

St. Helens blows her stack again

VANCOUVER, Wash. (UPI) — Mount St. Helens erupted with a roar Thursday, spewing a lightning-streaked steam and ash cloud 44,000 feet skyward in a pulsating blast that lasted for more than 1 1/2 hours.

"Chances of a further burst are very high and some of them could be bigger," said Don Finley, spokesman for the U.S. Geological Survey at volcano watch headquarters shortly after the 4:28 p.m. eruption.

A light-colored, mushroom shaped plume — visible above the haze miles in the southwest in Portland, Ore. — laid down a layer of ash around the volcano's base on its east and westerly slopes.

Winds above 20,000 feet carried ash some 90 miles in a northeasterly direction, threatening the ash-weary city of Yakima, Wash.

It was the fifth major volcanic explosion inside the mile-wide crater since the 9,677-foot high peak first blew up four months ago.

A Forest Service spokesman said observers in a spotter plane reported that the cloud, streaked with bolts of lightning, rolled to 44,000 feet above sea level, but shortly before 6 p.m. had dropped to about 12,000 feet and was decreasing in eruption.

The USGS had recommended evacuation of the "red zone" around the volcano a few hours before the eruption occurred because of increased seismic activity and a spokesman said loggers, scientists and other persons working in the area were cleared of the mountain before the eruption.

National Weather Service forecasters in Boise Thursday night predicted the ash from erupting Mount St. Helens would reach at least some portions of North Idaho, but they said information was not sufficient to determine when the ashfall would occur.

Forecasters Jim McCoy said winds moving around the southwestern Washington mountain were spiraling, sending ash in three different directions. He said fallout from the ground to an elevation of 7,000 feet was moving toward the south and southwest, while the air was moving toward the northwest from 7,000 to 20,000 feet. He said the plume also was being blown in a northeasterly direction between 20,000 to 35,000 feet, indicating that at least some of the fallout would reach Idaho.

"There's a spiraling effect, though," he said. "That means the ash will move like a fan to the south, then west, then in a northerly direction and then east toward North Idaho."

He said he believed no ash would fall in Idaho south of Lewiston.

3% from schools Funding cut split up

By LARRY SWISHER Times-News writer

BOISE — State education officials have appropriated a $5.5 million reduction in state spending for public schools among Idaho's 115 school districts.

"We have prepared our recommendations to go to the State Board of Education next week," Reed Bishop, associate state superintendent of public instruction, said Thursday. "If they act favorably, then we're going to certify those amounts to the counties for collection."

Bishop said he does not expect the state board "will find fault" with the figures. A 3 percent rollback in state appropriations was ordered by Gov. John Evans last week in order to meet a projected $12 million shortfall in revenues.

The state board is expected to certify the following reductions for the four largest school districts of the Magic Valley: Twin Falls, $169,535; Cassia County, $127,336; Minidoka County, $117,447; and Jerome, $66,955. These amounts must be collected by the counties for the school districts through property taxes, under state law governing revenue shortfalls, Bishop said.

However, school districts, even though they have already held public hearings and set their 1980-81 budgets,

State Board sets meeting, hearing

BOISE (UPI) — The State Board of Education will meet at Boise State University Monday through Wednesday for its annual budget request setting session, which this year also will include discussion on implementing a 3 percent spending cut.

On Monday, the meeting will begin with public hearings on two proposals: one to establish a uniform procedure for handling changes in the student fee or tuition structure, and the other to establish fiscal 1982 charges for non-resident, graduate, part-time or late registration students.

could elect to reduce their budgets and their property tax levies, he said.

State Rep. T.W. "Tom" Slivers, R-Twin Falls, asked the Twin Falls School Board to do just that in order not to cause additional local property taxes. Slivers said Thursday the district could lower its operation request amount equal to the shortfall.

"I'm going to pursue it," he said. "$169,000 is not that much of a heart-breaker."

Bishop said a provision in the law allows districts to adjust their budgets. They cannot increase the amount of local property taxes, but nothing prevents a decrease, he said.

Slivers said he planned to talk to the Twin Falls County Commissioners.

"I want to try to encourage them to have communication with the school district before we arbitrarily pass it on," he said. "Maybe we could agree amongst ourselves."

Budget modifications have to be published in legal notices to keep the public apprised, he said.

"The hold-back moneys must be collected. The county commissioners must collect what we certify," Bishop said. "Once that's done, the options on what a local district certifies, within the framework of their constraints, is their determination."

He said "activities in your community may trigger something," but that he would not try to guess whether that would be in response to Slivers' request, "other pressures brought to bear."

"Obviously, if these pressures are applied in Twin Falls and do take hold, they might be contagious," he said. "Decisions are made locally, that's the important point."

He defended the law that allows districts to budget for a contingency fund of 2.5 percent of $100,000, whichever is less.

"I don't think even the best of fiscal planners can, a year in advance, really anticipate what may come up," Bishop said.

Nuke Iran, they shout Angry Americans disrupt demonstration by Iranians

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Iranian demonstrators, crying "Long Live Khomeini," were surrounded by hundreds of jeering, flag-waving Americans who yelled "go home" and pelted them with eggs and tomatoes in a park near the White House Thursday. At one point, the crowd — estimated by police at from 600 to 900, gathered around a group of fewer than 300 Iranians — sang the "Star Spangled Banner." At another, shouts went up of "Nuke Iran."

Two Americans were arrested for throwing debris at the demonstrators.

In the end, one of the heaviest police security cordons seen here in years guided the demonstrators into four buses amid a cacophony of jeers and insults for the Iranians.

The rally and march were staged following the release from jail earlier this week of 192 Iranians who had been arrested during a violent July 27 protest march in Washington and taken to two prisons in New York.

About 100 of the Iranians returned to the nation's capital early Thursday after being held virtually hostage by angry, rock-throwing crowds in New York Tuesday night.

Thursday's demonstration in Washington was aimed at alleged police brutality during the July 27 arrests, and began at a mid-town park.

Police had to remove two American counter-protesters who sat down in front of the marchers Thursday as they began moving along a mile-long route through the white-collar business district to Lafayette Square across Pennsylvania Avenue from the White House.

A small but steadily growing band of Americans moved about 30 yards ahead of the Iranians — waving flags, chanting "U.S.A." and "Free our Hostages." Motorcycle police separated them from the Iranians, who marched four abreast.

"Long Live Khomeini," they shouted, raising their fists in the air with each chant.

"Death to Khomeini," the Americans, predominantly young, screamed back at the Ayatollah in anger.

Office workers, secretaries and businessmen lined the streets and cheered the American brigade as it passed and booed the Iranians, pelting some with crumpled paper bags, plastic cups and a few tomatoes and eggs.

Allen roars over Yucatan

MERIDIA, MEX. (AP) — Hurricane Allen, now the second strongest storm on record, raked the resort islands of Yucatan Thursday night and howled into the Gulf of Mexico with 175 mph winds on a wobbly path that threatened the coasts of Texas and northern Mexico.

Allen, which killed at least 83 people in its rampage through the Caribbean, spent a little of its awesome strength in a ferocious attack on the unpopulated jungles of the northeastern tip of Yucatan.

It drove some 2,600 tourists, most of them Europeans and Americans, from the plush hotels on Isla Mujeres and Cancun, whipping the beaches with 75 mph winds and 16-foot waves.

Preparations stepped up along the Gulf coast from Alabama to Texas. The mayor of Grande Isle, Louisiana's largest coastal resort, urged tourists to start north immediately so traffic would not bind up the only road out of the area.

There appeared to have been little

Hurricane is now the second worst on record (See page A2)

Immediate response Thursday night, however, and Mayor Wayne Gudry said "We've still got people coming to spend the weekend. They don't realize there's a hurricane."

At 9 p.m., the Miami Hurricane Center said, Allen's eye was about 100 miles from the tip of northeastern Yucatan, 640 miles from Brownsville, Tex., moving west-northwest at 18 mph.

Fee for use of state parks tentatively approved

BOISE (UPI) — The Idaho Parks and Recreation Board voted Thursday to charge a motorized-vehicle entrance fee at state parks — contingent upon the 1981 Legislature appropriating funds to operate the program.

All money collected under the program would be placed in a special fund to be used to improve state parks and recreation facilities.

The Governor's Management Task Force recommended a day-use fee to be implemented in Idaho's state parks as a means of getting users to pay a larger proportion of the upkeep of the parks.

The Parks and Recreation Board then left it up to department staff to come up with a plan to implement the fee.

Bill Dokken, chief of operations for the department, said there was "no way" to collect day-use fees from every individual that entered state parks as the task force intended.

"The question is how do we collect from walk-ins or people riding bicycles," Dokken said.

Under the proposal, a $1 daily fee would be charged for each vehicle entering a state park. A $10 annual pass also could be purchased.

Manned entrance stations would be installed at Farragut, Hells Gate, Ponderosa and Sandy Point state parks. He said the fee, if implemented, would not be charged in areas which did not have basic facilities such as picnic tables, barbecue grills and drinking water.

Board member Dale R. Christensen called the plan "the most reasonable approach" to implementing a user fee.

Dokken said the plan would cost nearly $151,000 to implement the first year, including $45,500 to construct manned entrance stations at four state parks and $18,000 to purchase 30 sticker vending machines at $60 each for the rest of the state parks.

He said the annual cost of the operation would be about $27,000 without allowing for increased salaries or inflation.

Board member Ernest Day said, "I've got grave misgivings about this thing ever taking care of the cost of operation."

Embassy, which has been handling Iran's affairs since President Carter ordered the Iranian Embassy closed, the newspaper said.

It also quoted sources as saying some of the money has been raised through the sale of hashish and heroin smuggled into the United States.

The money has been used to train, feed, recruit and support Iranians and Black American Muslims who have staged demonstrations in support of the regime of the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, the Post quoted sources as saying.

Allen 2nd worst storm ever recorded

By United Press International

Hurricanes, typhoons and cyclones are among nature's most devastating storms and Hurricane Allen is already in the record category.

Hurricane forecasters in Miami Thursday said Allen, a "category 5" hurricane, was the third most violent storm in its history of record keeping.

In the northern hemisphere of the world, a storm like Allen is a severe cyclone born over tropical waters where the counterclockwise direction of the wind has reached a speed of at least 74 mph.

In the western Pacific, such storms are known as typhoons, while in the Indian Ocean and around Australia they are called cyclones.

In the southern hemisphere, the storms are called cyclones. A "category 5" hurricane is the highest and hurricane forecasters said "Allen is the strongest hurricane ever observed in the western Atlantic Sea."

The third strongest Atlantic hurricane in modern records.

Other "category 5" hurricanes were Hurricane Camille in 1969 that devastated the Mississippi Gulf Coast and the "Labor Day Storm" that ripped the Florida Keys in 1935.

Records keeping only goes back to the late 1900s.

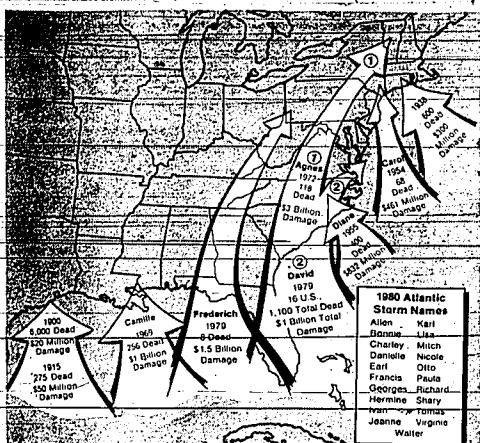

The worst such storm in modern times occurred in 1970 when the newly independent nation of Bangladesh was struck by a cyclone. Official estimates that 300,000 people died from the storm.

In the United States, the highest death toll ever was from a hurricane that roared into Galveston, Texas on Sept. 8, 1900. Six-thousand people died from the hurricane that had no name because a naming system had not yet been introduced.

Since Camille, there had been a relative 10 year respite from hurricanes in the U.S. although Elsie killed 71 people in 1975 in a path through the Caribbean and this country.

But 1976 saw an end to the respite with the arrivals of David, that slashed up Florida's east coast and the Atlantic states, followed by Frederic that blasted ashore near Mobile, Ala., shortly after David.

David claimed 3,000 lives and caused $2 billion in damage but was not as intense as Allen. Frederic claimed 16 lives and caused $750 million in property damage.

Allen has yet to match the devastation of earlier storms

Survey shows few blacks receiving public assistance

NEW YORK—Some 70 percent of all unemployed blacks never receive jobless benefits, the National Urban League reports. In a study entitled "The Myth of Income Cushions for Blacks," the league also has reported that:

- Fifty-six percent of all black households with incomes of less than $8,000 received no welfare benefits.
- Fifty-one percent of those black heads of households who do receive welfare (General Assistance or Aid to Families with Dependent Children) have no Medicaid coverage.

The report is based on initial findings of the Urban League's Black Pulse Survey of 3,000 households nationwide. One-third of the respondents had incomes of less than $8,000—the nation's poverty level.

The Black Pulse survey also found that 24 percent of black heads of households were unemployed even before the onset of the current recession, according to a report released Saturday.

Protest

By the time the protesters reached Lafayette Square, tourists, counter-protesters and lunchtime picknickers joined in an angry, curious crowd about four times the size of the group they surrounded.

Some climbed the walls, waving a beat and threw soft drinks at pictures of the ayatollah amid cheers, shouting, "Go back home," and yelling obscenities while police set up a protective barrier with motorcycles and horses around the Iranians.

Many of the Iranians were Muslim name tags, perhaps to point up the fact that those arrested July 27 were held until they finally agreed to give themselves back names.

The release of the Iranians Tuesday also threatened to blow up into a major controversy.

The Justice Department — in a report to the president — Thursday defended the decision to release the 192 Iranian protesters, insisting that there was "no deal struck" to free them.

However, Secretary of State Edmund Muskie told a Los Angeles news conference U.S. officials did give some thought — but not serious consideration — to the possibility of using the jailed Iranian students in New York as a "quid pro quo" for the American hostages.

But, he warned, "holding hostages here would be a form of endorsing Iran's holding our hostages."

In New York 50 Immigration and Naturalization Service investigators in New York staged a "sick-in" to protest that the Iranians were prematurely released.

INS agents complained to reporters that they could not conduct proper visa checks on the demonstrators before their release Tuesday from two New York jails.

White House spokesman Jody Powell said President Carter sought the report to confirm that the protesters adequately notified themselves before being released and to check whether "standard procedures were followed."

INS spokesman Yvonne Jervis all the students' identities were checked with INS records and most of their schools were checked to ensure they are properly enrolled.

The Justice Department, in a summary of its report to the White House, noted the INS maintains a special index of Iranian students following a registration program conducted late last year.

Earthquake hits Alaska

MOUNT MCKINLEY NATIONAL PARK, Alaska (UPI) — A sharp earthquake lasting about 10 seconds jolted Mount McKinley National Park Thursday, but no injuries were reported.

A spokesman at the Tsunami Warning Center at Palmer, Alaska, said the quake, with an epicenter 4 miles southwest of Healy Fork, measured 5.4 on the Richter scale.

Belgium Drants autonomy

BRUSSELS, Belgium (UPI) — The Belgian Parliament overwhelmingly granted limited autonomy Thursday to French-speaking Wallonia and Dutch-speaking Flanders, ending a 10-year struggle by the ethnically distinct regions for self-rule.

The vote creates regional assemblies that will answer to regional executives on policies affecting cultural, physical and political matters.

Carter won't free delegates

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter will under no circumstances release his delegates to the Democratic National Convention — even if he wins a key battle over convention rules, a top Carter political aide said Thursday night.

"We are not going to release our delegates," said Hamilton Jordan, deputy chairman of the Carter-Mondale campaign committee.

Hostage freed, suspect held

HOUSTON (UPI) — A man trapped by police in the driveway of a bank president's home held a gun to the head of the banker's 9-year-old son for more than an hour Thursday while negotiating for a ransom and then surrendered without harming anyone.

Police said Frederick Robbins, 22, who posed for a time as a non-English speaking Oriental, "just got frustrated" and gave up to the SWAT team officers who blocked his escape. He was jailed pending charges.

Helicopter crash kills 13

HOUMA, La. (UPI) — A fully loaded oilfield helicopter crashing workers from an offshore drilling rig because of the threat of Hurricane Allen crashed in the Gulf of Mexico with 13 people aboard, the Coast Guard said Thursday.

Four bodies were recovered. There were no signs of survivors and little hope for any of the remaining passengers or the pilot, the Coast Guard said.

Guards busted for marijuana

NEWINGTON, N.H. (UPI) — In the biggest drug crackdown ever at Pease Air Force Base, 33 security guards were charged with smoking marijuana, 19 of them while guarding highly sophisticated aircraft and other equipment, officials said Thursday. Air Force officials have refused to say if the accused were guarding nuclear-armed aircraft at the time.

Money

Justice Department sources told UPI any Iranians who receive money from the Khomeini government are required by law to register as foreign agents (as Billy Carter was forced to do) and, if they are U.S. residents, must report it as income.

At the State Department, spokesman David Passage said officials had checked at the "senior levels" with other federal agencies concerned with illicit funds from Iran paying for protests in the United States.

"We do not have anything to substantiate these reports," he said. Meanwhile, on Capitol Hill, Rep. Kent Hance, D-Texas, called for a full congressional investigation into possible subversive actions by Iranian students and organizations which may be backed by the Iranian government.

Hance urged the House Judiciary and Foreign Affairs Committees to investigate.

"The demonstrations which are openly in favor of the downfall of the United States and backed by the Khomeini government of Iran, which presently holds 52 American hostages."

"Official connections of Iranian students, residing in the United States, with the government of Iran."

"Possible connections of Iranian students with drug trafficking in the United States."

"Sources from which the demonstrators are receiving their financial backing for such apparatus, well-organized demonstrations; just well organized this apparent subversive group is; what their long and short term objectives are."

UPI Weather Photocast

Summer is returning to Idaho. A slow but steady warming trend will bring above-normal temperatures to the state by early next week. This will be the result of a buildup of high pressure over the northwest as a low weakens and moves out.

Some showers formed in northern Idaho Thursday and a few developed along the southern border, but precipitation amounts were extremely light. Most afternoon temperatures were in the 70s and 80s with the warmest 82 degrees at Malad. On Thursday morning, August 7, the coolest but most minimum readings ranged from the 30s into the 50s, with the warmest readings in eastern sections.

