

Idaho Corrections Board faces ax

BOISE (UPI) — Gov. John V. Evans agreed Monday with his special committee that the state Board of Corrections should be eliminated.

Evans said this was the second special committee to recommend such a change and he felt confident the next session of the Legislature would solve the problem.

Evans called a news conference after receiving recommendations from the special committee studying the unrest that led to a riot last summer at the Idaho State Penitentiary.

The chief executive said under present constitutional provisions he has no authority over what goes on in the prison.

Recommended by the committee which was appointed by the governor following a July riot, was that the Legislature prepare a constitutional amendment to abolish the board and "develop direct lines of authority from the governor to the Director of Corrections."

"It is the opinion of this committee that too much power and authority is delegated by the Board of Corrections with very little accountability," the report said. "Since the needs on a part-time basis, it is urged to the problems and issues involved in the addition and operation of the institution."

Evans received the committee report just a half-hour before his news conference. He was briefed by committee members but had no time to study the full committee report, but he indicated he would go along with at least most of the recommendations.

citizen's committee report prepared to Evans by Sen. Mike D-Lewiston, chairman of the group, and Rep. Larry Knigge, R-Filer, also recommended the position of a "correctional ombudsman" in the office of the governor.

It noted testimony of guards and inmates revealed prior to the July 23 riot that resulted in more than $1 million in damages "there was not a satisfactory mechanism for inmates to air grievances, or staff to make suggestions or provide communications."

"Handling inmate grievances in a timely manner and airing of constructive opinions and views of inmates and staff are important in reducing tensions and anxieties which, if not controlled can result in unrest, such as existed and was building prior to July 23."

The report said the ombudsman would determine whether a complaint is justified or unjustified and if an investigation revealed the prison or staff acted in a "mistaken, arbitrary, unfair or illegal manner," the ombudsman could work out the problem with the Department of Corrections.

Among other recommendations were additional towers at the prison east of Boise, hiring of at least 16 more correctional officers, and the formation of an inmate council.

Evans said he hoped that the newly-elected legislators, who will meet in Boise this week for an organizational session, would agree to the additional correctional officers.

He said this could be done by resolution and "would avoid the necessity of calling a special session of the lawmakers."

The governor said that with the additional guards, prisoners who have been housed outside of the state since the riot could be returned to Idaho by

Christmas trees

This year, top quality forest or plantation tree will cost buyer about $20 on a Twin Falls lot

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Christmas tree shoppers will probably pay about $20 for top quality plantation or forest trees.

Several Twin Falls stores are selling trees of all sizes for a flat $19.99.

Tree specialists who sell trees here every year on business lots or other special locations are selling trees for $1.50 per foot to $3 per foot. Most of these dealers price the specific tree so a perfect shape brings a little more than one with few branches.

An artificial tree that can be dismantled and stored away for use another year sells for $3.54 for a 4-foot-high Scotch Pine to $43.87 for a deluxe 6-foot tree at variety stores. These prices, which may be lower during sales, include the stand.

Most of the live tree sales enterprises are operated by families or individuals who have been returning year after year to sell trees in Twin Falls. They say the price hikes over Christmas 1979 are simply meeting higher business costs.

Pete Pullin of Kimberly has sold trees about 10 years in Kimberly and Twin Falls. "We are up about 10 percent in price this year. The trees are more costly to us and the price of transporting them is also higher," Pullin said. He usually sells some 2,000 trees.

Joe Miller, who lives south of Twin Falls and is a 14-year veteran of the Christmas tree trade, said although prices are up this year, some of the trees cost almost the same as 10 years ago. He said he recalls when trees sold for 75 cents to $1 a foot.

Most of the trees sold here come from Montana with others from Oregon, Nevada and Idaho.

Christmas tree cutting for the do-it-yourselfers is available in nearly all areas of the Sawtooth National Forest, but not on Bureau of Land Management land in the Shoshone District.

This is not necessarily a money-saving way to get a tree, forest officials say. Most trees require a long drive and some are accessible only via snowmobile, skis or snowshoes.

For those who want to cut their own trees, the Sawtooth National Forest has permits available in all districts but the Fairfield Ranger District. Forest officials say for the $1 permit, and at a limit of one tree per family, residents may cut in designated areas.

The Shoshone BLM District says its no-cutting policy was set several years ago due to a lack of trees and difficulties intrinsic to scattered ownership of forested land around Sun Valley. John Husband, district forester, said a study is being made and some cutting may be allowed next year.

All ranger districts on the Sawtooth Forest and the Sawtooth National Recreation Area have areas designated for tree cutting. However, forest officials are warning that many areas in the south half of the forest are closed by heavy snow except to snowmachines, snowshoes or cross-country skiers.

Permits may be obtained at the Oakley Guard station for the west side of the Cassia Division, at the Narrows in the Raft River Division, at the Burley Ranger District, and Yellow Jacket on the east side of the Twin Falls Ranger District in the South Hills. In these areas, cutting is possible only for the next two weekends.

In the Ketchum and NRA areas, cutting will continue through Dec. 20 and permits may be obtained at the ranger office or the NRA headquarters, which will be open Saturday and Sunday during the cutting period.

No tree cutting is permitted in the Fairfield Ranger District, officials said.

Prison savings backed

By LARRY SWISHER

BOISE — The state could save $100,000 a month if the Legislature this week authorizes additional security measures at the state prison during its organizational meeting.

Idaho has been paying that amount to house convicts in Montana and at a federal facility since last summer's riot at the Idaho State Penitentiary at Boise.

If legal, legislative authorization this week has the support of Gov. John Evans, House Speaker Ralph Olmstead, R-Twin Falls, and state Rep. Lawrence Knigge, R-Filer, a member of a citizens committee studying the riot which released its report Monday.

"The sooner we get the prisoners back, even with the added expense for security, the sooner we get rid of high-priced room and board out of state," Olmstead said.

Senate Majority Leader James Risch, R-Boise, on the other hand predicted, "There'll be no action taken this week." He cited the demands of organizing, lack of time and the nearness of the regular session, which opens Jan. 12, 1981.

Olmstead cautioned he has doubts about whether the legislators can properly take the action without being called into special or regular session. He said he planned to research the legal question today.

He noted if money is to be taken out of the Water Pollution Control Fund, as proposed by the governor, a legislative bill will be needed.

Evans said Monday during a news conference after the release of his committee's report he believes the legislators pass a resolution, which would avoid the necessity of calling a special session.

Evans and Knigge said that by hiring additional guards, prisoners could be returned to Idaho by the end of the year, thus saving taxpayers at least $100,000 a month.

Knigge, who attended the Monday news conference, said he would like to see the Legislature take action this week.

"We have no additional security, than we had during the time of the riot," he said. Also, the state needs to construct an additional guard tower at the prison and install fencing in the prison yard, he said.

The money for the new tower could come from money appropriated by

Supreme Court to rule on future of draft law

©The Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court agreed Monday to decide whether the nation's military draft law, which applies only to men, is constitutional.

In a brief order, the justices announced that they will hear an appeal by the U.S. Selective Service System from a ruling last July by a three-judge federal court in Philadelphia. The lower court ruled that the draft law is unconstitutional because it discriminates between men and women.

Monday's action set the stage for what could become the most significant case of the current Supreme Court term — a case with considerable practical importance for the nation's armed forces and with serious legal implications for future sex-discrimination disputes.

The justices will hold a hearing on legal issues in the draft case early next year. They will probably issue a final ruling in June or early July.

No Americans have been drafted since former President Nixon abolished the draft during the Vietnam War in 1972. However, early this year, in response to the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan, President Carter declined to revive the requirement of registration for the draft.

Carter proposed requiring registration of both men and women, but Congress decided to stick with a males-only program. Under the system that was finally approved, 4 million men born in the years 1960 and 1961 were asked to register at post offices last summer.

In July, just before these men were supposed to register, the three-judge court in Philadelphia ordered the government to stop the program. But Justice William J. Brennan Jr. granted a quick stay permitting the registration program to go forward while the Supreme Court considers the sex-discrimination question.

The issue is whether the draft registration law is permissible under the legal standards the Supreme Court has set up in past sex-discrimination cases. The Supreme Court held in 1976 that a law can differentiate between men and women only if the law serves "important governmental objectives" and is "substantially related to the achievement of these objectives."

The American Civil Liberties Union and other groups opposed to a peacetime draft contend that the draft law can't meet this test.

McClure makes his bid today for Senate conference chair

By MYRON STRUCK
States News Service

WASHINGTON — The Republican-controlled Senate that will convene in January could have three moderates at its top leadership positions unless Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho, edges out Sen. John Heinz, R-Pa.

McClure is planning just such a maneuver. A spokesman said Monday the Idaho Republican had commitments from 25 of the 27 senators necessary to secure the chairmanship of the Senate Republican Conference over the moderate Heinz. Twelve of the 53 Republicans eligible to vote are undecided, said the aide.

The two top leadership posts are expected to go to Sen. Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., and Sen. Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, who will probably be elected majority leader and majority whip, respectively.

The race for conference chairman, who has a hand in committee assignments and legislative agendas, is not so easily called.

Both sides, in fact, were claiming victory Monday, the day before the

SEN. JAMES McCCLURE ... opposed by moderate

Senate was to settle the matter in a closed caucus.

"We're close enough to feel confident," said Tod Neuwenschwander, McClure's press secretary.

"The senator is cautiously optimistic about his hopes," countered Jack Bonner, executive assistant to Heinz. One tally by Heinz's supporters show him with a 23-22 edge, with eight critical votes undecided.

When the winner is disclosed shortly before noon today, a McClure victory would make him the highest-ranked conservative in the Senate leadership.

Both Baker and Stevens are considered moderates, as is Heinz.

The 42-year-old Heinz, who is in his first six-year Senate term, is considered somewhat of a favorite for the post because he helped engineer 12 crucial Republican victories across the country from his position as chairman of the Republican Senatorial Campaign Committee, putting the Senate in control of the GOP for the first time since 1954. The panel doted out advice, manpower and money to each of the Senate hopefuls.

McClure, who will be 58 two days after Christmas, has served in the Senate for eight years. After winning re-election in 1978, he ran against Packwood for the conference chairmanship, losing by two votes.

While Heinz released the legal limit of $75,000 to help Senate candidates Steven D. Symms defeat incumbent

FBI rejects panel finding 2nd gunman fired at JFK

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The FBI Monday rejected as "invalid" the House assassination committee's finding, based on a Dallas police tape recording, that a second gunman probably aided in the assassination of President John F. Kennedy.

Bureau laboratory experts said the 1963 recording from an open police motorcycle transmitter failed to prove a fourth gunshot was fired at Kennedy from a grassy knoll in Dallas' Dealey Plaza.

The FBI report instead found some of the "impulsive sounds" on the recording may not have even come from the vicinity of Dealey Plaza, and there was no evidence the impulses represented four separate shots.

The bureau reiterated its earlier conclusion, accepted by the Warren Commission, that Lee Harvey Oswald acted alone in killing the president on Nov. 22, 1963, and only three shots were fired.

In a divided vote that provoked a major controversy 16 months ago, the committee, which spent $5.5 million in its study of the assassination concluded last-minute findings of a group of private consultants showed there was a "95 percent probability" a second gunman fired at Kennedy.

The FBI, in a report to the Justice Department, rejected the analyses, saying the private experts "did not scientifically prove that a gunshot was fired by a second gunman from the grassy knoll area of Dealey Plaza."

It said the consultants "neither proved that the impulses on the DPD (Dallas Police Department) recording were generated within Dealey Plaza nor that they were the sounds of gunshots."

"Therefore, the House Select Committee on Assassinations finding that 'scientific acoustical evidence establishes a high probability that two gunmen fired at President John F. Kennedy' is invalid," the FBI said in a 22-page report.

Rep. Louis Stokes, D-Ohio, as chairman of the now-defunct committee, said he was disappointed the FBI did not conduct its own scientific analysis of the recording.

Heavy Chrysler losses stalled hookup with Volkswagen

DETROIT (UPI) — Chrysler Corp. conducted extensive talks aimed at a linkup with Volkswagen but the No. 3 automaker's huge 1979 losses ruled out an agreement, Automotive News reported Monday.

The trade publication said it learned of the extent of the negotiations with the West German automaker when it obtained transcripts of an interview with Chrysler Chairman Lee A. Iacocca done for a forthcoming book.

Talks focused on the compatibility of Chrysler and Volkswagen car lines and included the possibility of building an Audi passenger car at Chrysler's St. Louis assembly plant, Automotive News said.

"It was a marriage made in heaven — their cars and our cars, all about the same size," Iacocca was quoted as saying. "And they fitted — power the publication said.

Democratic Sen. Frank Church, Symms said he is staying with his friend and colleague, McClure. Heinz also helped Arlen Specter retain a GOP Senate seat in Pennsylvania, dumping $325,000 into the race.

