicate

Every four years, 40 to 50 million Americans vow that if their man doesn't win the Presidency, they will move to Canada.

This year is no different, and I have heard many of my dearest friends say, "If Reagan is elected, I'm taking the family to Canada." Or, "If Carter gets in for another four years, I'm leaving the country."

The trouble with these threats is that the Canadians take them seriously. Since they are so short on population, the idea of 40 to 50 million new immigrants makes their mouths water.

The Canadians start building new homes and schools to accommodate the disenfranchised American voters. Shopping centers are constructed, contracts are given out for drive-in theaters and motels.

The Canadians repaint all their buildings and touch up their lawns to make the Americans feel at home.

Night classes are given on how to treat the new arrivals. Welcome Wagons are beefed up, and new factories are built to provide jobs for the millions of Democrats or Republicans, who say they cannot live in the United States under a Communist Democratic or Fascist Republican regime.

To facilitate the move, Canadian customs officials are told not to open any luggage of American immigrants. Canadian Mounties are instructed to go easy on traffic tickets. No expense is spared in preparing for the influx of people.

But what inevitably happens is that after the election the 40 to 50 million people, who vowed they would go to Canada, change their minds and remain in the United States to stick it out under "That Man in the White House."

I saw it happen when Nixon beat Hubert Humphrey, then when Nixon defeated McGovern, and again when Jimmy Carter beat Ford.

Canada was waiting with welcome arms for all the people who said they couldn't live in the U.S. any more.

Nobody came.

All the hopes and dreams of the Canadians to double their population overnight washed, but it left a taste of bitterness that lingers on.

The greatest cause of anti-American feeling in Canada can be attributed to our presidential election-year promises which people in this country have failed to keep.

How long can the Canadians keep building up their country for people who promise to go there, and then refuse to leave the U.S.?

At the moment Canada is in a terrible quandary. The ambassador in Washington has reported that 45 million Democrats have vowed to go to Canada if Ronald Reagan is elected President of the United States. He has also reported that surveys indicate the 10 million Republicans will go if Jimmy Carter stays in the White House.

Canada must decide in the next few weeks whether to go through the motions of preparing for them or to ignore those vows as idle threats. Suppose this time all the people who say they're going to Canada really do? Yet suppose the Canadians spend all the money and nobody shows up? It seems to me it is incumbent on every American voter not to say he's going to Canada unless he really means it. If he is sincere about it, he should notify the Canadian immigration authorities.

I know it's hard to ask people at the height of an election campaign not to make threats they have no intention of keeping. All I'm suggesting is that if you want to tell someone you're leaving after the election, tell them you're going to France, where they don't care if you come or not.

What 'control' means

© Boston Globe Newspaper Co.—Washington Post Writers Group
DESTRUCTION—I'm going to take a bunch of things home from this convention: a baseball cap with a trunk and floppy ears, a chocolate elephant, a pamphlet about Hell entitled "Suppose it's true after all," and three new blazers.

But I'm also going to take home one word out of the millions I've heard: "Control."

This was the key word in the subterranean anxiety that has run through this place like an article of faith: "Things are out of control."

It is the fear of chaos, theorphobias and deeply felt desire for "control," for stability, that has united people here as different as Henry Kissinger and Jesse Helms. It is the new language that reaches out and touches all of us right now in one way or another.

My souvenir word will become, I suspect, the political umbrella phrase of 1980. It's vague enough and big enough to cover legions of believers. The platform preamble puts it this way: "They are rising up in 1980 to say that this confusion must end; this drift must end—we must pull ourselves together as a people before we slide irretrievably into the abyss."

But it wisely does not describe precisely which "confusion," which "drift," or which "abyss" they have in mind. So when they stand up and say that things are out of control, that we need a return to the mythical good-old-days, one person will think of the economy, another will think of foreign policy, a third will think of kids and drugs and sex. And all of them may applaud.

As I leave here, I also think of what "control" means to the new religious right that was in this convention and in politics this year, with new language, but an old agenda.

The fundamentalist evangelical rightists are the ones wearing "Christians for Reagan" buttons, and the ones who say Amen when Reagan calls this a crusade and not a campaign. Many, like The Moral Majority, think of those who disagree as the immoral minority.

To the right-wing religious people I talked with on the floor of the convention hall, the enemy is "Humanism," a sophisticated word for their old nemesis. "Humanism," a belief that people are in control of their own political decisions and destiny, is, they say, the centrifugal force that has sent our values and morality spinning into the abyss.

The motto of the political evangelists is the one written by television minister Jerry Falwell: "Get them saved, baptized and registered." Registered conservatives.

When Falwell was asked whether a sincere Christian could be a liberal, he answered, "not very morally." When asked whether the Christians who worked in the civil rights movement and the anti-war movement were morally mistaken, he answered, "Don White of Alaska: where the Moral Majority won a sizable portion of the delegation, describes their politics this way: "We are pro-life, pro-Family, pro-Morality and pro-American. We believe that abortion is immoral, homosexuality is a perversion against God, and the unisex society forced on us by humanists is immoral. We are looking for fiscal and financial security."

In a curious and increasingly familiar mix of foreign policy, economics and social policy, the religious right sees a single pattern of dissolution and chaos. Parents have lost control of children. Men have lost control of women. We have lost our leadership in the White House and our dominance in the world.

Their answer to this slippage is also familiar: to harden the lines, to return to a cold war in our religious life and our private life, as well as foreign affairs. To go by The Book, literally, and skip the interpretations.

"Yes," said one woman tentatively, "I believe a real Jonah was swallowed by a real whale."

Religious tolerance has always been fragile in the country. It is protected not by our innate openness, but by our recognition that we are a coalition of minorities, each escaping the other's bigotry.

Now, those who call themselves part of "a moral majority" have moved in from the fringe, riding on the mainstream fear that "things are out of control." But along with my new Christian religious and those who are simply indifferent to religion.

Vietnam. When it comes to courage and leadership, characteristics Anderson now says he has, one has to wonder about his voting record on the Vietnam War. As late as May 10, 1973, Anderson voted to continue the bombing of Cambodia.

The Vietnam War was the most serious test of integrity, consistency and moral fortitude of this generation of elected officials. Sen. Wayne Morse of Oregon was defeated after a quarter-century career for following his conscience and opposing the war. Sen. Frank Church of Idaho had a recall effort launched against him for his war opposition. Somehow it sounds just a little too pat for Anderson, with his Vietnam voting record, to now lecture Americans on the need for character and integrity.

The Draft. In a related issue, Anderson now stresses his opposition to the draft. But in 1971 he was backing Nixon's call for a two-year extension of the draft. He even voted against a compromise measure that would have extended the draft for only one year instead of two.

Foreign Policy. Early this year, in an interview on foreign policy, Anderson sounded more like a hawkish advocate of big stick diplomacy than a thoughtful third party alternative. Anderson called for placing more nuclear weapons in Europe, a stronger U.S. Naval presence in the Indian Ocean and the Arabian Sea, an increase in the military aid sent to the Pakistan dictatorship, and endorsement of the Olympic boycott.

Environment. Here too, questions must be raised about Anderson's record. Why it would be supported by liberals.

They uphold constitution

Editor, Times-News:

Fortunately Idaho has two congressmen, Steve Symms and George Hansen, and one senator, James McClure, who support the Constitution and its principles of limited government.

When Constitutionals list all the ways they oppose, there are those who say, "You're too negative. You're against everything!"