Elsewhere in the nation Thursday, Gila Bend, Ariz., reported the hottest temperature, 118 degrees. The coolest was 36 at West Yellowstone.

Good curing conditions appear in prospect for hay in the Magic Valley through Tuesday, with mostly dry temperatures warming to near or above seasonal normals and moderate morning dew. Pan evaporation is forecast at .38 inch today and Saturday. Winds will increase to 5 to 10 mph by noon.

Kennedy readies final effort

NEW YORK (UPI) — Sen. Edward Kennedy Thursday launched his final uphill drive for the nomination, boosted by a new poll showing Democrats rank him almost even with President Carter as their choice for president.

Almost since he declared last fall, Kennedy has trailed Carter badly in the polls and just last month he was behind, the president, 60-34 percent. But a new Gallup poll showed he has narrowed the gap to 47-43 percent.

And in more bad news for the president, the poll showed 58 percent of the Democrats polled want someone other than Carter to be the nominee. In addition it showed 55 percent now favor the "open convention" Kennedy has been pushing.

The poll was taken before Carter's Monday night television appearance in which he explained details of his brother Billy's dealings with the Libyans.

Kennedy picked Sen. George McGovern to lead his troops on the convention floor against the so-called "faithful delegate" rule.

As the first delegates began arriving in advance of Monday's convention opening, Carter forces labored in Washington to keep their troops in line. Carter, his wife Rosalynn, Vice President Walter Mondale and dozens and dozens of campaign workers telephoned hundreds of delegates. Kennedy was scheduled to arrive at the convention Friday and planned a round of campaign-style handshaking and speechmaking designed to give him maximum political visibility during the pre-convention activity.

TED KENNEDY
... new poll boosts hopes

While most surveys showed Carter has the delegate votes to do whatever he wants at the convention, the Kennedy camp claimed they were within 50 to 100 votes of blocking the controversial rule binding delegates to the candidate they were elected to support.

Kennedy will break with tradition and address the convention Tuesday night as part of the debate on the economic planks of the party platform.

Candidates do not normally address a convention before the nominating ballot, although ultimate winner Adlai Stevenson gave a stirring speech opening the 1962 convention in Chicago and William Jennings Bryan gave his famous "Cross of Gold" speech before winning the nomination in 1896.

The rule binding the delegates will be the first major item the convention will take up on prime time Monday night.

McGovern, the 1972 Democratic candidate, was tapped by Kennedy to lead the fight against the rule. The South Dakota senator said there would be a vigorous battle but added, "Once that nomination is decided the rest of the Democrats will get behind (the nominee), in my judgment. In a related development, Sheet Metal Workers' President Edward Carlucho asked delegates to refrain from signing binding nominating petitions for either Carter or Kennedy in order to keep open the possibility of another alternative candidate.

Even though Secretary of State Edmund Muskie told reporters he wanted to "take myself out" of speculation and "I am interested in no other office," a week-old draft-Muskie group said it has decided to expand its unauthorized, exploratory effort into a full campaign to nominate him.

King Golden, the San Diego lawyer who heads the Draft Muskie Committee, said "Delegate after delegate has told us that Secretary Muskie would not only unite a divided Democratic Party, but is probably the only candidate who could."

Carter will probably not go to the convention until Wednesday, spending the next few days at his Camp David retreat.

If all goes according plan, Carter will deliver his acceptance speech Thursday night and fly back to Camp David on Friday to relax for several days. Carter has been working on his acceptance speech and has been telephoning delegates from lists given him by the Carter-Mondale Committee.

Billy linked to lobbyist

CHICAGO (UPI) — The White House failed to turn over to Senate investigators information that may link Billy Carter with a lobbyist who is under indictment for racketeering, the Chicago Tribune reported Thursday.

The Tribune quoted deputy press secretary Ray Jenkins as confirming that lawyers who prepared the White House report on Billy and his ties to Libya discovered there may have been business contacts between the president's brother and the lobbyist before Billy made his first trip to Libya.

But, he said, the lawyers did not think the information was within the scope of the Senate investigation.

Study claims growing foreign investments threaten security

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A new congressional study of foreign investments in the United States are growing at an alarming rate and the Treasury Department may be hiding information about certain OPEC investments in America.

The study, being released by a House Government Operations subcommittee, reports the United States may be the world's largest host to foreign investors — or, at the least, second to Canada.

The investments could threaten the national security and the stability of the domestic economy, it says.

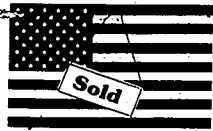

The report estimates the total value of foreign-owned or influenced businesses and property in the United States at the end of 1978 at about $350 billion, double the 1974 rate.

"Increased foreign investment in this country constitutes more than a threat to our economy," subcommittee chairman Benjamin Rosenthal, D-N.Y., charged.

"It may well jeopardize our self-sufficiency and security."

The report also charged, "The Treasury is 'hiding out' a secret agreement — between the United States and Saudi Arabia and Kuwait which prevents disclosure or even interagency sharing of Middle East OPEC investment country investments in the United States."

A Treasury Department spokesman had no comment, but said the department is reviewing the report.

The subcommittee's report said the Treasury Department refused to furnish OPEC investment data to a federal ad hoc committee in connection with examining the possible withdrawal of Iranian assets from the United States.

The report, following two years of research and 10 days of public hearings, concluded that, contrary to administration claims that foreign investment is good for the economy, it may contribute to inflation because foreign bids for land drive up real estate and farm prices.

Foreign investment also fails to produce promised new jobs since foreign investors usually acquire existing profitable U.S. companies rather than build new manufacturing facilities, it said.

The report also noted "some of the best known companies in America are foreign owned," listing Korvettes, A&P, Shell Oil, Clorox, Hardens, Baskin Robbins and Timex, among others.

Cloning accident re-opens debate over gene-splicing

LA JOLLA, Calif. (UPI) — A laboratory mixup by a scientist trying to clone genetic material that could be used to fight disease resulted in the production of a more dangerous virus, a university monitoring official said Thursday.

But there was never any danger to the public, said Dr. Gordon Gill, chairman of the scientific activities watchdog committee at the University of California-San Diego.

The unexpected investigation by the National Institutes of Health in Washington and a university biosafety committee which are trying to decide what to do with the material produced in the lab of Dr. Ian Kennedy.

Kennedy, a well-known virologist whose area of specialty covers both the virus he thought he was producing and the one mistakenly created, was ordered to stop work on the project last July after the mistake was discovered.

He apparently thought he was working with one kind of virus — called sindbis, a Class-2 agent with a risk potential similar to rubella and polio — but what was actually being produced was semliki, a closely related Class-3 virus with a risk potential similar to yellow fever and smallpox.

At the time he began the work, the cloning of Class-3 agents was banned by the NIH. The ban was lifted last week but the effect of that action on Kennedy's work was not clear.

The incident could be the first such violation of the federal government's guidelines on cloning and recombinant DNA research, which were promulgated during a furious public debate on the morality and dangers of cloning.

Kennedy said he was pursuing the possibility of constructing an anti-viral gene that could be used to fight the sindbis virus.

Don't overreact to Iranian protests

The latest Iranian turmoil — on U.S. soil — threatens not only to explode into something ugly, but could be the catalyst for taking reprisals against U.S. hostages held in Tehran.

We're speaking of the demonstrations and hunger strikes being undertaken by Iranians in this country to show support for the Ayatollah Khomeini and protest U.S. policy. Thursday those demonstrations came within an eyelash of developing into a mob scene as anti-demonstrators taunted and confronted Iranians in Washington.

Adding to these developments are the controversy of jailing and then releasing 192 Iranians who demonstrated earlier in Washington and an unconfirmed report by the Washington Post that the Khomeini regime has funneled $5 million into the U.S. to fund anti-U.S. demonstrations.

Questionable judgment in the Carter administration arose again Thursday when Secretary of State Edmund Muskie indicated Washington at first considered holding the jailed Iranians as counter-hostages to those 52 Americans still imprisoned in Tehran. That could have been disastrous, given the fanatical and completely unpredictable Khomeini regime. Besides, as Muskie later admitted, for the U.S. to join Iran in hostage-taking would drag this country down into the same gutter.

As long as the U.S. continues to mishandle the situation and give the Iranian protesters TV air time (as ABC has done), the Khomeini regime can use such news stories as reasons to whip up frenzied supporters in Iran. It only drives the hostage situation further away from being resolved.

Dissident Iranians have the right to protest in this country. They have the right to speak their mind and to fast, if that is their choice. But they cannot break any laws or have their protests disrupt or endanger the lives of American citizens.

We fear, however, that if such demonstrations continue, the backlash will grow in intensity and if law enforcement officials do not keep a leash on the proceedings, a tragedy will occur. What will happen to the American hostages — if Iranian blood is spilled in Washington or New York?

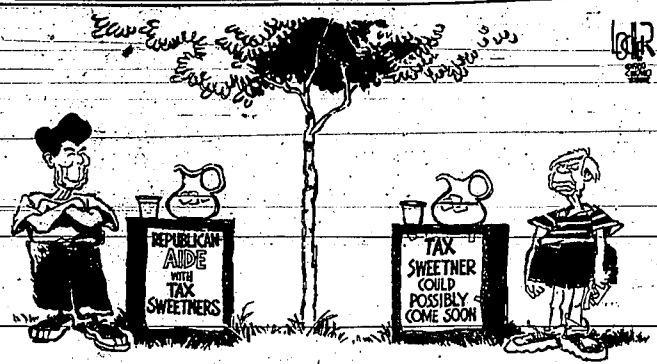

We're as fed up with Iran and protesting Iranians as anyone, but this is one more test of American restraint. We must guard not to overreact, while maintaining law and order a fine line to walk, but it must be done.

Getting green light

It is welcome news indeed that Twin Falls will get its full federal grant to modify its troubled sewer plant.

The Environmental Protection Agency said Wednesday it will fund 75 percent of the project, meaning the entire project can proceed. If the bid process is carried out as expected later this month and EPA drops its lawsuit against the city as promised, we should at last see some light at the end of the tunnel.

Our hope now is that the project can get off the drawing board and that further delays can be avoided. Twin Falls has waited a long time for this process — too long — but it looks like the corner finally has been turned.

A family injustice

Two parents, who have neither abused nor neglected their son, have temporarily lost their right to make decisions for their boy, for reasons that are blatantly political.

If it happened to an American family in the Soviet Union, it would be a scandal.

It is equally difficult to determine what is best for the boy. There are psychological terrors as well as exhilarations for a child who "wins" such an early and terminal battle with his parents.

There is nothing that any of us would find in the current situation to justify the state's interference.

Psychiatrist Allen Stone, who teaches family law at Harvard, had very much the same reaction. "This is a case outside the range of what family law and family courts ought to be doing. The notion that they would interfere in an ongoing, intact family, boggles the mind. It just boggles the mind."

The fact is that we have given much more weight to this Ukrainian boy's testimony than to any American boy of the same age. We have given their parents' views much less weight, because they want him to return with them to the Soviet Union.

But it is almost impossible to assess the boy's own frame of mind and what he, a 12-year-old who more likely likes the ice cream and bicycles of America? There is lots of food here," he said. "You can buy many things, and I liked school. It is like so many of his age, testing the limits, tasting his first tidbits of rebellion? Or can he be mature enough to choose political freedom above family?"

But our laws assume (except in rare instances) that the parent is the best judge of the state of mind, the needs and the future of the child. Whether we approve or not, we do not interfere unless there have been proven faults.

No matter what fantasies we have about rescuing Walter Polovchak, no matter how certain we are that his parents are wrong, we can't have two standards of law — one for Americans and one for Soviet immigrants.

In a Chicago courtroom on Aug. 4, Judge Joseph Mooney ruled that the boy should remain in the custody of the state, and the care of his aunt and uncle, for five more weeks. But his intention is clearly to reunite this family, whatever the political consequences. And he is right.

The irony is that we criticize, even denounce, the behavior of the state in the Soviet Union, the way it interferes in private lives. We pride ourselves on being different, pride ourselves on protecting the integrity of the family from the state. But in the case of Walter Polovchak we very nearly lost that difference.

School prayer, again

© Universal Press Syndicate The issue of prayer in the public schools has bubbled up again.

I wish it would stay submerged. Nothing more can be gained in this field by another battle over the mechanisms of law, the nature of religion, and the separation of church and state.

Nevertheless, a subcommittee of House Judiciary once more is embroiled in the question. What is known as the Helms Amendment is at the Helms Amendment's heart is a bill pulled off by the senior senator from North Carolina, Republican Jesse Helms, the Senate already has passed the bill.

Members of the House are approaching a potentially tough roll call: How do you stand on God? To be recorded against God this summer is not the happiest of all prospects on Capitol Hill.

To be sure, that is not exactly what a vote on the Helms Amendment would require, but that is how many folks back home would see it. The Helms Amendment would forbid the Supreme Court from hearing any case involving the issue of prayer in a public school or public building. The effect would be to leave the matter in the hands of the state.

To contend, as the Department of Justice is contending, that the Helms Amendment is unconstitutional strikes me as nonsense. The Constitution expressly authorizes Congress to create exceptions to the court's appellate jurisdiction. That the authority has been exercised only once in our history — and doubtfully exercised at that in the McCauley case of 1889 — is interesting but irrelevant. Congress can put the court out of the prayer business if Congress wishes.

But the Helms Amendment, if not demonstrably unconstitutional, strikes me as lamentably unwise. The senator's purpose, in the end, is to encourage state laws specifically sanctioning "voluntary" prayers in public schools. Given the implicit authority of a teacher in a classroom situation, it is hard to conceive a "voluntary" group action. In their first class of the morning, do the children observe one minute of silence? In these 60 seconds, do some children pray while others do their four-times tables? What is the point of it all?

This is the fundamental issue, and it is one the religious fundamentalists seem not to grasp. Their altogether commendable purpose is to imbue our school children with values higher than exponential numbers. Their thought is that school prayer will help to make better citizens.

But is that thought valid? The proposition is exceedingly doubtful, for the prayers contemplated by the senator are bound by their very nature to be little more than ritual prayers, perfunctory prayers — the kind of prayers denounced in Matthew 6:5-6. There we are instructed not to pray as hypocrites, standing in the streets that they may be seen of men, but rather to pray within the closed closed doors of our homes and hearts. "In this matter, as in so many others, we ought to do our best to separate form from substance. In the intensely personal area of man's relationship to his God, surely we should discourage exercises in empty form. Unhappily, such exercises abound. "God save this honorable court," cries the bailiff. The bored invocation may satisfy the demands of tradition; it has nothing to do with prayer. In the famous case of Engel vs. Vitale, the New York Regents had decreed the recital of this prayer: "Almighty God, we acknowledge our dependence upon Thee, and we beg Thy blessings upon us, our parents, our teachers and our country." The teacher (or a pupil) was to lead the prayer; no student was compelled to take part. The Supreme Court held the procedure unconstitutional. "It is no part of the business of government to compose official prayers for any group of the American people to recite as a part of a religious program carried on by government."

That was sound law when the case was decided 18 years ago, and it is sound law today. Let us cling fiercely to our First Amendment right freely to exercise our religion — but let us not let our religious fervor blind us to the innocuous public prayers, or a moment of purposeless silence, as an honest exercise of religion. If we are to teach our children to walk humbly in the sight of God, we had better seek a more effective means than tokenism in the classroom.

Market debuts

Editor, Times-News: Re: Farmer's Markets, Blaine County. The Saturday morning Farmers Markets start this week (Aug. 9) in front of the Blaine County Courthouse in Hailey.

We are sorry about the Times-News' wrong date last week. The markets are scheduled to open at 8 a.m., and farmers who are bringing their extra-fruits and vegetables to sell are encouraged to arrive early. Use your trucks or set up a stand. If you are driving quite a distance, perhaps you could get a neighbor to share with you.

Those of us who are planning this year's market would like to keep it a genuine Farmers Market with Idaho-grown produce. It seems this area has never had a local outdoor farmers market, where the farmers sell direct to the consumers. Everyone is welcome. Come see what it's all about.

So far, we've received word there will be a good variety of produce coming in from gardens all around, and of course, there'll be more as the growing season progresses. Length of individual markets — and of season — depend on the weather. We feel there is a demand for the Farmers Market here, and the consumers will soon show the truth of that statement.

Parents and consumers will be able to exchange ideas and suggestions. Also, the Rebekah Lodge of Bellevue will have a bake sale alongside the market Aug. 9.

Those who are bringing their fruits and vegetables to market are requested to park on the curbside of

First Avenue in front of the courthouse. It would be sincerely appreciated if the shoppers would park around the corners on side streets.

More room will be needed as the market grows, and it's best not to have any motor traffic in the market block. The Hailey mayor and police have helped with the market location.

A few added suggestions are: Bring your jackets, it's deliciously cool up here in the mornings.

Sell by piece instead of weight. If you are from the Hailey-Ketchum area, check local weeklies for further information. Plan to come early. Also, we could use some more volunteer helpers. Thanks.

We look forward to seeing you. THEO BIRD, chairman, Farmers Market Committee, Hailey

Bill in Congress paves way for more overseas sales

WASHINGTON — Northwest banks and the region's companies with potential export sales would gain significant impetus to explore overseas markets under the Export Trading Company Act of 1980, which has a 50-50 chance of becoming law before the 96th Congress ends.

Sponsored by Rep. Don Bonker, D-Wash., the bill would give to American companies the kinds of advantages now enjoyed by aggressive Japanese, European and Korean trading companies.

It is by no means certain that the bill will become law by Oct. 4, when Congress is scheduled to adjourn. However, even those congressmen who are skeptical of the bill seem to favor altering U.S. law as it governs exports. Implied in its advocates' arguments is the viewpoint that the U.S. must imitate the more successful Japanese and Germans when it comes to government policy toward companies with export potential.

Bonker's bill has cleared the House Foreign Affairs Committee and is now being examined by the House Judiciary Committee. Rep. Al Ullman, D-Ore., chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, has written the House Speaker requesting referral of the bill to his committee.

The Senate version, sponsored by Sen. Adlai Stevenson, D-Ill., is in the Senate Banking Committee, where chairman William Proxmire, D-Wisc., is skeptical. The Carter Administration supports the Stevenson version of the bill except for the level of federal funding for trade promotion which it calls for.

