

Flames billow hundreds of feet in air above burning solvent tanks at Kansas refinery

Tanks burn for 14 hours

Firemen quell refinery blaze

EL DORADO, Kan. (UPI) — Firefighters at a Getty Oil refinery Monday extinguished a spectacular petroleum-solvent fire that had burned for 14 hours.

The blaze sent flame and smoke hundreds of feet into the southeast Kansas sky.

Two people suffered minor injuries. A plant spokesman said production of gasoline, crude oil and diesel fuel would resume at the refinery "in a couple of days."

The fire began Sunday with a series of violent explosions in at least two 10,000-barrel petroleum solvent tanks. As flames leaped 500 feet into the air, residents of the town about 140 miles southwest of Kansas City were readied for evacuation, but the need never arose.

Firefighters put the blaze out about three hours after the initial explosions only to have it flare-up again 15 minutes later. It then quickly spread to a third tank, a Getty spokesman said.

By midnight, the fires in the first two tanks had been contained, but the third tank continued to burn until shortly after dawn Monday when the last flames were choked off by foam.

Bob Jacob, information manager for the refinery, said it would probably be today before the extent of damage and cause of the blaze and explosions were determined.

Officials at the Susan B. Allen

Memorial Hospital said one firefighter was treated and released. One plant worker, Terry Oaks, 27, of El Dorado, was admitted overnight for observation.

Jacob said each of the three tanks had a 10,000-barrel capacity but said the three involved contained only a total of 14,000 barrels of solvent. He said the three were located on the southeast corner of a large tank farm area.

The refinery is one of three Getty complexes in the United States. It was formerly owned by Skelly Oil Co.

The last fire at the Getty refinery was in October, 1977, when a welder's torch set off a fire in a fuel oil tank that burned for several hours.

Mexico breaks fishing accords

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In an action related to the "tuna war" between the United States and Mexico, Mexico late Monday terminated its two major fishing agreements with the United States.

In Mexico City, the Mexican Foreign Relations Secretariat issued a communique saying Ambassador to the United States Hugo Margain delivered a message to the State Department notifying the United States that Mexico "formally rejects" the treaties of 1975 and 1977.

Citing a breakdown in U.S.-Mexican negotiations on the issue, the communique said Margain's message said, "During the latest conversations in Mexico City this Dec. 22 both delegations agreed an unsuccessful effort to arrive at a partial and transitory accord."

Several U.S. fishing industry officials said the action could create severe economic conditions for Gulf Coast fishermen. But an American diplomat in Mexico City said the action would affect only a few dozen boats and the treaties could be renewed if negotiations were resumed.

The official, who asked not to be identified, said a bilateral tuna treaty will affect only 73 small U.S. boats operating within 12 miles of the Mexican coastline.

Vesco seeks asylum

NASSAU, Bahamas (UPI) — Fugitive financier Robert Vesco, saying he fears persecution in the United States, Monday applied for political asylum in the Bahamas, which last month refused to renew his residency permit.

Vesco also said he feared "the ever-present risk of being clandestinely spirited away or even kidnapped to the United States to be punished for political motives."

He made the statements in a letter mailed Monday to Bahamas Minister of Home Affairs Clement Maynard.

Final death toll 496

By United Press International

Although 496 people were killed in traffic accidents during the long Christmas holiday weekend, the death toll was not as steep as the experts had feared.

The National Safety Council had estimated as many as 750 people could be killed on the nation's highways during the 102-hour weekend that began at 6 p.m. local time Wednesday and ended at midnight Sunday.

Officials said the death toll was held down somewhat because fewer Americans took trips during the long holiday.

California led the nation with 64 traffic deaths, followed by Texas with 50.

$75 million in pot seized

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — A Coast Guard cutter on a special patrol in the Gulf of Mexico Monday stopped a sea-going tug on a smuggling mission, seized an estimated $75 million worth of marijuana and arrested its Colombian crew.

Coast Guard spokesman Tom Pearson said the cutter Acushnet seized the 110-foot tugboat Dr. Jack about 200 miles southwest of New Orleans. He said the tug had an estimated 76 tons of marijuana aboard, worth about $1 million a ton.

Quake rocks Mexico

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — A moderate earthquake registering 5.7 on the Richter scale rocked southern Mexico Monday, but there were no reports of injuries or property damage.

The quake was centered about 200 southeast of Mexico City in the state of Guerrero, authorities with the national earthquake center in the capital said.

American's son slain

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (UPI) — The son of a Miami man — summoned to a meeting with National Guard officials — was hinfred, handcuffed and shot to death, authorities said Monday.

At the same time, a guerrilla leader said rebel forces have initiated their "general offensive" against the U.S.-backed ruling junta.

William Ludlow, 35, was found dead in his car late Sunday in the capital. Authorities said Ludlow, a Salvadoran citizen, was the son of American John Ludlow, now living in Miami.

Ludlow's killing came less than one month after presumed rightist extremists shot to death three American nuns and a U.S. layworker on Dec. 2.

Dollar sags in Tokyo

TOKYO (UPI) — Tokyo currency traders, worried over falling U.S. interest rates, unloaded their unwanted dollars Tuesday, sending the U.S. currency to a 20-month low in heavy trading.

The dollar closed the morning session in Tokyo at 265.50 Japanese yen, the lowest since late March of 1979. Monday's close was 277.85 yen to the dollar.

Opening at 266.25 yen, the currency traded between 265.40 and 266.90. Spot turnover during the morning session amounted to $580 million, while all day Monday, only $568 million changed hands.

Somber words by Waldheim

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — In a somber New Year's message, U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim said Monday 1980 was marked by drift toward suspicion and confrontation, but cautioned against defeatism.

Waldheim, in a prepared statement, said the past was one of tensions and upheavals.

"Instead of progress toward the goals which are urgent for the survival of the world community, we have witnessed a drift toward mutual suspicion and acrimonious confrontation which, with the establishment of the United Nations, the peoples of the world had resolved to abandon," he said.

Waldheim pointed to the "relentless arms race" and the world community's inability to devise a new and more equitable international economic order as "most disquieting features."

The United Nations was "humanity's instrument for global peace, progress and freedom," he said, but "we are now faced by new challenges."

Japan bolsters defense

TOKYO (UPI) — The Japanese government Monday unveiled a 7.5 percent raise in defense spending to more than $11.5 billion in response to Washington's plea for a stronger Japan to counteract the growing Soviet military threat in Asia.

The planned defense outlay was $108 million higher than originally budgeted by Japan's deficit-ridden treasury, but still below the minimum 9.7 percent hike urged by Washington and supported by the Japan Defense Agency.

The increase, part of a $225 billion budget for fiscal 1981 approved by Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki and his cabinet, openly disappointed military officials.

Arabs warn against tilt

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Arab nations friendly to the United States have warned Washington against supplying arms to Iran for its war against Iraq once the American hostages are released, Western diplomats said Monday.

Iranian religious leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini called on his countrymen to accept the burdens imposed on them by the 51-day-old Persian Gulf war, and to have faith in the Iranian leadership.

Western diplomats sources in Beirut said the governments of Kuwait, Qatar, Bahrain, Saudi Arabia and the United Arab Emirates, all friendly toward Washington, told U.S. diplomats stationed in their countries that they don't want to see an American tilt toward Iran in the war with Iraq, if the 52 hostages are released and sanctions lifted.

Nuclear power pushed

BOISE (UPI) — An ad hoc committee of the John Birch Society is circulating petitions in southwestern Idaho, "encouraging nuclear power development in Idaho and the United States."

P.O.W.E.R., which stands for Promote Our Wonderful Energy Resources, has gathered more than 1,000 signatures and hopes to collect tens of thousands, Chairman Stephen Pflino said.

The petitions will be presented to Idaho legislators, Gov. John Evans, the Idaho Public Utility Commission and the state's congressional delegation, Pittino said.

"We want to make a point that the people in Idaho are in favor of nuclear power," he said. "We think if (the petition drive) will have a significant positive impact."

P.O.W.E.R. has only "some six to eight" members, Pittino said, but "we're representing a majority" — those in favor of nuclear power.

Almanac

By United Press International

Today is Tuesday, Dec. 30, the 365th day of 1980 with one to follow.

The moon is moving toward its new phase.

The morning stars are Mercury, Venus, Jupiter and Saturn.

The evening star is Mars.

Those born on this date are under the sign of Capricorn.

British novelist Rudyard Kipling was born Dec. 30, 1865.

On this day in history:

In 1853, the United States bought some 45,000 square miles of land south of the Gila River from Mexico for $10 million. It now is the southern areas of, Arizona and New Mexico.

In 1903, a total of 622 people died when fire swept through the Iroquois Theater in Chicago.

In 1944, the Allies began a counter-offensive against the Germans in the Ardennes sector and troops of the U.S. 3rd Army relieved the hard-pressed 101st Airborne Division at Bastogne, Belgium.

In 1972, President Nixon ordered a halt on the bombing of Hanoi and Haiphong and announced secret North Vietnamese peace talks would be resumed in Paris on Jan. 8.

A thought for the day: British novelist George Eliot said, "Blessed is the man who, with nothing to say, abstains from giving in words evidence of that fact."

Judge rules vets may join Agent Orange suit

WESTBURY, N.Y. (UPI) — A federal judge ruled Monday that Vietnam veterans may join in a class action suit in their quest for damages allegedly suffered from exposure to the chemical defoliant Agent Orange used during the Southeast Asia war.

U.S. District Judge George Pratt also ruled that the federal government is immune from any liability in the case. He said 19 chemical companies may be liable for damages but the issue will have to be determined by a trial.

About 1,000 U.S. veterans and about 1,500 Australian veterans are said to have suffered from cancer, liver damage, skin diseases and other ailments from exposure in Vietnam to dioxin, a chemical ingredient of Agent Orange.

The veterans also charge that children born to their wives after the men left the service incurred birth defects from the substance.

In a 90-page decision, Pratt said a class action suit is "appropriate" and "superior to any other available method for the fair and efficient adjudication of this controversy."

The judge ruled the veterans could not bring an action against the U.S. government for damages because any such injuries were "incidental to military service."

Pratt added that the decision is equally applicable to the claims of widows and wives, children of veterans and the Australian veterans.

Pratt rejected a motion by the 19 chemical companies that they be declared immune from liability on the ground they were "government contractors."

Worker checks damage to front end of train after crash

86 riders injured as train hits wall

NEW YORK (UPI) — A commuter train carrying 800 rush-hour passengers overshot its platform Monday and crashed into a brick wall at a Staten Island station.

Police said 86 people were injured in the morning rush hour accident.

Hours later, a train without passengers derailed on the same line.

There were no injuries in the later derailment that occurred in a tunnel near the St. George Ferry Terminal, where commuters board boats to Manhattan. The cause of the 4:05 p.m. MST accident, which caused a temporary shutdown of the line, was not immediately known.

Authorities said 55 of the injured in the earlier accident were taken to Staten Island hospitals for treatment. Six were admitted with back, neck and leg injuries and 31 others were treated at the scene.

"People were all shook up," said passenger Stephanie Pomposell, 18, who suffered a whiplash injury. "Older people were crying all over the place."

"It was really scary," said Fran Raissis, 19.

Although no immediate cause was determined, motorman Vincent Yorks, who had a good record in seven years on the job, was suspended following the accident — in accordance with rules accepted by his union — pending a hearing to determine whether he was responsible.