But the truth of the matter is this. The Constitutionalist is for everything within National Liberties. In fact, he stands for liberty, freedom, independence—human dignity and prosperity. But he opposes socialism and the excesses of government. He is against everything which contributes to smothering taxation, excessive regulations, devouring inflation, a back-breaking national debt, a weakening of our security, or the strangling of our free enterprise economy with mountains of bureaucratic red tape.

In a very real sense, a Constitutionalist is like a physician. A doctor is so strict for good health that he is categorically opposed to pneumonia, diphtheria, polio, scarlet fever, typhoid, and anything else which would destroy human health and happiness.

The Founding Fathers were the political physicians of their day and new it is time that we raise up millions of Americans who will take the time to become informed and become the healing political physicians of our own day by electing people to office who will uphold the Constitution.

All begins with a careful study of the Constitution and the writings of the Founding Fathers. If you haven't read the Constitution recently—do so. You will discover the proper role of government. After doing so you will realize the great job that Symms, Hansen and McClure are doing to preserve our liberty in this great constitutional Republic.

Taking a closer look at Anderson's voting record

TWIN FALLS—Perhaps it is a sign of the times, but this year we seem to be accepting politicians at face value, believing their words and ignoring their actions.

It may be a cynic, but I consider the public career of a politician to be of more importance in defining his values than the speeches he makes in an election year.

The reminder of the prophetic warning of Richard Nixon's Attorney General, John Mitchell: "Watch what we do, not what we say."

In this light, I am now wondering about the support for Republican turned Independent presidential contender John Anderson.

In Idaho as in other states much of Anderson's support comes from liberals dissatisfied with the Democratic Party.

That dissatisfaction with Jimmy Carter is understandable.

But it is becoming apparent the large number of liberals supporting Anderson have yet to examine his 20 year congressional career.

For these Anderson supporters the next months will bring both disheartening revelations and a difficult choice. The major parties will soon publicize the largely unknown Anderson record. As liberals in the Anderson camp learn of their candidate's past, they will discover he has voted against many values in which they believe.

They can then either force themselves to believe Anderson has only recently seen the light, and as true believers accept his admittedly convincing speeches of born-again wisdom and leadership, or acknowledge they unwittingly endorsed a candidate who sold them all of goods.

For some it is likely the Anderson record will appear uncomfortably similar to stands endorsed by the Reagan wing of the GOP.

Here are a few of Anderson's stands which should raise the eyebrows of liberals.

Ultra-conservative organizations. In 1962, Anderson addressed and encouraged persons at the Political Action Conference of Human Events.

In 1963 he joined the national advisory board of the Young Americans for Freedom (YAF). In 1967, he wrote a letter to a John Birch Society chapter encouraging their actions. All of these organizations are ultra-conservative, at times reactionary groups. As late as 1965, the far-right Liberty Lobby gave Anderson an 80 percent approval rating.

Religion. Three times in the sixties, Anderson introduced a proposed amendment to the U.S. Constitution which would have declared America to be a Christian nation. Anderson now acknowledges such an amendment (which perhaps can be dismissed as a cheap publicity stunt) would have been a flagrant violation of the principle of the separation of church and state, not-to-mention-a callous rejection of the religious rights of Jews, members of other new-Christian religions and those who are simply indifferent to religion.

Vietnam. When it comes to courage and leadership, characteristics Anderson now says he has, one has to wonder about his voting record on the Vietnam War. As late as May 10, 1973, Anderson voted to continue the bombing of Cambodia.

prospect. But he opposes socialism and the excesses of government. He is against everything which contributes to smothering taxation, excessive regulations, devouring inflation, a back-breaking national debt, a weakening of our security, or the strangling of our free enterprise economy with mountains of bureaucratic red tape.

In a very real sense, a Constitutionalist is like a physician. A doctor is so strict for good health that he is categorically opposed to pneumonia, diphtheria, polio, scarlet fever, typhoid, and anything else which would destroy human health and happiness.

The Founding Fathers were the political physicians of their day and new it is time that we raise up millions of Americans who will take the time to become informed and become the healing political physicians of our own day by electing people to office who will uphold the Constitution.

All begins with a careful study of the Constitution and the writings of the Founding Fathers. If you haven't read the Constitution recently—do so. You will discover the proper role of government. After doing so you will realize the great job that Symms, Hansen and McClure are doing to preserve our liberty in this great constitutional Republic.

Nissan head opposes export limit

TOKYO (UPI) — Japan should not limit car exports to the United States until it is officially determined that such sales are hurting the American auto industry, the president of the Nissan Motor Co. said Monday.

"If Japanese car-makers impose any restraints on exports to the United States, it is tantamount to admitting that Japanese sales are hurting the U.S. industry," Takashi Ishihara told a news conference.

The Nissan chief, fresh from a trip to the United States, was commenting on investigations by the U.S. International Trade Commission on the impact of surging Japanese car sales.

Industry analysts said Ishihara's statement was likely to prompt more U.S. demands for legislative curbs on Japanese auto imports.

Tokyo government officials have repeatedly urged Japanese automakers to exercise restraints in exports of their small, fuel-efficient cars to the United States.

The American industry claims Japanese imports, which account for nearly one out of every five cars sold in the United States, are responsible for laying off more than 300,000 American auto workers.

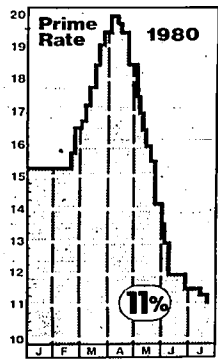

Nissan, maker of Datsun cars, is Japan's second-largest automaker behind Toyota. Nissan officials said the company exported 749,633 vehicles to the United States in the first half of this year, a 42.5 percent increase over the first half of 1979.

The U.S. ambassador to Tokyo, Mike Mansfield, called on the new Japanese government to seek an early settlement of trade problems, including auto exports, between the two nations.

According to embassy officials, Mansfield told newly-appointed Foreign Minister Masayoshi Ito, "It is important for the (two) nations to avoid a further politicization" of trade problems.

But Nissan's Ishihara indicated the Japanese government should complain about Washington's decision to raise import tariffs on small pickup trucks from the current 4 percent to 25 percent.

Major banks lower prime rate to 11%

NEW YORK (UPI) — Three major banks Monday lowered their prime lending rates to 11 percent from 11 1/2 percent.

An analyst said easing of rates by the Federal Reserve will lead to a still lower rate by the end of summer.

Morgan Guaranty Trust Co. and Bankers Trust, both of New York, and Manufacturers Bank of Los Angeles made the downward move in the rates they charge their most creditworthy customers for loans.

Bank of America, Citibank, Chase Manhattan and a few other large banks have lowered their prime rate to 11 1/2 percent over the past two weeks.

Several large New York banks — Morgan, Bankers Trust, Bank of New York and Chemical — also lowered their broker loan rates to 10 percent from the 10 1/2 percent level Monday. The broker rate cuts could foreshadow further reductions in the prime.

The Federal Reserve Monday confirmed by its actions in money markets that it had lowered the central trading area last week for the federal funds rate that banks charge each other for loans.

Texaco gas windfall hit

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, petitioned federal regulators Monday to prevent Texaco from reaping what he called a $73 million windfall from a 1977 settlement of alleged natural gas marketing violations.

Metzenbaum told reporters he was filing his petition because the settlement the former Federal Power Commission reached with Texaco has failed to redress the damage to gas consumers.