Northwesterners are probably largely unaware of the considerable foreign commerce which already feeds their region's economy. In 1976, the last year for which statistics are available, the Commerce Department reported that Washington state ranked eighth among states for manufactured exports and Oregon ranked 29th. In agricultural exports, Washington state ranked 18, Idaho ranked 28 and Oregon 32.

As service industries and lightweight manufacturing companies increasingly locate in Oregon, Washington and Idaho, because of their livability, and as Northwest businessmen develop a better perception of the Orient and Southeast Asia as an export market, the region's export sector is bound to develop.

Current U.S. policy toward companies which export is set out in the Webb-Pomerene Act, which suspends anti-trust regulations only for associations of exporting manufacturing companies, not for associations of firms engaged in export of services. The Export Trading Company Act would extend that anti-trust exemption to associations engaged in export of services.

The bill would also transfer licensing of export trading associations from the Federal Trade Commission to the Commerce Department, which would presumably maintain more of a "monopolistic attitude toward" exports, rather than the FTC's adversarial attitude regarding the anti-trust potential of associations engaged in exports. In the Senate version, however, the Justice Department would have 60 days to challenge a company's export license on anti-trust grounds.

Another carrot in the bill is that export associations would be eligible for so-called "DISC status" (deferred income sales corporation), by which their revenues from export sales could be deferred from corporate income taxes. This part of the legislation bothers Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. Says Church aide, "Church has strong reservations about DISCs. In a foreign relations context, it's been noted that they do not generate exports, but are merely used as tax dodges."

The extent to which banks would be allowed to participate in trading associations bothers Proxmire and Rep. Fernando St. Germain, D-R.I., chairman of the House Financial Institutions Subcommittee. The Bank Holding Company Act prohibits banks from participating in commercial enterprises such as export trading companies.

Proponents of the bill say that banks, with their extensive international trading networks are essential to a successful U.S. export strategy. They say that building export markets demands considerable financing support.

"In Japan, export companies are the tool of the banks," comments an observer. "This represents a tremendous amount of business for the banks. Trading companies end up owning operations and assets, with the banks participating." Rep. Les AuCoin, D-Ore., who introduced a version of the Export Trading Company Act and who sits on the House Banking Committee, says, "I don't have the hang-up about banks. My version would have limited total bank membership in associations. I think you've got to involve banks to use their trading network. To exclude banks is to say that we put business on the head and send them abroad to do a good job."

In order to get a referral to the House Foreign Affairs Committee, of which he is a member and subcommittee chairman, AuCoin's weaker sponsor, Rep. Bill Bonner, strongly referred to the House Judiciary Committee, but the House Banking Committee is left out, and that has increased the tactical importance of the skepticism of Rep. St. Germain, who shares some of Proxmire's skepticism about banks involvement.

Bonker is frank to admit that his sponsorship of the Export Trading Company Bill was a conscious attempt to shade the anti-export image he felt he was acquiring because of his attempts to tighten the loopholes in federal export policy. He points out that the Export Trading Company Act would be a good vehicle for Northwest lumber companies with ambitions to export finished products to the Orient.

AuCoin predicts that the bill will not fly this year, but that a re-done bill will succeed next year. "I'm not sure it will go this year," AuCoin says. "Foreign Affairs (Committee) thought they could push it. I think it's very doubtful it can pass without Banking (Committee) in on it. Let's start over and bring St. Germain into the picture."

If the Congress does restructure U.S. export policy towards business associations, the Northwest — with its proximity to the Orient and Far East and its strong manufacturing sectors — should be among the prime regional beneficiaries.

Crime soars as police stay on strike

MANSFIELD, Ohio (UPI) — Thieves plundered stores and businesses Thursday, keeping a handful of police officers working around the clock in the third day of a strike by the city's 81-man police force.

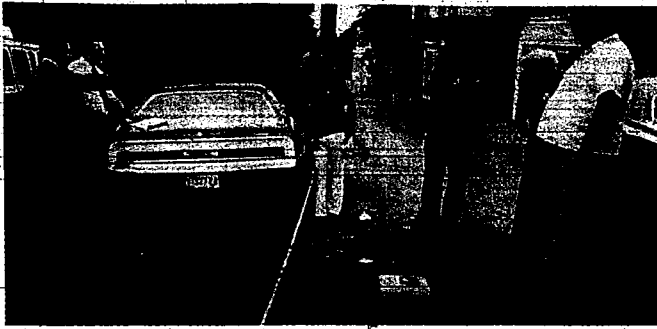

"We had numerous burglaries and robberies all Wednesday night and early today (Thursday)," said Capt. Wayne Carr. "I would say it is double what we normally have." But "it's pretty quiet right now."

Carr, Police Chief Matthew Benick and several other officers are the only police on duty. However, Carr said he could not give out the exact number.

About two dozen businesses were robbed or burglarized late Wednesday and early Thursday. One burglar was shot and wounded by police as he left a store.

A photographer said he saw several people break into a grocery store and another small group break into a warehouse and remove cases of soft drinks.

The strike was called after police would to repeat an agreement with the Fraternal Order of Police to enter into binding arbitration on contract matters.

The entire street police force of Mansfield, Ohio, meet at the scene of a shooting UPI

Negotiations between the police and the city continued Thursday. Negotiators said progress had been made on non-economic issues and that the two sides were not far apart on money matters. Police Tuesday padlocked the city building with handcuffs and barricaded the parking lot with their personal cars.

Sailor acquitted as lesbian

LONG BEACH, Calif. (UPI) — The first of eight women sailors accused of lesbian behavior aboard a missile test ship was exonerated Thursday by a Navy disciplinary board that listened to four days of testimony about her sex life.

The three-member board said no credible evidence existed that Petty Officer 3d Class Tangela Gaskins, 25, of Newark, N.J., was a homosexual (which is forbidden by the Navy) and recommended she be retained in the Navy.

Miss Gaskins, the mother of an 8-year-old son and one of three black women accused of lesbian acts aboard the USS Norton Sound, collapsed in tears in the arms of her attorney when she heard the verdict.

McGreivoy of the American Civil Liberties Union. She then rushed out of the cramped hearing room aboard the ship to call her boyfriend and mother with the news of her acquittal.

Miss Gaskins took the stand in her own defense Thursday morning.

"I strongly resent the Navy's investigation," she said. "I do not intend to expose my private sex life anymore than has come out, but I feel a denial is in order."

Asked by her attorney if she was a homosexual, Miss Gaskins told the panel, "No, I am not."

Miss Gaskins' boyfriend, Kevin Ruth, 21, of Long Beach, testified Wednesday that he had a normal sexual relationship with the woman and that he planned to marry her.

12-year-old seeking asylum

Polovchak will stay at relatives

WALTER POLOVCHAK ...wants freedom more than parents UPI

CHICAGO (UPI) — A judge Thursday delayed a hearing on temporary placement of Walter Polovchak, 12, and his 17-year-old sister, Natalie, who are waging a court fight to avoid returning to the Soviet Union with their parents.

The American Civil Liberties Union, representing the children's parents, requested the hearing in a move to have the children transferred to a neutral foster family. Circuit Judge Joseph Mooney delayed the hearing to Aug. 15.

The Polovchak children are in temporary custody of their aunt and uncle, Demetri and Maria Gusiev. But ACLU attorney Richard Lifshitz sought to change foster families, saying Gusiev made comments that indicate he may try to influence the children against their parents.

A spokeswoman for the Illinois Department of Children and Family Services told the court Thursday the department had not had time to interview families who are able to care for the boy.

Mooney delayed the hearing to give the state more time, though he indicated he thought publicly surrounding the case made it unlikely the DCFS would find a neutral home.

Mooney Monday placed the children in the care of their aunt and uncle pending a permanent custody trial, scheduled for September. The children had been staying with a cousin.

The ACLU is representing the Polovchaks in their attempt to have Walter and Natalie returned to them so the entire family can move back to the Soviet Ukraine.

Cameraman testifies at Death to Klan trial

GREENSBORO, N.C. (UPI) — A television cameraman testified Thursday of the confused scene where five communists were gunned down just before the start of a "Death to the Klan" rally last Nov. 3.

Cameraman George Vaughn, the first witness to testify at the trial of six Klansmen and Nazis charged in the shooting, said he saw shots being fired into the air and men running around in apparent panic, brandishing pistols.

But Vaughn, a cameraman for WHP-TV, did not say he saw anyone actually shot during the confrontation between the KKK, Nazis and members of the Communist Workers Party.

He said he saw shots fired into the air, a man pointing a pistol with both hands and another man being clubbed over the head and falling to the ground.

"I saw a man run from from the edge of the street and run out to a green sedan-type car," Vaughn said. "I saw a puff of smoke. The man turned around and ran pell-mell across the street."

"A hand came out of its (the car's) window with a long-barreled pistol and fired up into the air. A man got out of the car, started screaming something and fired several shots into the air," Vaughn said.

Five members of the CWP died in the shooting, which occurred when a caravan of Klansmen and Nazis drove to the site of a CWP-sponsored anti-Klan march.

The six men on trial are each charged with murder and felonious rioting. They are Klansmen Jerry Paul Smith, 32, of Malden, N.C.; Coleman Blake Primm, 32, of Winston-Salem; Lawrence Gene Morgan, 27, of Lincoln; and David Wayne Matthews, 24, of Newton; and Nazis Jack Wilson Fowler Jr., 27, and Robert Wayne Wood, 34, both of Winston-Salem.

Justice authorizes special investigator of Billy probe

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Justice Department Thursday gave an internal investigator the same powers as an independent "special counsel" to probe Attorney General Benjamin Civiletti's handling of the Billy Carter investigation.

Michael Shaheen, head of the department's Office of Professional Responsibility, will have authority to convene a grand jury and subpoena witnesses under an order signed by Acting Attorney General Charles Rehn.

The order was issued the day after a revelation that the attorney general received intelligence information saying Billy Carter might accept payments from the Libyans, but withheld it from investigators for nearly two months.

Civiletti defended the decision, saying the information was highly sensitive and he wanted to protect the source. He said he advised Assistant Attorney General Philip Heymann not to close the Billy Carter probe without first seeing the intelligence.

Civiletti's decision began to draw some fire Thursday. Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., a member of a Senate panel investigating the Billy Carter affair, charged Civiletti may have "deliberately obstructed justice" by his delay in telling investigators Billy was getting Libyan funds.

Shaheen, already investigating possible obstruction of justice by the nation's top law enforcement officer, was understood to have expanded the probe to include three elements:

"Civiletti's disclosure, after two weeks of denials, that he discussed the Billy Carter case briefly with President Carter on June 17 and advised the president he thought his brother was 'foolish' for failing to register as a Libyan agent. Civiletti also said he told Carter it was unlikely his brother would be criminally prosecuted if he registered."

The possibility someone tipped off Billy Carter that the Justice Department had learned he accepted payments from the Libyans. On June 14, just days after investigators first learned Billy Carter had accepted $220,000 from the Libyan government, Billy requested a meeting the next day. At that interview, he admitted when pressed that he had taken money from Libya.

The entire department's handling of the case, which resulted in the July 14 filing of a court consent decree under which Billy registered as a Libyan agent. There have been questions about delays in the case and whether the department should have convened a grand jury and possibly sought an indictment of the president's brother for his Libyan ties.

Some Justice Department officials noted Civiletti delayed delivery of the information to investigators at the height of the Democratic primaries. Eventually, after Lisker turned up evidence of the payments to Billy Carter from other sources, Civiletti gave him access to the intelligence documents.

Ex-Nazi's primary victory stuns GOP

LANSING, Mich. (UPI) — An ex-Nazi who once led a letter-writing campaign saying blacks should be banned from two Detroit suburbs has stunned Michigan's Republican hierarchy by winning a GOP congressional primary.

Disarrayed GOP regulars said Thursday they would give no support to self-described white supremacist Gerald Carlsson, the GOP nominee in the 15th District.

"Party leaders said they would urge 15th District voters to write in James Caygill, the loser of the GOP primary.

"We were stunned," said GOP 15th Congressional District chairwoman Pat Gansberger.

She said the party's strategy of downplaying Carlsson's Nazi background to avoid giving him "notoriety" apparently had backfired.

She said Republicans will stage a strong Caygill write-in campaign against Carlsson in November. The party did not support Carlsson during his primary campaign and disavows any connection with him. Carlsson got 3,759 votes to Caygill's

3,037 votes in Tuesday's Republican primary. Incumbent Rep. William Ford, running unopposed in the Democratic primary, collected 21,921 votes and is a shoo-in for re-election in November.

The 15th district is comprised of several working class suburbs of Detroit.

Carlsson was unavailable for comment but has been quoted as saying he "lived in clear and orderly European cities and realized that the Negroes are the main cause of our degeneration."

He belonged to the National States Rights Party, the Ku Klux Klan, the John Birch Society and the American Independent Party before joining an area Nazi group. He left the Nazis and formed his own splinter group, the National Christian Democratic Party, in 1970.

Local GOP officials first became aware of Carlsson when he began playing a taped telephone message advocating the banning of blacks from the suburbs of Dearborn and Dearborn Heights. The phone line has since been disconnected.

Ears play curse

Princess backs actor O'Toole

LONDON (UPI) — Princess Margaret appeared at the Old Vic Theater Thursday to encourage star Peter O'Toole who is intensely superstitious about the curse he believes — haunts — productions of Shakespeare's "Macbeth."

He will not even mention the name of the play, referring to it instead as "Harry Lauder."

The Princess watched the rehearsal of an early scene in which three witches prophesy to Macbeth that he will wear the crown. Shakespeare set this on the road to the castle of Glamis.

"I thought I'd come along to help you take the curse off it," the Princess smiled. "I was born in Glamis."

She was, too, on a wild and stormy night 50 years ago this month.

Notwithstanding the royal reassurance, O'Toole remains convinced there is some sort of jinx on Macbeth which rarely yields its triumph it should despite some of Shakespeare's most evocative speeches.

He does not permit members of the cast to use his real name either and their substitute words for the title are generally "the tragedy" or "the Scottish play."

O'Toole was asked why then did he choose the play for his new role as associate director of the Old Vic.

"In my opinion it's the greatest play Shakespeare has written," he said. "It's blood and thunder. It's sublime. And I've been haunted by it since I was 14."

"All through my early career I used it for my audition piece. Mind you, I nearly always forgot the bloody thing. He said the curse had manifested itself early in the production.

"We had some of the people over in Ireland," he said. "On Friday the 10th, I was driving to see Frances Tomelty who plays Lady Lauder (Lady Macbeth). It was dark and I was on a road usually used by cattle. I wrapped a Toyota around a stone wall just inches from dropping into the Atlantic. I should have been dead or maimed."

Glider pilot folds wings, heads home

BAIE COMEAU, Quebec (UPI) — Never-say-die Eagle Sarmont has folded his fragile hang glider for an overland return to Santa Cruz.

After the same time he is pondering his next flight attempt — the Pyramids — the Himalayas — or the South Pole.

"It all depends on who gives us permission to fly," the 37-year-old pilot said, bitter over the Canadian Department of Transport's refusal to grant him flying rights in his quest to cross the Atlantic — from New York to Paris.

"We're such a political issue right now that I don't see any problem raising the money. We're thinking of Paris to the Pyramids, the Himalayas or the Antarctic."

Sarmont said the South Pole haunted him as much as any other area and the six-week mid-summer period in January-February would provide good conditions for a crack at the crossing.

Meanwhile, he planned to visit Friday from his roost along the shores of the north St. Lawrence River for New York by car, instead of in his "Spirit of California."

"But before that we're putting together a beach party, a crab feast, for all those great people here who supported us for two weeks," he said.

Federal authorities denied Sarmont flying rights over Canadian airspace because the 150-pound craft, powered by a modified snowmobile engine, was not registered as an airplane and did not conform to safety regulations.

Once in the United States, Sarmont said he also faces a Federal Aviation Authority fine for flying an unregistered aircraft on his way to Canada. Possible court battles over the classification of motorized hang gliders will determine exactly when and where his next trip takes place.

"Just to fly there is so many places to go," he said. "I'm just a simple tourist like anybody else."

Elephant report doubted at first

LAFAYETTE, Ore. (UPI) — Rich Munson had more than a little trouble early Thursday convincing Oregon State Police he was sober.

Munson insisted in a telephone call at 3:30 a.m. that he had seen an elephant as he drove home in this town of 1,050 population 30 miles southwest of Portland.

In fact, Munson said he had followed the animal for a few blocks to see where it was going before he went home and called police.

"I asked him to describe it and he said it was 12 to 15 feet high and he thought it was about three-fourths grown although he was no expert on elephants," Trooper Doug Cole said. "He said it looked bigger than his van. He sounded really serious."

Skin woes plague women

CHICAGO (UPI) — Career women may suffer as many skin problems as housewives who wash dishes and scrub floors, a cosmetics firm says.

The skin of airline stewardesses can become dry and cracked because of constant changes in temperature and pressurized airplane cabins. Smoke-filled rooms and copy machine supplies can cause problems for clerical workers.

Women who work in nearly every kind of job — from door-to-door sales to hair dressing — are exposed to various conditions that will cause complexion problems, researchers for Syd Simons Cosmetics Inc. said.

The company recently listed a number of occupations and the existing conditions that can cause skin problems. Among those listed are:

- Outside saleswomen may experience dry skin and broken capillaries because of changing temperatures and weather conditions.
- Dancers may develop facial problems because perspiration attracts and collects dust from dance floors.
- Hairdressers can develop allergies and complexion problems from chemical reactions to hair spray, dyes and wave solutions.

Fortune wants Social Security at 68

NEW YORK (UPI) — The minimum retirement age for collecting Social Security benefits should be raised from 66 to 68 to prevent collapse of the system in the remaining years of the century, Fortune magazine says.

In its current issue released Wednesday, Fortune also proposed that after age 60, the rise in Social Security benefits should be tied to the consumer price index. Instead of wage increases as at present.

Report says hostages will go on trial

By United Press International

An aide to Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini said Thursday the 52 American hostages will definitely be tried as spies to expose what he charged was the American role in a recent plot to overthrow the Islamic regime.

Tehran Radio announced that 13 more officers and enlisted men were marched before firing squads at dawn and executed for their alleged involvement in the July coup attempt. It brought the number of persons executed for plotting Khomeini's ouster to at least 53.

But the latest word on the fate of the hostages held for 278 days came from the Philippines, where a visiting Khomeini aide told reporters the American captives soon would go on trial as spies.

