Polish strikers demand reforms

The Washington Post

WARSAW, Poland — Polish strikers along the Baltic coast Sunday called for sweeping political reforms as their price for going back to work.

The presentation of the new demands, following the collapse of a tentative agreement to end a strike at the gigantic Lenin Shipyard in Gdansk, has added a serious new twist to Poland's gravest crisis in 10 years. The demands were formulated by an integrated strike committee empowered to negotiate on behalf of workers in 24 factories in the Baltic seaports of Gdansk, Gdynia and Sopot. The 18-point list of grievances goes to the heart of the communist system under which Poland has been ruled for the last 35 years.

Among the political demands are legalization of the right to strike, abolition of censorship, release of all political prisoners, full public discussion of new economic reforms, access for the Catholic church to news media and the removal of Communist Party interference in trade-unions activities

The economic demands include a 2,000 zloty ($68) monthly increase for all workers, abolition of privileges enjoyed by Communist Party officials, improved food supplies, inflation-linked wages and abolition of special shops where purchases can be made only in hard currency.

It is clear that the workers are more interested in improving their living conditions than in large-scale political reforms. But representatives of Poland's active dissident community are becoming increasingly influential at strike meetings and in the formulation of workers' grievances.

Hopes of Polish officials for an early end to the strikes were shattered Saturday evening when workers at the Lenin Shipyard overruled a decision by their own strike committee to return to work. With 18,000 workers, the Lenin yard was the first plant in the region to go on strike Thursday and has set the pace for subsequent negotiations.

Fearing isolation, workers in other plants asked the shipyard strikers to continue their three-day occupation as a gesture of solidarity. This was followed by the formation of the integrated strike committee, which, workers hope, will form the basis to a new independent trade-union movement after the strikes are over.

According to latest reports from Gdansk, no significant negotiations took place with management Sunday. Meeting in the Lenin yard, committee leaders argued among themselves over tactics and wanted to meet government representatives.

Visitors to the Gdansk shipyard Sunday reported that the leaders may have problems keeping their followers united since, after four days of sleeping at the yard, many workers are tired and dirty. Much depends on what happens today when work was to have resumed under the collapsed agreement.

Foul weather sends Titanic searchers fleeing for port

ABILENE, Texas (UPI) — Battered by "real bad" weather in the North Atlantic, a team of S.S. Titanic adventurers fled for home Sunday.

The probe's financier said they had "conclusive proof" they locating the "unsinkable" mammoth ship that went down in 1912, killing more than 1,500 people.

Poker-playing chief financier Jack Grimm, a millionaire oilman, said "they left this morning for Boston."

He said the 38 crewmen aboard the research vessel H.I.W. Fay were bucking 12-foot waves and 50 mph winds.

"I assume the sonar pictures we have will be conclusive proof we got it," Grimm said.

He said there was little doubt the research ship had found the remains of the Titanic 12,000 feet below the North Atlantic, 580 miles off the coast of Newfoundland.

"They got the TV cameras down, but the seas were too rough and they had to tow them back in," Grimm said. "The weather's bad — real bad."

He said he talked Sunday with expedition leader Mike Harris of Tampa, Fla., and was told the weather was "rough, bad" and getting worse.

He said the vessel headed toward Boston, where it was expected to arrive Thursday or Friday, "depending on just how slow they have to go."

As the weather deteriorated, fuel and provisions were getting too low, risk staying longer to obtain more conclusive pictures by TV cameras, Grimm said.

But he said "the pictures the sonar took — they're picture images made of sound — will show we found it."

Grimm said his men would return next summer with a submarine in order to descend into the numbing North Atlantic to get a close view of the stricken vessel.

Grimm said he was not worried about someone else moving into the area during the winter. He said such an expedition would take a massive amount of equipment, at least 50 men and a sophisticated ship.

"We'll go back in the summer," he said. "We're going right on with our project just like we planned."

The men aboard the research vessel lowered transponders Saturday to aid in more precisely locating the ship they believe to be the Titanic next summer. But Grimm said Sunday seas were too rough and they retrieved all their gear. It's just too rough.

Using remote-controlled "robots," the expedition adventurers also hope to retrieve artifacts aboard the ship next summer — including a legendary treasure trove in Antwerp diamonds worth $200 million.

The Titanic was believed located Friday by the sophisticated sonar gear near latitude 41.46 North and longitude 50.14 West — the last reported coordinates given by a crew member before it sank.

The 882.5-foot liner was on its maiden voyage from Southampton, England, to New York when it hit an iceberg and sank.

Expeditors are known to be interested in recovering the ship's bell and its log in hopes of trying to determine why the Titanic was steaming at top speed through an iceberg-riddled area of dangerous ocean.

Airport security tightens after air piracy outbreak

MIAMI (UPI) — Armed sky marshals moved into Miami and other cities Sunday in one phase of a drive to deter air pirates.

In another effort, airport security guards inspected arriving passengers more carefully.

The wave of air piracy included a record three hijackings in a single day Saturday.

The use of personality profile screening for arriving passengers led to the arrest Sunday at Miami of three men for trying to bring containers of gasoline aboard an airplane. But one of them was later released when it was determined he was not involved. Police spotted Jose Antonio

Pablo-Lugones, 39, with an unusual bulge in his pants as he tried to board an Eastern Airlines flight to Key West, said Bill Nettles, acting chief of the FBI Miami office. He said a search revealed he had tied a beer bottle filled with gasoline around his waist and hung it between his legs.

They also arrested Hector Picares Pinerio, 41, when a half-pint liquor bottle filled with gasoline was found in his coat pocket. The third man had been talking with the other two, but there was no other evidence against him.

Similar screening at the Tampa airport Saturday led to the arrest of four other Cubans, authorities said.

The six hijackings that began with a single incident Aug. 10 and ended with Saturday's three were blamed on varying numbers of Spanish-speaking men who identified themselves as disappointed recent immigrants who sought only to return home.

As the handful of Cubans tried to hijack their way back home, sealfit refugees continued to arrive at Key West. Six vessels with an undetermined number of refugees were on their way from Cuba's Mariel harbor Sunday. On Saturday, 187 refugees arrived on the sealfit, which has carried more than 119,000 people to U.S. shores.

Terrified Saudi bride, American husband safe in U.S.

DALLAS (UPI) — A terrified young Saudi Arabian woman who feared she would be forcibly returned to her homeland and executed for marrying an American, returned to the United States Sunday for a tearful reunion with family and friends.

Huda Al-Tasan, 22, a former student at the University of Texas at Arlington, and her husband, Tim Kreiner, 28, a Texan, said they spent the last four days in hiding outside Barcelona, Spain, where Kreiner worked as a product manager for Pepsico Foods International.

On arrival at Dallas-Fort Worth airport the couple embraced tearful family members and friends and briefly told waiting reporters, photographers and television camera crews they were glad to be back safely.

When the couple landed at Kennedy airport in New York, Kreiner said they fled Spain in fear of their lives.

"If we stayed where we were, Huda would have been taken and sent back to Saudi Arabia," Kreiner said.

They left Spain so quickly Kreiner didn't even have time to tell his boss where he was going and why. Mrs. Kreiner, who clutched a blue velvet box containing the Koran as she waited for her connecting flight, said she was told the Saudi government did not consider her marriage valid when she went to her country's Embassy in Spain to see about getting a residence permit.

"Through some people who are knowledgeable about the Islamic world, we were told that if I go to Saudi Arabia, I will be executed," said Mrs. Kreiner, a pretty, dark-haired woman wearing a black velvet suit and black pumps.

"I just want to say we're happy we're here and we're happy we're together," she added. Kreiner converted to his wife's religion before they were married in Texas earlier this summer. But Mrs. Kreiner said her parents have refused to accept her marriage because her husband is not a Saudi.

She said she last spoke to her mother, who is in Saudi Arabia, last Wednesday, after she was informed the Saudi government sought her to have her deported.

"I asked if there was anything they could do. They said no," she said in a trembling voice. "They did not want to."

The two met in Texas, where Mrs. Kreiner was a civil engineering student at the University of Texas in Arlington. They were married in the North Dallas Islamic Center.

They then went to Spain, where Kreiner has worked for the last 18 months and he decided last week to register their marriage officially with the Saudi and U.S. Embassies so Mrs. Kreiner could get a residence permit.

Judge orders Chicago air slowdowns halted

CHICAGO (UPI) — A federal judge Sunday issued a temporary restraining order preventing controllers at O'Hare International Airport from conducting flight slowdowns that have caused air traffic chaos of more than $1 million in fuel waste.

U.S. District Judge Nicholas J. Buia issued the order after the Federal Aviation Administration made its request through U.S. Attorney Thomas P. Sullivan-A hearing on the issues was set for Aug. 27.

FAA regional Director Wayne Barlow warned earlier in a letter to Richard Scholz, president of the Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization at O'Hare, the world's busiest airport, that an injunction would be sought to prevent a further job action by disgruntled controllers.

"The FAA intends to discipline employees who engage in any illegal job action," the letter said.

At the height of the slowdown by PATCO members last Friday, airline passengers reported planes spending four hours circling the airport before landing. The terminals were jammed with fuming passengers held up by massive delays.

O'Hare controllers, averaging more than $33,000 in wages a year, have demanded salary increases and lighter workloads.

FAA spokesman Neil Callahan said Barlow's letter cited 616 delays in arrivals and departures at O'Hare.

Soulet 'death ray' near

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Rep. William Dickinson, an Alabama Republican who serves on the House Armed Services Committee, believes the Soviet Union is close to bringing the "death rays" of science fiction into reality.

"As is the case in so many other areas of national defense, the United States is now playing catch-up," he said.

"There is considerable evidence to indicate that the Soviets already have an operational land-based laser weapon capable of putting low orbiting U.S. spy satellites out of action," Dickinson said. "And our government has good reason to believe that the Soviets are actively working on an even more awesome particle beam device."

U.S. lines up Berbera

LONDON (UPI) — The United States and Somalia will conclude an agreement this week on the use by the U.S. Navy and Air Force of former Soviet naval and air facilities at Berbera, the Observer newspaper said Sunday.