Texaco was accused of illegally diverting 208 billion cubic feet of natural gas from public lands to its Fort Arthur, Texas, refinery from 1967 to 1977. At the same time, Texaco sold an equivalent volume of other gas on the uncontrolled intrastate market in Louisiana, Metzenbaum said.

Without admitting any wrongdoing, Texaco agreed to make the same amount of gas available to the price controlled interstate market for which gas from federal land is earmarked.

But Metzenbaum said the settlement lets Texaco sell the gas at the prevailing interstate price, currently about $2.51 per 1,000 cubic feet. The controlled price was just 20 to 22 cents per 1,000 cubic feet during the period when Texaco allegedly diverted the gas, he said.

Texaco spokesman Walter Doyle said, "There is no justification and no reason for this matter to be reopened."

Tire plant closing

CHICOPEE, Mass. (UPI) — Tuesday will be the last day of work for the almost 1,600 workers at the Uniroyal Inc. tire manufacturing plant in Chicopee.

The facility, largest employer in the western Massachusetts city, is going out of business — a victim of declining tire sales and foreign imports.

The only bright spot is talk of a possible merger with an outside owner who wants to keep the plant operating.

Export hike advised

WASHINGTON (UPI) — American industry may help help the United States pay its soaring imported energy bills and avoid skidding into third place as an exporter of manufactured goods, Reubin Askew, the president's special trade representative, said Monday.

Askew told the House Ways and Means trade subcommittee American consumption of foreign oil dropped 9.7 percent in the first five months of 1980.

Secretary Edmund Muskie greets tearful Richard Queen

Poker, prayer aid Queen as captive

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Richard Queen returned home from Iranian captivity feeling like a modern-day Rip Van Winkle.

He said Monday he kept his sanity during nine months as a hostage by playing poker, reading and praying.

The bearded Queen, 28, removed his glasses to wipe away tears, and told a State Department news conference he has pangs of guilt about the 52 other hostages left behind.

But, he said he is hopeful his release for medical reasons is a good sign for his fellow captives.

"They're coping pretty well," he said about those left behind.

In a State Department news conference, Queen also said:

"He said he didn't even know about the April 25 fall of U.S. rescue mission until two hours before he was released and put on a plane for Switzerland earlier this month. But there was no noticeable change in the hostage's daily routine after the attempted commando raid."

"He was kept in almost total isolation for the first three months in a windowless, brick-up basement room dubbed 'The Mushroom Inn' by the hostages. 'It was getting grim,' he said, but his captors permitted him and his roommates to move to another room."

"He said he never felt his captors — whom he described as 'zealous, Islamic students' — tried to brainwash him and that the U.S. embassy takeover on Nov. 4, judging from the chaos that followed, was spontaneous and unplanned."

The bearded and smiling Queen, who was released earlier this month for medical reasons, was greeted by Secretary of State Edmund Muskie and several hundred State Department colleagues, who cheered and clapped when he appeared.

"I feel somewhat guilty that I'm here and they (the remaining 52 hostages) are not," Queen said.

During captivity his imagination was both friend and foe.

When asked if he ever felt his life was in danger, he said, "In a situation like that, your imagination does terrible things to you, it plays tricks."

"I psyched myself up to believe that I was back at university and had a lot of reading to do. I taught myself French, at least how to read it."

Life as a hostage, he said, settled into a routine of reading and playing penny-ante poker. He said he spent time praying for home and his loved ones.

Food at the beginning was mostly rice, but later the militants permitted some hostages to cook Western-style food, and permitted "some non-American-embassy-personnel-to resume working in the embassy kitchen."

Some of the militant students, he said, "were fine people and a few were really S.O.B.s."

His captivity passed with the only news from the outside world coming from Iranian radio broadcasts. "And after a while we didn't want to listen to it," he said.

"I'm like Rip Van Winkle. I don't know what happened in the world for the last nine months."

Queen was released because of illness later diagnosed by military doctors in Europe as multiple sclerosis. He is a patient at Georgetown University Hospital, where he has been given a stack of news magazines, and is trying to fill the gap in his life.

Queen said one of the captors was a medical student and one of the hostages was a nurse. When the Iranian medical student "saw this (Queen's) ailment was just getting beyond him, he called a doctor who said to get me to the hospital."

Asked what the American people can do to help the remaining hostages, Queen paused and said, "There is not much I can say about what to do, except pray for them and give them a reception when they return."

He described with chagrin how he was captured, while six others who worked with him in the embassy managed to escape to the Canadian embassy and later were smuggled out of the country.

U.S. grants youth asylum

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United States Monday granted political asylum to a 12-year-old Ukrainian boy whose father — a janitor — is returning to their native Soviet Union and insists American officials are "kidnapping" his son.

Vernie Jarvis, a spokesman for the Immigration and Naturalization Service, said the agency granted the request for political asylum to Walter Polovchak on the recommendation of the State Department.

A State Department spokesman declined comment.

Jervis said Michael London, INS' Chicago director, made the decision on asylum despite protestations from janitor Michael Polovchak, the boy's father.

In an interview with the Chicago Tribune, published in Monday's editions, Polovchak said the United States has no right to take Walter away from him, even though the boy has asked for political asylum in this country.

"Am I drunkard? I am not. Do I starve my children? I do not. Have I broken any laws? I have not. So who is the government to take away my child?" Polovchak asked. "It is against the law and against the Constitution."

What's what

Days of sailing ships contributed a phrase

In the days of the sailing ships, the helmsman could expect to get one of two orders: If he were directed to sail "full and by" he was supposed to work the ship as close to the wind as possible. That took an experienced sailor. But if he were told to sail "by and large," he was supposed to work the ship slightly off the wind. That required less expertise. Our Language man says it's where we get our phrase "by and large."

Unskilled labor supports the biggest cottage industry in the country, the breeding of babies. A Nobel prize winning geneticist named Dr. Arthur Kornberg said that, or something like it.

Before ice cream can be labeled "ice cream" - to meet one of the several governmental regulations on the matter - it has to be cold.

ICE MAKER

Q. Who invented the first mechanical ice-making machine?
A. Credit a physician named Dr. John Gorrie with that one. In 1833, he was trying to figure out how to make his sweltering malaria patient more comfortable in Apalachicola, Fla. The heat was fierce along the Gulf Coast thereabouts. So he rigged a steam-powered motor to a compressor. He cooled the air all right, but ice formed in the pipes. He doctored the idea some more to pump liquid ammonia into a tub of brine, and floated a can of water in it. The water turned to ice. Eureka! He manufactured brick-sized ice cubes. Everybody thought he was too far out. He died broke.

Q. Who robbed more banks, Jesse James or John Dillinger?

A. Dillinger. In fact, he robbed more banks in a single year than James robbed in 16 years.

SAP POWER

Is it conceivable that you could run a car on the sap of a tree? Evidently so. A Nobel prize winning chemist, Melvin Calvin, recently reported that 10 to 20 liters of diesel fuel can be tapped out of a Brazilian copaliba tree in about two hours. His car ran just fine on it, he said.

You know Vic Tayback, the fellow who plays Mel on the "Alice" TV show? He was a "Kelly Girl" for three years, sent out by that temporary-help company as a substitute bank teller.

Silver Creek trout farm hearing scheduled

By BRUCE HAMMOND
Times-News writer

BOISE—Oral arguments in favor of trout farming on Silver Creek will be presented to Idaho Department of Water Resources Director C. Stephen Allred July 31.

"Basically, the same arguments presented at earlier hearings will be presented again, only this time they will be made before the director instead of a hearing examiner," Bob Fleenor, DWR regional office chief, said Monday.