As chairman, Heinz raised more money, brought more voters, produced the greatest victory and worked tirelessly to bring about a Republican majority in the Senate," said Larry McCarthy, staff director of Heinz' campaign committee. "His goal has been to expand his base while bringing more people and money into the Republican party."

In all, Heinz raised and contributed $5.9 million to Senate candidates — almost twice the previous record of $3.2 million. In addition, the campaign committee provided $3 million in indirect financing of polls and legal assistance plus $500,000 for media assistance that was funneled through the Republican National Committee.

"The thing that should definitely make the difference is Heinz' energy," McCarthy said. "He brings that to any job. I don't know when the guy actually slept, between the campaign committee, the Senate and taking care of problems in Pennsylvania."

"We're ahead because McClure's a nice guy," said McClure press secretary Neuwenschwander. "We're not chasing — him, he's chasing us," he said of Heinz. The conference chairmanship gives Neuwenschwander access to a staff of between 12 and 15 people who serve as a support organization to all Republicans. They provide help with communications with constituents, including radio and newsletters, research and speech writing assistance.

"We would have a gross imbalance in the leadership if there were three moderates elected to the top spots when the nation gave us a conservative mandate,"

Neuwenschwander said. According to ratings published by the liberal Americans for Democratic Action, McClure averaged a 1.6 (on a scale of 0 to 100, with 100 being the most liberal) over the past three years; Heinz, on the other hand, had an average of 46.6 from the ADA.

A key conservative group, Americans for Constitutional Action, gave McClure an average of 95.3 over the same three-year period, while Heinz got a 43. Besides the Heinz-McClure race, current Republican senators and those elected to terms that will begin in January will be voting on five other leadership positions:

- Sen. Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., the 55-year-old minority leader, is unopposed in his bid to swap titles with outgoing Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va.

- Sen. Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, the 57-year-old minority whip, will be doing the same thing with Majority Whip Alan Cranston. Stevens is also unopposed.

- Sen. John Tower is seeking another term as the chairman of the Senate Republican Policy Committee. He is also unopposed.

- Sen. Packwood, who is vacating as Conference Chairman, is trying to regain his position as chairman of the campaign committee. He held the post in 1977 and 1978. His opponent in a latecomer to the race is Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kans. Packwood claims 33 votes already.

- Sen. E.G. "Jake" Garn, R-Utah, is seeking a second term as the secretary to the Republican Conference.

Holiday traffic toll-passes 500

By United Press International

Multiple fatal accidents marred the four-day Thanksgiving weekend traffic in which 522 people were killed on the nation's highways, reaching the National Safety Council's grim holiday prediction.

The final United Press International tally showed the 522 people were killed in traffic accidents since the holiday began at 6 p.m. local time Wednesday and ended at midnight Sunday.

California topped the list with 57 traffic deaths, followed by Florida with 27, Illinois and Michigan 25, Pennsylvania 23, North Carolina and Texas 20, Ohio 19, and Missouri with 17 deaths.

The fatality slate was clean in North Dakota, Alaska and the District of Columbia.

Now for a test

LOS ANGELES (Times-Syndicate) — I hate to be correct if the medical profession, but have you noticed that doctors are ordering up more tests all the time? Gone are the days when M.D.s used stethoscopes and wore reflecting mirrors over their eyes. Now they sit behind their desks and, no matter what your complaint is, they say, "We better do a test on that." So you give the nurse your blood, and they tell you to call back in a few days and they'll let you know if "you have it" or "you don't."

Now there is absolutely nothing wrong with this because medical science has become so sophisticated that technicians can now look at a cell in a lab and tell more about you than if they made you breathe in and out all day long. The only problem is that, while we are putting ourselves in the hands of trained experts who have devoted their lives to medicine, they are now basing their diagnoses on the results of laboratory tests which, in many cases, are done by people barely out of high school. I don't know if Washington is typical of the rest of the country, but I hear more and more stories about lab mistakes on medical tests. The following ones are all true and took place during the last six months. A lady friend of mine had a blood count done while she was in a hospital in the nation's capital. The results were so perplexing that her internist called a hematologist and checked it out with him. The hematologist said, "You have nothing to worry about. If the blood count is correct, your patient is dead."

A neighbor of mine who had returned from the Middle East wound up with an exotic bug that mystified the doctors at another Washington hospital. They were going to call in a "rare disease" man—when my neighbor's blood report revealed he had hepatitis. Everyone breathed a sigh of relief that they finally had a diagnosis until it was discovered that my neighbor's blood sample had inadvertently been switched with one belonging to another patient. The other patient's doctor was so confused by his neighbor's blood sample that he ordered it sent to the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta. I am not making these up! Another friend of mine was being tested for a neurological problem. He was told that the test results would take about three weeks. He waited patiently. Actually, he sweated it out and was a nervous wreck. When he didn't hear from the doctor, he expected the worst. He called. The doctor was surprised he hadn't heard from the lab. The doctor called. The lab people checked around. Somehow they had the sample and couldn't locate it. The test would have to be done over again. I do have a lot more stories that I've collected, but so does everyone else. The system is breaking down. How can an M.D. diagnose an illness and prescribe the treatment when he has no assurance that the tests he's asked for are accurate? No one knows any more who is down in the basement, mixing up test tubes and putting the wrong labels on microscopic slides. The obvious solution would be to up the standards required of lab technicians and pay them a lot more money. Nobody would agree to this, so the second-best answer is to put the doctors to work in the labs and put the lab technicians to work in the doctors' offices. Since all of the important work in diagnosing an illness is now done in the laboratories, that is where the M.D.s should be. Anyone can man a desk in a doctor's office and listen to someone's complaint. It doesn't take much to ask someone to say, "Cough, when I say cough," or "When I do this, tell me if it hurts." Nobody needs in-depth training to say, "Take off your clothes and stand on the scale over there." But it does take a lot of education and experience to look into a microscope and know whether a person "has it" or "doesn't have it." My dream is to some day walk into a lab at one of our hospitals in Washington and see M.D.s hunched over microscopes, solving the mysteries of their patients' illnesses while up in their offices are seated fresh, young lab technicians saying to the nurse, "I don't like the sound of that elbow. I think we had better order some tests."

A troubling question of justice

A two-part series published by The Times-News Sunday and Monday on a child-molesting case shows how difficult it is for the judicial system to balance the rights-of-the-defendant with those of the victim. The Gooding County case was unusual in the sense that the defendant lived next door to the victim, a 14-year-old deaf, emotionally disturbed girl. The man, 61, was a constant reminder to the mother of the victim since he had been freed on bond following his arrest. He was not arraigned until four months later, when he pleaded guilty to two counts of lewd behavior with a minor. The man received a 10-year suspended sentence and three years probation. He is moving to another state where he will serve out the probationary terms. He is forbidden to consume alcohol during this period and must undergo psychiatric counseling if his probation officer orders it. There are two troubling areas about the case. One is the length of time it took for the case to be resolved and two, was justice served the victim? The mother of the victim remains outraged by both procedure and sentencing. Why did it take four months for a man accused of molesting a child to be arraigned and make a plea? The molesting incident took place July 19; the defendant arrested July 22 and released on bail July 23. An original court date of Oct. 27 was pushed back to Nov. 10 because of "scheduling problems." Such a delay probably is not unusual since the district judge visits Gooding County only once a week. But is it fair? There are mitigating circumstances for the sentence. The defendant had no prior felony offenses; his defense lawyer argued it was unlikely such an event would recur and that the man would not survive prison life. Since the prosecution did not ask for a stiffer sentence, the judge opted for a suspended term and probation (the maximum sentence for the crime of child molesting is life imprisonment). But no psychiatric examination was ordered for the defendant at any time in the proceedings. Lawyers say there was no indication the man the mentally deficient, although the mother claims the defendant tried to re-establish contact with her daughter several times while free on bond. How efficient will the probation system be in the other state? To question just how the defendant will meet the terms of his probation under those conditions is speculation, but a question that needs asking. There are many arguments pro and con in this case. Presiding Judge Douglas Kramer acknowledged the complexity and difficulty of imposing the sentence, saying "It's a God-awful task that we judges are trying to do." There is no quick and easy solution here, only the troubling question that escapes a conclusive answer: Was it justice for all?

James Kilpatrick

Sending 'em a message

WASHINGTON — Solid majorities in both the House and the Senate have been doing their best to send the federal courts a message on racial balance busing. Regardless of what happens in the pending appropriations bill for the Justice Department, sooner or later that message will be emphatically delivered. What the Congress is saying, loud and clear, is that the people are fed up with this evil-and-futile business. If the message from the expiring 96th Congress does not get through, be assured that the incoming 97th Congress will shout it out. And an incoming president will join in the cry. This is where we stand on racial balance busing: Both houses have agreed to language that would prohibit the Justice Department from using public funds "to bring any sort of action to require directly or indirectly the transportation of any student to a school other than the school which is nearest the student's home." An exception is made for handicapped children. In one sense, to be sure, there is less to this amendment than meets the eye. The language would not prevent private litigants, such as the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, from petitioning for a busing order. The language would not prevent a district judge from imposing such an order on his own. The only practical effect would be to halt the Justice Department from advocating forced busing as the government's choice of desegregation remedies. During the course of Senate debate, Connecticut's Lowell Weicker made the absurd argument that it is no business of the Congress to speak to judges. "Why should Congress intrude itself in the judicial process?" he demanded. The short answer is that Congress, not the courts, holds the power of the purse, and Congress, not the courts, has power to pass appropriate legislation to enforce terms of the 14th Amendment. The anti-busing provision is fully within the constitutional powers of the legislative branch. Beyond this, the provision expresses sound public policy. Ultra-liberals and other social engineers are fond of saying, simply that there is nothing new about "busing." After all, before courts began issuing their busing orders, 10 million children already were riding buses to school every day. The contention is specious. In the old days children were bused to get them to school. Today millions of children are being forced into buses for another reason entirely — to achieve an arbitrary racial balance. Such busing is morally wrong. To cart children around a city solely because of the color of their skins is racism, blatant and overt racism, precisely as evil as the racially segregated busing of 20 years ago. Such busing is educationally wrong.

Facts on 1%

Editor, Times-News: I respond from the recent news releases that opponents of the 1 percent initiative are again deliberately trying to mislead the public concerning the tax notices that are due to come out, and the 1 percent initiative. The following are points of clarification concerning the 1 percent and its implementation. 1. The 1 percent has never fully been implemented. Due to the phase in of the 1 percent, we are currently being taxed in excess of 1 percent of market value plus the bond obligations which you have voted in. In Pocatello, we are being taxed at 1.6 percent. 2. The 1 percent initiative set the 1978 level for setting valuation. The state thus allowing the assessors throughout the state to re-evaluate all property. 3. Opponents of the 1 percent are saying that utilities and railroads taxes are coming down and home owners taxes are going up because of the 1 percent initiative. Why can't these 1 percent opponents tell the truth, or at least tell the rest of the story? Before the 1 percent was even thought of, a Supreme Court decision mandated that all property was to be assessed at 20 percent of market value. Thus, taxes on operating property (railroads and utilities) have been coming down to 20 percent ratio, and homes and residential property has been going up to 20 percent ratio. This was happening previous to the 1 percent initiative passage in 1978. 4. Another falsehood portrayed by these 1 percent opponents is that the 1 percent is the cause of the re-evaluation that has taken place since the passage of the 1 percent. Why can't these 1 percent opponents tell the truth, or at least tell the rest of the story? Previous to the passage of the 1 percent initiative it was already state law that all property was to be at full cash value by Jan. 1, 1982. 5. Idaho Code 63-2217 states that the county assessor shall pursuant to rates and regulations adopted by the state tax commission, make annual uniform adjustments to insure that all property is assessed at 20 percent of full cash value by Jan. 1, 1982. So, the 1 percent initiative, the 1 percent passage in 1978, it was state law already to have your property totally reappraised by 1982.