"The United States will provide $60 million in economic aid and $40 million worth of credit for weapons to Somalia in exchange for use of the base, the newspaper said.

Contract terms drawn

DENVER (UPI) — Officials announced Sunday a tentative agreement on a three-year contract had been reached between Mountain Bell and the union representing 28,000 of its workers in an eight-state area.

Lois Love, Mountain Bell spokesman, said the agreement reached before the midnight Saturday strike deadline would be voted on Tuesday by District 8 Communications Workers of America members.

"The pact affecting 28,000 phone company employees in Arizona, Colorado, Idaho, Montana, Nevada, Utah, Wyoming and El Paso, Texas, concerns 'job security, overtime and on-the-job safety issues,'" Love said.

Love said an agreement also had been reached with employees of Western Electric during a bargaining session that ended at 8 a.m. Sunday. That agreement affected nearly 10,000 Western Electric workers in Colorado.

CWA District 8 spokesman R.D. Thompson and Steve Lang, spokesman for Mountain Bell, said Sunday details of the agreements would be released Monday.

Israel drafts request

The Washington Post

JERUSALEM — The Israeli government next week will submit a request for $2.9 billion in U.S. military and economic aid for fiscal year 1982.

That amount is less than was requested last year but still well above what Israel has received in each of the last three years.

Government officials said the reduced aid request was prompted by an improved balance of payments, coupled with an increasingly realistic appraisal of what is likely to be approved by the White House and Congress.

Since 1977, U.S. aid to Israel — the highest to any country in the world — has been about $1.755 billion, including $1 billion in military aid and the rest in economic support.

Anderson says his efforts will start picking up steam

By United Press International

Independent presidential candidate John Anderson said Sunday his campaign has been obscured by "millions of dollars in free air time" the Republican and Democratic conventions got, but will soon climb in the polls again.

He told television interviewers he expects to meet qualifications set by the League of Women Voters to participate in presidential debates. This fall, he called himself the candidate with the best chance to defeat Republican Ronald Reagan.

Reagan, meanwhile, ended a two-week rest and planning sessions at his California ranch and flew east for speeches to two veterans' organizations, while President Carter arranged to end a fishing trip in Pennsylvania and fly back to Camp David, Md. for more rest.

Labor Day, still two weeks off, traditionally marks the start of the formal election campaign.

Anderson appeared on NBC's "Meet the Press" and was prepared for full answers to two questions — how to explain his recent drop in the polls to a low level of 14 percent recorded by Gallup in Sunday's poll, and whether he would be able to persuade a nationally-respected Democrat to become his running mate.

"His answer to both questions was an emphatic affirmative."

He said he had anticipated a sharp fall-off in support during the conventions, but believes that "in the period of the next two or three weeks we will recover ..." and meet the debate qualification.

JOHN ANDERSON ... sounds optimistic

The League of Women Voters has decided the debates should be open to any candidate who is on the ballot of enough states to have a chance of election, and who has 15 percent or more support in recognized national polls.

Reynolds said he had dropped from around 24 percent in June to 14 percent Sunday, Anderson replied: "Those figures should be viewed in the context of the two national conventions which dominated millions of dollars of free air time while we were in the shadow."

He also was predicted to name Democrats who have indicated they will, or may, support him or even join him on the ticket. But he did not do so. He acknowledged the difficulty of a Democratic office holder to turn his back on his party," but said he had talked to a number of them and will have the support of many.

Anderson did not commit himself to choosing a Democratic running mate, although the new Gallup poll said most of his supporters would prefer one. But he replied: "Yes — I don't want to limit myself, but yes. To the question whether his running mate will be "someone with a national reputation who holds, or has held, an elective office."

On CBS' "Face the Nation" Sunday, liberal Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., said he had pledged his support to Carter and believes most of the other Democrats who previously supported Sen. Edward Kennedy also will do so.

He said it may take awhile, but especially if Carter campaigns on some of Kennedy's economic issues, "he'll not only have the support of Senator Kennedy but, I think, the overwhelming majority of his supporters."

Suspect sought

CEDAR CITY, Utah (UPI) — Iron County Sheriff's deputies and Cedar City Police are looking for a young man who passed more than $1,000 worth of altered money orders in the Cedar City area.

The man used the name of Michael J. Cain, Sheriff Ira Schoppman said. The suspect is described as being in his early 20s, 5-feet-5, with long brown hair.

Brown calls new strategy effort to bolster deterrent force

HAROLD BROWN...deplores leaks

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The new U.S. nuclear war strategy is not a shift to embrace limited nuclear war, but rather an effort to "make America's deterrent force more credible," Defense Secretary Harold Brown said Sunday.

Brown stressed the policy, first expressed in talks to the press, is an evolution of strategy to give the president more options in the event of a nuclear attack — not a break with the past.

Brown, appearing on ABC's "Issues and Answers," also said a report by columnist Jack Anderson that the United States is planning an invasion of Iran is false.

"No, that's not true," Brown said when asked about the Anderson report.

He refused to say whether there are plans for another effort to rescue the 52 Americans held hostage by the Tehran government.

"I will not either confirm that or deny it. That is the kind of thing I just would not want to talk about," Brown said.

Brown said the new nuclear strategy — which calls for selective targeting of Soviet military facilities as well as cities and industrial centers — is not a step toward accepting the idea of a limited nuclear war.

"I don't think a nuclear war is winnable and I also believe a nuclear strike on the United States — even though we retaliated initially in a limited way — would probably escalate ultimately to an all-out nuclear war," he said. "That's why our approach to this issue remains one of deterrence."

"I consider a doctrine that says, 'if one nuclear weapon lands on the United States, then there will be a holocaust on both sides; not nearly so believable and not so much of a deterrent,'" Brown said.

"We are talking about the way the United States would retaliate to an attack on itself," he said, adding officials believe it is "important to give the president of the United States more options."

"This is not a revolutionary change in doctrine," he said. "It has always been the U.S. plan to attack military as well as urban-industrial targets."

Of the concept of massive retaliation, Brown said, "I don't think that's credible. I don't think it's as good a deterrent that says all kinds of targets in the Soviet Union would be at risk not only cities — also the conventional military forces... the nuclear forces and the military and political command system... which might be hit depends on the circumstances."

Brown said he intended to brief Secretary of State Edmund Muskie on the shift in policy before it was announced, but "the leaks to the newspapers pre-empted out intention."

Muskie has expressed displeasure that he was not fully informed of the coming change in policy.

Brown also said there are no specific plans now for a strategic bomber, a topic which has emerged as a campaign issue. "There will be no proposal for a new, manned bomber before the November election," he said.

Congress takes up tax cuts

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Tax cuts will be uppermost on the minds of a post-convention Congress as lawmakers return to work this week.

No floor action is expected on any tax cut measure in either body. But there will be plenty of action on the subject in the tax-writing committees of both the Senate and the House.

Senate Finance Committee members will start marking up a tax cut proposal today, while their counterparts on the House Ways and Means Committee will hold hearings then on the advisability of a tax cut.

Ways and Means Chairman Al Ullman, in a U.S. News and World Report interview released Sunday, gave some clues to what may happen in the House.

The Oregon Democrat said he thinks any tax cut will have to come in 1981 and will have to be "very minimal" — in the range of $25 billion to $30 billion.

"The basic essentials for next year are to offset the higher Social Security payroll taxes due to take effect Jan. 1, to adjust for increases caused when inflation pushes you into a higher tax bracket and to provide depreciation reform for business," Ullman said.

He said there is not enough time to enact a tax cut before this fall's election, and his target will be to get a bill through Congress by next Jan. 4.

The Senate committee is headed by Sen. Russell Long, D-La., who is up for reelection this November.

Republican sources say Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., senior GOP member on the Senate Finance Committee, will push for approval of the 10 percent across-the-board tax cut favored by Republican presidential candidate Ronald Reagan.

The House starts work Monday on 15 bills, including the Housing and Community Development Act and the Mental Health Systems Act. The appropriations bill for the treasury and postal system is the only legislation scheduled for floor action Tuesday.

The tough work for the House starts on Wednesday when the lawmakers act on the Budget Reconciliation Act. They also are scheduled to act on legislation dealing with the Energy Department's authorization concerning defense programs, the foreign service act of 1980, and the National Science Foundation authorization before the week ends.

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Ignoring the tradition of post-convention political recesses, Ronald Reagan began a four-day, cross-country campaign trip Sunday, featuring speeches to the nation's two largest veterans organizations.

The Republican nominee — who spent World War II as an Army Air Corps officer, narrating training films in Hollywood — is scheduled to address the Veterans of Foreign Wars convention in Chicago today and the American Legion convention in Philadelphia Wednesday.

While in Philadelphia, Reagan also will tour a shipyard and raise funds for GOP Senate candidate Arlen Specter.

Reagan relaxed at his mountain ranch north of Santa Barbara, Calif., during last week's Democratic National Convention. Aides said Sunday he is now ready to do some serious campaigning and take advantage of the current lead he enjoys over President Carter in the polls.

At a news conference Saturday to see running mate George Bush off on a nine-day trip to China and Japan, Reagan accused Carter of "serious" "distorted" charges against him during the convention to draw attention away from his own administration's failures.

"I'm not going to spend this time dealing with the distorted charges that were made by the president in his effort to keep as far away as he could from having to talk about his own record," Reagan said.

"I asked about specific Democratic charges, he replied, 'I know I'm not irresponsible.'"

"I suppose if you're in a fantasyland," Reagan said about the president, "everything else looks like a fantasyland."

Alaska land battle revives

States News Service

WASHINGTON — The Alaska lands issue comes back to life today, when Democrats return from their national convention in New York City.

However, the politics surrounding the issue has left an acid taste in senators' mouths.

The issue, which seeks to create thousands of acres of parklands, wildlife refuges and conservation areas in the 49th state, has been billed by President Carter as his foremost environmental priority.

Falling to come to a resolution of the matter last week, senators fled 100 degrees-to-the shade heat in the capital last week to mull their future political hopes, vis-a-vis an embattled President Jimmy Carter.