"We want to try the Americans for what they have done," said Ayatollah Reza Taghavi, who was in the Philippines to encourage an "Islamic revival" among Moslem students there.

Taghavi said Iran believes the hostages are not diplomats but "CIA spies." He charged that the United States was behind the plot to topple Khomeini and said putting the hostages on trial would prove it.

"We will put them on trial to reveal... their abuses and interference in the affairs of Iran," Taghavi said.

It was not clear if Taghavi was speaking with the authority that in Iran is wielded uncontestedly by only one man — Khomeini himself.

Khomeini has decreed that the Iranian parliament will decide the hostages' fate. But parliament, controlled by Islamic fundamentalists who also favor spy trials for the hostages, has so far not been able to act.

Ongoing disputes between President Abolhasan Bani-Sadr, a moderate, and the fundamentalists have prevented Bani-Sadr from naming a prime minister. Until he can do so and until parliament can approve of his choice, the hostage debate is not expected to begin.

While he carefully avoided taking sides in the power struggle, Khomeini stepped into the fray Wednesday by ordering parliament to "be quiet" and end its bickering.

Iraqi nuke parts bombed

ROME (UPI) — Two time bombs early Thursday wrecked the offices of an Italian company that supplies nuclear technology and equipment to Iraq. A telephone caller later claimed they were set by an Iranian group.

The bombs at the SNIA-Techint offices in the Western Trastevere quarter of Rome destroyed all furniture inside the building and damaged its walls. No nuclear equipment or materials were in the building.

Police estimated each of the bombs contained about two pounds of explosive.

SNIA-Techint is one of two companies taking part in the $50 million sale of a natural uranium fuel element fabrication plant to Iraq.

The deal has come under international criticism by nuclear non-proliferation experts who claim it may help Iraq gain the technology needed to build atomic bombs.

— A similar nuclear project between Iraq and France has come under increasing criticism from Israel.

U.S. imports keep dropping

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Gross U.S. oil imports have averaged 71 million barrels a day so far this year. That's down 14 percent from 1979 levels, the Energy Department said Thursday in its Weekly Petroleum Status Report.

during the week, distillate production was 2.8 million and residual fuel oil output was 1.5 million. The refiners supplied products at a daily rate of 16.1 million barrels in the four reporting weeks — a rate 5.6 percent below the comparable one-year period.

Refinery operations slow down

NEW YORK (UPI) — Veteran industry observers say it appears last week's U.S. oil refinery operations had dropped to an all-time low, reflecting high inventories caused by reduced consumer demand for oil products.

U.S. crude oil imports plummeted to 4.2 million barrels a day last week the slowest rate since 1975 when imports hit a low for the year of 2.8 million barrels a day, the API said.

Romanian jetliner crashes, casualty figures uncertain

NOUAKHOTT, Mauritania (UPI) — A Romanian jetliner carrying 168 persons crashed on landing Thursday at Nouadhibou in Mauritania.

It plunged into the Atlantic only 300 yards short of the airport runway, officials said.

Casualty reports conflicted. Radio Mauritania reported that by evening, two bodies had been recovered and 15 persons rescued with 151 persons still listed as missing.

The U.S. Embassy in Nouakchott said first reports indicated there were "only 20 to 40 survivors." But the official Romanian news agency Agerpres said in Bucharest that only one person was killed in the crash and that all others, including "several injured," had been rescued by Romanian ships anchored in the harbor.

Agerpres said the jetliner, a Soviet-built Tupolev 154, came down in the sea short of the runway at Nouadhibou; the economic and fishing center of the northwest African nation.

The flight originated in Bucharest and all 152 passengers and 16 crewmembers were Romanians, the agency said.

But reports conflicted as to the identities of the passengers. Some reports said the plane carried a delegation of Romanian officials flying to Mauritania to discuss an agreement on fishing rights. Other officials said the passengers were all Romanian fishermen flying to Nouadhibou to replace another fishing crew.

Under a current agreement with Mauritania, Romania has fishing rights in the Atlantic off Nouadhibou.

"The cause of the early morning crash was not immediately known, although human error — either by the pilot or by control tower officials — appeared to be one possibility.

Officials said Romania would appoint a commission of aviation experts to investigate the crash.

Italian bombers elude hunt

ROME, Italy (UPI) — Police raided the homes of neo-Fascist suspects in Rome Thursday in a massive hunt for the terrorists who bombed the Bologna train station, killing 79 persons in Italy's bloodiest act of terrorism.

In France, authorities ordered one suspect jailed pending Italy's formal request for his extradition.

Italian police said they were speeding up the paperwork and hoped that neo-Fascist Francesco Toti, 25, would soon be delivered to Rome for questioning in connection with the Saturday blast that leveled a wing of Bologna's central train station.

The doctor of 11 hospitalized victims Thursday brought the toll from the blast to 79 killed and more than 200 injured.

Among the latest deaths were an 11-year-old girl, whose mother remains listed in serious condition in a Bologna hospital. Her father escaped the blast with minor injuries when he went to buy cigarettes in another part of the station.

Police said Affatigato, who fitted witnesses' descriptions of a man seen fleeing the Bologna station shortly before the blast, may have information that could lead to the arrest of others even if he personally were not involved.

Arrested in Nice, Affatigato is believed to be a friend of Toti, a neo-Fascist activist charged with planning the 1974 bombing of an international express train near Bologna that killed 12 passengers.

The Bologna train station bombing came two days short of the sixth anniversary of the earlier train bombing and police said initial evidence indicated both attacks might have been carried out by the same group.

The Armed Revolutionary Squads, the neo-Fascist group initially suspected in both bombings, denied involvement in half-dozen anonymous telephone calls to Italian newspapers.

Police sources said raids were carried out on the homes of more than a dozen neo-fascists in the Rome area and that other right-wing extremists were under close surveillance throughout the country.

Ceremonies honor dead at Nagasaki

NAGASAKI, Japan (UPI) — At two months past a fateful hour Saturday, the port of Nagasaki will come to a complete halt in memory of the event 35 years ago that linked its name forever to the dawn of the nuclear age.

It was the morning of Aug. 9, 1945, when an American bomber appeared over the skies of the city of 200,000 people. Two minutes later, at 11:02 a.m. (8:02 p.m. MDT Friday), the clocks stopped. An estimated 78,000 people were killed in the awesome fireball and the radioactive aftermath of the second atomic bomb dropped in World War II.

Three days earlier, an American B-29 dropped the "Fat Man" atomic bomb on Hiroshima, immediately killing about 78,000 people. The United Nations estimated another 60,000 died over the next six months.

Those two events brought the might of Imperial Japan to its knees and forced its surrender on Aug. 15, 1945, ending the war.

About 20,000 people were expected to attend this year's memorial service in Nagasaki, about 625 miles southwest of Tokyo.

The ceremonies in Nagasaki's Peace Park will start before the fateful hour. The city, now boasting a population of 440,000 people, will come to a complete halt — as it has each of the past 34 years — for a minute of silence for the bomb victims.

The silence will end with the pealing of church bells and the wall of sirens.

Brezhnev adviser slaps U.S.

MOSCOW (UPI) — Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev's chief foreign policy adviser criticized Secretary of State Edmund Muskie Thursday and indicated that Soviet-American relations will not improve until the United States backs down on Afghanistan.

The tough remarks by Leonid Zamiatin, a member of the Communist Party, Central Committee and Brezhnev's personal adviser on foreign policy, marked the first Soviet statement on the Afghan crisis since the end of the Moscow Olympics, which were boycotted by the United States.

Zamiatin vilified the Kremlin's support for the Kabul government of Babrak Karmal and said relations with Washington will not improve until the Carter Administration lifts the trade sanctions it slapped on Moscow in retaliation for the invasion of Afghanistan.

In the toughly worded article published by the weekly Moscow News, Zamiatin said the United States made a mistake by lightly dismissing the limited pullout of Soviet troops from Afghanistan.

Tremors strike

TOKYO, Japan (UPI) — A series of carbonates jolted Mount Utsun in southwestern Japan Thursday, but there was no immediate report of damage or injuries.

The Meteorological Agency said the tremors occurred over a seven-hour period and that the most powerful registered 4 on the Japanese scale of 7 at Utsun-in-Nagaaki province, 625 miles southwest of Tokyo.

Special meeting

Jerome council can't speed up zoning request

JEROME — A special Jerome City Council meeting Thursday to speed up consideration of a variance request ended without a decision.

However, the builder indicated he may withdraw that request.

The council held a public hearing Tuesday on the request by Lewis Roland to build two duplexes seven feet closer to the property line than a present city ordinance allows.

Eight adjacent property owners attended the hearing to voice opposition to the variance, although City Attorney Robert Williams said the present setback law is not justifiable and should be changed.

Councilman Ralph Peters moved Tuesday to table a decision on the request until the council's Aug. 19 meeting. The motion was not seconded, but Mayor Marshall Everheart moved on to other business.

Everheart called a special meeting on the variance Thursday prior to a council budget work session, stating he had received new information that made further delays inadvisable.

The mayor said after the meeting that the new information pertained to a discussion with Roland to which Everheart learned the developer has obtained a bank loan and has crews waiting to start on the project.

Ten residents of the Su Casa Subdivision again appeared to oppose the variance, stating they are opposed to construction of duplexes and need time to prepare their opposition to the request.

Peters reiterated his stance that the council should wait until its next regularly scheduled meeting.

Roland stormed out during the discussion, stating he would build smaller duplexes, if necessary, to begin construction next week. The subdivision is situated on land zoned for single and multiple dwellings.

Peters' new motion also was accepted without a vote. But Everheart said after the special meeting he will not call another meeting on the topic before Aug. 19.

Members of the Su Casa Subdivision Property Owners Association said following the meeting they intend to pursue their objection to duplexes, which they say violate the subdivision's protective covenants agreement.

Everheart said he has received information that the property owners signed waivers permitting construction of duplexes. The Su Casa property owners say the waivers were obtained under false pretenses.

Hailey revival

The Desert String Band of Salt Lake City plays to a receptive audience of 400 Thursday at Hailey City Park. Nine folk-western revival groups participated in the second of three free concerts held in conjunction with the annual Northern Rockies Folk Festival. Tonight's concert starts at 5 p.m., and features the Live Wire Choir, Knee Deep and Yassar Clements. The festival also includes free one-hour workshops beginning at 10 a.m. today and Saturday at Hailey Elementary School. Basque culture, quilting and Wood River Valley history are on today's agenda.

But not all in Challis oppose

Environmentalists question mine

By STEVE LIPSON
Times-News Writer

CHALLIS — What will be left when Cyprus Mines Corp. finishes mining molybdenum at its proposed mine near Challis, environmentalists asked at a hearing Thursday.

Cyprus, a subsidiary of Standard Oil of Indiana, proposes to build a mile-wide open pit mine on Thompson Creek, southwest of Challis. The $300 million project would provide jobs for 550 people. Production could begin by late 1983.

The hearing in Challis, attended by about 150 people, was dominated by questions from two environmentalists. Janice Brown, a representative of the Idaho Conservation League from Idaho Falls, and John Chapman, a Ketchum resident, repeatedly asked questions about the long-term impact of the mine.

Brown wanted to know if provisions have been made to monitor the mine site after the 30-year period covered in a draft environmental impact statement on the project.

Chapman questioned the proposed reclamation plan for the mine, saying it was short on specifics. Questions from the audience were answered by a panel including Cyprus representatives and U.S. Forest Service personnel. Gordon Reid, a Forest Service planner in Challis who supervised the writing of the environmental impact statement, said the reclamation plan is general because it is impossible to anticipate the slides that will be made in reclamation techniques in the next 20 years.

But in follow-up questions, Chapman stressed the lack of specific standards for reclamation contained in the impact statement. Cyprus is responsible to its stockholders, he said. What guarantees exist to make sure the stockholders will be willing to bear the burden of reclamation in the future?

During most of the two-hour hearing, local residents remained silent but they applauded when Challis resident Nancy Getty lashed out at the environmentalists attacking the Cyprus proposal. Getty said Cyprus "brought its red carpet" when it came to Challis. The company has worked with local residents to solve the environmental problems the mine will create, he said.

Another question raised at the hearing concerned what will become of the mine pit after the ore is exhausted. Reid said the pit could become a high mountain lake but questions remain about the water quality of such a lake.

Chapman asked if the Forest Service will encourage Cyprus to turn any lake into a developed recreation site. But Reid responded that the Forest Service only has the authority to require proper reclamation of the mine site.

Bloodmobile in Buhl today

BUHL — The Red Cross bloodmobile is here today from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. at the Moose Hall on Main Street.

Mrs. Arde McCreary, blood program chairman, urged businesses to allow their employees time off to donate blood.

"Harvest time is here, children and college students are busy getting ready for school," she said. "In such busy times, thoughtful moments result in an accident, and the victims may need blood for survival."

Deputies arrest suspect

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls Sheriff deputies Thursday arrested a local man in connection with an armed robbery near Rogerson.

Harry Dave Grifjala, 30, of Twin Falls was being held at the Twin Falls County jail Thursday on charges of armed robbery and using a firearm in the commission of a felony. Bond was set at $10,000.

Deputies said Grifjala allegedly was one of two suspects who stole to drive a group of Twin Falls residents who were moving to Arizona. Instead, the suspects robbed them at gunpoint of their possessions, leaving them stranded in the desert near Rogerson. The incident occurred Friday around midnight, deputies said. An arrest warrant was issued for a second suspect, deputies said. His name was not released.

Group promotes rail service

KETCHUM — A group promoting alternative bus transportation and possible rail service into the Ketchum-Sun Valley area will host a fund-raising dinner Aug. 14.

John Winters, president of the Idaho Rail Organizing Network (IRON), said representatives of the U.S. Department of Agriculture, U.S. Forest Service and the Idaho Department of Parks and Recreation will attend the dinner.

Discussion will center on progress of IRON's proposal to establish passenger links to the resort area, especially from Shoshone and Boise, Winters said.

The tax-deductible dinner will be held at the Winters home, 300 Huffman Drive, Ketchum. He said IRON, which was founded to encourage alternative transportation, will give a $1 rebate to any guest arriving by bus, bicycle or horse.

The group's application for a grant from the Economic Development Administration has been approved by a state review committee and the agency's Seattle office, Winters said.

Commissioners debate hospital's fate

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls County Commissioners have another building problem on their hands.

With the former Vera O'Leary Junior High School now demolished to make way for a new county building to be erected when funds permit, the commissioners are vacating the old county hospital.

"We just can't afford the maintenance cost to keep the boiler going and the building heated," Commission Chairman Merl Leonard explained.

He said the boiler system which has been functioning since 1917 when the old hospital opened for business, has been getting steadily more difficult to maintain over the next few years.

In addition, Magic Valley Memorial Hospital's proposed expansion is moving to the east and will need the space now occupied by the boiler building. Agencies using the old three-story structure have already been moved out, Leonard said.

With the Idaho State Police moved to Blue Lakes Boulevard North, half of the old hospital maternity building became available and is now being readied for the University of Idaho Extension Service.

County zoning and building inspection staffs moved into the west half of that building some time ago when it was vacated by Health and Welfare workers.

The Soil Conservation moved into a new office in the same building some time ago, vacating the basement area of the old hospital.

Fish and Wildlife offices were also relocated in the same building. Leonard said the basement of the old hospital is in extremely poor condition and the foundation is showing signs of crumbling.

Whether or not the building will be demolished is not yet decided, Leonard said. An evaluation of the building and its condition will have to be made before this is decided, Leonard said.

In moving the extension service into the former maternity building, Leonard said, a new heating system will have to be installed to serve part of the building which is now difficult to heat.

The hospital was built in 1917 and occupied in 1918 after the old Boyd Hospital closed and was converted to the Park Hotel, Leonard said.

CSI initiates energy program

The College of Southern Idaho is offering an alternative energy and environmental science program this fall. The two-year program will include a second-year level class, "Introduction to Energy," and a third-year level class, "Energy and the Environment." The program is designed to provide students with a broad background in energy and environmental science. The program will be taught by faculty members who have extensive experience in the field. The program is expected to begin in the fall semester.

Fair dogs need 'scarce' vaccine

FILER — All dogs entering competition or display classes at the Twin Falls County Fair must be vaccinated against the deadly Parvo virus.

Dog owners may face some difficulty meeting the requirement by fair time Sept. 2 since a survey of Twin Falls veterinarian hospitals and offices Thursday showed only one firm has a limited supply of the vaccine.

The virus, which is similar to cat distemper and may have spread to dogs from cats, may kill an animal within 24 hours after contact with the virus, unless immediate medication is given. One veterinarian said he has treated several cases in Twin Falls and has had some close calls but has not yet lost any dogs from the virus.

Members of the fair board voted at the July meeting to bar any dog that has not had the vaccination in order to prevent a spread of the disease among local animals.

All others reported being out of the vaccine with back orders unfilled.

One veterinarian said he has a limited supply and can at least take care of his own customers. He said he has been vaccinating dogs every day and is not sure how long it will last.

Another veterinarian hospital employee said their firm gave out the last of its vaccine Wednesday, but has a waiting list and has not been able to get more from either the regular supplier in Portland or from sources in Denver.

Another veterinarian said his firm has been out for about two weeks, but has been unsuccessful in locating more vaccine from fellow animal doctors.

Of four veterinarian firms contacted in Twin Falls, only one was able to meet requests for the vaccine as of Thursday.

Veterinarians said the situation appears to be the same in most other Magic Valley communities from word they have received.

Naomi Shouse, business manager for the fair, said normally most of the dogs shown at the fair come from the immediate area although occasionally entries come from other southern Idaho towns. She said fair board members bringing dogs together in the show rings and display buildings could lead to a serious spread if an animal had been exposed to the disease. She said this must apply to 4-H dogs as well as the registered show dogs or those on display only. Deadline for entering dogs is Aug. 30.

One veterinarian hospital attendant said there are two kinds of vaccine that can be used to combat Parvo virus. One is a vaccine normally used for cats but this too has become scarce. She said her doctors normally have about 60 doses of the two vaccines on hand. The normal demand has been mostly for show dogs or those traveling into other areas. With the recent publicity given the Parvo virus spread, the supply can't keep up with the demand and production of the vaccine nationwide has fallen behind.

