PUNXSUTAWNEY, Pa. (UPI) — Yes, America, there is a Punxsutawney Phil!

He lives in a hole in the ground in Pennsylvania and, this morning, Phil will let the nation know what the weather will be for the next month or so.

some 7,000 in west-central Pennsylvania, and see his shadow. Should that happen, tradition has it the nation will be left with six more weeks of winter.

For Phil, predicting the weather for the 94th year will not be the only challenge facing him. The long-time Numero Uno of Groundhogs will again have to ward off challengers to his throne, as a host of little hogs like-Buckeye Chuck will no doubt make their own forecasts, and attempt to deflate Phil's claim to fame.

Punxsutawney Groundhog Club, a booster group of sorts, have discounted the late comers, as impostors and defended their rodent against skeptics.

Club president Charles M. Erhard Jr. says other animal prognosticators, such as Ohio's Buckeye Chuck, Wisconsin's Sun Prairie Dog and Oklahoma's Grizzly Bear, are a bunch of fluff.

Enjoying wintry weekend

For winter sports enthusiasts, it was an ideal weekend. New snow left by storms Friday and Saturday drew skiers, snowmobilers, tubers and participants in other outdoor activities to the hills.

assembled and snow forts were erected in scores of locations around the Magic Valley. Among those enjoying the snow were, from left, P. J. Greene, John Merrill, Arnie Pheitz and Billy Hyde, who found out recess periods and fourth graders both have their limitations. Their recess period at Sawtooth Elementary School in Twin Falls ended Friday about the time they lost their steam for rolling up this mammoth snowball. Sunny skies and light winds made Sunday an ideal day for being outdoors, and more sunshine appears in prospect today. But the sun is also shrinking the snow cover in valley areas.

First clash nears

Reagan faces desertion over debt ceiling

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan is likely to suffer his first legislative embarrassment this week.

It is likely to come as the House takes up his proposal to raise the national debt ceiling to $885 billion.

Scores of Republican members — many of whom have never voted for a debt increase and actually campaigned against it in November — are likely to desert Reagan despite efforts by House GOP leader Bob Michel and others.

The prospect is Reagan will suffer the political indignity visited on Jimmy Carter when he was president: Defeat of a debt increase bill on the first vote, followed by 11th-hour passage.

The debt ceiling increase is one of only two major orders of business on Capitol Hill this week as the new Congress slowly gears up. The other is a Senate vote scheduled Tuesday on confirmation of Raymond Donovan as labor secretary.

When the debt ceiling votes come, many chucking Democrats are likely to join balking GOP lawmakers, just to enjoy the spectacle of watching Republicans stew in their own partisan juices.

A source in the GOP leadership said only about 50 of the 191 Republicans have promised to vote for the ceiling, and it would be almost impossible to gain a majority unless Reagan takes a personal hand in lobbying them.

Michel conceded last week that a majority of GOP votes "would be pretty tough to come by."

Reagan reluctantly asked for the $49.9 billion increase in the debt ceiling because the current limit — set to last through Sept. 30 — will be inadequate to meet the government's borrowing requirements by Feb. 18.

The ceiling has become almost meaningless over the years as an economic tool because it merely allows the government to borrow money to pay for debts already incurred. Failure to jack up the ceiling has no effect on the budget, but can cause temporary havoc in the bureaucracy.

However, Republicans have made political hay with the debt ceiling over the past few years, voting against it as a bloc. This eventually forced reluctant Democrats to support the Democratic president to pass the measure.

Now the shoe is on the other foot, and many Republicans are snared by their campaign vows to oppose further debt increases.

"There are 45 to 50 members on my side who aren't going to vote for a debt increase, period," said Michel.

The "Donovan" nomination has sparked controversy because of allegations linking him with organized crime.

The New Jersey construction executive has denied all charges, and the FBI said it found no evidence to back up the allegations.

The Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee approved the nomination Thursday on an 11-0 vote.

Kindergartens

Any threat to funding would bring deluge of protest from parents, teachers

Editor's note: This is the second of two stories examining reactions of educators and parents to the possibility of cutting state funding for kindergarten programs in public schools.

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Should Idaho legislators consider educational funding cuts that would threaten the state's kindergarten program, they can expect a deluge of protest from teachers and parents.

Many district superintendents in Magic Valley have said there is no way the program can continue without state financing. There just isn't that kind of money available at the local level, they say.

In the past six years, since kindergartens opened as part of the public school system and with state financing, parents and teachers have placed increasing importance on their value in overall education.

As one elementary principal summed it up, "We were about the last state to add it and I hope not the first to abandon it."

Clarence Parker, principal of Morningside Elementary School in Twin Falls, says there are now three kindergarten classrooms at his school with 117 children.

"We hardly have a child entering first grade now that hasn't completed kindergarten. It makes a tremendous difference in the children's ability to immediately adapt to the classroom."

Elaine Parrish, a first-grade teacher at Morningside who also taught in the pre-kindergarten years, says she sees a world of difference.

"Children coming into first grade now have learned the school rules, policy and are ready to begin their education. They progress so fast. We coordinate kindergarten and first-grade programs and all kindergartens follow the same curriculum," she said.

She and other first-grade teachers around Magic Valley say the high percentage of children who now have kindergarten background gives more uniformity in first grades. All have learned to adapt to classroom conditions. Prior to mass kindergarten training, first grade teachers often spent several weeks just getting some of their children acquainted with classrooms and what school is all about. Back then, first grades were divided into two groups about equal in size, Parrish said — those who had experienced kindergarten and those who had not. This worked to the disadvantage of teachers and children alike.

Probably the most enthusiastic supporters of kindergarten are the kindergarten teachers themselves.

This Woodhead came to Idaho from California more than six years ago. She had been teaching kindergarten there and immediately applied for a similar post with the Twin Falls School District.

"They told me they didn't have public-kindergarten in this state, so I took an elementary teaching post and waited.

"I was probably the first to ask for a kindergarten position when the law was adopted six years ago," she says.

Contrary to what some people may believe, modern kindergarten is not a babysitting service or a day of sandbox and coloring books. Woodhead and Marilyn Pratt, another Twin Falls kindergarten teacher, say the children deprived of kindergarten training will probably be behind other class members for several years.

In kindergarten, teachers say, the most important progress is that which a child makes toward reading. The children learn letters by sight, name and, most important by sound.

They then begin blending the sounds together — the first step in reading.

"If they know the sounds, that is the whole basis for reading," says Parrish.

Woodhead and Marilyn Pratt say by the end of kindergarten most children can read simple sentences and many can read story books.

"These children of 5 to 6 years are not too young to learn. They are more eager at that age than at any other time and we need to take advantage of that enthusiasm," Woodhead said.

"Some of the children coming into our classes do not even know how to hold a pencil or crayon properly. They soon learn this and they learn to look at letters and numbers from the left side to right side of a page, then before long they are sounding letters in that direction and forming words. This leads to sentences," says Pratt.

She said the children learn many valuable social skills including associating with other children, learning to be away from home and mother, and learning to sit still in class for a period of 20 minutes without being too restless.

"We have coloring and other crafts. These, too, are valuable educational tools. While they are doing this they are developing important motor learning," says Pratt.

About nation's economic state

Consumers taking pessimistic view

WASHINGTON (UPI) — American consumers are generally pessimistic about the state of the economy.

They also doubt President Reagan's ability to cut taxes and spending while balancing the budget, said a survey released Sunday.

A Gallup poll taken for the U.S. Chamber of Commerce showed that almost 75 percent of U.S. consumers believe this is a bad time to buy a house. Half think automobile and major appliance purchases at this time are not a good idea.

The poll showed consumers more reluctant now to take on new debt than they were two years ago when fewer than half of all consumers thought it a bad time to buy a house.

The survey also reported that Americans are skeptical of President Reagan's ability to fulfill his campaign promise to reduce government spending, cut taxes and balance the federal budget.

Only 23 percent of those surveyed said they thought Reagan would be able to accomplish his economic goals, and 10 percent said the president could achieve only one of his three objectives.

"The generally pessimistic expectations for the economy and inflation may prove to be an advantage to the Reagan administration," said survey director Dr. James Morris. Morris said lower public expectations may allow the new administration a "longer grace period."

Only 28 percent of the survey's respondents said they favor substantial personal income tax cuts as a means of curbing inflation, while 22 percent said reductions in business taxes are preferable. Another 22 percent said neither tax should be cut.

Surveyors asked what percentage of a tax cut consumers would save if taxes were slashed by 10 percent in each of the next three years. On the average, respondents said they would save 26 percent of such a tax cut.

The poll also found that if inflation were reduced, giving consumers more disposable income, they would be able to save about 30 percent of the increased amount left over after monthly expenses were paid.

Korean president arrives

WASHINGTON (UPI) — South Korean President Chun Doo Hwan arrived Sunday for talks with President Reagan aimed at improving bilateral relations and repressing a decade of international scandal and strained politics.

Secretary of State Alexander Haig stepped on the carpet at Andrews Air Force Base to greet Chun and his wife as they stepped from the Korean aircraft decorated with American and Korean flags.

More than 1,000 cheering, flag-waving members of Washington's Korean Association turned out to meet the 50-year-old South Korean general, dressed in a dark gray business suit.

Later, about 100 Koreans were released from opposition leader Kim Dae Jung being demanded that prison demonstrated outside the Washington Hilton hotel, where Chun attended a reception in his honor given by Ambassador and Mrs. Yong Shik Kim.

Jet makes safe landing

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A United Air Lines passenger jet with 15 persons aboard landed safely Sunday at Los Angeles International Airport after reporting malfunctioning landing gear. There were no injuries.

Fire Department vehicles were called out to line to runway in expectation of, and the jet, Flight 120 landing on a tarmac at Los Angeles International Airport after the wheels down and no apparent trouble.

Ice fishermen rescued

TOLEDO, Ohio (UPI) — A massive ice flow broke loose from shore on Lake Erie near Toledo Sunday, trapping 80 ice fishermen for several hours, the Coast Guard said, but their cars, vans and fishing huts remained afloat.

A Coast Guard spokesman said all 80 caught on the drifting floe — estimated to be five miles long — were rescued by boats and a helicopter.

Coast Guard Petty Officer Frank Henderson said, "About 12 cars, vans, snowmobiles and 50 fishing shacks were left on the ice. Nobody was hurt. Nobody went into the water. It was a miracle."

Fire cripples empty tanker

CHINCOTEAGUE, Va. (UPI) — An engine-room fire crippled an empty 800-foot tanker off Virginia's Atlantic coast Sunday, but Navy rescuers team extinguished the flames and none of the 38 crewmen had to be evacuated. No injuries were reported.

The fire aboard the Greatly registered tanker, Alkaterini, knocked out the ship's power and sent thick black smoke billowing into the sky. Until the fire was put out the crew donned life jackets and prepared to evacuate, but that was not necessary.

"All fires are out," said Coast Guard Lt. Patrick Twiss. "We're not going to evacuate. The cause of the fire is unknown."

Grasso slips into coma

HARTFORD, Conn. (UPI) — Former Gov. Ella Grasso, who resigned from office weakened by a year-long battle against cancer, lapsed into a "semi-comatose" state Sunday and was placed on the critical list at Hartford Hospital.

Mrs. Grasso, 61, the first woman elected governor of any state in her own right, began losing consciousness for varying periods of time at 7 a.m., said hospital spokesman James Battaglio. She has been hospitalized since Dec. 8 for cancer of the liver and intestinal tract.

Mrs. Grasso's husband, Tom, and their two children, John and Susanne, were at the hospital, Battaglio said.

Poles call off strike

WARSAW, Poland (UPI) — Poland's Solidarity labor union Sunday called off a threatened one-hour nationwide strike after the "weapon" of worker protests will still be used to press for recognition of a farmers' union.

"Every action taken against Rural Solidarity will be considered by Solidarity as an action against the labor movement," Karel Modzelewski, national spokesman for the 10-million member union, told a news conference during a break in an extraordinary session of Solidarity's national coordinating commission.

The union leaders said the day of the general canceled strike — Tuesday — should instead be used as a day for national propaganda in support of the operation of a Rural Solidarity union, representing an estimated 1 million private farmers.

"I don't think there's any real disagreement" between the Fed and the Reagan administration on how to remedy the nation's economic ills, Volcker said.

Peru orders cease-fire

LIMA, Peru (UPI) — Peru Sunday ordered a cease-fire within minutes of retaking northern border territory held by invading Ecuadorian troops, Foreign Ministry officials said.

The officials said troops backed by jet fighters and artillery had recaptured the third and last Peruvian outpost held by Ecuadorian troops in the mountain Condor region on the fifth day of the undeclared border war.

Before the cease-fire was announced, President Fernando Belaunde Terry told a cheering crowd in front of the National Palace in Lima that the clash had ended Sunday "with the victory of the Peruvian military forces."

Anti-U.S. riots erupt

BERLIN (UPI) — Weekend street fighting by anti-American rioters in Frankfurt and squatters in Berlin caused hundreds of thousands of dollars in damage during some of the fiercest clashes West Germany has seen, authorities said Sunday.

In West Berlin, violence raged unabated for 24 hours and a police spokesman said the divided city was winning "tragic fame" through the violence.

Police said at least 50 buildings were damaged in the weekend fighting. Three police officers were lightly injured and 46 people were arrested.

Better U.S. ties sought

BANGKOK, Thailand (UPI) — Chinese Premier Zhao Ziyang Sunday urged President Reagan to improve U.S.-China relations but warned that any change in the status of Taiwan would be a serious setback.

"In his first news conference outside China since taking office last September, Zhao said, "China that Reagan has become president we intend that relations between China and the United States should continue to expand."

Spanish party truce sought

MADRID, Spain (UPI) — Spain's warring Government Party appeared Sunday to be seeking a truce to end the sudden crisis forced by the resignation of Prime Minister Adolfo Suarez.

Spanish and foreign diplomats speculated that the government crisis, the first of Spain's young democracy, would compel King Juan Carlos to postpone a visit to the United States Feb. 9.

As King Juan Carlos continued his talks with political leaders, well-informed sources said Deputy Prime Minister Leopoldo Calvo Sotelo was encouraging a dialogue with the party rebels who forced Suarez's resignation with their loud public criticism of his management.

Fed chairman says budget, tax cuts must be connected

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Billions of dollars in budget cuts must be tied to proposed tax cuts if inflation is to be controlled, Federal Reserve Board Chairman Paul Volcker said Sunday.

An "arithmetic" dollar-for-dollar match of tax and budget reductions is not necessary, Volcker said in an interview on ABC-TV's "Issues and Answers," but the figures should be closely aligned.

"I don't think there's any real disagreement" between the Fed and the Reagan administration on how to remedy the nation's economic ills, Volcker said.

But he resisted suggestions tax cuts come before slashes in spending plans.