The Alaska lands issue remains stalemated essentially because Sen. Mike Gravel, D-Alaska, is betting his re-election on a no-bill strategy.

He has taken the firm position that no bill is better than what has been offered in the package culled from weeks of committee hearings by Sen. Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, and Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., the chairman of the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee.

President Carter has already withdrawn more than 150,000 acres of federal lands in Alaska from general "multi-purpose" use and labeled them "monuments" or wildlife refuges.

In an effort to break the deadlock between pro-environmental forces, led by Sen. Paul S. Tsongas, D-Mass., and proponents of the moderately pro-development version of the bill advanced by Stevens and Jackson, a compromise was written and may be offered if the quiet filibuster by Gravel can be disrupted.

Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., filed a cloture petition to shut off the quiet filibuster by Gravel who has paralyzingly delayed a time agreement that was meant to preclude a half-fledged filibuster.

It was the first time in the history of the Senate, insiders reported, that cloture had to be invoked to a bill with a time agreement.

If 60 Senators vote in favor of that cloture amendment on Aug. 18, Byrd said, the Senate will continue to consider the lands bill until there is a final vote on the alternative package pending.

"If cloture is not invoked, we will resume consideration of the bill under the time agreement

(and) we have already seen today what we may be expecting," he said.

By the time the Senate finished its debate last week, Gravel was embattled. Stevens faltered. Tsongas frustrated, the Alaska Coalition — a group of environmental organizations lobbying for the Tsongas plan — panicked and Alaska state lobbyists divided. Other senators, generally, were simply disgusted with the delays.

Gravel said in an interview he demonstrated that he can wage a filibuster single-handedly, causing the leadership not to be able to function and "taking the only recourse I see."

But signs of the Senator's senior status were not pleased.

Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., exploded with irritation about being constantly called to the floor for numerous roll votes.

"We are all going to be mighty sorry that we engaged in this horseplay all afternoon and not the business of America," Goldwater said.

Tsongas called Goldwater's outburst "a turning point in the debate."

"When you see Barry Goldwater sign a cloture petition (to shut off debate) you know the Senate is exercised," Stevens said.

McGovern hints Carter could lift embargo on grain sales

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., said Sunday President Carter is closely monitoring the effects of America's embargo on grain sales to the Soviet Union and "left open the possibility" he may end it.

The 1972 Democratic presidential candidate, interviewed on CBS' "Face the Nation," said Carter alluded during a Wednesday night discussion to the possibility when the senator called to congratulate him on his re-nomination.

McGovern said he told the president he wanted to campaign for him, but it would be a lot easier for Midwest Democrats to do so if Carter would drop the grain embargo, which was imposed in January after the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan.

"He didn't give me a promise to drop it," McGovern said. "What he did say was that he was monitoring it closely. He left open the possibility that at some stage he would do that."

McGovern, who had originally supported Sen. Edward Kennedy for the 1980 nomination, said the embargo "hasn't hurt the Soviets that much," but has been disastrous for American farmers, as well as the nation's shipping industry and merchant marine.

"I think I could campaign with greater effectiveness if the president would make some concessions on some of the things I still feel very strongly about," McGovern said. But even if he does not make those concessions, he added: "I'm still going to endorse him, preferring him very strongly to Gov. (Ronald) Reagan, the Republican presidential nominee."

McGovern also predicted Kennedy's disenfranchised supporters eventually will fall into line behind Carter.

Death of computer whiz James Dallas Egbert III attributed to gunshot wound

Mystery surrounds death of mathematical whiz, 17

DAYTON, Ohio (UPI)—James D. Egbert III was disconnected from life support systems and died from an apparently self-inflicted gunshot wound in the head, officials said Sunday.

Egbert was a teen-age mathematical genius with a mysteriously troubled personal life.

Egbert, 17, died Saturday in Grandview Hospital—six days after the shooting and without ever regaining consciousness. He had been kept alive by cardiac and respiratory life support systems.

The Montgomery County Coroner's Office said the boy was disconnected from the machines after doctors repeatedly tested for brain wave activity and found none. He was taken off with the approval of his parents and died at 3:50 p.m.

From the time of Egbert's admittance, doctors gave him no chance of recovery and cited "irretrievable brain damage." His parents, hospital officials and a flamboyant Texas private eye, whom Egbert seemingly felt he could talk to, all have refused to discuss either the boy's death or the reasons behind his strange disappearance from college last year, a disappearance that resulted in a nationwide search for the computer whiz with a 190 IQ.

Hospital spokesman Max Peterson did say the boy's eyes had been donated to the Dayton hospital, his kidneys to a Nashville, Tenn., hospital and some skin tissue to the Shriners' Burn Institute in Cincinnati. The family said private gravestone services will be held, but did not set a date. Instead of flowers, the family requested money be given to the Dallas Egbert Memorial Fund, which will be used to study the emotional problems of the gifted.

"The family hopes that his fund will help to bring national attention to the special emotional problems encountered by the gifted," said the boy's father, James II.

The money will be used by the Wright State University School of Professional Psychology. Egbert was a student at Wright State this year. Last August, Egbert disappeared from Michigan State University where he was studying computer science. After a nationwide search that focused on his activities in campus gay rights groups and his fascination with a complex game called Dragons and Dungeons, Egbert was finally found a month later by private investigator William C. Dear of DeSoto, Texas, and returned to Dayton.

Dear, contacted by the Dayton Daily News Saturday night, said he'd talked to the boy shortly before the shooting Monday. "He talked to me when he couldn't talk to his family, I guess," Dear said. "He wanted to know if he could borrow $200."

Nebraskan plans to reprint 'Yank' from World War II

LINCOLN, Neb. (UPI)—Carroll Stewart is bringing into reality an idea he had during World War II. Stewart, president of Sun Newspapers of Lincoln Inc., is also head of a new organization Reprint, Inc., which he formed to take veterans of World War II on a trip down memory lane.

The new organization will reprint the World War II publication, Yank, once a week for three years starting Nov. 1.

The Defense Department has authorized Reprint to reproduce each issue of Yank, the service tabloid that was published from Sept. 8, 1942, through Sept. 28, 1945.

The company is inviting veterans, and others, to subscribe to the 154 issues to be mailed to their homes. Stewart said he decided to get the project going after he realized many of his World War II friends are becoming elderly.

He said the dream began in 1942 when he was a private in the 8th Air Force's 33rd Bomb Group in Europe and started the first American overseas troop newspaper, The Liberator.

Col. Edward J. "Ted" Timberlake headed the 33rd and later became the Air Force's youngest general.

Stewart became a "public relations-intelligence non-commissioned officer and later, when commissioned, an aide to Timberlake.

It was while he was still a private that he decided the Yank weekly would some day become a collector's item and he would reprint it.

In 1948, a representative of the Fletcher Printing Works in Norwich, England, sent a complete bound set of Yank to Stewart who stored it in a bank vault until recently when the reprint project started.

Two weeks ago, Stewart discovered some pages missing from his first volume.

He called Timberlake in South Carolina who remembered he "had some stuff still out in the garage." About 40 minutes later he called Stewart and said he had found the missing pages.

Message clear to city's workers

PITTSBURGH (UPI)—The message to city employees is clear enough: "Lose weight or lose your job."

The city's Civil Service Commission, in a brainstorm last year, decided to allow overweight employees who otherwise qualified for certain promotions and transfers to take them if they agreed to shed a few pounds.

It seemed simple enough: employees would sign a contract to lose two pounds a week until they met the physical requirements, considered liberal by the commission, for the transfers and promotions.

It hasn't worked, and the commission—under fire—already is reviewing the program.

Three weeks ago, Police Superintendent Robert Coll suspended paychecks to a 5-foot-11, 245-pound female detention officer who had signed an agreement to lose 98 pounds, but lost only three.

Last week, the woman was fired by Coll, and at least six other employees in various city departments have had their pay suspended and face possible loss of employment for failing to live up to their contracts.

"It caused so many headaches," said Civil Service Commission chairman John Binger, explaining why the commission has stopped auditing employees to the weight program and gone back to simply rejecting transfers and promotions for workers who don't meet physical standards.

"We're faced with people who didn't meet the requirements still not meeting them," he said. "We're getting a lot of grief for what was really thought to be a benefit we were conferring."

KIDNEY GAMES

All contenders in the mini-olympics to be held Aug. 29-31 in New York's Central Park will have one thing in common—somebody else's kidneys. Says Transplant Olympics chairman Edgar Levin, "Many people are under the impression that transplant patients cannot participate in athletic competition. With this Olympiad, we can effectively dispel that notion." The event, sponsored by Gulf and Western Industries and the New York Road Runners—includes a three-mile run.

THE TROGLYDITES

David J. Jacobson is a man who likes to get to the bottom of things. All the way to the bottom. He's taking his camera underneath the sidewalks of New York to do a picture book on the city's subterranean labyrinth of tunnels, river channels, wire cables and caves—37,000 miles of them. The Manhattan marketing consultant says the city is catacombed with such places, many of which support a whole populace of otherwise homeless people.

GETTING IN SHAPE

Sometimes a man can't win with the best of intentions. Jerry Stiller figured he was getting a head start for show biz, so he spent the whole summer working out in a New York YMCA gym. He dropped 20 pounds with all the sweat—and now it's in vain. Stiller—the other half, with wife Anne Meara, of Sillier and Meara—opens Sept. 23 in a new Broadway show, "Fassione." The script calls for him to cook and eat sausages and pasta all the way through the first act. IN THE LONG RUN The Guinness Book of World Records may not choose to immortalize it, but Pat Carroll has one. She recently closed her one-woman show, "Gertrude Stein, Gertrude Stein, Gertrude Stein" in New York after 373 consecutive performances, and that tops all previous solo runs. Says her producer, Mary Ellen Devery, "Nobody has ever come close to that record."