Evidence reveals bribe

SEATTLE (UPI) — The former speaker of the Washington House accepted a wad of $50,000 bills from an undercover agent posing as a mobster interested in bringing gambling to the state, evidence entered in U.S. District Court showed Thursday.

The alleged $5,000 payoff occurred Oct. 11, 1979, in the men's room of the Genoa restaurant in Portland, Ore., during a meeting between John Bagnariol, the former speaker, lobbyist Patrick Gallagher and two undercover FBI agents, Harold Heald and Graham Deservine.

Bagnariol, Gallagher and Senate Majority Leader Gordon Walgren are charged with 29 counts of federal racketeering for their alleged conspiracy to bring legalized gambling to the state in return for 18 percent of the profits.

Deservine testified that during the Portland meeting — the first part of which was a go-between with a malfunction in Heald's hidden recorder — the four discusses ways in which Bagnariol could fund his gubernatorial campaign.

Bagnariol was concerned that he appear not to be in league with large corporations such as the Boeing Co., Deservine testified. The former House speaker was asked if $50,000 was enough to buy his cooperation in the effort to bring legalized gambling into the state and he responded that it would be, Deservine said.

At that point Gallagher, who allegedly served as a go-between with the fictitious mobsters and the two Democratic legislators, objected to the discussion of money in front of Bagnariol, saying he wanted to protect him, Deservine testified.

The agent quoted Bagnariol as saying: "If I go before a federal grand jury don't want to have to lie too much."

It was at that point Bagnariol left the table for the men's room and was followed by Deservine, who turned on a tape recorder strapped to his body.

Their recorded conversation was entered as testimony and played before the packed courtroom.

Deservine: "Before you leave, here's five grand. All right? You give that to Pat and let him give it to you."

Bagnariol: "All right."

Deservine: "See how comfortable he is huh?"

Bagnariol: "Okay, I'll get it taken care of ... I feel strong we've got something going."

Deservine testified that Bagnariol smiled as he took the wad of bills and put it in his pocket.

Utah girl, 2, is strangled Prosecutor may try teen as adult

FARMINGTON, Utah (UPI) — A Clinton Utah, teen-ager accused of strangling a 2-year-old girl and hiding her body in the rafters of an abandoned house should stand trial as an adult because of the heinous nature of the slaying, says a Davis County prosecutor.

Deputy Davis County Attorney Steve Vanderlinden Thursday petitioned the First District Juvenile Court to hold a certification hearing on the 15-year-old suspect, John P. Miller Jr. He is accused of killing Ann Hoskisson, then placing the toddler's body in the attic crawlspace of an abandoned Clinton home.

"We want him certified for several reasons," Vanderlinden said, "A major one is the heinous nature of the crime."

Vanderlinden said prosecutors want to charge Miller with first-degree murder — a capital offense — and with third-degree kidnapping.

He said First District Juvenile Court Judge Kent Bachman has tentatively scheduled a hearing Tuesday on the certification petition. In the meantime, the suspect was being detained at the MOWEDA youth facility.

Before a ruling on the petition is made, the juvenile will probably undergo a 30-day evaluation, the attorney said.

The girl's body was found Wednesday morning after an intensive all-night search by officers from five Wasatch Front law enforcement agencies and neighbors. The abandoned house was about a quarter of a mile from the Hoskisson residence, said Clinton Police Chief Leroy Webb.

He said the suspect was a neighbor of the victim and one of the searchers who combed Clinton looking for the toddler. And Webb said Miller "admitted to the slaying of little Ann" during a police interrogation late Wednesday.

Bruce Hoskisson reported his daughter missing Tuesday evening. Miller allegedly told police he took the girl for a ride on a bicycle that night, then killed her.

Group will fight rate hikes
SPOKANE (UPI) — A group known as Citizens For Fair Rates has formed to fight the 40 per cent rate hike proposed by the Washington Water Power Co.

The group meets every Monday at the East Central Community Center and began this week preparing a detailed, documented attack on the rate increase proposal.

Members also began studying the already-prepared reports of WWP in making the request.

The group may also ally in city councilman Richard Gow. Gow wants to get the city manager's office to study the proposed rate hike.

German girl gets reunion
SPOKANE (UPI) — A 20 year old German student, whose father was looking for her in Spokane, has been located in Los Angeles.

The woman, Vrenel Gonsler, arrived in the U.S. from Frankfurt, Germany, July 16 and was to have met her mother in Kallispell, Mont., July 22.

However, the plans became erratic and the connections were not made, causing her parents to become concerned.

Ms. Gonsler's father, Ulrich Gonsler, arrived in Spokane about two weeks ago looking for her.

Gonsler said Wednesday he was very happy to have his daughter back. He did not explain the reason for the change in plans that lead to an area-wide search.

WARC sues Spokane school
SPOKANE (UPI) — The Washington Association for Retarded Citizens has filed a discrimination suit against Spokane School Dist. 81.

The complaint stems from language contained in the teachers' contract. It counts one handicapped child as two students in determining class size.

Association executive director Stan Baxter said the issue is how mainstreaming is done in Spokane.

He said the provisions of the contract have the potential to limit mainstreaming, which is mandated by federal law requiring education of handicapped youngsters.

Hansen went to Iran at his own expense last November in a whirlwind attempt to secure the freedom of the American hostages in Tehran.

In addition, Hansen took a three-day trip to Panama and Nicaragua, at the expense of the House Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs Committee in January 1979.

Syrrms' trip covered 11 days in the Caribbean. He visited the Dominican Republic, Cuba and Jamaica.

Jackson's travel record included a 10-day trip to the People's Republic of China, an 11-day mission to Israel and Egypt and a three-day excursion into Canada.

Jackson's Middle East trip — which included meetings with Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin and Egyptian President Anwar Sadat — was paid for by the Jonathan Institute. Ostensibly, the trip was made to attend an institute conference. His other jaunts were at government expense.

Costs of these trips were not detailed because the study revealed that breakdowns were not compiled by members. Much of the costs associated with official trips pertain to the entire delegation. Those figures were not available for these trips.

Javits, the ranking minority member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, did not mention any trips in the course of the Q study. Those trips were culled from the records of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, from the records of the Senate minority leadership and from the information provided by the North Atlantic Assembly.

Javits spent 11 days in China, 11 days in Europe in August, visiting Great Britain, France, Switzerland and Austria and six days in Mexico in May. Other trips included three days in Canada with the North Atlantic Assembly, two days in Mexico in February, and an undisclosed amount of time in Sudan, Africa, in May.

Javits' six trips ranked at the top of the Senate.

Party

one of two major contenders in a state senate contest.

Idaho's Democrats and Republicans, who once worried about the strength of the young organization, now give the American Party little thought.

"It depends on the area they are in, how strong they are," said Jim Davidson, Idaho GOP executive director. "But they don't have a statewide influence today. The election results show that."

A potentially close state senate race in Boise's District 15, where an American Party candidate is on the ballot, has caused Republicans and Democrats alike to wonder if the AP votes will "swing" the outcome, Davidson said. But neither major party believes the American Party candidate could win that seat or even finish a strong second place.

The American Party candidates will be defeated in every other legislative race they have entered this year, he added.

What has placed the American Party on its political deathbed?

One reason, Davidson said, is the major parties, especially the GOP, have stolen the AP's political thunder.

"Look at the recent conservative trend of the Republican Party. If you look at Idaho politics, we have three conservatives in Steve Symms, Jim McClure and George Hansen."

Does that mean the American Party, in the long run, got what it wanted by making politics more conservative?

"I think history will probably prove that," Davidson said.

A similar analysis came from Democratic State Chairman Wayne Fuller.

The American Party has declined because it couldn't win elections, and because "some of them have found a home in other parties," he said.

Fuller said the American Party would have much influence in the 1980 elections, but said it was too soon to pronounce the party dead. The AP candidates will all lose this year, but the party might field candidates in future elections, he said.

Snake bite gets credit for man's life to 94

George H. Corran of Talbott, Ont., died at the age of 94 after falling off a ladder and breaking his neck. He grew various nuts in his life's work and was known worldwide among those who did likewise. He never ate meat, fish, dairy products, eggs or anything containing refined flour or sugar. But he didn't credit that for his longevity. As a child, he'd been bitten once by a rattlesnake, and he was convinced it had made him immune to most ailments. This is an ancient belief among American Indians. They say most of the very old among them had been so bitten once upon a time.

MONGOOSE

Correct plural of mongoose is mongooses, but Samuel Goldwyn, the renowned movie magnate, didn't know that. He needed a couple of those mean little beasts for a film he didn't know. So he said, "Okay, take a letter to the San Diego Zoo. We'd like to rent a mongoose to use in a motion picture, and while you're at it, send us another one." Or so report the Hollywood storylines.

Callitopes found in slaughtered milk cows sell for about $192 a dried ounce. The Chinese in Hong Kong buy them, grind them up, and peddle them as one of the ingredients in what they claim are aphrodisiacs. Slaughterhouse operators in South Africa take considerable care to search for them in butchered stock.

DOGS AND CATS

Prehistoric folk tamed dogs about 4,000 years before they managed to domesticate cats. And some authorities suggest this is why cats seem better able to survive in the wilds. They "go back" more readily because they don't have so far to go, it's said.

Technology missed one thing

By ERMA BOMBECK
© Field Enterprises, Inc.

My kids think a pioneer is someone without a clothes dryer. They've been raised in a world of electrical outlets, miracle fabrics, one-size-fits-all and just-add-water.

They don't know what an alley is... a plain white T-shirt... a pen wiper... or a doily.

Some of them have never had personal contact with a basement, bus transfer, a screen door that didn't have a glass replacement, or for that matter a person who didn't have a checking account.

I never look at my children that I don't fall on my knees and say, "Thank You, God, for making these children in the 20th century where technology prevails. They would never have survived without it."

"Thank You for making doors that close automatically behind them. Otherwise large office buildings, schools and department stores would be open to all the elements."

"Thank You for drip-dry and permanent press. Without them I'd never permit my children to give their right names anywhere."

"Thank You for headphones for stereo or I'd have gone deaf long before last year."

"Thank You for electric dishwashers. It takes a lot to admit the first model made with two hands and feet didn't work out."

"How kind of You to assess their limitations and give them ovens, refrigerators, and pets that clean themselves."

"Thank You for 40-gallon hot-water heaters that take them through a complete shampoo without waiting for new water to heat."

"Thank you for pocket computers where they no longer have to find out so soon what I don't know."

"My gratitude for aerosol cans of pine and lemon scents to surround gym shoes that have not left the feet in three years."

"Thank you for digital watches that eliminate a lot of teaching about which hand is before and which one is after."

"Thank you for Dial-a-Prayer for the woman who can't cope until Sunday."

"In looking over modern technology, there is possibly only one thing that was missed. A dial tone on mothers that indicates, 'I'm busy.'"

Divorce hits friendship

By JUDY FOREMAN
© Boston Globe

When you get divorced the major personal losses involve not only your spouse, children and favorite members of your spouse's family but often the comfort of a familiar gallery of friends.

And while the distress of the divorcing couple itself is undoubtedly the most acute, the friends themselves also suffer as their relationships with a divorcing couple slip away.

Trying to stay friendly with both sides of a couple splitting up can be trying. Trying to take sides can be as nearly as difficult.

"I wound up losing my two best friends," says one man, a gentle person, who seems to take his friendships seriously. Like other people interviewed he did not want his name used.

"When they got divorced, I got 'muddled,'" he says. "I had known them both since 1969. I was equally friendly with both of them, though the man and I definitely had the typical, macho kind of friendship where we never really talked about ourselves and our feelings."

"The wife and I were close, though, I guess because it's easier to confide in women than in men. When she was in love with another man, the husband was stunned and distraught."

"He literally broke down and cried on my shoulder," says this quiet, compassionate friend. "He was really in bad shape—so bad that I even agreed to sleep over at his house the first night after she split."

The friend recalls feeling upset but not judgmental, and he tried to act as a go-between. He felt he genuinely understood some of the faults in the marriage which pushed the wife into her affair.

But even though both the husband and wife said they wanted to remain friends with him, and even seemed to want him to help patch things up, everything turned out wrong.

"At first, the wife wanted to keep up contact with me and her new boyfriend, I think in part to legitimize the new relationship. But she kind of cooled off. I guess I was a reminder of her past.

Third of seven parts

And then the husband just drifted away. "Maybe when someone that macho breaks down and lets you see them actually cry, they just can't face you anymore. I ended up losing them both," the friend said.

While the man tried not to take sides and wound up empty-handed, taking sides may be just as treacherous. On the other hand, side-taking can, in some cases, strengthen and deepen an important friendship.

For me there was never any ambiguity. It was a question of loyalty," says a housewife, 35. She watched old college friends who had been together for 13 years go through a painful breakup.

It takes practice, says this rather calm woman, but she feels she is to walk a fine line, supporting and confirming the wife's feelings of emotional abandonment without saying or implying that the husband was a totally terrible person.

And it is precisely this approach, says Dr. Harry Keshel, a licensed psychologist at the Divorce Resource and Mediation Center in Cambridge, Mass., that can be most productive for many divorcing people and their friends.

"People need feedback to reassure them that they're not crazy. Getting external emotional support for their perceptions is extremely important. But it is also important not to condemn the spouse you're not friends with, among other reasons because if they ever reunite, the one you supported would have to give you up as a friend."

"Good friendships for people going through a divorce can be very important. A constant, steady confidante is a wonderful way of staying healthy. In fact, I believe friendships are more important than therapy or therapists. Friends give you continuity and perspective year after year, and that's more than you can get from therapy, unless you're in it for 10 years."

Though the housewife is now watching her friend's separation take on the finality of divorce, the hours spent understanding the emotional dynamics of what went wrong have had a hidden payoff.

"I never felt my own marriage was threatened by their divorce because I knew so well what was going on between them, and I could see that we didn't have those problems," she says. "Divorce is not contagious. And I must say that, watching all that pain and grief made me even less inclined than I even might have been to ever get divorced."

The kind of understanding between this friend and the divorcing wife is typical of many post-divorce friendships where the wife seems to inherit more of the couple's old friends than the husband.

In many marriages it is the wife who often carries responsibility for the social and emotional life of the couple. This has the advantage of making her friendships deep enough to carry the burden of support during a divorce.

"Women in general tend to have more friends than men," observes Keshel. "There's more woman-to-woman bonding and, though some men give and get support from each other, both men and women seem to give and get support more with women."

A jovial man, in his 50's, puts it this way: "Of course, you take sides and you go with whomever is better. It does depend on which of them you know the longest and if family is involved, you stick with family. But usually I sympathize with the woman. I get along better with women."

A 50-year-old man, a talkative father of three, says that he, too, has tended to side with the wife in divorcing couples he has known well.

"In one case," he says, "the husband had been my friend for 25 years, and his wife for 20. My wife and I have stayed good friends with her, not with him, though we feel bad about it."

"Partly it's because she needs support more than he does. But it's also because he has a 'real' drinking problem and I... she suffered more

Engagements

Brenda Roper

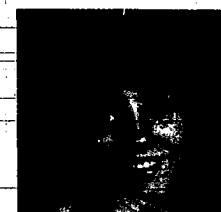

TWIN FALLS — Mr. and Mrs. Roy T. Roper of Twin Falls announce the engagement of their daughter, Brenda L. Roper, to Burke "Tony" Hudelson.

He is the son of Mrs. E. L. Sullivan of Boise and the late Burke Hudelson of Nampa.

Miss Roper is a 1975 graduate of Twin Falls High School and 1976 graduate of Idaho State University. She is employed as an accountant in Salt Lake City.

Hudelson, a 1973 graduate of Nampa High School and a 1980 graduate of the University of Idaho in business communications, is employed by Idaho First Bank in Jerome.

An Oct. 4 wedding is planned.

Miss Gallagher

KIMBERLY — Mr. and Mrs. Gene Gallagher of Kimberly announce the engagement of their daughter, Kathleen Rhea, to Tony Eugene Collins.

Collins is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Roger Collins of Kimberly.

Miss Gallagher is a 1980 graduate of Kimberly High School and is employed by Volco, Inc. of Twin Falls.

Collins, a 1977 graduate of Kimberly High School, works for Collins and Sons in Kimberly.

The couple plans an Oct. 11 wedding at Redeemer Lutheran Church in Kimberly.

Sonia Salinas

TWIN FALLS — Mr. and Mrs. Encarnacion Salinas of Twin Falls announce the engagement of their daughter, Sonia, to Rudy DeLeon.

DeLeon is the son of Ethena Rodriguez of Twin Falls.

Miss Salinas is a 1980 graduate of Twin Falls High School and is employed at Perkins Cake and Steak of Twin Falls.

DeLeon is employed at Whitehead Home and Energy of Twin Falls. The couple plans an Aug. 18 wedding at the St. Edward's Catholic Church in Twin Falls.

Gem club members win kudos

TWIN FALLS — Members of the Magic Valley Gem Club hold an edge on leadership in the national and regional mineralogical organizations.

Ray Moon of Twin Falls, a member of the local club, was elected during the past weekend to head the Northwest Federation of Mineralogical Societies. He was one of nine members who displayed collections at the annual convention held in Boise. There were 54 delegates from Magic Valley Gem Club attending.

Louise Bush of Twin Falls was elected secretary for the northwest regional group and four other local members were named to committee assignments.

Owen "Tip" Rowe and his wife, Dottie Rowe, were named to head the slide program library committee with Bill and Evelyn Foster, also of Twin Falls, assisting them.

Ray Bush, one of the local delegates, said Dottie Rowe also received another honor. She is editor of the local club's news bulletin and her publication was named second in the Northwest Federation and third in the national organization for small clubs.

Bush said in addition to regional honors, the local club's membership includes the president of the National Federation of Mineralogists.

Dr. Elwood Rees of Twin Falls is club's primary editor of the national organization. He has also won many national honors with his faceted precious and semi-precious stones.

Bush said Claude Stevens of Burley won top honors in the show at Boise. His work in dome-shaped cut and polished stones featured the use of Bruneau Jasper.

Walking style marks you for muggers

NEW YORK (UPI) — The way you walk can make you an easy mark for muggers, say two psychologists.

Betty Grayson of Hofstra University and Morris Stein of New York University made a muggability study of New York City pedestrians. After secretly videotaping walkers, they showed the 50 tapes to prison inmates who had been convicted of assaults on persons unknown to them.

The prisoners were asked to rate each pedestrian on a 10-point scale, ranging from one, a very easy rip-off, to 10, "Would avoid it, too big a situation. Too heavy."

