Economic future starts looking up

Key index predicts end to recession

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Index designed to show what's in store for the economy shot up a record 4.6 percent in July.

The government said Friday it provided fresh evidence the recession is bottoming out and recovery is on its way.

But economists are still at odds over when the turnaround will begin and just how robust it will be. Some say the economy is off to a running start; others predict a "slow, slow recovery" later this year.

Last month's 4.6 percent rise in the government's Composite Index of Leading Indicators was the largest on record — eclipsing the previous high of 3.2 percent set in June 1975 when the country was starting to recuperate from its last recession.

July also was the second consecutive month the key index went up. Before rising 1.5 percent in June, it had fallen in each of the preceding eight months, with particularly large drops recorded last spring.

Economists caution that the size of increases or decreases in the index, which now stands at 130.7 of its 1967 base of 100, do not necessarily translate into comparable movements in the overall economy. They also say it generally takes three or more months for a clear economic trend to develop.

"I think people will be making a big, big mistake if they interpret these indicators to mean we're in for a sharp recovery," said Lawrence Chimnerne, chief economist with Chase Econometrics in Philadelphia. "After this initial surge, we'll settle into a very slow recovery late this year."

Michael Evans of Evans Economics in Washington, on the other hand, found the Commerce Department report very encouraging.

"I think we're off to a running start," he said. "It's going to be a lot sharper recovery than most forecasters thought."

Commerce Secretary Philip Klutznick, while pleased, took the cautious approach.

"The continued rise in the indicators adds evidence that we may be pulling out of the recession," he said. "Some declines in economic activity will continue for a short period of time, ... but signs indicate we may soon be growing again."

Richard Lesher, president of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, said the upturn in economic indicators "may signal the beginning of the end of the recession."

But the United States is still in the midst of its "worst economic crisis since the Great Depression," Lesher told a news conference, and criticized President Carter's new economic program as not going far enough to speed recovery.

Almost a third of July's increase in the index came from the worker layoff rate, which slowed considerably last month — an encouraging sign for improvement in the overall economy.

The Commerce Department said there also were increases in eight other indicators — new orders, vendor performance, plant and equipment contracts and orders, building permits, raw material prices, stock prices, the money supply, and liquid assets.

Tentative settlement

Poles near victory

GDANSK, Poland (UPI) — The leader of the strikes engulfing most of Poland said Friday a key dispute over free trade unions was nearly settled and "we see the finish."

The break-in what had been a stalemate over the union issue came after the strikes, now involving more than 350,000 workers from the Baltic coast to the heartland of Poland, spread to the coal mines of Silesia.

That was viewed as potentially the most crippling blow to the government and economy since the labor unrest began to unfold with a shipyard strike in Gdansk 18 days ago.

In the confessions hall at the Lenin shipyards there erupted in an uproar of cheers and applause as strike leader Lech Walesa told delegates from 500 factories they were close to winning their main demand — the first independent trade unions in the East Bloc.

"I feel the good news," Walesa declared. "We see the finish."

The walkout by some 20,000 coal miners was doubly embarrassing to the regime because Communist Party chief Edward Gierek, himself a former coal miner, came up through the party ranks in Silesia, which was considered his political stronghold. In addition, Poland depends heavily on coal for its energy needs.

The apparent breakthrough in the negotiations also came amid official warnings that the situation was becoming "critical," — warnings that pointedly reminded the strikers of Poland's ties with the Soviet Union and its tenuous position in the East bloc.

One of those warnings, although vaguely phrased, came from Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev himself. It also coincided with the arrival in East Germany of Polish troops to take part in Warsaw Pact maneuvers near the Polish border — and the Baltic coast.

In Moscow, Brezhnev said that while the Kremlin had no plans to "encroach" on foreign territory or "intervene in somebody else's internal affairs," it would not hesitate to defend its "legitimate rights and interests."

He added "we have a strong brotherhood in arms with the national armies" of the Warsaw Pact nations.

Whether just one side or both felt the pressure was not immediately clear. Details of the reported settlement were not announced.

Walesa cautioned the government may yet raise last-minute objections, or renege on the terms later. But as he addressed the factory delegates, he was buoyant and, for the moment, exuding confidence.

"Point No. 1 (the demand for free trade unions) has been settled 90 percent," Walesa said. "It does not mean that the settlement might be overturned, but we are going forward. We are making progress. ... We've begun to understand one another. This is the finish. We see the finish," he said.

According to Western analysts, the settlement came none too soon.

"The coal mines are the heart of Poland's industrial strength," one analyst said. "If the coal miners are out in force, it may mean the government no longer has the power to resist the strikes. And then the danger will be greater than ever, but from the East, the Soviet Union."

There were no obvious signs of any military buildup, but the tone of official comments about the walkouts indicated authorities were running out of patience in their attempts to end them.

A high-level government spokesman who met with foreign reporters briefly Thursday night said "the situation cannot last much longer."

Workers from the Lublin region, from the Rudna, Sierozowice, and Polkowice coal mines, said they had walked out in solidarity with the Gdansk strikers.

A 'fair' trim

It may not be as comfortable as your local barber chair but this Hereford didn't seem to mind as he was trimmed Friday by Joe Bennett in preparation for the Twin Falls County Fair at the Filer Fairgrounds. Bennett, from Council, Wash., was trimming 16 Herefords of the B B Cattle Co. for show. The fair begins Tuesday.

Stalemate in Peru

Cuban refugees try to hijack jet to Miami

LIMA, Peru (UPI) — A mob of 150 Cuban refugees charged through plate-glass windows and security gunfire at Lima airport Friday in an attempt to hijack a jetliner to Miami.

They were still grounded hours later and Peru said the solution was up to the United States.

Authorities said 15 or 16 passengers were aboard the plane at the time it was stormed. They were reported to be in good condition late Friday.

After 12 hours of negotiations, Interior Minister Jose Maria de la Jara said the decision on what to do was up to the United States.

De la Jara, who boarded the plane to negotiate with the hijackers and said he would remain as a hostage if the plane took off, said the month-old civilian government would do everything within its power to meet the hijackers' demands.

"But the final decision rests in the hands of the U.S. government. Let's wait for U.S. approval. If it comes through, I will personally accompany them to the United States."

A U.S. Embassy spokesman said as many as six of the passengers could be Americans.

Police said they believed the refugee group was armed with only one knife.

The drama began when the Cubans, apparently unhappy with living conditions in Peru, literally stormed the plane after breaking through plate glass windows in a lounge and ducking bullets fired by airport security guards.

The refugees were part of a group of 760 Cubans who arrived in Peru from Havana in April.

Once on board the plane, they said they wanted to be resettled in the United States and ordered that they be flown to Miami.

But the real lead of the story, as it turned out, was the State Department, said the Cubans were not eligible for admission as refugees because they had already been re-settled in Peru.

There were unconfirmed reports that authorities were readying a jetliner to take the hijackers and other Cuban refugees at the terminal to Miami.

In Washington, State department officials said the Cubans would be arrested if they arrive in the United States.

Reagan's bright moment fades in bumbles, media morass

By ROBERT G. KAISER
© 1980, The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — For one bright, shining moment way back about two weeks ago, Ronald Reagan was looking like an easy winner in the 1980 presidential election.

Then Reagan began his campaign; the shine and the moment quickly crumbled.

Well, so it looked in the nation's mass media, anyhow. In just a few days the Reagan camp sent out a series of harsh and confusing messages that produced a cold bath of negative publicity, and the pollsters announced (again) that President Carter was pulling even with the Republican challenger. Suddenly, the prognoses of a Carter defeat that were commonplace at the end of the Democratic convention disappeared.

Reagan's first 10 days on the campaign trail provide a textbook lesson in political communications in the mass media age. To follow those 10 days as they were recorded in newspapers, magazines, and on television is an intriguing exercise. It reveals both the inadequacies of the news coverage and also the ways in which Americans get their messages from a political campaign.

The consequences of those rocky 10 days could be devastating to Reagan, or they could disappear entirely before November. All that can be said with confidence now is that Reagan squandered the initiative and revived the one issue that can probably hurt him most — his own plausibility as a president — during the opening days of this campaign season.

The first event of this period was a news conference that Reagan and his running mate, George Bush, held in Los Angeles on Aug. 18. This was Reagan's first public appearance since the end of the Democratic convention, but its principal purpose was to give Bush a formal sendoff on his trip to Japan and China, a journey the Reagan camp designed to demonstrate the Republican ticket's diplomatic experience and ability.

Like many of Reagan's appearances during these 10 days, that news conference offered reporters covering it at least three different "leads" or opening sentences for their reports. All three were used by different news organizations.

The first was probably the lead the Reagan organization wanted: "Ronald Reagan and George Bush ... took steps today to assure China that a Reagan administration would make no change in Sino-American relations." That was The Washington Post's version, written by a member of The Post's staff in Los Angeles.

The New York Times (in a dispatch printed by many other newspapers) led with Reagan's assurance that despite their convention rhetoric, the Democrats would be unable "to portray me as a combination of Ebenezer Scrooge and the Mad Bomber" during the campaign.

But the real lead of the story, as it turned out, was the one the Los Angeles Times and CBS News used: "Ronald Reagan revealed his intention to reestablish official government relations with Taiwan Saturday ... as the L.A. Times put it."

It took several days for all the news media to catch on to the significance of that fact, but eventually it became a dominant element in the bad publicity for Reagan that was to follow.

Meanwhile, the candidate set out on a week of campaigning that would include major speeches to the American Legion and Veterans of Foreign Wars, and a tour of a shipyard in Philadelphia. During these appearances, Reagan's handlers planned, the candidate would set out clearly his position on the great national security issues of the day.