JERRY STILLER ...prepares by diet

JACKPOT KING Okay trivia buffs—who's the winningest game show contestant in history? The Guinness Book of World Records laurels U.S. Navy Lt. Thom McKee with that honor. Barry and Enright's "Tic Tac Dough" has laureled him with $299,500 so far, and he's still going. He amassed his pile of cash in six weeks last year, and he'll be back in a bid to double his money when the show returns to the air this fall.

Mailing live white mouse puts witch doctor in trouble

PEARSTON, South Africa (UPI)—A mail order witch doctor has gotten himself in trouble with postal authorities because he sent a live white mouse as a cure to a client with money woes.

The mouse's mission was to sneak out at night, grab a mouthful of money from the local bank and return to the home of Mrs. Liza Sokol—who saw the mail-order witch doctor's advertisement in a magazine. The witch doctor, Mrs. Sokol said, claimed he could cure anything from cancer to money problems. After paying a $2.26 deposit, she was promised medicine that would make her money.

She paid another $13.10 for the service—but the plain brown paper parcel with the money was pure inside was intercepted at the Pearson post office when it wiggled across a sorting table, then shuffled across the floor.

"I didn't know what was happening. It was something I had never seen before in my years in the post office," said Daniel Koning, the town's postmaster.

Koning opened the parcel and found a tiny white mouse covering inside. "The poor thing was really scared," he said.

He summoned police to fetch Mrs. Sokol, to whom the parcel was addressed and she gave her explanation!

The mouse had been in the mail for five days with only a few sunflower seeds for food before it was opened on Friday.

"Mrs. Sokol explained the mouse was sent to fetch money from the bank at night to make her a rich woman," Koning said.

But now the mail order witch doctor faces possible prosecution—not for sending a potential bank robber in the mail, but for sending a live animal through the mail.

"I have sent a full report to my head office and they will decide what action to take," Koning said. "I'm just glad Mrs. Sokol didn't ask for something to make sure her children always had milk. She might have been sent a cow," Koning said.

President of college starts work on menus

OSKALOOSA, Iowa (UPI)—Students are tired of mystery meat and starchy food served in the cafeteria, so the president of a small Iowa college has decided to do something about their meals.

"Students can withstand almost anything, so long as the food in the cafeteria is good," said Dr. Gus Turbeville, president of William Penn College.

Turbeville said he has asked the food service to add bean sprouts, sunflower seeds and wheat germ to its cafeteria salad bar. He said he is aware the nutritional foods, which are relatively inexpensive, are not as popular as junk food. But he said he hopes they become a trend for the future.

Turbeville also has gotten the cooks to cut down on the amount of salt used in the preparation of meals served to students.

"So far, I have made little progress in getting rid of the unlimited desserts and sweetened drinks that students are allowed to take under the meal plan," he said. "I have seen trays with four or five glasses of pop and numerous desserts, and I no longer wonder why it is a rare occurrence to find an adult with all his natural teeth."

"If no longer wonder why obesity is a national problem, and why low blood sugar seems to be a nationwide affliction."

"Turbeville said food managers tell him vegetables served other than green beans, garden peas, corn and potatoes are often rejected.

"Many students have never, ever tried such delicacies as okra, parsnips, eggplant, blackeyed peas, artichokes, collards and squash," Turbeville said.

He said studies indicate there is a direct correlation between good health and good grades in school.

"When we serve junk food and then see them (students) perform poorly in the classroom while running up medical and dental bills, I wonder what kind of favor we do them in a practice which inevitably takes a toll, not only on life expectancy but also on quality of life," he said.

Infant panda keeps growing

MEXICO CITY (UPI)—The world's first giant panda conceived and born naturally in captivity was snuggled comfortably in mother Ying Ying's arms Sunday, one week after being born in Mexico City's Chapultepec Zoo.

In a separate cage, Pepe, the cub's father, chomped away bamboo shoots, delighting the dozens of visitors eager for a glance at the world's most famous panda family.

The panda's keepers have not yet determined whether the tiny cub is male or female, but zoo veterinarian Dr. Juan Tellez Giron said he hopes it's a girl.

"It's easier to have one male and two females," Tellez said, fearful that two male pandas could become rivals later on.

Ying Ying gave birth to her cub on Aug. 10 and has been holding the baby panda clasped to her breast ever since, nursing it every 30 minutes.

The baby panda, which at birth weighed only 3.5 ounces and was no larger than a human hand, now weighs about 5.2 ounces, said Jean Schoch, the zoo's technical director.

Pepe, all alone since the birth, has slowly been adjusting to the solitude.

"At first he was very nervous, and kept looking for her, but since Friday he is calmer," Tellez said.

The keepers are proud to have scored a first, and attribute their success to the fact that Ying Ying and Pepe have been well treated, are the same age, have never been separated, and that Mexico City is at the same altitude as the panda's natural habitat.

Civil War army rations founded Van Camp firm

Remarkable how many men founded their fortunes with military contracts during war times. You've eaten Van Camp's canned pork and beans, most probably. Gilbert C. Van Camp at age 37 was an Indianapolis grocer who started out as a tinmith. In 1861, the Union troops needed field rations. Van Camp landed the contract for pork and beans in a can. That did it.

FIRST BLACK FILM ACTORS

Q. What was the first motion picture to use black actors?
A. Thomas Edison's "Kinetoscope" movie called "Pickaninies." That word, by the way, goes way back to the darkest edge of that history. Comes from Portuguese "pequeno" meaning "very little." Slavers spread it.

Q. Wasn't that outlaw Butch Cassidy related in some way to that other outlaw Bonnie Parker?
A. Now that I don't know. Do know, though, his real name was George Leroy Parker.

Q. At what age is a youngster most likely to have nightmares?
A. From age 2 to 3½ is said to be the peak nightmare time. But some babies as young as 10 months are known to have them, too. This, according to the sleep researchers.

Q. What's the most common mammal in the United States?
A. The mouse.

Dear Abby

By ABIGAIL VANBUREN
© Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: First off, I am no ordinary girl. I have always been very mature for my age.

When I was 13, I fell in love with a man much older than myself. I am now 18 and still feel the same about him. If possible, I am more in love with him than ever.

Well, he's married and has four kids. He lives in South America, but comes here about every three months on business. I never know exactly when he will be in town, but as soon as he gets here he calls me, and I skip school and go to his hotel to be with him. Every time we're together we grow closer.

The last time he was here I saw him two days in a row. Then I called his hotel and found out he was with another woman, so I told him it was all over between us. He pleaded with me not to make any decisions until he could explain. I am so in love with him I agreed to let him explain, but he left town without seeing me, and now I don't know what to think.

I know he loves me, Abby, but I don't know how to handle things from now on. Please help me. My mother would never understand.

—CRYING IN MY PILLOW

DEAR CRYING: If that man calls you again, gather every bit of strength you have and tell him you never want to see him again. Then hang up. Don't wait for any explanations. He is a master salesman. You have been used. I beg you not to let yourself be used again.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a working woman, divorced, and the mother of a 4-year-old child. I'm self-supporting and barely make ends meet. I'm dating a little, but no one steady. One man I dated is especially nice. When he brings me home he always insists on paying my sitter. I'd be lying if I said I didn't appreciate it a whole lot. My best friend (we work together) reacted strangely when I told her that this gentleman insisted on paying my sitter, and I let him. She said, "All men are alike. They want to obligate you. Sooner or later he'll get his money's worth. Abby, our relationship has been very proper. He's never tried to push himself on me or do anything I felt was out of line. What do you think? Does a woman obligate herself by letting a man pay for her sitter? —BOBBI ON BUDGET

DEAR BOBBI: Some do and some don't. It depends on the man. You can't put them all in one bag. As long as you don't feel obligated to him, you're not. —DEAR ABBY: Do you think of dying very much? —SAN MATEO SAM

DEAR SAM: NO. It's the last thing I want to do.

Health

Anemia causes sore thighs

By LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.
Newspaper Enterprise Association

Dear Dr. Lamb,
I have a multiple anemia. The bones don't make blood, and my doctor has tried medicines but they don't work. The only way to build up my blood is to take transfusions. My blood is extremely low, and I have difficulty in walking. My thighs and hips are sore and hurt. Is there any cure for this? I have a mild heart condition and take medicines for that. I'm 78 years old and live alone.

Dear Reader,
The condition you have is reasonably uncommon. In adults the major source of our blood cells is from the bone marrow. Sometimes it quits functioning and doesn't replace the cells that our body destroys regularly. Each one of your red cells has an average span of only 120 days.

There are so many red cells in the blood that to replace these as they are destroyed, your bone marrow has to manufacture three million new red cells each second. You have so many tiny red cells in your blood that if you measured the surface area it would represent an area of 40,000 square feet.

We tend to take all these things for granted and are only aware of what enormous changes are occurring in our body when some balance is disturbed. There are many reasons why the bone marrow may stop producing enough blood cells to maintain a proper balance.

The bone marrow can be replaced with tumor growth. It can stop functioning because the toxic response to medicines. Many common medicines can cause this in a few susceptible individuals. There is a long list of chemicals which can induce it also. Finding out which medicine or chemical may have precipitated such a response literally requires a Sherlock Holmes.

Then, of course, your body has to have adequate nutrients to stimulate production. Ferocious anemia is caused by an inadequate amount of vitamin B-12 which is essential to the formation of the new red blood cell. In some people the chronic loss of small amounts of blood, for example, caused by bleeding from the digestive tract, may exhaust the bone marrow's ability to form cells. In its exhausted state, it's unable to respond adequately.

I am sending you The Health Letter number 4-3, Understanding The Anemias. It will explain to you the delicate balance between the formation of red blood cells and the destruction of the cells plus all the different things that can affect this balance. Other readers who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10103.

As you see, the proper treatment of your blood cell balance mechanism depends entirely on what has caused it. In many instances medicines are very helpful in correcting the problem. In others, treatment is exceptionally difficult and blood transfusions may be the only immediate method of providing adequate support.

Because of many of the true miracles that are accomplished in medicine, I sometimes think that the general public believes that medical problems can be cured, and that the cure should be simple, immediate and cheap. Unfortunately, that's just not the fact of life.