Also included on your tax notice this year may be some user fees, a few of these may be examples of double taxation. Don't blame the 1 percent, blame the following: 1. Bureaucrats and elected officials who spend your tax dollars to travel to lobby the Legislature to delay the passage of their initiatives. 2. Liberal Idaho legislators in Boise who have successfully delayed the 1 percent implementation. 3. Big spenders in city, county, and school districts who don't know how to govern. So when you get your tax bills, remember, your taxes don't have to be raised. Taxes can be less than 1 percent as detailed in the initiative. Your local school board, county, and city government are the ones that raise taxes. The 1 percent was designed to cut taxes, not raise taxes. The question is, who do you believe? The IPOA (Idaho Property Owners' Association) who have worked continually to cut taxes and keep spending down, or the Big Spenders-in-government that think no matter how much they get, they want more. ### It's your right to waste your money as you see fit

A newspaper expose can do any number of things: convey an injustice, scare a politician out of his wits, protect the public safety, put a crook in jail, keep commuters awake. The one thing it isn't supposed to do is make the readers mad at the newspaper. But that's what seems to be happening if my phone calls are any indication. The day's first caller, a man, yelled, "Why don't you mind your own business?" I said I did no more. I asked, "All this stuff about the pyramid game. You're going to ruin everything. You're going to make people afraid to get in on them. And they're fun. They're great." I explained to him that I hadn't written one word about the pyramids. "I know. But other newspaper people are writing about it, and there have been things on TV. Who are we hurting? It's our hard luck if we get shafted, right?" Right. I agree with him and the dozen or so other angry callers who said essentially the same thing. Such as the woman who said, "My daughter told me, 'A fool and her money are soon parted, mom.' I told her, 'So what? It's my money. I don't tell you what a fool you are when you waste yours on expensive clothes, so mind your own business about mine.'" These people have apparently enjoyed taking part in the pyramid game that has been sweeping Chicago and the suburbs for several months. They put up $500. If their names work their way to the top, they can collect $8,000. Only a fraction of those who take part will collect, which means that most of them will lose their money. "What do you care? It's their money. And it should be everyone's inalienable right to waste their own money as they see fit. If that wasn't our inalienable right, then the economy of this country might collapse. Does anyone think we really need most of the consumer junk that is advertised? "I wouldn't put any of my money into a pyramid, but that doesn't mean I'm any smarter than those who do. After all, about a year ago I invested in the stock market for the first time. You want to hear about it? Good. I don't mind people laughing at me. One of my intimates on a softball team is a stockbroker. He called me one day and told me about a company that would be announcing a cure for a dread disease any minute. The stock would soar. How could I argue with somebody who could bid a softball the way he does? I bought a bundle of shares at $15 a share. Then I waited for the cure for the dread disease to be announced. In a week or two, the stock dropped to about $10 a share. Then to $7. I called my softball player-broker and asked him what happened to the cure. "Did I tell you that?" he said. "What do you mean, did you tell me that? Of course you told me that." "What time of day was it?" "Mid-afternoon."

"A Friday?" "Right." "Oh, boy. I have three martinis at lunch on Fridays." So, including the drop in the stock, the bank interest I lost on the money, and inflation, I could have joined three pyramid clubs and been ahead even if I didn't make any money. But do newspapers or TV have headlines that scream: Thousands Lose Money In the Stock Market Wives Weep Husbands Turn To Drink Who Is It? Of course they don't because the stock market, one of the world's biggest legalized crap games, is considered respectable. But the Illinois attorney general, who says he is going to investigate the pyramid games, probably saves ulcers of his own when he reads the final markets. Or take the racetracks. They are legal. So every day thousands of suckers go to the track and lose anything from their lunch money to their paychecks. The newspapers even help them by printing advice about which gimpy beast they should bet on. During a big racing weekend, millions will be lost. But you never see headlines that say: Record Betting at Arlington Paychecks Squandered Divorces Goup Misery Overcome Of course you don't see such headlines, because racetracks are not only legal, but the state takes a cut. That is supposed to make it even more desirable. But to me, that makes it even worse. After a busy weekend at the track, we should have a headline saying: Suckers Lose Fortunes Government Grabs Share! To Arms, To Arms! Before noon on Sunday, the phones are crackling with football bettors putting millions on the Sunday pro games — if they have anything left over after betting on Saturday's college games. And if they haven't blown their wad on the weekday basketball games. Every big office building and factory in the city has its own bookie. There are even bookies in City Hall. You can get good odds on whether an alderman will wake up during a City Council meeting. Then there is the gambling on golf at the private country clubs, the poker games at the private athletic clubs, and the highrollers who jet to Vegas to lose big money in exchange for being treated like Michael Corleone's dumb brother. With all of this gambling going on, what is so sinister about a pyramid game? And finally, there are my favorite big-time gamblers of all — the extremely wealthy people who give huge sums of money to a church or religious organization. You know what they're betting on. And I'll give you 5-1 they don't make it.

House approves $50 million for quake relief

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The House gave quick approval Monday for $50 million in relief for victims of southern Italy's devastating earthquake.

The bill, backed by President Carter, was passed by voice vote and sent to the Senate. It is expected to act quickly, probably today — the same day a similar measure is to be considered by the Senate Foreign Affairs Committee.

The House Foreign Affairs Committee approved the House version without debate early Monday and sent it to the full chamber, where it received rapid concurrence.

The State Department's Agency for International Development gave the committee a status report on the quakes, saying that as of Sunday, over 3,000 people had been killed, another 1,900 were missing, nearly 8,000 injured and about 250,000 left homeless.

Richard Gardner, the U.S. ambassador to Italy, told the panel Carter "warmly endorses" the emergency funds, which are to be used for immediate aid as well as later reconstruction efforts.

"It is important that the United States respond to the call for help from Italy," Gardner said. "The Italian people and their government stand in the inner circle of America's friends and allies."

"Human suffering — from the anguish of families buried under the rubble to the misery of homeless survival in the face of cruel winter storms — is incalculable."

Coming atop Italy's shaky economic situation, Gardner said, "This tragedy does complicate their economic prospects. That is an unfortunate reality, but I am confident the Italian people and their government will overcome."

Troops shoot animals to curb disease spread

NAPLES, Italy (UPI)—Army troops began shooting stray pets and farm animals Monday to prevent the spread of disease in southern Italy's ravaged quake zone and officials said thousands of survivors refusing to leave their villages were hampering an urgent evacuation operation.

Another series of aftershocks rocked the region Monday, causing a wave of fear and panic through many of the 200,000 to 300,000 people left homeless by the worst earthquake in Italy in 65 years.

The strongest aftershock hit at 8:05 p.m. (12:46 a.m. MST) and caused brief panic in the stricken villages and higher regions of some cities, including Naples.

Observatory spokesmen at Mount Vesuvius said the shock registered 4.6 on the Richter scale, making it the third most violent shock since the original one that registered 6.5 and an aftershock on Tuesday that registered 5.1.

Officials at the relief headquarters at Avellino east of Naples said no new casualties were reported but the shock caused further crumbling of buildings damaged in the original quake in the villages of San Mango and Conza and also in Avellino.

Two women, aged 72 and 79, and a 60-year-old man were rescued after being buried in rubble for eight days.

"I never lost hope of being saved," Nicola Mattia said after his rescue in the town of Calabritto. "I tried not to sleep so that when I heard people walking around on the rubble above I could yell for help."

In Luxembourg, Italian Prime Minister Arnaldo Forlani told leaders from Common Market nations the quake was "worse than a devastating war" and that the cost of reconstruction would be at least $12 billion during the next two years.

Snow and violent rainstorms eased up in the regions level by last week's major quake, offering faint relief to the refugees leaving the area for temporary shelter with relatives or in government-provided hotel rooms and apartments.

Government agencies assured of fund flow

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The House Appropriations Committee took action Monday to keep funds flowing to government agencies even if a budget duck Congress, as expected, fails to complete work on the fiscal 1981 budget.

The "continuing resolution," passed by voice vote, would fund most government agencies at levels approved by the House or by House-Senate conferees until June 5 — more than eight months into the fiscal year.

It is expected to be acted on today by the Rules Committee, which would clear the way for approval by the full House Wednesday. It then would go to the Senate.

The government already is operating under a similar resolution because spending bills due by the Sept. 30 close of the last fiscal year were put off to let Congress recess for the November elections. That resolution expires Dec. 15.

Three spending bills — for energy, military construction and transportation programs — already have been passed and signed by President Carter.

Committee chairman Jamie Whitten, D-Miss., said it is "quite evident" the lame duck Congress will not complete work on spending matters before adjournment.

Storm rolls east across S. Dakota

By United Press International

A storm that dumped up to 18 inches of snow over eastern Wyoming swept into the Plains Monday and was blamed for at least two traffic deaths.

The storm front, marked by blowing and drifting snow, moved into Iowa and Minnesota and continued eastward, prompting storm warnings across the Mississippi River to southern Wisconsin, northern Illinois and northwestern Indiana.

Rain was falling in parts of Wisconsin, Illinois, Indiana and Ohio late Monday but was expected to change to heavy snow.

The storm dumped more than half-foot of snow in Nebraska.

The Nebraska State Patrol said two people died in separate accidents about an hour apart on icy Interstate 80. The victims were John A. Benjamin, 78, of rural Anita, Iowa, and William H. Payne, 55, of Omaha, Neb.

Newcastle, Wyo., at the edge of the Black Hills along the South Dakota border, was buried under 1 1/2 feet of new snow. Old Faithful in Yellowstone National Park got 17 inches, and 11 inches fell at Sheridan, Wyo.

Further east, Rapid City, S.D., had five inches and three inches fell at Pierre, the South Dakota capital, keeping many legislators from attending Gov. Bill Janklow's presentation of his annual budget message. One inch dusted Chadron, Neb.

Omaha officials said up to four inches of snow, combined with gusting winds at up to 35 mph and a wind chill factor of 43 below, were causing problems for motorists.

Abscam case goes to jury

NEW YORK (UPI)—A federal prosecutor said Monday one of the congressmen charged in the current Abscam trial is a man who "lies and lies and lies" and the other gave "an Academy Award performance" in denying he accepted bribes from undercover FBI agents.

Rep. Frank Thompson, D-N.J., and Rep. John Murphy, D-N.Y., are accused of sharing in separate $50,000 bribes with Philadelphia lawyer Howard Criden. The money was given by FBI agents posing as representatives for fictitious Arab sheiks trying to enter the United States.

Defense and prosecution lawyers summed up for more than seven hours in U.S. District Court in Brooklyn. Judge George Pratt will charge the jury this morning and the said deliberations would begin before noon.

The focus of the case was whether the jury would believe the congressmen knew briefcases Criden carried out of meetings with the undercover agents contained the bribe money.

In separate meetings, both men instructed Criden to take the briefcases, but, according to videotapes of the meetings, neither acknowledged knowing what the cases contained.

Chaplain defends morning prayers

LINCOLN, Neb. (UPI)—Morning prayers offered by state lawmakers are meant to inspire rather than advance religion, the Legislature's chaplain testified Monday in a federal suit seeking to ban the prayers.

The Rev. Robert Palmer of Lincoln, a Presbyterian minister who has served as legislative chaplain for 15 years, said the two-minute prayers contain religious references but are not an attempt to advance religious beliefs.

The suit was filed by state Sen. Ernest Chambers of Omaha, an atheist and the Unicameral's only black lawmaker. It seeks an order to prohibit the prayers and a cutoff of state tax money used for the chaplain's $19 monthly salary.

Brown plans trip to Europe, Asia

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Defense Secretary Harold Brown, on probably his last overseas mission, leaves for Europe and Japan next week to try to impress allies on the need to modernize their forces and boost their defense budgets.

Brown, to be replaced in January by a candidate still to be announced by President-elect Ronald Reagan, first will fly to Brussels for a meeting with NATO defense ministers Dec. 9-10, then go directly to Japan.

Denies posing for nude photos

Rita Jenrette says she's writing articles

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (UPI) — Rita Jenrette, wife of Abscam-convicted Rep. John Jenrette, D-S.C., said Monday she has sold an article to the Washington Post and is negotiating with Playboy magazine over another story — but did not pose nude.

Mrs. Jenrette, 30, called weekend reports she posed in the nude for Playboy "just politics as usual, I guess."

The article for the Post — an "inside-Washington" type story — will be syndicated, starting next Sunday, she said.

"The Post paid me a nice sum," Mrs. Jenrette told the Charlotte Observer. She refused to say exactly how much money she received for the article but added, "It's made our house payment the last couple of months."

Mrs. Jenrette said she went to Chicago recently to discuss another article with editors of Playboy. The article was co-authored by Kathleen Maxa, a professional writer in Washington, she said.

While in Chicago, Mrs. Jenrette she posed for facial portraits of the type I did when I posed for Clairol in 1977 and 1978. These were pictures for Clairol's hair color products for blondes."

She said she did not pose for any revealing or semi-nude pictures. The Cable News Network in Atlanta, quoting sources, reported last weekend that some of the shots taken by Playboy photographers had "sensual overtones."

Mrs. Jenrette denied the report.

"Some friends who were in school with me in Texas called after they heard it and said, 'Hey, this doesn't sound like the Rita we know. You were so shy you used to wrap a towel around you in gym class,'" she said.

"I told them I'm still the same person. I really am. I have no recourse in this case. I can't afford to sue anybody and they know that."

Egg ransom offer awaited

OSHKOSH, Wis. (UPI) — Thieves who stole the famed Faberge eggs from the Paine Art Center might try to ransom them because of difficulty in fencing them to a buyer, the director of the museum said Monday.

The Imperial Easter Eggs, laced with gems and gold and created by Peter Carl Faberge for Russian nobility about the turn of the century, were stolen Oct. 22. The five eggs and some assorted jewels were worth more than $1 million.

Director Ralph Bufano said a reward would be paid for information "but right now, we are working more on a ransom than a reward."

He said it would be hard to sell the eggs because they are so well known. Also, art experts are hopeful the thieves will not melt them down for their gems, Bufano said.