An air tanker drops chemical retardant in effort to ring fire burning near Palm Springs
Brushfire near Palm Springs burns 9,000 acres

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (UPI) — A brushfire that already has charred 9,000 acres burned uncontrolled on Mount San Jacinto for the fourth day Friday, snapping up chaparral thickets and tall brush and heading toward sparsely populated San Andreas Canyon.

Fire officials said the fire was one-third contained at midday, but as the fire line lengthened the blaze spread, preventing firefighters from gaining a larger hold on the flames.

Four boys playing with fire ignited the blaze Tuesday. Officials said their parents could be held responsible for damages.

$350,000 disappears on flight

KODIAK, Alaska (UPI) — A currency shipment of "considerably more than than $350,000" was stolen while being sent by registered mail from federal reserves in Seattle to banks in Kodiak, Alaska, the Postal Service said Friday.

The shipment consisted of new $100 bills, authorities said.

The cash shipment, discovered missing on Aug. 15, had been dispatched by airliner from Seattle to Anchorage, "where it missed a flight and laid over one day. But we are satisfied it left Anchorage on the plane the next day," said Richardson.

Chemical fire injures 45

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — A trash truck carrying low level radioactive wastes and other hazardous chemicals from a high school to a landfill caught fire Friday and spread toxic fumes that sickened at least 45 people and forced evacuation of a two-block residential area in nearby Baldwin.

Fire officials said the chemicals in the truck apparently mixed and caught fire because of the high outside temperatures.

Carter approves pay hike

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter Friday agreed to a 3.1 percent pay increase for 1.4 million white collar federal workers, citing continuing inflation, and asked Congress to let the raise go into effect.

The pay raise would be effective on Oct. 1 unless rejected by either house of Congress within 30 days.

Budget Director James McIntyre, Labor Secretary Ray Marshall and the director of personnel management had recommended an across-the-board 13.9 percent increase, but Carter reduced the figure to 3.1 percent.

Copper workers approve pact

PHOENIX, Ariz. (UPI) — A two-month strike against the Kennecott Copper Co. ended with agreement on a new contract Friday, paving the way for settlement of similar walkouts in the nationwide industry.

Union officials said some of the Kennecott locals have ratified the agreement and the rest will vote on it later. He said the pact called for a 32-percent pay boost spread over three years and an immediate $1.03 per hour cost-of-living increase.

Kennecott workers were expected to be back on the job in a week, they said.

Under the old contract union workers earned an average of $10.23 per hour.

Skydiver survives long fall

SUNNYSIDE, Wash. (UPI) — A sky diver who plunged 6,500 feet to earth, hit the ground at a bone-crunching 80 mph and miraculously survived after his parachute became entangled says he still loves skydiving.

"I would love to do it again," Don Hagert said this week from his hospital bed. "I love flying through the sky. There's a freedom of expression there that you can't get anywhere else."

Hagert said as he plummeted toward earth with nothing between him and the ground but sagebrush, he went completely blank, falling even to utter a prayer or scream.

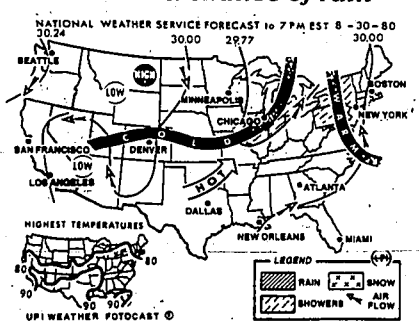

Today's weather

Cool weekend ahead with chance of rain

Twin Falls, Burley-Rupert, Jerome-Gooding areas:
 Cloudy at times and continued cool through Sunday with a slight chance of afternoon showers. Winds westerly 10 to 15 miles an hour this afternoon. Highs today and Sunday upper 60s and 70s. Overnight lows upper 30s to middle 40s.

Camas Prairie, Halley, Wood River valley:
 Variable clouds through Sunday with a chance of afternoon showers. Highs both days middle 60s to middle 70s. Overnight lows in the 30s.

Northern Utah and Nevada:
 Variable cloudiness today becoming fair Sunday. Highs in the 70s in Nevada and in the 80s in Utah. Overnight lows from the upper 30s to the 50s.

Synopsis:
 Variable clouds and a chance of showers.

That's the outlook for the Labor Day weekend in the Magic Valley and much of Idaho.

A wide trough of low pressure over the Pacific Northwest continues to allow weak weather disturbances to move into Idaho from the Gulf of Alaska. One of those systems, situated over northern California, produced higher cloudiness over southern Idaho Friday.

Although that system was expected to weaken, little change in the weather is anticipated for a few days.

On Friday morning, cooler air flowing in from the north and mostly clear skies produced record or near-record low temperatures. Stanley had the coolest, 17 degrees, but minimums ranged up to 53 at Fossilville with most readings in the 40s. Boise, at 37 degrees, and Lewiston, with 42, tied or broke records.

Afternoon readings Friday were generally in the upper 60s or low 70s, but were well below normal. The warmest was 81 at Malad.

Elsewhere in the nation, the hot spot was Blythe, Calif., with 108 degrees while Burns, Ore., reported the coolest temperature, 28 degrees.

The hazy outlook for the Magic Valley through Wednesday calls for mostly dry and cool with light morning dew for fair curing conditions.

At the first stop — the VFW convention in Chicago — this play went awry. Reagan's speech there was formally entitled "PEACE: Restoring the Margin of Safety," and it was meant to send the message that Reagan as president would maintain a genuine peace by reducing America's armed forces. But it didn't come out that way in the mass media.

"Reagan Defends Viet War" blared the banner headline in the next day's Chicago Tribune. The evening news on both CBS and NBC began with the same bit of news, and ABC featured it prominently. So did the Associated Press and United Press International, the two wire services upon whom most daily papers depend for national political news.

Reagan had personally added a passage to his VFW speech describing the Vietnam war as a "noble cause" that the United States had been "afraid to win." That was a red flag in the news media; one that distracted most of the reports covering the speech from the principal message Reagan wanted to convey.

Even that message got confused, largely because reporters couldn't sort out the calls for peace from the calls for more arms. This problem persisted for the next two days as Reagan continued to speak out on defense matters. The hawkish tone set by the first day's ringing defense of the Vietnam war and "exporting Americanism" seemed to color the coverage Reagan got all week.

Meanwhile, the import that Aug. 16 news conference began to register. On Tuesday night, Aug. 19, all three networks carried reports suggesting that Bush — then still in Tokyo — faced serious problems in Peking because of Reagan's pledge to restore "official government relations" with Taiwan.

The Chinese delivered a blistering attack on Reagan — "They're hoping mad," as NBC's Nightly News put it — and Bush was on the defensive. CBS quoted Reagan's principal foreign policy aide as "backing off" from Reagan's latest statement, and the network's correspondent said the Republicans weren't conveying the polished image the trip was meant to project.

Also Tuesday, the new Gallup Poll was released for publication in Wednesday's papers. In The Washington Post's Wednesday edition the news about Carter was killed even with Reagan by Gallup's reckoning appeared beside an article by Lou Cannon, a reporter who has been covering Reagan for more than 15 years and is following his campaign this year for The Post.

"Ronald Reagan campaigned today in gloomy weather," Cannon's dispatch began, "which matched some of the omens for his own candidacy." Cannon went on to say that Reagan aides were acknowledging that the former governor had failed to convey the clear positions on national security issues that they had intended.

A dispatch like Cannon's carries substantial but incalculable weight inside the news media. A senior political reporter, known as an expert on Reagan, writing in one of the two newspapers that virtually everyone in the media reads, can color reporters' and editors' views of a situation almost subliminally. Cannon's story probably contributed substantially to the general perception that Reagan was having a bad week.

There were other, "contrary" messages the same day. The Wall Street Journal, for example, editorialized that Reagan did just the right thing by declaring Vietnam a noble cause. "It's about time," the Journal said.

The China flap continued to intensify. ABC's World News Tonight on Thursday reported Bush's continuing problems in China, then showed Reagan in Los Angeles reiterating his view (which Bush had been trying to "explain away" according to ABC) that there should be an official U.S. office in Taiwan.

Over the weekend all three networks were routinely reporting the Bush trip and capricious Reagan comments in the United States as a flub and an embarrassment for the Republican ticket. This had become conventional wisdom by Sunday night there was no other version of the event on the networks.

Curiously, the Chinese government gave the American media a way to make this point. Its repeated official denunciations of Reagan and Bush were carried without comment or rebuttal, including the final Chinese judgment that Bush's visit was a failure. By inference, the networks seemed to agree.

Over the weekend, the columnists and editorialists began to comment on Reagan's "Monday Morning" strategy. The Monday Morning Post carried an editorial saying Reagan had not really made a grave goof over China, but the overriding message of other comments was that the Republican had shot himself in the foot.

This set the scene for the final act of this unhappy little drama for the Reagan campaign — Monday's news conference in Los Angeles. By its very nature this was a negative event for Reagan — an attempt to explain what had happened, to put a favorable light on unfavorable events.

As it turned out, one network — NBC — gave Reagan something of a break, reporting his news conference without pointing out the contradictions between Monday's statements and earlier public pronouncements.

But the two other networks, ABC and CBS, gave their viewers a much sharper account. ABC juxtaposed film clips to show Bush flustered contradicting Reagan on one key point, and both networks showed Reagan acknowledging that he "mistakenly" broke. "The controversy is not likely to blow away," concluded the ABC correspondent, Barry Serafin. "It is a controversy which has clouded what was meant to have been a showpiece for George Bush's credentials and the foreign policy prowess of the Republican ticket."