Buhl trout farmer Ken Ellis has asked the DWR to reconsider his application to establish trout farms on Silver Creek in Blaine County.

Fleenor, who served as hearing examiner on earlier Silver Creek sessions, said Ellis is entitled to present arguments before Allred since the director, and not the hearing examiner, was the one who issued the order denying Silver Creek water rights to Ellis. In the earlier process, no evidence was presented directly before Allred.

No additional evidence will be accepted at the hearing, which will be held in the DWR building conference room in Boise beginning at 1 p.m. The public is welcome to attend the session, according to Fleenor.

Ellis wants to divert water at two sites below Silver Creek's Picabo bridge for trout-rearing raceways. He is requesting permission to divert all water in excess of 74 cubic feet per second (cfs) minimum flow preserved earlier this year by the Idaho Legislature.

The two proposed sites are on property leased to Ellis by potato producer J.R. Simplot, who originally proposed the Silver Creek hatcheries to Ellis in mid-1978.

Ellis' attorney, Robert Weaver of Buhl, has already filed a request for a rehearing should Allred uphold the water rights denial following the oral arguments July 31. The rehearing request is based on two points: that additional evidence should be presented documenting impact of the proposed hatcheries' effluent, and that the amount of water left after the 74 cfs minimum flow protection would adequately supply the proposed trout farms.

"If Allred maintains his decision to deny Silver Creek water rights to Ellis following the oral arguments later this month, it will still be up to Allred to grant or deny Ellis' request for a rehearing.

"If the oral argument goes unfavorably for us, we'll probably move into legal action before any decision on granting a rehearing is made," Weaver said Monday. "This is your proper recourse, to move into District Court."

This possible legal action would probably be directed against both Allred and the DWR, Weaver said.

Weaver contends that Allred did not have the administrative power to deny water rights to Ellis, claiming that stream quality is under the charge of the Environmental Protection Agency and the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare. Weaver also said that the issue of water quality was not adequately documented during earlier hearings in Shoshone.

Ellis has refused to comment personally on his appeals, received by the DWR on May 29.

Allred's initial decision rejecting Ellis' application noted that Ellis probably could get some economic use from the water left after the minimum streamflow is preserved.

Should a rehearing eventually be granted in the Silver Creek decision, all parties involved in the original hearing would be notified and requested to participate.

Although new evidence from the original participants would be accepted, no opportunity would exist for additional public input. Also, any new evidence would only be accepted concerning the two points challenged by Ellis.

Showing he approves of draft registration, Ben Melody, 20, Twin Falls, fills his draft registration form Monday

Gearing up

First day sees 79 Twin Falls men sign draft registration forms

TWIN FALLS — Draft registration rolled along smoothly during its first day in Twin Falls. By closing hours Monday at the Twin Falls Post Office, 79 young men had filled out their Selective Service System forms.

The registrations were the first in a week-long program for men born in 1960. A similar registration period will begin next week for men born in 1961.

No protests over registration occurred in Twin Falls, but a demonstration in Pocatello drew some two dozen persons. At that rally, Larry Fullmer, the U.S. Senate candidate of the Libertarian Party, called for an end to registration and urged opposition to reinstating the draft.

"The draft is a clear violation of the principles on which this country was founded," Fullmer said in Pocatello. "A lot of people came to this country to escape the conscription of King George. Unfortunately, there are a lot of similarities between the bankrupt foreign policy of King George, which made conscription necessary, and the foreign policy of President Carter today."

But in Twin Falls, several random interviews with young men who registered indicated only support of registration and the draft.

"It doesn't bother me. It's just letting them know where I am," said Kent Rohweder of Twin Falls. A lot of his friends consider registration and a possible draft "a pain in the rear end," but if drafted, most would willingly fight for their country, he said.

Jeff Skinner of Rogerson also said he didn't really like the registration, "but it's a duty and I'd probably go," he added.

William Colson of Twin Falls said he was willing to serve in the armed forces if drafted. But the potential discrimination involved in registering only men bothered him, he added.

"Women say they want equal rights, but they don't have to register. How come?" he asked. Women could serve in the armed forces without serving in combat roles, he said.

Jim Florence of Twin Falls said he felt the registration was a "good idea" because it helps the country be prepared if a draft is eventually needed.

Libertarian Senate hope offers choice

By DAVID MORRISSEY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — According to many national political observers, Idaho's U.S. Senate race is a textbook political contest, worthy of a chapter in a civics volume.

The Frank Church-Steve Symms conflict, according to this view, is a classic battle between a Democratic liberal and a Republican conservative. How Idahoans cast their votes will be a sign by which to judge the national mood.

Larry Fullmer disagrees. Church and Symms are more alike than most realize, Fullmer insists. The two are both authoritarians who differ only on the methods in which they would use government to regulate the lives of individuals, not on whether that regulation is proper in the first place.

Fullmer is the U.S. Senate candidate of Idaho's Libertarian Party. In November his name will appear on the state ballot next to those of Church and Symms. And while he acknowledges only men bothered him, he added, "Women say they want equal rights, but they don't have to register. How come?" he asked. Women could serve in the armed forces without serving in combat roles, he said.

Fullmer, a 37 year old Pocatello purchasing agent, says he first decided to enter the race because of his concern Idahoans had little real choice in a race between Church and Symms.

Such a contest means Idahoans "must choose between the liberal and conservative positions, between those who favor political intervention into our personal affairs and those who favor political intervention into our private economic relationships," Fullmer said.

Fullmer insists that should he become Idaho's next U.S. Senator, his every vote would be cast in reducing political control of our lives."

Fullmer's platform for achieving this somewhat utopian sounding goal is at first glance a confusing conglomeration of domestic proposals apparently based on social liberalism and economic conservatism.

In international events, Fullmer's platform is equally controversial. Libertarians openly proclaim themselves "non-interventionists" and advocate "non-intervention, free trade and friendly relations with all countries."

Fullmer believes, however, that what makes their platform salable is a political re-alignment now taking place in the United States.

Voters are becoming increasingly dissatisfied with a federal government which attempts to regulate voluntary human activity, Fullmer says, whether in the economic marketplace or in the family bedroom. The Libertarians believe such political intervention into voluntary personal affairs is by definition not a proper role for government.

"It's not up to the politicians to get us into heaven," Fullmer says. "We all have our free agency and we should be allowed to exercise that free agency and go to heaven or hell in our own way."

The role of the federal government should be restricted to what was envisioned by the Founding Fathers, Fullmer adds, "protection of the individual from force or fraud." The primary value of government is the maintenance of personal freedom for the individual.

Such a reduction of federal government authority would significantly increase the power of states, a result Fullmer strongly supports. "It's the states started talking back to Washington rather than waiting for the next revenue sharing buyoff."

Fullmer also argues that the frequently arbitrary government decisions affecting what individuals can and cannot do disrupt the market place — raising prices and causing shortages.

"I believe that to a large degree the political solutions of the past are the problems of today," Fullmer says. "Many of the problems we face, such as unemployment, inflation and welfare are caused by the free spending boondogglers in Washington who do everything from buying votes to fighting wars in Indochina with money they don't even have."

Magic Valley hospital starts billing accuracy campaign

By STEPHANIE SCHOROW
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Magic Valley Memorial Hospital is launching an accounting blitz aimed at restoring the community's faith in its billing system.

Called "Operation ARCON," the four-month program will attempt to verify the accuracy of more than 17,500 standing accounts, some more than two years old.