The psychologists say a trained dance analyst who then classified the pedestrians' movements said, among other things, "Victims' strides were either very long or very short... they moved awkwardly, raising their left legs with their left arms (instead of alternating them)... they seemed to make each move in the most difficult way possible."

Dear Abby

Secretary should let her boss handle his 'trashy' mail

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
© Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: My boss is the president of a good-sized corporation. I am his secretary. He has instructed me to open all his mail and mark each piece with "date received."

Abby, he is always getting sex mail with very embarrassing pictures, and he orders aides to trashy sex. I feel like gutting my job because I resent this sort of thing so much. He's a middle-aged man, well-respected in the community and has a lovely wife. I can't imagine why he wants anything so trashy coming through the office. If my husband knew about it he would insist that I quit my job.

What should I do? My job would be ideal if it weren't for this problem.

—EMBARRASSED
DEAR EMBARRASSED: Since your boss is "always" getting mail of this kind, you should be able to identify readily by the envelope. Don't open it. Simply mark "date received" and give it to him unopened.

DEAR ABBY: This problem concerns my sister. She is 38, married 12 years, and as far as I know, not very happily. Her husband is a good man, but he is "weird" and has no voice in the household, which is probably part of the problem, because my sister has become a compulsive TV watcher, compulsive "eater," and now a compulsive drinker.

Her husband has tried to correct these problems, but maybe he didn't try hard enough or he gave up too easily. I am very worried about my sister. She has three young children, and God only knows how they're going to grow up, watching their mother sit in front of the TV all the time with a drink in her hand. She stays in her pajamas all day because she's overweight and doesn't care to dress up.

Everyone in the family is worried about her, but she won't listen to anyone. Please don't suggest professional help, because she tried it once and it didn't work for her.

Any ideas on how we can get her to be the positive, happy person she once was will be appreciated by me and all the members of our family.

—WORRIED SISTER
DEAR WORRIED: Sorry. The only suggestion I can offer is professional help. The fact that your sister tried it "once" without success doesn't mean that it will never work for her. Therapy sometimes fails because the patient and therapist do not relate well, in which case the patient should try another therapist. Or possibly the patient expects an immediate miracle. Successful treatment takes time.

You cared enough for your sister to write to me. Now care a little more and try to persuade her that she needs outside help. If you can get her to Alcoholics Anonymous or Overeaters Anonymous it would be a good start.

DEAR ABBY: Do you know a way to test one's own breath to find out if it is unpleasant or offensive? My employer—who is young enough to be my son, always takes several steps backward whenever I approach him, as though my breath is offensive to him. No one else—man or woman—does this. Nor have I seen my employer react this way to anyone except me.

My doctor says my breath is fine. My dentist confirms this. My best friend says I am foolish to be concerned.

By the way, I am certain that I do not have a body odor because I am meticulous about my person, and have been complimented often on my "fresh fragrance." Please help me.
—BAD BREATH (?)

DEAR BREATH: If your doctor, dentist, and best friend have assured you that your breath is not offensive, perhaps your employer is either allergic to, or offended by, that "fresh fragrance" you've been complimented on so often. Quit fretting about it. Tell your employer what's on your mind and clear the air!

(Problems? You'll feel better if you get them off your chest. For a personal reply, write to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. Please enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Divorce

in the marriage. Besides, I can hardly invite him to a cocktail party because he gets downright dangerous if he's been drinking. It's too bad because I really don't want to freeze him out. He is the best friend. But she is just easier to handle socially."

A 36-year-old couple has watched so many of their married friends split up that they feel, with a kind of gallows humor, that they are old pros in the intricate game of how, when and whom to stay friends with in the aftermath of divorce.

The main thing they have noticed, they say, is that some couples' couple friendships evaporate entirely when one couple divorces, probably because there never were any truly intimate cross-couple bonds in the first place.

But even where there are close ties, the going is tricky.

"In a lot of cases," says the wife, "you do kind of make a judgment of who was right and who was wrong. While there's always some blame on each side, there is usually more on one side than the other."

"And that means when you side with one, you feel guilty if you maintain a real intimate friendship with the other. If somebody has done such damage to a friend you care about, you really don't want to be close to the one who did the damage."

"We'd have to know, we knew, we stayed friends with the woman and the man kind of drifted out of the picture. In the marriage, he was passive-aggressive and pretty irresponsible, just not there a lot emotionally. We did try to seek him out a little after they split up, but he always seemed busy, and passive."

"But with another couple, we sided with the man because she left him and their kid. He felt he was wronged and we thought so, too. It may be unfair, but it is very hard to sympathize with persons who leave their family."

Among this couple's friends, there have been so many divorces, subsequent liaisons and further breakups, that the mere idea of trying to have a party at which no one gets an equal feud with former lovers has become ridiculous.

"We'd have to have a series of separate parties to keep it all straight," says the husband.

But maintaining friendships and a social life that includes married couples, formerly married singles and re-coupled friends is possible, at least for some hardy hosts and hostesses who just plunge in.

One suburban matron did just that, taking care, of course, to let each half of the couple know the other had been invited to her bash she was throwing. She left it up to them to slug it out, preferably beforehand.

They did, and the solution they came up with raised a few eyebrows among her guests. But it worked.

He came for the first half of the party then left and called his "ex" to say the coast was clear. She attended the second half, getting an equal chance to slug it with friends they both had in common.

"It was a little weird," says the hostess, "but everybody seemed happy with that as a solution."

Death rate up
WASHINGTON (UPI) — The national mortality rate from motorcycle accidents has increased 46 percent since 1976, the year various states began to repeal laws requiring cyclists to wear helmets, the medical publication Family Practice News reports.

The publication said 27 states have repealed such laws. It said a study of these states shows the incidence of head-injuries has doubled or tripled and the severity of head injuries increased four-fold.

In 1976 compulsory helmet laws existed in all but three states. It said the 46 percent increase in mortality rates since 1976 has occurred despite only a one percent increase in motorcycle registrations.

Stadler cards 67 to lead PGA tourney

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (UPI) — Craig Stadler, starting his round under a sweltering sun and finishing it to the tune of thunder and intense wind, shot a brilliant 3-under-par 67 Thursday to take a one-shot lead over the opening round of the PGA Championship.

Until the wind picked up, shaking several tents near the clubhouse, Stadler was coasting along without a bogey at 4 under. He then bogeyed the 18th hole, and, after he parred the 17th, play was suspended at 6:26 p.m. EDT for 35 minutes because of lightning.

"It didn't bother me at all," said Stadler, one of the delay. "I was very pleased with the round. I played real well sometimes and real poor at other times. It was just a fun round and I made some good waves."

Five players were tied at 68, including Howard Twitty, the hottest player on the tour the last month, and Bobby Walz, who was the seventh alternate for the PGA and didn't even bother to send in an entry form.

"Monday afternoon, I called Ken Anderson, (tournament administrator for the PGA) and I asked him if I was in as an alternate and if there was an entry deadline," said Walz, who failed to make the cut in three of his last four tournaments.

Told that night he could play, Walz arrived here early Tuesday morning, and said he was exhausted.

Also shooting 68 over the 6,964-yard, par-70 Oak Hill Country Club course were Gil Morgan, despite a double-bogey on the 425-yard, par-4 ninth, Bob Murphy and Curtis Strange.

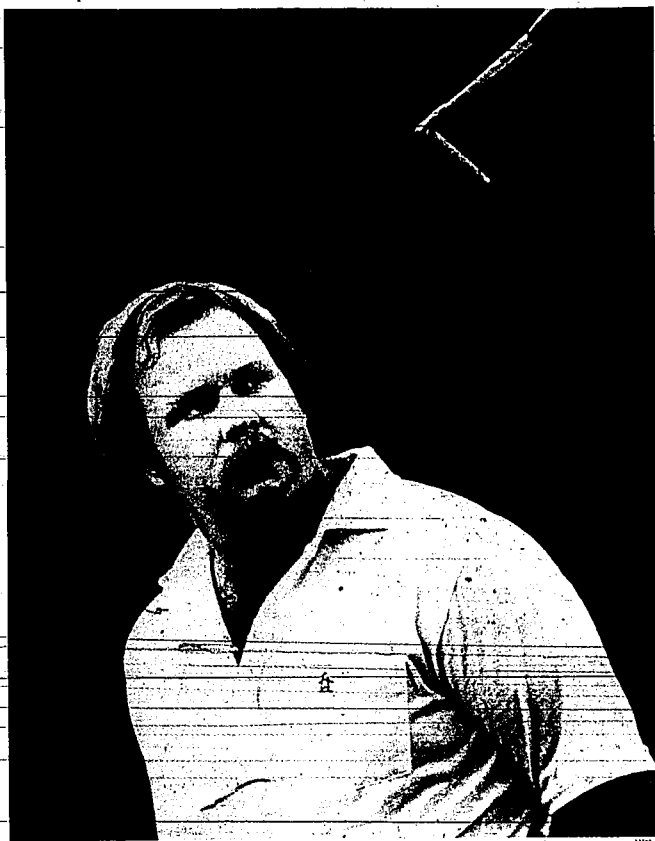

Defending champion David Graham, who "tripped with the way" played, opened with a 69, where he was deadlocked with Ben Crenshaw, his victim in last year's PGA playoff, and Hale Irwin.

U.S. Open champion Jack Nicklaus was in a big group at 70 that also included Johnny Miller, Lee Eker, Ray Floyd, Lou Binkle, Jack Renner, Morris Hatalesky, Bob Gilder, George Archer and Tohru Nakamura.

"I played fairly well but I missed an awful lot of putts," said Nicklaus, a four-time PGA champion. "I'm sitting in good position. If I shoot under par tomorrow, I could be leading."

Tom Watson and Lee Trevino, the tournament favorites, got off to disheartening starts, Watson notching a 75 and Trevino a 74. However, neither man ruled himself out.

"You won't discourage me with a stroke," joked Trevino, who won the U.S. Open at the same Oak Hill course in 1958. "I've already won $300,000 this year, which is $100,000 over my quota. Next year I only have to win $100,000." Watson, unable to control his putter, ran into big trouble on the back nine, playing it in 4-over and getting a double-bogey on the par-3 15th when he drove into water. "I played a reasonably good round of golf except for a couple of shots," said Watson, playing his first competitive round since winning the British Open. "I'm disappointed with the round. I wish I could have sunk a few putts, but 75 isn't out of the tournament." For the first time in longer than he could remember, Watson failed to register a single birdie in his round. Stadler, who hadn't played in the United States since the Canadian Open in mid-June — taking time off to go to the British Open — birdied only one hole on the front nine, sinking a 20-foot putt on the second hole. But he then birdied the 10th, 12th and 14th holes with putts of 15, 8 and 6 feet before notching his lone bogey on No. 16 when he flew in over the green, chipped back and missed a 20-foot putt. Stadler already has won twice this year, the Hope Classic and the Greater Greensboro Open, for earnings of $183,000. With the exception of Stadler, all those shooting-under par played their rounds in the morning before the greens became bumpy.

Bradley has lead with sizzling 65

TORONTO (UPI) — Pat Bradley withstood scorching 90-degree temperatures, heavy showers and swirling winds Thursday for a near-record 3-under-par 65 and a three-stroke lead in the first round of the $150,000 Canadian Ladies Classic.

Bradley, one of the LPGA's most consistent money-winners over the past three seasons, captured the par-73, 6,255-yard layout at the St. George's Golf and Country Club with a round featuring seven birdies and an eagle.

At the 446-yard, par-5 14th, she drove within 15 feet of the pin with a 2-iron and two-putted. She managed par on the final three holes, not allowing drizzling showers and 25 mph winds to spoil her round.

Kathy Whitworth, the LPGA's all-time money-winner, showed signs of breaking an 18-month slump with a 5-under 68 to stand alone in second place. Beth Daniel, 1979 Rookie of the Year, fired a 4-under 68 to share third place along with sophomore pro Janet Coles. 12th-ranked Donna White and veteran Jane Blalock were tied for the second round of the 72-hole tournament will be played Friday.

"It was a beautiful day. A day like this you never want to end," said Bradley, who has mustered 11 under in the past three months, finishing in the top 10 in 10 of her last 13 tournaments. "I chipped very well when I missed a green and I capitalized on the par-fives all the way." Her 65 was one short of the course record set by JoAnne Carner in 1978. She could have easily bettered the mark if the weather had not suddenly changed from the clear, 90-degree temperatures during the earlier holes.

"Those finishing holes are crucial," Bradley said, "I was hurrying a bit near the end because the rains came and the wind blew. I was able to negotiate the wind, which was very swirling."

The 5-year tour veteran from Westford, Mass., languished without a victory last season despite earnings of $132,000. She broke her modest slump last month with her victory at the Greater Baltimore.

"Last year I had six seconds and did not win. This year I have a victory so it's an improvement. I feel I have improved each year," Bradley said. Whitworth, whose 80 career victories was second only to fellow leader Sam Snead's Mickey Wright, was in the clubhouse two hours ahead of Bradley with a lead that seemed safe.

"I controlled the ball well," she said, "and I was confident of where it landed. I have a seven-iron that will perform for a year and a half but I think I'm bringing it all together again." Whitworth rattled off eight birdies but suffered three bogey. Her steady birdie play offset by a few putts from no farther away than 12 feet.

Carner and Cindy Hill were five strokes off the pace at 3-under 70. Nancy Lopez Melton, gunning for her third victory this year, had a 1-under 72.

Ali continues to hyp fight against Holmes

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — Under a broiling mid-day sun with temperatures near 110 degrees, Muhammad Ali and Larry Holmes participated in ground-breaking ceremonies Thursday at Caesars Palace where a temporary arena will be built for their Oct. 2 battle for the World Boxing Council heavyweight title.

Holmes, the unbeaten WBC champion from Easton, Pa., absorbed Ali's verbal jabs later in the day at a news conference.

"I'm out to conquer immortality," said Ali, 38, making a comeback after a 2-year layoff. Speaking to Holmes, Ali's former sparring partner, the three-time champion said, "I'm not going to defeat you, but knock you out. You're nothing but my ex-hired hand, my ex-employee, my boy. You know I'm truly your master."

"You think I'd come back just to go out a loser? If I did that I'd be the biggest fool of all time. You've come into the light and now I plan on coming back to capitalize on my hired hand."

Holmes, 30, was more subdued and took the verbal harassment calmly. "This is a great opportunity to get out of Ali's shadow," he said. "Although I know I'm fighting a legend, there's no way way Ali can beat me now at his age. This is my time. Ali's his time. It will be a miracle if he whips me."

"All is very cagey but he's eight years older than I am and I'm in my prime. I'm going to put pressure on him and make him fight every second of every round."

However, Holmes said the fight would not go the distance, predicting a 12th stop Ali, now living in Los Angeles and training in Deer Lake, Pa., within 10 rounds. Later, Ali sparred and shadowboxed in the ring. A prominent roll of fat bounced and jiggled around his midsection. It will be Ali's first fight since regaining the World Boxing Association heavyweight crown in December of 1978 with a 15-round decision over Ron Spivey.

Holmes' fourth fight in 1980 and will be his eighth title defense since winning the crown.

Times-News tennis tourney scheduled for Aug. 23-24

TWIN FALLS — The second annual Times-News-Falls Brand Tennis Flight Tournament is set for Aug. 23-24 at various Twin Falls courts. This is an all-ability, all-age tournament. Entries will be limited to 96 players.

An entrant will be paired as closely as possible with seven other entrants of the same ability to make up a flight. Play will be in both singles and doubles, with a doubles partner assigned from within the flight.

Prizes will be awarded for first, second, and consolation places in singles, as well as the first place doubles team in each flight. Players must report 15 minutes prior to their match, and must return to Harmon Park immediately following their match. Tournament headquarters will be Harmon Park.

First round match times and flight groupings will appear in the Times-News Friday, Aug. 22. For more information, call Loren or Susan Whitney at 734-9548.

U.S. Open Top seeds fall in clay court tourney

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — Gene Mayer and Harold Solomon, the top two men's seeds, were defeated Thursday in the third round of the U.S. Open Clay Courts tennis championships. Mayer was beaten by No. 16 Terry Moor, Memphis, Tenn., 6-2, 6-3, and Solomon, Fort Lauderdale, Fla., was ousted by unseeded Mel Purcell, Murray, Ky., 4-6, 6-2. Chris Evert, Lloyd and Evonne Goolagong, the top two women's seeds, advanced to the semifinals Friday without too much difficulty along with No. 4 Andrea Jaeger of Lincolnshire, Ill., and Ivanna Madruga, the sixth seed from Argentina. Solomon captured the first set but stopped chasing difficult shots after losing the first two games in the second set. In the third set, he came back to split the first four games but Purcell outplayed him in the final four games to move into the quarterfinals. Eddie Dibbs, the No. 3 seed from Miami, survived as the top-seeded men's player by beating Per Hjertquist of Sweden 6-1, 6-1. Goolagong downed No. 5 Regina Marsikova of Czechoslovakia 7-5, 6-3 and Madruga beat unseeded Czech Hana Strachonova 6-1, 6-2. Moor, 28, of Memphis, Tenn., used what Mayer called a "wrist" style of play to defeat him. Moor said he won because he handled the high temperatures humidity better than Mayer. "I think I'm a little more used to it than he is,"

Moor explained. "I'm a different people in different ways." Mayer, Westmore, N.Y., said a pulled thigh muscle, which he suffered at Wimbledon, did not hamper his play in this $350,000 tournament. In other men's play Thursday, No. 10 Elliott Tellescher, Pies Verdes Estates, Calif., defeated Christophe Franc, No. 6 Wojtek Fibak of Miami beat former champ Zeljko Franulovic of Yugoslavia 6-4, 6-2 to reach the men's quarterfinals. In a late afternoon match, Jose-Luis Clerc of Argentina, No. 4 easily defeated Australian Kip Warwick 6-2, 6-1 to move into a potential pairing with Moor.

Two state slowpitch titles to be decided in Twin Falls

By MARV CLERMONS
Times-News sports editor

TWIN FALLS — Softball season is over for most area teams but for a few more weeks, the most important part of the campaign is just at hand.

Two Idaho State Softball Association State Tournaments — the men's Major and men's Class A — are being held in Twin Falls this weekend. The action, and plenty of it, starts today at 11 a.m. at Harmon Park.

