

Prisoners riot; escape foiled

Tent-city inmates riot again briefly

BOISE, Idaho (UPI) — Prisoners rioted at the Idaho State Prison Friday in a tent city set up to house them following a rampage Wednesday night that left the main cell block in ruins.

Prison officials called in 50 more National Guard troops to help guards and sheriff's deputies who surrounded the area, firing warning shots over the heads of the convicts.

In renewed rioting outside the prison early Friday, some of the convicts remaining at the prison began burning cots and removing metal pipe supports from the beds to use as clubs.

Prison guards entered the area to disarm the prisoners, who charged with pipes in hand. When the guards fired a volley of warning shots in the air and the confrontation became a standoff.

Several fistfights broke out between prisoners involved in the riot and others who did not participate. Tempers later cooled and the prisoners disarmed themselves.

Guardsmen were put to work moving about 90 inmates believed to be instigators from among the 311 inmates. They were to be taken to other institutions in various western states.

"Things are quieted down now, but it's hot out there," said Department of Corrections Director C.W. Crowl. "We could still have some more problems."

Initial damage estimates from the massive vandalism inflicted Wednesday night when the entire prison was virtually in the hands of the inmates, could run as high as $2.7 million, officials said, and that does not include assessments of structural damage to three ravaged cell blocks, or the costs of shipping some prisoners out of the state.

About 200 inmates will be housed in federal and states prisons outside Idaho at $1 million a month, some of them for a year more.

Gov. John Evans said the prison disaster threw Idaho deeper into a budget crisis. In the days just prior to the riot, state officials learned they already faced at least a $5.5 million budget deficit.

Les Lee, director of Idaho's Administration Department, said insurance would cover all but $100,000 of the estimated damage. But he said the out-of-state housing costs would be a great burden.

"It's a true emergency," Evans said. "We probably will have to make an emergency transfer of money from other state departments to the Board of Corrections."

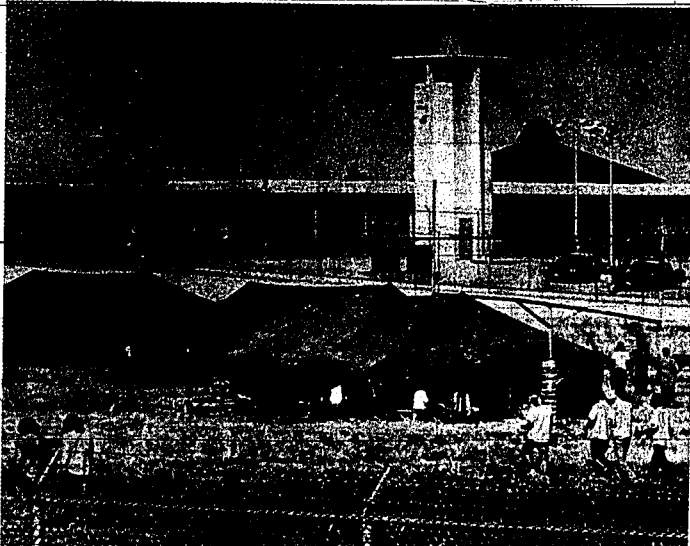

The chief executive said he also was considering making a plea to the federal government for financial help.

"The decision was made to risk destruction of property," said Lt. Gov. Phil Batt. "The hostages' safety was uppermost in our minds. It was a basic decision and it was a correct decision. We didn't endanger the hostages."

Crowl said some of the 11 buildings — including all five cell blocks — which were set of fire, smashed and flooded might be usable within eight weeks. But the prison probably won't be fully operational for more than a year, he said.

Purse said a minimum $750,000 damage was done to the $1.34 million maximum security cell block. He said further examination might reveal that the building was a total loss.

In the new close-security cell block, $150,000 in new, special compact-post glass alone was ruined, and the locking mechanisms in most of the cell blocks were destroyed, Purse said.

Evans tours smashed prison

BOISE (UPI) — Shattered glass, crushed soft-drink cans, other well-spread debris and demolished, blackened vehicles litter the Idaho State Penitentiary's riot-ravaged main compound.

Reporters were allowed to tour the ravaged facility Friday morning — almost a full day after the last of 430 inmates were rounded up and marched the football-sportball field along against the central penitentiary's western fence.

Gov. John Evans, who was ushered through the scorched, smashed buildings by Idaho Corrections Director C.W. Crowl, repeatedly expressed outrage at the millions of dollars of damage inflicted on the 6-year-old, $16 million prison.

"Once again, this proves that those who do this are just criminals," said Evans, peering into the completely gutted upholstery shop. "We have to segregate them from society."

sprawling prison at the compound hospital.

As in the other buildings, thousands of dollars worth of glass had been broken, the ceiling was blackened by smoke and rubble was strewn across the interior. Window frames were blasted outward by the heat, and sharp-smelling char covered the outside brick and concrete up to the flat roof.

Inside fences laid where the frenzied rioters tore them out of the ground with vehicles and homemade implements.

In front of the gymnasium, three cars, a fork-lift truck, a van and an overturned pickup truck marked a once-green section of lawn where a type of demolition derby was conducted.

Guards stand-off inmates on plane

BUTTE, Mont. (UPI) — Twenty-four prisoners broke free from chains while being transferred by air from the embattled Idaho State Penitentiary, but armed guards held them at bay until the aircraft landed at Butte, authorities said today.

The prisoners, described as "really rough boys," apparently freed themselves from handcuffs with two keys they had smuggled aboard.

Prison Director C.W. Crowl said two armed guards were aboard the flight, along with three prison counselors, including one woman.

"When they were over the primitive area, one of the counselors noticed strange activity among the prisoners, who were passing a key around," said Crowl. "The guards went to the front of the plane, and then the inmates got out of their seats and began to approach."

The guards, backed up against the cockpit door, kept the prisoners away in the aisle of the twin-engine Convair 440 by warning them that if they came within 10 feet of the door, they would be shot.

"We really had a touch-and-go situation," one of the Idaho guards aboard the plane told an air traffic controller.

The pilot radioed to Butte reporting the inmates loose in the aircraft and asked for armed deputies at the airport.

Meanwhile, the prisoners stood in the aisle of the plane, rocking it and threatening the guards.

The convicts — being transferred to the Montana State Prison at Deer Lodge after the Idaho prison was wrecked in a night-long riot — swore at the guards and threatened to attack them while the plane was in the air.