Poland

Unrest unlikely to topple Gierk, expert says

By SONYA ZALUBOWSKI
United Press International

Analysis

NEW YORK — The worker unrest rocking Poland may result in some unorthodox modifications in the country's communist system, but it is unlikely to topple the government of Edward Gierk, says an expert on Eastern Europe.

"There's just no alternative to Gierk waiting in the wings," said Prof. Jane Curry of Columbia University's East European political science division. "And, the strikers aren't demanding a change in the system. They just want their problems more complex."

The 35 million Poles face a $30 billion dollar foreign debt that claims 70 percent of the country's budget just to meet interest charges. It's the result of rapid industrialization that failed to meet expectations due to bad planning, had harvests, the Western recession and the energy crisis.

Gierk, "a master politician who tightened his political grip at February's party congress by installing his own people in all major posts, set out to ease Poland's financial disaster July 1. He also tackled food subsidies — an explosive issue that brought him to power in 1970 and has been the downfall of Polish leaders since 1956.

He ordered the amount of meat in higher-priced "commercial" stores increased over that sold in regular state stores. Some 150 strikes later, he is holding firm despite the continued labor troubles.

The Polish government, Mrs. Curry said, has been anything but confrontational. Instead of bringing in troops as it did in the past, "the government has been willing to buy off individual groups, one by one giving them pay raises."

"That's the kind of patchwork pattern I think we'll see evolve," she said.

Rare for a communist system, the workers are meeting with local managers to settle their disputes, giving them a direct voice in their affairs. At the giant shipyards in Gdansk, they called for dissolution of the Central Council of Trade Unions in Warsaw and freely elected workers committees.

"But that's a lot less threatening than a demand for another party or leader," Mrs. Curry said.

Poland has always been a country of compromise with communism — a majority of the land is held in small private farms worked by peasants, the church is strong and the dissident movement is allowed to express itself relatively freely, she said.

"My sense is that if the government says okay to the labor demands, the people will go along with it."

Workers have not been organized nationwide and instead, each group has generally concentrated on its own demands — more meat in factory stores, more clothes in each pay packet.

Pope, Vatican media silent on labor uprising

VATICAN CITY (UPI) — Pope John Paul II and the Vatican media are maintaining a strict silence on the labor uprising in Poland.

They fear that any comment might have adverse effects on the Church in the pontiff's homeland, Vatican sources said Sunday.

In his third public address since the Polish strikes reached a critical stage, the pontiff Sunday did not mention the labor unrest. The Vatican's radio and daily newspaper have not reported any of the strikes.

"Of course the pope is aware and following — the strikes — quite closely," one source said. "But the matter is very delicate and any comment would be inappropriate now."

The sources said the Vatican was concerned lest any comment on the strikes be misinterpreted by the government and eventually hurt the church in Poland where where about 90 percent of the people are practicing Catholics.

"The Vatican feels that reserve is the best strategy now, that it would be better for the local church to handle the situation because of the pope's Polish background," another source said.

During his Sunday blessing from his retreat at Castel Gandolfo south of Rome, the pope made what some Vatican sources said was a veiled reference to the unrest he was closely following in the industrial area.

While greeting groups of pilgrims he said in Italian, "As now the best strategy now, that it would be better for the local church to handle the situation because of the pope's Polish background," another source said.

A source said, "It was a little trick he used to make the public aware that the trouble was on his mind while still not commenting on it."

West not supplying Afghan rebels, West German says

HAMBURG, West Germany (UPI) — A West German who fought with the rebels against Soviet-backed government troops in Afghanistan says it is a myth that the latter anti-Kabul forces are receiving Western weapons.

The man, identified only as "a German national," Mr. H., wrote about his adventure with the guerrillas in the der Spiegel news magazine Sunday.

In a three page story, Mr. H. said the rebels he fought with during an unspecified four-day period went into battle with antique turn-of-the-century weapons that had been carted across the Pakistani border on the backs of camels.

"The military equipment of the mullahs (freedom fighters) was more suitable for a museum than for their 'holy war' against the Soviets," Mr. H. said.

The German said he joined a 600-man rebel force in the Pakistani town of Peshawar, and marched with them across the border into the Afghan province of Paklia, the scene of fierce fighting.

Dressed in flowing Afghan garb, the blond German marched with a rebel unit leading a camel train laden with vintage World War I arms across the frontier to their base camp inside Afghanistan.

At the base camp, the German was introduced to the rebels as a man whose "father and grandfather fought the Soviets," and was warmly welcomed when he promised to train rebels in the use of mortars.

Mr. H. said the rebels had "museum-like" weapons that were no match for Soviet Mi-24 helicopter gunships frequently used to strafe rebel villages.

"Not a single sign anywhere of arms from the West, of weapons provided by the CIA, Western journalists have made exactly the same observation in other fighting zones," he said.

Most of the rag-tag fighters carried British World War I Lee-Enfield rifles or German Mauer carbines from the same period, a handful wielded Soviet 10-shot rifle or Kalashnikov sub-machine guns captured in battles.

Cambodians siphon off relief rice

KHAO I DANG, Thailand (UPI) — Tons of U.N. relief rice are smuggled out of the Khao I Dang refugee center nightly by Cambodian refugees who sell it at secret trading points in surrounding villages, U.N. officials said Sunday.

The officials at the refugee camp so far have been powerless to stop the smuggling, but the U.N. World Food Program, supplier of the relief rice for all-border operations, vowed to halt the practice immediately.

"We will investigate this and you will see the results," said Kurt Josefsson, WFP chief on the border. "It will be closed."

small lots, then rebagged and hauled by villagers to nearby markets, is virtually untraceable, relief officials said.

They could not rule out the possibility the rice is sold back to the World Food Program for another money-making circuit through Khao I Dang.

Post under fire

LA PAZ, Bolivia (UPI) — Bolivia's military government Sunday accused the Washington Post of publishing a story alleging official involvement in drug trafficking as part of an international plot to discredit the regime.

A statement by the Foreign Ministry said "international extremists" have organized to launch attacks against the regime.

Moslem riots spread into new India state

NEW DELHI, India (UPI) — Moslem mobs attacked police stations and burned government vehicles in Kashmir Sunday.

That extended to the predominantly Moslem state a five-day wave of riotous rioting that has claimed at least 161 lives.

At least two people died when police fired into the crowds, the Press Trust of India said.

In Moradabad, where the first outbreak of sectarian violence was touched off Wednesday, more bloody clashes were reported despite a round-the-clock curfew enforced by army troops.

City officials said three more people were killed in knifing and shooting incidents, bringing the toll from the religious-inspired violence to 161, mostly in an around Moradabad. The unrest so far has centered on the northern state of Uttar Pradesh, where Moradabad is located, although rioting shook New Delhi Friday and erupted Saturday in Kashmir, which borders India's traditional regional rival, Pakistan.

The Press Trust of India said Moslem mobs assailed police stations and set fire to official vehicles in the second day of clashes in Srinagar, the state capital of Kashmir.

The deaths Sunday were in addition to the two people killed in clashes Saturday, the agency said.

The Press Trust of India said marauding gangs eluded police and army patrols enforcing a 24-hour curfew in Moradabad and burned several homes in the pre-dawn hours.

Registration at some schools, late registration at others and a general faculty meeting are among scheduled events in each school.

New elementary students in Twin Falls who have not been registered for school should do so today. Elementary classes start next Monday at 8:50 a.m.

All new students in kindergarten through 5th grade must present proof of immunizations before entering school. Shots are required for DPT, polio, measles, mumps and rubella.

Sophomores and juniors will have school pictures taken at the time of registration.

High school fees amount to $23.50 for activity card, locker and class dues. The annual will cost $11.50.

High school classes begin Wed., Aug. 27, and students report to their first period classes at 8:50 a.m.

School lunches will be served beginning the first day of classes in the elementary and junior high schools and in the high school Aug. 27. The cost for elementary students is 55 cents, for junior and senior high school students, 60 cents, and adults, $1.

Jerome fair coming up

Bob Larson of Jerome untangled a flag waving problem Sunday as he prepared the Veterans of Foreign Wars booth on the Jerome County Fairgrounds in Jerome. The proceeds from the VFW's refreshment booth will be used for high school scholarship funds and other worthy projects. The fair opens Tuesday and activities continue through Saturday.

Minico board meets tonight

RUPERT — The Minidoka County School Board meets tonight at 7:30 p.m. in the central school office, 633 Fremont Ave., Rupert.

A long agenda for the regular August meeting includes the following subjects: a financial report on the school district, salary schedules for non-certified personnel, misassigned teachers, the 3-percent holdback of state funds, the MERC project for the coming school year and the new Paul Elementary School.

Classes start in 3 districts

morning. Castelford will dismiss class at 12:30 p.m.

At Murtaugh, students will be registered in the classrooms.

District Civitan meet elects Twin Falls man

JACKPOT, Nev. — Lee Jones of Twin Falls Sunday became governor of the Intermountain District of the Civitan Clubs.

Meeting in Jackpot, delegates to the 1980 district conference of Civitan — a fraternal service group — chose Dr. Ken King of Idaho Falls as district governor-elect. He assumes office in October 1981.

Jones, who succeeded Alan Griggs of Idaho Falls, was unable to attend the conference because of an illness in the family.

The two-day conference ending Sunday was for Civitan members from Idaho, Oregon, Montana, Utah, Washington and Wyoming.

The keynote speaker was Fred D. King of Honolulu, Hawaii, vice president elect of Zone 9 of International Civitan Clubs, spoke on "Where Civitans Stand Today." He said the international, which was organized 60 years ago this year by Southern Baptists, now has 1,100 members.

He said the service group should not set goals that cannot be attained and that projects selected should not be just for Civitans but for the benefit of their communities.

In charge of the convention was Barbara MacNeil, owner of Snelling and Snelling employment agency in Twin Falls.

Delegates voted to hold next year's convention again in Cactus Pete's at Jackpot. They presented a plaque to Albert H. Huber, president and general manager of Cactus Pete's, in recognition of the first convention to be held in the casino's new facilities.