Medical officials said 55 of the victims were taken to three hospitals for treatment and eight were admitted with back, neck and leg injuries. Thirty-one others were treated at the scene.

The accident occurred at 6:03 a.m. as a four-car Staten Island Rapid Transit train was pulling into the St. George Ferry Terminal, where commuters catch the Staten Island ferry to Manhattan.

The train hit a brick retaining wall and the impact threw passengers forward into seats or windows. Some fell on top of each other.

The cause of the crash was not determined.

Nevada court rejects Hughes estate claims

CARSON CITY, Nev. (UPI) — The Nevada Supreme Court Monday rejected claims by the Howard Hughes Medical Institute that it was the beneficiary of the reclusive's financial empire.

The decision could mark the settlement of the last major challenge to the estimated $800 million estate, thereby paving the way for court action in Las Vegas to distribute the money and holdings to Hughes' relatives.

"As far as Nevada is concerned, the relatives take the estate," Peter Echeverria, a Reno attorney representing the first cousins and other distant relatives of Hughes, said.

However, he said there was litigation pending in Texas on the will of Hughes, who died in 1976. "I don't know how this will affect that," he said.

Several million dollars was spent to find the so-called "lost will," Echeverria said hundreds of depositions were taken from every girl friend, legal secretary and acquaintance of Hughes to track down reports about a will which was made out to the medical institute but then lost.

"Hughes did a lot of talking about a will, but he never faced up to the moment of truth when he sat down before two witnesses and signed anything," Echeverria said.

This was the second claim pressed against the Hughes estate. A jury in Las Vegas ruled three years ago that a will found in the Mormon Church in Salt Lake City was a forgery. It would have left portions of the estate to aides, the church, educational facilities and to Utah truck driver Melvin Dumat.

In a second case, a District Court in Las Vegas granted a summary judgment against the non-profit medical institute, based in Florida, because it failed to produce the two witnesses required by Nevada law who could swear they had seen the so-called "lost will" and knew its contents.

But Nevada law requires two credible witnesses to prove a lost will was in existence at the time of Hughes' death.

Editorials

Tax the truckers fairly

Idaho needs a better system for taxing truckers. The ton-mile tax is unworkable and unfair. It raises more money from the trucking industry for highway construction and maintenance than the fuel tax or registration fees. But it is full of faults. It depends on the trucker truthfully reporting how many miles he traveled in Idaho. Some deliberately under-report to cheat on their taxes, and the state lacks the manpower to audit most all but the bigger firms. An investigation last year by the Lewiston Morning Tribune estimated the state has lost millions of dollars and found inadequate enforcement. The Idaho Motor Transport Association, representing 300 members, is working toward a repeal of the tax, possibly in the 1982 Legislature. Director Claude Abel says reports of dishonest truckers give the industry a bad name and increases in the ton-mile tax, which have not occurred since 1956, would be unfair to those who do pay. It makes sense to change to a workable, enforceable system that would be fair to honest truckers, the state and the taxpayers. Many states have abandoned ton-mile taxes. If Idaho joined them, it would have to rely more on fuel and registration revenues. But it would eliminate enforcement problems, costly audits and paperwork. The state would still have to keep its motor fuel taxes near the same level as surrounding states to stay competitive.

From election challenge to elections

The Times-News concurs in the advice of Boise political columnist John Corlett to the Idaho Legislature about the Peavey challenge. In writing about the contest of John Peavey's election, Corlett noted that the lack of evidence of voter fraud suggests the state Senate should dismiss the challenge without further ado. The Legislature could spend its time more fruitfully in some rewriting of the election laws, he advised. "The Blaine County experience should provide an incentive to make changes either in the residency or registration requirements, or both," he wrote. Since, Peavey, a Carey Democrat, was elected by 54 votes over a Republican opponent in District 21, potential problems have been spotlighted. Idaho is one of the five most lenient states in the country in its voting laws, according to Corlett. The leniency is in the short period of time between the cut-off of registration and the election — only five days — combined with no requirement on length of residency. Idaho and other states once required a six-month residency, but the U.S. Supreme Court struck down such lengthy terms. Many states reduced theirs to 30 days, but Idaho allows same-day registration. County clerks have little time to prepare their poll books. Idaho could either designate a term of residency or stop registration earlier, which would accomplish the same thing.

Can't afford not to move INEL

Editor, Times-News: Thirty years ago, the "Decision Makers" reflected the "intelligence" of the times — solve the problem, if something was wrong, by digging a hole and putting the something into the hole, and all would be well. Dig a hole and cover it up; pour it down the well; dump it into the river or the ocean. Out of sight, out of mind was the motto. Dump it out in the desert, outside of town. Dump it in the states with low-density population. Thirty years later, I attend a meeting on the INEL and the water situation, and the "Decision Makers" are reflecting the "intelligence" of these times — solve the problem by making more holes to pour the stuff into, as it comes into Idaho on a daily basis, and then dig more wells to monitor what kinds of radioactivity are spreading into the Snake River Aquifer. Tax those who are sending in the "stuff." Of course, the stuff is coming from National Defense areas — so who's being taxed? This whole approach sounds a lot like the attitude we have about sugar and diabetes. Knowing that overwhelming consumption of sugar will inevitably cause diabetes, we continue to consume it in everything we eat — only now we take daily urine tests until we find the diabetes we've been waiting for all along. A "self-fulfilling prophecy," isn't that what it's called? Only we are not talking about diabetes. We are talking about continuing the activities of the INEL, until our testing confirms what we bought as our destiny. We no longer raise trout, potatoes, beans, beets, children, flowers, trees, or anything else. With contaminated water we've ceased to be. Intelligence isn't what you know, it's what you do when you don't know what to do! We have a country that is determined to build hundreds more hydrogen bombs and a 20,000 acre MX missile system to protect itself while it is steadily destroying the life-blood — its water systems. Why is everyone pretending that our destiny is to simply monitor the existing dangerous flow of radioactive wastes now penetrating the Snake River Aquifer? We were told by the USGS representative that "it is all a point of view." "Some feel the INEL is the worst thing that ever

Walter tells us the truth

MELBOURNE, Fla. — Exactly one week before Christmas, the Last Love and I were plodding slowly down the intracoastal waterway seeking, and finding, some warmth. The Last Love, it should be mentioned, is a slow boat and a wife. The wife, who is much faster, is not content with our pace on the Last Love and had moved on ahead. Besides, as the song goes, she has a lover of her own. My wife loves Walter Cronkite. No matter what muse sits upon my shoulder as I write, no matter how much research has gone into a column or how nicely the words flow, she can take it or leave it. She can't leave Walter Cronkite. There are a couple of things I know more about than Walter Cronkite does: Congress, where I labored for 18 years, for one; and where little-neck clams and beach plums hide under the waters and along the shores of Peconic Bay, for another. The wife is unimpressed. If a very knowledgeable columnist writes that it has been a sorry Congress and Walter Cronkite says it has been a very productive Congress, you know whom she's going to believe. At a certain time in the evening, five days a week, she demands control of the tube. "And now," she says with finality, "the truth." And on comes Walter. Walter Cronkite came to mind yesterday, as the Last Love ambled past the largest building in the world, the monstrous NASA structure where our space vehicles are assembled. He led our family into the space age. Shorty Powers may have been the voice of Mission Control in those exciting years, but Walter Cronkite's was the voice that introduced him. Walter sat up with us all night when a giant smog taken for mankind, as it was only natural that he would come to mind as the NASA building disappeared into the haze over the stern. Last night, at a dock in this blooming Sun Belt city (where the dockmaster announced proudly that one new family moves in every six hours), there was Walter again. The voice was a little hoarse, as though it had been working too long and too hard, but the sounds that it made surely did sound like the truth. He talked about the perils of Chrysler, and the possibility of its rapid demise. He talked of a prime rate at a record high of 21 percent and the possibility of economic collapse. He talked of messages between Iran and the United States, carried by Algerians. When it was all over, even after he had told us that that was the way it was, he reminded us that it was the 40th day that 50 American diploma-employees, one American embassy and a nation had been held hostage. My wife loves Walter Cronkite, and of course I'm jealous. Every writer who wishes more people read him, or speaker who wishes more people listened to his voice, is jealous. We seize upon little lights of gossip — that he is occasionally less than cooperative with his associates, or is imperious with his underlings. The wife is indifferent to such pny evidences of mortality. Why should an emperor not be a little imperious? Walter Cronkite tells her the truth. When there is a rumor that he and my wife are going to stop meeting soon. If there is any truth in it, it won't be because she has tired of him. On balance, despite the jealousy, I'm sorry their affair is ending. When there are several stories to choose from on any given day, he leads off with the one that will mean the most next week, next month, next year. He ends up, stubbornly, reminding us of something we perhaps would rather forget — the hostages. Now there is talk that they will be home for Christmas. There was the same talk last Election Day, last Easter, last Christmas. Whenever they come, my wife will thank Walter Cronkite for having helped. I will be jealous, but not so jealous I wouldn't love to hear his hoarse voice welcoming them home. Merry Christmas, Walter — and thanks for so much truth over so many years.

Take a card, any card

"Is this Mr. Erek Gerende?" "Speaking." "This is Mr. Barkle of the Visa card company." "Happy New Year." "That is not what I'm calling about. We notice that you have $2,340 in charges and we haven't heard from you." "I didn't know I was supposed to call." "You weren't supposed to call. You were supposed to send us a check." "I would have, but it would only bounce and then you people would have gotten mad at me." "You mean you don't have $2,340?" "Who does; except the Hunt brothers?" "I'm not in a joking mood, Mr. Gerende. We need the $2,340." "Well, you better call somebody else because I don't have it." "Why did you use our Visa card if you didn't have the funds?" "I didn't intend to. But every time I went into a store before Christmas, the person behind the counter said, 'We'll take either Visa, MasterCard or American Express.' I figured you people needed the business so I gave everyone my Visa card." "We sent you that Visa card on the understanding that you would pay us back for the things you charged on it." "Well, that's the way you feel about it, I'll send the card back to you. I don't want to do business with any company where I'm not welcome." "You don't have to do that. We've canceled your Visa card already. If you pay us back the $2,340 we will be happy to reinstate you." "For $2,340 I could join the Burning Tree Country Club. Look, if I had the money I'd send it to you. But I'm a little strapped now, what with Christmas and everything." "Well, yes, I did." "A lot of stuff for the kids and two airline tickets for my parents to visit us over the holidays." "Have they used the tickets both ways?" "Yeah, they went home last night. They had a great time." "Mr. Gerende, this is going to look very bad to the computer. The computer gets very angry when one of our members fails to pay his bills." "What does it do?" "It tells other computers all over America that you refused to pay your Visa obligations." "That's a rotten thing to do." "Do you know what you are now, Mr. Gerende, in the memory of every computer in this country?" "No, what am I?" "A deadbeat." "Nobody's perfect." "We want our money, Mr. Gerende, and we want it now." "Okay, if you feel that way about it. Do you people take American Express credit cards?"