Guards warned the 24 prisoners they would "get it" if they moved, according to one account.

When the plane landed at Butte, its door was opened before it had come to a stop and the plane's crew and unarmed prison personnel rushed to the airport terminal. "They're all loose and they've got razor blades!" the pilot shouted as he scrambled across the runway.

"Get someone here with an automatic," yelled one of the guards.

"I couldn't figure out why they were hustling so fast," said the air traffic controller who had been relaying messages from the plane.

Bob Lee, of the Butte police, rushed aboard carrying an automatic rifle.

"There was only one guard left on the plane," he said. "The prisoners were coming up the aisle. They said guns didn't scare them a bit and they were going to get off the plane."

"This went on for about 10 minutes," Lee said. "I talked with them and told them we would do it in an easy, peaceful manner. I asked them to be seated and be taken off the aircraft one at a time."

More policemen came aboard, and when guard Phil Foster told the prisoners, "put the cuffs back on or we'll shoot you," they complied. They were taken off the plane singly, forced to sprawl on the ground while they were searched, and then transported under heavy guard to the Montana State Prison.

As they were being taken to Deer Lodge by bus, a second plane carrying other Idaho prisoners arrived about 15 minutes later.

A total of 43 Idaho inmates were transferred to the Montana facility, including three Montana inmates who had been serving time at the Idaho prison.

State will prosecute rioters — B2

Evans urged Crowl, who commanded the prison through its bloodless hostage crisis during the rioting, to "put those idle hands to work."

He was talking about the 223 medium security inmates who will be left at the prison after the more violence-prone convicts are shipped out of state while the Idaho prison is repaired.

"Mob rule prevailed," Evans said. "There was no semblance of reality. And this kind of thing is happening in all of our cities across the land."

Evans, Crowl, Idaho State Police Superintendent Col. Victor Bartruss and about two dozen reporters, photographers and television cameramen began their grim autopsy — of the Klan warns it may replace police Citizens patrol Chattanooga

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (UPI) — Police withdrew from violence-torn black areas of the city Friday night, to be replaced by unarmed citizen patrols led by black ministers.

Civil rights leader Jesse Jackson called the action "a victory for self-discipline."

Jackson flew to the city after policemen were peppered with shotgun blasts Thursday night in the most serious violence since trouble broke out Tuesday after an all-white jury acquitted two Ku Klux Klan men and gave a third a lenient sentence in the shooting of four elderly black.

In an emotional speech to a crowd of 500 in a sweltering Baptist church, Jackson also announced that Drew Days, assistant U.S. Attorney General for Civil Rights, would fly to Chattanooga on instructions from President Carter to "see how the Klansmen will be handled."

Church, Symms trade barbs Billy probe may look at Idaho-Libya ties

By DAVID MORRISSEY Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The special panel now investigating Billy Carter's actions as an agent of the Libyan government may also examine actions of Libyans in Idaho.

accounts have indicated that Libyan activities in the United States go beyond the question of Billy Carter and his relationship with Libya. News accounts have mentioned various attempts on the part of Libya to gain the lifting of a ban on the sale of C-130 military transport planes to Libya, activities involving Robert Vesco, and other attempts to gain influence with U.S. citizens.

The matter has been thoroughly aired for years," said Phil Reberger, a Symms staff assistant, and previously an aide to Sen James McClure, R-Idaho.

Justice probe of Billy spreads to Civiletti

WASHINGTON (UPI) — As the Senate laid the groundwork for a tough, election-year probe of Billy Carter's Libyan ties in which the president may be called to testify, Attorney General Benjamin Civiletti disclosed Friday he had an Oval Office talk about the matter last month.

The Justice Department's Internal Investigation Unit, the Office of Professional Responsibility, promptly opened an investigation into possible violations of law by Civiletti in his exchange with the president.

“Sources said the probe would investigate whether Civiletti might have committed an ‘unwitting obstruction of justice.’”

Civiletti, who previously denied discussing the case with the president, revealed at a news conference that he did once raise the subject at the end of a routine June 17 meeting at the White House.

“I considered it a fairly casual exchange with the president — a few, maybe 30 seconds worth,” Civiletti said — not a “discussion” as such.

Civiletti said he advised the president during the meeting it would be improper for him to discuss details of an 18-month Justice Department investigation, but then told him regarding Billy: “In my view, he’s foolish and should have registered long ago.”

The president then asked what would happen to his brother if he registered, Civiletti said, and he replied: “Based on my impression of department practice and policy, if he tells the truth and he registers under the act, it is ... probable that the prior failure to register is not ‘criminally’ prosecutable.”

Two weeks later, according to the White House, the president urged his brother to fully disclose his connections with Libya.

Civiletti defended the propriety of the June 17 Oval Office conversation, but said in hindsight he regretted it because it posed new questions about the matter which will be the subject of an inquiry by a special Senate panel headed by Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind.

White House Press secretary Jody Powell told reporters only two people were aware of the June 17 talk — Carter and Civiletti. He said it “was not recalled by the president until he began checking his notes and logs.”

The president then phoned White House counsel Lloyd Cutler early Thursday and Cutler advised Civiletti to disclose it.

Civiletti said Billy Carter, who registered as a foreign agent July 14, “was well on his way to registering at the time or to revealing the ... whole truth of whatever his relationship was with Libya.”

Billy acknowledged to department investigators six days earlier that he had accepted $220,000 from Libya.

Critics question whether influence-peddling by one side or the other may be involved in the case.

On Capitol Hill Friday, the nine-member Senate panel prepared for its first formal meeting on Tuesday. Bayh told reporters: “We certainly have to get the testimony” of the president, first lady Rosalynn Carter and top-ranking White House officials.

“I frankly think looking a guy in the eye — or a woman in the eye — is the best way,” Bayh said in urging public testimony by the family.

The president has promised to “respond fully” to the Senate panel, and left open the possibility he might testify. Such an appearance would be rare, but not unprecedented.

Bayh said he expects only “the briefest kind of hearings” before the Democratic National Convention begins Aug. 11, but the staff may conduct some “preliminary interviews” starting next week.

Members of the special panel clearly sensed the political fallout. “It’s not easy in an election year,” Bayh said. “It tests us all the more.”

Sen. Charles Mathias, a liberal Republican from Maryland, admonished his colleagues “to recognize that this is a little different than anything else we’ve engaged in. It may have an effect on the elections which are immediately forthcoming.”