"I don't think there's any doubt you need large budgetary cuts — in the 10s of 100 billions dollars," he said, if inflation is to be tamed.

"If you go ahead with tax cuts without budgetary commitments in place, you may never get the budget cuts," he warned.

Without endorsing any specific proposal, Volcker suggested "a forward-looking tax cut that would give incentive" for industrial expansion as well as personal savings.

PAUL VOLCKER
Budget cuts mandatory

Volcker defended the central bank from criticism its policies have fostered astronomical interest rates. "We must restrain the growth of money and credit," he said.

"Our purpose is to shut off inflation," he said, describing the agencies' approach.

"We have not been willing to meet all credit demands," Volcker said. "If we met all credit demands, the result would be inflation — more inflation — we'd only be in a worse situation, with higher interest rates."

Volcker said the nation now has "a rare opportunity" to tackle its economic problems, thanks to the election of President Reagan and a more conservative Congress and changing public attitudes.

"People have come to expect inflation," he said, but "if people begin betting in a different way, if they begin getting a little more confident that inflation can and will be brought down," the economy can be controlled.

Asked if he felt more comfortable with the conservative Reagan economy team than with the Carter administration Volcker said, "I won't make that comparison."

He did say he has had "very constructive" meetings with Reagan and his advisers. And, dispelling some rumors, he said he has not felt any pressure to resign his key policy post.

Salvador prelate lashes out at government clampdowns

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (UPI) — El Salvador's leading Catholic prelate lashed out Sunday at the U.S.-backed junta for trying to crush all criticism of the government.

Soldiers enforcing a night curfew shot 18 people to death overnight in San Salvador and Santa Ana, judicial authorities said.

Officials in San Salvador-blamed leftist guerrillas for dynamiting an electrical tower outside the capital, downing power lines and blacking out about half the city just before dawn Sunday. Power was restored within two hours in most parts of the city, officials said.

In his Sunday sermon, San Salvador's acting archbishop, Arturo Rivera y Damas, charged the junta of President Jose Napoleon Duarte was trying to stifle all criticism of the government.

"The last dissenting voices that existed in this country have been closed," Rivera y Damas said, referring to the arrests last month of journalists working for the El Independiente newspaper and the El Salvador-based API news service.

"These voices are necessary and are an index of the healthy pluralism that in fact exists in the country," he said.

Heroic welcomes continue but more resentment crops up

By United Press International

Johnny McKeel doesn't feel like a hero and neither does Barry Rosen. But their welcomes for the 52 Americans held hostage 44 days in Iran have opened wounds of resentment for veterans of Vietnam and other wars.

"I never was the hero type," said McKeel, a salty Marine sergeant from Balch Springs, Texas. "I went to downtown Dallas the other day in civilian clothes and walked into a building and before I could get the elevator I was mobbed."

"I still don't consider myself a hero. When I joined the Marines, I signed an oath that I would go anywhere in the world and that's what I did."

But like it or not, McKeel and the other liberated hostages have been placed on a pedestal of gallantry by a new wave of national pride.

The ticker-tape parades, the wining and dining, promises of generous financial reimbursement, heroes' medals and lifetime baseball passes have opened up a festering sore — especially in veterans of America's most unpopular war.

In Hammond, Ind., Vietnam veteran Gary Cooper, 34, was killed in a shootout with police late Friday. Authorities said Cooper, who was demoted, apparently was despondent that Vietnam veterans were not given the welcome the hostages received.

Vietnam veterans conducted a low key march in Indianapolis Saturday. Officials at various Veterans Administration outreach centers across the nation said they have received numerous calls — especially from Vietnam veterans — expressing bitterness at the treatment of the freed hostages.

Bob Bilger of East Lansing, Mich., a Marine veteran of Vietnam with a purple heart to show for his service, admits he is bitter but said he believes some good may come of it.

"Maybe some one will recognize a lot of little people — who gave a lot of service to this country — are being short changed," he said.

Barry Rosen, press attaché when the embassy at Tehran was sieged, described the hostage welcome as "a new future for America."

"I feel for the Vietnam veterans. I don't consider myself a hero. I consider themselves the real heroes. They fought in open battles."

But the heroes' welcomes continued. In Massachusetts, more than 200,000 people were expected to line the 2½-mile parade route leading to Waltham Sunday in honor of William Keough Jr. Celebrations in Indiana were planned for Rick Kupke in Rensselaer and Navy Cmdr. Don Allen Sharer in the Indianapolis suburb of Plainfield.

Charles Jones of Detroit, the only black among the 52 held for the full 44 days, and Army Staff Sgt. Joseph Sublic Jr. of suburban Redford Township, will be honored in ceremonies today and Tuesday.

Tuesday will be Freedom Day in Rochester, N.Y. in honor of Col. Thomas E. Schaefer.

Over New Orleans Mardi Gras

Marine invited to reign

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — Marine Sgt. John D. McKeel Jr., who endured 44 days as a hostage in Iran, will reign as Bacchus XIII when Mardi Gras parade hits the streets, officials said Sunday.

The eight other Marine embassy guards who were held by the Iranian militants also will be invited to New Orleans as special guests of the Carnival "krewes" for the festivities March 1.

In his hometown of Balch Springs, Texas, McKeel said his selection as Bacchus — god of wine and revelry — was a great honor.

"It's just incredible," he said. "It's a great way to erase some very bad memories."

McKeel said he would like to wear his Marine dress blue uniform on the float rather than the traditional Bacchus costume. He said he would like to bring the rest of his Tehran Marine detachment to the Carnival spectacular.

"We served together for a long time," he said. "I sure would like to have them with me."

The parade captain said McKeel, who is single, would be accompanied by his parents as well as the Marines, all as guests of the krewe of Bacchus. No decision had been made on whether the other Marines would ride in the parade or would be honored guests in the stands.

"We feel that New Orleans is the granddaddy city of parades and that the Greater New Orleans area would want to pay tribute to this great American," the captain said.

"As a Marine sergeant, he personifies the former hostage image, and the entire Bacchus organization is tremendously honored that we will be able to bring Johnny to our great city and allow us to show him our appreciation for the sacrifice he made for his country."

The selection of McKeel is a departure for the Bacchus organization in selecting its king, who normally is chosen from the entertainment world.

Kindergarten

"There is no way the same programs could be provided through private kindergartens," says Woodhead.

"Under the public schools we can provide the equipment and material for a successful program. There is no other way," she added.

Without a free public kindergarten, says Pratt, the children who need the training the most would be the ones left out.

"The very few we have in our classes who have not had the background usually are from out of state. Nearly all parents now take advantage of kindergarten," Parrish said.

Toth, a kindergarten teacher at Lincoln Elementary School in Twin Falls, said they try to get parents interested in the program. Parents are invited to come to the class and spend a whole period.

"This means a great deal to the children. They think it's important enough to have their Mom in the class then they must be doing something important," Toth explained.

He said kindergarten teachers have children learning to write letters, do simple math, count and begin to blend the letter sounds into reading practices. None, he said, can read simple books when they complete kindergarten. Some can also memorize rhymes and develop other evidence of memory retention. When they are giving coloring and cutting out paper figures, they are gaining valuable coordination and motor skills, he said, but most of the time is in actual academic learning.

"I can't say enough about how valuable this (kindergarten) is. We used to spend weeks trying to get the children ready to begin the learning process. Now they are already there," Parrish said.

Parents have the best opportunity to mark the individual child's progress. A number contacted in Twin Falls all feel kindergarten is on an equal par if not more important than any other stage of education.

Mrs. Ronald Parsons, whose child is in first grade after completing kindergarten last year, says the program is getting progressively better.

"Kindergarten gives the children self-esteem and helps them cope with the stress of being in a classroom atmosphere at so young an age," she said.

Mrs. Brad Hansen, whose first grader also attended kindergarten at Harrison Elementary School, said "it makes me sick to think they would even consider cutting kindergarten classes. My son Scotty could read halfway through his kindergarten year. I have never had a child reading so well at that age."

Mrs. Loren Cannon, who has a child in Harrison kindergarten this year says, "It is fabulous."

"We worked so hard to get it approved it would be terrible to take a step backwards. We have already built buildings in many of our grade schools to accommodate kindergarten classes so future expense will be less than the initial cost," she said.

Mrs. Cannon said she worked as a member of the League of Women Voters to study kindergartens and the need prior to it being adopted.

"I am afraid, if we drop it, first-grade teachers will have a serious problem coping with the children who have gone to private kindergartens mixed with those who have not. Such a condition tends to hold back the brighter, better-prepared children," she added.

Cassia County School Superintendent Norman Hurst said his district has had kindergarten in one form or another since about 1967. Like some other schools, Cassia had a Head Start program and special classes for disadvantaged children under Title I funding.

"Public kindergarten, although not mandatory, reaches nearly everyone. It is an important part of our system."

"It would be very difficult for the districts to pick up the slack if it were dropped by the state," he said.

"Readiness skills taught to the five-year-olds and the social skills they gain are well worth the additional cost," he said.

Superintendent Robert Pratt of Buhl has seen the increasing popularity of the kindergarten classes. He said the Buhl school has just now adopted a full year kindergarten.

"It has been so beneficial the board of trustees has voted to give all of the children a full year's program. When kindergarten began in Buhl about six years ago classes were for half of the school year only. Beginning in January we extended them for a full year," he added.

Before this was done, Pratt said, the school board polled parents in the district and found nearly 100 percent support for such a move. Pratt said first-grade teachers don't hold back nearly as many students as they did.

"I would hate to go along with the suggestion that we eliminate the 12th grade instead of kindergarten if we had to make a choice," he said. "We are criticized now for some of the early graduates we approve. I am not sure our colleges and certainly not the labor market would be ready for an influx of students at the 11th year level."

Pratt said probably only about 40 percent of the children now attending kindergarten would be enrolled in private kindergartens. Through the state program curriculum is uniform and all teachers are certified, he said. He said Buhl has 116 children in its kindergarten classes with three teachers each handling two half-day sessions.

Most other schools have similar systems, largest in the state is Twin Falls, has 545 children in 10 ten teachers handling two classes each. Each of the five elementary schools has two kindergarten teachers.

Some other districts include Jerome with 208 enrolled and four teachers. Also in Jerome County, Eden has 48 children with one teacher handling the two half-day sessions.

Gooding has 105 children and two instructors, while Filer's two kindergarten teachers have four classes averaging about 30 children. There is also one class at Hollister.

Kimberly, with 65 children, gets by with one full time and one part time instructor. Hansen has 41 children and one teacher and at Murter one teacher handles a class of 20 children. Castleton has one teacher and 25 children.

At Richfield the one teacher has 25 children in one class and Shshone has 23 children in each of two sessions handled by one teacher.

Blaine County, one of the first to adopt kindergarten, has 129 children with classes in all elementary schools including Halley, Ketchum, Carey and Bellevue. Gooding has 105 children, two teachers and four sessions. Wendell schools have 90 youngsters and one full time and one half-time teacher. Wendell breaks the program into three sessions.

In Camas County, Fairfield has between 15 and 18 children handled by one teacher and one half-day class.

Idaho should have a severance tax

Gov. John Evans' proposed severance tax on minerals and any future finds of oil and natural gas is necessary and fair to all concerned.

The argument that the mining industry should not be taxed because it contributes jobs and money to Idaho's economy is beside the point.

The issue rests on fairness and common sense, and this must be kept in mind by the Idaho Legislature, which is being lobbied heavily and threatened with assurances of economic doom by the mining industry.

It only makes sense not to squander our resources. It is only fair that Idaho, like other states, benefit directly from the unique natural resources within its borders.

Would a person in everyday life be wise in not asking to be paid for giving up something of value?

Part of what makes Idaho great and special are its resources. They will inevitably be used up and are being profitably mined now. There is no reason not to get the most out of the hard value that lies under Idaho's soil to help pay the costs of government and of education for Idaho's children.

The mine-lease tax, which the severance tax would replace, now brings in about $2.5 million a year, less than one-half of 1 percent of the value of Idaho's mineral production. The industry is planning to spend billions of dollars within the next five years merely on new mines and expansion.

The proposed severance tax would levy 2 percent on the gross value of phosphate and metallic minerals, 1 percent on non-metallic minerals, and five percent on the gross value of oil and natural gas.

Half of the estimated revenue collections of $10 million would go to repeal the inheritance tax. After that it would be divided as follows: 10 percent to the county of origin, 20 percent to the water pollution control fund, 20 percent to the public school endowment fund, 10 percent for mine reclamation and research, and 40 percent to all cities and counties in the state.

The impact of new mines on local communities can be costly and there is no mechanism now for those communities to pay for the extra demands of an influx of workers.

Witness the struggle of Challis to prepare for the Cyprus Mining's molybdenum mine. A law to allow payment of local property taxes in advance proved unworkable.

Another argument against a severance tax is that energy companies should not be discouraged from exploring for oil and gas.

It is fair for planning purposes to let these companies know in advance what Idaho demands in exchange for tapping and exporting underground energy resources.

Doug Bean, executive director of the Idaho Petroleum Council, says there is no doubt oil will be found in the state.

"Every operator who drills a hole expects to be the first one to find oil or gas in Idaho," he says.

Most Western states levy severance taxes mainly on coal, oil and natural gas, but not necessarily minerals. (Remember, the rest of the country and other nations in effect pay those taxes through slightly higher prices.)

Yet most of those other states do not have the same resources or the same economy as Idaho.

The Gem State possesses some of the world's largest deposits of silver and phosphates and is among the world's largest producers of these materials.

The state cannot afford to give up cheaply and irrevocably what is hers under the guise of keeping the mining industry's friendship.

Once those resources are gone so are the mines.

Saving time

Editor, Times-News:
As I was getting ready for work Jan. 29, I was listening to the morning news on KEEPRadio as I always do. I am bored stiff listening to news about the hostages, so my ears really perked up as the newscaster started talking about something new and innovative.

He was telling a story about Theo Murdock, new chief of Health and Welfare in Boise. Apparently, Health and Welfare is going to have some money cut from their rather copious budget and now need to release three secretaries. In order to determine which three secretaries will go, they will ring a bell seven (yes, seven!) times a day at which time all secretaries will drop whatever they are doing and immediately fill out a form stating what they were doing at the time of the ringing bell. Those who are doing the least, presumably, will be the ones to go. It is a wonderful idea. However, I think filling out forms seven times a day explaining what one is doing could be a terrible waste of time, and we need them all to have that precious time for the disbursing of our funds.

May I make some suggestions which will save time? Mr. Murdock could set up a simple electrical clock system to the seats in the ladies room which would not allow a secretary to dally any longer than 45 seconds. He could attach this same electrical system to her typewriter and when she falls below 75 words per minute, she could get a short shock. In addition to this, he could hook her shoes up to runners which would take her to the file cabinet, to the bosses' office, and back to her desk. The boss could keep the key and therefore know where she is at all times. I think if they incorporated these ideas there would certainly be no time lost in filling out forms seven times a day explaining what they are doing.