Bufano said the museum had insurance on the exhibit but no collection was made for the loss. He said the rest of the Faberge exhibit will be on display until Dec. 31.

Police Detective Jerry Hoeft said there have been several tips but no solid leads. He said the hunt was for "more than one thief."

"We feel that there was more than one person involved because the tools were too many and too cumbersome for one person to carry," Hoeft said.

Authorities said the thieves were professionals who seemed to know what they were looking for even though they tripped a second burglar alarm.

People

Despite all their troubles, girls had a wonderful visit

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (UPI) — British tourists Nicola Cridland and Barbara Webb have been through a lot since their arrival Nov. 14 at Miami Beach.

They had to chase their luggage — and their tour guide — from one Miami Beach hotel to another.

The purse of one of the women was stolen at a "nose-down" at a local police association hall.

Other valuables seemed doomed to remain locked in their hotel safe-deposit box until the key, gone with the purse, was found.

Ms. Cridland, 23, and Ms. Webb, 24, said it began with the luggage on the first day. A "tour bus" shuttled the entire group to several hotels on Miami Beach.

"When we got off the bus, all the cases were left outside," Ms. Cridland said. "The bus left. We went to get ours and they weren't there. There was a tour guide with the bus. She went off with the bus."

The two women recovered their luggage, but on Thanksgiving, Ms. Cridland's purse was stolen at a country-western dance at the Police Benevolent Association hall.

"I got up to do one of those barn dances," Ms. Cridland said. "I thought the bag would be OK because there were still people at the table."

But when she returned, the purse was missing, along with $200, identification and all their keys — including the key to the safe-deposit box.

"We'd already paid the $25 deposit on the key. After losing everything, and it being about 12 o'clock, this fellow (at the hotel desk) turns around and tells us, 'Well, it's going to cost you another $50.'"

The extra money was to be paid to a locksmith who would have to break open the box. The women said the hotel told them one was called on Friday.

Saturday morning they were still waiting. They were told the fee for opening a box on weekends was $100.

Luckily the purse was fished out of the Miami River by Bill Bonner.

Scrabble fan aided in win by computer

NEW YORK (UPI) — An out-of-lower who has been playing Scrabble for less than a year defeated New York's Scrabble champion Sunday, thanks to his computer, his mother-in-law and a man-eating shark.

Michael Wolfberg, 38, a computer programmer from Concord, Mass., credited practice with a computer back home for his victory over more than 200 other Scrabblers at a two-day tournament in a Times Square restaurant.

Wolfberg said he started playing Scrabble seriously in February, his interest in word games piqued by "Boggle set my mother-in-law gave me for Christmas."

"Boggle is another word game," he said. "I wrote a computer program to tell me what words I was missing."

It was only a short leap from Boggle to Scrabble, said Wolfberg, who is an enthusiastic but discriminating word game player. "I never liked crossword puzzles at all," he admitted.

The computer, Wolfberg said, helpfully "looked up the words I missed and the most likely words I could get" to score the most points.

One of his big weekend coups was "regains," the plural of the name of a man-eating shark, according to Webster's Dictionary.

But to Wolfberg, a regains is a regains is a multi-point score.

"It's a shark or something," he said after finishing the game. "I do know it's something that swims."

Wolfberg — who says his next goal is a national Scrabble tournament — was also vague on the prizes he won.

Natural bridge goes on sale block

NORTH ADAMS, Mass. (UPI) — Edward J. Elder is selling what he claims is the only water-eroded natural bridge in North America.

He says he is offering the only business in New England with absolutely no competition.

Elder, 77, has spent the past three decades promoting the Natural Bridge, moldered an estimated $50 million years ago by Hudson Brook as it cut through a formation of white marble — creating a chasm 475 feet long, up to 30 feet wide and 60 feet deep.

However, Elder says he's getting too old to maintain the 17-acre tract on which the span is located and sell tickets to the bridge which American author Nathaniel Hawthorne visited more than a century ago.

The property on which the bridge stands off Route 8 in the northwestern Massachusetts town was used as a marble quarry before a fire during World War II.

"I only wish I was about 10 years younger," said Elder, who is asking $280,000 for what he claims is the only natural marble bridge on the continent carved entirely by water and the only true natural bridge of any type in New England.

Real estate agent and North Adams police officer Dennis D. Kuzia, Elder's neighbor, is trying to interest state and federal officials into making the Natural Bridge a public park or resort.

Feminists protest male dancing ban

LANCASTER, Calif. (UPI) — A group of feminists, chanting "women need fun too," marched and picketed during the weekend to protest a proposed law to outlaw male exotic dancing.

Protest organizer Gloria Allred, head of the Women's Equal Rights Legal Defense and Education Fund, said the march Saturday was an effort to "preserve their right to see male exotic dancers in Lancaster."

Ms. Allred pointed out the Lancaster City Council, which has threatened to close a local club which features male dancers, has not attempted to outlaw female mud wrestling or belly dancing.

What's what?

Woman's secret color usually matches eyes

Already reported that just about every woman has a secret color she believes brings out her best looks. It's also true that this color, too, matches the color of her eyes. Doc Love and Waz man wants this mentioned as boyfriend will know how to choose gift colors. Hold a color chart up against her nose, young fellow, and when she asks you what you're doing, say, Shopping.

DOGS

Q. Wasn't the great Queen Victoria of England something of a nut about dogs?

A. You judge. She had 83 of them, knew each by name, and fed them all herself. You know how monarchs tend to popularize hobbies, fashions, patterns? Victoria reigned from 1837 to 1901, and the hounding dogs of the western world multiplied in a rapid manner during that time.

Q. What's the top money-making job for graduates fresh out of college with bachelor's degrees now?

A. Petroleum engineers. Starting at $25,000 a year. That's about $480 a week. Not bad.

Q. How many men who go into life insurance sales stick it out for a whole year?

A. Two out of five. And one out of five lasts three years.

Republicans to elect Baker Senate leader

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Republicans, anxious to take over the Senate after waiting more than a quarter of a century, will elect Tennesseean Howard Baker—the new majority leader today.

Baker, a 55-year old third-terminer who has been the minority leader for four years, will be installed formally Jan. 5 when the 97th Congress convenes.

Despite earlier speculation that conservatives would seek to deny Baker the coveted post, Ronald Reagan has endorsed his election, no challenger has emerged, and Baker's election will come by acclamation.

In addition to Baker, the Republicans will elect their slate of leaders for the coming Congress with only one or possibly two fights expected.

Democrats are not expected to elect their leaders until the morning before the next Congress convenes.

Sen. Ted Stevens of Alaska, the assistant leader, Sen. John Tower of Texas, chairman of the Senate GOP policy committee,

SEN. HOWARD BAKER ...to lead majority also are unopposed, as is Sen. Jake Garn, secretary of the Republican Conference.

But Sen. John Heinz of Pennsylvania and Sen. James McClure of Idaho appear to be in a moderate-conservative fight for chairmanship of the conference.

reference

And Sen. Robert Dole of Kansas is testing the mood of his colleagues to determine whether to run against Sen. Robert Packwood of Oregon for the chairmanship of the Republican Senatorial Campaign Committee.

Baker said of the Heinz-McClure contest "both are highly respected, both have their strengths."

Conservatives probably have the votes to elect McClure, Heinz, however, is the current chairman of the senatorial campaign committee which was instrumental in giving Republicans control of the Senate.

Stevens generally considered a moderate, also noted that McClure will carry a heavy load as chairman of the Energy Committee and Heinz will not.

The Republicans' decision to hold the election even before the current session ends is highly unusual. But it dovetails with three days of "orientation" for new senators, which will bring the 16 GOP freshmen to Washington.

Suit seeks to end segregation in Yonkers

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Carter administration, pressing school desegregation cases in its final days, charged in an unprecedented lawsuit Monday that schools and neighborhoods in Yonkers, N.Y., have been intentionally segregated.

In a suit filed in U.S. District Court in New York, the Justice Department charged actions by the Yonkers Board of Education, the city and its Community Development Agency violated the 1964 Civil Rights Act and the Constitution.

The suit is expected to be the first in a series of school desegregation cases to be filed in the final days of the Carter administration — despite Senate passage of legislation aimed at halting school busing.

Drew S. Days, chief of the Justice Department's civil rights division, said the Yonkers suit is the first charging both school and housing discrimination.

Days emphasized, however, that the department still hopes to resolve the Yonkers case through a negotiated, court-approved settlement.

The suit charged New York's fourth-largest city of more than 200,000 people had taken intentional actions to segregate white from black and Hispanic students.

It alleged the students were racially isolated as a result of patterns of school construction and school closings, alteration of attendance zones and assignment of teachers and administrators to match the race of students.

The suit also maintained the city contributed to segregated schools by selecting sites for public and subsidized housing projects that intentionally and effectively perpetuated and seriously aggravated racial segregation.

The city's Board of Education filed suit in federal court last week in an attempt to block the Justice Department from going to court.

Reagan foreign policy aides given warning

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Ronald Reagan's foreign policy aides have been warned they are "not authorized to speak on behalf of the president-elect" before the inauguration, it was disclosed Monday.

The aides also were told to make clear any statements they make are those of private citizens.

The warning came in the midst of a controversy over remarks by some Reagan transition task force members.

Spokesman Jim Brady said, "We were getting a whole raft of stories involving people who were traveling overseas purporting to represent Governor Reagan."

"Unless I have specifically requested that you speak or act in our behalf, your status is that of a private individual," said a Nov. 29 memorandum from Richard V. Allen, Reagan's chief adviser on foreign affairs, to about 120 foreign policy aides.

The memo, said Brady, called "to their attention the fact ... they are not authorized to speak on behalf of the president-elect."

There were two recent examples.

First, the transition was concerned about a newspaper story indicating Reagan's Latin American advisers had assured influential Washington visitors from strife-torn El Salvador that the new president would increase military aid to security forces fighting leftist guerrillas.

And second, adviser Ray Cline, a former deputy CIA director, informed the Chinese last week when he suggested in Singapore that the communist government might soften its territorial claim to the Chinese Nationalist island of Taiwan.

The New China News Agency said Cline was guilty of "crudely interfering" in China's affairs. The Chinese already are wary of Reagan's historically hardline support for Taiwan, and Cline's comments did little to dispel the anxiety.

In both the China and El Salvador cases, the Reagan advisers' statements "represent private views," Brady said. "There have been no (official) signals sent at all" from the Reagan camp to foreign capitals since the election.

Allen's memo warned aides to be aware of persons "under intense pressure to produce a report" on the likely policy that the Reagan administration will pursue.

"For journalists," it said, "stories on future Reagan policies" may be the only game in town.

"You have to anticipate the distortions that might result from your conversation," Allen said.

Rostenkowski mulls Demo whip post offer

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The No. 3 House Democratic leadership post, the whip, has been offered to Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., but Rostenkowski said Monday he still had not made up his mind if he wants it.

Rostenkowski is in a quandary as to whether he would rather be House whip or chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, the House's tax-writing committee. Each job is considered a position of power.

House Speaker Thomas O'Neill said Monday at his usual pre-session press conference that Democratic leader Jim Wright of Texas had made the offer to Rostenkowski, but Rostenkowski — who was present at the press conference — said he still had not decided what to do.

Wright said he expected Rostenkowski to decide by next Monday's organizing caucus what he would do, but had not placed him under any deadline.

"I gave Danny as long as he wants," said Wright.

Varied roots for Syria-Jordan tension

Saudi official opposes oil price hikes

By THOMAS FRIEDMAN
United Press International

BEIRUT, Lebanon — The border tension between Syria and Jordan has been stirred up by a variety of causes — Moslem fundamentalism, the Persian Gulf war, and even the election of Ronald Reagan.

Some 20,000 Soviet-equipped Syrian troops, along with 200 tanks, have reportedly dug in along the frontier with Jordan in a saber-rattling gesture that has forced King Hussein to put his own army on stepped up alert.

Mary a shot has yet been fired in anger by either side but verbal salvos have been flying thick and fast between Damascus and Amman, leaving both countries, and their neighbors, in a state of high anxiety.

On Monday, Jordan vowed to destroy any invading Syrian force and the United States said it is considering shipping ammunition and spare parts to Jordan.

State Department sources indicated Jordan had requested aid of that nature but said it did not include early delivery of 100 M60A3 tanks scheduled for 1982.

Analysis

The U.S., United Nations and Saudi Arabia continued efforts to defuse the tense situation.

The Syrian action has several inter-related motives.

Damascus itself says the troop buildup was designed to safeguard the regime of Hafez Assad from the "terrorists" of the Moslem Brotherhood. The Brotherhood is a loose coalition of anti-Assad, Syrian Islamic fundamentalists who have vowed to oust their president and replace him with a more authentically Moslem leader.

The Syrian media claimed the Brotherhood was training and coordinating its anti-Assad activities in bases around Jordan's frontier province of Irbid. It warned that Damascus was prepared to use force against those who "undermine its security."