While some GOP members are attempting to play up any historic parallels between the affair and the Watergate scandal, Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kansas, sought to point up some painful differences.

“Watergate involved campaign dirty tricks and efforts to cover up those dirty tricks,” he said.

“The so-called Billy-gate involves relatives of the president, White House officials at the highest level, personal financial gain including the possibility of indirect financial gain for the president himself and apparent favoritism by the Justice Department.”

Alaska lands bill may return soon for debate

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A major Alaska lands bill pulled off the Senate floor when it became mired in controversy after three days of debate may be brought back early next week, its key sponsors said Friday.

Sen. Paul Tsongas, D-Mass., told reporters that staff members would try over the weekend to draft a compromise that could be taken up next week.

The bill was sidetracked by a clash between Alaska senators, who say the legislation “locks up” needed natural resources, and lawmakers who want to preserve more virgin lands in national parks and wildlife refuges.

Assistant Senate Democratic leader Alan Cranston of California, one of the negotiators, said there was “a reasonably good hope” that a compromise bill can be taken up Tuesday.

Both Cranston and Sen. William Roth, R-Del., said they believed an agreement was possible because the highest priority issues of each side do not collide directly.

Alaska Sen. Ted Stevens, the assistant Republican leader, said there is agreement on the need to keep timber available for forest product plants in Southeast Alaska where he said at least 2,000 jobs are at stake.

Both Stevens and Sen. Mike Gravel, D-Alaska, are opposed to an environmentalist-backed House bill that would put 128 million acres into parks and refuges.

Stevens supports passage of a bill which recommends preservation of 102 million acres and which puts fewer restrictions on the development of mineral and timber resources.

But Stevens has opposed amendments proposed by Tsongas to bring the Senate bill more in line with the House-passed version, and it was the Alaska Republican’s fierce opposition that caused the bill to be pulled off the floor for the behind-the-scenes negotiations.

Gravel is leaning toward the “no-bill” strategy advocated by some Alaskans who believe a future Congress or the courts may dismantle national monuments created by President Carter after the last Congress failed to pass an Alaska lands bill.

Stevens has said failure to pass a bill would play into the hands of the environmentalists — a view Tsongas

Red glow seen in volcano

VANCOUVER, Wash. (UPI) — Aerial observers reported sighting “a streaky red glow” inside the crater atop Mount St. Helens, the second time it has been seen since Tuesday’s eruption destroyed the lava dome within the huge volcanic cavity.

They also reported seeing a blue haze in the crater, which Tim Hall of the U.S. Geological Survey said probably was due to the size of the ash particles in the air.

Hall reported the sulfur dioxide emissions from the volcano had returned to a level of about 2,000 tons a day, which is what the mountain had been averaging for several weeks before its latest eruption.

He also said it was too early to speculate on what the increase in sulfur dioxide emissions might mean.

A full moon is due Sunday and Hall was asked if this might affect earth tides, which some believe might have an effect on volcanic activity.

He discounted this saying, “It’s clear you cannot use it (earth tides) as a basis to say what Mount St. Helens is going to do.”

Carl Burgess of the Forest Service said mechanical problems kept helicopters from flying a 10-man firefighting crew to the mountain area. Hundreds of small fires have been smoldering around the mountain and forest rangers were fearful they would spread to the timber felled in the volcano’s gigantic May 18 blast.

St. Edward's begins service for Hispanics

Church opens Guadalupe Center

By STEPHANIE SCHOROW
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A center for Hispanic members of St. Edward's Catholic Church will open next week to provide services geared for Spanish-speaking people.

Called The Guadalupe Center, it will be temporarily located in the St. Benedict Student Center and Priory, 630 Falls Ave. Activities and meetings of the Guadalupe Society will be there, as well as special activities for Hispanic youth.

Spanish masses, which were at St. Edward's for the past year, will be at the center.

Father Juan M. Garatea, formerly of Shoshone, has moved to Twin Falls to serve as chaplain, and Sister Rosemary Boessen of Buhl will also work there beginning in August.

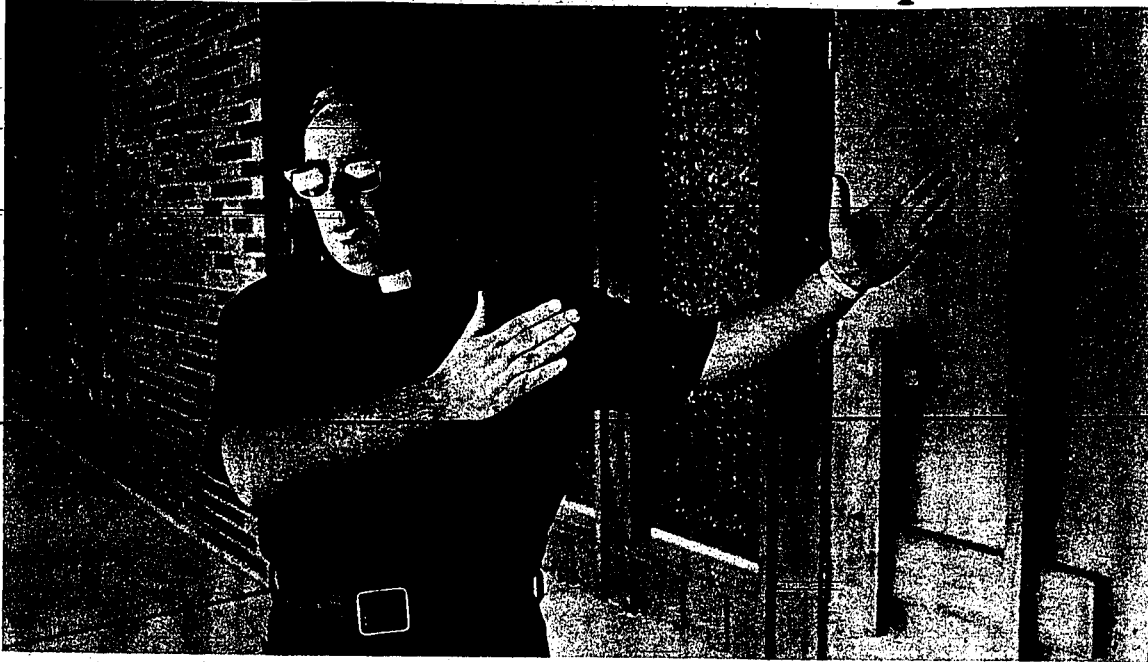

Father Perry W. Jones, pastor of St. Edward's, said the center is meant to house a "ministry for the Hispanic people" in Twin Falls. It is not a separate parish, rather it is a center with a quasi-parish status, he said.