Malaria outbreaks on rise

ATLANTA (UPI) — A dramatic increase of nearly 200 percent in malaria cases, most of them attributed to Vietnamese refugees, was reported Friday by federal health officials.

The National Center for Disease Control said since the first of the year, 1,779 people came down with malaria in the United States, compared with 436 cases reported for a similar period of 1979.

Of the 1980 cases, Dr. Dennis Juraneck of the CDC's parasitic diseases division, said detailed information was available on 666 malaria patients, showing that 465 were foreign-born individuals, 354 were refugees from Southeast Asia and 90 percent of those cases involved Vietnamese.

The CDC said 14,000 refugees per month have been coming to this country since August 1979.

The federal health agency said despite the dramatic increase in the number of cases of malaria, which is transmitted by the anopheline mosquito, the risk of domestic transmission was low. This was borne out, according to the CDC, in a study undertaken in part to assess the potential for transmission of malaria within the United States.

The CDC said the study revealed not only a low rate of infection but also a low intensity of infection among the malaria victims. "Both of these factors reduce the risk of domestic transmission of malaria to relatively low levels, even though receptive vectors... on the West Coast and in the southeastern states are widely present."

No outbreaks of introduced malaria in the United States have been reported to CDC this year, but the agency said the risk of transmission may be enhanced by seasonal increases in local mosquito populations or by high rates of patient infections in refugees arriving in this country. It urged health departments to actively track malaria patients, including rapid case follow-up and treatment.

In its Morbidity and Mortality Weekly Report, the CDC also noted an unusual increase in cases of primary amebic meningoencephalitis, a rare disease first recognized in 1965 that strikes swimmers and is almost always fatal.

Seven confirmed and one suspected case of this amoeba-caused illness, all of them fatal, were reported in the last month from four states and Puerto Rico.

Of the 29 cases reported in the United States since 1965, excluding those in 1979, only one patient is known to have survived. Death usually occurs within five days after hospital admission.

Ghost Ship

Geographic Society releases sonar photos of ship found in icy grave

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Like a long-lost time capsule, a British ship that sank more than a century ago was discovered this month by scientists scanning the frozen Arctic Ocean with sonar equipment.

The Aug. 13 discovery of the H.M.S. Breadalbane could be a "biological benchmark," according to Dr. Joseph MacInnis, head of Undersea Research Ltd. of Toronto, who spent three years trying to find the wreck.

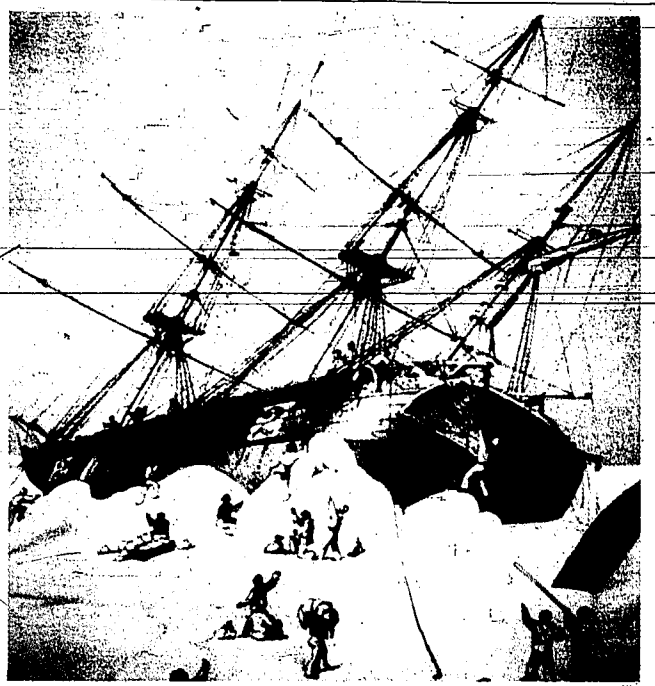

"Because of the temperature of the water, either below or close to freezing, there is a very good chance that all the organic material from the sails to the rigging to the food on board will be in a very excellent state of preservation, providing excellent information about decaying in these extreme conditions," MacInnis said.

The shadow of the vessel with two of its three masts apparently draped with sails and rigging showed up on sonar, which uses sound waves to probe the depths.

The Breadalbane was crushed by shifting ice on Aug. 21, 1853, while searching for Sir John Franklin and his 128-man crew, who had starved or frozen to death on their quest for the Northwest Passage across North America.

"The ship is really a time capsule of this particular part of the last century," MacInnis said. "Everything the crew used to make the ship work, plus all their personal gear, are still on board."

While there are no plans to raise the ship, MacInnis said a hole will be cut through the ice next spring and a diver lowered into the sea to take pictures and collect artifacts.

Innocent people die in apartment

'War between the hookers' kills 5 in arson fire

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — A pre-dawn fire set by an arsonist destroyed an apartment building Friday, killing five persons.

Residents said a territorial war among prostitutes and pimps may have been behind the blaze.

Police said the fire — which raced throughout the three-story Beacon Hills Apartments through an open fire door — was set with a flammable substance in a can placed in a rear stairwell.

But they said they could not confirm a motive for the fire.

"You're talking about an area where in the last week we have had (Friday's) arson fire that killed five people, an operation 100 (sealing off of an area thought to contain a suspect) and a homicide," said police spokesman Sgt. Jim Treece. "Right now you can just about take your pick."

"It's just craziness. It's just a big war between the hookers over who's gonna get that corner," said Enice Strozier, pointing up the street. Ms. Strozier is a sister of Aurelia Strozier, who was trapped for a time with her two children atop the burning building. Her 6-month old child was hospitalized with collapsed lungs.

Mary A. Kovanda, 29, her 2-year-old son Randy, and her 6-year-old daughter Theresa died in a third-floor apartment before police and firefighters could rescue them. Also killed were Ronald D. Henderson, 23, and Clarence L. Macklin, 76, who leaped from the roof to his death.

Firefighters rescued five adults and four children. The fire was the city's worst in terms of fatalities since a hotel fire in January, 1978 that killed 20 persons, police said.

"People have been stockpiling arms in this neighborhood for weeks," said Lenny Jones, another mother who leaped from a third-floor window with her two children, suffering scrapes and bruises. "The hookers and pimps are starting to kill people," she said.

Police discounted statements by residents who said they were awakened by gunfire. Treece said, "We know of absolutely no infire."

But Ms. Jones said she was awakened by gunshots and heard a second volley of distant shots as police arrived.

"I think they were firing to draw attention," she said. "They wanted this place to burn down." Two area neighbors also reported hearing gunfire.

Ms. Strozier also said drugs were a problem in the neighborhood. "Those guys stick a needle in their arm and they'll do about anything. This ain't the last building to go. You can bet there's gonna be more."

She also said an unidentified man had previously told residents of a nearby apartment the building would be blown up. Both Ms. Jones and Ms. Strozier said the arsonist may have hit the wrong building.

"That building was just full of young women, elderly folks and kids," Ms. Jones said. "Nobody in there was bothering nobody." Gary Lewis, a second-floor resident, was enraged over the death of Ms. Kovanda and her children.

FBI admits no leads in bombing

STATELINE, Nev. (UPI) — Experts hypothesized four witnesses Friday to try to help them remember more about two men and a woman who delivered the bomb which exploded in Harvey's hotel-casino Wednesday.

Hotel officials said a one-story casino portion of the hotel, on the other side of the building from the blast, would reopen for the Labor Day holiday weekend. And they said they would offer a reward for information leading to the arrest of the extortionists.

FBI agent in charge of the investigation, Joseph Yablonsky, admitted that the suspects' trail, now at least two days old, is getting cold.

"We don't know who they are, and we don't know where they are," he said, and he urged anyone who might have information about the suspects or their highly sophisticated bomb to come forward.

He said the FBI had been flooded with calls' with tips on the investigation, but so far none had offered real clues.

Fingerprints taken off the bomb casing were being run through the FBI's files in Washington, but no results were made public. Asked if anyone besides the extortionists might have left the prints, FBI spokesman William Jansen said, "We assume no one else touched it."

Evidence experts combed the rubble of the hotel's lower floors, looking for bomb fragments and any other pieces of evidence. National Guard troops stood guard outside the hotel, keeping the curious away.

John loves Lucey, but not Maine

AUGUSTA, Maine (UPI) — The attorney general of Maine ruled Friday that November election ballots will have to be changed to reflect independent presidential candidate John Anderson's choice of a running mate.

The ruling by Attorney General Richard S. Cohen came hours after Secretary of State Rodney S. Quinn stopped the presses printing ballots listing Anderson's running mate as George Cabot Lodge, son of the GOP's 1960 vice-presidential candidate.

Lodge was named Anderson's surrogate running mate months ago to meet the state's early filing deadline. But Anderson this week named former Gov. Patrick Lucey of Wisconsin to fill out the ticket and asked Maine to replace Lodge's name with Lucey's.

Cohen said the switch left the state in a quandary.

"We do have a statute that allows a candidate to withdraw and have his or her name deleted from the ballot," he said. "We do not have, however, any statute that spells out how a replacement candidate for president, vice president or presidential elector is to be determined."

He said he will ask the legislature to change the law.

Cohen said before the ballots are actually changed, Lodge will have to formally withdraw, Lucey will have to consent, Anderson will have to request in writing that Lucey be added to the ballot and Anderson's Maine electors will have to back the change.

Rare 3-eyed lizard blocks development

EDMONTON (UPC) — A three-eyed, web-footed lizard with a penchant for swimming through blowing sand has an Edmonton development company re-evaluating a move into the desert sands near Palm Springs, California.