I hope these suggestions help those at Health and Welfare. I only make them because I want them to waste absolutely no time in spending one-quarter of my pay check. Time is of the essence.

Where to cut

Editor, Times-News:
After reading the controversy on school funding and elimination of the kindergarten I would like to make a suggestion.

All those in favor of discontinuing kindergarten should volunteer a few hours to help in these classes during the first few weeks of school. The teachers would be most happy to have your help, I'm sure. Be sure to return in May.

I, like many other parents, grandparents, and friends, have given my time and feel any person with a couple hours to spare would benefit from the experience, be they parent or not. It is a one-on-one learning experience and most teachers welcome any interest.

The number of 5-year-olds that do not know their last name or their parents' full names, addresses, or phone numbers are amazing. Many cannot count to 10, nor do they know the alphabet, right from left, above from below, days of week or month, or even their own birthdays.

These children cannot be labeled as underprivileged from low income families, therefore letting them attend the head start programs.

They come from all types of homes and for various reasons have not been encouraged to learn.

The children come to school in September unable to sit still for five minutes and emerge in May able to count to 100, they know their letters and the sound each can make and are able to read easy books. All they have learned is too long to list here and with parent encouragement can build a self-confidence in themselves for life.

Kindergarten is not a baby-sitter and first grade is a continuation of learning, not repeat of this.

We need to concentrate on obtaining more devoted teachers like Steve Loth, Mrs. Schmechel, and others like them—whose goal in teaching is to reach each child as an individual. They spend hours of their own time working on ways to spark the desire to learn for our children.

Maybe there is a place to cut education funding—but the lower grades is not the place to start.

How about cutting legislators' pay, expense accounts and unnecessary travel, receptions, and dinners? Eliminate unproductive state jobs and offices.

We would have plenty of educational money and a surplus for other needs.

Connecting in Boise

BOISE — Idaho legislators welcome knowing the opinions of the people at home on specific proposals they have to vote on in Boise.

And that opinion can make a difference in how legislators vote.

But some people may be uncertain about how to deliver that opinion, especially if they have not done so before.

There are several easy ways to contact your legislator through the names, address and telephone number listed at the end of this column.

In order to make the best use of that ability and help you choose the best method of contact, here is some specific, common-sense advice and information.

Last year, the Legislative Information Center received 20,000 phone calls during the Legislature, according to center Director Ann Ramsey.

The center is the telephone exchange for both the Senate and House of Representatives and also can inform members of the public what is happening with a specific piece of legislation, or bill as it is usually called.

There are three main ways recommended for a resident to express his opinion to his legislator, or legislators: by writing a letter, telephoning the information center or telling the information center your opinion on a bill.

When you simply state whether you favor or oppose the measure, the center will take that information to the legislator.

When you call, a legislator will often not be available immediately because of committee and party meetings and sessions of the House and Senate.

In that case, leave a message asking him to return the call and he will try to do so as soon as possible.

Be sure to give the purpose of the call, your name, address, phone number and times you will be available.

When writing, always sign the letter and give your name and address. Other tips that may help you when contacting your legislators are to:

- Write the letter yourself and in your own words.
- Write or speak as an individual not a group unless you are an official representative of that group.
- Plan and even note down your thoughts before calling.
- Give the source of any information or facts.

The following tells where and whom to write or telephone:

Cutting through America's emotions of the moment

© The Washington Post Company

WASHINGTON — The movable feast of celebration about the hostages has abated a bit, so perhaps it will not seem intolerably churlish to ask what, precisely, people have been celebrating.

men it is time to recall George Orwell's axiom that the great enemy of clear language is insincerity.

Much of the emotionalism, although not consciously insincere, has been symbolic in the sense that it has been a "psychological mechanism" or "keep unpleasant thoughts at bay." Beneath the intense, almost fierce focus on the ceremonies of victorious homecoming there was, I suspect, grim determination to have fun rather than face facts.

The hostages were used by Iran, for the humiliation of America and the consolidation of Iran's revolution, and now the former hostages have been used by America in a pageant, the effect of which is to prevent the country from thinking about how it allowed Iran to succeed.

The Carter administration's penchant for striking poses and calling them policies matched the public's penchant for yellow ribbons, candlelight vigils, and other gestures that were explained by the gestures on the grounds that "we just felt we had to do something." The public supported Carter's policies of "doing something" with the likes of Ramsey Clark and Kurt Waldheim, and the public lied yellow ribbons and called that "doing something." Such activities were colorful for the nation, but a nation that confuses calvarism with the defense of its interests is a nation that cannot distinguish between altitudinizing and acting.

Some Americans even say the crisis was "a good thing" because it "brought the country together." But so did Pearl Harbor, which was not a good thing and would have been worse if America's response had been vigils and ribbons. Perhaps Americans are so starved for a sense of "togetherness," and so covet the warm feeling of shared emotions, that they care not whether the emotions are ersatz, or disproportionate, or have a suitable occasion.

I cannot erase from my mental retina what I saw at 1 a.m. at the Dakota apartment building on the second day after John Lennon was shot there.

A crowd was keeping a vigil in front of a large gate covered with flowers and photographs. The uninitiated but striking effect was of an altar. A pen-up yearning for public witness found release in worship of a rock star. For days, 24 hours a day, news shows, talk shows and radio-disco party shows were clogged with people having fun explaining how they "loved" John Lennon, and their grief at their "deeply personal loss." Love expressed to disc jockeys, like grief expressed to Merv Griffin, is, however real the psychic need it nourishes, still synthetic.

Even worse than the inflation that is debasing the language is the inflation of thought. A nation that was built by muscle and preserved by blood is, increasingly, fueled by hyperbole and sustained by euphemism. (Remember the "incomplete success" at Desert One? It has an "economy increasingly geared to the manufacture of frivolous appetites (How many Calvin Kleins in your closet, America?), an entertainment industry geared to the manufacture of the lowest moods (using baths and titillation). And now the nation may be becoming addicted to manufactured "feelings.")

In the 1960s, professors noticed the growing tendency of students to answer questions with statements like, "Well, my feeling about Hamlet is..." and "My reaction to the Renaissance is..." The language of "reaction" and "feeling" was evidence of a culture losing interest in reason, celebrating sentiment, obsessed with "authenticity" and desiring fling it in terms of strong emotions, warm feelings, Descartes' "cogito, ergo sum." — I think, therefore I am — became "I feel, therefore I am."

In an acute dissection of the nation's recent mood, Thomas Bray of the Wall Street Journal notes that "How does it feel?" was the emblematic question of the hostage crisis, asked of everybody, about everything. The celebrating will end when the thinking begins.

Rep. James Jones, D-Okla., and Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., talk prior to NBC interview

Time required to reverse economy, Reagan aide says

WASHINGTON (UPI) — White House chief of staff James Baker said Sunday President Reagan found the American economy "worse than we thought" when he took office, and that it will take time to turn it around.

"I think there is very little debate that the economy this administration inherited is the worst we have seen in 50 years," Baker said. "It didn't happen overnight and it will take time to get out of it."

Baker also said on CBS-TV's "Face the Nation" that the administration has not completed its review of the U.S.-Iran agreement which resulted in release of the hostages but he hopes it will be completed soon.

And he declined to predict what kind of action Reagan might take in any future similar situation, but repeated the president's statement that he would not negotiate with terrorists and that retribution would be "swift and sure."

On the economy, he was asked if the failure to declare a state of emergency, as he had suggested before the inauguration, meant the economy turned out not to be as bad as expected.

"On the contrary, the economy was worse than we thought," he said. But he said his earlier suggestion that the president declare a "state of emergency" was designed simply to dramatize the urgency of the situation and did not involve granting the president any extraordinary emergency powers.

JAMES BAKER ... worse than we thought'

Reagan's scheduled nationally broadcast speech on the economy Thursday, Baker said, will be designed to explain "where we are, how we got into this mess, and — within a general framework — what we plan to do to get out of it."

Details and specifics of the new economic program, he said, will be outlined in his State of the Union speech later.

On other subjects, Baker said: "Reagan still firmly believes in 'Cabinet government,' but that does not necessarily mean daily or even frequent meetings of the full Cabinet. He said there will be many times when three or four Cabinet secretaries meet on specific problems on which each have expertise."

"He does not know how Reagan will react to the public squabble between his budget director and secretary of state over proposed cuts in foreign aid, since the president has been at Camp David all week-end, but said 'these things are natural' and such disputes are to be expected because the budget cuts will be 'tough calls.'"

"Reagan's harsh criticism of the Soviet Union was a repitition of his expressed views during the campaign. 'He means what he says, and does not change his tune from the campaign when he becomes president.'"

"It is not going to be 'business-as-usual' with the Soviet Union. 'There will be no one-way street ... you might have trouble trusting the Soviets if you look to their actions in such areas as South Yemen, Ethiopia, Afghanistan.'"

Kemp pledges to support any tax cut Reagan offers

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., said Sunday he will back any tax cut proposal offered by President Reagan, even if it falls short of the 3-year, 30-percent across-the-board plan he co-authored.

Kemp, interviewed on NBC-TV's "Meet the Press," indicated he is not certain the new administration will act immediately to cut Americans' tax bills.

"I think it (a tax cut) is going to be retroactive until Jan. 1, but I am willing to admit that if it takes (effect) in May or even in October, I certainly will defer," he said.

Asked whether he expects Reagan to announce a 10 percent personal tax cut for this year, Kemp said, "I expect he'll announce a 30 percent over three years."

Appearing with Kemp was Rep. James Jones, D-Okla., new chairman of the House Budget committee, who said he opposes a retroactive tax cut. Jones called the 30 percent tax-cut plan inflationary, and argued spending must be reduced before cutting taxes.

"I think the first order of business is to try and get inflation under control and that means we have to cut federal spending," he said.

"Large tax cuts, no matter how they are structured, if we do not deal with the spending out side of the budget ... would be inflationary," Jones said.

Kemp contended high tax rates cause inflation.

"Lowering the tax rates across the board — both individual and corporate — would have a tremendous incentive effect for economic growth, employment, output and GNP and then we would rely on fiscal and monetary policy to fight inflation," he said.

Iranian exile says assets go for terror

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A leading Iranian exile said Sunday if the United States returns to Iran the full $12 billion in seized assets, "the funds will be used for terrorism in the world and in the United States."

Mohammad Reza Tabatabai, twin brother of the slain Ali Akbar Tabatabai, a former Iranian diplomat, said in a telephone interview the money should be "kept in a trust account and given back when the terrorists are driven out and a legal government is re-established."

Tabatabai is president of the Iran Freedom Foundation, an anti-Khomeini group founded by his slain brother.

Although he said he is "happy to see hostages returned to their homeland," Tabatabai said the accord should not be honored because "it deals with a Communist-dominated political regime (and) was reached under duress."

"If the U.S. government returns the money to the same mullahs, they will only prolong the agony of 35 million Iranians still living under the despotic regime of Khomeini," he said.

The money sent to Iran would be used to further the cause of terrorism, Tabatabai said.

U.S., China to remain friendly

WASHINGTON (UPI) — U.S. Ambassador Leonard Woodcock said Sunday he believes the United States and China will continue having "friendly" relations but he doubts an official alliance will develop.

"I think we are best off developing friendly relations without thinking in terms of an alliance," Woodcock said in a copyrighted interview with U.S. News & World Report.

"There is just no reason why the United States and China should not be friendly nations," said Woodcock, who has been the American envoy to Peking since July, 1977.

The former head of the United Auto Workers said the two countries shared "a common concern about Soviet expansionism in Asia and generally around the globe."

"China certainly cannot hope to accomplish the goals it has set over the next 20, 30 or 40 years without stability in East Asia," he said. "Stability in this area is also highly important to us because of its impact on world stability, so we share that same basic strategic interest."

Woodcock said China and the Soviet Union were moving toward "a more correct state-to-state relationship" until the "Soviet invasion of Afghanistan and if tensions over the issue ease, improved relations still should be possible.

Thousands of Cubans still in refugee camp

FORT CHAFFEE, Ark. (UPI) — More than 5,200 uneasy Cubans still linger in a refugee camp originally targeted for closing last month, and some officials now speculate the last of the refugees might not be relocated until summer.

"No one realizes Chaffee still exists," said Barbara Lawson, camp director for the Cuban-Haitian Task Force. "We have this small problem — 5,200 people who need sponsors. But most people in other parts of the country don't know we're still around."

The task force recently mailed 63,000 booklets to churches and Hispanic groups around the country, explaining the situation at Chaffee and asking for help. Task force spokesmen are touring major cities in almost every state to drum up interest among potential sponsors.

During the expected "holiday lull," only 20 to 25 Cubans left Chaffee daily. In the past week, sponsorships increased to about 50 a day.

The remaining Cubans are young, single men — traditionally the hardest to sponsor. Many are still struggling with English and a new culture, and months behind Chaffee's tall, wire fences and row upon row of broken row of Army barracks has compounded their frustration.

Ex-convict planned aerial jailbreak 14 months ago

NEW YORK (UPI) — An ex-convict accused of hijacking a helicopter in an unsuccessful jailbreak attempt typed out a plan for the daring mission at least 14 months ago and police took possession of it, investigators said Sunday.

They also said suspect Thomas McCreary may be linked to the murders of two city police officers in 1972.

McCreary, 37, of Brooklyn, was a member of the Black Liberation Army, which is thought to be responsible for the murders of at least four city police officers.

Investigators said that when he was arrested in St. Louis in 1972 after a shootout with police, he was carrying the pistol of one of the officers killed by the Black militant group.

McCreary served five years in prison for attempted murder as a result of the shootout.

The failed jailbreak last Sunday at the Metropolitan Correction Center in lower Manhattan, closely resembled a meticulous typewritten plan found in McCreary's possession.

Police discovered the plan, code-named "Blue Magic," while searching McCreary's Brooklyn apartment in December 1979 in connection with another case.

After the plan was found, McCreary — a Legal Aid Society worker involved with prisoners — was denied further access to city jails.

In revoking his visitor's pass, Correction Commissioner Benjamin Ward also cited his association with McCreary.

But McCreary argued the plan was part of prison writings he was collecting. And in support of McCreary's appeal, the Legal Aid Society said the escape plan was "so ludicrous and confused as to suggest that the entire document is pure fantasy."

But investigators said the plan seems to be the blueprint for the aborted jailbreak last week, in which a man and woman hijacked a helicopter and forced the pilot to land on the roof of the MCC, where prisoners awaiting trial are held.

The plan failed because the hijackers brought the wrong size bolt-cutters to cut through the wire roof. Instead, they tossed a gun down to the inmates, flew off to a helipad and jumped into a waiting getaway car.