Father Garatea compared the center with a Newman Center, saying activities would be geared toward Mexican-Americans, but people of all cultures could participate. When a second parish had been considered for Twin Falls because of its growing population, "this is not a second parish," he said.

Dodds emphasized, "The Mexican people are always welcome to come to St. Edward's and may choose to remain members of St. Edward's parish. They are, in effect, being given the option. There's no effort on our part to kick them out or say 'You don't belong here.'"

The decision to create the Guadalupe Center was made by Bishop Stephen Trieman of Boise, who will re-evaluate it after a year, Garatea said.

According to Garatea, Hispanic Catholics asked the bishop to consider stationing a Spanish-speaking priest in Twin Falls after they learned Father Arturo Escabedo would be leaving as chaplain of St. Benedict's Hospital. Escabedo had been holding Spanish masses in Twin Falls but was transferred this month to Parma.

Father Juan M. Garatea stands before the door of the St. Benedict student center on Falls Avenue, soon to be open to services for the Spanish speaking Catholics.

Garatea volunteered to move to Twin Falls, and the bishop decided a center was needed to enable the priest to minister to Hispanic people. After the Guadalupe Society was unable to find a suitable building at an affordable price, the bishop offered the group the priory, which was soon to be vacated by the Benedictine monks, who are moving to a facility in Jerome.

The building has a chapel, kitchen and living quarters and meeting rooms, and Garatea feels it is an excellent facility in a good location.

However, the building is up for sale, and while the Guadalupe Society has an option to buy it, members concede it may be hard for them to afford the $450,000 price tag. But until the building is sold, Garatea will live there and the Guadalupe society may use the building for free, paying only insurance and utility bills.

Garatea said the group would continue to look for another facility.

Part of the need for the center stemmed from the scheduling conflicts posed by holding the Spanish Mass in St. Edward's, according to Dodds. The Spanish Mass had been at noon and again at 1 p.m., which he felt was inconvenient for both Hispanic churchgoers and other church activities.

Spanish masses will be held at the Guadalupe Center at 6 p.m. Saturdays and 10:30 a.m. Sunday, Garatea said. An English Mass will be held at 9 a.m. Weddings, funerals and other ceremonies may also be held there, depending on the wishes of the members, he said.

Church leaders also say they are unsure exactly how many Mexican-American members there are. Dodds said the Spanish Masses drew an average of about 125 people. However special Hispanic church functions drew 200 to 300 Hispanics, according to Santa Carmen Montes, president of the Guadalupe Society. Garatea has computed, with information from the schools, that about 500 Hispanic families live in the Twin Falls area. He hopes the new center will enable leaders to get a more accurate head count of Mexican-American members.

Garatea does not feel the new center segregates English and Spanish-speaking members, rather through its programs, "we want to prepare the Spanish people to enter American society," he said.

Garatea has worked in Twin Falls before but has spent the last eight years in Shoshone. Originally from northern Spain, he is fluent in both Spanish and Basque. After seven years as a priest in Spain, he came to Idaho 14 years ago.

Sister Rosemary, who founded the McAuley Girl's Home in Buhl, also volunteered to work at the center.

Couple to be ordained

TWIN FALLS — The dual ordination of Margaret McLellan and her husband Stephen will take place Sunday at 2 p.m. at the First United Presbyterian Church.

Both Stephen and Margaret graduated in May from Louisville Seminary in Kentucky. Prior to that Stephen had received his B.A. degree from Ursinus College in Pennsylvania and Margaret received her B.A. degree from Southwestern University in Memphis, Tenn. They met at seminary and were married.

Stephen has been called as the assistant pastor of the Twin Falls Presbyterian Church and has already begun his duties there. Margaret is the half-time stated supply pastor of the Hollister Presbyterian Church and has also begun her duties.

A reception will follow in the dining room. The public is welcome to attend.

Oil firms announce top profits

Oil Company Profits - Second Quarter of 1980

Oil Company	Net income 2nd quarter of 1980	Net income 2nd quarter of 1979	Percentage of increase
Mobil	688 million	418 million	65%
Gulf	$470 million	$291 million	62%
Conoco	249.6 million	215.8 million	15.6%
SUNOCO	247 million	166.8 million	48%
Getty	243.1 million	139.5 million	74.2%
union	194.8 million	128.2 million	52%
citco	107 million	76.7 million	40%

By United Press International
 Texaco — In the largest refinery, Friday reported its second-quarter profits rose 49 percent largely because of stronger prices abroad for petroleum products and rising crude oil prices.
 Shell Oil Co., ranked No. 8, logged a 46.9 percent gain in second-quarter earnings to $407 million, or $1.23 a share, from $272 million, or 90 cents a share, a year earlier. Revenues climbed 41 percent to $4.8 billion versus $3.4 billion.
 Shell President John Bookout attributed the higher earnings to the company's exploration and production operations but said chemical earnings declined by $4 million in the quarter.
 Texaco earned $502.9 million, or $1.87 a share, up from $337.4 million, or $1.25 a share, in the second quarter last year. Revenues were up 47 percent to $12.5 billion versus $8.5 billion.
 Texaco's foreign earnings surged 78 percent to $287.3 million in the second quarter while its U.S. profits rose 22 percent to $215.6 million.
 Texaco is one of the four U.S. partners in the Arabian American Oil Co., which produces the bulk of Saudi Arabia's crude.
 Analysts maintain Texaco and the other Aramco partners — Exxon Corp., Mobil Corp. and Standard Oil Co. of California — had a distinct market advantage over other U.S. refiners in the second quarter because Saudi crude was priced far below most other foreign oil.
 Exxon posted a less-than-expected earnings increase of 24 percent to $1.03 billion in the second quarter on large foreign currency losses and Mobil had a 65 percent advance to $688 million primarily because of higher foreign inventory profits. Social has not yet reported its results.