To bribe, or not to bribe, the building inspector he said, they had a conversation that went something like this: Inspector: "You've got violations." Al: "Yeah, but I haven't had the percent better than when I got it." Inspector: "Maybe so, but you've still got violations." Al: "I know, but this kind of work takes time." Inspector: "OK. Maybe I can help you." Al: "In what way?" Inspector: "Give me $400 and I won't write it up." Al: "That's a lot of money." Inspector: "It's better than spending thousands of dollars on permits and everything if I have to put these violations through." Al: "I don't have $400 right now. We just got back from vacation." Inspector: "I'll give you until tomorrow. I'll call you tomorrow night and you should let me know if we have a deal." Al: "You'll call you?" Inspector: "No. I don't take calls like this at my office. They might be monitoring the phone."

After the inspector left, Al and his wife, Rachel, who heard part of the conversation, talked about it. And Al got mad. He works hard for his money. Buying the house wasn't easy. Fixing it isn't easy. And $400 doesn't come easy. On the other hand, they didn't want the Building Department coming down on them with both feet and demanding needless improvements they can't afford right now. So they asked me for an opinion. Since I've written about the Building Department and its money-grubbing ways in the past, and we discussed several possible courses of action. Do you want to pay the $400? I asked. "No," said Al. "Why should I give $400? That's $400 I can put into improving the house. He was driving a brand new car. Why should I help pay for his car?" Do you want to blow the whistle on him? Call the authorities? "What will happen if we do?" Rachel asked. Then maybe a trap can be set up. You arrange to meet him somewhere to give him the money. Investigators will be hiding nearby. When the money is handed over, he will be arrested. Then there will be a grand jury investigation. Maybe he'll be indicted. If he is, he will stand trial. Then his lawyer will probably find some minor loophole and he will be acquitted. "Will we have to testify?" "Yes. You'll have to go to court. Probably many times, since there are usually loads of continuances. "We don't want to go through all that." "I don't blame you." "Can't we just call the police and have him arrested?"

Sorry, but the only interest the Chicago Police Department has ever taken in public corruption is as a participant. "What will happen if we pay?" "Then you'll probably have a brief period of tranquility until another inspector shows up with his head out. Remember, the Building Department has the longest, most consistent record of corruption of any unit in city government. Not rain nor sleet nor snow deters them from going out and hauling a back. "And if we don't pay?" "That's the question. The Building Department can be vindictive. And if it decides to land on you with both feet, you might as well knock your house down and start over. It's as if the building code was designed to give the inspectors unlimited grafting powers over property owners. There are no easy answers in Chicago. Only easy money. "But I'd offer to please the inspector and ask him only be as hasty as a hard-working carpenter." "Did you inspect that building?" I said, giving him the address. He paused for a few seconds and said, "Uh, yes, I did." "Well, the owners say that you wanted $400 from them." "They said THAT?" "That's right." "But why would I do that?" "Why? As a payoff. So you wouldn't turn in the violations." He sounded as sincere as a Boy Scout. "Oh, no. I wouldn't do something like that." "You mean you didn't ask them for $400?" "No sir! All I told them was that they had violations and they would have to come here and have it straightened out." "You didn't talk to them about money?" He sounded as if he had not heard the word money before. "Oh, no. There was no discussion of anything like THAT." "That's nice. Keep up the good work." "So that's the way it stands. Al and Rachel have decided not to pay. They'll take their chances. And if the Building Department decides to swarm over their house, counting every nail and making ridiculous demands, we'll have a report out." "There's no reason why our scrutiny should bother the department. After all, the inspector says he didn't ask for a nickel. And if you can't believe a building inspector, who can you believe?"

Influence of senator, wife growing

By PHIL SWANN

Analysis

SEN. ROBERT DOLE
...in with Reagan,

WASHINGTON — In one short swoop, Sen. Robert Dole and his wife Elizabeth showed Washington they will have enormous influence in the White House and Congress.

On Saturday, Reagan named Mrs. Dole — a former Federal Trade Commissioner — as his assistant for public liaison, a politically oriented position which is used to drum up support for the president's programs.

On Tuesday, President-elect Ronald Reagan said his choice for agriculture secretary was John R. Block, who was vigorously supported by Dole. "The Dole name pops up every place you go," a Reagan transition team member says laughing.

It may appear the Doles are seeking to corner the market on influence. But Mrs. Dole said they are not consciously forming a new Washington power bloc.

"This is simply the continuation of the two career family," Mrs. Dole said. "Our careers just happen to be in the same field."

Dole refused to comment but an aide to the senator said: "The Doles have been able to separate their careers. They do not agree on everything."

Mrs. Dole had been under consideration for the secretary of education post, but she is "very excited" about the White House public liaison job.

"This will be a wonderful challenge," Mrs. Dole said. "I will try to provide the administration with a public consensus on important issues."

Mrs. Dole said she will report to White House chief of staff James Baker but will have direct access to Reagan.

The Doles were married in 1975. This is not the first time Washington has seen a husband and wife capture high government positions. President Carter named Peter Bourne and his wife Mary King to administration posts in 1977.

Bourne, the president's drug advisor, resigned in 1978 after he was accused of falsely prescribing valium to a White House secretary. King, director of ACTION, has stayed on.

Washington observers are already speculating about the potential pitfalls of the Dole family arraignment.

Lawmen move against death penalty revival

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A group of law enforcement officers Monday announced the formation of a national organization to work against the death penalty, despite "vengeful calls" for its restoration.

Terry Knopf, spokesman for Law Enforcement Against Death, read a statement at a news conference by the organization's president, John J. Buckley, sheriff of Middlesex County, Mass., and Hubert Williams, police director of the Newark police department and the organization's vice president.

"We wish to express our strong opposition to the use of the death penalty which amounts for a fraudulent hoax on the American people — pandering to our baser instincts, while perpetuating the myth that capital punishment is a cure-all for crime," the statement said.

Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., the new chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, has already pledged to seek a death penalty law. And, the Supreme Court can be found in President-elect Ronald Reagan's position on the issue. A man who desires the least amount of federal intrusion into our lives would grant the government the ultimate power to take a human life," they said.

Revenue sharing extended

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter signed the last batch of bills from the 96th Congress Monday.

The list includes a three-year extension of the revenue sharing program, under which states and local governments get federal funds with no strings attached.

Carter vetoed two bills involving a Kansas City veteran and the Alaska Railroad.

The revenue sharing legislation, adopted in the final days of the 96th Congress, provides for $4.6 billion for local revenue sharing during the current fiscal year and $2.9 billion for each of the next two fiscal years for both local and state governments.

But the measure provides that states, beginning in fiscal year 1982, will have to choose between revenue sharing and a like amount of federal categorical grants. They cannot receive both.

Another measure Carter signed seeks to prevent kidnapping of children by parents who do not have custody by requiring every state to enforce the child custody determinations made by courts of another state.

The same bill provides Medicare coverage for immunization against pneumococcal pneumonia.

Carter vetoed a non-controversial bill dealing with certain National Forest System lands.

In a "memorandum of disapproval," Carter said an amendment attached to the bill would have required the secretary of transportation to issue regulations for rental of the Alaska Railroad's lands under terms that would result in a loss of revenue.

He said it would further delay the railroad's effort to raise its lease land rents to fair market value and lock into law practices that have been criticized by the General Accounting Office and the Transportation Department.

Carter also vetoed a bill to provide $104,500 for Isaac Hulver, a Kansas City, Mo., World War II veteran, on the grounds it would give preferential treatment to him. The sum represented payment for injuries resulting from alleged negligence at a Veterans Administration hospital.

"I am not unmindful of the significant contributions made by Mr. Hulver to his country in wartime, or the seriousness of his injuries, for which service connected disability compensation has been awarded since his discharge from the armed forces in World War II," Carter said. "These considerations do not justify preferential treatment in this case."

Carter also signed several measures affecting national forests, parks and national historic sites and one that authorizes the Foreign Claims Settlement Commission to begin processing claims for losses by U.S. nationals against Vietnam.

President feels better, taking walks

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter was reported feeling much better Monday and no longer in pain from his broken collar bone as he took long walks around Camp David with his wife Rosalynn.

Deputy press secretary Rex Granum quoted Rear Adm. William Lukash, the president's physician, as saying Carter had not suffered pain since Sunday, was no longer taking medication, was feeling much better and had taken several walks.

The broken collarbone won't keep Carter from attending the Sugar Bowl on New Year's Day and he was well enough to host some Algerian officials on Sunday.

The president fractured his left collarbone Saturday when he took a tumble cross-country skiing near his Camp David vacation home.

Gala for gorilla turning 50 expected to outdo all others

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Massa, oldest gorilla in captivity, turns 50 today. Officials hope the aging primate has kicked the habit of tossing his birthday cake at the guests...

MASSA ...likes gumdrops birthday card will decorate his cage. As a younger gorilla, Massa was fond of throwing his cake at his birthday guests...

adopted by natives who killed his mother during a raid on village crops. He was sold to a sea captain, who then sold him to Gertrude Lintz of Brooklyn, N.Y.

Mrs. Lintz brought up Massa, along with the famed circus gorilla Gargantua, until Massa was 5. A trim 100-pounder at the time, he once attacked Mrs. Lintz when she startled him.

"I would say there's some deprecation in his locomotion," Maloney said. "His graying. He doesn't have the momentum for banging around the cage like he used to."

At first, zoo officials thought Massa was a female and tried to mate him with another male gorilla named Bamboo.

"It's very hard to sex gorillas," said zoo spokeswoman Jeanne Segal. "Sometimes you go quite a few years without knowing whether they're male or female."

Bamboo and Massa fought, and it was discovered they were both males. Maloney attributes Massa's longevity in part to his diet.

WOMAN OF THE YEAR

Ronald Reagan may be Time magazine's Man of 1980, but the stars say 1981 belongs to British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher. Old Moore's Almanack, first published in the 1690s, says "the epochal conjunction" of Jupiter and Saturn in Libra, coinciding with Mrs. Thatcher's Mars in Libra, makes this one of the "rare moments in history when one man or woman can, almost alone, shape the future of a nation. Now is such a moment, Margaret Thatcher is such a woman."

BUTLER'S COLLEGE

Butlers are a status symbol, like a Rolls Royce. So says Iver Spencer, who just opened in London what he claims is the world's first school for butlers. "There's a huge demand for English butlers in Japan and the United States," Spencer said. The school is free but graduates must sign up with Spencer's employment agency. Butlers, he says, must boast style, competence, discipline ("The upper lip must never quiver") and discretion. "See all, say nothing."

Johnny Carson will emcee and performers include Hope and Sinatra, Jimmy Stewart, Charlton Heston, Ethel Merman, Rich Little, Dean Martin, Mel Tillis, Debby Boone, Charley Pride and assorted Osmonds. Hope's inaugural credits include galas for President Harry Truman, Dwight Eisenhower and Richard Nixon, and the Electoral College dinner for Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Police call tale about jump hoax

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — A man dressed as Santa Claus claims he parachuted onto the top of the Gateway Arch and then used the same chute to jump safely to the ground, but police believe the report is a hoax.

KTVI-TV reported the man, who was not identified, claimed he performed the stunt early Saturday as a tribute to a man who died attempting to perform the same feat last month.

But a police spokesman said Sunday officers did not receive any calls about the reported jump until after the television newscast.

A spokesman for the Federal Aviation Administration said officials had received two reports of the jump but that both were phrased in identical terms and were not convincing.

Assembly review of oyster possible

NEW YORK (UPI) — Dusting off one of the skeletons in its closet, the New York State Assembly soon may review the controversial case of William Sulzer, the only New York State governor to be impeached.