In Wyoming, your name's your name

By United Press International

WHAT'S IN A NAME?
 In Wyoming, your name is your game, as long as you're willing to pay for the privilege in case it's a little out of the ordinary — that is a hitherto hybrid of yours and your spouse's.

The case of State Rep. Doug Bryant, whose wife's official name is Gail Morley Bryant. Her name appears as such on all official documents except her driver's license, and under current state law it would cost her an estimated $300 in legal fees to make her name suitable to the state motor vehicle moguls. Bryant is doing something about that: he's introduced a bill in the Legislature in Cheyenne to ease such restrictions, and on Saturday the House gave preliminary approval to the measure.

RED HAIRING
 Louisiana State Police in New Orleans were baffled about a "new trooper" with bright red hair, a red muscic and red muttonchop-sideburns. No one at headquarters was aware of him, especially since the troopers are forbidden facial hair. The phantom trooper was so convincing that he even pulled the wool eyes of an FBI agent. But the suspect impersonator, Donald Artrup, made the mistake of listing the state police on a job resume, and his bright shirts matched those of the phantom. At his home, troopers said, officers found a state police windbreaker, shirts and badge. Artrup told arresting officers he did it all because "it made him feel good and he was proud of it."

WITH ENEMIES LIKE THAT ...
 The Rev. Jerry Falwell, founder of the "Moral Majority," denounced Jimmy Carter for "dignifying" Playboy magazine — which he called "salacious, vulgar" — by granting it an interview in 1978. So it's no wonder that Falwell is annoyed at finding an interview with himself in a similar sking mag, Penthouse. Falwell's gotten a judge in Roanoke, Va., to bar distribution of the current issue, but the ruling may be moot because 6 million issues already have been sent to newsstands. Besides, as Penthouse publisher Bob Guccione told the Los Angeles Times Sunday, Falwell's complaint may be a boon to the magazine's circulation. He says "couldn't afford a promotional genius like Falwell!" if it had had to pay for the service. Guccione says he expects sales of the current issue to jump by a half-million.

Best actor went to Robert DeNiro for his portrayal of Jake LaMotta in "Raging Bull," and Mary Tyler Moore was voted best actress for her job in "Ordinary People." Robert Redford, who made his directorial debut for "Ordinary People," was named best director, and the movie itself was voted best picture of the year. Sissy Spacek won best actress in a musical or comedy for her portrayal of Loretta Lynn in "Coal Miner's Daughter," which also was voted the best comedy or musical picture of the year.

Reagan's rhetoric rates 'C'

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Would people trust a man who gets a mere C plus in rhetoric?
 Dr. Theodore Windt thinks so and he lists the reasons who gave that rating to Ronald Reagan.

Windt, a member of a recently formed task force on presidential communication said that so far Reagan's presidential speeches have been good but uninspiring.

"While it may be premature to grade Reagan, I think he's had a good start, but not inspiring. His uses of language are plain," said Windt a member of the National Speech Communication Association, Annandale, Va.

Windt, also a University of Pittsburgh speech professor and author of books on presidential rhetoric, feels Reagan's speaking style "causes people to trust him."

However, Windt theorized, Reagan's rhetoric will be put to a test when there is a disagreement with the Congress on foreign or domestic issues and he will have to go to the people. "It and when that happens we'll see something more about him rhetorically than ceremonies such as the inauguration and first press conference."

Noting that Reagan is the first president to have his rhetoric closely studied, Windt said, "We will be monitoring the communication process of the Reagan administration and will issue reports at year-end and annually afterwards."

"The concern is that the most important communicator in America is the president," said Windt.

Reviewing Reagan's initial rhetoric, Windt said, "The inauguration speech was written in advance. It was fitting and proper but not inspiring, but then again, very few of those speeches are long remembered.

"The only thing that struck me in the speech was parts of it were drawn from the lexicon of the managerial class. That gives us at least a preliminary view of a managerial administration. The president thinks in those terms."

Opportunity and Highway 84 may have passed by the town but to the people who live there it's still the garden of...

Eden

EDEN — Some would say the fall of Idaho's Eden parallels that of its biblical namesake. It was all downhill after the beginning.

Abandoned or seldom-used storefronts dominate the main strip of this small eastern Jerome County town. Until recently, street signs did not exist. Permitted efforts to spruce up vacant lots and alleys have been on the city's agenda for years, but never quite get off the ground.

If Eden is dying, however, the corpse is a persistent one.

The city's population totaled 343 in the last census and has not changed appreciably since the 1930s. Growth-minded residents still manage to find rays of hope, however, amidst the jumble of broken windows, rusted tin roofs and painted-over business signs.

One such glimmer is Lillian "Lil" Frazier, who arrived in town three years ago, bought an abandoned theater and converted it into the Eden Cafe and Rooms. Odds were against success. The freeway had diverted truck traffic from Eden, closing the previous Eden-Cafe.

Frazier fashioned a regional clientele through word-of-mouth, advertising and ample portions of ham, eggs, meat and potatoes.

"I don't want anyone to leave hungry," she says.

No one ever does.

Last winter, when Wasatch Corporation officials needed a base for their powerline construction crews, they chose Lil's. Working 16-hour days to match their 10, she fixed breakfasts, sack lunches and dinners large enough to require new holes in the crews' utility belts.

Next time Wasatch is in the area they will be back, she was told.

By all accounts Eden's heyday came early, like a mining town, only it wasn't; like a railroad town abandoned when the tracks changed course, except that the trains still run through town and still play a role in getting farmers' produce to market.

Paul Okleberry, who lives a mile south of Eden and moved to the area in 1913, said the town's early years were its liveliest. Among its shops and businesses, he said, were a bank, a general mercantile, two grocery stores, a saloon, a harness shop, two elevators, a drugstore, two lumberyards, and a silent movie theater.

There are two theories on how Eden got its name, Okleberry said. He subscribes to the second.

Some people say the town was built on land acquired from a Mr. Edward Eakin and was named using the first two letters of his first name and the last two letters of his last name. That would spell "Edin," Okleberry pointed out. The more plausible story, he said, is that railroaders saw vast expanses of desert wildflowers and prairie grass two years after a range fire, and noted the similarities with biblical garden of Eden.

If the latter is true, the newness soon wore off, to hear Okleberry tell it. The Hansen bridge over the Snake River, completed in about 1920, provided residents with a short route to Twin Falls. Motor cars did the rest.

"The Model T put people on wheels and they all went to Twin," he said.

The second telling blow came when the Eden bank went broke during lean years in the early 1920s, he said. "After that, everybody went to Hazelton. It got the bank. The bean houses. The hardware store. Everything."

Bad blood between Edenites and Hazeltonians comes up a lot in discussions about history of the two towns. No one seems to remember why, but two towns separated by only three miles of railroad or buckboard sprang up at about the same time. When Hazelton built a new high school in 1925, Eden hired the same architect and completed its schoolhouse in 1927.

Right, Bill Rice, 88, of Hazelton and Virgil Hite, 64, of Eden, far right, enliven the town's main street where closed buildings and shops are in the majority.

Third-grade students at Eden Elementary School let off steam during a recess period. About 180 students in grades kindergarten through third grade are part of Eden's future.

Hazards from artificial light deserve warning, writer says

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The light from fluorescent bulbs causes cancer in laboratory animals, a Reader's Digest science writer said Sunday, and quoted government studies showing artificial light causes more damage to mammals than an equal dose of sunlight.

Lowell Pontie, whose investigation report appears in the February issue of Reader's Digest, said the hazard from fluorescent light is the same as from sunlight: ultraviolet rays that cause skin cancer.

He of UPI would like to see the U.S. government require warning labels on fluorescent bulbs as it does on cigarette packages.

"These unseen ultraviolet rays in sunlight are the reason sensitive persons get skin cancer from too much exposure to the sun," Pontie said in an interview.

"But the invisible light radiated by fluorescent bulbs causes genetic damage and cancer to mammals at a higher rate than sunlight does," he said.

He said the unnatural light from fluorescent bulbs radiates at color wavelengths different from sunlight.

"We have only lived with fluorescent bulbs since the 1930s," he said, "but already they are the most widely used kind of light in American schools, offices and factories."

He quoted Dr. F. Alan Anderson of the U.S. Food and Drug Administration's Bureau of Radiological Health who last year said his studies confirmed that fluorescent light causes more damage to mammals than an equal dose of sunlight.

Pontie, of Los Angeles, a staff science writer for Reader's Digest, found more than a dozen major science studies during his investigation that confirmed the cancer causing effects of fluorescent light, he said.

"If evidence showed that a chemical caused this much cancer," he said, "the government would move quickly to ban it."

"But the FDA only has power to regulate foods and drugs not light," he said. But he added the Surgeon General of the U.S. may have the power to order a warning label put on fluorescent bulbs.

Pontie said the cancer risk can be eliminated by putting a solid plastic shield between such bulbs and people. The shield absorbs the cancer-causing ultraviolet light that all fluorescent bulbs give off, he said.

He said that fluorescent bulbs consist of a glass tube filled with argon gas and mercury vapor.

Snowmobile mishap kills Idaho boy, 11

IDAHO FALLS (UPI) — Erik Hurley, 11, Ammon, has been killed in a snowmobile accident on Grey's Lake Road about 20 miles east of Idaho Falls.

Bonneville County sheriff's officers said the boy was injured Saturday and died enroute to an Idaho Falls hospital.

Officers said there were no witnesses to the accident. They said, however, three snowmobilers from Blackfoot were just seconds behind Hurley and spotted where he had left the road, plunged over a 15-foot embankment and through a three-strand barbed-wire fence.

Eden

Eden's bank went broke. Hazelton's was moved from Miller when the Oregon Short Line beat out the Idaho Southern for a $100,000 loan. But as far as some Eden residents are concerned, "they" moved the bank to Hazelton and robbed Eden of its future.

Critics insist H.E. Gundelfinger set growth back in Eden for 49 years by refusing to loan money to the town's merchants. Gundelfinger named his relocated bank Hazelton State, but to some it was always "Hazelton First."

"He said if I built it in Hazelton I'd loan me the money," recalled Jim Luulow who had already built a cement-block service garage in Eden and wanted a $2,000 loan to pay for his materials.

"He wouldn't even take a $5,000 mortgage on the house across the street," added John Luulow, his father. John and a friend built the garage for his son using materials from the lumberyard where he worked, he said. They were not about to dismantle it and move it to Hazelton.

The anti-Eden bias persisted for several years. The First Fidelity Purchased Gundelfinger's bank in the late 1960s, Jim Luulow said, adding that Idaho First National has since acquired the bank and uses a more evenhanded approach.

Other members of the Eden community, however, say the former Hazelton banker was tops and has been unjustly blamed for the town's lack of growth.

"He was a good banker, one of the few who never closed his doors during the Depression," said Henry Jones, who arrived from Arkansas in 1934 and has built a mammoth cattle feeding operation just west of Eden.

Gundelfinger ran a farmers' bank, Jones said. He was reluctant to take risks on commercial ventures.

Two other factors influencing the town's lack of growth, residents say, were the decision to build a sugar beet processing plant in Paul rather than Eden, and the opening of Interstate 84.

City fathers poured cold water on overtures from the sugar company, claiming the plant would "bring undesirable" to town, according to Kenneth Davis, a retired town marshal who arrived with his parents by covered wagon from Marysville, Kan., in 1910.

The freeway opening in 1967 had a major impact on some parts of the town's economy and left others unaffected. Conoco station owner Art Henry said the freeway clipped 80 percent of his retail gasoline trade. Highway 25 had been the fastest route across the state for tourists and long-haul truckers.

Henry, whose grandfather helped found the Webbs and Henry Cattle Company and whose father helped build Milner Dam, said he and the other gas station in town survive through bulk sales of gasoline, diesel and heating oil.

The Eden City Council has no major promotional efforts or city improvements on its front burner, said Mayor Nina Eisenhauer. Residents rejected garbage pickup service last fall after a heated townhall meeting one townsmen likened to "World War II."

Opponents misrepresented cost estimates for the service, Eisenhauer said, but there are no present plans to return the issue to the ballot.

More than a few residents seem content with the town the way it is — a sleepy, out-of-the-way place where life, in the winter at least, is predictable.

"I don't care if it never grows. It's not going to do me any good if it does," said retired farmer Jim Saltee as he slipped morning coffee at the Eden Cafe.

Card players can find a gin game most mornings or afternoon at the Trophy Club, a Wilson Street bar marked only by a hand-lettered Reagan and Bush sign — and a no-one-under-19 sticker on the door.

Younger tavern-goers hang out across the street at the Snug Lounge, where pool is the game and tournaments are held Monday nights through the winter. Non-drinkers head for The Loft, which features piano, pinball, pool and a warm fire after school.

"More of the same," might sum up the city's plans for the future. Though some residents including the Luulows believe the council should be actively seeking grant money to improve the city's water system, Eisenhauer said she expects nothing major, at least while property taxes are frozen by the Idaho Legislature.

"No," she said in response to a reporter's call following the referendum; "if they rejected garbage pickups, I doubt there will be anything 'new' for a long time."

Nurse has own slant on narcotics arrests

DENVER (UPI) — "As a former alcohol and drug abuser, nurse Beverly Stapleton has some unique insights into the arrest of 10 metropolitan area nurses for narcotics theft."

Stapleton, who is a member of a Alcoholism Council of Colorado task force, said she knows from personal experience that nurses, like all professionals, suffer from job stress.

But nurses and other health professionals, she said, have access to hospital narcotics — so drug abuse can become addiction, she said. She is a registered nurse and counselor at Mount Airy Psychiatric Center.

"I see this as a desperate act by people who are really in trouble. A lot of times their colleagues suspect that something is going on, but it's hard for them to approach someone and ask if they need help," she said.

Stapleton advocates other health professionals confronting suspected drug abusers, despite the likely hostility, to protect patient health. She said she broke her addiction to alcohol and drugs seven years ago.

"I was lucky. I never got caught. I would always quit a job before I got fired," she said, but admitted to having worked in a "Valium black-out" for a week as a surgical nurse.

She said she was drinking a quart of vodka a day when she enrolled in a treatment program. She said employers appreciate her honesty about her past problems and fears about criticism from colleagues have been unfounded.

"I'd like to see a support group for nurses formed. The doctors have Concerned Physicians. What we need is a Concerned Nurses group. It's something to work on," she said.

Weapons, including rifles and shotguns, were reported stolen from the home of Darrel Phillips and had not been recovered, the deputy said. Fuse blacks out Twin Falls police

Buhl pool renovation under study

BUHL — Renovation of Buhl's municipal swimming pool will be the topic of a City Council work session tentatively scheduled for early February.

City Engineer John Priester said he and councilmen will discuss the extent of renovation and funding alternatives. Buhl's only public swimming pool is cracked and leaks, Priester said.