 In the first six months of 1980, Texaco earned $1.5 billion, or $3.56 a share, up from $911.3 million, or $2.36 a share, a year earlier. The 1980 results included an extraordinary credit of $402.2 million, or $1.48 a share, from the sale of its stake in Belridge Oil to Shell in the first quarter.
 Revenues — exclusive of the Belridge sale — rose 53 percent to $25.7 billion from $16.8 billion.
 Texaco also said its worldwide production of crude oil and natural gas liquids fell by 4.6 percent in the first half of 1980 and petroleum product sales dropped 9.4 percent.

Husband testifies in arsenic trial

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI) — In a dramatic turn, the first husband of a woman charged with the arsenic murders of two later spouses testified Friday that his wife may have tried to poison him 28 years ago.
 David McGhee, a dairy farmer from Limestone, Tenn., testified at the trial of LaVerne O'Bryan, 43, of Louisville, that he later had laughed at the suggestion that she might have tried to poison him after returning from service in Korea.

McGhee's appearance at her trial. She rocked in her chair and slowly shook her head as he finished his testimony.
 McGhee also testified that his ex-wife called him several weeks ago and warned that their son would disassociate himself from his father if McGhee testified about any alleged poisoning attempt.
 McGhee said his ex-wife mentioned recalling the coffee incident.

The prosecution, which rested its case after McGhee's testimony, has charged the defendant killed her two later husbands out of jealousy and greed for their property holdings.
 Mrs. O'Bryan went on trial Monday on charges of murdering her third husband, John O'Bryan, who died on July 5, 1979, at the age of 37, and the attempted murder of a sister-in-law who — suspected — O'Bryan was a poisoning victim.

Asked by Assistant Commonwealth's Attorney David Stengel if he had noticed anything "out of the ordinary" while married to the defendant, McGhee said she once had put a spoonful of an unspecified substance into his coffee.
 His wife explained that the substance was "something for my appetite," said McGhee, who added, "I didn't need anything for my appetite."
 "How do you drink your coffee, sir," Stengel asked.
 "Black," McGhee responded as the smiling prosecutor sat down.
 McGhee said he "passed it off" and didn't pursue what was put into his coffee. He admitted under cross-examination he hadn't become sick and that the substance had been placed in his coffee in the presence of his mother-in-law.
 McGhee was contacted last year in Tennessee by prosecutors who were investigating the arsenic deaths of the defendant's two later husbands.
 Mrs. O'Bryan, who operates a city junkyard formerly owned by her two deceased spouses, appeared shaken

U.S. ambassador walks out of UN

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — The United States walked out of the General Assembly for the first time in nearly 15 years Friday when the Iranian delegate took the floor.
 U.S. Ambassador William Vanden Heuvel said, "We owed it to the hostages."
 Vanden Heuvel, deputy U.S. mission chief, led the walkout when Ali Shams Ardekani, Iranian ambassador to Kuwait, strode to the podium to denounce the United States as an "enemy of peace on earth" during the General Assembly's special emergency debate on Palestine.
 Later, coming back to the General Assembly after Ardekani had finished speaking, vanden Heuvel told reporters he had decided to walk out before the Iranian spoke — and not because of the content of his speech but because of the 53 Americans being held hostage in Iran for 285 days.
 "It was deliberate. I told my senior colleagues in Washington that I was going to do it," Vanden Heuvel said. "I left before he began speaking and came back after he finished. I had no idea what he said... I was leaving out of respect for our hostages and to remind all member states here of the obligation all of us have to honor international law."
 A U.N. mission spokesman said the last time the United States walked out on a General Assembly speaker was on Oct. 19, 1965, when Ambassador Arthur J. Goldberg turned his back on the Cuban foreign minister — and strode — from the green-and-gold hall.

The spokesman said that, as far as he knew, that was the only other time the United States has walked out of an Assembly session.
 Ardekani went on with his speech, using the kind of language that, when directed against other nations, has provoked them to walk out on speakers before.
 He called Israel a "parasite" and said the United States was "on the top of the list... of the enemies of peace on Earth."
 He demanded "strong action" — stronger even than that being demanded by the Arab and non-aligned backers of the anti-Israeli resolution being debated at the special Palestine session.
 "We need a strong resolution combined with a plan of action to put economic and political pressure on those who help the Zionist parasitic entity," Ardekani said, referring to both Israel and the United States.
 The American walkout was the dramatic highlight of the four-day-old debate that is expected to wind up next week with passage of a resolution demanding Israeli withdrawal from occupied Arab territories.
 The United States took its turn at the podium on Thursday when, joined by Western Europe, it insisted that the Assembly recognize and respect the "reality" of Israel.
 The non-aligned draft resolution being debated at the special session demands the creation of a Palestinian state, specifies that Arab territory occupied by Israel must be turned over to the PLO and does not make so much as a mention of Israel's security needs.

Hijack odyssey ends as gunmen surrender

KUWAIT (UPI) — Two Jordanian brothers who forced a Kuwaiti jetliner on a terror-filled odyssey across the Middle East to collect a business debt surrendered Friday, releasing their remaining 33 hostages unharmed, the Kuwaiti news agency announced.
 "Youssef and Ahmed Mifteh, who had threatened to blow up the Kuwaiti Airlines Boeing 737 they hijacked 27 hours earlier, gave themselves up "without preconditions" after a British flight crew escaped from the craft in a burst of gunfire, the agency said.
 The 33 passengers and crew still aboard — 47 had been released by the hijackers earlier — were unharmed but terrified by the climax of their ordeal.
 Shortly after the plane landed in Kuwait, its fifth stop on a Middle Eastern odyssey that began over the skies of Lebanon early Thursday, the British pilot, co-pilot and flight engineer managed to escape from the plane.
 They raced across the tarmac, crouching low, as the hijackers fired three shots at them, officials said.
 About one hour later the Mifteh brothers threw down their guns and grenades and surrendered, the Kuwaiti news agency said.
 Thus ended one of the most bizarre incidents in the annals of air piracy.
 The Mifteh brothers themselves were kicked out of Kuwait last year for passing bad checks, hijacked the jet after its takeoff from Beirut to demand payment of a $1 million debt that they asserted a Kuwaiti businessman owed them.
 To press that demand, they took the plane that started out with 80 passengers on a crisis-cross flight first to Kuwait, then to Bahrain, then back to Kuwait and then on to the Iranian oil refining center of Abadan.
 Evidently on orders from his captors, the pilot then set course for Tehran and pleaded "on humanitarian grounds" for permission to land, radio reports said.