Sixty-seven years later, the case of the alleged victim of Tammany Hall politics was resurrected Monday by two New Yorkers intrigued with the murky proceedings against Sulzer.

State Assemblyman Maurice Hinchey said he is introducing a bill calling for a review of the 1913 impeachment, after talking with Sidney Siller, president of the New York Criminal and Civil Courts Bar Association.

"This was an injustice done to a great man," said Hinchey. "It's a blemish on the recent history of the state, and we want to set the record straight."

After poring over yellowed documents, Siller and Hinchey concluded the charges against Sulzer were trumped-up, and the impeachment proceeding was illegal.

"He failed to bend to the will of the Tammany bosses," said Hinchey at a news conference. "He was bold enough to say his only master was the electorate. So the political bosses buried him."

The popular Democratic politician — who won by the largest plurality of any governor — was a potential presidential contender, Siller said. And Tammany Hall was determined to get its man, Alfred Smith, into the White House.

Sulzer was impeached on grounds he was misappropriating campaign funds. But Siller contends there was no system for reporting contributions then.

Worse than that, Siller said, the impeachment vote was called after the legislature had adjourned, and 26 members of Sulzer never were notified of the special session. Some Sulzer supporters even were arrested and removed from the floor during the vote, he said.

"There was a lot of arm-twisting on the floor to get rid of Sulzer," Siller said. "Even so, the two-thirds needed for an impeachment vote just passed by a narrow margin — 79 out of 150 votes."

But the state assembly did permit Sulzer to stand for public office again. The next month, in a slap to Tammany Hall, Sulzer was overwhelmingly elected to the state assembly.

More ambitious, the dapper politician a year later tried to regain the governor's seat. But with the political machine against him, he lost, then failed again in a bid for the presidency on the Prohibition ticket. He retired from politics in 1920, and maintained a law practice in Manhattan until his death in 1941 at age 78.

Keeping job concerns police chief, age 20

DAISETTA, Texas (UPI) — Stardom and fortune could be in the future of a 20-year-old police chief, but he's more concerned about keeping his job.

Jimmy L. Belt, the youngest police chief ever appointed in the state and perhaps the nation, has been shoved into the national limelight with movie offers to do his life story. But Belt says he doesn't want the attention to get in the way of his job.

"It's getting out of hand, though, and I'm afraid it may start to interfere with my job," he said.

He has had invitations from talk shows, such as Johnny Carson and Real People, and has been a guest on radio talk programs. There's also fan mail from all over the country, he says, and 75 percent is from admiring females.

The whole experience is just mind-blowing," Belt says. Belt was appointed by the City Council two years ago to run the one-man police operation for Daisetta, a town of 2,000 people. The pay at that time was only $400 a month, and council members knew they would have problems attracting seasoned, professional lawman for the job.

Belt was hired despite his lack of experience and law enforcement certification. He has received a raise, and has almost doubled his monthly salary.

The three movie companies who want to publicize his life in the small, Texas city are expected to send representatives next month. But Belt says he's concerned the whole story won't be told and his job could be jeopardized.

"I have to live here after it's all said and done," he said. "It's been wild. But I'm not going to go to my head."

Girl's life depends on hose, oxygen tank

COLUMBUS, Ohio (UPI) — Corrinne Gray, 2, can fingerprint and babble to her parents, but her life is confined to a plastic hose connected to an oxygen supply.

Corrinne, the daughter of Dan and Rebecca Gray of suburban Worthington, was born three months premature, when Mrs. Gray's body stopped filtering waste materials. She weighed only two pounds and her lungs were very weak and damaged.

The first year of her life was spent in the intensive care unit at Children's Hospital and she came home a year ago.

She now depends on special oxygen supply, which she breathes through a tracheal tube inserted in her throat. The oxygen comes through a machine that takes room air and boosts the oxygen content. Corrinne can move around the house, but must be hooked up to a portable oxygen supply.

Since coming home, the 2-year-old has made progress, relying on tower concentrations of oxygen, and her parents hope she will be able to shed the sophisticated breathing machine in a year.

"We feel the Lord has been supporting us through this," Gray said. "He wanted her to live and we're doing all we can. Even if death comes we know we will be with her again."

Mrs. Gray said, "It's hard, and we won't say it's not, but we have the blessing of a daughter and that is enough."

What's what

Well-intentioned ideas might not help much

Not much is as baffling now as this ragged crime in the street. And what the people, like bankers, do to fight it is wishfully well-intentioned, but sad. It's almost like a whimper. In New York City, the Bowery Savings bank is giving away 300,000 police whistles. In Miami, the Lincoln Savings bank is handing out to certain depositors aerosol spray cans of Mace-type repellent.

Some words deserve no place in quick clean communication, says our Language man, and he is proud to announce he has learned how to live without "subtle," "whopping" and "mind-boggling."

More than 3,000 men have joined the League of Women Voters. Ham's helped much, though. The League's membership has fallen from 150,000 in 1972 to 120,000 now.

INSPIRATION

Foremost on that lengthy list of small notions that can be inspirational in troubled times is the simple declaration: "Today is the first day of the rest of my life." Am told it is particularly useful right after the breakup of a romance, or the loss of a job, or the filing of bankruptcy. But also on that list is a small notion that comes in handy when you're worried about your health. Based on the statistics about fatalities within 24 hours of birth, it is: "I've already survived the most dangerous day of my life."

Five professional athletes ran for public office in recent times, and won. Bob Mathias, Venegar Mitchell, Bill Bradley, Jack Kemp and Ralph Abnerall. Five professional novelists ran for public office in recent times, and lost. Gore Vidal, Bill Buckley, Norman Mailer, James Michener and Jimmy Breslin.

BLUE JEANS

Twenty-one out of every 100 people in this country tell pollsters they wouldn't go for the idea of a U.S. President wearing blue jeans in the Oval Office. This does not mean anything that 79 out of 100 think it's a good notion, but something like that is implied. Assuming you care more than L. what's your stand on this matter?

The people who live in apartments today move three times as often as the people who lived in apartments 25 years ago.

Food flavoring causes rodent cancers

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A synthetic additive used since the 1940s as an imitation grape or cherry flavoring for a variety of foods has been found to cause cancer in mice and rats, the National Cancer Institute reported Monday.

The institute's toxicology studies showed that large doses of cinnamyl anthranilate caused liver cancers in mice of both sexes and both kidney and pancreatic cancers in male rats.

Cinnamyl anthranilate has been used in beverages, ice cream, candy, baked goods, gelatins, puddings and chewing gums. The chemical also is used as a fragrance in soaps, detergents, creams, lotions and perfumes.

The Food and Drug Administration, which does not carry the compound on its list of additives generally recognized as safe, received the report last month and a spokesman said it is now being evaluated for possible action.

Institute said chemicals found to be able to cause cancer in laboratory animals "are generally considered capable of causing cancer in humans."

Cinnamyl anthranilate was selected for study by the institute's chemical testing project because earlier animal studies showed the chemical was associated with an increased occurrence of lung tumors in mice and because the compound is extensively used in food products.

The maximum amount of cinnamyl anthranilate allowed in foods ranges from 1.7 to 730 parts per million. The animal studies tested the compound at two dosage levels — 30,000 and 15,000 parts per million. In the mice receiving the higher dose, cancers were found in 79 percent of the males and 67 percent of the females. For the lower dose group, tumors occurred in 60 percent of the males and 41 percent of the females.

In male rats, cancer occurred in 8 percent of those receiving the higher doses and in 67 percent of those receiving the lower dose.

Judge's illness delays Abscam trial

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Abscam trial of Rep. Richard Kelly, R-Fla., and two co-defendants was postponed Monday because presiding Judge William Bryant is recuperating from the flu.

A spokesman for the judge said the trial, recessed a week ago, will be delayed until at least Friday because Bryant is recovering from influenza.

The trial in U.S. District Court was recessed last Monday, a day earlier than planned for the Christmas holiday, because Bryant was ill.

Don't snitch to spouse

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
Universal Press Syndicate

suspected a thing if my friend hadn't opened her big mouth!

I changed from a happy, loving wife and mother to a miserable, nagging shrew. Our home, once filled with love, was filled with hostility and noisy fights.

My husband went to an early grave, a sick and sorry man, begging me to forgive him. I'm now 65 and alone, and regret being such a fool over something that would probably have blown over in time.

My best friend may have thought she was doing me a favor, but she ruined my life.

told her it was all over between them because he loved his family too much to break up his home.

That's when this unidentified stranger called to "tip me off." She was hoping I'd be hurt and angry and kick my husband out. Then she could move in for the kill. Of course it didn't work.

—STILL MARRIED

DEAR ABBY: This is for TOO LATE IN CLEVELAND, who blamed her friends for not telling her that her husband was having an affair. She said had she known about it, she might have been able to save her marriage.

I had the same experience, but I didn't blame my friends. Had they told me, I never would have believed them. Abby, a man who cheats will also lie, and if I had confronted my husband, I'm sure he'd have lied, and I would have believed him. Then my friends would no longer be my friends.

As it turned out, I found out about it myself. There was nothing to "save," and now that I am rid of my husband, I still have my friends, whose friendship is worth much more to me than a cheating husband.

I'm with you, Abby. Friends should NOT tell!

—HAPPIER WITHOUT HIM

DEAR ABBY: For whatever this is worth, concerning informing the wife that her husband is having an affair:

I got a telephone call from an unidentified stranger (a woman) who told me she thought I should know that my husband was having an affair with a young woman named Sheila.

It's a long story, but here are the facts: My husband had, indeed, become infatuated with a young woman named Sheila. The affair lasted exactly four months. Then Sheila started to pressure him to divorce me and marry her. My husband then regained his senses and

DEAR ABBY: I'm glad someone finally said what I've been thinking. If my husband was having an affair, you'd better believe I'd want to be told.

Why should I go around believing that I'm loved and satisfying his needs? If he's fooling around, I'd want to know about it so I could either get the matter straightened out or act out while I was still young and desirable.

At any rate, Abby, I don't go along with the outdated philosophy of protecting the wife from the truth because she'd be "hurt" if she found out. If she waits for her husband to tell her, she might waste half her life living in a fool's paradise.

DEAR ABBY: You make a valid point, but the mail has been running 3 to 1 against informing the spouse. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: Thanks for advising against telling a wife that her husband is having an affair.

My marriage was beautiful. I was married to a man who treated me like a queen. We had two terrific teenage children. Everything was perfect until my "best friend" told me that my husband was having an affair with a young divorcee who was working for him. I never would have

This year, plan New Year's dinner but keep it cozy affair

ENGLEWOOD CLIFFS, N.J. — Tired of the hustle, bustle and planning involved with inviting a group of friends over to help celebrate New Year's Eve?

Even more disturbed by the thought of going out and coping with those inevitable crowds?

This year, plan an intimate evening at home with a cozy dinner for just the two of you. Since it is taken for granted that you want to enjoy the evening and each other, and not spend all night in the kitchen, it is suggested you serve this easy, yet impressive, dinner.