But the Syrian-Jordanian rift goes deeper than the Moslem Brotherhood. Relations have been seriously damaged by Syrian fears that Jordan is ready to "go it alone" in Arab-Israel peace negotiations.

Whether justified or not, Reagan's election has set off speculation in the Arab world that President Carter's faltering Camp David peace process will be replaced by a fresh initiative.

King Hussein said in a recent interview he would be "delighted" to go to Washington to discuss the Arab-Israel conflict with Reagan.

Arab analysts say Damascus is concerned lest Jordan get involved in U.S.-sponsored negotiations. For the West Bank — maybe even with the tacit approval of the Palestinians, — and leave the hard-line, pro-Soviet Syrians to face Israel alone.

The pro-Syrian Beirut daily Al-Safir quoted Syrian officials as saying last week that Damascus "will not permit the rise of another Sadat in Jordan," referring to Egypt's moderate president who signed a peace treaty with Israel last year.

Finally, there is the Gulf war, which in one way or another has touched every relationship in the Arab East souring more than a few. By massing troops on his border with Jordan, Assad may be trying to deter King Hussein from providing any military assistance to Iraq in its war with Iran.

JEDDAH, Saudi Arabia (UPI) — Current market conditions do not justify a new round of oil price hikes, a senior Saudi Arabian oil official said in an interview published Monday.

Abdul Hadi Taher, governor of Petroleum, the state oil company in the world's major oil exporting nation, said there are now adequate international supplies since both Iran and Iraq have partially resumed crude oil exports.

Taher said lightning in the market has been "reduced" by the estimated 400,000 barrels per day Iraq has begun exporting through pipelines to Turkey's Mediterranean coast.

U.S. bars PLO

MADRID, Spain (UPI) — The United States Monday vetoed a Soviet attempt to give the Palestine Liberation Organization a voice at the 35th annual European Security conference.

Max Kampelman, co-chairman of the U.S. delegation, in a short, tough statement at the plenary session, called the PLO a "terrorist organization" and rejected Moscow's contention it had a right to address the conference as a non-participating Mediterranean nation.

Constitution rejected

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay (UPI) — An opposition leader said Monday the overwhelming defeat of the military government's proposed constitution was a public rejection of the regime and may force a gradual return to democratic rule.

Fifty-three percent of the more than 1.6 million Uruguayans who participated Sunday in the first national vote in nine years said "no" to the constitutional reform, which would have legalized the armed forces' place in power.

Only 38.95 percent of the electorate in the small South American nation favored the reform. The remaining 16 percent of the vote was divided between ballots that had been annulled or absentee ballots that are to be counted later.

"The government must understand that it cannot plan the future of the nation without consulting the people and their political parties," said Enrique Tarigo, a leading figure of the opposition Colorado party.

But Tarigo said he does not foresee an immediate return to democratic rule. "It is more likely that we will have a gradual transition in which the next president would be appointed jointly by the armed forces and political parties," he said.

By midday Monday, the 7-year-old military government had not reacted publicly to the results of the vote. Opposition forces also were reluctant to comment because of a government decree prohibiting post-mortem analysis of the plebiscite.

Weddings

MR. AND MRS. BURKE HUDELSON

Roper-Hudelson

TWIN FALLS — Brenda Lee Roper and Burke Anthony Hudelson were married Oct. 4 at St. Edward's Catholic Church.

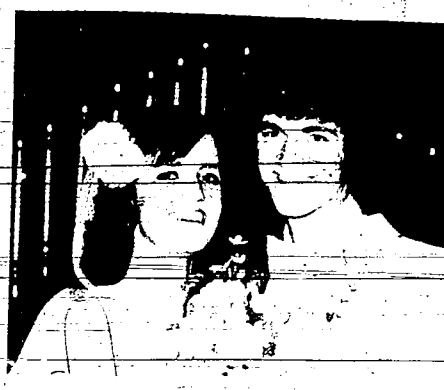

Father Perry Dodds performed the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roy T. Roper of Twin Falls and the bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Sullivan of Boise and the late Burke Hudelson of Nampa.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a floor length gown with a high waist with a pearl trimmed re-embroidered Alencon lace on the bodice and a high crown collar. A three-tiered cake was served by Mrs. Rose Mary Childs of Salt Lake City, aunt of the bride, and Mrs. Lois Hansen and Mrs. Inez Peterson.

Mrs. Roy Simperman of Butte, Mont., and Mrs. Helen Graham of Mountain Home, aunt of the bride, served coffee and punch. Gloria and Mary Harmon were in charge of the guest book and gift table.

After a trip to McCall—the newlyweds are living in Twin Falls. The bridegroom is employed by Idaho First National Bank of Jerome.

MR. AND MRS. VAUGHN DUNN

Thieme-Dunn

TWIN FALLS — Debbie Thieme of Salt Lake City and Vaughn Dunn of Boise exchanged wedding vows Nov. 1.

The wedding was held at the Immanuel Lutheran Church with the Rev. E. J. Bernthal officiating.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Thieme of Twin Falls. The bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Fred Bogdanoff of Fresno, Calif.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a long baby blue gown with a middle length ruffle down the back. She carried a bouquet of cream colored silk carnations.

Lorrie Van Tassel was maid of honor with Duwane Valentine as best man. Ushers were Ernest Thieme and Callie Peterson.

A reception was held in the church parish hall following the ceremony. Paula Kolsen, Vivian Peterson and Paula Thieme were in charge of the cake table. Ada Thomas, Linda Valentine and Nancy Newman handled gifts.

The couple will reside in Boise where he is employed at Norco.

Dear Abby

She needs more spice, not sauce

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
© Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I read your column faithfully and hope you can help me. I am so lonely I could die. My husband is gone about 90 percent of the time. He's in Japan right now, and from there he's going to Australia. The company he works for keeps him on the road for months at a time. I have turned to drink (only wine), but I drink so much, sometimes I'm not even sure what day it is. I live in a place that is quite isolated. I have no children and there is very little to do here—I am 100 percent faithful to my husband. I go nowhere and have only a nodding acquaintance with my neighbors. Most of my neighbors are older. (I'm 28.)

I have started to buy wine by the case. I have nothing to live for, but who cares?

DEAR LINDA: I do. Please look up Alcoholics Anonymous in your telephone book, call and tell them what you've told me. I promise you they won't let you down. If you are unable to go to them, they will come to you. And when your husband returns, have a heart-to-heart talk with him and let him know that you can't handle those long separations. But work on sobriety first; then you'll be able to work out your other problems. Good luck, Linda. Please write again soon. I care.

DEAR ABBY: When I read a letter to you from a divorced man crying because he can't find a "nice" woman anywhere, I had to smile. I'll tell you exactly where we are. We are teaching their children. If those fathers would attend the next PTA meeting or open house at their children's school, they would meet three or four single or divorced women in every school building. We are not at the singles bars because we're home grading papers or at a school activity with your kids. We are educated, capable, decent women who love children, but don't meet many eligible men because of the limited exposure of the classroom.

So, gentlemen, if you want to meet a bright, respectable, professional woman, go to your child's school and get acquainted with the teacher, counselor or principal. She just might teach you a thing or two.

—AVAILABLE IN OKLAHOMA
DEAR ABBY: Your letter may initiate a "back-to-school" movement—for single parents.

DEAR ABBY: About the M.D. with $35,000 ON THE BOOKS: His letter brought to mind the following verse by John Owen:

"God and the doctor we alike adore. But only when in danger, not before. The danger o'er, both are alike requited. God is forgotten, and the doctor alighted."

—RITH IN MODESTO
DEAR RUTH: The problem isn't universal. The Chinese say: "The wise dentist presents his bill while the tooth is hurting."

Gooding boy commended

GOODING — A Gooding High School senior has received commendation in the National Merit Scholarship Program.

Paul Molchan, son of Dr. and Mrs. James Molchan, received letters of commendations for outstanding scores in the program, Gooding High School Principal Larry Tinker announced this week.

More than a million students entered the program's competition by completing extensive testing in 1979. Molchan is one of about 33,000 students throughout the U.S. receiving commendations for significant test performance.

Although Molchan is no longer eligible to compete for a National Merit Scholarship, a spokesman for the National Merit Scholarship Corp. said, "to be designated a commended student in the Merit Program is an attainment deserving of public recognition. The continued educational and personal development of such students will benefit the entire nation."

Commended students who request it will be referred as worthy candidates to admissions and financial aid officers at two higher education institutions of their choice.

Gooding PTSO to meet Thursday

GOODING — The Gooding PTSO will meet at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in the Gooding Elementary school lunch room.

Electronic devices

CLEVELAND, Ohio (UPI) — By 1995, the average American household will be spending $2,000 a year on electronic products and services to be used for communications, entertainment, education and environmental monitoring. This forecast from Precidcasts, a Cleveland-based business information and market research company, says the electronics devices will do everything from plan the household budget and the week's meals to provide stock reports, place orders with retail stores and provide show-and-tell instructions for fixing the sink. All these miracles will be wrought, the firm says, using the telephone, television set, computer terminal and software.

Economic barometer rising but signals still look weak

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The barometer of future economic trends rose for the fifth month in a row in October, the government reported Monday.

But private economists warned the moderate gain signals a weak economy that could worsen in coming months.

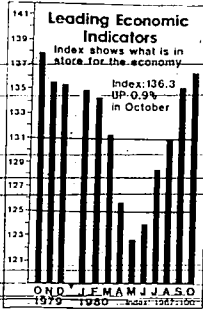

The Commerce Department reported its Index of Leading Economic Indicators rose 0.9 percent in October, following a revised gain of 3.1 percent in September. Earlier, the September increase was reported as 2.4 percent.

The moderate October increase follows four months of substantially larger gains.

Michael Evans of Evans Economics, a private forecasting firm in Washington, said the report "shows a lot of weakness in the economy."

Patricia Klosser, an economist with the Data Resources forecasting firm in Lexington, Mass., said the report "doesn't bode well for the end of the year or for 1981."

Although seven of the ten indicators rose in October, some significant ones fell — a reflection of high interest rates and continued inflation.

A drop in building permits, which forecast construction trends, contributed most to the declining side of the index.

Evans noted high interest rates are choking off the beginning stages of recovery in the housing industry — one of the industries hardest hit by recession.

Contracts and orders for new plant and equipment, adjusted for inflation, also declined in October, indicating factory owners and business proprietors are not purchasing equipment that could lead to increased productivity and more jobs.

On the positive side, the report shows the average workweek increased in October and employees were laid off at a slower rate.

But Evans warned that both indicators could turn around in the next few months as businesses try to work their inventories, requiring fewer employees — rather than turning out new products.

Some of the other indicators that increased in October point to continued inflation, such as increased prices for stock and raw materials.

NFO head says food price hike overdue

CINCINNATI (UPI) — Food price increases are "long overdue" because Americans have never appreciated the food "bargains" they've been getting, the president of the National Farmers Organization said Monday.

"It's time that Americans organize their priorities and understand that food is a necessity and that they must pay for those items rather than spend their income on luxuries," DeVon Woodland said.

"The increase in the price of food is long overdue in this country. American people have had a bargain and have never really recognized it or appreciated it."

"We (farmers) must feed the American people, but they must learn they have to pay for the food they get at an equitable price and return to the producers," Woodland, speaking at a news conference to open his group's week-long national convention, said farmers need about 2 cents more per dollar spent for food and lamented the middleman's take.

"Food is priced only after it leaves the hands of the producer," he said. "And then it is priced in relationship to cost and profit by those who handle the retail and wholesale but the price (hike) to the American farmer is long overdue. It must come. There must be an incentive for him to produce and continue to supply that vital food."

"The American people are getting food today at the lowest and most economical cost of any country in the world. Americans pay 13.5 percent of their disposable income for food—the lowest in the world—the next lowest is 20 percent and it goes from there on up to 25 percent."

Some investing basics

Sylvia Porter.

Let's say that the 1980s will be the decade of the stock market at last; that after so prolonged a span of disaster in Wall Street, stocks finally take off for new peaks on average, millions of investors and speculators return or become buyers for the first time — and that among these millions are YOU.

There are three basics you must obey if you are to triumph.

What's a top-notch speculation for a young unmarried in his/her 20s or 30s could be a catastrophic gamble for an elderly widow in her 50s or 60s. You must invest in accordance with your age, responsibilities, your capacity to recoup a whopping mistake.

What you own must reflect what you need and want, most Growth? Income? Security? Each demands a different investment medium.

What you do depends on your emotional temperament. If you are a nervous, hour-by-hour tape-watcher, you may not belong in stocks at all. Stick to the more routine, stable forms of investment.

Now, let's say you and your spouse are in your 20s, both holding secure jobs. You have no children yet, rent a small apartment, pay stiff taxes because of your lack of tax deductions. You have accumulated $20,000 in savings.

(1) This is the ideal time of your life to speculate (even gamble) and to look for "growth" stocks with bright prospects.