 But Iranian authorities, acting on orders from President Abolhasan Bani-Sadr, blocked the Mehrabad Airport runway with cars and told the pilot to go away.
 After circling Tehran three times, the jetliner turned south and landed at Kuwait for the third time.
 "We had our rights usurped, and we want you to help restore our rights," a released passenger quoted the gunmen as saying.
 In Kuwait, with troops in jeeps and half-tracks surrounding the plane, the hijackers released five more passengers during negotiations that took place before the flight crew escaped.
 Kuwaiti Interior Minister Shaikh Nawaf al Ahmed al Jabir conducted the talks by radio from the airport control tower.
 It was al Jabir who convinced the brothers to free 37 women and children passengers during an earlier stop in Kuwait. Two Lebanese passengers — a clergyman and a businessman, were freed during the refueling stop in Abadan.
 One of the released passengers, Kuwaiti journalist Fatima al Faqih, quoted the hijackers as saying they planned to "release the passengers and explode the airliner" if their demand was not met.

STUNT MAN!

Superstar actors with outrageous life insurance premiums usually get stuntmen to handle the dangerous stuff, and Paul Newman might have wished he had one Thursday. The 54-year-old star and veteran road racer, making the Butch Cassidy running from a posse, hit a turn on the Sonoma, Calif., racetrack at more than 110 mph, lost control and rolled three times. His injuries — just a few bruises. He's practicing for the upcoming 75-mile Grand Touring race.

PRYOR RESTRAINT

Doctors in Los Angeles are almost calling Richard Pryor's recovery from burns suffered last month a miracle, and the 58-year-old comedian isn't arguing. Asked by ABC-TV's Barbara Walters, who interviewed him when he was released from the hospital Thursday, if he had wanted to die, he said, "I felt that ... and the part that wanted to die. This is the one that wants to live. I feel born again. I feel like God has given me a second chance at life."

FROM BEYOND

Jazz violinist Joe Venuti appeared on "The Joe Franklin Show" Friday in New York to talk about an upcoming nightclub gig. Which was most peculiar since Venuti died nearly two years ago. Talk show host Franklin says he had a dental problem and "slipped on a rug" — that "a lot of people called to say, 'Gee, I thought he was dead.'" Venuti — known in life as the most incorrigible practical joker in jazz — would have loved it.

SIGHT STRICKEN

The divorce suit brought by "CHiPs" star Eric Estrada against estranged wife Joyce Miller Estrada was interrupted dramatically Friday in Los Angeles. Mrs. Estrada entered the courtroom with her lawyer, Harold Abeles, then suddenly started blinking her eyes and crying. "I can't see! I can't see!" Abeles called an ambulance and she was taken to UCLA Medical Center. The Estradas are splitting after being married only a few months.

DIRTY DOLLY?

Dolly Parton, who just filmed her first movie "9 to 5" with Jane Fonda, has been bitten by the writing bug and the book she's crafting tentatively has been titled "Wildflowers." Says bookworm Dolly, "It's almost autobiographical. It's sort of exaggerated, with a little bit of truth, a little bit of humor, and a little bit of dirty stuff to make it sell!"

Disappearing hitchhiker is prophet?

LITTLE ROCK (UPI) — Reports of a mysterious hitchhiker who talks like the second coming of Jesus Christ then disappears into thin air from moving cars has sparked the imaginations of highway travelers and mystified the State Police.

"It sure is a weird story," Trooper Robert Roten said Friday. Roten said the state police had had two reports — both on a Sunday — that a clean-cut, well-dressed hitchhiker had disappeared from cars traveling along highways near Little Rock.

Efforts to find someone who actually saw the "hitchhiker apostle" proved fruitless. But Little Rock apparently is full of people who know someone who knows someone who had it happen to them.

One such woman, who emphasized she could not verify the story, heard about the hitchhiker from a woman she likes to work with. That woman had heard it from another woman whose parents supposedly were involved in the incident.

Lowering her voice, the woman told the story thus:

"The girl said her parents and another couple were coming from Pine Bluff. They picked up this strange dressed man because he looked like he needed transportation, you know. He discussed current events — he knew about the hostages — and all of a sudden he said 'Jesus Christ is coming again' and disappeared.

"They stopped the first trooper they saw and told him, 'You're going to think we're crazy' and told him about it. And he said, 'No, you're the fourth party that's told me about it today.'"

Roten said he checked with police districts all over the state and found only the two reports in Little Rock. One was logged June 23 by a woman who said the man had disappeared from her car while driving on U.S. 65 between Pine Bluff and Little Rock. The other was July 6 from a man who said it happened to friends of his on Interstate 30 between Benton and Little Rock.

"There's not much we can do on a report like that," Roten said. "It's not a violation of the law and no hazard is involved. It's illegal to hitchhike, but if he disappears, this hitchhiker's going to be hard to arrest."

Robin Hood receives a citation

SANTA CRUZ, Calif. (UPI) — Robin Hood lasted exactly one day in Santa Cruz.

David Chamberlain of Santa Cruz thought he had a new business. He dressed up as Robin Hood — complete with red-plumed feather hat — and billed himself as Robin Hood Rescue Service.

Then he roamed town, looking for over-parked cars. When he spotted a red flag, he'd drop a note in the meter and a note and envelope on the windshield.

"Greetings," said the note. "You have just been rescued from a five-dollar parking ticket fine by the Robin Hood Rescue Service."

The rescued motorist was asked to use the envelope to contribute one dollar or more so Robin Hood could continue his services.

During the one day he was in business, Chamberlain says he fed about 100 meters.

Unfortunately, one of the over-parked motorists was Santa Cruz Police Chief Geno Pini, and it turned out Santa Clara lawmakers already had thought of — and guarded against — Robin Hood's activities.

A police officer showed up at Chamberlain's house with citation for making unauthorized deposit into a parking meter.

He pleaded guilty to the charge but was given a suspended $25 fine after proving Robin Hood would go out of business.

Chamberlain said 11 people of the 100 he may have saved from a ticket actually sent him a dollar.

What's what

Racing driver, speed terms stayed long time

Seasoned Citizens will recall when the phrase "going like 60" meant moving at tremendous speed. And when the highway cop's standard query after pulling over a speeder was, "Who do you think you are, Barney Oldfield?" There's a connection. Oldfield, original of the famous racecar drivers, was the first man to drive an automobile 60 miles per hour. "Barney Oldfield" and "going like 60" lingered in the language for two score years, prithee.