The engineer said the council has indicated a desire to operate the pool this summer. Renovation is advisable from a structural standpoint, he said, but the state of deterioration is "not such that it poses safety hazards for swimmers."

"It's been a good, functional pool," Priester said. "It's simply getting old, and it needs some work." The pool was built about 40 years ago.

Twins Falls police

TWIN FALLS — A fuse located near the Twin Falls city building complex blew out Sunday afternoon.

As a result, the Twin Falls police and fire departments were left without power for a short time.

Police on duty drove to the Twin Falls County sheriff's office and asked that department to handle all city police communications until service could be restored.

Officers also asked radio stations to announce that all fires or other emergencies should be reported to the sheriff's office until power was restored.

Officers said the telephones at the police station, with the exception of one incoming emergency line, were out. Police could not call out and could not operate radio equipment or the fire department communication equipment. All fire calls are also received at the police dispatch center.

The dispatchers on duty, Anita Fahrenwald and Gary Hall, said when the fuse blew about 1 p.m., it created a loud sound like an explosion in the police office. They said immediately the teletype began "jumping and 'dinging,'" all alarms sounded and the telephones were making chiming sounds.

Asked what she did first, Fahrenwald said "scream."

Power was restored by Idaho Power Co. crews a short time later. The power company officials said power was off only about 16 minutes, but police said it was about 20 to 45 minutes before they were back to normal and it was feared the power surge when service was restored may have damaged the teletype.

Maintenance workers with the power company said the fuse was located behind the Beacon Club, 157 Second St. E. It was blown out when a lightning arrester failed. This left about a dozen customers in the area without power for 16 minutes, according to power company officials.

Mt. St. Helens lets loose steam, ash

VANCOUVER, Wash. (UPI) — Mount St. Helens broke an extended period of silence Sunday with a short blast of steam and ash accompanied by a small tremor.

Observers with the U.S. Forest Service, flying around the volcano reported the steam plume and some light ash about 1,000 feet over the crater rim at 11:15 a.m. MST. The activity lasted about five minutes before the plume began dissipating, they said.

Jerene Van Holt, a spokeswoman for the Forest Service, said the pilots could not tell if the plume contained new ash or old material stirred up from the crater floor during the activity.

University of Washington seismologists said the tremor represented the first real earth movement in the volcano area after a couple of weeks of "nothing but straight lines."

Slippery streets cause accidents

TWIN FALLS — Several traffic accidents occurred in Twin Falls Saturday as a result of icy and drifted streets and roads.

Most of the accidents resulted in minor injuries.

Twin Falls Highway Department crews closed the road into Shoshone Falls Park because of ice and drifting snow. Equipment was working most of Saturday plowing country north-south roads, many of which were drifted shut by early afternoon.

In Twin Falls two persons were taken to Magic Valley Memorial Hospital by ambulance following a collision Saturday afternoon on Addison Avenue at Washington Street.

Robert Garcia, 39, of Filer was eastbound on Addison, officers said, when his car collided with the rear of one driven by Jeanne J. Warr, 22, of Twin Falls—she and a passenger, Eileen Bealista, 24, of Twin Falls, were taken to Magic Valley Memorial Hospital by ambulance.

Clair Daniels, 47, of Twin Falls suffered cuts and other injuries Saturday night when his vehicle struck a car driven by Kenneth W. Kilcrease, 44, of Kearns, Tex. The Kilcrease vehicle was stopped in a traffic lane, police said, and Daniels did not realize it and was unable to stop in time to avoid a collision.

Magic Valley Memorial Hospital officials said Warr and Daniels were treated and released. Bealista was listed in stable condition Sunday night.

Elko BLM officials start on plan

ELKO, Nev. — Elko District officials of the Bureau of Land Management have begun work on a comprehensive plan for public land in northeastern Nevada.

The Elko BLM District has published a newsletter to describe issues and draft planning criteria to be used in assembling its Wells Resource Management Plan, according to Rod Harris, Elko District manager. The Wells Resource Area extends from near Jarbidge east to the Utah border and south to Ruby Lake.

Tentative planning issues identified in public meetings last spring have been divided into five categories, Harris said. They are vegetation, real estate, minerals, fire and resource protection.

Public comment on the planning criteria and issues must be received by the Elko district before March 2. Wells is the first resource area in Nevada to fall under a new comprehensive planning framework similar to that used by the U.S. Forest Service.

In Idaho, pilot efforts using the new process will be conducted on BLM-administered land in Cassia County. Officials at the Burley BLM District announced earlier this month they will hold meetings this spring to generate a tentative list of planning issues.

BPA publishes statement on system role

PORTLAND — Bonneville Power Administration has published an environmental impact statement on its role in the regional power supply system.

The lengthy report describes the environmental impacts of alternative energy decisions and past working relationships between public and private electricity providers in the Pacific Northwest.

Conclusions in the five-year study, however, were outdated before the document was even issued. Enactment of the Pacific Northwest Power Planning and Conservation Act last November changes the BPA's role in the regional energy system.

What's what

Yellow, green create differing impressions

A woman in a bright yellow dress appears butler and hipper than she'd look in some neutral hue. A woman in a green dress seems less large in both places. That is the contention of a designer who picks costume colors for a living. This notion received considerable publicity in the Hollywood heyday of the 1930s when one particularly popular combination was the yellow sweater with the green skirt.

You can recite the Lord's Prayer in as little as 13 seconds if you zip right along. Maybe it's appropriate that such be so. Someone dies in this country every 13 seconds. Those who pray a lot—anywhere at any time—always have good reason.

You know those famous baby blue eyes of actor Paul Newman? They're blind to color.

BURT REYNOLDS

Q. Didn't Burt Reynolds learn how to act by watching Marlon Brando?

A. Not to act, more likely. Maybe you remember, Reynolds early tried to pawn himself off as a million angry, a sort of recycled Brando with a high school diploma. The character he pretended was maybe one half as smart and one quarter as attractive as the real Reynolds, who didn't even grow to life-size until he started laughing at himself. I like to think that Reynolds is to pickup trucks what John Wayne was to horses. But Reynolds could act otherwise, if he wanted to. He's gifted with the brights.

ON STAGE

The Open Air Theatre Company of Wolverhampton, England, is government-funded. But funds are so short that it's necessary to cut back costs drastically. Its current stage production is "Snow White and the Two Dwarfs." Or so a correspondent astutely reports.

In Vancouver, B. C., is a book shop that stocks only one title. The shop: Wendy's Bookstore. The title: "The Wendy King Story, Confessions of a Prostitute."

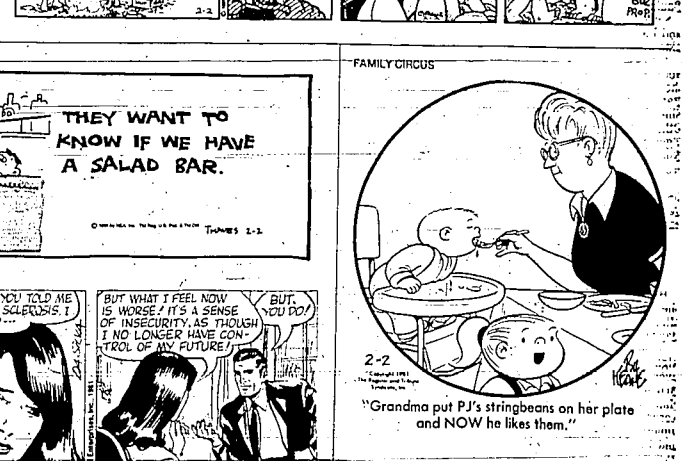

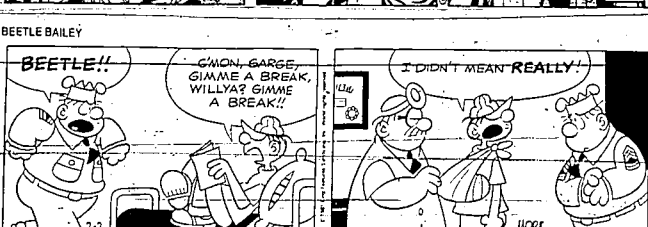

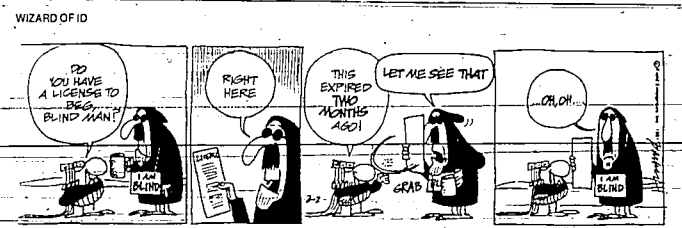

One of the most skillful writers you fast track is that of renowned author Ray Bradbury—who, I'm told, doesn't drive a car and has never flown in an airplane.

Another nominee for president of the "My Name is a Poem" Club is Jeff Greff of Regent, N. D.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Glick of Jerome. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Houston Allen of San Diego.

The bride wore a white floor length gown of nylon tulle and a train of lace belonging to her mother. The lace bodice was accented by a sweetheart neckline and lily point sleeves. The bouffant skirt was accented with a "cathedral" train and side panels of pleated nylon tulle. She carried a bouquet of peach and ivory silk carnations.

Robyn Sly was matron of honor and Donna Vadeboncover was bridesmaid. James Sly was best man and Philip Vadeboncover was groomsman. All the attendants are from Boise.

Jamie Dias was the flower girl and Clifford Dias, ringbearer. They are second cousins of the bride and the children of Vince and Cheryl Dias of Wendell.

A reception followed the ceremony with a three tiered cake made by Mrs. Frank Whelan of Filer, aunt of the bride, served by Mrs. Cheryl Dias of Wendell and Mrs. Judy Richards of Pocatello. Both are cousins of the bride. Punch and coffee were served by Mrs. Diane Klevmoen of West Jordan, Utah, also cousin of the bride.

Brenda Ghadiali was in charge of the gift table and Paula Burgess was in charge of the guest book. Both are from Twin Falls.

Special guests were Mrs. Bertha Glick and Mr. and Mrs. Leo Whelan, grandparents of the bride; all of Twin Falls.

The couple will make their home in Boise.

MR. AND MRS. GREGORY THIBAUT

JEROME — Ailee Ann Reed became the bride of Gregory Thibault on Jan. 10.

The ceremony was performed at the Jerome Methodist Church by the Rev. Ray Wright.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Sonnich Sonnichsen of Jerome and Rex Reed of Filer. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Thibault of Jerome.

Shelley Stephens sang and Dennise McCracken played the organ.

The bride's gown was of organza fashion with a Queen Anne neckline and scallops on the chapel length train, which was edged with crystal beading. The bodice, long fitted sleeves and hem were accented by French chantilly lace and a dusting of pearls. Her net veil was covered with white silk appliques and topped with a "junior" cap covered with reembrodered lace, pearls and edged by a row of silk flowers. Her bouquet was a cascade of gardenias and miniature roses.

Lauren Reed, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. Susan Schrank, Jan Thibault, Lisa Thibault and Amy Peterson were bridesmaids.

Flower girl was Brooke Alexander, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Duane Alexander. Melanie Callen and Teri Thompson were candlelighters.

Kent Thibault, brother of the bridegroom, was best man. John Reed, Rod Morgan, Dave Howe and Rick Hillier were ushers. Adrian Isaacs, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Isaacs, was the ringbearer.

Following the ceremony a reception was held in the church social hall. The four-tiered cake was served by Mrs. Sandra Thompson, Mrs. Cheryl Accuff and Mrs. Patty Brown.

Cinda Morgan attended the gift table. Members of the Jerome United Methodist Women assisted at the reception. Special guests were Mrs. Alma Thibault of Palmdale, Calif., and Mrs. Nellie Stockton of Jerome, grandmothers of the bridegroom, and Mr. and Mrs. D. O. Davis of Jerome, Mrs. Lella Reed of Filer, and Mrs. Elsie Sonnichsen of Jerome, grandparents of the bride.

A rehearsal dinner was hosted by the bridegroom's parents at the Jerome Senior Citizens Center.

The bride and bridegroom are graduates of Jerome High School and both attended Boise State University.

Following a trip to Steamboat Springs and Denver, Colo., the newlyweds will make their home in Jerome.

Hoppe-Leshner

The doubling candlelight ceremony was conducted by the Rev. Leslie Peterson.

Mrs. Ted Tripple, daughter of the bride, was matron of honor. Jack H. Leshner, son of the bridegroom, was best man.

The bride wore powder-blue with a white rosebud corsage and was given in marriage by her son, Paul Hoppe.

Mrs. Don Lauder sang, accompanied by Mrs. Byrle Carr, organist. In addition to the immediate attendants of the bride and bridegroom guests at the private ceremony included Mr. and Mrs. Jim Smallwood, daughter and son-in-law of the bridegroom; Mrs. Paul Hoppe, daughter-in-law of the bride; and Mrs.

Randy Taylor and Tim Smallwood, grandchildren of the bridegroom.

Following the ceremony the bridegroom hosted a dinner for members of both families including Jessie and Becky Taylor, great-grandchildren of the bridegroom.

The bridegroom is owner/manager of the Twin Falls Auto Parts and the bride is a foster grandmother at Bickel School. Both have lived in Twin Falls for more than 40 years.

Dear Abby

After 33 years silence blood not much thicker than water

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Last week my husband's half-brother, from whom he had not heard in 33 years, appeared at our door with his wife. They had driven from California, arriving at our place in Ohio just as we were finishing our dinner. We were hurrying to get to a meeting so we didn't offer to feed them. It was very awkward.

My husband asked them where they were staying, and they said, "Nowhere." I'm sure they were planning to stay with us, but I was expecting my parents from out of town in a few days, and we have only one guest room, so I didn't offer. However, I did invite them to come back the following evening for dinner.

RONDA FARMER
...finalist

Twin Falls teenager to compete

TWIN FALLS — Ronda Lynne Farmer, 15, daughter of Diana Speirs of Twin Falls, has been selected to be a finalist in the 1981 Miss Idaho National Teenager Pageant, June 5, 6, and 7 at the Red Lion Motor Inn in Boise.

This pageant is the official state final to the national pageant to be held in August in Lake Charles, La., over national television.

Miss Farmer, a student at Robert Stuart Junior High School, is sponsored by For Floral, White Mortuary, Cains and Quality Roofers, all of Twin Falls.

Service news

TWIN FALLS — Capt. Michael J. Florence, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ted Florence of Twin Falls, has been decorated with the U.S. Air Force Commendation Medal at Wright-Patterson Air Force Base, Ohio.

The Air Force Commendation Medal is awarded to those individuals who demonstrate outstanding achievement or meritorious service in the performance of their duties on behalf of the Air Force.

TWIN FALLS — Carolyn G. George, daughter of Valcenne G. George of Twin Falls, has been assigned to Keesler Air Force Base, Miss., after completing Air Force basic training.