Allarco Developments Limited, which has holdings in a number of hotels and a few other money-making projects across North America, holds options on a parcel of land in the Coachella Valley in California.

It seems, though, that the Uma Inornata may have squatter's rights there.

The Uma Inornata is a white, four-to-seven-inch long lizard which has a scale-covered third eye on its forehead and uses its webbed feet to swim through blowing sand. It apparently likes the Coachella Valley so much it refuses to live anywhere else on earth.

California environmentalists are arguing development in the area would stop the sand from drifting and destroy the Uma Inornata's natural habitat.

"We don't know how much of a problem it's going to be," Allarco spokesman Duane Urynychuk said Friday. "It just came to light when we were looking into the property."

Allarco is keeping mum about the situation. Urynychuk won't say how much land is under option but he says the company may "try to negotiate an extension on the options."

In the meantime, the company is talking to a raft of local, county, state and federal departments about the lizard problem, Urynychuk said.

"There's no point committing ourselves to developing and then finding out we can't do it."

The desert area, Urynychuk said, "is very scenic. We see potential in it for homes, retirement homes or as a recreational areas."

But the potential may be stymied if environmentalists are able to convince authorities the lizard takes precedence over developers.

TAKE IT OFF!
When Jefferson Parish (La.) Sheriff Harry Lee took office April 1 he bet 20 people $200 each that he could drop 47 pounds by Tuesday. He showed up at the sheriff's office in Gretna Tuesday morning wearing his cowboy hat as usual but looking unusually trimmer. He tipped the scales at 230 pounds, exactly 47 pounds lighter than the day he made the bet, according to public information officer Colleen Landry. "And," she adds, "I was one of the fools who bet him."

PHONY REWARD
Last week Helen Rodman found $225,000 in un cashed telephone bill checks on an off-ramp of the Glendale Freeway in Los Angeles, returned the loot to the General Telephone Co. and eventually was invited to lunch Tuesday. She figured she was in for a reward, and sure enough after lunch and a few cocktails, company execs offered her a free telephone. "I was underwhelmed," she says, and told the company to keep the phone and send a check to her favorite charity.

SHATTERING HOMECOMING
When Elvis Presley was made, they broke the mold. They've been doing it at lately, most recently Thursday night in Weston, Mo. Sixty-six Diablos finished the last in a series of three limited-edition whisky decanters in the form of the late King. The first two were destroyed at the ceramics factory in Japan where they were made, but William Dykman, 42, a company vice president and diehard Elvis fan, says, "Because it's the end of the original series and the 25th year of Elvis' entertainment, we thought we should bring it to a close in our own country, on our own grounds."

SEXUAL LIBERATION NOW A BORE?

Sex therapist Debra Phillips, Ph.D. and author of "Sexual Confidence," says the sexual revolution has generated "sex without pleasure or intimacy." She says, "People are making love with strangers on the first day and that may be the reason there is a startling 85 percent impotence rate for first sexual experiences. Now the biggest problem is boredom and numbness." Her cure: Take your time to become intimate, and "stop making love every night in the same way just after the 11 o'clock news."

THEIR SONG

Maria Elena Holly, widow of rock 'n' roll legend Buddy Holly, showed up recently at the opening of Mickey Gilley's Western Wear in Fort Worth, Texas, and told him she loves Gilley's version of "True Love Ways," a Holly tune. "... It was 'our song,'" Mrs. Holly told Gilley. She said later that Gilley "did it just right." It's something of Gilley's song, too, it's his ninth No. 1 country single and has now crossed over to the pop charts.

BEHIND THE NAME: Gitter-rocker Elton John was born Reg Dwight.

Smith unaware of lawsuit

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — Singer Kate Smith was released from a private Raleigh hospital Friday, still unaware of a fierce courtroom battle between two of her nieces for control of her $776,000 estate.

Miss Smith, 73, who is best known for her rendition of Irving Berlin's "God Bless America," suffers from diabetes and a heart condition and had been in the Raleigh Community Hospital since Sunday for a lengthy checkup.

Two days after she was admitted, her two nieces began testifying in New York Supreme Court in Manhattan in a suit in which each is trying to gain control of her estate. Both parties Thursday agreed to try and reach an out-of-court settlement to avoid publicity.

A judge will review the progress of the settlement at a Sept. 4 hearing. "She doesn't know anything about it. We feel that is best," said Mrs. Helena M. Steene of Raleigh, Miss Smith's sister, who said she talked with her briefly Friday. Miss Smith has refused all interviews.

Mrs. Steene described her sister as "a debilitated person," but said she is improving slowly and is mentally alert.

Miss Smith returned to her $65,000 Raleigh retirement home where she lives with one of the nieces involved in the suit, Kathryn Rodriguez.

The second niece, Suzanne L. Andron of Raleigh, filed the original suit. It seeks Mrs. Rodriguez' ouster as one of the conservators of Miss Smith's estate. Mrs. Andron and Mrs. Steene have labeled Mrs. Rodriguez and her husband, Guillermo, as "self-appointed fiduciaries" in their handling of Miss Smith.

Mrs. Rodriguez has filed a countersuit to have Mrs. Andron and family attorney Richard S. Becker — also conservators — removed from their roles in handling the estate. Mrs. Andron contends that Mr. and Mrs. Rodriguez and their two daughters moved into Miss Smith's home against Miss Smith's wishes. Mrs. Rodriguez claims that Miss Smith has been improving under her care. Miss Smith moved to North Carolina from New York in 1979 to be near her sister.

Mrs. Steene said when Miss Smith moved to Raleigh "no one was to live with my sister because she is a very private person and values her privacy." She said two months after the singer's arrival the Rodriguez family "just moved in with her without asking anybody."

Foundation waits for UFOs

ASHFORD, Wash. (UPI) — The New Age Foundation has its flying saucers landing zone all spruced up and ready this weekend for the 4th annual Mystic Mountain Homecoming.

The three-day gathering on the southwest slopes of Mount Rainier will climax Monday with a visit to an open field in nearby Cedar Park, where the group hopes a triangular-shaped pile of rocks will lure a spaceship from another planet.

Wayne Aho, chief spokesman for the foundation, says this year's gathering is especially important because of the earthquakes, volcanic eruptions and world-wide upheaval.

"We are," says Aho, "in a major cycle of earth change that will be concluded about 2025 A.D." It's all prophesied, he said.

Snow and glacier-capped 14,408-foot Mount Rainier long has been the focus of his foundation. Aho says because "it was the scene of a great, un discovered civilization in the past."

The foundation is devising a program of self-help, along with an understanding of the attitudes of people living in other lands, to survive the next 45 years until the world enjoys a noiseless, pollution-free environment brought forth with the expertise of anticipated visitors from outer space.

Missing bear may be alive

BENBECULA, Scotland (UPI) — The bounty hunters of Benbecula are back in business and the labors of Hercules would appear to be over.

Hercules, an 8-foot, 500-pound grizzly bear, was feared drowned after absconding from a film set on an island off the coast of Scotland where he was making commercials.

He swam out to sea and, for two days earlier this week, evaded a search party of banana-bearing beavers, tracker dogs and soldiers before police called off the hunt.

Now owner Andy Robins, who offered $2,400 for the bear's capture, says he has found Hercules' green collar near a new lair and fresh tracks on a nearby island.

"I am sure the lair has been slept in within the past 24 hours," said Robins whose pet grizzly earns $48,000 a year from stunts and commercials.

"He's a very, very clever boy. He chose a small fern-covered ledge right on the water's edge where he could see everything without being seen himself."

"He's probably frightened and hungry so I've left him a nice lump of fresh meat in his den to help him get his strength and confidence back."

"Look on the island said they intend to return to the chase and Robins reckons he will have Hercules back "in a couple of days."

Rare chimp dies after heart attack

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — Kakowet, the San Diego Zoo's patriarch pygmy chimp, has died at the age of 22.

But he leaves behind an impressive progeny — the world's largest captive colony of his threatened species.

The rare pygmy chimp — father to 10 of his 30 members of his species living in captivity — died of a heart attack. His body is now bound for the Smithsonian Institution in Washington, D.C.

"He will be stuffed and mounted in an exhibit there," said Zoo spokeswoman Georgianne Irvine.

The zoo spokeswoman said Kakowet, who had a talent for untying his keeper's shoelaces, had been suffering from kidney disease for two years. He frequently had to be moved from the pygmy chimp quarters for medical treatment, she said.

He arrived at the zoo in June 1960 as a gift from what is now Kinshasa, Zaire, weighing only 15 pounds. The name Kakowet is the phonetic spelling of the French "cacahouete," or peanut.

The playful and intelligent chimp lived in a zoo surrounded next to the lowland gorilla exhibit, along with his lifelong mate, Linda, and three male and seven female offspring.

What's what

Compliments by some are rude from others

One claim is that 70 percent of all working women have been sexually harassed by their bosses. An astoundingly high number. If true, that numerous women are bothered on the job by such shenanigans there can be no doubt. But our Love and War man says the truth in each instance is hard to get to. When a smooth operator delivers romantic interest, his line may be read as nothing more than complimentary attention. When a clumsy character stumbles through the same proposition, his suggestion might be heard as rude, crude and television offensive.

In South Florida are television newscasters whose real names are Jill Beach, Dwight Lauderdale and Al Sunshine. Apt.

Seven percent of the taxpayers audited by the Internal Revenue Service get refunds.

RUNAWAYS

It's difficult enough to trace runaway girls in this country, but it's much harder to trace runaway girls in Europe. They find it fairly easy to cross national borders over there. In a matter of weeks they can reach their whereabouts though half a dozen jurisdictions. There, as here, many turn up at home again. But the white slavers that transport all over the continent see to it that some go out to touch forever.