Put $10,000 of your total in fast-food franchise equities, natural gas, resource companies and regional bank holding companies, advises Peter Muratore, senior vice president of E.F. Hutton. These "investing" areas will outpace the market in the coming period, he predicts.

Put your remaining $10,000 into public real estate partnership units for their tax-shelter value, Muratore suggests.

In addition to their tax shelter value, Muratore thinks the unit have excellent growth possibilities — important at your age.

As alternatives to Muratore's choices for growth stocks, John Steffens, Merrill Lynch division director for investor products and services, suggests the technology and drug stocks. These, says Steffens, have been consistent performers in the growth-oriented areas. He also advises you to explore a variety of mutual funds which recently have turned in good performances.

"We're in a secular bull market for the first time in 10 years," declares Carolyn Cole, vice-president of Paine Webber Mitchell Hutchins. Thus, Cole would advise $15,000 of the young couple's $20,000 in companies which can benefit from technology productivity, shifting consumer demographics or profit from national energy considerations.

She would place the remaining $5,000 in a managed commodity fund — definitely underlining my point about the 20s being the age when you can make aggressive investment-speculative moves.

Finally, agreeing with the other three advisers is Robert Stovall, director of investment policy for Dean Witter.

"Dynamic growth areas of the '80s" should play a significant role in your investment program when you are in your 20s, he says. Stovall would place 30,000 of your funds in such fields as energy technology and health care.

He would put the balance of the $20,000 in precious metals stocks, primarily as an inflation hedge.

(2) This is the age to establish a pension program (if you don't have one under your corporation) as a base for all other moves.

Check your company's pension program, Steffens urges. Are you eligible to participate fully? What does the plan provide?

If you are not a member of a private pension program, immediately open an Individual Retirement Account (IRA) or a Keogh Plan.

Steffens then urges you to seek diversification, with a goal of accumulating tax advantage assets. He would put $2,000 or 10 percent of your funds in inflation-hedge securities — including silver, gold and precious metals as the purest hedge. He eliminates art, diamonds and stamps as categories to consider, although their spread and liquidity are not as good as metals.

He would put $5,000 of your funds in 5- to 10-year municipal bonds because their after-tax return is superior to comparable fixed-income investments, such as money market funds or certificates of deposit. And like his Hutton colleague, the Merrill Lynch adviser suggests that you take advantage of public real estate partnership units for tax shelter value, for long-term growth and gain.

(3) No matter how carefree, self-assured and aggressive you may be, in the name of common sense alone, you always must have a cash savings reserve to cover unanticipated emergencies. This is an essential before you launch any investment program.

Less is more for Winnebago, except price

FOREST CITY, Iowa (UPI) — Hoping to reinstate gas-conscious consumers in recreational vehicles, Winnebago Industries Monday unveiled a mini motor home 2,300-pounds lighter with an estimated fuel efficiency of 15 miles per gallon.

The four downsized RV models, company officials said, will also give consumers the option of using liquid propane as a fuel.

Prices climbed as model sizes dwindled. The new models are up about $500 from last year's versions to an average price of around $18,000.

For struggling Winnebago, one of the nation's largest recreational vehicle manufacturers, the four models represent a two-year effort to revitalize the sagging RV industry, hard by rapid gasoline price increases since early 1979.

The new models reduce the weight of the standard recreational vehicle from about 7,800 pounds to an average 5,500 pounds.

Hanson and other company officials planned to introduce the new models at a motor home exposition in Nashville, Tenn., today.

Construction trails 1979

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The value of construction work done nationwide in October was about the same as the previous month, but 2 percent below a year ago, the government said Monday.

During the month, the seasonally adjusted annual rate of new construction was valued at $23.5 billion, up a negligible 0.4 percent from the revised September figure of $23.1 billion. The October rate was 6.2 percent below last October's $23.9 billion figure.

Revised figures released by the Census Bureau also show that the value of construction work done in September rose 4.2 percent to 23.1 billion. Previously, the September estimate had been placed at $22 billion, a 3.2 percent increase from August.

The construction estimates reflect the value of work accomplished during the month, not construction started or completed construction.

Profit taking stagers stocks

By FRANK W. SLISSER
United Press International

NEW YORK — Stock prices suffered their worst loss in more than a year Monday as Wall Streeters cashed in on profits to ease the squeeze being put on by near-record interest rates.

Trading was fairly active. The Dow Jones industrial average, which rose 3.66 points Friday, skidded 23.89 points to 969.45, the worst loss since it fell 26.45 points on Oct. 9, 1979. The Dow gained 3.41 points overall last week.

Oil stocks, which led the market's recent rise to the 1,000 level on the Dow average, and record levels on other averages, were big losers.

The New York Stock Exchange index plummeted 1.86 to 79.16 and the price of a share decreased 89 cents. Declines routed advances 1,323,249 among the 1,970 issues traded at 4 p.m. EST.

Brokers said the large number of issues traded indicated that speculative individuals were involved in the market. In addition to the 1,970 issues, normally, this spells trouble for prices.

Meanwhile, the government said its index of leading economic indicators rose a moderate 0.9 percent in October, suggesting the economic recovery is slowing. The index rose 3.1 percent in September.

Analysts said some investors were disturbed by reports that Jordan vowed to destroy any invading Syrian troops and the United States said it is considering shipping ammunition and spare parts to Jordan to counter the threat of another Middle East war.

Some energy issues, which dominated the market over the past several weeks, were under pressure. Traders were cashing in on profits they made in these issues.

Big Board volume totaled 48,180,000 shares, up from the 34,200,000 traded Friday, the slowest session in a month.

Composite volume of NYSE issues listed on all U.S. exchanges and over the counter at 4 p.m. totaled 55,260,400 shares, compared with 37,544,208 traded Friday.

The American Stock Exchange index lost 5.72 points to 365.03 and the price of a share decreased 32 cents. The National Association of Securities Dealers' NASDAQ index of OTC issues skidded 32.94 to 204.91.

At 4 p.m. in Texas, which climbed 54 points last week, was the most active NYSE-listed issue, off 3 1/2 to 90 1/2, in trading that included a block of 100,000 shares at 52 1/2.

Occidental Petroleum followed, up 1/4 to 38 1/2. Union Pacific surrendered 7 1/2 to 86 1/2. The stock rose 3 1/2 points last week after the company said its oil and gas reserves in the Overthrust Belt in the West were greater than expected.

Among the other oils and related issues, California Standard lost 7 1/2 to 107 1/2. Superior Oil 9 to 206. Indiana Standard 2 1/2 to 86 1/2. Exxon 1 1/2 to 86. Sun 1 1/2 to 57 1/2. Gulf Oil 2 1/2 to 49 1/2. Allied Chemical 2 1/2 to 56.

Blue-chip IBM, a Dow average component, was the third most active

NYSE-listed issue, off 1 1/2 to 66 1/2. Among the other Dow average components, Eastman Kodak led 7 1/2 to 65 1/2, Dupont 1 to 40 1/2. General Motors 1 1/2 to 42 1/2. Merck 2 1/2 to 77 1/2. Minnesota Mining & Manufacturing 1 1/2 to 59. Union Carbide 1 1/2 to 49 1/2.

Burlington Northern lost 3 1/2 to 75 1/2 after the giant railroad said its capital spending in 1981 would be down 31 percent from this year.

Curtiss-Wright gained 1 to 40 1/2, and General Electric lost 1 1/2 to 60 1/2. The Supreme Court refused to overturn a 525-million payment. GE made to Curtiss-Wright as a subcontractor on a naval project.

Jack Eckerd, which reported first-quarter earnings of 48 cents a share versus 43 cents a year ago, dropped 1 1/2 to 33 1/2.

Stocks industries shed 4 to 16 1/2. The company's third-quarter net totaled 77 cents a share, compared with 76 cents a year ago.

On the Amex, declines routed advances 491,161 among the 859 issues. Stock Industries shed 4 to 16 1/2. The company's third-quarter net totaled 77 cents a share, compared with 76 cents a year ago.

Christopher off to Algiers with 'clarifications' for Iran

By United Press International

The United States, in a message for Iran dispatched Monday night, warns that its response to Iran's conditions for freeing the hostages speaks only for the Carter administration and could well change after Inauguration Day, officials said.

Deputy Secretary of State Warren Christopher prepared to fly to Algiers to deliver to Algerian intermediaries the American "clarification" of the U.S. response to Iran's conditions for release of the hostages.

Administration officials said the message carried by Christopher includes a proposal that an international commission be set up to deal with any disputed legal questions between the two nations.

It also warns that the U.S. reply to Iran's conditions for freeing the hostages speaks only for the outgoing administration, and that the U.S. terms could well change after Ronald Reagan takes office Jan. 20, the officials said.

Christopher arranged to leave Andrews Air Force Base, Md., with a small group of experts at 7:30 p.m. MST. Algeria is acting as intermediary in the communications between Tehran and Washington.

A State Department announcement said, "Deputy Secretary Christopher will deliver to the Algerian foreign minister our response to the request for clarification from the Iranian authorities."

In a broadcast monitored in Washington, Iranian Minister of State Bemzad Nabavi, speaking for the Iranian government, said until all of Iran's four conditions are carried out, "the hostages will not be released."

Nabavi's Tehran news conference statement, as carried in an Arabic language broadcast, appeared to mean a shift in Iran's promise to release some of the hostages if the United States fulfilled only some of the four conditions.

Iran claims upper hand

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Iran said Monday its forces have gained the upper hand in the 10-week-old Persian-Gulf war with Iraq and both sides reported inflicting heavy casualties in a series of land and sea battles.

Hajjoleislam Seyyed Ali Khamenei, Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's representative in the Iranian Supreme Defense Council, told the official Pars news agency that the Iranian army now holds a "strategic advantage" in the cities of Dizful, Abadan, Ahvaz, Susangerd and Dobe-Irardan.

China's leaders debate fate of Mao's widow

PEKING (UPI) — Chinese leaders are locked in a fierce death debate on whether Mao Tse-tung's widow should be executed before a firing squad or spared as a gesture to China's founding father, diplomatic sources said Monday.

The debate was in full swing as the second full week of China's state trial resumed hearings — mainly as a forum for defense attorneys to make their presence felt for the first time and try to silence foreign criticism that the trial of the Gang of Four and six others was nothing more than a kangaroo court.

China's leadership and even the court judges have indicated in statements there is no doubt about the guilt of all the accused and the main purpose of the trial was to fix the degree of guilt and sentencing.

Diplomatic and Chinese sources said the main problem apparently was whether or not to execute Jiang Qing, widow of the late Communist Party chairman, for crimes during the 1966-76 Cultural Revolution.

The fate of Jiang is a sensitive political issue which could influence the continuing struggle within the leadership between various factions.

Gooding Memorial hires new administrator

By BRUCE HAMMOND
Times-News writer

GOODING — A new administrator has been hired to help turn around financially strained Gooding County Memorial Hospital.

The selection of Edmon W. Myers, 42, of Ocean Springs, Miss., as Gooding Memorial administrator was confirmed Monday night by Hospital Board Chairman Rod Spackman.

Gooding Memorial has been managed by an acting administrator since Frances Whorton resigned in September, preceding a dispute between Gooding County Commissioners and the hospital board that resulted in the resignations of three board members.

The original problem plaguing the 24-bed hospital involved charges that some Gooding doctors had refused to treat patients entering the emergency room on weekends. In addition to these complaints, a lack of income this past summer because of low occupancy at Gooding Memorial began affecting hospital operations, resulting in the hospital board's request for $40,000 in county support.

"It wasn't very optimistic that the problems could be turned around, I wouldn't have accepted the job," said Myers, who retired Friday from a 20-year career with the U.S. Air Force.

Myers will arrive in Gooding in about two weeks after completing his job as hospital administrator for the USAF Medical Center at Keesler Air Force Base.

A list of priorities to be faced at Gooding Memorial has been suggested to Myers by the hospital board, including the following topics:

- Emergency room policy and procedures.
- Revision of financial statement presentations.
- Operational and cash flow budgets for the first half of 1981.
- A public relations program.

"I'll be the last guy to say we're going to wave a magic wand and solve all the problems," Myers said in a phone interview Monday night. "But with time, we can remedy most of them. I'm confident of that."

Spackman stressed that hospital management will be left entirely to Myers, although basic guidelines have been outlined by the hospital board.

Despite offers from three hospital management firms, the Gooding County Hospital Board will not consider hiring outside aid until Myers' performance is evaluated. Spackman said this trial period will last at least six months, probably longer.

County officials had been approached by two Idaho hospital management firms plus a third based in Oregon.

However, the costs for these consulting services varied between $40,000 and $50,000 and board members unanimously agreed that an in-house administrator was preferred if a qualified candidate could be attracted to Gooding.

Myers has a very strong experience background as well as an educational background, including developing long range plans, budgeting, personnel management and financial operations," Spackman said.

Myers, who holds a master's degree in business administration from California State College, will receive a $30,000 base salary.