Airmen who complete basic training earn credits toward an associate degree in applied science through the Community College of the Air Force.

The airman will now receive specialized instruction in the avionics system field.

RUPERT — Capt. Gary F. Griffin, son of Mr. and Mrs. Earl H. Griffin of Rupert, has graduated from the Squadron Officer School at Maxwell Air Force Base, Ala.

Graduates of the school studied communication skills, international relations, manpower management, and responsibilities that prepare junior Air Force officers for command and staff duties.

Griffin will now serve at Davis-Monthan Air Force Base, Ariz.

FILER — Christopher T. Dean, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward N. Dean of Route 2, Filer, has received the silver wings of an Army aviator and was appointed a warrant officer upon completion of the rotary wing aviator course at the Army Aviation School, Ft. Rucker, Ala.

BÜHL — Staff/Sgt. Dorothy A. Schultz, daughter of Mrs. and Mrs. Eddie Schultz of Route 3, Bühl, has been decorated with the Air Force commendation medal at Cannon Airbase, N.M.

The medal is awarded to individuals demonstrating outstanding achievement or meritorious service in performance of their duties.

WENDELL — Jacquelyn L. Miller, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. Mathers of Route 1, Wendell, has been promoted to the rank of specialist 5 in the U.S. Army. She is a microwave equipment repairer at Augsburg, West Germany.

Now my husband says blood is thicker than water — that we should have asked them to stay with us until my parents arrived. I think we did enough asking them for dinner.

Please settle this argument.

—MRS. VERSUS MR.
DEAR MRS.: If these long-lost relatives knew where to find you, they could (and should) have written or called to let you know they were coming. Blood may be thicker than water, but after 33 years in California it might have thinned out a little. I vote with you.

DEAR ABBY: I must respond to your letter from IN LOVE IN JERSEY, the woman who was in love with a homosexual. Your advice to "do yourself (and him) a favor and give up" probably cost them both a valuable friendship. Gay men make marvelous friends. They are warm, sincere, understanding and will do anything for a friend. Maybe she wasn't so much in love with him as she valued his friendship.

My best friend is gay (I am a woman), and we think the world of each other. Friends are hard to come by, and it shouldn't matter whether they are male, female or gay.

—LOVES A GAY IN PORTLAND
DEAR LOVES: "IN LOVE IN JERSEY" didn't just "love" a gay; she was "IN LOVE" with him, and wanted him to MARRY her. She asked if I thought he could change his sexual preference.

I told her his chances for changing were slim and advised her to give up. Granted, gays make wonderful friends, but they are not for marrying.

DEAR ABBY: A very good friend of ours died after a long illness. While this friend (I'll call him Bill) was ill, my husband and I sent over at least a dozen books for him to read. One in particular is irreplaceable, having been personally inscribed by the author. It's been nearly two years since Bill died, and his widow has made no attempt to return our books.

Although we see her quite often socially as well as at church, we have never mentioned the books to her. We know she's aware that she has them because a year ago she said, "I'm really ashamed of myself for not having returned those books you let Bill read."

How does one resolve such an awkward problem?

—NAMELESS PLEASE
DEAR NAMELESS: Call Bill's widow and tell her you realize that she's had a lot on her mind these last two years, so she needn't be embarrassed for neglecting to return your books, and if it's convenient, you'd like to stop by and pick them up tomorrow. And when you do, bring her a little gift of flowers, cookies, fruit or whatever.

Murray's FG's give NFC Pro Bowl victory

HONOLULU (UPI) — Detroit's Eddie Murray kicked four field goals and Steve Bartkowski hooked up with Atlanta teammate Alfred Jenkins on a 55-yard scoring pass Sunday to give the AFC a 21-7 Pro Bowl victory over the AFC.

Murray, third in the National Football League in scoring with 116 points, connected on ones from 31, 24 and 37 yards out, but it was the Bartkowski-Jenkins "bomb" that broke the game open in the second half. Until the touchdown the NFC held only a 9-7 lead.

Murray performance was only one shy of the game record. "I should have made them all," Murray, the games most valuable player, said. "I knew I was only one short of the record."

Murray, a soccer-style kicker, said he enjoyed the heat although he has lived in cold places such as Canada and England.

"I came out here to have some fun so winning the award is really something special," Murray said. "This is my first trip to Hawaii so you can imagine how I feel."

down season" for the Lions and he was surprised to be selected for the game.

After watching the Pro Bowl in high school and college, he said, "It was always my dream to come to Hawaii and play in the game."

"I'm surprised they picked me as the most valuable player; me being a kicker and all."

A safety and a holding call in the end zone on the AFC's Art Shell of Oakland, gave the NFC's its final points.

The NFC's touchdown followed an attempt by the AFC to go for a first down on a 4th-and-3 situation at the NFC 43 with eight minutes left.

The first and third were set up by interceptions by Randy Logan of Philadelphia and Joe Lavender of Washington and the second by a fumble recovery by Dallas' Randy White.

The NFC missed another scoring opportunity after a recovery of a fumbled punt by J.T. Smith of Kansas City at the AFC 1, but the NFC, in turn, gave it up when the Eagles' Ron Jaworski mishandled a snap from center and Gary Barbaro of New England City recovered in the end zone for a touchdown.

After the fumble recovery, Brian Sipe of Cleveland took the AFC 80 yards in just three plays, capping the lightning march with a 9-yard pass to Stanley Morgan of New England.

Turnovers resulted in all the first-half scoring with the NFC taking the two-point lead on field goals by Murray. The second came with 43 seconds left and third with no time remaining.

The big play was a 52-yard hook from Sipe to Joe Cribbs of Buffalo.

Both coaches said they did not expect the game to turn out the way it did — a game full of errors and turnovers and great defensive play.

"I was really impressed with our defensive secondary," NFC Coach Leeman Bennett of Atlanta said. "I think it made a big difference in the game."

"It was not artistic," AFC Coach Sam Rutigliano of Cleveland said. "We were planning to make it a wide open game, but turnovers..."

Both also saw heat as a factor in the game with the temperature in the high 70s.

Wendell Athletic Director Yogi Behrens, who thinks involvement in sports is essential, feels it would be crazy to tighten athletic budgets more.

Yogi Wendell's AD spends most of the basketball season preparing for girls' district tournaments and coaching

By MARV CLEMONS
Times-News sports editor

WENDELL — Wendell High School has become a fixture for the annual Fourth District A-3 basketball tournaments. Playing a major role behind the scenes is Wendell Athletic Director Yogi Behrens.

To a group of 20 or so volunteer workers Yogi is the boss, to visiting coaches and players he is the man to see if problems arise, to an injured player he is one of the first people on the court to help out.

You can find Yogi sweeping the floor if one of the young would-be broom-pushers is goofing off. Or you can find him rushing towels to a locker room or running the scoreboard for a timer who hasn't arrived on time.

The community of Wendell, especially some 20 to 30 volunteer workers, put on both a boys and girls tourney each year. It comes to nearly four weeks of taking tickets, parking cars, cooking hot dogs and several other chores. Yogi is behind it all, spending seven to eight hours at the gym after the regular school day — and also trying to coach his varsity boys basketball team as well.

His title is tournament manager, but Yogi is and has been much more than that to Magic Valley high school sports for some 25 years.

Yogi (a nickname he earned in college) arrived in the Magic Valley at Camas County High in 1966 after graduating from what is now Idaho State University. He was there until 1982 when he moved to Wendell. He's coached just about every sport including football, basketball, baseball, track and wrestling. His duties at Wendell have varied over the years, according to the needs and wishes of the members of the school board. This year he's involved as junior high football coach, varsity boys' basketball coach, track coach and athletic director.

"I've coached just about all of them except girls basketball and volleyball," he said. "And I sure hope they don't ask me to do that."

Perhaps the highlight of his coaching career came in the late 60s and early 70s when Wendell won the state track and field championship three out of four years.

Yogi, who started the Wendell wrestling program in the 60s, loves all sports, but admits track has something special.

"I enjoy it because you can see the kids develop and accomplish more on an individual basis," he said.

Yogi fits the mold of most coaches. He believes the junior high, freshman and sophomore programs are for developing fundamentals, giving every player a chance to learn and play.

But the Wisconsin native sees the pressure of fans supporting only winning programs sometimes conflicting with the philosophy of letting everybody play.

"That's problems comes when it's time to balance the budget. At Wendell, like most area schools, the gate receipts must pay for athletic equipment, officials' fees and other related expenses. The travel costs and salaries are covered by tax dollars. Some schools elect to pay for travel out of gate receipts as well.

The success of an athletic team has a direct influence on the gate receipts. A championship football or basketball team can also mean an easy year on the pocketbook for an athletic department.

poor record means fewer fans and fewer dollars.

At Wendell the boys basketball attendance is the big money-maker. Football normally does well, but Wendell is still recovering from having to play afternoon games a few years back when the lighted field could not be played on for a season.

"It's getting tough to cover everything," Yogi said. "The equipment costs have really hurt us in the past few years. That helmet that was $30 a few years ago is now $60. It costs about $175 to outfit a kid in football gear now."

Yogi said the growth of girls sports programs during the past six to seven years has caused the biggest strain, yet he's 100 percent for such programs.

"Girls sports really put the crunch on us; but they should have the opportunity sports offer, too," he said.

Tourneys to resume tonight

By MARV CLEMONS
Times-News sports editor

Girls district basketball tournament action will be heavy tonight as Magic Valley teams continue the process to see which teams advance to next week's four state tournaments.

Six games will be played tonight at five locations. In four of the six games the losing team will be out of the running for the coveted state berths.

The only twinnish is at Wendell, where the A-3 Fourth District Tourney will have Kimberly meeting Gooding at 6:30 p.m. and Filer facing Shoshone at 8:15 p.m.

The loser of the Kimberly-Gooding game will be done for the season. Kimberly defeated Declo 50-41 in its first tourney outing last Monday before falling 33-29 to Shoshone in the second round. The Bulldogs trimmed and Oakes in overtime last Thursday to stay alive. Gooding whipped Gemma Ferry 49-34 in its tourney opener before Filer upset the top-ranked Senators 41-31 in the second round. Gooding kept alive last Thursday by nipping Declo 45-39.

The second game is in the championship bracket with Filer and Shoshone both having two wins and no losses in the tournament. Filer has used good shooting and rebounding to defeat Valley and Gooding while Shoshone has overcome foul troubles in both of its games, wins over Wendell and Declo.

The Kimberly-Gooding winner will meet the Filer-Shoshone loser in Tuesday's solo game at 8 p.m. The loser of that game is out.

Single games will be played tonight at Jerome, Minico, Hansen and Richfield.

At Jerome the host Tigers take on Wood River in the A-2 Fourth District second round. Wood River opened the journey Saturday with a 42-22 win over Buhl while top-rated Jerome had a bye.

Minico will host Burley at 8 p.m. in the A-1 Fourth District journey. Both teams have fallen in Twin Falls in previous play and tonight's loser is out while the winner will advance to play at Twin Falls Wednesday night.

At Hansen a loser's out game will be played at 7 p.m. between Murtough and Oakes in the A-4 Fifth District journey. The winner advances to play Wednesday 7 p.m. against Hagerman.

At Richfield it will be Dietrich facing Camas County at 7 p.m. The loser is out and the winner faces Richfield Tuesday night. If Richfield wins Tuesday, it is on for the state tourney. If it loses, another game must be played.

A-1 state football playoffs likely to change format

TWIN FALLS — Magic Valley high schools figure into a couple of changes some principals would like to see in athletics.

At a meeting of state A-1 principals last week, two possibilities emerged as distinct.

One would be a re-working of the formula by which representatives to state from the four A-1 regions would be distributed from year to year. What this basically would entail is the Magic Valley and the Panhandle districts each getting two representatives every third year. The east would give up its third representative in two of those three seasons.

This conclusion is based on the premise that when Boise State's basketball pavilion (seating capacity 12,000) is completed, the state will permanently site the A-1 tournament there.

The ironic thing about that possible and/or probable re-allocation, is that a northern Idaho school voted against a proposal that could have brought a similar change as early as next year.

Impression at the A-1 meeting, those attending had the distinct very short run. In fact, there are some who feel very confident that next year will be the final round of it.

A brief vignette during the playoff discussion may indicate the feelings for the playoffs throughout the state.

It started with a Boise city rep complaining that last fall's playoffs were not truly representative because the best four teams came from the Boise pod — Borah, Boise, Capital and Meridian. None lost to any team but among those Boise schools, did not go and felt left out.

To that complaint, a Pocatello area representative rose to the occasion.

He said something along the line "okay, tell you what you do. You Tour teams set up the playoffs anyway you want to. Just limit the entries to your four schools if you want to and play it off any way you want to. Declare your winner as the state A-1 football champions — AND WE'LL BACK YOU!"

One thing that isn't helping the idea of A-1 playoffs is the podding idea tends to supersede the league games. That is, the championship of the Gem State Conference is overshadowed by "getting into the playoffs."

Representatives of both the Cross state and Gem State conferences expressed general satisfaction with their alignments. And as for state football championships, well, all are pretty well convinced no one in Idaho is about to overtake the Boise triumvirate plus Meridian.

Eight-man heads plan future Tuesday

On Tuesday the majority of the Snake River eight-man conference, basically members of the Northside Conference in basketball, will present its ideas to the state governing eight-man football.

The aim, of course, is to eliminate Castleford as a member. The Wolves joined the eight-man alignment three years ago and have gone undefeated and taken the state championship the past two.

The discussion will center around the enrollment size of Castleford compared to the other members of the league. In fact, it is reported that Carey High School has withdrawn from the conference at this point and under no circumstances will play the Wolves in football next fall.

It appears that North Gem, which loses something like 17-seniors this year, is not affected. It also is reported that Rockland and Castleford have been told they will not be scheduled regardless of what the state says. However, there are rumors around that Rockland has been told on the side that it might not necessarily be true in its case.

Left largely undiscussed in the tempest in a teapot is the matter of Shoshone which has lost its football program for now and is down sufficiently in enrollment to reach the A-4 classification. But with about 125 students in its top four grades, Shoshone's petition for eight-man membership was sharply rejected.

It is possible Shoshone could move to the Magic Valley (Southside) Conference for football purposes but that is an 11-man league. Shoshone had only 13 out when it cancelled its season in late August.

Sources to the west indicate that the pleas for the state to interfere in conference squabbling will not find too many sympathetic ears.

Castleford Principal Julie Domowitz says he and his school will have "absolutely nothing to say" on the matter until sometime next week at the earliest.

Ricks, Dixie and Casper next year?

Glancing ahead a little, CSI Coach Dave Campbell said he is trying to lure Ricks, Dixie and Casper to join his Eagles in next year's K and T Steel Basketball Tournament.

Again Ricks and CSI would not play, simply trade opponents.