"New Year's Toast for Two" is a delicious dish of stuffed chicken breasts in a spirited flavorful sauce. The chicken breast halves are rolled with a unique combination of chopped green asparagus spears and slices of mellow munster cheese in the center. They can be put together earlier in the day before your party starts. Then, since the sauce takes only minutes to prepare, thanks to the instant cream of chicken flavor soup mix, you are free until the two of you are just about ready to eat. Best of all, the addition of champagne to the sauce adds the touch that will make your other half think you spent hours cooking! While the chicken simmers, prepare the accompanying rice and the remaining asparagus spears.

Serve the meal by candlelight on your finest dishes, along with the remaining chilled champagne. Nothing beats this impressive meal for you and yours to toast in the New Year.

New Year's 'toast' for two easy to prepare but impressive

- NEW YEAR'S 'TOAST' FOR TWO
1 package (10 ounces) asparagus spears, partially thawed
- 1 whole chicken breast (about 1 pound), split, skinned, boned, and pounded
 - 4 slices munster cheese (about 4 ounces)
 - 2 tablespoons butter
 - 2 envelopes instant cream of chicken flavor soup mix
 - 1/2 cup champagne
 - 1/4 cup water.

Hot cooked rice
Chop 1/2 cup asparagus; reserve remaining.

Top each chicken breast with 2 slices cheese and 2 tablespoons chopped asparagus; roll up and secure with wooden toothpicks.

In medium skillet, melt butter and brown chicken; add instant cream of chicken flavor soup mix blended with champagne and water. Simmer covered, basting occasionally, 20 minutes or until chicken is tender. Serve over rice with reserved cooked asparagus spears. Makes 2 servings.

Festive dessert for New Year's Eve

MINNEAPOLIS — A New Year's Eve dinner or buffet calls for a dessert that's as festive as the occasion.

Ring in the new with a special dessert like this Amaretto Pound Cake Torte. The rich batter is made with Betty Crocker's golden pound cake mix flavored with amaretto liqueur. The two layers are split and filled with rich, light frosting that also covers the cake. The torte is sprinkled with sliced almonds for a dessert to tempt anyone. And because you make it a day ahead, you'll have plenty of time to attend to last-minute party details.

AMARETTO POUND CAKE
1 package (7.2 ounces) Betty

Crocker's fluffy white frosting mix

- 1 1/2 cups whipping cream
- 1 package (16 ounces) Betty Crocker golden pound cake mix
- 2 eggs
- 1/2 cup water
- 1/2 cup amaretto liqueur
- 2 tablespoons amaretto liqueur

Sliced almonds
Mix frosting mix (dry) and whipping cream in small bowl. Cover and refrigerate until chilled, at least 2 hours. Heat oven to 325°. Grease and flour 2 round pans, 2x12 1/2 inches. Beat cake mix, eggs, water and 1/2 cup liqueur in large bowl on low speed, scraping bowl constantly, until blended. Beat on medium speed, scraping bowl frequently, 3 minutes.

Pour batter into pans. Bake until wooden pick inserted in center comes out clean, 30 to 35 minutes; cool 10 minutes. Remove from pans; cool cake completely.

Split cake to make 4 layers. Beat frosting mixture until stiff; stir in 2 tablespoons liqueur. Fill each layer with about 1/2 cup of the frosting mixture. Frost side and top of cake with remaining frosting mixture; sprinkle with almonds. Refrigerate at least 24 hours before serving.

High altitude directions (7,500 to 8,500 feet): Heat oven to 350°. Stir 3 tablespoons all purpose flour into cake mix (dry). Increase water to 3/4 cup. Decrease the 1/2 cup amaretto liqueur to 2 tablespoons. Beat frosting mixture until soft peaks form.

Monetary gifts to Boise State University continue to roll in BOISE — Gifts to Boise State University have totaled nearly $1.5 million in the past few months, college officials report.

Latest of the sizeable contributions is a $13,000 gift from the estate of the late Boise arts patron, Elizabeth C. Bowen.

Mrs. Bowen, a former Boise school teacher, principal of Barber School and a piano instructor, died in February 1979. Many of her piano students later attended BSU both as a junior college and state university.

The bequest was established as the Harry S. and Elizabeth C. Bowen scholarship fund. It will be used for students enrolled in music education courses at BSU, said David T. Lambert, director of development at BSU.

A donation announced in November was $1 million given by Idaho Industrialist J.R. Simplot and his wife, Esther.

benefit to the music department, coupled with recent donations for the Morrison Center.

Morrison-Knuudsen donated $250,000 early this month for the proposed Harry W. Morrison Center for the Fine and Performing Arts. The center is scheduled to be built at BSU.

Mao's widow denounces China's leaders as trial closes

PEKING (UPI) — Ending her trial with a dramatic outburst of emotion, Mao Tse-tung's widow denounced China's leaders as "fascists" and "reactionaries" Monday.

She said they "just want my head."

The prosecutor demanded the death penalty for Jiang Qing and the presiding judge all but agreed, although he stopped short of pronouncing the verdict and sentence.

Jiang's tempestuous appearance, the most belligerent of the entire trial, brought to a close the more than one month of hearings into allegations of mass murder, torture, treason and assassination against 10 defendants who virtually ruled the country during the last years of the chaotic 1966-76 Cultural Revolution.

"The facts are clear and the evidence conclusive," said presiding judge Zen Hanzhou.

The cases against the nine other defendants have already been completed and the special panel of 35 judges immediately retired, probably for several days, before delivering sentence. The verdict — guilty — was never in doubt, even from the outset of the trial.

Aware of that, Jiang, 67, taunted the court in what was her final chance to defend herself.

She denounced China's current leadership as "counter-revolutionaries," "revisionists" and "reactionaries." She lashed out at the array of judges and prosecutors and denounced them as "fascists."

When the judge rebuffed her and declared the session ended, Jiang laughed harshly and said, "Hey, you just want my head, is that not it?"

Jiang, the star defendant, and fellow Gang of Four member Zhang Chungqiao, who refused to speak during the trial, were considered the likeliest to receive the death sentence.

The other eight defendants all confessed to crimes and cooperated with the prosecution in an effort to have their sentences reduced to prison terms.

Jiang was defiant throughout the trial but saved her best for last. She repeated her line of defense that all her actions during the Cultural Revolution were known to and approved by Mao.

Henry assures Sadat of U.S. support

Henry Kissinger, Anwar Sadat exchange greetings in Cairo

MIT ABUL-KOM, Egypt (UPI) — Former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, sounding like a Middle East negotiator again, assured Egyptian President Anwar Sadat Monday of the incoming Reagan administration's support.

Kissinger, on a private visit to Egypt, Israel and the Persian Gulf, emphasized he was not acting as a spokesman for the president-elect.

However, he said to assure Sadat "with absolute confidence" that Reagan has "the hope and intention of working out the closest relationship" with Egypt.

Sadat, for his part, said he gave Kissinger several messages to take back to the Reagan Administration. However, Sadat repeated his opposition to Jordan immediately joining the peace talks between Israel and Egypt, which Kissinger had advocated on his arrival Sunday.

Kissinger, who met with Sadat at the Nile village where the Egyptian leader was born, said: "I know that their (the Reagan Administration's) desire for the closest cooperation to speed up the peace process and to work together for stability and progress in this area will be one of their cardinal concerns."

Sadat told a news conference he entrusted Kissinger during a two-hour meeting with "certain messages from the new Administration." He said he hoped the two countries "can step up our cooperation and our relations."

Egypt was the first stop on a tour that will take Kissinger to Israel, Saudi Arabia, Oman and Morocco. He will report his findings to Reagan and to his former deputy, Secretary of State-designate Alexander Haig.

Kissinger praised Sadat's efforts to contain Soviet power in the Middle East, saying it contrasted with the U.S. attitude under President Carter. He said Reagan has a "very clear understanding" of the strategy needed in the area.

Kissinger said the three security problems in the Middle East are Soviet "military pressures," the balance between extremist and moderate countries in the region and the Arab-Israeli conflict.

Anti-Soviet riot breaks out in Kabul

NEW DELHI, India (UPI) — An anti-Soviet demonstrators rioted in the Afghan capital of Kabul Monday and authorities reported the death of an American who diplomats said may have been a newsmen.

A Western diplomat in Kabul reported by telephone that Soviet tanks and troops took over the streets and surrounded the presidential palace as demonstrators gathered to hurl rocks at the downtown Ministry.

The protest was one of a series of street demonstrations marking the first anniversary of the Soviet invasion that began on Christmas Day.

Commando unit frees hostages

TRANI, Italy (UPI) — Helicopter-borne commandos stormed a maximum security prison in a blaze of gunfire and tear gas Monday.

They freed 18 prison guards held hostage by Red Brigades inmates for 25 hours.

All but one of the prison guards were wounded, though none seriously, authorities said. Four members of the hitbert secret anti-terrorist force also were slightly injured.

Ambulances rushed in and out of the prison, ferrying the wounded to nearby hospitals in southern Italy.

The inmate identified as the leader of the rebellion, Red Brigades terrorist-Toni Negri, had been accused of masterminding the 1978 kidnaping and killing of former Premier Aldo Moro.

The lightning raid came after negotiations with the inmates failed to make progress and Premier Arnaldo Forlani authorized the new anti-terrorist force into action for the first time.

Prison officials refused to reveal the inmates' demands. However, judicial sources said the prisoners sought the abolition of all nine maximum security jails and the revocation of a law allowing police to hold terrorist suspects without formal charges.

Taking off in three helicopters from a nearby athletic field, the assault troops dropped to the roof of the prison 195 miles southeast of Rome and blasted away locked doors to rush the wing where the hostages were held.

Police regulars rushed the main prison gates in squad cars and regained control of other wings of the facility.

New Polish labor unrest threatened

WARSAW, Poland (UPI) — Polish Foreign Minister Jozef Czerwinski conferred with union leader Lech Walesa Monday on the eve of a crucial court hearing that could lead to further labor unrest.

A foreign ministry source said Czerwinski, who last week returned from Moscow, met Walesa to discuss "Polish interests abroad."

He did not elaborate but analysts took the remark to mean that Czerwinski made it plain to Walesa that Moscow wants no more strikes in Poland.

Walesa was in Warsaw for today's supreme court hearing of an appeal by "Rural Solidarity," an organization of 1 million private farmers that is seeking recognition as an independent union.

A lower court rejected the group's application, saying the law on free trade unions did not apply to self-employed farmers — only to workers employed by others.

The issue is critical since Poland's 5 million private farmers own 75 percent of the nation's arable land and would represent a formidable force if organized.

More rumblings at Mount St. Helens

VANCOUVER, Wash. (UPI) — Scientists monitored Mount St. Helens closely Monday after distortions observed on the floor of the volcano's steaming crater raised concern that it may be building toward another eruption.

A scientific team landed by helicopter inside the 2-mile-wide crater Sunday to study the unexpected changes, which include widening cracks and tumor-like growths of cooled magma of the red-glowing lava dome in the crater's center.

Geologists hoped to get another look inside the crater Monday, but steam and ground fog obscured the crater floor.

In addition to the deformation around the southern portion of the dome, deformation measurements show significant northward movement of the rampart and notable widening of monitored cracks within the crater floor," the U.S. Geological Survey reported.

Mild earthquake activity within the mountain decreased Monday to the rate of about one an hour after reaching a peak of six an hour Saturday, Christina Boyko of the University of Washington geophysicists department said.

She said the earthquake activity was not similar to that which preceded previous eruptions.

"This is an entirely different animal," she said. "We just don't know what it means. Obviously, the quakes indicate something is going on in the crater, but we don't know what."