Racing events Wednesday

JEROME — There will be an open barrel race and other competition for men and women riders Wednesday at the Standing Hat Ranch southwest of here.

Donnie Miller said the event is approved by the Girl's Rodeo Association and will feature $275 added money and jackpot prizes.

Entry fees are $25 for the GRA barrel events; $10 for the novice barrels for horses winning $500 or less; $2 for junior novice racers 13 years of age and under; $10 for open pole bending and $2 for junior pole bending.

In addition to barrel racing, there will be open pole bending and junior pole bending for anyone interested in participating. Miller said a number of good competitors are expected since the event coincides with the Jerome rodeo. This is the fifth such event this year and probably the last of the season.

An electric timer will be used to allow competitors to run for time only.

The Standing Hat Ranch is located four miles south of Jerome and 6.5 miles west. All interested riders are welcome to participate.

Energy sources survey scheduled

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Energy Department has awarded contracts to count solar panels, passive collectors and wind generators in Idaho and Utah and 11 other western states to determine the number of alternative energy systems in use.

"The census represents the first significant effort to determine exactly to what extent solar and wind power are being used," said the department's Solar Utilization Network, or SUN. It has provided funds for the census to state agencies.

Issue back again

BOISE (UPI) — The issue of abortion is being brought to the fore again by the Idaho Pro-Life Political Action Committee.

The committee has sent out more than 1,000 fund-raising letters and is polling political candidates to determine whether they oppose abortion except in order to prevent the mother's death.

The group plans to distribute the results of their poll just days before the November election to inform the voters on the candidates' stand.

North Idaho hit hardest

Eruptions of Mt. St. Helens cost Idaho over $6 million

BOISE (UPI) — The Idaho Division of Economic and Community Affairs estimates that eruptions of Mount St. Helens have cost the economy $6.8 million.

That figure is based on a recent study by the department of Agricultural Economics and Applied Statistics at the University of Idaho.

The greatest immediate losses are from the curtailment of local producing for the two to three days following the ash fallout. But general construction employment increased because of ash clean-up activities.

Logging operators in Benewah and Shoshone counties were reported the hardest hit because, unlike some of the growers, they had no alternative harvest opportunities.

The crop most affected was lentils in the Flummer-Tensed areas. The estimated reduction of the Idaho lentil crop average yield is about 20 percent below normal. But that was offset by more planted acreage.

Production of dry peas is estimated to be reduced by 5 percent. However, an above normal yield is expected due to ideal growing weather from May to July. No reductions for fall or spring seeded wheat appear likely from the ash cover.

False leads abound in sale of infant girl

LEWISTON (UPI) — Officers found most leads turning out false Sunday in their nationwide search for a 4-month-old girl sold by her parents to Gypsies.

Since word went out on how the infant, Jolese, was sold by her young parents to a family of Gypsies for $60, the Nez Perce County sheriff's office in Lewiston has been getting round-the-clock calls and many false leads, officials said.

"We just advertised over in the Seattle area and we got several calls from people over there who had seen those type of rigs. But we've got nothing so far," Deputy Richard Bailey said.

"They're checking out those leads now and trying to compare them with what we know," Deputy Monty Spears said the Gypsy family believed to have taken Jolese left a campground after the child's parents, Katherine Gray, 19, and Joseph Dwyer, 20, handed her over to them.

Center offers aid to wives since '77

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls has had a center to assist battered wives since 1977, according to Barry H. Meyers, director of Magic Valley Alcohol Recovery Centers Inc.

An article in last Sunday's Times-News on battered women reported the views of two Pocatello women that a center was needed in Twin Falls.

The Women's Crisis Center, 425 2nd Ave. N., assists battered women, rape victims and women in other crises in the Magic Valley, Meyers said.

The MVARC director said the newspaper article had a positive outcome by making more people aware of the center.

He agreed with the Pocatello women, who led a workshop on the problem at the Center for New Directions at the College of Southern Idaho, that women "need a place to go when they are in a situation like that."

Meyers said two MVARC staff members attended the workshop but left early.

MVARC operates the Men's Center, 302 2nd Ave. S., and the Women's Crisis Center, 425 2nd Ave. N.

and support we provide battered women and rape victims," Meyers said. "Yet, no one is ever refused shelter and services because of an inability to pay a fee."

MVARC contracts with the state to provide "some services" to indigent male and female alcoholics, he said.

The women's center has "a staff of four professionals and non-professionals and works closely with other community resources to assist and provide the best help for any woman, who calls or comes to the center."

Meyers said the staff answers the telephone, either 734-7080 or 734-7155, 24 hours a day.

The center also uses the services of a consulting physician and Magic Valley Memorial Hospital for emergency and other medical services, he said.

"I would hope that women needing assistance would be made aware that they do not have to call Pocatello and leave their name and number," Meyers said. "They can call the Women's Crisis Center in Twin Falls and talk to someone immediately."

"We receive no funds for the shelter

In Filer rodeo arena Young hands to compete

FILER — Some top young cowhands from five states and two Canadian provinces will be seen in competition in the Twin Falls County Fairgrounds arena next month.

Fair and rodeo officials here have announced selection of the Filer event as the site of the Area 3 finals in the Nestea Teenage Top Hand Challenge. The competition will be held during the annual county fair and rodeo Sept. 2 through Sept. 6.

Fair Manager Tom Showe said this will bring the top high school performers from Idaho, Washington, Oregon, Montana and Wyoming as well as Alberta and British Columbia in Canada here for area final prize money and honors.

The rodeo performers will compete in the four major events along with regular professional cowboys. Their scores and times will count not only toward day purse money but also toward the Nestea-sponsored national championships. There will be one winner in each event FROM EARL RILEY RIDE province competing in the same event here. They will enter along with regular cowboys, probably as the last entry in each event, during the regular night rodeo shows.

Showe said this is an additional treat for local rodeo fans and it brings some added prize money to the Filer purses.

Area winners at Filer will go into the national finals. Showe said Nestea sponsors the Professional Rodeo Cowboy Association youth program.

The company adds $1,100 to the rodeo purses including $200 for each PRCA event and $100 for GRA barrel races.

The Filer Nestea competition is one of six in the nation in which the national finalists will be selected. Scholarships totaling $32,000 in grants from PRCA and Nestea will be awarded to the national High School Rodeo Association students who compete and win during the national competition, and as they progress through the elimination events.

Cotton Rosser will return to Filer this year with his top rodeo stock and usual following of national ranking cowboys.

The rodeo will begin at 8 p.m. Sept. 3 through Sept. 6. Fair grounds office workers report rodeo reserve seat tickets are already selling out, especially for the championship night, Sept. 6.

Golf cart mishap injures 2 riders

TWIN FALLS — A golf cart driven by College of Southern Idaho President James Taylor accidentally went in reverse and broke through a plate glass window, injuring two passengers Saturday.

Shannon and Deanna Smith of White Bear Lake, Minn., the passengers, were transported to Magic Valley Memorial Hospital and treated for lacerations about 7:30 p.m., according to Twin Falls Police.

Taylor was operating an electric golf cart on the sidewalk at the CSI Multi-Purpose Building and was experiencing difficulty with the two gears, forward and reverse, police said.

When the cart jammed or went into reverse it struck a large plate glass window next to Taylor's office in the building.

FBI arrests agent in office robbery

BILLINGS, Mont. (UPI) — FBI agents have arrested one of their own for the $79,000 robbery of a U.S. marshal's office at Billings.

Agent Marvin J. Teel, 35, had taken part in the agency's initial investigation of the burglary of the marshal's office and removal of the cash from a bank safe deposit box. Teel allegedly used a key taken during the burglary to get the money from the box, the FBI said in a brief statement Sunday following Teel's arrest on Saturday.

Teel was released on his own recognizance after appearing before a federal magistrate, FBI Special Agent in Charge Jay E. Bailey said. He was charged with theft of government property, Bailey said, and other charges may be filed later.

The break-in at the marshal's office, located in the unguarded Federal Building in downtown Billings, took place during the Aug. 2-3 weekend. Teel allegedly broke down a fifth-floor office door and smashed into an office vault.

The Billings Gazette Sunday quoted unidentified sources as saying Teel allegedly made copies of the safe deposit box keys.

An inventory of the vault's contents after the break-in showed the keys present and only $90 in "coffee money" missing. The intruder also discharged the contents of two fire extinguishers in the office.

Bailey said Teel waited until Aug. 3 to remove the money from the safe deposit box.

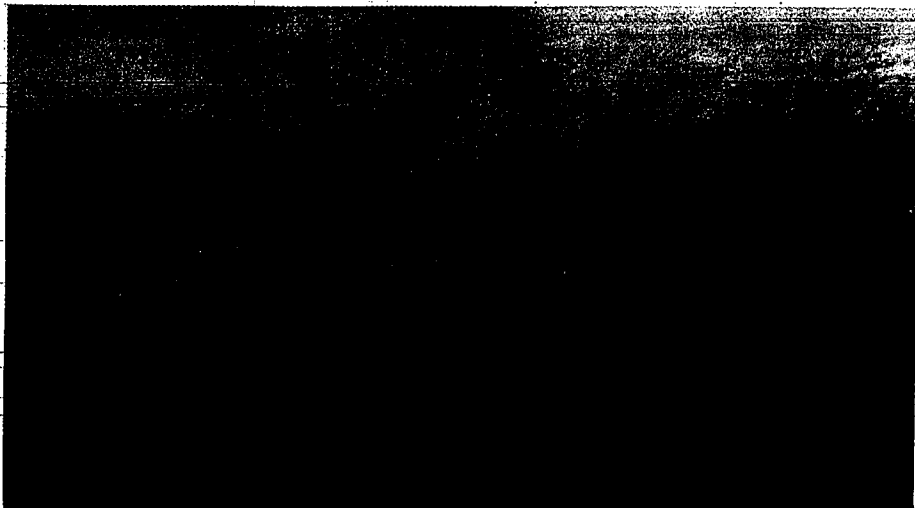

He signed the name of a deputy marshal to gain access to the vault, officials said. A 10-year-old boy found the money in a folder under rocks along a creek north of Billings the next day.