Hang up right now is that Rich Coach Glenn Dalling is not overjoyed with the prospect of playing Dixie three times next year. Ricks and Dixie are both bound to the ICA, meaning they already have a home-and-home scheduled.

Robert Parish balances the ball on his fingers prior to sinking a basket for the East

Quickness

NBA's Eastern all-stars used that to give them a 123-120 win over the West stars

RICHFIELD, Ohio (UPI) — Billy Cunningham proved to be a good prophet in Sunday's NBA All-Star Game.

The East coach predicted he would have to combat the size and muscle of the West with quickness from his guards.

That's exactly what happened Sunday as Boston's Nate Archibald—the Most Valuable Player—and Atlanta's Eddie Johnson sped their way through the larger West guards to key a 123-120 victory.

"Johnson and Tiny (Archibald) were definitely the keys," said Cunningham, who coached the winning team in last year's All-Star Game.

Archibald, who won the MVP honor by 22 votes over Boston's Robert Parish, scored only nine points but he was honored for things which don't appear in the box score—speed and passing ability.

"My part of the game is to penetrate—that's my weapon," said Archibald, who had two layups down the middle in the final period when the West nearly erased a 16-point East lead. Archibald also had three steals and nine assists.

Johnson, who scored 16 points, said the size of the opposing guards affected his play.

"We had to pick them up 75 percent of the way downcourt and make them try to post up high," he said.

Cunningham, saying the game goes in spurts, said: "Last year we were down 18 points at one point."

The West trailed by three points with 3:45 left but the East matched the West point for point the rest of the way. A three-point try by Seattle's Jack Sikma failed with one second left.

"I guess I was the guy all the way," Sikma said. "I threw it into Kareem (Abdul-Jabbar) and when I got it back I knew I had to shoot. I had a good shot and I even tried to help it a little. But it bounced off the back of the rim and time expired."

Six others, besides Johnson, scored in double figures for the East, led by Julius Erving of Philadelphia with 18 points. The West's Dennis Johnson of Phoenix was the game high scorer with 21 points.

The victory was the 20th for the East in 31 games. The East has won five of the last seven.

Before a crowd of 20,239, the closest the West came in the last four minutes was three points when Abdul-Jabbar of Los Angeles scored to make it 119-116. But Archibald came back with a field goal to raise the East lead to 5 points.

At the two-minute mark, Abdul-Jabbar hit a 15-footer to cut it to 121-118. The West then regained possession but Erving stole the ball from Phoenix's Walter Davis. The West called time with 48 seconds to go and Johnson then gave the East a 123-118 lead on a layup off a pass from Archibald.

With 29 seconds left, George Gervin of San Antonio hit a 15-footer from the left side to make it 123-120. Sikma then missed his three-point shot.

Faul Westphal of Seattle had 19 points for the West, including 10 in the first quarter. Jamaal Wilkes of Los Angeles and Abdul-Jabbar had 15 apiece and Davis added 14.

For the East, Parish had 16 points and 10 rebounds and Cleveland's Mike Mitchell added 14 points. Wilkes had eight rebounds for the West.

The West, backed by Westphal, led 27-23 at the end of the first period. The largest lead the West enjoyed was eight points, on three occasions. Abdul-Jabbar had seven of his 15 points in the first quarter.

The East came back in the second quarter and took a 29-28 lead with 9:52 left on two foul shots by Milwaukee's Marquis Johnson.

The East built the lead to 42-33 with 7:06 left in the half but the West tied it 45-45 three minutes later behind Dennis Johnson, who hit five-of-seven from the floor in the second period. The half ended with the East ahead 61-58 and the West never led thereafter.

In the third quarter, the West twice came within a point, both times following layups by Adrian Dantley.

Watson co-leader of Crosby

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (UPI)—Tom Watson took aim at his first victory of the new season in his first start Sunday, sinking a birdie putt on the final hole at Pebble Beach to tie Brad Bryant for the lead after two rounds of the rain-abbreviated 54-hole Bing Crosby National Pro-Am.

Watson, who hadn't played a competitive round of golf in more than nine weeks, came here saying he felt the game was good enough to win his third Crosby title in the last five years.

The birdie at 18, one of the great finishing holes in golf, enabled Watson to finish with a 69 for a 36-hole score of eight-under-par 136.

Bryant, one of the PGA Tour strugglers looking for the first victory of his career, shot a 67 at Pebble for his 136. Both he and Watson finish up today at Spyglass Hill, the toughest of the three courses used in the Crosby.

This year's Crosby has been shortened because of rain without a Thursday and Friday. The winner now will earn $40,500 instead of $54,000 from a purse reduced from $300,000 to $225,000.

While Watson made a 20-foot putt on 18 for his birdie, Bryant sank a putt of less than three feet. His round included six birdies and one bogey while Watson, generally recognized these days as the world's best golfer, was a little more erratic, making six birdies and three bogeys. But the one on 18 was a beauty and enabled Watson to right a round that started out well but turned sour after back-to-back bogeys on 13 and 14.

John Cook, the first round leader, shot 71 at Pebble, while Ben Crenshaw had a 70 at Pebble and Jerry Pate shot 68 at Cypress Point to trail Watson and Bryant by only one stroke.

Pate finishes up on Pebble Beach Monday while Watson, Cook and Bryant, as well as Jack Nicklaus and Greg Powers, play Spyglass. Watson said that clearly gives Pate the best chance to win this year's event.

"If the weather holds," Watson said, "Jerry has the best chance."

Powers and Bobby Clampert are at six-under, two shots behind, while Nicklaus is at five-under along with Andy Bean.

Yogi

That opportunity, to Yogi, is the learning experience one can gain from competing.

"The kids can learn how to handle failure as well as success through athletics," he said. "They learn about relationships with other people, they learn a tremendous amount about their physical abilities when they accomplish something they felt was impossible. Sports is a learning experience that is hard to reach in the classroom."

"A junior varsity tourney is run in conjunction with the boys and girls basketball tourneys at Wendell. To some that may seem a luxury, but to Yogi it's essential.

"In games like this the freshmen and sophomores perform under a little more pressure than during the regular season," he said. "In most (regular season) games there are just a few fans around. Here there are more and it gives them that experience. They have to perform under scrutiny."

Sports, especially on the college level, may face a tough time in the next few years because of shrinking tax revenues. The Idaho Legislature is already toying with the idea of cutting $1 million in support for sports at the four state schools. Such a cutback would certainly doom many sports programs unless other funding could be raised.

Yogi is not, as expected, fond of the prospect.

"It's crazy," he said to the often suggested idea of having football at Boise State, basketball at the University of Idaho and so on.

"Look at the schools and see how many offer the same kind of (educational) programs," he said. "Instead of having three so-so business programs, for example, why not come up with and have one tremendous program? The state would save much more money. Why do we have to have three schools that offer Masters programs? The legislature may cut funding for the state's college sports programs, only time will tell. Yogi points to studies done when high schools sports were eliminated at metropolitan areas such as Los Angeles and New York."

"The crime, insanity and delinquency rates all went up," he said. But Yogi feels the biggest drawback would be the learning situation the youth would be deprived of.

Yogi feels sports are essential to high schools and colleges.

He's been deeply involved in sports for most of his life and although he would like to retire from the coaching ranks soon, he's one of the persons responsible for keeping Magic Valley's high school sports going in both good times and times of tight budgets.

Nation's unbeaten win with different styles

By United Press International

They are college basketball's perfect pair, the rugged survivors who have yet to lose in 35 games this season.

But no one could say they've done it the same way, especially this weekend.

No. 1 Oregon State won its 35th straight game by a 55-48 victory over Southern California that gave the Beavers a 17-0 record, but second-ranked Virginia, seemingly gaining momentum with every game, steamrolled its 15th triumph this year with a 64-47 rout of Duke.

"I made a mistake and said they played a nice game Thursday (in a victory over UCLA) and I got my reward today," said Oregon State Coach Ralph Miller, who blasted his players Saturday. "I don't think they will receive many more compliments until after the season is over."

Oregon State blew a 16-point lead by going scores during 11 of the first half. But the Beavers were bailed out by another hot shooting performance from center Steve Johnson, who scored 11-of-17 field goals for 25 points. Johnson has made 77 percent of his field goal attempts this season. "I was not happy with the way we performed," said Miller, who earned his 503rd coaching victory. "We struggled and stumbled and finally were able to come out with a victory. It was the worst offensive game I've seen them play this year. My bench was horrible."

In comparison, Virginia Coach Terry Holland was beaming over the 20-point performance of Jeff Lamp that helped extend the nation's longest winning streak to 23 games. Virginia won its first five games, including the NIT championship, last season.

"Jeff Lamp had one of the finest all-around games he's ever played," Holland said. "On the boards, defensively, as well as offensively, he did a great job."

The 23-game streak broke Virginia's previous record of 22 consecutive triumphs set in 1914-15. Duke, which had won four straight, was ambushed when Virginia scored 13 consecutive points with 8:22 left. Lee Raker had 18 points and Ralph Sampson, the Atlantic Coast Conference's leading scorer, had 10 points and 13 rebounds.

In other games involving the Top 10, No. 4 Louisiana State routed Florida 92-75, No. 5 Kentucky edged Georgia 71-68 in double overtime, No. 6 Wake Forest bombed Marquette 83-60, No. 7 Arizona State routed Stanford 84-66, No. 8 Utah edged No. 16 Brigham Young 63-56, No. 9 Notre Dame dined South Carolina 94-84 and No. 10 UCLA beat Oregon 75-69.

In the Top 20, No. 11 North Carolina shaded North Carolina State 57-54, Illinois upset No. 12 Iowa 79-66, No. 13 Maryland defeated Georgia Tech 72-54, Alabama-Birmingham upset No. 14 South Alabama 73-70, No. 15 Tennessee edged Alabama 62-58, No. 17 Indiana downed Purdue 69-61, Nebraska shocked No. 18 Kansas 57-54, No. 19 Connecticut whipped Manhattan 75-58 and No. 20 Michigan beat Wisconsin 74-67.

On Sunday, Mark Aguirre scored 18 points and Bernard Randolph added 17 as DePaul raised its record to 18-1. The Blue Demons led 39-35 at intermission before bolting past Syracuse in the second half. Tony Bruin led the Orange, 11-7, with 23 points.

Utah uses balance approach to No. 1

By United Press International

The state of Utah refuses to endorse the Equal Rights Amendment, but the Utah basketball team applauded the equal, balanced approach that has captured the Western Athletic Conference lead and a flawless 8-0 WAC record.

With Saturday's 60-56 defeat of Brigham Young, the No. 8 ranked Utah "value the equal ability of their defense and the offense and Coach Jerry Pimm does not discriminate in applauding his team, 18-1 overall.

On offense, center Tom Chambers popped in 22 points, including the two foul shots with 18 seconds left for the winning margin. On defense, BYU's powerful Danny Alnge was held to under 20 points for the second time this season.

"Anytime you can hold Alnge under 20 points, you have to give the defense a lot of credit, particularly Pace Mannion," Pimm said. "Mannion, who leads the WAC with an average of 26.3 points, was good for only 16 points.

Alnge was able to hit two foul shots with 19 seconds remaining to move BYU to a two-point 56-56; but Chambers' two shots ended the Cougars' hopes. Pre-game publicity had played up the contest between Alnge and Mannion.

"It was a real challenge playing Alnge," Mannion said. "If you can hold Alnge down, you have a good chance of beating BYU. I tried to deny him the ball as much as possible."

The loss drops the Cougars to 6-2 in the WAC and 15-4 for the year for a tie for second place in the conference standings with Wyoming.

BYU Coach Frank Arnold said the Cougars ran out of gas in the final play.

"We had no bench and we were tired. We played terribly and I don't think Utah played very well either," Arnold said. "I still think Utah will lose two (WAC) games. We're not out of it yet, nor is Wyoming out of it."

Wyoming, 6-2 after trouncing Air Force 69-45 Saturday, played for keeps against a Falcon squad that had been decimated Friday 53-50 by Colorado State. The Cowboys are tied

WAC standings

Team	Conf.	All Games
Utah	8-0	11-1
Brigham Young	6-2	15-4
Wyoming	6-2	15-4
Texas Tech	5-3	12-6

New Mexico	3-5	8-9
San Diego St.	3-5	8-9
Air Force	2-6	8-11
Colorado St.	1-7	2-15

for second with BYU in the WAC and 15-4 overall.

"I thought they played well," Wyoming Coach Jim Brandenburg said. "Defensively we knocked enough balls away in the first half to get some cheap baskets. We were very aggressive and offensively we did a pretty good job."

Texas Tech, which led the WAC on Saturday for fourth place in the WAC standings at 5-3 San Diego plummeted to seventh at 2-5. Hawaii, 3-4 in the conference after defeating New Mexico 56-55 Saturday, is fifth ahead of the 3-5 Lobos.

Air Force, a gloomy 1-7 in the WAC, to the 1-7 Colorado State for the cellar position earned praise from Brandenburg for durability. CSU was hungry for the win and showed no mercy.

"You have to give a lot of credit to the Falcons," Brandenburg said. "They had the tough Friday-Saturday syndrome this week. They really had to be prepared for the CSU game and you could tell that the close loss was hurting them."

Colorado State Coach Tony McAndrews said that taste of victory ends a 10-game losing streak for the Rams and was a relief because CSU played without the benefit of leading scorer Eddie Hughes, recovering from a sprained ankle.

"Without a doubt, this is our biggest WAC win ever," said McAndrews. "In WAC action this week, Thursday will see San Diego at Colorado State and Hawaii at Wyoming. On Friday, Air Force travels to Utah and the University of Nevada at Las Vegas visits BYU."

Hey guys, be nice

When you're the No. 1 team in the PAC-10 Conference and in the nation and you're the biggest guy on the team, everyone is going to try to take the basketball away from you. Here, Oregon State's Steve Johnson (33) is shown wrenching the ball away from the grasping hands of Southern Cal's Mike Owens (42) and James McDonald in Saturday afternoon's game between the Trojans and Beavers. Johnson overcame the troubles at hand and guided his team to another victory.

ISU wins make top man sick?

By United Press International

It's just possible that the cliff-hanger play of his Idaho State Bengals is the reason behind Coach Lynn Archibald's illness.

Archibald spent most of last week preparing for Weber State by staying in bed with the flu. But the way the ISU Bengals have been playing in Big Sky Conference games this year would be enough to send most coaches home for some rest.

And Saturday night was no exception as the Bengals rallied in the final 45 seconds to edge Weber State 61-50, keeping Idaho State in the thick of the 1981 conference race.

Big Sky standings

Team	Conf.	All Games
Idaho	7-1	27-18
Mont. St.	6-1	27-18
Montana	5-2	21-11
Boise St.	5-2	21-11
Nev. Reno	4-3	22-12
N. Ariz.	1-6	11-23
Weber St.	1-13	4-16

ISU's five Big Sky wins this year have been by six points or less. And one of the Bengals' two losses was by three, 77-74, at Montana State.