Hardly anybody eats the sorts of fish known as toadfish, viperfish, hog sucker, roach, grunt or rattfish. Too bad. They're edible. Delicious, in fact. Even though the supplies of popular favorites, like salmon, tuna, cod, so on, are dwindling, the customers aren't ready for the ugly name variety. Maybe they'll get ready. The National Marine Fisheries Service has spent $494,000 trying to change their names. Not much luck so far, I gather.

COUGAR

A female cougar in search of a mate must be pretty smart. She lights out along a trail, and when she hits male tracks that aren't fresh, she lies down near them and waits, knowing somehow that the male cougar runs a regular circuit, that he'll inevitably be along again in a few days. How does she know that?

The Chinese detective Charlie Chan has never been played in the movies by a Chinese.

Documentary to detail violence in schools

By ROBERT A. MCLEAN
© 1980 Boston Globe

The school bell clanging between classes sounds much like the timekeeper's bell between rounds of a prizefight.

There is a fight going on in America's schools today, a tough, terrifying battle which is crippling our educational system. There are no Marquies of Queensbury—rules, the referees are overworked and overwhelmed and there are no winners, only victims.

"Combat in the Classroom" a sobering scan of the growing violence in the nation's schools—and, happily, some workable solutions—is scheduled to air Sunday night. The last in a three-part series on violence in America—the earlier reports dealt with violence in prisons and on the streets—"Combat" hits home hardest because it involves so many.

Narrator Ed Asner, tours some of the strife-torn high schools in the United States from the inner city ghetto of Brooklyn to the sunnier suburbs of Los Angeles. He talks with students, teachers, parents, educational leaders and law-enforcement officials.

En route, Asner reels off the frightening statistics which complement the equally terrifying first-person stories of murderous assault, rape, mayhem, robbery, assault and battery, drug abuse, property destruction and the other felonious crimes which, in some places, are as much a part of the school day as the Three R's.

Asner also talks with educators who are turning the battle around, reducing the incidence of crime, rehabilitating some of the troublemakers, salvaging teaching staffs whose dedicated professionalism has been battered and nearly broken, removing the blanket of fear which is smothering some institutions, holding out hope for the future.

Every year 110,000 American teachers are assaulted by students or intruders in their classrooms. Every year 200,000 students are injured violently. Vandals cause $60 million damage annually to the nation's school plants, a sum equal to the cost of school books for all our schools.

"One in every 10 schools has serious violence," Asner says, citing a government study and reports from the National Education Assn. "And where violence once was confined to the urban schools, it is now spreading to the suburbs.

"A climate of fear is paralyzing the learning process," Asner asserts. Miriam Schneider is one of the statistics. Her re-enactment of the terrible day when she was cornered in her deserted Los Angeles High School classroom, robbed, stripped, raped and shot at point blank range, is a scene which makes the spine tingle and the palms sweat.

"I had nightmares of an intruder entering my hospital room and killing me," Schneider recalls with shaking voice and trembling hands. "I was transferred to another school, but I couldn't go on being a teacher anymore, and I quit. I'm not the same person I was before."

In New York City's 135th St. elementary school for 10 years, until her career ended with a brutal assault and robbery. Recovered, but out of education, she recalls bitterly that her assailant battered her while she desperately, vainly, pushed the button of an emergency warning system, installed just two weeks prior to the attack.

Two brothers, one now in college, both hard core troublemakers in high school—they were expelled a total of 18 times—talk angrily about their treatment by teachers and school disciplinarians. The older youth sneers about the fear he and his classmates instilled in teachers, "particularly white teachers," who "come to school scared. Once you get them scared, they stay scared."

Psychiatrist Alvin Poussant of Harvard Medical School agrees that some black youngsters are anti-white teachers, but adds that many also are anti-black teacher, "or any authority figure, and often with substance. Some retaliate because they feel no one cares about them."

to the students that there is concern for them as students and human beings. One such man is David Bowick, principal of Los Angeles' Manual Arts High, seen in action in a typical day of one-on-one encounters with his charges.

Bowick is on the move all day, it seems, visiting classrooms unannounced, greeting students in the corridors or on the front steps as they enter, offering friendly warnings to those carrying contraband such as radios and non-educational materials, dealing with minor problems in a jocular manner, setting a positive tone for the learning atmosphere. The grim side of anti-violence operations is captured in the security force rooms of urban high schools, where squads of security agents question and search students and strangers picked up during hourly sweeps of the corridors, stairwells and vacant rooms. In one school long tables are displayed loaded with weapons of every possible description taken from students and intruders. In his best journalistic style, Asner winds up the hour interviewing Dr. William Glasser, a nationally-known educator and author—"Schools Without Failure," "The Identity Society"—who stresses the need to re-structure any school system which has students with reading problems.

Girl skips class, found shot in head

ST. LOUIS (UPI)—A 16-year-old girl found shot to death along a highway apparently skipped the first day of school because other students teased her about her weight, investigators said Friday.

Kimberly S. Anderson was last seen by her father, Robert Anderson, when he dropped her off for classes Wednesday morning at Hazelwood West Junior High School, where she was to start eighth grade. But school officials said they had no record of her attending classes.

Her parents said Kimberly, a resident of suburban Florissant, was deeply self-conscious about her weight and told them she would run away rather than attend classes and be teased by other students. The girl was 5-foot-7 and weighed 175 pounds.

"She said she would run away if she had to go to school," said Anderson. "I put my foot down, and I thought she had decided to go."

Mrs. Anderson added, "She said the kids made fun of her weight. But to look at her, she wasn't fat. She was just a big girl."

The Andersons said Kimberly placed a ladder near her window Tuesday night as a possible route of escape if forced to attend classes.

A neighbor said she saw the girl walking near Lambert Field about 2 p.m. Wednesday. Her body was discovered Thursday morning by a hitchhiker in a grassy area along Interstate 70 near East St. Louis, Ill.

Her school books and other personal items were found near the body.

Police said she had been shot once in the head. The St. Clair County coroner's office said results of tests to determine whether the girl was sexually assaulted would be available in several days.

Investigators said they found bus schedules and other information among her personal items including Kimberly might have planned to go to Chicago. They theorize she may have been picked up by her assailant as she hitchhiked on the interstate.

Boy arrested for firing at highway

ORLANDO, Fla. (UPI)—A 19-year-old boy was arrested Friday for opening fire along an expressway with a high-powered air rifle and wounding four people.

A second youth was being sought in the case. Police said both suspects in other unsolved shootings in the area including sniper attacks on prostitutes.

The identity of the boy taken into custody was not released because of his age. Police said the other boy was 19.

None of the four persons struck by the BB-pellets suffered serious injury in the shootings, which took place along the Orlando's Edgewater Expressway late Thursday night. A three-mile segment of the roadway was closed temporarily while police searched for the snipers.

At least 11 vehicles were hit by pellets from the "pump-pellet" gun that police said was more powerful than a .22 caliber rifle.

The youth taken into custody told officers his companion did the shooting. He was charged with aggravated battery and firing at an occupied vehicle.

Police were first notified of the shootings about 11:15 p.m. when toll booth employees said William West Wilson, 46, of Orlando, pulled up with a BB-size pellet lodged in his head. He was later treated and released from Brookwood Community Hospital.

Republic says air service will improve

By MARTY TRILLHAASE
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A senior executive with Republic Airlines Friday said his firm's acquisition of Hughes Airwest should improve Twin Falls air service.

Republic, based in Minneapolis, is awaiting approval from the Civil Aeronautics Board to purchase Hughes Airwest for $45 million. The acquisition will make Republic a national carrier and provide Twin Falls customers with one-carrier service to most U.S. major cities, Republic Senior Vice President Robert Gren said.

Hughes Airwest, which is the only major carrier serving Twin Falls, now offers flights to cities located west of the Rocky Mountains. Passengers must switch airlines to travel to most eastern U.S. cities.

Gren met Thursday with the eight local Hughes Airwest employees and Friday met with local media representatives, outlining Republic plans.

Gren brought no new details about the acquisition, noting a final CAB decision is expected sometime in September. But his visit, part of an overall plan to acquire Hughes employees with the new airline, indicates Republic officials expect CAB approval shortly.

Gren said his visit reflects the airline's intention to reassure Hughes employees and local customers "that they have a future with Republic."

Gren said he could not say what changes will be made in routes and flight schedules, once the acquisition is complete, because a review of the Hughes schedules will take at least six months.

But he said the type of service offered to Twin Falls by Hughes is similar to the type of service Republic has provided to small cities in the east and south.

Termed the "hub and spoke" schedule, Republic relies on flying customers from small cities to regional airports or hubs, such as Boise, Salt Lake City, and Denver.

This type of scheduling is reflected in the fact that Republic will serve nearly 200 cities following the Hughes Airwest acquisition, more than any other U.S. airline, he said.

By adding Hughes to its system,

Republic will be able to offer one-carrier service to many of its customers, a factor Gren said should increase Twin Falls' business.

If local business does increase, Gren said he would expect Republic to increase its service to Twin Falls residents, probably by providing larger aircraft to the area.

Gren said local Republic management will consult with local officials during the flight schedule review.

Following Gren's presentation to the local staff, Twin Falls Hughes Airwest station manager Paul Shoaff said he expected a smooth transition.

Employees were generally pleased with the acquisition because working with a national airline will offer them more opportunities for career advancement, he said.

Gas available for weekend

BOISE — There will be plenty of gasoline for the Labor Day weekend, says Ken Miller, manager of the Idaho State Automobile Association.

"All the motorists will need is money," he said.