Other scientists said the changes could be a warning of another blast or could represent the buildup of a new peak by the volcano, which blew 1,300 feet off its top in a violent eruption May 18.

"It could blow, it could rebuild itself or it could sit there and do nothing," said Phil Cogan, spokesman for the Federal Emergency Management Agency.

Cogan said the football-stadium-sized lava dome had one large new growth and two new "towers" of cooling lava.

One tower reached a height of about 60 feet but it toppled about 3:30 p.m. Sunday, leaving a small base standing, he added.

Scientists believe the deformation is caused by the lava dome exerting great downward pressure on the crater floor, depressing it and pushing molten material upward away from the dome, Cogan explained.

Scientists said the new extrusions glowed "a little brighter" than the rest of the dome, which was created after the most recent eruption Oct. 19, the fifth blast since the volcano awakened from 123 years of dormancy last March.

Cogan said the volcanic pressure created a huge new lake and caused the area immediately around the south part of the lava dome to push upward in an irregular ridge.

Geologists also noticed that cracks in the dome, which radiate from the center like wheel spokes, were getting longer and wider.

Cogan said the geologists felt it was significant that all the changes were occurring on the south side of the crater when the volcano's other eruptions have blown from the north end.

"They believe that if there were to be an explosion, it would be probably toward the south (side of the dome) right now, but it would be contained by the walls of the crater," which are about 2,000 feet high, Cogan said.

70-year-old woman charged in shooting

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A 70-year-old woman accused of killing an aspiring young actor who blocked her driveway with his car was arrested last summer for shooting at a teen-ager who asked her the time, police said Monday.

Police said Kay Marlon Beach was arrested last July for allegedly firing a shot at Edward De Leon, 18, when he stopped on his bicycle in front of her North Hollywood home and asked the time. The charges were eventually dropped.

"The district attorney didn't prosecute so we had to let her go and give her her gun back," Police Officer Victor Farnwood said.

Officer Robert Thomas said, "It all comes down to one thing — the last time the DA and the courts dropped the ball and now someone's dead."

Mrs. Beach, a widow for the last 10 years, was arrested Saturday for shooting and killing David Bell, 22, Clearmont, Fla., during a dispute over the parking of his car. Police said the woman became enraged because Bell parked his car in front of her driveway.

Mrs. Beach, who did not own a car, was sitting on a bus bench when she was arrested about seven hours after the shooting.

Police detective Russ Kuster said Bell parked his late-model Toyota in front of Mrs. Beach's home and he refused to move it when asked by the woman. Bell then walked to a nearby restaurant where he worked, punched in and told other employees he had to run out and move his car.

When Bell returned to his car, Kuster said, he found an excrement smeared over his windshield and roof. Witnesses said he was attempting to get Mrs. Beach's garden hose to wash the windshield when he was shot once in the head with a small-caliber handgun.

Mrs. Beach's friends and neighbors, most of them elderly, said the woman had become upset in recent years over the changes taking place in the neighborhood, which has shifted from predominantly white to large numbers of Mexican-Americans.

"She more than likely was so upset and so aggravated from all these kids tormenting her, she probably just flipped out," said one friend.

Pilot faces federal charges for alleged false statement

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — Barnstorming telephone man Art Brothers went on trial in federal court Monday for allegedly making a false statement when applied for a new pilot's license.

Brothers uses a small plane to make trouble calls to remote ranches and towns served by his Beehive Telephone Co. But his license was revoked after he allegedly violated several Federal Aviation Administration rules.

In opening arguments to the jury, Assistant U.S. Attorney Stewart Walz said Brothers made a false statement on a license application in 1979 when he said he hadn't been involved in any aircraft accidents in the previous two years.

Walz said the evidence in the trial would show that Brothers' plane was struck by a car on a highway near Ticeaboo, Utah, just four months before he applied for the new license.

But Brothers' Attorney John O'Connell said his client answered the question truthfully and in accordance with the lawyer's advice.

O'Connell told the jury the accident near Ticeaboo was technically not an aircraft accident, since it occurred while Brothers was moving the the airplane from one parking place to another.

Man arrested for liquor store threats

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — Charges are pending against a 40-year-old transient who allegedly threatened to kill everyone in a state liquor store last weekend.

Police said Ignatius Lohnes was arrested Saturday on charges he made a terrorist threat at the store, and was carrying a concealed weapon. He was booked into the Salt Lake County Jail.

Store clerk Ray Montoya said the suspect walked into the store about 5 p.m. Saturday, brandished a knife and told patrons, "I'm going to kill all of you."

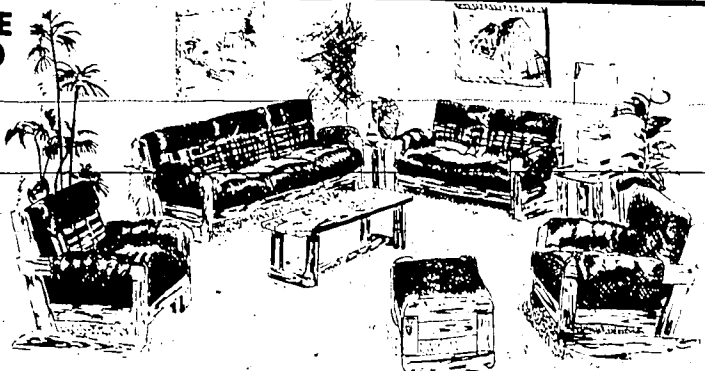

When Montoya told the man he was going to call police, Lohnes reportedly replied, "I'll kill all of them, too."

Lohnes was arrested without incident minutes later.

Pitt romps over SC; in position to be No. 1

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (UPI) — Now all Pitt can do is wait.

The third-ranked Panthers made a bid for their second national championship in five years Monday night by crushing 18th-ranked South Carolina 37-0 in the Gator Bowl behind three touchdowns from quarterback Rick Trocano and fullback Randy McMillan.

Before Pitt can wind up No. 1, top-ranked Georgia and second-ranked Florida State both must lose in their New Year's Day bowls. But that isn't as far-fetched as it sounds because Georgia is an underdog to eighth-ranked Notre Dame in the Sugar Bowl and Florida State an underdog to fourth-ranked Oklahoma in the Orange Bowl.

Pitt had it easier Monday night than anyone had expected. The Panthers were ahead 34-3 late in the third quarter and let its reserves mop up. During those first three periods, Trocano and McMillan — two seniors playing their last college games — provided most of Pitt's offensive fireworks. Trocano, who switched from safety to quarterback earlier in the season when Dan Marino was injured, ran and passed for 196 yards.

"We're very, very happy for our seniors," said Pitt coach Jackie Sherrill, who was thrown into the shower by his players after the game. "They have stuck with us for four years and have been through it all.

"We were amazed to read in the paper that South Carolina didn't think we were ready," said Sherrill. "We had all the respect in the world for South Carolina. Our players were prepared. We controlled the football and put points on the board."

As far as Pitt's chances of becoming No. 1, Sherrill said, "We're the only team left that is still up in there from the start of the season. We are the only one left in the top five. There are still some games to be played, but I feel that we deserve to be right up in there, and if things fall into place, we deserve to be No. 1."

South Carolina coach Jim Carlin said Pitt was "one of the three best teams in the country but I really don't know which is best."

Trocano, a fifth-year quarterback who was a freshman on Pitt's 1976 national championship team, scored the Panthers' first touchdown on a 1-yard sneak four minutes into the game and just three plays after a 13-yard touchdown run by McMillan was erased by a penalty.

McMillan, who went to Pitt two years ago as a transfer student, scored two third-quarter touchdowns — the first on a 3-yard plunge following a 9-yard run by Trocano and the other on a 42-yard screen pass from Trocano.

Pitt's first touchdown was set up by a fumble by Heisman Trophy winner George Rogers, who gained 113 yards in 27 carries Monday night, but did not figure in the Gamecocks' scoring. Pitt recovered that fumble at the South Carolina 29 and took less than four minutes to score. The Panthers, only nine-point favorites, widened their lead to 10-0 late in the first quarter on a 36-yard field goal by Dave Trout and went ahead 17-3 late in the first half on a 3-yard pass from quarterback Dan Marino to Willie Collier.

South Carolina's only first-half points came on a 39-yard field goal by Eddie Leopard midway through the second quarter, but the Gamecocks almost scored a touchdown on the final play of the first half when Willie Scott was brought down at the Pitt 2 after a 52-yard pass play.

The Panthers blew the game open in the third period, soaring to a 34-3 lead with a 26-yard field goal by Trout and McMillan's two touchdowns. They were ahead 37-3 with 5:32 left in the game after Trout kicked his third field goal of the night, a 29-yarder.

South Carolina's only touchdown came with 3:26 left in the game on a 14-yard pass from reserve quarterback Gordon Beckham to Jim Dittusberger. That touchdown was set up when Pat Bowen intercepted a pass at the Pitt 42 and returned it all the way to the 14.

The loss ended South Carolina's season with an 8-4 record.

Ali yields Nevada license

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — Former world heavyweight champion Muhammad Ali was allowed Monday to relinquish his Nevada boxing license, ending his threat to fight the state's revocation of his license all the way to the Supreme Court.

The state Athletic Commission, which refused Ali's request earlier Monday, changed its vote unanimously later in the day.

The decision made it clear that although Ali would never reapply for a boxing license in Nevada, he would still be allowed to become involved in boxing promotions in the state.

All told reporters that he has formed his own promotion company and has signed more than a dozen boxers. He said he may return to Nevada as a boxing promoter.

He said one of his boxers was preparing for a scheduled match in New York's Madison Square Garden.

"As long as they accept me in Madison Square Garden," Ali said, "I'm not worried if they accept in small towns like Las Vegas."

The former champion admitted, however, that he did not have "much more boxing in me."

Ali claimed that he took $2 million out of the bank Monday and directed his attorneys to take the license revocation all the way to the Supreme Court if necessary.

"Just the idea that they would tell me I can't fight," he said. "They ain't gonna retire me... the greatest fighter of all time. I've made more money than any one man and did more for boxing."

St. Fogh, chairman of the Athletic Commission, said he believed the action of the panel was in the best interest of the state and the best interest of boxing.

Sources close to the commission said the board was concerned its action would have a chilling effect in other states and on other Ali fights.

"If Ali were retired in Nevada for his own safety, it would put a lot of pressure on other states not to allow him to fight in view of recent deaths in the ring," said the source. "It could be the end of Ali as a professional boxer."

Shirtless football

Sunny skies and warm temperatures Sunday provided football players with a rare December opportunity to play in jeans, light shirts and even no shirts.

Paul DeWitt was shirtless as he watched Rick Gutknecht, left, attempt to elude Brent Pollard during a game of touch at O'Leary Junior High School. All are members of the youth group of The First Assembly of God Church in Twin Falls. Youth Pastor Kim Kreuger said the group plays football every Sunday.

Demons dominate cage poll

NEW YORK (UPI) — So much for one-point margins.

After falling one point shy of unseating Kentucky for the No. 1 position in UPI's weekly college basketball ratings the past three weeks, the DePaul Blue Demons were a near unanimous choice Monday as the top-rated team in the nation.

Kentucky, which lost 67-61 to Notre Dame on Saturday, dropped to No. 3 while undefeated Oregon State jumped two spots into the No. 2 position following balloting by 38 of the 42 coaches who comprise the UPI Board of Coaches.