To aid long-term planning for Gooding Memorial, hospital board members are expected to name a hospital planning committee sometime in January. Myers will serve as adviser to the committee which will consist of an undetermined number of county residents representing all parts of the county.

The committee will be large enough to be representative and critical enough to be workable in developing long-term plans," Spackman said.

Myers already spent one evening touring Gooding Memorial with acting director Frank McNamara of Halley, and said he was impressed with the facility.

The hospital board considered 17 applicants for the administrator post before hiring Myers.

"At first it was a toss-up between three candidates, but it was narrowed to Myers," Spackman explained. Myers said one of his main reasons for taking the job was to return to a small, farming community similar to his home area in southeastern Washington. His wife and two daughters are expected to move to Gooding during the Christmas holiday.

Eligio White, board chairman of Human Systems Corp., outlined his proposal to an Idaho Health Systems Agency committee Monday.

Two groups argue for health care funding

By STEPHANIE SCHOROW
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Supporters of the Idaho Migrant Council and another agency seeking to provide rural health care exchanged barbs in a Monday night public hearing.

The hearing was held by the Idaho Health Systems Agency (IHSA) to determine which group would receive about $20,000 in federal funds to run a Twin Falls rural and migrant health clinic.

Both IMC, which has run the Twin Falls clinic since 1978 and the Human Systems Corp., a non-profit corporation based in Buhl, have applied for the funds.

IMC supporters questioned the ability of the HSC (formerly the Human Services Corporation) to recruit doctors and provide continuous health care. HSC spokesman said full services could not be provided before Aug. 1, although the grant begins April 1.

HSC spokesmen contend the U.S. Public Health Service, which administers the funds, has faulted IMC administrative practices and may choose not to fund the IMC. This would leave Twin Falls without rural health service — unless HSC's grants are accepted.

After hearing testimony, the six-person IHSA committee held a discussion among themselves to decide which group, if either, had met IHSA's criteria.

As of press-time, the committee was still debating its decision which will go to the 13-member IHSA executive board, which meets Dec. 20 to decide recommendation for Idaho's five rural clinics. The board's recommendations will go to the PHS, which makes the final decision.

During the testimony, Eligio White, HSC spokesman, said his group would provide two physicians, two nurse practitioners and two licensed practical nurses to the Twin Falls Clinic. He also said the group had talked with representatives of Magic Valley Memorial Hospital about establishing an agreement concerning patient care and fee payment.

He said cost-per-patient encounter would run about $31 each the first year of operation, but would decrease the following years.

From April 1 to Aug. 1, an LPN would refer patients to other sources as the corporation had no funds to hire a physician before then, White said.

Tom Romero, of the IMC, said three physicians would be based for the Burley IMC clinic, one of whom would work part-time in Twin Falls with a nurse practitioner. Romero said cost-per-patient encounter was $18.70 and that the IMC was presently negotiating a contract with MVMH for obstetric services.

Romero also said that a new "model" for operation was being formulated for the PHS, which he called "well-organized, efficient and cost-effective."

Dr. Gary Gingrich, formerly with the Twin Falls IMC clinic, noted that five of the Human Systems Corp. board were former-IMC employees, and asked White if their application represented "a coup d'etat, abandoning a sinking ship or civil war?"

White said it represented none of those, rather, the corporation "was concerned with the possibility the IMC would not be funded."

Gingrich also said White's statement that "linkages" would be formed between the HSC clinic and the medical community was "naive," saying the past relationship between the IMC and doctors was "fraught with tension."

White said doctors had assured his group "we will talk with you. Not we will like you. Not we agree with you. But we will work with you."

Sue Newkirk, a practical nurse with the Twin Falls IMC clinic, expressed concern over HSC's proposed delay in providing services from April 1 to Aug. 1.

White conceded that June to September was the peak of the migrant season, but said after Aug. 1 a full range of services would be provided.

Tonight a hearing on funding of the Burley clinic will be held at 7 p.m. at the Burley Law Enforcement Building.

City accepts airport deal

By MARTY TRILLHAASE
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls City Council renewed the airport Monday and voted to accept a $90,000 contribution from Sun Valley officials toward the airport improvement project.

Under the council's action, the airport will be known as the Twin Falls-Sun Valley Regional Airport.

The name change was part of a package agreed to by Twin Falls and Sun Valley officials. In exchange for the $90,000 contribution, Twin Falls officials have also agreed to name two Sun Valley representatives to a six-member airport advisory commission.

Two members will represent the city of Twin Falls and the remaining two will represent the county. The board advises the City Council and Twin Falls County Commission, who exercise final control over the airport.

The agreement also calls for the city of Sun Valley to be named as a co-insured party on all liability policies covering the airport.

Under the agreement, the city of Sun Valley will contribute $46,000 for the project with an additional $14,000 coming from Sun Valley Corp. and Elkhorn Associates LTD.

The additional funds will allow Twin Falls officials to obtain $3.6 million in federal funding to complete the airport runway extension project in 14 months rather than three to four years as was expected. The funds will be used to add 1,500 feet to the 7,150-foot runway. The airport's present length requires DC-9 jets flown by Republic Airlines to fly 20 percent empty during certain times of the year, particularly summer.

The move is seen as an incentive to Republic to maintain or increase service to the area. Republic is the only major carrier serving Twin Falls.

Sun Valley City Council members last month voted to approve the agreement but have not moved to execute it, City Attorney Charles Brumback said.

In other matters, the council overturned a decision by its planning and zoning commission and voted to give Independent Bean and Seed Co. of Twin Falls a special use permit allowing the company to build a warehouse on Addison Avenue East.

The move had been opposed by residents bordering the plant who said the warehouse would be used for industrial purposes. The council's action prohibits the use of the buildings for industrial purposes and requires the company to shield any new outdoor lights from surrounding residential properties, notify all property owners and comply with city requirements for parking and landscaping by September 1981.

Attorney Leon Smith, representing the firm, noted the cost of the improvements would approach $11 million for a building that would cost $40,000 to construct.

City officials plan to revise city requirements to allow a phased-in compliance and those changes could be in effect by the time the deadline expires. In that case, Independent Bean would be required to take advantage of the new requirements, city officials said.

The council also voted to table a series of proposed changes on its transient vendor licensing ordinance. The ordinance, enacted about 18 months ago, provides transients must register with the city and pay a fee.

The changes would have substantially reduced the fee, lowering it from $5 per day to $25 per month, and allowing transients to register their operations for as much as six months period at one time.

The council's action reflects strong doubts about the viability of the ordinance, which some council members said is unenforceable, given the city's limited resources.

Group fights Sagebrush Rebellion

By LARRY SWISHER
Times-News writer

BOISE — Opponents of the Sagebrush Rebellion in Idaho are launching a petition drive to tell Congress and the Idaho Legislature not to transfer federal lands to states.

Save Our Public Lands, a group formed earlier this year under the leadership of outdoor writer Ted Trueblood of Nampa, is in the process of distributing the petitions.

"We don't have the political support particularly with the defeat of Sen. Frank Church to stop the threat," Ken Robison of Boise, a state senator who was defeated Nov. 4 and who belongs to the group, said Monday.

"It's necessary that the people petition to persuade the congressional delegation and legislators we want to keep the public lands where they are so the public interest is protected."

He said members of Save Our Public Lands, headquartered in Boise, think they can get well over 20,000 signatures by March 1, 1981, the middle of the legislative session and in time before Congress takes up the issue.

Robison predicted the drive will become a popular movement because "every citizen, whatever his particular interest, is an owner of the public lands."

The petition is addressed to the state Legislature and the four members of the Idaho Congressional delegation. Sen. James McClure, Senator-elect Steven Symms, Rep. George Hansen, and Congressman-elect Larry Craig.

It says simply that the petition signers are opposed to any transfer of public lands managed by the Bureau of Land Management or the Forest Service to the states.

The nation's BLM lands total about 175 million acres and the forests, 475 million, Robison said.

While noting that leaders of the Sagebrush Rebellion in Idaho are talking now only about BLM lands, he said a bill introduced in Congress by Sen. Orrin Hatch of Utah includes all lands.

"It is gambling with the future of our public lands," he said. "We think the recent $160,000 conference sponsored by unnamed donors in Salt Lake City is evidence that big money is interested in pushing the rebellion to gain domination or control of the public lands in the West."

He said the petition drive will point out to Idahoans that they will lose 570 million acres, the amount of public lands in other states, as soon as a transfer becomes law.

"In the future, if their children live in those states, there's no assurance that those lands will be available for hunting, fishing and recreation," Robison said.

The meeting will be at the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare office, 139 Third Ave. E., in Twin Falls.

McDonald new council member
BURLEY — A woman has been named to fill Burley's empty City Council seat.

Mayor Chuck Shaddock appointed Frances "Tani" McDonald, 54, to the City Council Monday night at a regular council session.

"I did a lot of thinking. I usually went off the ballot, but this time I took a look at the ballot," said Shaddock, referring to McDonald's attempt in 1977 and 1979 to win a council seat.

McDonald is a teacher in Dvorshak Elementary School at Burley. Her appointment was unanimously approved by council members. McDonald replaces Leran Mesley, who was appointed chief of police at the last City Council meeting.

At least 12 apply for magistrate
GOODING — Fifth District Court Magistrate Philip Becker said Monday he has received 12 or 13 applications for the magistrate vacancy in Twin Falls County.

Becker could not list all the applicants who met Friday's deadline. He said having just returned from being out of town for the Thanksgiving holiday, he is still reviewing applications. In addition, he said, his secretary was ill and not working Monday and all the applications were locked in her desk.

Becker is chairman of the Magistrate Commission which will decide on an appointee Dec. 9.

Fire believed caused by arson
TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls police and fire officials said a fire which destroyed a mobile home Sunday was caused by arson.

No arrests have been made and officials said Monday that the cause is pending.

City fire officials said the home of Grover Wilson, 1845 Osterloh Ave., was extensively damaged by a fire which began in the front living room and spread to a bedroom and kitchen area. No one was home at the time of the fire, which was reported at 2:07 p.m.

Damage to the trailer was estimated at close to $40,000. Fire Marshal Clarence Harkins said an investigation conducted by his office and the Twin Falls Police Department uncovered evidence indicating the fire was deliberately set.

Man charged in hit and run
TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls man was arrested Sunday on charges that he fled the scene of an automobile accident which injured three people.

Rafael Doria Cabello, 18, was being held at the Twin Falls County Jail Monday on $23 bail. He also was being held for U.S. border patrol officers for an immigration violation.

Tax protester claims judge hostile

BOISE (UPI) — A Pocatello man Monday filed a motion to disqualify U.S. District Judge Pocatello from hearing an Internal Revenue Service case, saying the judge has exhibited "extreme hostility" in other cases involving tax protesters.

The IRS has filed motions in U.S. District Court, seeking records from the Arrowhead Press, Pocatello pertaining to Thomas P. Horner.

Documents filed in court by Revenue Agent Robert E. Gillette say the IRS wants the records to conduct an investigation into Horner's 1977 and 1978 income tax returns.

But Horner contends the IRS has made an "institutional commitment to prosecute" anyone identified by the agency as a tax protester. He says similar IRS cases taken before Callister in the past by individuals appearing without an attorney have resulted in judgments biased in favor of the federal government.

Horner, who is representing himself in court, says Callister has "shown extreme hostility, impatience and oppressive overbearing against one who stands upon constitutional issues and tries to defend himself against the criminals that have infiltrated the Department of Justice and other agencies of the U.S. government."

He says Callister also "showed extreme dislike and annoyance of any attempt to use constitutional, lawful methods — defenses," saying "he believes he cannot get a fair, 'must be impartial,' hearing from the judge."

The motions filed in court by the IRS seek an order requiring Donald L. Horner, as an official with Arrowhead Press, to turn over all company documents pertaining to Thomas Horner's involvement with the firm for the two years in question.

Thomas Horner, however, has intervened in court, contending the IRS is not attempting a civil investigation into his income-tax history, but actually is preparing a criminal case against him.

Horner contends Gillette has perjured himself by contending the IRS wants the payroll documents for a civil, not criminal, investigation. Because the government allegedly wants the documents for a criminal proceeding, Horner says his constitutional rights against unreasonable search and seizure will be violated if the court gives the IRS access to Arrowhead's documents.

"He says the IRS has labeled him as a 'tax protester,' allegedly compiling information on individuals who attend meetings 'of-belong to groups designed to aid citizens in filing 'constitutional-tax returns.' Those who attend such meetings or belong to the groups, he says, have been singled out for IRS investigations.

Horner seeks a court order halting the IRS investigation and another requiring the IRS to disclose its 'investigatory file, a request the U.S. Attorney's office has protested. He also seeks an explanation in court regarding why the IRS has refused to honor his demand for the documents under the Freedom of Information Act.

Judge grants tribe lawsuit intervention

BOISE (UPI) — U.S. District Senior Judge Fred Taylor Monday granted the Nez Perce Indian tribe permission to intervene in a lawsuit which challenges the U.S. Forest Service's logging plans in the Boise and Payette national forests.