The AAA manager said a survey of stations across southern Idaho revealed an adequate supply of gasoline with most stations open every day to serve the motoring public. He said there are enough 24-hour stations for night time drivers.

Gasoline prices in Idaho have remained stable for the past 30 days with increases averaging about one-half cent per gallon on gasoline and a decrease of a fraction of a cent on diesel.

Monday will be a holiday for many area residents, giving them one final summer weekend with three days for recreation or relaxing. All federal, state, county and city offices will be closed for the day as will schools in Magic Valley. Some major downtown stores and grocery stores will remain open, but most other businesses are expected to close.

In Twin Falls residents will not have garbage pickups on Monday. Parks and some workers will also have a holiday. Collections will be a day late in the coming week.

Forest Service officials say it will probably be a big weekend for camping, back country hiking and other forest recreation if the weather remains good. It will probably be one of the last heavy traffic weekends of the season, however, in most forest campgrounds and lake areas.

Utilities least hit by property levy

TWIN FALLS — Utilities within Twin Falls County fared the best of any property category under the recent property re-evaluation, county Assessor Bill Clark says.

Figures released by the Idaho Tax Commission this week show utilities within the county received increased assessments of about 2 percent, Clark announced Friday.

Since other classes of property in the county received increased assessed values, for taxing purposes, of at least 20 percent, utilities will likely receive the largest tax cuts this year.

According to the Idaho Tax Commission, the value of utilities in the county increased from $39,068,195 in 1979 to $50,433,830 or 2 percent.

At the same time, residential property assessed values increased 120-130 percent under the re-evaluation brought on by the 1 percent initiative, Clark said, that compares to a 70 percent increase in the assessed value of commercial and industrial property in the county and a 50 percent increase in the assessed value of agricultural property, he said.

Clark said he was not surprised by the utility assessment figures since the tax commission has maintained utilities have always been placed at market value. But he said he was skeptical that the assessments reflected the value of utilities within the county.

The small increase also means the total value of all property in the county will not reach $1 billion as previously expected. Since the county's property tax collections are frozen at 1978 levels of slightly more than $9 million, county officials this year anticipated taxing below 1 percent of market value.

The limit is significant because the Legislature has provided a 4 percent increase in property tax revenues to local governments taxing below 1 percent of market value.

The Idaho Tax Commission assesses value, for tax purposes, on utilities within the county, Clark then adds that value to the assessed values he has already determined for all agricultural, industrial, commercial and residential properties to come up with a county-wide property market value.

"It appears we'll end up with something like $80 million, $20 million (short) isn't all that bad," he said.

"We were far enough under (1 percent of market value) that $20 million isn't going to affect us one way or the other."

Since the Legislature has also extended junior college districts, school plant facility bonds, bond redemption levies and tort levies from the 1 percent limit, the amount of tax revenues remaining under the freeze should be less than the 1978 tax total, Clark added.

The county is not assured of receiving the additional 4 percent, however. The tax commission, which will make the final decision, bases its approval on whether every taxing code area in the county, such as the cities of Twin Falls, Filer or Burli, tax below the 1 percent limit, Clark said. If one of the code areas is found taxing above 1 percent, the county will be denied the additional funds, he said.

Bill encourages alcohol fuel

TWIN FALLS — An aide to Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, said Friday details should be available soon on a new federal effort to encourage alcohol fuel production.

Unlike previous efforts, the synthetic fuels bill enacted by Congress earlier this year should encourage small-scale production as well as large plants, said Church aide Fred Wahl.

The Department of Energy and the Department of Agriculture are expected to jointly administer the program.

The Agriculture Department will provide loans and loan guarantees on plants producing less than 15 million gallons of alcohol a year, and on facilities that produce fuels from wood and wood waste products.

In addition, a Church-sponsored provision in the bill makes the federal government the "purchaser of last resort" for all alcohol produced from renewable resources.

The provision should help build confidence in financing for small-scale alcohol plants, Wahl said.

"Loan guarantees alone do not work to encourage investment," he said, "because many bankers in a tight money period would rather invest in things they know will turn a profit."

Financing has been a major impediment to the construction of more alcohol plants in the nation, he said.

The synthetic fuels bill would require a $6 billion appropriation for full implementation, he said. Budget talks are still in progress for the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1, but sponsors of the bill only envision spending about $2 billion in 1980-81.

By comparison, an Energy Department program begun earlier this year will spend about $200 million to encourage production of synthetic fuels.

Approximately 90 percent of the total was earmarked for coal gasification and industry-scale alcohol production.

The two departments expect to have applications for loans and loan guarantees under the new program available within two weeks. The first loans will be made in October, according to a Church press release.

Plans of any size will be considered under the program, Wahl said.

"If the people paying the taxes have to tighten their belts, then the state should do the same thing," the Soda Springs lawmaker said.

Little said cutbacks in programs would be one of the "big decisions that will have to be made. We will have to look into the area of education because that's where the bulk of the money is being spent."

Inger said each program will be studied and all the facts gathered and "then make a decision." He said he planned to assign more responsibility to those under him on the committee.

Olmstead predicts

'State tax increase 'unlikely'

BOISE (UPI) — Despite Idaho's faltering economy, state Republican legislative leaders today said it was "unlikely" there would be a tax increase next year.

House Speaker Ralph Olmstead, R-Twin Falls, and Senate President Pro-Tom Reed Budge made the prediction at a news conference to announce changes in the legislative Joint Finance-Appropriations Committee. They said the chance of a tax hike was remote, especially if the GOP retained control of the Idaho Legislature.

Olmstead and Budge announced the appointment of Rep. Ray Infanger, R-Salmon, as the new co-chairman of the fiscal committee, replacing Rep. Doyle Miner, R-St. Anthony, who resigned from the Legislature to become executive director of the Idaho Board of Pharmacy.

The legislative leaders also announced that Rep. Bill Lytle, R-Pinehurst, would be the newest member of the joint committee.

In accepting the position as co-chairman of the committee, Infanger, who has been vice-chairman, said the next session should be a challenging one because of the shortfall in revenue.

"It will try the skill of all of us," Infanger said.

Lytle called his appointment a "great honor" and said he would work to "serve the interests of all the people of the state."

Olmstead also announced that Rep. Kitty Guernsey, R-Boise, would replace Infanger as vice-chairman.

Olmstead and Budge said they felt that additional taxes could be avoided by belt tightening and possibly doing away with unneeded programs. They both predicted that education and the Department of Health and Welfare, which receive the bulk of state general account money, could come in for cuts.

Sen. Dave Little, R-Emmett, the other co-chairman of the joint committee, said the Legislature will just have to "bite the bullet" and hold the line.

Little said this should have been done in the last session, but noted that some of the recommendations of the joint committee were changed when they reached the floor of both houses.

Budge cautioned state agencies there would be "no carryover" this year and "no money for supplemental appropriations." He said the revenue situation didn't "look very bright."

"Other states are having the same problems," Budge said, "but they are worse off than Idaho."

He said Idaho will just have to "live within its income" and avoid additional taxes.

"If the people paying the taxes have to tighten their belts, then the state should do the same thing," the Soda Springs lawmaker said.

Little said cutbacks in programs would be one of the "big decisions that will have to be made. We will have to look into the area of education because that's where the bulk of the money is being spent."

Inger said each program will be studied and all the facts gathered and "then make a decision." He said he planned to assign more responsibility to those under him on the committee.

Wendell adopts budget

WENDELL — The Wendell City Council Thursday approved a $24,125 budget for the 1980-81 fiscal year.

The figure is 17.9 percent higher than the present total of $44,222.

Estimates from the county assessor indicate, however, that homeowners will pay approximately 2.9 mills on their assessed property value, compared to 3.26 mills for the present budget, according to City Clerk Mary Wofford.

Increases in the total budget include a 12-percent pay raise offered city employees and the addition of $15,000 in a special fund for a new fire station.

The city budgeted a 4 percent property tax increase, the amount allowed by the 1980 Idaho Legislature for counties in which property taxes total less than 1 percent of assessed property values.

The Wendell council also took advantage of a state rule allowing districts to budget liability insurance outside the property tax limitation. Wofford said the provision adds $9,845 to the tax levy, which totals $110,068.

No arrests in drug theft

GOODING — Gooding Police Chief Bill Bunn said he has some promising leads but has made no arrests in Monday's theft of $300 to $400 in drugs from a pharmacy.

Thieves ripped a hole in the roof of Johnson's Rexall Pharmacy sometime Monday night or early Tuesday morning and removed a variety of prescription drugs, Bunn said.

He said the haul was primarily "uppers" such as amphetamines, but also included compounds with names like "morphine sulfate." The thieves ignored cash registers containing about $100.

Bunn said the investigation is progressing, but would not say if arrests are anticipated.

Sewer surcharge exemptions made available

TWIN FALLS — Applications for exemptions from the monthly sewer system surcharge are being made available to low-income residents.

City Councilman Chris Talkington, who chairs a three-member council panel reviewing the applications, said about $1,000 in exemptions have been granted. Most of those receiving waivers have been senior citizens who are retired, he said.

The City Council July 21 adopted a $4 per month surcharge on residential sewer system users and a $6.63 per month surcharge on non-residential users to raise the city's share of the $7.8 sewage treatment plant modification project. That surcharge will remain in effect 18 months and is expected to generate $720,000.

The council provided hardship cases would be exempted from the County Commissioners delay insurance bids

TWIN FALLS — Insurance bids which were to be opened by Twin Falls County Commissioners Sept. 23 have been delayed.

Commission Chairman Merl Leonard said Friday the bid call has been withdrawn and will be readvertised for about Nov. 26.