Letters outlining the hospital's records of amounts due and asking for any corrections are being sent to every patient who received service before June 1. A staff of six has been hired to handle all corrections and resolve billing disputes.

Hospital officials hope to have the corrected bills channeled into normal billing procedures by November. Until then, all old accounts will be withheld from normal collection procedures, according to Sue Summers, MVMH community relations director.

The hospital is spending about $30,000 in salaries, equipment and supplies to institute ARCON (Accounts Receivable CORRECTION), said MVMH controller Scott Richardson, who designed the program.

However, the hospital's "accounts receivable," or money owed, run into the millions of dollars, hospital officials say.

ARCON's success will depend on the community's response in notifying the hospital of any disagreements with amounts owed the hospital, Summers noted.

Starting this week, letters to patients receiving service before June 1 will be sent out. All patients receiving service after that date are being handled by new billing procedures and will not be part of ARCON.

The letter will state the amounts owed and dates of service and ask patients to notify the hospital if amounts shown do not agree with their records. A return-postage-paid envelope will be enclosed.

The letter will also include the name and phone number of one of the six staffers "assigned" to that account. Those calling that number will reach the staffer directly instead of going through the hospital switchboard.

Patients will be given 30 days to respond. If they do not respond in that time, the hospital will assume the amount is correct.

If a patient disagrees with the amount and contacts his assigned ARCON staffer, the staffer will search through hospital files to clear up problems, contacting the patient for more information if necessary.

Richardson said payments that had been applied to wrong accounts — i.e., Patient X's money going to pay Patient Y's account — were a common problem. Also, mistakes may have been made when a patient was admitted or by nurse recording information.

The ARCON staffer will stay "with that account until it is resolved," Richardson said. "Nobody's going to be left hanging."

But if the hospital can verify an amount is correct, the patient will be held liable for that amount, although he may still object to paying it, Richardson said.

Once accounts are verified, they will be channeled into normal billing procedures. The hospital's regular accounting staff will attempt arrangements for payment of past due accounts; failing that, a collection agency will be called in.

Richardson said he felt most of the accounts are accurate and the response rate will probably not be higher than 50 percent. However, among those who have problems with their bills, "the people who yell loudest get their bills attended to," Richardson said.

"One thing we're stressing (in ARCON) is we need as much response as possible," he said.

Girl raped in rest area

JEROME — An Oregon girl was found raped and beaten early Monday at an Interstate 84 rest stop, according to the Jerome County Sheriff's office.

Sheriff Eliza Hall said the 17-year-old victim was discovered by a passing truck driver shortly before 2 a.m. She was transported to Magic Valley Memorial Hospital, where she underwent surgery and is listed in fair condition with injuries to the head and neck.

Hall said the girl was apparently traveling from Oregon to parts unknown in her own vehicle when she stopped at the rest area.

He said more information may be available after the victim is well enough to be interviewed about the incident. He said initial information she gave at the scene was "helpful."

CSI accepts well-drilling bid

TWIN FALLS — A bid for drilling a second hot water well on campus was accepted by the College of Southern Idaho's Board of Trustees Monday at their regularly monthly meeting.

Boley and Henry Well Drilling of Murtaugh, Idaho, bid $96,051 for drilling a geothermal well at least 1300 feet deep west of the Voc-Tech building, Elsing Drilling and Pump, Inc., of Twin Falls, bid $97,650.

The board accepted the Boley and Henry bid. CSI President James L. Taylor said work would probably begin by Wednesday.

The board rejected two bids for constructing an 1800-square foot metal building north of the maintenance building to house CSI's energy programs.

Two bids were submitted: J.A. Clawson, of Twin Falls, for $23,950; and Briggs Builders Inc., of Twin Falls for $23,900.

Taylor told the board that consultation with other bidders convinced him the bids were too high. He ### recommened the board reject these bids and open bids for supplying raw material for the building to be dropped at the site.

Teens face vandalism charge

JEROME — Two Jerome youths were arrested Monday and charged with vandalizing more than $1,000 worth of property at a Jerome residence.

Jerome Police Chief James McGowan said the pair, age 14 and 15, are charged with second degree burglary and malicious destruction of property at an apartment on 600 South Fillmore Street.

McGowan said the vandalism apparently took place over a period of several days and included such items as furniture, phonograph albums, and clothes. Several items also were taken from the residence, he said.

Motorcycle accident victim OK

TWIN FALLS — A Twin Falls girl, injured in an automobile-motorcycle accident Monday, was reported in good condition at Magic Valley Memorial Hospital Monday.

Twin Falls Police said Tabitha Martinez, 16, was riding her motorcycle north on Locust Street at 3:06 p.m. when a car eastbound on Seventh Avenue East pulled into her path.

The driver of the car, Lily Packer, 71, of Twin Falls, was cited for failure to yield right of way, police said.

Martinez was thrown to the ground. Police said she may have broken a collarbone and a leg, but hospital officials would not confirm that report.

Police said a passenger on the motorcycle, Chris Hughes, 17, of Twin Falls, avoided injury when he jumped from the motorcycle just before the collision and landed on the car hood. Both motorcycle riders were wearing helmets.

Comaneci, Krause blitz Olympics' opening

By ALEX FRERE
UPI Sports Writer

MOSCOW (UPI) — Barbara Krause of East Germany broke her second world swim record in two days and Nadia Comaneci returned to score her first perfect mark of 10 since she captivated the world at Montreal on the second day of the Moscow Olympics.

Krause, a 21-year-old police officer, collected her second gold medal by winning the 100m freestyle, clocking 54.79 to beat the world mark she set Sunday in the heats by nearly two-tenths of a second.

Such has been the Communist dominance of the Games that when Sweden's Bengt Baron won the men's 100-meter backstroke, he was the first Western athlete to win a gold medal in two days of competition.

Anchored by their swimmers, the Soviet Union and East Germany have already forged ahead in the medal standings with the Russian host totaling six gold, two silver and two bronze and the East Germans 3-6-3.

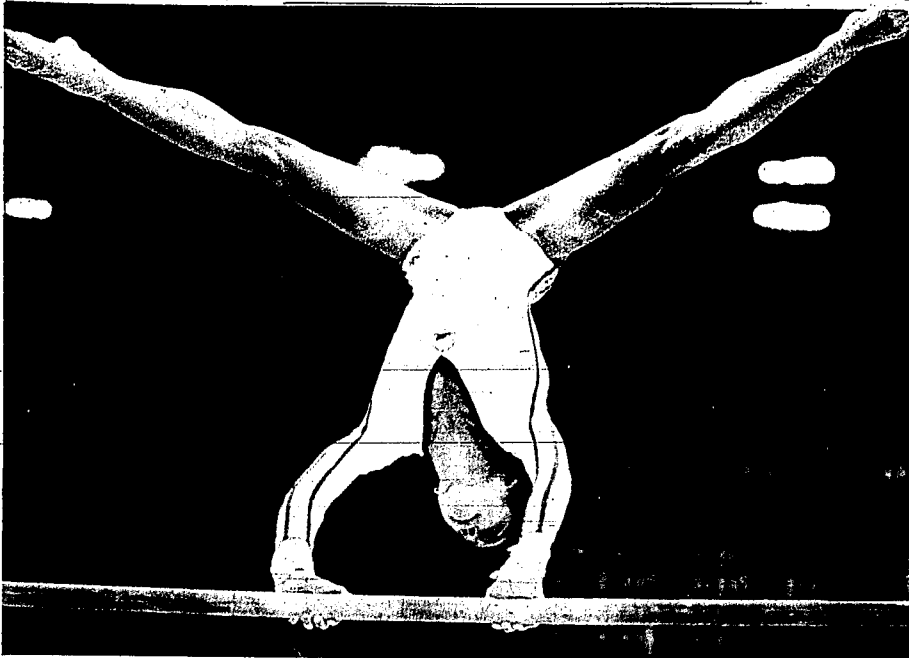

Comaneci, now 18 and considerably larger than most of the other teenagers in the competition, scored perfect marks on the beam and collected three other 9.55 ratings on different apparatus on the first day of women's compulsory exercises. She was tied for first place with the Soviet Union's Natalya Shaposhnikova, who scored full marks on the vault.