The suit, originally filed by the Idaho Wildlife Federation against U.S. Agriculture Department and Forest Service officials, contends the agencies fail to perform adequate environmental assessments before stepping up timber cuts in the Warren and Landmark planning units of the two forests.

The Nez Perce sought permission to intervene in the suit as full plaintiffs with the Wildlife Federation, contending the Indians' treaty fishing rights could be damaged by plans to increase logging in the two national forests.

The Nez Perce say the Forest Service officials "failed to provide in their land-planning activities, suitable safeguards against en masse fish habitat degradation, thus subjecting the plaintiffs' (Indians) treaty secured fishing rights with the imminent danger of curtailment and limitation and threatening irreparable injury to the plaintiff, both economically and culturally."

Both the Nez Perce and Wildlife

Federation say Forest Service officials have admitted that environmental studies on the logging plans were inadequate. The Forest Service, however, has decided to allow increased logging under an interim program while a new environmental study is performed, the two groups say.

By allowing timber harvests under the interim plan without first performing adequate environmental studies, the Nez Perce and Wildlife Federation contend the Forest Service is risking permanent degradation to the area, which contains several endangered species, fragile geological formations and a crucial spawning and rearing habitat for salmon.

The Nez Perce say the tribe's treaty with the U.S. government ensures the Indians fishing rights on the Columbia River and its tributaries, including the drainage of the Salmon River.

The Warren Planning Unit, which is located in the Payette National Forest, contains 367,700 acres, 91 percent of which are roadless. The Landmark unit, which is located in the Boise National Forest, contains 182,000 acres, about 62 percent of which are roadless.

Both planning units lie within the Salmon River drainage.

More Wes Con subpoenas issued

BOISE (UPI) — Three drivers with a Mountain Home trucking company and four officials with a Roseburg, Oregon, lumber firm were subpoenaed Monday to testify in the government's criminal case against a southwestern Idaho toxic-waste disposal company.

Wes Con Inc. and company President Eugene Rinebold Sr. are scheduled to stand trial Dec. 11 on charges of illegally burying high-level PCB wastes at the Owyhee County, Idaho, landfill.

The case is the government's first prosecution under the Toxic Substances Control Act, a 1976 law that requires disposal of high-level PCBs by incineration.

Samson Truck Lines drivers Virgil Janousek, Richard L. Edgar and John Davis, all of Mountain Home, have been ordered to appear in U.S. District Court in Boise Dec. 11. They have been ordered to bring copies of documents, that the government says show that Samson transported high-level PCB wastes to Wes Con from Roseburg Lumber Co. of Roseburg, Ore., and Sunshine Mine Co. of Kellogg, Idaho.

Roseburg Lumber officials ordered to appear in court were: Samuel Tolleson, warehouse manager; Roy Guy Carter, purchasing director; Gary Altaway, office manager; and Kenneth Lance Galloway, chief electrician. They have been ordered to produce documents pertaining to the disposal of 10 drums of Pyranol, a type of high-level PCB, at Wes Con's Grand View, Idaho, landfill.

Also ordered to appear Monday was Gorman Oney, chief electrician for Bunker Hill Co. of Kellogg. Other Bunker Hill officials previously were subpoenaed to testify during the trial.

Study shows poor roads waste gas

BOISE (UPI) — A study done for the Road Information Program by a California firm shows the average Idaho driver wastes $100 worth of gas each year because of substandard highways.

The study, released Sunday, said 46 percent Idaho's highways are substandard and result in the waste of more than $62.4 million worth of fuel each year.

According to the study, bad roads increase fuel consumption because of "a loss of traction and uneven power flow through the drive train due to excessive vibration."

"The savings in fuel costs alone are greater than the price of correcting the deficient roads," said Gene Ranstrom of the Idaho Associated General Contractors, which requested the study.

Road Information Program of Washington, D.C., estimated Idaho's 62,184 substandard drivers in 1978 wasted $1.1 million gallons of gasoline a year driving on bumpy and broken pavement.

The study recommended rebuilding 1,687 miles of roads and resurfacing another 586 miles; a job it said would cost $66.1 million a year for 10 years.

The Road Information Program of Washington, D.C., said Idaho's road conditions are likely to get even worse if present funding levels continue.

"Idaho's present road has 9.5 cent-per-gallon-motor-fuel-tax that has been increased by one cent-per-gallon since 1976," Ranstrom said.

Alaskan public right of way released to gas developers

Idaho hiker a victim Sheriff fears killer to strike again

POINT REYES, Calif. (UPI) — The torture-killer of seven hikers along remote wooded trails is falling apart psychologically and will probably kill again, the Marin County sheriff said Monday.

Sheriff Al Howenstein said the man responsible for the ritualistic killings "is capable of killing again because he needs psychological relief: These murders are not satisfying these needs."

His bodies, including that of an Idaho woman, were found last weekend, all in "submissive positions" as were the bodies of three women found between August 1979 and October 1980 on nearby Mount Tamalpais.

Howenstein warned hikers using the 145 miles of remote trails of the acre Point Reyes National Seashore Park north of San Francisco to use extreme caution and to travel in groups.

The slayer of the four persons whose bodies were found during the weekend was believed to be the same person who killed the other three women. This was supported by the "ritualistic aspect" of all the slayings.

In each case, Howenstein said, the "submissive positions" of the victims indicated the killer used "menial torture in which the victim pleads not to be murdered."

Two women hikers were reported missing in the park Friday and search teams on Saturday found instead two badly decomposed bodies — fully clothed, burned side by side in a shallow grave near Sky Trail on Mount Wittenberg. The sheriff said coroner's deputies were still trying to ascertain their sexes and identities.

An hour and a half later, searches found the bodies of the two missing women about 100 yards apart. The bodies were nude and their clothing scattered about the area.

One woman was identified only as Diana O'Connell, 22, from the East Coast. The other was Shana May, 25, formerly of Troy, Idaho.

The women were not hiking together, Howenstein said, but were traveling in opposite directions when accosted by the slayer.

After an earlier killing, a witness described a man he saw fleeing the scene as about 6 feet tall, of medium build, with medium-length, brown hair. His age was estimated at 25 to 35.

Howenstein said he doubted more victims would be found because there were no outstanding reports of missing persons.

"However," he said, "we did not have those reports on the two bodies we found Saturday either."

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus, in what he called "a major milestone" in the quest for energy independence Monday signed over 430 miles of public right of way to Alaska natural gas pipeline developers.

At a signing ceremony attended by the project's congressional and business boosters, Andrus also accepted a $75,000 check for first-year right of way rental from John McMillian, chairman of the pipeline consortium.

McMillian's rental payment amounted to $28 an acre.

Andrus said the 430-mile Alaskan right of way grant, which his agency approved in a record four months, is "a major milestone in our efforts in America to gain energy independence."

The grant proved that environmental and technical issues involving the $25 billion, 4,800-mile pipeline can be resolved, he said.

"The action itself signifies we are in full support of the pipeline construction and operation to bring this gas to the public market," said Andrus.

The proposed pipeline is supposed to supply the lower 48 states with 2 billion feet of Alaskan and Canadian gas when completed in 1995. But the consortium's inability to come up with private financing has been delaying the project, which was approved by President Carter three years ago.

"We hope to go to the financial community for financing in the first part of next year," said McMillian.

The consortium is still negotiating with Alaska's three North Slope oil and gas producers — Arco, Exxon and Sohio — to secure their financial participation in the project.

A major stumbling block, besides the reluctance of the three wealthy producers, is the federal-antitrust policy that seems to prevent them from holding an equity interest in a pipeline.

But Darrell Mackay, the consortium's government and regulatory affairs specialist, said he thinks the problem can be solved by a presidential decision.

Without federal assistance, the price of Alaskan gas coming through the pipeline must be high enough to pay off unknown capital and construction costs and yield the developer a virtually guaranteed profit.

McMillian estimated the price at $9 per 1,000 cubic feet, the equivalent of at least $40 per barrel of oil.

Congress has determined that the price of Alaska gas will be rolled in with domestic gas prices, a formula that will subsidize the source with the higher price by forcing consumers to pay an average price.

California fires nearly contained

SAN BERNARDINO, Calif. (UPI) — The seven brush fires that burned a deadly, $72 million trail of destruction across five Southern California counties claimed a fifth victim Monday, but the last of the blazes was nearly contained.

Oregon firefighter Steve Johnson died at San Antonio Community Hospital of an apparent heart attack suffered while battling the blazes.

Johnson, 33, was a member of a 20-man crew sent Nov. 26 from the Mapleton Ranger District of the Siuslaw National Forest to the Lake-land fire in the Cleveland National Forest.

The week-long inferno killed four other people, destroyed 383 homes and blackened 80,000 acres.

Authorities reported that the 4,000 firefighters from around the nation who battled the blazes suffered more than 26,000 minor injuries and 39 major injuries.

More than 2,000 firefighters worked Monday to contain the week-old fire in the Cleveland National Forest, 15 miles southeast of Orange, where 29,000 acres had been charred.

"The crews will work to save areas of timber or brush inside the perimeter of the fire which haven't burned yet," U.S. Forest Service spokeswoman LoVae Perez said.

During the weekend, starving rats moved down the charred slopes around the San Bernardino National Forest to search the burned homes for food.

U.S. Forest Service officials warned that when the winter rains come, destructive floods could threaten the same fire-devastated neighborhoods.

Police shot dozens of the rats during the weekend. The hungry rodents had left 140 square miles of still-smoldering high desert brush and mountain timber in the San Bernardino National Forest.

Rats are known to carry bubonic plague, and police said if the sudden rodent infestation continued, they would call in health authorities and pest control agencies to get rid of them.

A fire that burned 6,000 acres in the Los Padres National Forest, 65 miles northwest of Los Angeles, was fully contained in the rugged, remote mountains, but firefighters did not expect to get it fully under control until later today.

"People in the area will have to be prepared for flooding when it rains," Marsha Brown, U.S. Forest Service spokeswoman said.

"There's no way we're going to be able to do the kind of rehabilitation work that is needed immediately to stop the floods. There's going to be flooding."

Reagan's car hit by secret service

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — President-elect Ronald Reagan's car was struck Monday by the Secret Service protective station wagon following him to a Los Angeles hotel, but Reagan was not hurt in the accident.

Reagan was riding to his Pacific Palisades home after visiting his dentist in Beverly Hills.

The Secret Service station wagon with several machine gun-toting agents rammed into the rear of Reagan's car, denting the right rear fender, as the traffic slowed for an intersection.

David Prosen, a spokesman, said Reagan "is fine."

"He suffered no ill effects," he said.

The accident occurred on San Vicente Boulevard when Reagan's motorcade slowed as a traffic light it was approaching turned to red. The agents' "war wagon" smashed into the rear of Reagan's car, pushing the grill of the Secret Service car back into the radiator.

Except for the driver, the agents jumped out of the station wagon when the motorcade pulled to the side for a moment, and hopped into a "control car" which also included some Reagan staff members.

The station wagon's engine did not start and it was left behind.

The motorcade then proceeded on its way. The accident occurred about three miles from Reagan's home.

Reagan disrupts old neighborhood

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Jerry Paris, director of the "Happy Days" television series, had a problem with a neighbor — Ronald Reagan.

Paris, who lives near the president-elect in the affluent suburb of Pacific Palisades, was getting lonely. The Secret Service was blocking his friends from entering the neighborhood.

The former actor, who once played the dentist next-door to the old "Dick Van Dyke Show" decided enough was enough. He called his old show-business friend, the man soon to be the 40th president of the United States, to complain.

Paris apologized profusely, corrected the situation and invited Paris over for a drink to make amends.

It seems everybody in the president-elect's neighborhood has a story. Sabrina Schiller knew things would be different when she strolled out early one morning in her robe to get her morning paper.

As she looked up, a television camera was aimed at her, recording her daily routine.

"There's just no privacy left all of a sudden," she said. "We have to brush our hair to go get the newspaper."

The neighborhood, one of the finest in the city, even looks different.

Microwave dishes that shoot television pictures to network studios are perched on rooftops. Telephone company crews have jury-rigged cables in trees and gutters to handle the extra lines for Reagan and reporters. Secret Service agents scrutinize all incoming traffic.

Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag

Unlikely contract scored

With 11 high-card points and a rather good five-card heart suit, one trump, two hearts and two spades are all inadequate while a forcing jump to two notrump is a trifle too strong.

The hand is no problem at all. The player plays the second-round jump to two notrump as highly invitational, but not absolutely forcing, he jumps to two notrump. North has a trifle over a minimum and goes to game.

West deals and leads a diamond and leads a low diamond. South must make the right decision here and rise with dummy's queen.

Now he has enough top tricks for two notrump. He cashes the good spades and finally comes down to heart play. He leads the 10 from dummy. East ducks, but South has no guess at this point.

West deals and leads a heart and makes his optimistic game contract. (NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASS'N.)