"We have been considering working through the Idaho Association of Counties in order to take advantage of a uniform insurance plan. If we can save some money for the county, we think it is worth adopting," Leonard said.

He said the commissioners have been checking out the Association of Counties' proposal and have decided to readvertise for bids.

Commissioner Ann Cover said the county will follow the specifications of the association and should be able to cut some financial costs.

The fire insurance covers all county buildings, furnishings and equipment and the liability covers all county vehicles.

Leonard said the county is looking at just under $2 million in replacement costs for county buildings and equipment.

"When you are paying for insurance at this level, even a slight percentage can mean saving," Leonard said. "We haven't moved on it earlier, however, because we wanted to check out all details. We can't afford to take a chance with $2 million in property."

Bani-Sadr — 'free hostages'

By United Press International

Iranian President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr warned parliament Friday against spy trials for the 52 American hostages, now completing their 300th day in captivity.

In an interview with the Paris newspaper Le Matin, Bani-Sadr said the Iranian parliament, charged by Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini with deciding the fate of the captive Americans, should vote to free them — not try them for espionage as most of the deputies have said they favor doing.

Bani-Sadr said that the hostage crisis had backfired on Iran and warned that prolonging it by putting the hostages on trial could run the risk of American military intervention.

"Essentially the problem of the hostages has had the opposite effect. The American hostages have made our country a hostage of the United States," Bani-Sadr said.

The president, a moderate who has sought unsuccessfully to have the hostages freed, said he believed the United States would look upon spy trials as an act of war.

Although his warnings came in an interview with a French newspaper, observers said they were intended for the deputies in the parliament controlled by Bani-Sadr's fundamentalist rivals.

"To judge and condemn the hostages (would mean) to engage in conflict with the United States, a conflict that would allow this superpower to continually intervene in Iran if one of the hostages was condemned to death," Bani-Sadr said.

As Bani-Sadr made his plea to the Iranian parliament, the State Department also demanded the release of the hostages. However, it held out little hope that their freedom was imminent.

"We are seeking to impress on Iran's new parliament that an early end of the crisis is in its interest as in ours," said spokesman John Tritiner. "But I don't want to raise any expectations."

"If the problem was an easy one, it wouldn't have lasted 300 days," Tritiner said. "But in a problem as complicated as this one you keep trying, and because it is complicated, you have to keep trying mostly not in public."

Meanwhile, Iranian authorities, ignoring pleas from Amnesty International, executed 25 people by firing squads Friday, including 11 people convicted of trying to overthrow Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, Tehran Radio reported.

Their deaths brought to almost 90 the number of people to be put before firing squads in the overthrow plot.

State Department rejects sale of 5 planes to Iraq

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The State Department, bowing to strong congressional opposition, Friday refused to allow the sale of five Boeing commercial transports to Iraq on grounds it allegedly has supported terrorist activities.

Representatives of Iraqi Airways were at Boeing's Seattle plant to take delivery of the first plane in the $208 million sale — a 189-passenger 727. But Boeing's application for an export license, submitted to the State Department this summer, was denied.

"In view of recent terrorist incidents which appear to have had Iraq involvement or support, and the clear sentiment of the Congress with respect to international terrorism, we have advised the American aircraft manufacturers involved that the Department of State cannot recommend to the Department of Commerce that the issuance of licenses for the export of aircraft to Iraq at this time," the department press office said.

Israel opposed the aircraft sales to Iraq as well as the granting of licenses for the General Electric engine cores for the frigates.

Gooding halfback Stuart Fosocco powers through the Jerome defenders in a losing cause by the Huskies. The pass for the PAT was incomplete. Hansen's last score of the evening came in the fourth quarter when the Wildcats held Hansen on downs on the Filer 1 yard line. On the next play, Jeff Miller's twin brother John, cited as the outstanding lineman of the game by Coach Barry Espil, roared into the backfield to sack the Filer quarterback for a safety. They literally triple-teamed John all night. Espil said, "but they couldn't stop him. He's just a very fine athlete."

Murtaugh 28, Valley 12

EDEN-HAZLETON — Murtaugh High broke away from peaky Valley High School for a season-opening 28-12 win Friday night. Barry Messner scored two touchdowns for the Red Devils, including a 27-yard pass reception from quarterback Roy Nebeker that broke a 12-12 tie in the third quarter. Murtaugh opened the scoring when Paul Graf took a 40-yard scoring strike from Nebeker. Valley bounced back to tie the game when Gary Taylor scored from four yards out. Murtaugh went ahead 12-6 at the half as Messner took an errant Valley pletchout and rambled 40 yards for a TD.

GARDEN VALLEY — Rusty Church scored three times, including a 45-yard scamper in the first quarter, to lift Garden Valley over the Camas County Mustangs 36-12 in both teams' season openers Friday afternoon. After Church's run that opened the game up, Jerry Leach pushed the score to 12-0 with a 19-yard interception return. With Church scoring once more in the first period, Garden Valley blew the game wide open and never looked back. "We just made some crucial errors and screwed up on a few plays," said Camas coach Ed Blankenship. "After getting burned, we opened up in the second half and played good ball, but it was too late to do anything."

Jerome tops Gooding with late TD

GOODING — It took most of the game, but persistence finally paid off for the Jerome Tigers who edged the Gooding Senators 6-0 in their season opener at home. With 4 minutes remaining in the game Jerome took the ball at midfield, and using the same off-tackle play to the left eight times in a row, drove for the game's only score on a 9-yard run by Zane Ostler. An attempt to use the same play for the PAT failed. Highlighting the all-night defensive battle was Jerome middle linebacker Steve Branson with 20 tackles. Penalties and fumbles (Jerome lost 4 of 6) kept both offenses sputtering. Gooding was penalized for 60 yards and Jerome for 113. Leading rusher for the game was Ostler, who carried for 35 of his team's 159 yards rushing. The Tigers had 9 yards total offense passing. Gooding's game was more balanced but less powerful, rushing for 39 yards and passing for 20.

particularly in the fourth quarter, to turn back the Melba Mustangs 12-6 Friday night. The Pilots defense caused several turnovers with its hard hitting. Still the Pilots had to wait until a fourth-quarter touchdown before counting the victory. Melba got the last touchdown of the night. Joe Rodriguez gave Glens Ferry the lead in the second period with a four-yard burst and the clinchers were provided on an 11-yard romp by John Simons. Rusty Wall broke the Pilots' shutout attempt with a three-yard run in the final minutes.

first period. The Hagerman defense did their part in the second period by sacking Rod Hegl, Wendell's quarterback, in the end zone for a safety. With both teams going scoreless in the third period, Hagerman led the game with a fumble score in the fourth, as Ritchie went across from the 12-yard line. Food Adams led the longest run of the night as he scampered for 65 yards on a punt return to put the Hornets on the board. He did more damage in the first with a 25-yard run and Brett put on the final touches just before halftime with a six-yard run up the middle that made the final score 20-0. Todd Adams rushed for 83 total yards as Declo racked up 190 total yards offensively. Aberdeen had 88. Casey Matthews led the Declo defense attack with 10 tackles and eight assists.

Hansen 24, Filer 6

HANSEN — The Hansen Huskies took advantage of a strong showing on defense to roll past the Filer Wildcats 24-6 in Hansen's home season opener. Hansen opened the scoring in the second quarter when quarterback Cooper Lurie hit tight end Dean Goodwin on a 4-yard pass for the TD. Running back Jeff Conner then powered over for the 2-point conversion. After a long drive Filer struck back when Randy Tudor went over on a quarterback sneak from the 1. An attempt to run for the PAT failed, ending Filer's scoring efforts for the night. Hansen returned with the insurance score on a drive that saw fullback Todd Miller carry six straight times, the last a 5-yard run for the TD. Conner then scored on his second PAT of the evening. In the 3rd quarter Miller went from the 1 to 1 for his second score of the night after a 63-yard sustained drive

Herzog named Cards' general manager

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Whitley Herzog, named to replace Ken Boyer as manager of the St. Louis Cardinals in June, Friday was named general manager of the club.

Herzog will replace John Sabatone, who was fired Aug. 16.

Red Schoendienst, a former manager of the club and a current coach, was appointed to serve as "interim field manager" for the remainder of the season.

The appointments were announced by August A. Busch Jr., 81-year-old brewer, head of the baseball club.

"When Whitley Herzog was named Cardinal manager last June," Busch said. "We were aware that we were getting one of the top managers in baseball today."

"But we also knew we were getting a man with total baseball experience, including significant experience at the front office. At the time, Whitley's broad experience was a bonus to us. But as soon as the position of general manager became open, we began to consider him immediately as an obvious candidate."

19 trotters in Hambletonian field

DU QUAIN, Ill. (UPI) — Nineteen 3-year-old trotters were primed Friday for a dash for fame and fortune for their owners in today's 55th annual edition of the Hambletonian — the final and 24th Hambletonian at the Du Quain State Fair.

The all-kill field — largest since 1974 when Billy Haughton won with Christopher T in a field of 22 — will be raced in divisions for the first time in six years.

Ten horses; headed by 2-1 choice Noble Hustle on the rail and 5-2 Final Score from the No. 8 spot, will race in the first division at 12:45 p.m. (MDT).

The other nine, with 2-1 Thor Viking starting on the rail and 5-2 Noble Impulse from post No. 4, will trot in the second division elimination at 1:15 p.m.

A third heat featuring the first five finishers in the first two heats is scheduled for 3:20 p.m. and will decide the issue if one of the first two heat winners is victorious again. If not, the three winners would come back in a raceoff at 3:40 p.m.