The Class A tourney has a field of 24 teams while there are eight teams in the major division. Both tournaments are double elimination, so there could be as many as 62 games played. Most of the games will take place at Harmon Park while a few will be played at Frontier Field.

Club 93 of Twin Falls won the district title to make the state tourney and has a bye in the first round. Although the team tied for third in the regular city league action, Manager Gregory Goss feels his team can make a bid for the state crown.

"We've played quite a few class AA teams in tournaments this season and have had good success," Goss said. "That's why we hope we can do well in state."

Club 93 posted a 14-8 record in the city but took second in a state title tourney last week as they were fourth in another tourney at Mt. Home and placed third in the local Budweiser tourney.

Doug Hemingway will do the pitching for Club 93 while Manager Tom Ash will manage and Jim Kennedy will lead the offensive attack for the well-balanced team.

Wholesale Carpet was an also-ran in the local play but

Ten area teams point for state playoffs

TWIN FALLS — While 32 men's teams are battling for two state titles in Twin Falls this weekend, there are 10 area softball teams involved in state tournaments in two other Idaho towns.

The Class A women's tourney is in Nampa and three area teams qualified through district play. Donnelly Sports-Bob Reese Motor of Twin Falls, Warm Springs Ranch of Ketchum and Pepsi Cola of Twin Falls are in the tourney.

Donnelly-Reese appears to have a good shot at the Class A crown. The team is a combination of two teams that played last season. Brenda Latham and Theresa Woods are two talented pitchers, according to Co-manager Ron Stansell while left fielder Carrie Hansen, shortstop Tammy Crum and first baseman Karen Harr are some of the leading players.

"Actually they're all pretty good," Stansell said. "If we can go to state with the same attitude that we had in district and get the same type of hitting I feel we have a real good chance at winning it. But you know how that goes."

Donnelly-Reese received a bye in the first round and will play at 5 p.m. Saturday in its first test.

The Class B women's finals are at Coeur D'Alene. Ponderosa Texaco of Rupert, Club 93 of Twin Falls and Castleford Turkeys went one-two-three in District 7 play to make that tourney.

Coeur D'Alene is also the site for the Class B Men's tourney and four teams advanced from the local district. They include PGO of Ketchum, John Lutz Mamba's, R&R Lounge of Buhl and Winn & Company-Kelly Oil of Buhl.

enters the tourney with hopes of regaining some of the magic that led the team to second place finish in 1977.

"We're the oldest team in the tourney with an age average of 32 years," Manager Steve Gentry said. "Paul DeWitt and Richard Cook are the top hitters for the team while Tony Warner and Floyd Miller will do the pitching. Wholesale Carpet has a 17-15 record. Goss sees Jack Ellis Glass of Boise as the favorite for

The Class A crown.

Other top teams, according to local softball followers, include Hilderberg of Sandpoint, The Time of Lewiston and Sports-Relaxers of Coeur D'Alene.

Irving's Riders of Ketchum and Hire's Root Beer-Snake River Tire of Twin Falls are also in the event. Great Expectations of Jerome and Sawtooth Oil of Ketchum did not qualify in district play, but will be filling in for two northern Idaho teams that could not make the trip.

The class A tourney starts at 11 a.m. today when Irving's Red Hot's faces European Motors at Harmon Park. The championship finals will start at 1:15 p.m. Sunday at Harmon Park. No. 1 and a second game, if needed, will be played at 3:45 p.m.

The major tourney includes class AA teams. Some of the top contenders include Overland Lumber of Boise and Rathskeller of Moscow.

Coors of Magic Valley, champion of the Twin Falls A League, will meet Henry River Boise in the opening round at 10:30 a.m. Saturday at Frontier Field No. 2. Coors put together a 20-3 mark to win the local league crown.

Coors Manager Tom Ash feels his club can make a run for the title. Coors has played several of the teams in the tourney and owns a 4-0 win over Overland Tire, a win that came in the Sun Valley tourney last month.

"It all depends on who has the hot bats," Ash said. "I feel we have a good chance as anybody."

Ricky Reese (.659), Gary Hite (.561) and John Bryant (.570) led Coors in hitting while Mike Phillips is the pitcher.

Big O Tires of Buhl is another local team in the major division and needs Overland Lumber at 10:30 a.m. Saturday. The Overland Lumber team is the oldest Sports team that qualified and played in the national tourney three times in recent years. Overland (MCI) is the defending state champion.

The major tourney does not start until 10:30 a.m. Saturday and the district play for Sunday at 5 p.m. and, if needed, 7 p.m. on Harmon Park No. 1.

Briefly in sports

Grid officials meeting set

TWIN FALLS — Individuals planning to certify to officiate high school football must attend a meeting at 7 p.m. Monday at Twin Falls High School.

District Commissioner Paul Ostyn said Dick Sletke, executive secretary of the Idaho Intercollegiate Activities Association, will be on hand to discuss new procedures and rule changes for the season, which opens locally Aug. 29. Ostyn said it didn't appear any major rule changes were on tap this season.

Ostyn also listed three succeeding meetings for officials: Ostyn will conduct a meeting at 7 p.m. Tuesday at the High School and Ernie Craner, sixth district commissioner, will discuss mechanics at a third meeting at 7 p.m. Aug. 25 at TFHS.

Ostyn said the state test would be given at 7 p.m. Sept. 8 at TFHS.

Bicycle club states Sunday ride

TWIN FALLS — The Magic Valley Bicycle Club will conduct a ride, swim and picnic at Nat-Soo Park Sunday.

The bikers will leave Twin Falls city park at 12:30 p.m. Sunday. Spoken for the group said "routing" pace will be employed for the 18-mile ride to the natural area. It was noted the ride back will be easier since the trend of the route is downhill.

The ride is open to anyone in the seventh grade or older. More information may be obtained by calling Cindy at Valley Schwinn, 733-9671 or 733-8384.

Coaches set clinic dates

JACKPOT — The third annual Fourth District Coaches clinic will be held March 14-15 at Cactus Pete's Convention Center.

Clinics will be offered in football, basketball and wrestling.

Co-chairsmen Gregg Smith of Buhl and Gordon Hogan of Kimberly anticipate 200 high school and college coaches attending.

Bengals to split QB chores

WILMINGTON, Ohio (UPI) — Cincinnati Bengals head coach Forrest Gregg plans to split quarterback duties between veteran Ken Anderson and Jack Thompson Saturday night when the Bengals take on the Broncos in Denver for their first exhibition game of the season.

"We'll start the starting unit and mix rookies in as time goes along in the game," he said.

Fullback Pete Johnson, who has a pulled thigh muscle, is doubtful for the game, as is tight end Jim Corbett, who has a sprained ankle. A twisted knee may also keep rookie defensive back Greg Bright sidelined.

The game is not expected to be a sellout, with only about 50,000 people expected because it not included in the Bronco's season-ticket package.

Oilers won't renegotiate contracts

HOUSTON (UPI) — The Houston Oilers Thursday announced in the wake of linebacker Robert Brazile's walkout from training camp over a demand for more money that they will no longer renegotiate any player's contract.

Coach Bum Phillips said at the team's training camp site in San Angelo before the team's statement was issued that four-time all-pro Brazile, who missed his third day of workouts Thursday, must return before talks would resume.

Ladd Herzog, Oilers chief administrative officer, said in the statement the offer recently made to Brazile would be honored. It reported called for the team to advance him $45,000 of a $90,000 base salary for this season.

"The financial plan previously offered by the club is unequivocally our final posture on the situation," he said.

In recent years the team has renegotiated contracts for Earl Campbell, Billy White-Shea, Johnson and Mike Barber.

"In certain isolated instances," Herzog said, "we have agreed to renegotiate contracts. However, on the basis of recent events we have elected to adopt the posture that henceforth we will abide by a policy of absolutely no renegotiations under any circumstances."

Richard 'has best day yet'

HOUSTON (UPI) — The Houston Astros Thursday said partially paralyzed pitcher J.R. Richard continued to improve and had "his best day yet."

Team physician Dr. Harold Brelsford termed Richard's progress in his rehabilitation from the effects of a stroke as "very gratifying."

"His appetite is improved," the doctor said.

Richard was moved from an intensive care unit to a private room Wednesday, one week after undergoing emergency surgery for removal of a blood clot. The All-Star pitcher has experienced a weakness of his left arm and leg since then.

Utica hires Costello

MILWAUKEE (UPI) — Larry Costello, former coach of the Milwaukee Bucks and Chicago Bulls of the National Basketball League, is going to be a college coach in the area where he was a cage star in his early years.

Costello was hired Wednesday as basketball coach at Utica College of Syracuse University.

Costello grew up in upstate New York, in Milnoa, and his father still lives in Bridport, just outside Syracuse. He was a star guard at Niagara University and later played for Syracuse of the NBA.

Utica College is a four-year branch of Syracuse University with an enrollment of 2,400. It is a NCAA Division III school in basketball but plans to move up to Division I status for the 1981-82 season.

Costello will replace Jim "Doc" Spartano who will stay on as his assistant. Costello has bought a house in the Utica area and will assume his duties Sept. 1. He and his wife and four daughters had been living in the Milwaukee suburb of Brookfield.

Steelers won't play stars

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Veteran Pittsburgh running backs Franco Harris, Rocky Bleier and Sidney Thornton will be held out of Saturday night's preseason game against the New York Giants, a Steelers spokesman said Thursday.

The spokesman said coach Chuck Noll wanted to get a look at his younger ball carriers — Gregg Hawthorne, Rick Moser, Anthony Anderson, Bill Ring and Rick Volney. Hawthorne and Moser will start.

The Steelers will leave for New York Friday after holding a special teams practice.

Reds against DH rule despite having Bench

CINCINNATI (UPI) — The designated hitter rule seems tailor-made for Cincinnati's Johnny Bench, who plans to retire from full-time catching duties next year, but Reds' President-Dick Wagner is still against the rule.

"For us to change our stance on the rule merely because we have a player who would be ideal for the rule would be short-sightedness on our part," said Wagner.

The DH, in effect in the American League since 1974, is among the items on the agenda next Wednesday when National League club owners hold their annual meeting in Detroit. A simple majority vote would pass the rule.

A recent survey indicated five NL teams favored the rule and four opposed it. Supporting the DH were Atlanta, St. Louis, New York, San Diego and Houston, while Cincinnati, Chicago, Philadelphia and Pittsburgh were backing the change.

Wagner said there's no evidence that the designated hitter rule has stimulated attendance in the American League.

"I don't think it helps the game one bit," he said. "I'm sure (Reds manager) John (McNamara) feels the same as I do."

McNamara has said he will be hard-pressed to get Bench at least 500 at bats if he does not catch regularly, so the DH would be convenient in this case.

Galbreath rejoins Saints

VERO BEACH, Fla. (UPI) — Fullback Tony Galbreath ended his 12-day holdout and rejoined the New Orleans Saints Thursday, but neither side disclosed whether the team granted him the $100,000 loan he sought or made other concessions.

"Everything is resolved," said Saints general manager Steve Rosenbloom. "We are happy that Tony is back in camp and ready to play football. We will not discuss terms of the agreement."

Galbreath, who was fined $500 a day during his holdout, practiced with the team Thursday but will not play in Saturday's exhibition opener against the St. Louis Cardinals. The Saints' starting fullback will be Jack Holmes.

"We'll give him time to get back into the swing of training camp," said Coach Dick Nolan.

Galbreath left camp July 27 after the team rejected his demand for a $100,000 loan in addition to the salary and benefits already in his contract, which expires in 1985. He stayed at his agent's home in Pueblo, Colo., while the two sides were at odds.

He and agent Randy Eddy flew to Vero Beach Thursday and concluded talks with Rosenbloom and other team officials Friday.

"I feel good about the agreement. I'm glad the situation is over. I missed everybody here, my teammates and coaches. Now I just want to play football. This is where I belong."

BRIDGE

Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag

Declarer hog-ties defense

He has lost one trick and must lose a diamond and one of two clubs. Can he do anything to keep his club losers to one? He sure can if East holds both king and queen or a doubleton honor. He also has various plays against West, but as you can see not one of these plays will succeed. Nevertheless there is a winning line of play. Is it a squeeze or end-play? Not if it involves using the queen-jack-10 of diamonds to develop a trick. South works on that suit and it doesn't matter where the ace and king are located. South simply leads a diamond and lets either defender in. The best defense will be another heart lead. South ruffs, leads a second diamond, and discards one of dummy's clubs. Now the defense has taken two diamond tricks instead of one, but South has established his last diamond as a winner. He can discard another club on it and will now be able to ruff both his small clubs in dummy. Could East win the first diamond and lead a club to stop this? No. If the defense attacks clubs, South will only have one club loser. (NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASS'N.)

By Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag
South wins the heart lead with dummy's ace and tries the spade finesse. A second heart falls to his king and he draws the last trump.

Film clips

Robards role
HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Jason Robards will portray President Grant in the movie version of "The Legend of the Lone Ranger."

Producer Walter Coblenz announced that Robards will join Killion Spillbury as the Lone Ranger and Michael Horse as Tonto in the movie which William Fraker will direct in and around Santa Fe, N.M.

The $15 million film reunites Robards with Coblenz who produced "All The President's Men" for which Robards won an Oscar in 1975 for best supporting actor.

Douglas cast
HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Two-time Academy Award-winner Melvyn Douglas landed a co-starring role in "Art of Deceit," a comedy-drama starring Wayne Rogers, Marie-France Pisier and Samantha Eggar.

Roger Vadim is directing the international cast in Montreal from a story by Lionel Chetwynd and Jean-Yves Escoffier.

Douglas, nearing 80, has spent 60 years in movies, television and on stage. He will play an art forger who passes along the tricks of the trade to Rogers.

Ladd lands
HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Cheryl Ladd, one of "Charlie's Angels" will portray the late Jean Seberg in the Warner Bros. movie based on the life of the blonde actress who took her own life at the age of 41.

The studio bought film rights to the story from author David Richards whose Seberg biography will be published soon.

Ladd will be making her feature film debut in the movie which will go into production next year in Hollywood, Iowa and Paris.

Jennings debut
HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Country and western singer Waylon Jennings will make his acting debut as a semi-professional football player in "The Oklahoma City Dolls," a two-hour ABC-TV movie.

Jennings will co-star with Susan Blakely who will play a female football star.

Jennings won the Grammy Award for Best Country & Western Male Vocalist in 1978 and awards for the best song in 1978 and 1979.

Mason's "Search"
HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — James Mason will host "The Search for Alexander The Great," a four-part docudrama on the life and times of the man who conquered the known world at the age of 37.

Scheduled to be shown on the Public Broadcasting System early next year, the four-hour show will be produced by Time Inc. with the aid and cooperation of the Greek government.

The programs will explore the character, family, lifestyle and friends of the ancient Greek hero along with his literary exploits. Mason, in modern dress, will appear throughout the film.

HBO available in Buhl

BUHL — Cable-TV subscribers here have a chance to receive Home Box Office programming now as the service becomes available this week.

HBO features about 35 different programs — movies, entertainment, specials and sports — which will be shown each month, said Wayne Moberg, system manager.

Approximately 75 percent of the HBO programming is movies, with entertainment specials about 15 percent of the mix and sports the remaining 10 percent. Subscribers of the cable system will be given a preview of the programming for one week, which began Thursday.

More information about HBO in the Buhl area can be obtained by calling Moberg at 543-6300.

Scotsman expresses heritage through music

Bagpipes fun for Buhlman

By TRUDI TARIO
Times-News writer

BUHL — Robert Letch, at age 55, learned to play the bagpipes.

That was eight years ago and now the newborn musician admits, "I've had more fun with this than anything I've ever done."

Letch's passion for pipes began as a child, when he was enveloped by Scottish airs cranked out on the family Edison phonograph. Five generations back his family emigrated from Scotland to Ontario, Canada. His father became a sheepherder and finally settled in the Three Creek area. None of his clan played the pipes, but they kept their Scottish heritage alive.

Letch met a bagpiper in 1972 and decided to learn to express that heritage through its music. He faithfully makes time for a daily practice session, although he works at the Green Giant plant and must put in long hours during the peak packing period.

His determination has paid off. With no prior musical training, he has taught himself to play, with the aid of a few fellow bagpipers and manuals, such as the classic "Scots Guard — Standard Settings of Pipe Music."

"It took me a year to learn my first tune, 'Green Hills of Tyrie,'" he said, "and because I'm older things are harder to learn."

Physically demanding, bagpiping requires a strong diaphragm to power lungfuls of air steadily into the sheepskin bag. The bag is smeared with sheepskin oil to prevent leaking air.

Letch cradled the pouch under his left arm "like the goose it resembles," he added. Coordinating his arm and breath action, he pressed down his arm whenever he gulped air to maintain the steady characteristic drone of the bagpipe. Without coordination, the "goose" just squawks.

The hum is produced by the airflow from the bag through the reeds of the three pipes resting against the shoulder and upper arm. The longest pipe, the bass drone, holds a low A while the two tenor drones are tuned to it by tuning slides.

Letch blew a jaunty Scottish melody, full of trills, on the chanter. "Some people just learn to play a melody on the pipes," he said, "but I think it must be played like it should or I won't play it." He explained that embellishments, like the doubling of notes, are what gives the Scottish music its characteristic sound. "You play a note, add two chirps, then repeat the original note," he said.

Most of the time Letch plays solo, but for two years he was a member of the now-defunct Blue Lochs Highlanders, based in Twin Falls. Now he and his Irish wife, Eileen, travel in Salt Lake City for most of their Scottish pleasures.

The city boasts two pipebands and the Scottish Games, held at Westminster College the third Saturday in June. Competitions for drumming, solo pipes and pipebands, Highland dancing, sword dancing and flings fill the event with gaiety, they report.

Following the leader, in this case the pipe major's fingers, keeps the time, Letch explained. "I can't yet coordinate playing and walking, and my fingering isn't quite quick enough for those spritely reels and jigs."

He and his wife also attend the annual Tartan Ball in Salt Lake City, which is held on the Saturday closest to St. Andrew's Day (Nov. 30), Scotland's patron saint.

Other Northwest activities for Scotsphiles are the Scottish games held in Portland, Ore., in July and a two-week seminar at North Idaho College in Coeur d'Alene.

The Letches began a chapter of the St. Andrew's Society in Buhl, but participation in it faded away in 1975. "We used to hold a Bobbie Burns Night and a Scottish Picnic at the county fairgrounds every year," Mrs. Letch said. "We're still in existence but membership is down to our immediate family and a few friends."