The return to form of Comaneci, who lost the world title in 1978 and then withdrew from last year's world championships in Fort Worth, Texas, because of an infected hand, stunned the Russians.

Soviet officials appeared worried by the recovery of the form by the girl who took the Olympic title from them four years ago.

And with world champion Nellie Kim physically handicapped by recent flu and mentally unsettled by marriage problems, the Russians will be worried about the individual all-round event which ends Thursday.

Krause had to fend off a challenge of her 16-year-old teammate Caren Metschuck to win the sprint event in Nadia Comaneci continued to wow the crowds and judges as the gymnastic portions of the Olympics got under way Monday. UPI which all three medals went to the East Germans.

The women's 200m butterfly title also was an East European sweep with Ines Geissler edging teammate Sybille Schronck by 1-100th of a second and Australia's Michelle Ford taking the bronze.

Baron caused the first upset of the Games by winning the men's 100m backstroke title in 56.53 seconds from favorite Viktor Kuznetsov of the Soviet Union and Russia's second string Vladimir Dolgov.

But the Soviet Union recovered when Sergei Kopilakov won the men's 200m freestyle with an Olympic record of 1:49.81. Countryman Andrei Krylov picked up the silver and Australia's Graeme Brewer won the bronze. Irina Kallina of the Soviet Union won the gold medal in the women's springboard, almost 30 points clear of East Germany's Martina Prober.

Another East German, Karin Guthe, won the bronze.

The only gold medal in the morning's events went to Karolyi Varga of Hungary, who won the Italian-style five-point position gold medal with a world record-equaling total of 599 out of 600 despite a bandaged hand.

But for much of the day there seemed as if no action outside the stadiums as inside.

The 24-man Afghanistan team appeared in the Village to deny reports some of them want to seek asylum in the U.S. embassy here and KGB plain-clothes policemen roughed up Western reporters in Red Square.

The KGB staged their unscheduled wrestling bouts when an Italian gay rights activist tried to handcuff himself to a post in the middle of Red Square. He and four Western newsmen who attempted to photograph him were attacked by swarms of KGB secret police and dragged away.

Two correspondents from the French news agency Agence France Presse, a cameraman from NBC and John Moody, UPI's Moscow Bureau manager, were arrested, insulted, searched and had the film from cameras exposed and thrown away before being released.

The Italian activist, Vincenzo Franconi, 32, was also taken away in a police van to an unknown destination.

Back at the real Games, more people turned up to listen to triple world record holder Sebastian Coe describe his bid for the 800 and 1,500 meters tracks, a double that showed at several of the 15 competitions under way.

Only nine crews started in the opening Soling class race in the sailing regatta at Tallinn on the Gulf of Finland opposite Helsinki and there were only 11 in the Tornado double-hulled event — such is the swathe cut by the boycott in yachting events.

Raiders gird for rough year

By BOB OATES

(c) 1980, The Los Angeles Times
SANTA ROSA, Calif. — The Oakland Raiders, who plan to compete next year as the Los Angeles Raiders have just opened training camp and already they have encountered more trouble than most teams.

To begin with, they're being picked to finish last this season in their division — the uncompetitive AFC West — thus insuring a pile of work for their coaches and players, including their sophomore head coach, Tom Flores, and his new quarterback, Dan Pastorini.

For another thing, the club's dream of a Los Angeles home in 1981 doesn't sit too well with Oakland's fans.

"Some of these people are angry, that's true," says Al Davis, the Raiders' chief executive. "And some have been hurt. But a larger number understand our position. They know we haven't been treated well by the (Oakland) authorities. I think we'll draw all right again this year."

That may be an understatement. The Raiders have sold 42,000 of their 59,000 seats to season ticket holders and the projection is a series of sellouts as usual. They had a waiting list of 9,000 last year.

The unanswered question at the moment is whether their fans will be cheering or booing.

Addressing himself to the equality of his club, Davis says: "I think we're going to be pretty good, too."

That could be an overstatement. Most critics assume the Raiders are either going downhill or in transition. Flores doesn't see downhill signs, but he admits to problems.

"Our most urgent problem is to improve the defense," he says, thinking back to his 9-7 season last year. "We've got to strengthen ourselves somehow, although we may have for experienced linebackers in camp."

They are Rod Martin, aging Ted Hendricks, Jeff Barnes and Monte Johnson, who are expected to run the 3-4 defense. Consequently, Flores is planning more 4-3 looks this year.

On the bright side for Oakland, the new quarterback may be just the man to restore the long-babbling potential of the Raiders' offense.

"Pastorini gives us a stronger arm (than Ken Stabler)," Flores says. "We'll have the threat of the deep ball once again."

Pastorini has appeared fit and eager in his first workouts with the Raiders here 50 miles north of San Francisco, where, this time of year, it is always cool and sunny.

Coming off the field, Pastorini, who was born in this country, says: "If I had my choice of any team in the world to play for, it would be this one."

Daryle Lamontica, whose passing brought the Raiders their first fame in the 1960s, is siding with the large segment of Bay Area experts who think Oakland backup Jim Plunkett will beat out Pastorini this year.

"The problem here for Pastorini could be the Raider system," Lamontica says. "It takes time for even an experienced quarterback to learn. If Plunkett has his confidence back, he'll give Pastorini a fight for the job. He (Plunkett) is all healed again and he's had two years to learn the system."

Borg offers bride plenty of security

STOCKHOLM (UPI) — Unlike many bridegrooms, Swedish tennis star Bjorn Borg won't have to worry for money when he walks down the aisle later this week — he's got bundles.

Before the end of the year, Borg is expected to enter the financial record books as the individual to earn the most money ever as an athlete.

World's best for three years

Watson still not among golfing greats

By MARTIN LADER
UPI Sports Writer

MUIRFIELD, Scotland (UPI) — For the last three years, Tom Watson has been recognized, quite simply and without reservation, as the world's greatest golfer.

Since 1977, he has won 19 tournaments in the United States, earning more than $1.5 million on the golf course in that time.

Yet, by some oddity, 1977 also marked the last time he won a major championship and there are those people, such as Jack Nicklaus, who measure greatness by performance in the majors.

So it had to come as quite a relief to Watson when he cruised home an easy four-stroke winner Sunday in the British Open, his first success in a major since he won this same championship three years ago at Turnberry.

"It's a nice oasis after a three-year dry spell," he admitted, but he refused to go so far as to say how much the dry spell really bothered him.

Course record

Masingill leads pro-am field

TWIN FALLS — State amateur champion Scott Masingill of Payette set the new Blue Lakes course record at a four-under 68 to highlight the annual pro-scratch golf tournament.

Masingill led everyone in the one-day event and posted the mark despite a two-stroke penalty for a lost ball.