"I guess at crucial times we've showed some great poise and executed very good shot selection," Archibald said while still recovering from the bug that somehow has eluded his team members. "Our last three games have come down to making free throws or baskets in the last two or three minutes, something we've been able to do. That's the difference between a good team and a great one, I guess."

Saturday night in Pocatello it was Byron Williams again who struck in the final seconds.

Williams had hit four foul shots near the end of the game at Nevada-Reno a week ago to help Idaho State edge the Wolf Pack by six.

"And back home in the Mindome it was Williams' two jump shots in the final 45 seconds that lifted the Bengals from a three-point deficit to the one-point lead over the Wildcats.

Williams' second jumper, from 10-10 feet out with just two seconds left, clinched Idaho State's victory. He finished with 13 points, while Terry Goddard led the Bengals with 14 points and 10 assists.

Todd Harper and Royal Edwards had 16 points each for Weber State to lead all scorers. ISU is now 5-2 in the Big Sky, while Weber State drops to 1-6.

Idaho remained in first place in the conference 19 days with an 61-50 win over Nevada-Reno Thursday night in Moscow and a 76-71 victory over Northern Arizona at home Saturday night. The Vandals are now 7-1 in the league and 18-2 overall and well on track for their first Big Sky championship in many seasons.

Boise State, finally showing some winning forms after a slow start, was also a double winner at home last week - winning its first two Big Sky games this season. The Broncos edged Northern Arizona 61-56 Thursday night and Nevada-Reno 57-55 Saturday night.

Up in Montana, on Saturday night, Montana State whipped Montana 71-54. But with only one game, the Bull game behind Idaho State in the Big Sky standings, MSU is now 6-1 in the conference, while Montana is tied with Idaho State for third, at 5-2.

Boise State is now 2-5, Nevada-Reno 2-6, and NAU and Weber State both 1-6.

Overall - behind Idaho - Montana has the next best record with a 12-7 mark on the season. Idaho State is 11-7, Montana State 11-8, Nevada-Reno 8-12, Northern Arizona 7-11, Boise State 7-11 and Weber State 4-16.

This coming week, Montana is at Northern Arizona and Montana State at Nevada-Reno Thursday night. On Friday night, Weber State hosts Boise State and Idaho State is at home against Big Sky leader Idaho.

On Saturday night, all eight teams are in action in conference games, with Idaho at Weber State, Boise State at Idaho State, Nevada-Reno hosting Montana, and Montana State moving down to Northern Arizona.

No. 3 DePaul easily tops Syracuse

ROSEMONT, Ill. (UPI) - Mark Aguirre scored 18 points and Bernard Randolph added 17 and third-ranked DePaul had six players in double figures Sunday in a 91-69 victory over Syracuse.

DePaul, 18-1, led 39-35 at intermission. But in the second half, the Blue Demons outscored the Orangemen 18-2 in the first six minutes, scoring 16 in a row, to put the game out of reach - the Blue Demons later reeled off 20 straight points to take an 83-47 lead.

Aguirre had 6 points in the second half. Terry Cummings, who played only three minutes and sat the rest of the half because of foul trouble, scored all of his 12 points in the second half.

Tony Bruin led Syracuse, 11-7, with 25 points. Randolph had 11 points in the first half, shooting 5-for-5 from the field. Clyde Bradshaw scored 14 points and Teddy Grubbs and Skip Dillard each had 12 for DePaul.

South Florida 62, Jacksonville 39

TAMPA, Fla. (UPI) - Tony Griener, the Sun Belt Conference's leading basketball scorer, pumped in 17 points Sunday to help the College cage roundup

University of South Florida to a 62-39 victory over Jacksonville University. Jacksonville jumped out to an early 8-2 lead, but a Vince Reynolds three-point play knotted the game at 9-9. South Florida took the lead and held it throughout most of the game.

The victory snapped Jacksonville's four-game early advantage and is the Bulls' 10th straight triumph at home. They are now 15-5 and 5-2 in conference play, second in the conference. Griener finished with 17 and Reynolds added 16.

Jacksonville is now 6-13 overall and 3-5 in conference play. Mike Hackett led the Dolphins with 14 points and Singh Duram added 10.

Fresno State 47, Pacific 45

FRESNO, Calif. (UPI) - Donald Mason hit a 20-foot jumper with four seconds left in the game Sunday to lead Fresno State to a 47-45 Pacific Coast Athletic Association victory over University of the Pacific.

Fresno State, now 15-5 overall and 4-2 in league play, was led by Rod Higgins who scored 18 points and pulled in five rebounds. Bobby Davis and Mason reached double figures with 14 and 10 respectively.

The Tigers, now 1-5 in PCAA and 11-7 overall, were paced by Ron Cornelius' 14 points. Teammate Matt Waldron scored 13 and Ralph Scozzafava netted 12.

Penn State 85, New Hampshire 72

UNIVERSITY PARK, Pa. (UPI) - Sophomore Rich Fetter scored a game-high 21 points and freshman Brian Dean added a career-high 18 Sunday to lead Penn State to an 85-72 victory over New Hampshire.

Fetter, a 6-foot-7 guard who was held scoreless by Westminster Saturday night, sank nine of his 12 field goal attempts (6 help lift the Nittany Lions' record to 14-6.

New Hampshire, 4-13, was led by Al McLain with 16 points, Jack Burns with 15 and Robin Dixon with 14.

Duquesne 72, St. Francis 63

PITTSBURGH (UPI) - John Moore scored 22 points and Lonnie Dixon added 19 Sunday to pace Duquesne to a 72-63 victory over St. Francis (Pa.) at the Civic Arena.

Moore was 10-for-14 in field goal shooting for the Dukes, who raised their overall record to 12-3. Bruce Atkins contributed 17 points and pulled down a team-high 10 rebounds for Duquesne.

Virginia Tech 92, George Washington 76

BLACKSBURG, Va. (UPI) - Dale Solomon poured in 22 points Sunday and Reggie Steppe added a career-high 19 to lead Virginia Tech to a 92-67 clobbering of George Washington.

Jeff Schneider contributed 12 points for the Gobblers, as did Calvin Oldham.

Paul Graza led the 4-13 Colonials with 21 points. Randy Davis added 17 and Oscar Williamson chipped in 14. Graza also led the game with 11 rebounds.

Purdue's Cross is learning to fill Carroll's shoes

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. (UPI) - Russell Cross knew when he chose to play basketball at Purdue - he'd be compared to Joe Barry Carroll, who starred at center three seasons for the Boilermakers before moving to the pros this year.

Cross, a 6-foot-10 freshman, still picked Purdue over Illinois-Chicago, Iowa and Alabama, and soon showed the Big Ten elites he has a style all his own.

"Carroll was a great All-American and he had his place, but I have mine, and they're not the same," the 19-year-old center said. "I just try to play Russell Cross' game."

Cross has played his game well enough that some teams have already altered their defensive patterns in an attempt to neutralize him, using collapsing zones to keep the ball away from him inside.

"The packed zones don't bother me at all," Cross said. "I saw them all the time in high school, so it's nothing new. As long as we're winning it's no big deal."

It became a big deal against Michigan on Jan. 24 when forwards Rick Kaye and Ben Towel combined with center Jay Vincent to keep Cross out of the game. Cross scored only eight points, and Purdue was upset, 74-68.

"Russell had a typical freshman game," said Purdue Coach Gene Keedy, who indicated Cross is getting beat up a bit inside. "He didn't get an couple of calls out there, and sometimes a kid begins to wonder, 'Hey when does my time come?'"

Cross' time is here and now. He started Purdue's first 15 games, averaged 17.5 points per game and 6.2 rebounds, and had a 32-point performance in a losing cause against Tennessee.

In the first six games of the Big Ten, Cross' scoring statistics dropped to 10.5 points per game, but his rebounding average stayed just over the six-per-game mark.

To Cross, who accepted the challenge of following Carroll, the Big Ten is just another test to be passed. "I'm just to put the ball up higher because the players are bigger in college (than in high school), and I have to work harder on the boards," Cross said. "It's just more physical."

Some coaches and administrators on the collegiate level believe freshmen athletes should not be allowed to compete on the varsity level, and a movement has started to reinstate that rule. Cross agrees, saying "Academically, college is very hard."

But Keedy thinks that Cross is one of the few freshmen around capable of handling the pressures of college education and athletics.

"He has the maturity to handle the pressure and he's already proven it," Keedy said.

Tanner

The 29-year-old beats Wojtek Fibak for the U.S. Pro Indoor Tennis title

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — No one had to tell Roscoe Tanner that his game had slipped in 1980. The bullet-serving, left-hander dropped from a ranking of fourth in the world in 1979 to No. 18 during 1980. He had earned a quarterfinal berth in 11 tournaments last year but advanced beyond that only twice. The 29-year-old Tanner is looking to change all this in 1981 and Sunday he got off on the right foot with a 6-2, 7-6, 7-5 victory over Wojtek Fibak of Poland to win the $250,000 U.S. Pro Indoor Tennis Championships. "I kind of floundered around last year," Tanner, who poked the $45,000 first prize, said. "It was just attitude problems for me. I figured, 'Why play half-heartedly? Why not at full speed?' When your ranking slips, you can see your game is slipping." The seventh seeded Tanner, now ranked 14th in the world, kept the eighth seeded Fibak on the defensive the entire match with crushing volleys and overhands. Fibak, who upset four-time champion Jimmy Connors Friday night to highlight his week, tried a variety of passing shots and lobs with little success. Fibak said he wanted to engage in long volleys with his opponent because of leg cramps suffered by Tanner in his semifinal match

Saturday. But Tanner's legs were fine Sunday and Fibak admitted his strategy was wrong. "He tried for short volleys and was coming in all the time," he said. "I don't serve and volley much and he was jumping on my second serve. I was trying to play long volleys and make him run, but that was a mistake on my part." Tanner registered eight aces but it wasn't so much the power as the effectiveness of the serve.

Navratilova sets history with triumph

CHICAGO (UPI) — Top seeded Martina Navratilova defeated second seeded Hana Mandlikova in straight sets Sunday to become the first player in history to win a women's pro stop four years in a row, capturing the $200,000 Chicago Women's Tennis Championships.

Navratilova defeated Mandlikova 6-4, 6-2 to capture the $35,000 first prize in a match that lasted just more than 50 minutes. The victory was also Navratilova's second straight this month. She captured the Cincinnati championship last week.

Navratilova broke service three times in a closely contested first set and two more times in the second set when she completely dominated her fellow Czechoslovakian.

Despite having problems with her first service, Navratilova combined strong play at the net and drop shots to even her record against her 18-year-old opponent at 2-2. The win also improved her record thus far on the pro tour to 14-1 this year.

Navratilova broke Mandlikova in the first game, but Mandlikova immediately broke back. The two exchanged service breaks in the seventh and eighth games, but Navratilova broke in the ninth game and held service in the following game to win the first set.

Both women held service in the second set until the fifth game when Mandlikova experienced service problems and lost the serve. Navratilova then won the next three games, breaking her opponent in the seventh game to capture her fourth straight Chicago title.

Navratilova, the third ranked woman player in the world, lost her first set of the tournament on Tuesday but did not lose for the duration.

Navratilova said she was playing as well as at any time during her career, including 1979 when she was the No. 1 ranked player in the world.

"If I play like I did today, I'm sure I can get back to number one," Navratilova said. "I thought the turning point was in that game after it was four-all in the first set when I won four straight points."

Mandlikova agreed, explaining she suffered a mild knee injury which may have affected her concentration for the rest of the match.

"I started to think about my knee a lot and I lost the set," she said. "That was the turning point in the match. I didn't know what to expect after that because I've never had a knee problem before."

Navratilova said she noticed her opponent slowing down because up to that point, "we were bombing each other with shot after shot."

"I don't know whether her injury was the difference or whether I was just on top of her," she said. "When you are losing, it always hurts more."

Porsche team wins Daytona 24-hour race

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (UPI) — Brian Redman, Bob Garretson and Bob Rahal guided a Porsche Turbo to an easy 12-lap victory in the 24-hour Challenge Race at Daytona International Speedway Sunday.

The winners grabbed the lead on the 181st lap, six hours into the race Saturday, and held on to triumph over a field so decimated by mechanical breakdowns and accidents that the smaller, slower GTU-class cars snatched down the third and fourth spots.

The winners covered 2,719 miles over 708 laps at an average speed of 113.153 mph.

Nine of the first ten starters — eight Porsche Turbos and a Ferrari — were forced out of competition by the 16th hour of the race, enabling the Garretson-Redman-Rahal team to coast to the win.

Bob Akin, Derek Bell and Craig Siebert nailed down second place in their Porsche Turbo — a position they held from the 14-hour mark.

In third place overall and GTU-class winner was the team of Bill Kroll, Jeff Kline and Rob McFarlain in a Porsche 911.

Fourth place in a Datsun was Frank Carney, Dick Davenport and Ralston Johnson. Carlo Facetti and Martino Finotto, driving a Lancia, finished fifth.

Only 24 cars of the 69 that started in the race completed the 24-hour test.

The tone of the race was established early Saturday when leaders Reinhold Joest, Volkert Meri and Jochen Mass were forced out on the 59th lap with a broken axle, and 1980 World Endurance champion John Paul experienced constant engine problems.

The Redman car jockeyed for the top spot early in the race before falling behind the Porsche Turbo of Ted Field, Danny Ongais and Mill Minter on the 125th lap.

Why Eagle One checking is far above all the others.

5 1/4% interest — No other bank or savings and loan pays more.

Today, everybody's talking about interest on checking.

But the simple fact is, no one no bank or savings and loan — pays you more than the 5 1/4% that Eagle One checking pays you.

Proven popularity and customer satisfaction.

An important thing to look at when you choose an interest-bearing checking account is its track record. Most checking accounts simply don't have one.

But our Eagle One has been around since 1978. Since then, over 15,000 customers have switched to Eagle One.

Now that's a track record. More checking experience than anyone.

These days, there are a lot of newcomers in the checking business. But we're not one of them.

In fact, we have more years of checking know-how than anyone else in the state — over 113 years. And that's comforting to know when it's your name on each check.

Expect more and get it.

Because Eagle One checking comes to you from Idaho First, it comes with all you expect from a full-service bank. And more.

For instance, if you qualify, you get the Idaho First Card, your key to 24-hour banking at any Touch N'Go automatic teller machine and a check guarantee card, widely accepted at retailers throughout Idaho.

And, on top of everything else, Eagle One checking gives you the convenience of banking at 69 Idaho First offices all over Idaho.

Why settle for just another checking account? Have the one that's far above all the rest — Eagle One checking from Idaho First.