But, Letch countered, bagpipers are "experiencing a boom in this country." They say the heart of bagpiping in the world will be the U.S. 10 years from now.

Why? "The boom will be a scarcity of pipes," he added, which range now from $425 up to $1,000 for those with silver or ivory mouthpieces.

Letch has shared his love of the pipes with the Magic Valley during this summer's Buhl Sagebrush Days, when he arranged for the Salt Lake Scots to march in the parade.

"That was a life-long ambition (to get them to Buhl). Later they played a concert in the park and old people thanked me with tears in their eyes," he confided.

This Saturday Letch will be piping Scottish airs for the crowds at the Hagerman Arts Festival at 8 p.m.

Robert Letch of Buhl learned to play the bagpipes eight years ago at the age of 55, giving him a chance to express his Scottish heritage. He taught himself to play with the aid of fellow bagpipers and the classic manual "Scots Guard — Standard Settings of Pipe Music."

Gardenia the star shines as 're-actor'

By LAWRENCE LAURENT

(©) The Washington Post - Vincent Gardenia has been an actor since he was 2 years old, but he's known in the profession as a "re-actor."

Gardenia is at his best when he's reacting to something or someone. His exasperation is immense. His contusion is rampant. His sadness is heart-breaking.

He's reacting at the moment to Shaun Cassidy in the new "Breaking Away" series on ABC-TV. He's a used car salesman who was once the best stonecutter in Bloomington, Ind.

Mostly, he is exasperated with a son who is mad for everything Italian and in love with bicycle racing. The father would have preferred a son who played team sports and, in hopelessness, laments that when he won a certificate for singing "it was in the mixed chorus."

"Breaking Away," to be televised Saturday night, is based on a beautiful, fragile movie, but the series is not expected to thrive opposite CBS's "WKRP in Cincinnati" and NBC's completely revamped "Buck Rogers."

Gardenia has lost count of the number of film and television programs in which he's appeared, but he knows it includes more than 25 plays, on and off Broadway.

He received a Tony for "The Prisoner of Second Avenue" and was nominated for an Oscar for his role as the frustrated baseball manager in "Bang the Drum Slowly." He won two Obie awards for off-Broadway performances in "Machinal" and "Passing Through."

Gardenia's favorite role, that of Willie Loman in Arthur Miller's "Death of a Salesman," never brought any awards, but it did reduce the performer to real tears with nearly every performance.

No matter what happens to the TV series, Gardenia will continue working. He'll have to. Gardenia's only real hobby is cooking and he's had to give that up because of a weight problem — and a triglyceride count that's too high.

Gardenia specializes in Italian-style cooking, which is to be expected from a person who was born in Naples "about 55 years ago."

"I have doctor's orders to lose 10-to 15 pounds. I've given up just about everything except plainly cooked fowl, broiled fish, an occasional glass of white wine and a little occasional fun."

Though set in Bloomington, "Breaking Away" is being shot at the University of Georgia in Athens.

"Some lovely people, with a lovely home, invited me to come and cook the Sunday dinner. I made a lovely spaghetti à la bolognese and chicken caesars for 29 to 30 people. They loved it, but I didn't eat a bite."

Farrah likes stage; Elke keeps busy

Q: What's this about Farrah Fawcett turning away from movies to pursue a career on stage? Has she become such box office poison that she's not being offered any more film parts? — T.C. of Brookline, Mass.

A: Farrah, who recently completed the movie, "The Cannonball Run," opposite Burt Reynolds, is still a moderately warm movie personality despite her three box office flops. Intrigued by the stage, she just made her debut in "Butterflies Are Free" for friend Burt at his Florida theater playhouse. Another Reynolds pal, Dom DeLuise, directed the production, with Dennis Christopher of "Breaking Away" fame playing opposite Farrah.

Q: Whatever became of Linda Darnell, one of Hollywood's most beautiful movie actresses? — M.R. of Sarasota, Fla.

A: Linda Darnell died as the result of burns in 1965. She had been visiting the home of her former personal secretary in Glenview, Ill., when an early morning fire broke out. Although the secretary and her daughter escaped, Linda wasn't as fortunate. She died at the age of 43 a few hours later in Cook County Hospital. Incidentally, one of Linda's last movies was the 1957 production, "Zero Hour," in which she played a stewardess. Her movies has been named as this year's hilarious "Airplane," a takeoff on air disaster pictures.

Q: Hasn't Paul Newman's racing career been put in the deep freeze — his wife's insistence because of several accidents? — H.C. of Akron.

A: Paul's passion for the fast-track remains undiminished despite a couple of mishaps on the auto-racing circuit. Armed with more than a handful of trophies, he has no plans to curtail this side career. His wife, Joanne Woodward doesn't seem to mind. In fact, Paul's enthusiasm for the sport is so infectious that Joanne says she's ready to try auto racing herself. It might turn out to be a strong sort of on-track togetherness for the Newmans.

Q: Do you think Deborah Harry of the rock group Blondie has much of a career ahead of her as a movie actress? — R.C. of Brooklyn.

A: Some big Hollywood production types think so, although we're not so sure. Her wife, Joanne's slight physical resemblance to Marilyn Monroe has been duly noted, has been in two movies. One is a low-budget, non-musical drama, "Union City," filmed in New Jersey, and it hasn't yet been seen. More recently, Debbie got a big billing in the movie, "Roadie," about the adventures of a technician type for a rock band. The movie has so far laid a large egg at the box office, but Debbie is still being talked up as potentially a big film star. We'll have to wait and see.

FARRAH FAWCETT.
Curtain calls

Q: Ever since I saw her in "The Graduate," opposite Dustin Hoffman, Katharine Ross has been my favorite actress. Is she married? G.S. of Modesto, Calif.

A: Not at the moment, but she may be soon. Katharine says only: "I am divorced and doing very well, thank you!" Exactly from whom she is divorced is not very clear, and Katharine is not enlightening anyone. However, she has been romantically tied for some time to actor Sam Elliott, perhaps best known for his portrayal of the hunky but disillusioned beach boy in the 1976 movie, "Lifeguard." And for co-starring with Katharine in a horror film, "The Legacy." Things are said to be serious between the two, and a trip to the altar may not be far off.

Q: What's this about Neil Simon giving up writing to become a full-time movie producer? — A.C. of Brookline, Mass.

A: Neil has turned producer, but by no means would he ever give up writing. Along with his many plays and scripts in progress, the super-busy Simon will co-produce two of his upcoming movies, "Only When I Laugh" and "I Ought to Be in Pictures." Neil isn't turning producer for money but for that most-prized Hollywood commodity, "creative control." That means producer Neil will be able to pick and choose his casts and directors. But we expect Neil's writing will continue as prolifically as ever.

Q: Did Dorothy Lamour really work as a department store elevator operator during the early years of her show business career? — W.C. of Alexandria, Va.

A: Dottie's career hadn't really started some 45 years ago, when she worked at Marshall Field's department store in Chicago for the princely sum of $17 a week. Now, Lamour quips, she could fill the state of Illinois with all the people who claim they worked alongside her and shared her ups and downs.

Q: Seems every time I turn my dial, there's Shelley Long plugging her autobiography as a TV celebrity show. Does she have time for other interests? — S.S. of Little Rock, Ark.

A: Sure — thing. Paradoxically, Shelley's so hooked on the movies, she'll even promote books other than her own. The star, who was featured in Alan Ladd's 1949 flick, "The Great Gatsby," was invited to a bash in honor of the book, "Add," by Beverly Sills. Afterward, at a "Gatsby" screening at the Museum of Modern Art, Shelley had the audience in stitches with the confession that, as a naive starlet, she thought the great novelist was Scott Fitzgerald (author of "The Great Gatsby") was a young screenplay writer on the Paramount payroll. Fitzgerald, of course, did write screenplays before his death in 1940, but it took Shelley a few more years to catch up on his edition.

Q: It's been printed that David Niven is suing Paramount and producer David Merrick because he's upset over his billing in the movie, "Rough Cut." In all the ads I've seen, Niven's name appears as a co-star in big letters over the title, right after Burt Reynolds and Lesley-Anne Down. What's he excited about? — J.M. of Columbus, Ohio.

A: Originally, "Rough Cut" was filmed with a surprise ending that gave great importance to Niven's role. Later, the studio scrapped that ending and re-shot with Burt and Lesley-Anne spotlighted, as they are in ads for the movie. Niven claims his likeness was supposed to appear in "equal size, prominence, and color" in the ads, but there's just Lesley-Anne clutching Burt — no David. When he complained "in his gentlemanly way, he claims he was rebuffed, and his picture was even omitted from a revised advertising campaign. In addition, David says he has more money coming in him because the shooting went over the five weeks his contract called for.

Q: Isn't Rita Hayworth so self-conscious about her looks these days that she's ducking public appearances? — U.L. of Independence, Mo.

A: Although still of fragile and somewhat vulnerable disposition, Rita looks marvelous and is delighting longtime friends with her frequent telephone calls. Rita has also been showing up at a few big bashes in Hollywood, and she is ravishing.

Q: What's this about Tatum O'Neal planning to write a tell-all book of memoirs about her father, Ryan? His hyperactive love life should make for spicy reading. — V.P. of Armitville, N.Y.

A: Don't hold your breath. Tatum is not planning to write a book, although she's been badgered by a publisher to do so. Fact is, Ryan and Tatum are very close, and there's no way Tatum will write something negative about dad. As for herself, how much can you write when you've only been around 16 years? Tatum's mother, Joanna Moore, reportedly has been toiling at the typewriter for some time, but what she will have to say about her three-year marriage to Ryan is anybody's guess.

Q: Any possibility that the new "Popeye" movie will spring a surprise sequence featuring moments from the old animated cartoons — I fondly recall from my childhood? — E.H. of Greenbelt, Md.

A: Any rumors to that effect are pure spinach. This 1980 version of "Popeye" is populated exclusively with live actors and has many an animated frame. But Robin Williams and Shelley Duval, cast as Popeye and Olive Oyl, wear make-up and costumes so accurate, they eerily resemble the cartoon.

Q: One of the sexiest movie stars ever has to be Elke Sommer. What's she been up to lately? — D.H. of Alexandria, Va.

A: Elke has been very busy making movies ("Prisoner of Zenda" and "A Nightingale Sang in Berkeley Square") and appearing in the New York Industrial stage show. In the latter, the German-born actress sang in a husky voice that reminded everyone so much of Marlene Dietrich that there is now talk of a Broadway show for her. On the personal side, Elke, 38, has been married to writer Joe Hyams for 16 years.

PATCHWORK PUZZLE: Pedestrians and shopkeepers along New York's Third Avenue are wondering why Mary Tyler Moore was sporting a patch under her chin. She was spotted in various antique shops and boutiques two days in succession with the flesh-colored patch. It was also noted she was wearing shorts (nicely setting off her long legs) the first day, and on the second, hot pink pants. When anyone had the nerve to ask what happened to her chin, Mary mischievously winked and said: "I walked into a door." Chin first?

ROBERT REDFORD
Lady and a Gentleman

Q: We hear Robert Redford insisted that a co-starring role in his latest movie be changed from male to female. Is Redford finally getting back to making romantic films? — E.H. of St. Louis.

A: In "Brubaker," Redford portrays an idealistic state warder, and Alex Alexander is a governor's aide who tries to talk him into playing politics. Alexander's part was originally written for a man, but Redford saw the role as more effective if played by a woman, on the condition that no love scene crop up in the script. So romance wasn't the outcome, much to Alexander's disappointment. Well, what red-blooded American woman wouldn't be disappointed?

Q: Whatever became of Betsy Blair, who was so wonderful in "The Women," "The Mirror," and TV dramas. Is she still working? — A.C. of Wilmington, Del.

A: Now 57, Betsy has been married for the last decade to British movie director Karel Reisz and lives much of the time in England. Formerly wed to Gene Kelly (they were divorced in 1957), she has not been making movies for the last few years. Betsy still regards herself as "an actress" although she's active as a speech therapist, working with deaf and handicapped children. It doesn't provide top billing or much money, but Betsy says it is highly rewarding. Got a question? Write to Robin Adams Smith in care of this newspaper.

Books offer African insight

© The Los Angeles Times
SOUL FINDER: COME OUT OF AGE UNDER APARTHEID by Jason Laure and Etienne Laure (Farrar Strauss Giroux: $13.95) and BLACK GENESIS: AFRICAN ROOTS, text by John Devere, photographs by Jürgen Vollmer (St. Martin's: $12.95). The Laure's, writing for young readers, give us South African apartheid from the perspective of eight teen-agers — a Soweto boy, an English-speaking white girl, an Afrikaner boy, a Xhosa girl, an Indian girl, a coloured girl and a Zulu boy; curiously, none of the blacks is militant. Simple and direct, the book illuminates history and issues in that racially scarred country. "Black Genesis" has a hard time developing any point of view; apparently by tracing the journey of Kunta "Kintu" "Albin" "Kunta" "Roots," it moves from the village of Juffure in the Gambia, through Senegal to the slave-holding island of Goree. Along the way, it meanders through African religious philosophy, history and Mandingo tribal lore but, ultimately, winds up sounding like an apology for the African slave trade.

nutrition therapy in treatment — and prevention — of diseases, from obesity and hypoglycemia to mental disorders, cancer and heart disease. As part of the ever-growing "revolutionary" branch of orthomolecular medicine, Dr. Kunin claims — "the nutrition-prescription" movement is not a cult, but a new direction toward which all of medicine is moving." This valuable book clearly, credibly, explains it all.

THE MEN IN BLUE: CONVERSATIONS WITH UMPIRES by Larry R. Gerlach (Viking: $12.95). Why on earth would anyone want a job subjecting him each day to ridicule and scorn? For umpires, it's their absolute passion for baseball. So say 12 umpires, from "Beans" Reardon (who entered the major leagues in 1926) to Ed Sudol (who returned in 1977). They provide valuable insights into the changing game of baseball, and into areas often overlooked by fans. The conversational style is rich in anecdotes and memories and makes entertaining reading.

—CHRIS WALL

THE HEALTHY HOUSE PLANT by Jean F. Flashfield (Little, Brown: $12.95). Once you've caught the bug for house plants, the most likely thing you'll acquire next are the bugs themselves, or fungi, or viruses, or other assorted life resulting from poor environment to over- and under-watering. Blashfield provides a deductive approach: symptoms and their possible cause and cure. Her game plan involves tips on horticultural practices that are more preventive medicine than anything else. Invaluable, even for a veteran of full-scale attack.

—BARBARA SALTZMAN

AMERICAN WOMEN POETS: PIONEERS OF MODERN POETRY by Jean Gould (Dodd, Mead: $10.95) chronicles the feminine struggle for equal treatment in the arts. From Col. Thomas W. Higginson's reference to Emily Dickinson as "my partially cracked poetess at Amherst" to Kenneth Rexroth's thoughtful assessment of Babette Deutsch's "special calm," progress is evident. Other biographies recall Stein, Teasdale, Welle, Marianne

Moore, Milay and Bogan. Special is Gould's appreciation for Amy Lowell, "that most militant of Imagists."

—KENNETH FUNSTEN

TRAVELING LIGHT by Lionel Mitchell (Seaview: $10.95) is a nearly flawless first novel, following a young black from New Orleans boyhood to haunts in New York City during the middle '60s. Mitchell, a critic for the Amsterdam News, has a fine ear for dialogue and illuminates pressures — of — Northern — black experience through a succession of impressive characters — street sages, junkies, small-time hoodlums and beatniks. All along we clearly see one lonely man struggling for happiness in a culture both alien and familiar, black and white.

—MARK LEVITON

UNSETTLING EUROPE by Jane Kramer (Random House: $9.95) takes a topic of epic proportions and gives an iceberg-tip view of it. Four families are introduced from among Europe's 20 million migrants.

Fall programming far from excellent

NEW YORK (UPI) — It might be best for all concerned if the 1980-81 television season were postponed indefinitely.

Since the actors' strike may very well delay the start of the season — for how long no one can predict — why not save a lot of time, trouble and dial-witching?

We could skip directly to the winter schedule, when most of the new shows planned for debut in September will have to be replaced anyway.

That's how it looks after reading the "1980-81 Network Television Series Analysis" prepared for its clients by the big Madison Avenue advertising agency, Danco.

Fitzgerald Sample. "This seems to be the year of playing it safe with the networks — to make out in any new conceptual directions," says Phil Burrell, DFS programming vice president and author of the analysis.

In fact, some of the more interesting ideas are being held back for duty as replacements in November or January.

Every summer Burrell and DFS come out with a report on the upcoming season and this year's rundown is a depressing document.

Each new series is rated on its chances of success, from poor to excellent. This fall not one new series was given an excellent. Most are doomed by their mediocrity. A few are victims of scheduling — either incompatible lead-ins or uncombatable opposition.

The three networks — sifted through more than 100 pilots to come up with 18 new series this fall, with ABC introducing six, and CBS and NBC each presenting five newcomers. Last year the networks presented 25 new shows, and what a dreary lot they were. Only about a half-dozen remain on the air.

Of the newcomers, the DFS crystal ball predicts only three as possible hits.

In the possible category are "Magnum P.I.," a private eye show on CBS, and ABC's sitcoms "Too Close for Comfort" and "It's a Living." CBS' "Secrets of Midland Heights," a nighttime teen-soap opera, also could succeed, but the odds aren't great.

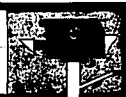

NBC's torrid "Flamingo Road" is given a chance to build into a long-shot possibility, and the network's "Games People Play" is rated a sleeper. Rescheduling for better lead-in and/or lesser competition could boost chances for "Ladies Man" (CBS), "Breaking Away" (ABC) and "Hill Street Blues" (NBC). As for the rest — they'll join "Supertrain," "Beacon Hill" and "Mr. T and Tina" along memory lane.

Don't get the idea that DFS is infallible. These are the people that rated ABC's "Galactica" as a show with an excellent chance for success when the "Star Wars" impact seemed likely to make science fiction a winner. They were wrong, but it should be noted they erred on the side of optimism.

As for trends, comedy still rules the airwaves, but two other formats are getting heavier play. One is the nighttime soap opera, the old "Feytan Place" formula revitalized in "Dallas" (CBS), spun off in "Knobs Landing" (CBS).