"I was thinking 65 or 66 when I turned three under and birdied 10, especially with those three five-par holes still to play," he said with a smile. "But the last ball took care of that."

Masingill, who also held the Canyon Springs record until that course, too, was altered this spring, admitted with a laugh "I love to play in Twin Falls."

His 68 gave him a four-shot lead over Twin Falls' Mike Hamblin and Dr. David Ricks of Boise, both at even par 72. A jam developed at 74 among Jim Purves, Tracy Frank and Bill Cook, all Twin Falls; Ken Hulzinga, Burley, and Ted Fihurthy, Boise.

In the pro sweeps, Jerome pro John Peterson turned in a two-under to win first prize while Tom Clary of Sun Valley and Earl Simpson of Burley tied for second with 72s. Ron Plasek of Boise was fourth with a 74.

Masingill and pro Ray Honsberger came up with 11 birdies between them to pace themselves and Jim Carlson and Bill Thompson into the team title at 13-under 131.

Crews from Twin Falls and Burley shared second. Pro Don Hamblin, son Mike Hamblin, Tracy Frank and Dave Rasmussen and pro Earl Simpson, Bill Spencer, Ken Hulzinga and Terry Spackman put together 135s.

Boise pro Clyde Thomsen, son Curt Thomsen and Phil McRobert and Doyle Dugger were fifth at 126. The home crew of Nate Ross, Dave Driscoll, Dr. Chic Cutler and Jim Purves tied with Caldwell crew of pro Rich Standwood and Paul, Tim and Joe Lodge.

Athlete's reinstatement defended

MOSCOW (UPI) — Adrien Paulen, Dutch president of the International Amateur Athletic Federation, Monday defended the IAAF Council's decision to reinstate five Communist female track and field stars who served only 10 months of an 18-month suspension for taking anabolic steroids.

Paulen's casting vote at the Council meeting in Paris last March broke an 8-8 deadlock and meant the athletes would be able to compete in the Moscow Olympics.

The decision had been criticized by the International Olympic Committee and IOC President Lord Killanin said last week it was wrong that an athlete could be banned for life for receiving money, while receiving only a brief suspension for cheating with drugs.

The five competitors — Bulgarians Totka Petrova and Daniela Teneva and Romanians Nadia Marasescu, Elena Sila and Sandra Vlad — all failed dope tests at last year's Balkan Games and would have missed the Olympics if their appeals for clemency had not been upheld.

The decision to lift the ban came under fire from western countries at Monday's IAAF Congress, although Arthur God, British president of the European Athletic Association, did not lead the attack as he had said he would.

It was Robert Stinson, a member of the British Athletics Board, who took up the argument, telling Congress the best way to cure drug doping menace was to stick to the drug regulations laid down by the IAAF.

Commenting on the "sadness of the British Board," Stinson said the decision was "regrettable."

The IAAF Medical Commission, in its report, also asked the Council to throw its weight behind the doping regulations.

Paulen, while conceding there were perhaps grounds for complaint, maintained the IAAF was within its rights to reinstate athletes on the grounds of clemency.

"Top British middle distance runner Christine Benning said she would not accept an invitation to compete in the Games because of the reinstatement of the athletes."

"There is nothing else like it," Watson said following his victory. "There is so much tradition involved, and the feeling I have is different than how I feel in the States."

"I'm sentimental, a romantic at heart, and I love the history of the game. You can't get any older than right here. It means a tremendous lot to me to win at Muirfield. There have been great champions here and it has a special place in my heart."

Perhaps the best tribute to Watson was uttered by the ebullient Lee Trevino, who wanted so badly to repeat the championship he had won at Muirfield in 1972, the last time the Open was played here. In 1972, Trevino shared the opening-round lead with Watson and led by three strokes after the second round, only to settle for a second place.

"There's no disappointment when you lose to the greatest player in the world," Trevino said, "when you finish second to the best in the world, that makes you almost the second-best player in the world."

Guidry in 'slump' with 10-6 record

NEW YORK (UPI) — "Louisiana Lightning" has been temporarily grounded.

Ron Guidry, whose breathtaking 25-3 season in 1978 had observers shouting "Koufax, Koufax," is suffering through an "ordinary" season for the New York Yankees this year and was treated like a batting practice pitcher by the Kansas City Royals Sunday in a 14-3 drubbing.

"Guidry seems to be throwing the ball alright, but he's being hurt by a lot of 0-2 pitches and that seems to indicate a lack of concentration," said New York Manager Dick Howser in trying to explain the 29-year-old left-hander's slippage from his lofty pedestal. "I don't see the slider I saw in '78. His stuff is too good to be hit like that. He's a competitor and his arm is strong — he'll be there in the final two months."

The only place Guidry went Sunday in 97-degree heat was to the showers, courtesy of the hot-hitting Royals. They shelled Guidry for eight hits and seven runs in 1 2/3 innings, beating him for the first time in three years and ending a four-game losing streak against the prized southpaw.

Then they turned diplomatic. "He just didn't have his good fastball today and couldn't get his slider over, but I wouldn't say anything was wrong with him," said Yankee-killer George Brett, who had a sacrifice fly in two at-bats against Guidry.

"He hasn't lost too much," insisted Willie Wilson, who had two groundball hits against the Yankee starter. "He's like a Koufax or Drysdale, you gotta get to him early if you're gonna beat him."

Guidry, who has led the American League the past two seasons in earned run average and was 18-8 last year, fell to a deceptive 10-6 and his ERA ballooned to 3.88. He has been battered for 20 hits and 12 runs over his last nine innings and Howser called a Monday meeting between himself, Guidry and pitching coach Stan Williams to find out why.

"I'm concerned about Guidry because we used to think if we gave him two or three runs, we'd win," said New York slugger Reggie Jackson. "He looks like he's in a slump, but he's an athlete and he'll come out of it. He's been a 'super' and now he's become a 'regular.' But it's nice to be in a slump and be 10-6."

Guidry left the clubhouse quickly Sunday without speaking to reporters. His numbers, however, did some loud talking.

Major leagues

Oglivie bats Brewers past Yanks 7-4

NEW YORK (UPI) — Ben Oglivie drove in three runs and Cecil Cooper railed his American League-leading batting average to .352 with four hits Monday night, sparking Milwaukee Brewers to a 7-4 verdict over the New York Yankees.

Oglivie, who had three hits, raised his RBI total to 71 with a sacrifice fly in the first inning and a two-run single in the sixth.

Craig Nettles' homer, his 16th, was the 267th of his career and moved him into first place on the all-time list for American League third baseman, passing Brooks Robinson. The Yankees had 14 hits and 15 left on base and the two teams stranded 29 runners in all, one short of the AmeriFan League record for nine innings.

Royals 2, Chicago 1

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — Frank White's seventh-inning RBI single lifted Dennis Leonard and the Kansas City Royals to a 2-1 victory Monday night over the Chicago White Sox.

Willie Wilson extended his hitting streak to five games with a one-out single in the seventh and took second on a passed ball. Wilson was joined on the basepaths by Clint Hurdle and U.L. Washington, who were walked by loser Britt Burns, 10-8. Ed Farmer came on to relieve and White railed a single to center to score Wilson.

Texas 5, Boston 3

BOSTON (UPI) — Buddy Bell and Jim Sundberg drove in two runs apiece to pace a 14-hit attack and Jon Matlack and Danny Darwin combined on a seven-hitter Monday night to lead the Texas Rangers to a 5-3 decision over the Boston Red Sox.