DePaul, on the strength of an impressive 93-77 victory over previously unbeaten UCLA on Saturday, received 36 first-place votes to total 568 points. Oregon State, 6-0 after victories over Northwestern and Rhode Island, received one first-place vote and 479 points from the coaching board.

DePaul coach Ray Meyer, who would rather wait until the end of the season before his team hit the top spot, took the news in his usual pessimistic fashion.

"Oh no. Every time we get up there the roof caves in," he said by telephone from San Diego where his team prepared to play Georgetown in the first round of the Cabrillo Classic Monday night. "Maybe the coaches are getting even with us. After our game with Georgetown, though, we may no longer be No. 1."

Georgia hopes to use speed, mobility to defeat Notre Dame

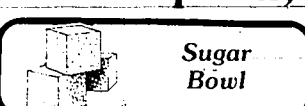

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — Georgia football Coach Vince Dooley said Monday his top-ranked Bulldogs will rely on speed and agility to offset Notre Dame's weight advantage in the New Year's Day Sugar Bowl.

"It would be impossible physically to stand up sort of eyeball to eyeball, to use a coach's term, to the strength of Notre Dame," Dooley said prior to his team's first New Orleans workout. "We'll have to do that to a certain extent, but we'll also have to be mobile."

The Irish outwitted Georgia by 15 pounds a man across the line. A victory against Notre Dame would virtually assure Georgia, the nation's only undefeated and unbeaten major college team, of its first national championship in 87 years.

Georgia started the year ranked 20th, but that was when record-setting freshman Herschel Walker was an unknown. Walker carried for 1,616 yards to break Tony Dorsett's freshman rushing mark and gain All-America honors.

"I always knew he would be good," Dooley said. "I didn't think he would be as good as he is this early."

Dooley said he opposes the freshman eligibility rule, but he said Walker was more mature than most freshmen and able to cope with the athletic, social and academic changes of entering college.

Despite Walker's outstanding season and steady progress by quarterback Buck Belue, Dooley attributed much of Georgia's success to luck.

"We've been a team of good fortune," he said. "I'd also like to say that our team has been a team that takes advantage of good fortune."

The Bulldogs trailed their opponents in first downs, time of possession and number of plays, but they made the plays that counted.

"We have been a big-play team," Dooley said.

Notre Dame Coach Dan Devine, whose eighth-ranked Irish arrived in New Orleans three days before Christmas, said Dooley was using psychological tactics against the Notre Dame players with his hearty praise of their size and strength.

"He sure as h is trying to fool the Notre Dame players," and he's done a heckuva job," Devine said. "I think he's conned our squad."

Devine said most of the older players could easily ignore Dooley's comments, but younger players could be influenced.

Devine refused to disclose whether freshman Blair Kiel would keep his starting quarterback assignment or senior Mike Couruey would return to the first unit for the first time since the third game of the season.

"It really doesn't make any difference except that Georgia has to prepare for two people," Devine said. "If that's a slight advantage to us, we'll keep that to ourselves."

Devine described Walker as one of the most exceptional players he has seen.

"On film he's the best freshman I've ever seen," said Devine, who marveled at his speed.

Asked to compare Walker to Earl Campbell when Campbell played at Texas, Devine said Walker was equally strong but faster and more deceptive.

"He doesn't have such a pace that he looks like he's going fast," Devine said. He said the Irish hope to keep Georgia deep in Bulldog territory because of Rex Robinson's kicking ability, including four field goals of more than 50 yards this season.

"Georgia has the best field goal kicker in the country," Devine said. "They got to the 40-yard line and they're in scoring range."

Devine said even if his team breaks Georgia's winning streak, the Bulldogs still may qualify in his mind as the No. 1 team.

Dallas' idea of 'The Sting' spoils California Super Bowl

By JOHN HALL
© 1980, The Los Angeles Times

Well, storybook endings are still for the storybooks.

There isn't a registered romantic in America who didn't know exactly who was going to play whom in the Super Bowl on Super Sunday Jan. 25 in the New Orleans Superdome.

For the natural of the naturals, it had to be the Rams of Anaheim against the Raiders of Oakland against the maybe Los Angeles. They'd all wear high boots and splash around in all their super glory — with their super muscling and their super garbage flying.

We were going to call it the Dirt Bowl — Hate Bowl — a beautiful assault made anywhere but there.

However, sorry about all that. It's off. Somebody didn't even make it out of Texas. The Rams, as you may have noticed, did that marvelous remake of The Sting with their mild 34-13 nose diving crash Sunday in Irving.

You didn't really think that was Tony Dorsett and Danny White rapping and roaring and riding the Cowboys home, did you? Look closer. Of course, it wasn't. It was Paul Newman and Robert Redford forcing themselves on their way to another academy award.

There may be quite a few other reasons and explanations unloaded along the way for the Dallas ambush, but we go for the most obvious on first down. The Rams were simply victims of the classic con — lured into false security and probably even a bit of the fathead by that 38-13 shellacking of Dallas they handed them at home 14 days ago.

It was just another Monday night myth, that's all that it was, and oh how cruel the cruel world. Also, friends, how dumb can you get?

The Cowboys are never going to admit it out loud, but they set up the Rams like never ever. Fat yellow and blue balloons in the dark gallery. Here's your hat, sucker, what's your hurry? Step right up, sucker, we ring your bell free of charge, positively nothing down. Here, sucker, have another piece of candy. Plump and pretty — now the butchering.

It's not the first time the Rams have won the wrong game at the wrong time or that there's been a wild turnabout in this curious playoff history between the old rivals. But this was the most drastic and more significant, most expertly planned and directed.

In shorthand or long, it was another textbook coaching triumph — a masterpiece by the old master, Tom Landry.

Whereas the Cowboys' offensive line was shredded and humiliated by the Rams in Anaheim, it was the most overpowering single factor in the wild-card rematch as both Dallas lines (turned both running games as well as everything else completely around).

If there is ever such a thing as a lone turning point in a contest, I thought the handwriting went up on the wall on the first series of the second half.

With the game all knotted at 13-13, the Rams were receiving the kickoff and thus had the opportunity to knock first, gain momentum and take charge with a show of force. To their credit, they went right at it, forehead to helmet.

But Bam, double-wham, the brick wall was all bricks. Two power punts into the middle then in a minus one and when Vince Ferragamo threw one away pressured by a faked blitz with third and 11 on the Bam 24, the fired up Cowboys were on fire to stay. They

Suns' Johnson wins NBA honors

NEW YORK (UPI) — Dennis Johnson, the superlative defensive guard acquired by Phoenix from Seattle in the summer, Monday was selected NBA Player of the Week for his clutch scoring and all-around play.

Johnson opened the week with 27 points against his ex-teammates Monday night in his first game back at the Kingdom since the celebrated trade for fellow All-Star Paul Westphal.

He broke open a game against San Antonio Thursday night with five straight baskets at the start of the second half and capped the week with 19 points, seven rebounds and six steals against Los Angeles Saturday night.

Johnson scored 77 points in the week as the Suns extended their winning streak to seven games and raised their record to 32-8.

Stearns has finger cast removed

NEW YORK (UPI) — New York Mets catcher John Stearns had the cast removed from his injured right index finger Monday and he expects to be ready to catch when spring training opens at the end of February.

Stearns underwent ligament surgery on his finger almost a month ago. The operation was not related to the fracture he sustained on the tip of the same finger last July 26, which sidelined him for the remainder of the year.

"Right now I have 85 percent flexibility in my finger," said Stearns, who hit a career high .285 for the Mets and was selected to the National League All-Star team in 1980 for the third time. "Before surgery I only had 60-65 percent movement in the finger. The doctors tell me I'm going to get better now, too."

Virginia Tech arrives for Peach Bowl

ATLANTA (UPI) — The Virginia Tech football team arrived in Atlanta Monday to begin preparations for Friday's Peach Bowl encounter with Miami (Fla.), the first post-season game for the Hokies in 13 years.

Jack Williams, the VPI sports information director, said the team is "in good shape" and ready to play. VPI posted an 8-3 record during the regular season, losing only to Clemson, Florida State and Richmond.

He said VPI coaches are especially optimistic about the return of star linebacker Lewis Stuart, who missed the last four games of the regular season with a severely bruised sternum. Stuart is expected to be at full speed for Friday's nationally televised game.

Williams said the Hokies may "put in a couple of new wrinkles" for the Peach Bowl but added the team will mainly run from its usual I-formation offense.

Miami players and coaches are expected to arrive in Atlanta this afternoon.

Missouri cager admits he shot himself

COLUMBIA, Mo. (UPI) — University of Missouri basketball star Steve Stipanovich accidentally shot himself in the arm and then made up a story that he had been shot by a gunman, authorities said Monday.

The Tigers' coach, Norm Stewart, said in a prepared statement that Stipanovich, the team's starting center, had lied about a gunman breaking into his house late Saturday and firing four shots at him.

"Steve Stipanovich accidentally shot himself," Stewart said. "Due to the embarrassment, he fabricated a story. He's sorry for any anxiety and concern he may have caused."

Stipanovich, a 6-11 sophomore from St. Louis, was not available for comment. He was averaging 15 points and 6 rebounds a game for the Tigers this year after being voted the Big Eight Newcomer of the Year last year.

Cowboys' Hughes out for season

DALLAS (UPI) — Six-year veteran safety Randy Hughes, who missed most of the 1980 football season with a shoulder injury, will be lost to the Cowboys for the remainder of the playoff schedule after reinjuring his right shoulder, club officials said Monday.

Hughes separated his shoulder attempting to tackle Ram running back Jewell Thomas at the goal line on Los Angeles first touchdown in Sunday's NFC wild card playoff. Dallas won the game 24-13.

A Cowboy spokesman said Hughes would be operated on sometime this week.

Hughes injured his shoulder in the playoffs in 1979 and reinjured it early in the 1980 schedule.

One Oiler blames offensive coaches

HOUSTON (UPI) — The Houston Oilers came home to a deserted Astrodom stadium Monday, and one player biter about the team's unfulfilling season blamed the offensive coaches.

"We have seven all-Pros (on offense)," linebacker Gregg Bingham said. "It's not the players, it's the coaches."

Bingham was upset following a season-ending 27-7 loss to the Oakland Raiders Sunday in the AFC wild card game, one that will lend itself to a winter of second-guessing.

The team's arrival at the Astrodom parking lot at 1 a.m. following a flight from Oakland contrasted to receptions the Oilers received the two previous years. They came home after AFC championship game losses to standing-room-only pep rallies in the stadium.

At the second of those rallies last January, head coach Bum Phillips told fans 1980 was the year the Oilers would kick in the Super Bowl door. But all season the offense struggled despite the presence of two current All-Pros and four former ones.

"We've got one of the best quarterbacks in football over the last seven or eight years," Bingham said, "yet all of a sudden, he can't get it in the end zone. That just doesn't happen."

Three-time All-Pro Kenny Stabler is the Oilers quarterback. He worked this year with current All-Pro Earl Campbell and Leon Gray, and former All-Pro Dave Casper and Bob Young. Another former All-Pro, Kenny Burroughs, was injured most of the season.

Cornerback Greg Stenrick indicated he was expecting an offensive collapse such as Sunday's. "It finally caught up with us," he said.