Agents staked out the scene, but the FBI did not say whether Teel was arrested by means of the stakeout. Bailey said the money was Canadian, Kane said the being held by the marshal's office for the U.S. Customs Service.

The FBI has placed a tight lid on the case and refused to disclose information about Teel's background. FBI officials at Washington declined comment.

Billings Police and FBI agents conducted the initial investigation of the break-in, and Teel reportedly sat in during the interrogation of witnesses.

Teel declined comment.

Geologist Norman Banks drives pipe into Mt. St. Helens crater to measure heat from eruptive material

Lava dome glows, crater still steams

VANOUVER, Wash. (UPI) — A glowing red lava dome inside the inner crater atop simmering Mount St. Helens appeared unaffected by the volcano's latest eruptive activity, the U.S. Forest Service reported Sunday. The volcano itself was "just sitting there steaming a little," U.S. Geological Survey scientist Don Finley said. Ash and steam were seen drifting over the lip of the main crater towards the southeast, but no earthquakes were detected, he added. Spotter pilots flying over the peak confirmed that the lava dome, a 100-foot-wide mound of solidifying molten rock pushing up from the volcano's core, had not been blown out by Friday's mild eruption that shot steam and ash 15,000 feet into the sky, Forest Service spokeswoman Jan Simmons said.

She said the fact that the dome remained intact indicated that the plume of gas and ash probably escaped through cracks in the main crater.

A similar dome appeared on the floor of the mile-wide pit following the volcano's third major eruption on June 12 but was obliterated by a subsequent blast on July 22.

That eruption created the so-called "inner crater," a tadpole-shaped hole in which the present dome appeared following the last major eruption on Aug. 7.

Scientists welcomed the first dome, hailing it as a possible beginning of a quieter phase for the volcano and said it could mark the birth of a new summit for the once majestic mountain.

But they warned the "dome formation stage" could be explosive because the thick, toothpaste-like lava could bottle up pressure inside the cone.

Fire crews start home from Utah

KAMAS, Utah (UPI) — The Forest Service Sunday began sending home 200 of the men who helped contain a 2,015-acre forest fire on the western end of Utah's rugged Uinta Mountains.

The "500-man" force contained the blaze Saturday night, thanks to two days of cool daytime temperatures and light winds.

A service spokesman said another 100 men would be sent home today after mop-up operations had doused most of the fire's hot spots.

The man-caused fire was first reported Aug. 10 in the Broadhead Meadow area about 20 miles east of Kamas. The Forest Service has expected to contain the fire early last week, but gusty afternoon winds Tuesday and Wednesday spread the blaze through fire lines and kept the men at a distance.

During the height of the battle, the service evacuated hikers and campers from the areas around Echo and Marshall lakes as a precaution. The fire did not damage any buildings. There were no injuries, although one helicopter on the ground was blown over by gusty afternoon winds.

Attack kills 2

VACAVILLE, Calif. (UPI) — An inmate and a prison guard were killed Sunday in a knife attack at the California Medical Facility, spokesman James Kane said.

Kane said the incident was sparked by a fight between the inmate and another prisoner on the first floor of the main building.

Brink's truck, guard still missing

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The Brink's, Inc. guard who stole $1.85 million from an armored truck mailed $29,000 of the loot to an "acquaintance," who turned it over to authorities, the FBI said Sunday. Agents said the money was mailed to an "acquaintance" of George M. Boesque, 25, a part-time Brink's guard who vanished with the loot Friday. They said the friend immediately called the FBI and surrendered the cash, which was in $50 and $100 bills. The package was mailed "locally" and the friend received it in San Francisco Saturday. Agents declined to identify the acquaintance or his neighborhood.

The search for Boesque, also a San Francisco special policeman, spread across the nation with authorities concentrating on bridge toll plazas, bus stations and airports.

In particular, authorities concentrated on the city's predominantly homosexual Castro District. Agents described Boesque, 6-foot, 180 pounds, of Cuban descent, as a "known associate of homosexuals" and said they wanted to question his roommate, Carl Denton, 22.

Denton was not suspected as an accomplice, the FBI said.

In other parts of the country, the search continued. In Phoenix, Ariz., police Saturday met a plane from San Francisco on a tip that proved erroneous that the man was aboard. Other agents concentrated on Miami where the suspect has relatives and on routes to Mexico because he speaks fluent Spanish.

Boesque, a Brink's employee for three years, moonlighted as a special San Francisco police officer. Special officers are hired by neighborhood businesses for extra protection and wear uniforms.

Boesque enticed his driver, Jean Marie Jean, to momentarily leave their truck Friday at San Francisco International Airport "through subterfuge," according to an FBI affidavit.

Then he drove off to the back of a nearby Hilton motel where he switched to a car commandeered at gunpoint from a Hilton maid. The car was later found abandoned.

Isaac C. Kerridge Jr. of Hughes Tool Co. in Houston said the 30 percent increase was "an all-time high and the largest percentage increase for any year since 1974."

The latest report showed 3,020 rigs at work in the nation, up more than 800 percent from this time last year.

All four are Iranians and claim to be college students in the Phoenix area.

Arnie wins

EDMONTON, Alberta (UPI) — Legendary Arnold Palmer won his first golf tournament in North America in seven years Sunday by holding off Japan's Isao Aoki on the final hole to take the $100,000 Canadian Professional Golfer's Association Championship.

The 50-year-old golfing great was leading by a comfortable four strokes when he bogeyed the par-3 16th and missed a three-foot putt to take a double-bogey 6 on the 17th. But he pulled his game together for the 18th hole. His second shot landed 30 feet from the pin and he knocked it close before tapping it in.

"That's just about the toughest," Palmer said. "I almost blew it on 16 and 17. That's the way I play the game, though."

"I could have laid back and just went for the green, but I decided to shoot it at the flag. I got myself into a lot of unnecessary trouble."

He finished the day with a 71 round for a 271 score, 9-under-par. The victory, worth $20,000 to the Laidback Pro Series, was his first in five years and his first in North America since he won the Bob Hope Desert Classic in 1973.

Aoki, who had a closing 68, pocketed $11,800. South African Gary Player and Argentinian Armando Saavedra finished two strokes off the pace at 273 and pocketed $2,750.

For the second straight year, Jim Nefford of Burnaby, British Columbia, was the top Canadian. He had a closing 72 for a 276 total to win $4,500.

Dave Barr of Kelowna, British Columbia, was next at 277, one in front of Antonio Evangelista of Brazil and Bobby Charles of New Zealand.

The CPGA may not be a major tournament but it meant a lot to Palmer.

"This tournament was very important. I've worked a long time for this," Palmer said. "I played well all week and I had to because there were some good golfers chasing me around the course."

Palmer continually spoke of the fun he had. And, despite 40 years of competitive golf, he had no plans to call it quits. He left immediately after the tournament of the West German Open next weekend in Berlin.

Daniel beats cold, to win Berg tourney

ST. PAUL (UPI) — Beth Daniel, who retained her Patty Berg Golf Classic title Sunday with a 2-under-par 210, coasted to victory on a course she couldn't have designed better herself.

"The course was more or less set up for my game," Daniel said. "Usually there are two or three on each course, but I never felt that way here."

There are no holes here that give me trouble," Daniel said. "Usually there are two or three on each course, but I never felt that way here."

Daniel, who took the lead in the second round of the 10-day event, said she became worried on the last nine after starting off "blase."

"I was blase, then I told myself I've got to start playing for birds," she said. "On the 13th, 14th and 15th holes, she (Stacy) has makeable putts for birdies, but she didn't make them. That's what I mean when I say I was dodging bullets out there."

"But no one was really charging at me. After I birdied the 16th I had a four-shot lead with two holes to go and I just wanted to par it."

Stacy, a six-year pro from Georgia, was pleased with her final round of 71 but a little disappointed to finish second.

"I'm happy with the way I hit the ball and putted," she said.

In Canadian Open tennis finals

Painful knee forces Borg out; Evert triumphs easily

TORONTO (UPI) — Bjorn Borg, fearing that yet another attempt at the coveted U.S. Open may be over before it begins, withdrew Sunday from the final of the Canadian International Championships with an injured knee, handing the title to a stunned Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia.

The five-time Wimbledon champion, using the Canadian event as a tune-up for the U.S. Open beginning Aug. 26 in Flushing Meadows, N.Y., withdrew in mid-match when the pain became unbearable after he had captured the first set 6-4 and fallen behind in the second 4-5.

"I didn't want to take any chances with my knee," Borg said later. "It's one of the most dangerous spots; if you have trouble with your knee, it's one of the most difficult things to get rid of."

"I have a long future in tennis and I don't want to take chances." Earlier in the week, doctors had reported Borg's knee was suffering the effects of wear and tear causing inflammation, but said the inflammation was "more a nuisance than a medical problem."

After his default, however, Borg said the doctors had informed him that it was not certain he could make the U.S. Open.

No one was more shocked than Lendl. Borg "came to my table and said 'thank you,'" said the 26-year-old Lendl, whose willingness to rally had added to the stress on Borg's knee. "I said 'for what?'" and he said "I'm quitting."

Earlier Sunday, Chris Evert Lloyd, riding a near-perfect, three-month streak, routed sixth-seeded Virginia Ruzicel of Romania in straight sets to capture the women's title.

Borg, coming off a five-week respite after his historic triumph over John McEnroe at Wimbledon, was determined to get in at least a week of practice before the U.S. Open, the only major title that has eluded him.

"I don't know what the exact condition (of the knee) is for sure," he said. "I will take the next four or five days off (but) I have to practice for the U.S. Open or I'll be in terrible shape."

Borg's default was a fitting culmination to the upset and injury-ridden tournament. Earlier in the week, second-seeded McEnroe withdrew with a sprained ankle and top-seeded Martina Navratilova dropped out complaining of back spasms, both during matches.

Borg, who will take his rest at the home of Vilas.

Gerulaitis in King's Point, N.Y., said he would have to be lucky in order to prevent yet another try at the U.S. Open from going down the drain.