The victory was the third in a row for Texas and the loss was the third straight for the Red Sox, lowering Boston's Fenway Park record to an unimpressive 20-26.

Twins 8, Orioles 7

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (UPI) — Pete Mackanin singled home John Castino with two-out in the bottom of the 11th inning Monday night to lead the Minnesota Twins to an 8-7 victory over the Baltimore Orioles in the first game of a two-night double-header.

Castino led off the inning with a sharp single to left off Tippy Martinez, 1-3. Ron Jackson struck out and Butch Wynegar singled to left. Dave Edwards then flied out before Mackanin glove a single off third baseman Doug DeCinces' glove to make a winner of reliever John Verhoeven, 1-2.

CHICAGO (UPI) — A scoreless game between the San Francisco Giants and the Chicago Cubs was suspended due to darkness after 12 innings Monday and will be resumed prior to Tuesday's regularly scheduled game.

The game will be picked up in the top of the 13th inning. The Giants have five hits and the Cubs have seven.

Expos 8, Braves 6

ATLANTA (UPI) — Gary Carter crashed a grand slam to highlight a six-run first inning and added a two-run homer in the seventh Monday night to power the Montreal Expos to an 8-6 victory over the Atlanta Braves.

The Expos knocked out starter Rick Matula, 6-8, and built a 6-0 lead in the first inning. Andre Dawson and Ellis Valentine smacked RBI singles and Carter contributed his third career grand slam.

Cards 5, Dodgers 2

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Dane Long cracked a three-run homer and Ted Simmons added a solo shot Monday night to lead Pete Vuckovich and the St. Louis Cardinals to a 5-2 triumph over the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Black Monday homered in the fourth to tie the score 1-1 but Simmons blasted his 13th homer to give St. Louis the lead.

In the sixth, Leon Durham opened with a double and took third on a single by Keith Hernandez.

Astros 3, Mets 2

HOUSTON (UPI) — Terry Puhl singled home Jeff Leonard with the bases loaded and one out in the bottom of the ninth inning Monday night to lead the Houston Astros to a 3-2 victory over the New York Mets.

With one out, Alan Ashby walked off loser Neal Allen, 4-6. Jeff Leonard ran for Ashby and Craig Reynolds singled him to third. Pinch hitter Denny Walling was intentionally walked to lead the bases and Rafael Landestoy struck out. Puhl followed with a single to center to make a winner of reliever Frank LaCorte, 6-0.

Rafael Landestoy's two-out single off Allen drove in Reynolds from third base to cap a two-run seventh inning and tie the score 2-2. Enos Cabell had opened the inning with a single off starter Tom Hausman and Cabell came home on a Reynolds double.

Reds 5, Phils 4

CINCINNATI (UPI) — Johnny Bench's RBI double keyed a two-run seventh inning and sparked the Cincinnati Reds to a 5-4 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies in a game twice delayed by rain Monday night.

With one out in the seventh, Ken Griffey doubled off starter and loser Randy Lerch, 3-12. After George Foster popped out, Bench doubled to right-center. The game was then delayed for 56 minutes and Dan Driessen singled home Bench when play was resumed.

The Reds took a 2-0 lead on Foster's first-inning sacrifice fly and Ken Griffey's RBI single in the third. Keith Moreland tied the score 2-2 in the fourth for Philadelphia with a two-run homer, his fourth, following a walk to Mike Schmidt.

Larry Bowa gave the Phillies a 3-2 lead in the sixth with an RBI single but Junior Kennedy tied it 3-3 with an RBI double in the bottom of the sixth. Bake McBride's RBI double in the ninth left the Phillies one run shy.

Reliever Charlie Lebrandt, 9-6, earned the victory and Tom Hume notched his 15th save.

Vandals to tour Magic Valley

TWIN FALLS — A good share of the University of Idaho athletic hierarchy will make a swing through Magic Valley this week.

Athletic Director Bill Belknap, head football coach Jerry Daylich, basketball coach Don Monson and Vandal Booster coordinator Ray Murphy will meet with alumni and friends of the school in Rupert, Twin Falls, Jerome and Gooding.

They will hold a no-host smorgasbord luncheon at noon Wednesday at the Rupert Elks Lodge. Wednesday evening will be a no-host cocktail hour from 7 to 8 p.m. and a hamburger fry at 8 p.m. at Bass Lake at Blue Lakes Country Club.

The speakers will be split for a pair of no-host luncheons Thursday. Jerome area boosters are asked to meet at Fireside Cafe while the Gooding get-together is slated for Lincoln Inn.

The swing is designed to bring Vandal fans throughout the state up to date on athletic happenings and outlook. The football and basketball recruiting season and how the newcomers fit into the program generally highlight the meetings.

Dear Abby

Has entire country gone to the dogs?

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
© Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR - ABBY: Concerning your advice to the Richmond man who asked what could be done about barking dogs: calling the police won't work.

A barking dog was driving me crazy, night and day, so I called the police. An officer came to my house and told me there was nothing I could do about it. He then suggested I simply trap or shoot it!

Personally, I don't think it's very sporting — to hunt — domesticated animals, so what's my next move?

—PEEPLEXED IN PLAINVILLE (P.S. Abby, Plainville, Kan., has a population of about 3,000 and there's an ordinance here against discharging firearms inside the city limits, where I live.)

DEAR ABBY: If you want peace and quiet, away from the noise of barking dogs, don't move to Bel Air, Calif. They will investigate your complaint by coming out to see if the dog is being neglected or abused in any way. And if it is, they will help the dog and fine the owner!

—NO DOG LOVER

DEAR ABBY: Your answer to the Richmond, Va., man whose peace was disturbed by barking dogs wasn't worth much.

"Call the police," you say. Really now, Abby, I don't know where you live, but here in Santa Rosa, the police will do nothing. Believe me, I know.

We've been forced to move twice because of barking dogs — once in San Francisco and once in Hayward. I've called the police, the Humane Society, Animal Control and the SPCA, and learned that dogs have more rights than people.

—CALIF. DOG HATER

DEAR ABBY: You are naive when it comes to trying to get relief from barking dogs by calling your police department. We had that problem. I called the police and they refused to come out. I called my lawyer and even my county prosecutor. I was informed by both that there is no law about barking dogs. If a person disturbs the peace or creates a nuisance, the police will come out, but they won't come out for a complaint against a dog unless it has bitten someone.

At first I talked nicely to the dog owner. That didn't work, so I talked nastily to him. He vandalized my property and has trained his dog to bark whenever he sees me.

—HELL IN ERIE, OHIO.

DEAR ABBY: I'd like to stick in my 2 cents' worth concerning one of the most frustrating of all frustrations — barking dogs.

I seem to recall that a few years ago, Johnny Carson was going crazy because one of his neighbors had a couple of dogs who took to barking late at night and early in the morning. I think Johnny said he asked his neighbors in a nice way to please keep their dogs quiet, but the dogs kept on barking, so Johnny took his neighbor to court. If I'm not mistaken I think Carson lost the case.

So, if Johnny Carson with all his clout can't get anywhere, that poor guy down in Richmond, Va., doesn't have a prayer.

—INSOMNIAC IN LONG BEACH

DEAR INSOMNIAC: A few years ago, Johnny Carson DID have trouble with a neighbor's barking dogs, but the case never went to trial.

A ruling was handed down that either the owners of the barking dogs had to keep them indoors at night and during the early morning hours when the prolonged barking took place, or hire a trainer to keep the dogs under control.

Since nothing further has been heard from Carson, I assume that nothing further was heard from the dogs.