Oakland cornerback Lester Hayes likened the Oilers' attack to "a high school offense," because of its simple blocking patterns, limited number of plays and lack of originality.

Since the resignation of offensive coordinator Ken Shipp in 1977, the offensive game plan and calling of plays has been made by two men, quarterback and receiver coach King Hill and offensive line coach Joe Bugel.

During games, Hill sits in a booth near the press box and talks by phone to Bugel on the field.

Casper, an Oakland player until mid-season, was disappointed the Oilers did not run more Sunday.

"Our running game seemed to be working. I don't know why we didn't use it more. Their defense could not have handled a run-run-run game plan," he said.

Linebacker Art Stringer, in a newspaper column written following the game, intimated Stabler was not the key to the Super Bowl as Oilers coaches thought he would be. Stabler was acquired before this season.

"I think it's time for the Oilers to start developing Gifford Nielsen," Stringer wrote. "I said that first in 1978."

Backup quarterback Nielsen, a former Brigham Young All-American, is a third-year pro who has played only a handful of games.

Oakland's triumph surprised Rutigliano

CLEVELAND (UPI) — Cleveland Coach Sam Rutigliano said Monday he was surprised at Oakland's victory over Houston, setting the stage for a Raiders-Browns contest in the AFC playoffs Sunday.

"We're just happy to be in it," he said. "We're playing in Cleveland, which is a bonus, but frankly, I'd play in Death Valley, just to be involved in the playoffs."

He's somewhat relieved that Houston was eliminated Sunday, although he was hoping the Oilers would have been able to knock off San Diego, setting up a Cleveland-Houston match for the AFC title in Cleveland Jan. 11.

Should San Diego defeat Buffalo Saturday, the Browns — if they beat Oakland — would have to play in San Diego for the AFC title.

He felt Sunday's game was more a case of Houston losing than Oakland winning.

"I don't mean to take anything away from Oakland, particularly on defense, but I don't think Houston played very well," said Rutigliano.

"Campbell didn't seem to be himself."

Still, he doesn't plan to take the Raiders lightly.

"They are a very, very much improved team defensively over last year," he said. "The statistics show that."

He added, "I don't think the Oilers played as well as they've played in the past, but those things happen because the amount of pressure the other team puts on you."

The Raiders' tremendous defensive pressure resulted in two interceptions, seven sacks and a fumble. But Rutigliano said if Houston could have beaten the first safety blitz, it might have been a different game.

"Had the first blitz been picked up, and (Oakland) got hurt by it, you would never have seen it again," he said.

He also pointed out that only one of the sacks was by a defensive lineman and (Oakland) got hurt by it, that was because nobody was open downfield for Stabler to throw to."

"We had a natural gas furnace installed in our home last winter and we're really pleased."

The Hudsons changed to natural gas because they were concerned about the cost and supply of heating oil. And after the changeover, they found natural gas heat to be cleaner and faster, too. It was a change for the better.

In the long run, balanced use of energy is the only choice we have.

Every home that uses gas instead of electricity for heating and water heating frees up enough power to serve five or six additional homes with electricity for all those other jobs that only electricity can do — lights, television, radio, and appliances. That's the best use of energy... and it's our only choice.

Floods

Eastern Washington warning continues

INDEX, Wash. (UPI) — Flood watch warnings went up along the Yakima River in eastern Washington Monday, even as western Washington rivers dropped back within their banks.

Melting snow and rainfall sent a flood crest down the Yakima toward Richland, where residents were preparing for high water in the late afternoon.

Hundreds of western Washington evacuees returned to soggy, mud-filled homes located along major rivers draining into Puget Sound.

Flood waters left eddying across the flat floodplains will be slow to drain off, the Weather Service said. But flood warnings were cancelled on the Skagit, Snohomish, Chehalis and all other western Washington rivers.

Another Pacific frontal system began to spread rain inland along the coast. However, rainfall amounts were light and the slow-moving weather system was not expected to send rivers back over their banks.

Residents in Index were among the hardest hit by the end by three days of rampaging river water, which had been spurred by heavy rains and warm temperatures melting much of the Cascades snowpack.

Living rooms in the little hamlet were deep in mud, yards were clogged with debris and cars were waterlogged. Yet returning residents felt they were the lucky ones.

At least two dozen other families saw their homes carried away by swollen rivers — the unwelcome gift of a Christmas monsoon that swept the Pacific Northwest.

As the waters receded, two weather-related deaths were reported in Oregon, but there were no other reported serious injuries.

Prisoners rampage in Washington pen

WALLA WALLA, Wash. (UPI) — Angry prisoners set fires and broke windows in a two-hour rampage Monday at the Washington State Penitentiary.

Guards moved about 130 shouting inmates from work areas into the 47th Yard, then into cells, and all 920 prisoners in the century-old prison went under strict lockdown within two hours of the incident, said Warden James Spalding.

There were no reported serious injuries.

A fire was started on the third floor of the classification and parole building, but was quickly extinguished, Spalding said. The building is located in the center of the prison's sprawling compound.

"The fire was the incident," said Spalding. "There was no riot."

The demonstration was tied to an incident that occurred about 24 hours earlier, when guards spotted an inmate apparently trying to smuggle contraband drugs inside the walls.

"He was coming out of the visiting room with a small balloon (apparently holding drugs) in his mouth," said a spokesman for the state Department of Social and Health Services. "When confronted, he swallowed it. When officers attempted to restrain him, he hit a couple of officers, and a group of other inmates tried to come to his aid."

At least one guard brandished a firearm to halt the melee, and two convicts, identified only as Joseph Bolduc and Julius Gillespie, were taken to the prison's segregation unit pending further investigation.

"The other prisoners requested that Gillespie be let out by 10:30 a.m., and when the warden refused, the fire broke out, said the spokesman.

At about the same time the prison chapel was vandalized and windows were smashed in the prison kitchen, he said.

While firemen extinguished the blaze, guards moved all inmates working in the industrial area "for security reasons" to the Big Yard and then locked them in their cells, said Spalding.

Members of the Washington State Patrol were alerted and ringed the outer perimeter of the prison's gray stone walls while the inmates were being moved.

OK for artificial heart may come next week

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — University of Utah surgeons could receive permission as early as next week to implant an artificial heart made of dacron mesh and polyurethane in a human being, a spokesman for the school said Monday.

Dr. William C. DeVries, the surgeon hoping to perform the implantation, will present a revised plan for the operation to a special human experimentation committee next week, said John Dwan.

"I would anticipate that the committee would make a decision within the next thirty days," Dwan said. "They could have a decision after their meeting next week."

"Approval could come at any time," Dwan said. "The doctors and the committee are negotiating now. The committee has asked a series of questions and the surgeon is ready to respond."

He said the committee has been considering DeVries' request for permission to implant an artificial heart in a human for six months.

"But even after the committee gives its approval, if it does," Dwan added, "the device has to go to the Food and Drug Administration. The FDA is required by law to respond within 30 days, so approval could be complete in 30 to 60 days."

A team of University of Utah doctors, biologists and engineers has been successfully testing artificial hearts on calves and other animals for several years.

Last week, the researchers announced that "Alfred Lord Tenyson," the team's present experimental calf, had set "a record for survival with the artificial heart. Tenyson, a 330-pound Jersey, passed the previous 22-day record Friday and was still reported healthy Monday."

"We're now at the stage where we must consider the feasibility of a human implant," biologist Larry Hastings said. "Our project shows we can keep a heart patient alive for a significant period once his own heart has failed."

The air-driven heart inside Tenyson is a Jarvik No. 5 — named for its designer, Dr. Robert Jarvik of the university team.

A team spokesman said a device designated as a Jarvik 7, about two-thirds the size of the artificial heart inside the calf, would be implanted in a human being.

Pilot's body removed from wreckage

MOSES LAKE, Wash. (UPI) — The body of an Oroville, Wash., man was removed from the wreckage of his plane Sunday in the Sand Dunes-Fatholes Lake area south of Interstate 90 in Grant County.

Sheriff's deputies said Frederick Walter, Jr., 42, died in the crash earlier this month.

Walter had been missing since Dec. 4 on a flight from Yakima to Oroville.

Officials said it appeared Walter flew the plane into the ground.

Federal Aviation Administration officials were scheduled on the scene today to begin looking for the cause of the crash.

Cross-country skiers survive three weeks in wilderness

OKANOGAN, Wash. (UPI) — Cross-country skiers Greg Wiggins, 27, and Pat Legel, 31, Fort Collins, Colo., are regaining weight and strength following their rescue Saturday by Forest Service officials after three weeks in the Pasayten Wilderness Area.

The pair had hiked up in an abandoned ranger's station after running out of food on their journey.

They told officials they ate dog food cooked with lard until it ran out several days before their rescue. Then they switched to oats, which had to be individually cracked to get each oat out.

"The rest of the time they spent in their sleeping bags, lighting off hypothermia," Okanogan Under-sheriff Bob Hull reported.

Hull said the two set out from Ross Lake on Nov. 28, leaving their itinerary with Wiggins' father in Dallas.

The two had hoped to make the trip by Christmas.

Hull said the pair had "scouted the area well and had come prepared. But they apparently underestimated the amount of food needed and decided to hole up in the cabin."

"They had left caches of de-hydrated food along the route last summer. By locating the caches, we were able to find out how far they had made it. They had also scouted the cabin. It's lucky for them they knew where it was...." Hull added.

It's also fortunate that Wiggins' father became concerned and notified authorities.

For when they were found, they had little left to eat.

Legel told rescuers the first two weeks of survival in the cabin weren't bad. "The last week was the only difficult one because we ran out of food."

Hull explained that oats are okay for horses, but each oat is encased in a shell like a walnut. "They told us they had to spend hours cracking the oats just to get a small plateful. And, of course, it was cold and miserable."

The two said they found a little dog food, which was mixed with lard and corn syrup and heated after they first arrived. But then they switched to oats.

The two reported losing 15-20 pounds apiece during the ordeal, but were otherwise in good spirits.

Boy 'satisfactory' after police shooting

SPOKANE (UPI) — David Collicott, 14, Spokane, who was shot in the neck by a Spokane police officer last Friday, is now listed in satisfactory condition at Deaconess Hospital.

Collicott had been listed in serious condition after being shot by Sgt. Robert Henry getting by a high speed chase that ended near North Central High School.

The Spokane County Sheriff's Office is investigating the shooting.

The only aspect of the investigation made public so far is a statement by police officials that the shooting was "unintentional."

The county prosecutor's office is also investigating the incident.

The incident occurred early Friday after Henry, driving a patrol car, chased a car several blocks from the area of the Spokane Coliseum north about a mile.

Collicott was the driver.

Police try to identify murder victim

TOOELE, Utah (UPI) — Tooele County Sheriff Walt Shubert says forensic tests will be performed this week on dental characteristics and fingerprints of a murder victim whose body was found on the salt flats east of Wendover.

No identification was discovered on the body, but detectives did find an empty shell casing at the scene, Shubert said. He noted the area is a popular place for target shooting, so the casing might be unrelated to the homicide.

The State Medical Examiner's Office said the young man, apparently in his mid to late 20s, was shot once in the back and twice in the head, the sheriff said.

Detectives believe the man was shot where he was found, Shubert said. The body was found last week by a motorist on a frontage road leading to the Bonneville Salt Flats.