QUIZ

Q. Copy Chile's quiz: Which of these three listings are in error? 1. Dolly Madison, wife of President James Madison. 2. Henry S. Truman, thirty-third president, J. Moses Cleveland, founder of Cleveland, Ohio.

A. Two, maybe three. Mrs. Madison spelled her name Dolley. Cleveland's founder spelled his name Cleveland. And argument continues over whether the S in Henry Truman's name should have a period after it inasmuch as it wasn't an abbreviation.

Q. Why are teapots traditionally round and squatly while coffeepots traditionally are tall and narrow? A. Tea leaves rise. Coffee grounds sink. The lengthy explanation derives from these two facts. Tea leaves give the most when fully unfurled. Coffee grounds serve better in the bottom of the pot than in the cup.

Potato growers may make a buck in '80

By STEVE LIPSON
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Potato growers haven't started dancing in the street, but it looks like they might make some money this year.

The potato price outlook for the coming year is upbeat. "Growers in eastern Idaho might have to pay some income tax for a change," said Burley farmer Jack Alford, who is on the board of directors of the National Potato Processors Board.

Eastern Idaho growers suffered the most during the last two years of low potato prices. Most of the potatoes grown there are sold on the open market, compared with the rest of the state, where more than half of each year's potato crop is sold to processors at prices set by pre-season contract.

For the last two years contract prices have allowed growers to make a profit, while open market growers which means almost every farmer in eastern Idaho and many farmers in the Magic Valley, have faced prices that never got higher than contract prices and were often disappointingly lower.

This year's potato contracts call for prices of about $3.50 per hundredweight, which is near the break even point for an average grower. With the quality incentives built into the contract, a grower with a good crop could get more than $4 per cwt.

But the open growers stand to do better than that. Twin Falls commodity dealer Alex Sinclair is predicting potato prices at harvest time between $3.75 and $4.75 per cwt. Carl Reynolds, executive director of the Western Potato Growers Association of Idaho said open potatoes will sell for at least as much, if not more, than contract potatoes. He said $4 per cwt. is "not at all unreasonable."

All the optimism about potatoes stems from simple supply and demand, Reynolds said. After two years with too many yields, growers have brought supply in line with demand, he said.

Last year's crop of Idaho potatoes is virtually sold, which is something many people didn't expect to happen two months ago, Reynolds said. The spring crop from states like California was small and the drought in the Midwest could reduce potato yields in some areas.

The crowning blow was struck by the U.S. Department of Agriculture in a report released two weeks ago, which showed potato acreage down 9 percent across the country.

Sinclair said people have been bullish on potatoes ever since. On the futures markets, April Maine and May Russet potatoes traded at over $15 per cwt last week. If those prices held up, growers could get as much as $7 per cwt. for their potatoes, Sinclair said.

Prices don't figure to stay at those levels for long, he said. Potato prices in grocery stores are high because few potatoes are working for them. But stores aren't selling many potatoes at those high prices. Once the harvest of summer potatoes begins, prices will fall from the weight of increased supplies, Sinclair said.

Mel Anderson, executive director of the Potato Growers of Idaho, said the "fundamentals of the market" are working for the grower. But fundamentals may not be enough. The supply of potatoes will be down, he said, but low demand could step in and keep a lid on potato prices.

The key for growers will be the economy, Anderson said. If the recession keeps people from eating out at McDonald's and Burger King, then french fry sales will go nowhere and potato demand will go nowhere.

Signal

School bosses may want some changes in plan

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls School officials are indicating they may want some changes in a state plan to put a traffic signal at the school crossing on Addison Avenue.

Howard Johnson, engineer for District II of the Idaho Division of Highways at Shoshone, said he mailed an outline of the proposal to school district officials last week.

The Idaho Transportation Board this month approved installing a hand-actuated stoplight, providing the school district or the city of Twin Falls supplied adult crossing guards. The state board's plan also calls for the switch box to be locked when the guards are not on duty.

School district officials want to review the proposal before making a final decision. So far, no school board member has seen the proposal, but several members have raised concerns about the plan.

The state transportation board's decision to install a signal came after four years of urging by parents and school, city and legislative leaders. In the last school year since the four-lane highway was widened, a 19-year-old student was struck by a car in the crossing and two children were hit by cars at nearby points on Addison Avenue.

City officials say it is unlikely they would provide the guard because of the costs and because Addison Avenue is part of the state highway system and not under city jurisdiction.

School officials are scheduled to discuss the plan at an Aug. 5 meeting. Should a decision to approve it be made at that time, Johnson said the signal probably could be installed before school starts Aug. 25.

School Superintendent Dr. James Savin has been on vacation and could not be reached for comment on whether he had received the letter. Among the school board members' chief concern is the cost of the crossing guard, who will be responsible for operating the signal.

"My concern is, yes, we got the light, but the light is activated by the crossing guard," School board member Bob Kington said. "I need to know more about it before I can make a definite decision, but I think we might have received less than we had hoped for."

Kington said several studies have shown that the use of a crossing guard would not teach children how to safely cross major thoroughfares.

Board member John McNeess said he also needs more information about the crossing guard. He said he would be said he relied on crossing guard also causes him some concern.

Board member Eugene Champlin said one of his concerns was the extent of the school district's liability for the crossing guard's actions if an accident occurred.

Driver critical after collision

TWIN FALLS — A 19-year-old Twin Falls man was critically injured at 2:58 p.m. Friday when his pickup collided with a tanker truck 10 miles southwest of here.

Twin Falls County Sheriff's officers said Mark Kevin Stayner, 19, was traveling south at the intersection of 3200 North and 26th East, both county roads. Officers said it appeared the attempted to stop at a stop sign, but skidded into the path of a westbound 10-wheeler truck operated by Dean O. Bird, 58, of Kimberly. The truck was carrying 900 gallons of gasoline and 400 gallons of diesel fuel, officers said. The truck driver escaped with minor injuries.

The collision caused the tanker to break loose and overturn into a borrow pit, spilling a large amount of gasoline and oil. The truck then overturned on top of the tank.

Officers said the cab of Stayner's 1980 pickup was crushed and it was necessary to extract the driver from the wreckage.