Lowly Giants meet surging Jets

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (UPI) — The New York Giants and the New York Jets, NFL clubs heading in distinctly opposite directions, meet briefly at the same destination tonight at Giants Stadium in the final exhibition game for both teams.

Their intrastate rivalry is tied at 5-5-1. The Giants, however, appear to be needing a complete overhaul.

The Giants, 1-2, were blasted 37-20 by the Baltimore Colts last week and enter the game as three-point underdogs at home. Coach Ray Perkins continues to make wholesale changes in hopes of shaking up a lethargic club which has been giving up an average of 374 yards per game in the preseason.

Second-year quarterback Phil Simms will play at least three quarters for the Giants and rookie Scott Brunner, who completed 11-of-18 for 150 yards last week, should also see action.

The Jets, who have beaten the Giants three straight, are also 1-2 in preseason, but the victory came last week in Pittsburgh against the NFL champions. The Jets notched 22 first downs against the Steelers in a 20-13 triumph and Richard Todd, looking comfortable as the clear-cut No. 1 quarterback, hit 10-of-18 for 133 yards and ran for a 5-yard TD.

"I was very much impressed with the Jets," said Pittsburgh Coach Chuck Noll. "We did not win the battle of the hitting."

Richard improved; still hospitalized

HOUSTON (UPI) — The Houston Astros said Friday pitcher J.R. Richard, hospitalized since July 30 by a stroke, was making very good progress in his recovery and was following the team's pennant chase by radio and television.

No date had been set for Richard's discharge from Methodist Hospital, a team spokesman said.

Astros team physician Harold Brelford said Richard, 30, was undergoing physical therapy to regain strength in his left arm and leg and was undergoing occupational therapy, such as buttoning shirts, to enhance coordination in his left side.

Richard collapsed during a workout in the Astro dome and underwent emergency surgery for removal of a blood clot in his neck which had cut off blood to the right side of his brain for several hours.

Several teammates visited him during the last homestand. Richard was 10-4 when he was stricken.

Ovett withdraws from track meet

GATESHEAD, England (UPI) — Olympic 800 meters champion Steve Ovett, who Wednesday shattered the world 1500 meters record in Koblenz, West Germany, Thursday withdrew from the England team for Sunday's track and field international meet against Scotland, Norway and Yugoslavia.

An England team official said: "He is a bit shattered after his run in West Germany."

Ovett, whose time of 3:14 lopped seven-tenths of a second off the record he shared with Sebastian Coe, is replaced in the mile event by Alan Mottershead.

Coe had previously withdrawn from the England team because of the back trouble that forced him to miss last Monday's Golden Mile event, which was won by world record-holder Ovett.

Watkins Glen meet needs money deadline

WATKINS GLEN, N.Y. (UPI) — An estimated $200,000 needed to meet a Friday deadline for required construction at the 3.7 mile Watkins Glen circuit was met, and enhanced chances of running the Toyota Grand Prix of the United States Formula 1 at this upstate New York track on Oct. 5.

"Sufficient money has been made available to the Watkins Glen Grand Prix Corporation to meet construction requirements of the Fédération Internationale du Sport Automobile (FISA) for the 20th anniversary of Formula One racing at the Glen," said track spokesman Bob Kelly.

Malcolm Currie, executive director of the Corporation, and Corporation president Henry Venente announced at 1:30 p.m. (MDT) that construction of the racing circuit will begin early next week.

Meanwhile, attorney Jack Mills, who represents DeLamelleure and Los Angeles Rams guard Dan Fouts, said the two teams have considered swapping the linemen. Harrah, who has started the last two Pro Bowl games, is also a holdout.

Mills said he believed the Bills were willing to make the trade, but agent, Ed "Doc" Smith, who represents Fouts, said the Rams are not.

"I feel like I've got to come in," said DeLamelleure, 29, whose trade demand was spurred by differences with Buffalo Coach Chuck Knox. "If I would kill me not to play."

"If he doesn't make a trade, I guess I'll have to come in," DeLamelleure said. "I still don't want to be there. My feelings for Chuck Knox haven't changed."

DeLamelleure said he is in excellent shape and would be able to play in the Bills' season opener against Miami.

Buffalo all-pro may end holdout

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. (UPI) — All-Pro guard Joe DeLamelleure said Friday he will end his five-week holdout and report to the Buffalo Bills Sunday if the club is unable to satisfy his demand to be traded.

Meanwhile, attorney Jack Mills, who represents DeLamelleure and Los Angeles Rams guard Dan Fouts, said the two teams have considered swapping the linemen. Harrah, who has started the last two Pro Bowl games, is also a holdout.

Mills said he believed the Bills were willing to make the trade, but agent, Ed "Doc" Smith, who represents Fouts, said the Rams are not.

"I feel like I've got to come in," said DeLamelleure, 29, whose trade demand was spurred by differences with Buffalo Coach Chuck Knox. "If I would kill me not to play."

"If he doesn't make a trade, I guess I'll have to come in," DeLamelleure said. "I still don't want to be there. My feelings for Chuck Knox haven't changed."

DeLamelleure said he is in excellent shape and would be able to play in the Bills' season opener against Miami.

Racing champ may tote a rifle

EAST LONDON, South Africa (UPI) — Defending Grand Prix racing champion Jody Scheckter has been called up for army duty, a South African defense force spokesman said Friday.

Scheckter, 30, has one month left to serve on his original two-year hitch, the spokesman said. The call-up papers were delivered to his parent's home in East London several months ago.

Scheckter, who said he will retire after the 1980 racing season, resides in Monte Carlo and indicated "it was highly unlikely" he would return home to complete his army service.

Ironically, Scheckter would probably be shouldering a rifle as an infantryman because he failed his army driver's test when he first reported for duty 10 years ago. The army lists him as lacking co-ordination and driving ability to handle a military vehicle.

Cowboys need secondary work; face Steelers

IRVING, Texas (UPI) — The Dallas Cowboys play their last tuneup game of the year tonight against a team that can quickly put the opposition out of time — the Pittsburgh Steelers.

Pittsburgh has won the last four meetings between these two teams when something was at stake, including Super Bowls X and XIII. But, for what it's worth, Dallas has beaten Pittsburgh in their last five exhibition meetings.

Both clubs will play regulars for most of the contest, but the heat that will almost certainly bake Texas Stadium could reduce the amount of playing time for the starters.

The Cowboys, who enjoyed typically pleasant temperatures during their summer camp at Thousand Oaks, Calif., have been working out in the early evening since returning to Dallas last week.

Pittsburgh has had a relatively uneventful training camp with no major injuries and no internal squabbles. Dallas, meanwhile, has seen its secondary turned into a huge question mark.

"We need to get the secondary working together," said Cowboys strong safety Charlie Waters, who will attempt to play part of the game Saturday despite an aggravated knee injury.

"We at least need a half of a game together to start working as a unit."

Pittsburgh quarterback Terry Bradshaw is expected to play at least a half and maybe the entire game. Bradshaw has not seen all that much work during the preseason and will probably stay in the game as long as he wants to against the Cowboys.

France Harris, Rocky Bleier and Sidney Thornton also have carried the ball a combined total of only 21 times thus far so they figure to get a lot of Religious deprogrammer ruled guilty of kidnapping

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — Religious deprogrammer Ted Patrick was convicted by a Superior Court Jury Friday of kidnapping a young Arizona woman to wear her out of an obscure cult group.

The woman had claimed in court that she was never a member of the group.

Following three days of deliberation, the jury found Patrick guilty on all four counts — kidnapping, false imprisonment, conspiracy to kidnap and conspiracy to commit false imprisonment.

"I got a raw deal," the controversial deprogrammer said outside the courtroom after the verdict was read.

He was accused of kidnapping Roberta McEllich, 25, Tucson, Ariz. Five family members — brothers and sisters — had been named as unindicted co-conspirators in the case.

Only last month, another San Diego jury acquitted Patrick of charges involving the alleged abduction of Paul Dain, 24, Los Angeles, a member of the Church of Scientology.

Hanigans to be tried again

PHOENIX, Ariz. (UPI) — Two southern Arizona brothers will be prosecuted a third time on charges stemming from an alleged 1976 attack on three Mexican migrant workers who crossed the border onto their ranch.

U.S. Attorney Michael Hawkins said Friday. Hawkins said the decision to retry Patrick and Thomas Hanigan on federal charges of obstructing commerce was made at a meeting with U.S. Justice Department officials in Washington last week.

"It was not an easy decision," Hawkins told a news conference. The Hanigan case became a cause celebre for Mexican-American and civil rights groups after the brothers were acquitted in 1977 on 22 state counts. Their first trial on the federal charges ended with a hung jury in Tucson last month.

Hawkins said the government wanted to determine the extent of protection to all people "in this land, whether here legally or not."

Hawkins said he would not be involved in the new trial because there was a possibility his tenure could end before the trial is scheduled. He said the head of the U.S. Attorney's office in Tucson, Bates Butler, and his chief assistant, Daniel Knaus, would head the prosecution team.

Hawkins and Justice Department officials met with groups both for and against further prosecution before reaching their decision.

The brothers, and their father, George, were indicted on the state charges after three Mexican nationals reported they had been robbed, beaten, burned and wounded with shotgun pellets when they crossed the border onto the Hanigan ranch Aug. 18, 1976. George Hanigan died before the 1977 trial in Cochise County Superior Court. Manuel Garcia-Loya, Bernabe Herrera-Mata and Eliazar Ruelas-Zavala testified during the first two trials that they were threatened with a red-hot metal rod, riddled with shotgun pellets and robbed of $7 on the Hanigan ranch. The incident was reported after the three fled back across the border and sought treatment in a clinic at Agua Prieta.