"I just have to be luckier next week and get rid of the pain. I'm not crying every day if I don't win but it's one of the ones I'd like to win," Borg said.

Borg said he felt only slight pain at the beginning of his match against Lendl. "It began to bother me in the second set and I considered pulling out when I fell behind 4-3.

"But I thought I would stay in and try to break his serve. It just didn't happen," said Borg, who married Romanian Maria Simionescu during his recent layoff.

The default gave Lendl, 26, the fourth-seeded player of the tournament, his first victory against Borg in four meetings and a paycheck of $28,000.

Evert Lloyd, who has lost but one of 49 matches since ending a three-month layoff May 3, dispatched the determined Ruzicel 6-3, 6-1 in one hour and 26 minutes to claim the $30,000 winner's purse.

The victory raised Evert Lloyd's earnings this season to $214,815; it was her fifth major tournament triumph this year to go with earlier wins at the French Open, the Italian Open, the Crosley and last week's victory at the U.S. Clay Court Championships in Indianapolis, Ind.

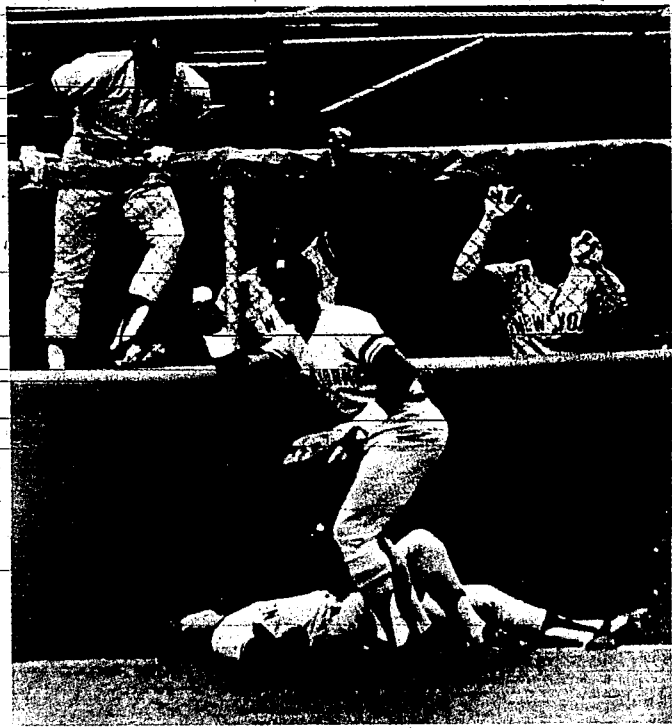

Ruzicel, a 25-year-old, 10th-ranked pro who has an 0-10 career record against Evert Lloyd, gamely tried to slug it out, but was unable to rattle her opponent's steady baseline tactics and punishing forehand.

"It was a tough match," said Evert Lloyd. "When I heard I was going to play Virginia, I knew I would be staying in the back court and I would have to rally."

"I think I played well — I didn't make many errors — but I have been fortunate in the last two tournaments to get opponents who have helped me out a lot," said Evert Lloyd, who beat 15-year-old Andrea Jaeger to win the Clay Court Championship last week.

Ruzicel held her serve in the seventh game of the first set, but Evert Lloyd increased her lead to 5-3 by holding in the eighth game and then broke Ruzicel for the fourth time in the ninth game to wrap up the set.

Evert Lloyd, whose low-trajectory forehand was unwaveringly accurate, jumped out to a quick 3-0 edge in the second set and was never threatened.

One down, one up

The top two contenders for the American League MVP honors had opposite performances during Sunday's baseball action. Reggie Jackson took a tumble while George Brett reached the 400 hitting plateau. At left, Jackson lies on the ground after catching a fly by Baltimore's Doug DeCinces in the fifth inning. Jackson crashed into the wall and had the wind knocked out of him, but returned to the game.

Bobby Brown holds the ball as Yankees from the bullpen rush to help Jackson. Baltimore won the game 1-0. Brett, at right, holds his arms aloft after a double in the eighth inning at Kansas City. The superstar went four-for-four and drove in five runs as the Royals defeated Toronto 9-3. Brett raised his average to .401 and extended his hitting streak to 29 games.

Brett hits .401; Reggie, Yanks fall

By United Press International

They said it would never be done again, but George Brett is closing in on the "impossible" 400 mark.

Brett went 4-for-4 to touch the magical 400 mark and extend his hitting streak to 29 games Sunday, leading the Kansas City Royals to an 8-3 victory over the Toronto Blue Jays.

Brett singled in the third, got an infield hit in the fifth, a two-run double in the seventh and three-run double in the eighth to raise his average to .401. He also raised his slugging percentage to .677 and now has 88 RBI on the season. The third baseman is batting .473 on 71-for-150 since the All-Star break.

The last player to bat 400 or better over a full season was Boston's Ted Williams, who hit .406 in 1941.

Loser Jim Clancy, 11-9, walked Frank White and John Wathan before Brett broke a 2-2 tie with a double down the left-field line. The Royals had tied the game in the fourth on Jamie Quirk's fifth home run of the season.

The first Royals' run came in the first — without the benefit of a hit. Willie Wilson, Brett and Darrell Porter walked to set up an RBI groundout by Willie Alkins.

Strange scored all three of its runs off winner Paul Spittleroff, 9-8, with Alfredo Griffin, Garth long and Damaso Garcia each collecting an RBI. Dan Quisenberry pitched the final two innings to earn his league-leading 25th save.

Rich Dauer and Terry Crowley doubled in the sixth inning to produce a run and Scott McGregor stopped New York on five hits in leading the Baltimore Orioles to a 1-0 victory over the Yankees.

Baltimore's victory evened the five-game series at 2-2 and the season series at 6-6. The clubs wind up season competition, barring a playoff, tonight.

Dauer's hit, the fourth of loser Luis Tiant, 6-7, was an apparent home run but was interfered with by a fan as it struck the left field barrier. Two outs later, with Dauer on third, Crowley lined a shot over the first base gap to bring in the run.

McGregor, 14-6, picked up his seventh victory in his last eight decisions with his second shutout of the year. His biggest trouble came in the eighth on back-to-back singles by Fred Stanley and Bucky Dent. However, Rick Cerone popped up and Lou Piniella grounded out to end the threat.

Baltimore almost scored earlier when Doug DeCinces sent Reggie Jackson to the bullpen fence with Eddie Murray on second base. Jackson made an over-the-shoulder catch but was shaken up in colliding with the fence 376 feet from home plate. He remained on the ground about five minutes but finished the game. He struck out three times.

Strange escapes logjam for $72,000 Westchester title

HARRISON, N.Y. (UPI) — Despite his claim that "I'll have enough to do worrying about myself," Curtis Strange found himself looking continually over his shoulder Sunday.

To his surprise, all the way home he never saw anyone chasing him, and he emerged from a logjam to claim a two-shot victory over Gibby Gilbert in the $400,000 Westchester Classic.

"The whole way I thought Tom (Watson) would be coming after me, then he got that double bogey," Strange said after a final round of 2-under-par 69 earned him first prize of $72,000 with an 11-under total of 273.

"Tom is human like everyone else, but I thought Tom or someone would come after me," he said. "They always do, but today they didn't."

Strange was thinking in particular about the Houston Open earlier this year — when he held a six-shot lead in the final round, only to be forced into a playoff with Lee Trevino before he won it.

But about the only time Strange was in trouble Sunday was when he faced an 8-foot putt to save par on the 16th hole. He led Gilbert by two shots then, with Gilbert still to play a strong birdie hole on No. 18, and he couldn't afford to give back a shot.

"I know I had to par 16," Strange said. "That was the big putt, and when I parred 16 I knew it was over."

Strange, a former NCAA champion at Wake Forest, is the busiest man in golf, now having played a Tour high 98 rounds in 1980. In winning for the second time this year and placing in the top 10 for the fifth straight tournament, Strange boosted his earnings to $283,000, third on the PGA list.

Strange had started the day tied for second with Watson and Bob Murphy, a shot behind George Cadie, and he took the lead for good with a birdie on the second hole after Cadie had bogeyed it.

"We just been playing so well lately," Strange said. "It all came to a head this week. Today was a funny day — you know when you're not playing too well but the ball keeps going in the hole."

Gilbert, back in 10th place at the start of the day, turned in a bogey-free 67 to climb into second place at 276, one shot in front of Phil Hancock, whose 69 gave him his best finish in three years on the tour. Hancock had failed to make the cut in seven of 11 tournaments this year.

Tom Watson, now winless in nine attempts at the Westchester, had a disastrous back nine that included a double bogey and two bogeys, and he needed a birdie on the final hole for a 73 that put him at 277, along with Cadie, who had a 74, and Mike Reid, Grouped at 278 were Mark Lye (68), David Graham (69), Mike Sullivan (70), Roger Maltbie (71) and George Burns (72).

Strange, who joined the tour in 1977 after winning an NCAA championship at Wake Forest, birdied the second, seventh and ninth holes, sinking putts of 4 and 5 feet for the final two birdies to give him a three-shot lead over Watson at that point.

He bogeyed the 10th hole, but then parred his way home on a bright, sunny day to preserve his third PGA victory since turning pro in 1977.

remarkably good advice to players. "Didn't you play against both of them in World Championships?"

Oswald: "Yes. My team beat Albaran's French team in the first one in 1935. Then in 1960, shortly before Albaran's death, Ials's French team beat mine in that year's championship."

Alan: "Albaran recommends that the winning player should learn to be patient with his partner. This hand shows an example of extreme need for this trait. Albaran sat North."

Oswald: "Albaran's bidding may not meet with everyone's approval, but it certainly should have led to six hearts, which is a clinch contract. As he points out, South should have raised hearts immediately and having failed to do that, should have bid six hearts rather than the horrible six notrump."

Alan: "Albaran admits that maybe he should have bid four clubs with that particular partner and for once he did lose his cool for a little while. I have been tempted to suggest the use of the guillotine for that South player."