Magic Valley Memorial Hospital officials said he was in critical condition following surgery late Friday. He was admitted to the intensive care unit there with head injuries and multiple fractures, officials said.

I really am pretty

The beauty and the beast were one and the same Friday as John Davis of Troy and his daughter Stubby, 12, trim one of three yearling ewe Suffolks in the Exposition Center at The College of Southern Idaho. Davis and other sheep farmers were preparing their animals for the 59th annual ram and ewe sale that began Friday. Sponsored by the Idaho Wool Growers Association, the sale continues today beginning at 9:30 a.m.

Though budget will increase 11 percent to $3.9 million

Significant service level reductions are likely

By MARTY TRILLHAASE

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls residents may find the city's level of service cut significantly in light of a tentative budget now being considered by the City Council.

Although city officials plan to have an additional $943,285 to spend in the 1980-81 total operating budget, the 11 percent increase melts in the face of increased operating expenses. For example, fuel costs have jumped more than 40 percent in the last year and the city now faces a 38 percent increase in the cost of electricity.

The budget marks the second consecutive year the city has been forced to deal with frozen property tax revenues under the 1 percent initiative.

Although the council last year cut back its work force to deal with the 1 percent, it was able to compensate for the loss in manpower largely by streamlining and consolidating services.

This year, the proposed cuts will significantly reduce the level of service in several programs.

Instead, it calls for an 11 percent salary increase for most administrators.

There are some exceptions, including the City Council members.

The budget also calls for two new administrative positions. The first would be a $27,846 finance director, who will assume the combined duties of the city clerk and city treasurer. The second position is a public works director with a salary of $20,454.

The budget calls for an $94 or 2 percent

Police, fire, recreation, water- and sewer departments will remain at their present levels of service.

The budget also calls for a 75 percent increase in water rates and a 31 percent increase in general sewer user rates. Children's recreation program fees would be increased by $2 and adult programs by $12. The budget also calls for a $3 per year fee to cover the increased cost of street lights.

The $3.1 million tentative budget, which was released by City Manager Tom Courtney this week, will go before three public sessions, including an informal review Monday at 7 p.m. at City Hall. The council will adopt a budget in September. Public opinions expressed at those hearings will be used by the council to prepare the final budget.

The budget calls for cutting nine full-time employee slots in the street department, four in the parks department, and one each in the city shop, fire and engineering departments. An administrative position in the police department would be eliminated, but an additional patrolman will be hired.

Those employees who remain with the city will receive a 7 percent pay increase in two installments, on Oct. 1 and April 1, 1981. About $195,463 has been provided in the budget for pay-increases.

About $3,923,595 has been budgeted for the general fund, an increase of 9 percent over the present budget of $3,598,780.

Of the general fund revenues, the largest percentage would go toward police with $1,207,630, 31 percent; followed by fire department, $57,022, 21 percent; city administration, $524,838, 13 percent; sanitation, $388,427, 9.8 percent; engineering, $309,557, 5.3 percent; parks, $183,428, 4 percent; building inspection, $131,167, 3 percent; recreation, $115,737, 2.9 percent; and golf course, $93,455, 2 percent.

The largest fund loss would be in city administration with an 8 percent cut from the previous total of $571,160. It reflects the elimination of the assistant city manager position and the melding of the city clerk and city treasurer positions into a finance director position.

Parks department revenues will decrease 17.4 percent from the 1980 total of $157,920. Despite fee increases, golf course revenues will slip 7 percent from the 1980 total of $90,000.

Recreation revenues will remain about the same, decreasing 6 percent from the present fund of $116,500.

Technically, the budget calls for less money for the fire department, with a net decrease of $14,301 or 1.6 percent from the present $851,325.

But the fire and building inspection departments have consolidated and several firemen are now working in the building inspection department. The budget calls for allocating $131,167 to the latter department, a 38 percent increase over the previous total of $44,550.

The combined budgets of these two programs add up to $98,189, a 6.9 percent increase over the previous combined total of $90,573.

The new budget also contains separate funding for police and animal control programs, which were combined in previous budgets.

The budget allocates $1,207,630 for police and $23,830 for animal control. The combined $1,231,530 allocation represents a 6 percent hike.

Sanitation will receive $388,427, an 18 percent increase.

The budget proposal also calls for an 8 percent increase for the engineering department, up from $181,000 in 1980.

Employees pay hike 7%; their bosses get 11%

TWIN FALLS — The tentative 1980-81 city budget calls for a 7 percent salary increase for city employees, but that limit doesn't apply to top city administrators.

Instead, it calls for an 11 percent salary increase for most administrators.

There are some exceptions, including the City Council members.

The budget also calls for two new administrative positions. The first would be a $27,846 finance director, who will assume the combined duties of the city clerk and city treasurer. The second position is a public works director with a salary of $20,454.

The budget calls for an $94 or 2 percent increase in the city manager's annual salary, bringing it to $34,884. However, City Manager Tom Courtney recently received an 18 percent pay boost when he was promoted from assistant city manager.

City Attorney Charles Brumbach's contract remains unchanged at $45,500 for his services. The contract does not include fringe benefits, however.

City Council members would not receive increases, remaining at their salary of $3,500 a year. Mayor Hank Woodall still would be paid $6,000 a year.

Increases for other administrators are as follows:

• Community Development Director LaMar Orton, 11 percent, from $20,400 to $22,716; and City Engineer Gary Young, 11 percent, from $25,320 to $28,206.

• Police Chief Tim Qualls, 11 percent, from $21,000 to $23,346; and Fire Chief Bobby Bopp, 11 percent, from $20,400 to $22,716.

• Recreation Supervisor Chad Browning, 11 percent, from $18,000 to $20,022; and golf pro Don Hamblin, who is under contract, would receive no hike in his $8,000 fee.

• Waste water treatment plant Superintendent Mike Gunn, 11 percent, from $22,900 to $25,386; and Water Superintendent Joe Koon, 11 percent, from $18,000 to $20,022.

2 injured in stabbing

TWIN FALLS — Two unidentified persons were stabbed at 10 p.m. Friday night at Harmon Park.

Twin Falls police were investigating the stabbings, and names were unavailable at press time.

One juvenile male was arrested at the scene by police and officers said his brother and another youth were being treated at Magic Valley Memorial Hospital for stab wounds.

Officers said four Mexican and three white youths engaged in a dispute in the park which culminated in the two injuries and arrest.
