Court spares writer after spy conviction

LONDON (UPI) — Iran's Revolutionary Court convicted American writer Cynthia Dwyer of spying Sunday.

However, it spared her from a death sentence and ordered her immediate expulsion.

In Washington, the State Department said Mrs. Dwyer, 49, of Amherst, N.Y., would be turned over to the Swiss Embassy today and leave "on the first available flight out of Iran."

In Amherst, N.Y., Mrs. Dwyer's husband John spent the day taking phone calls and making them to share the news with friends.

"She will be leaving shortly but I don't know when," said Dwyer, an English professor at the State University College in Buffalo.

"I feel great, terrific. The adrenalin is really flowing," he said.

In Washington, State Department spokeswoman Anita Stockman said she understood that Mrs. Dwyer was in "good health" and due to leave Iran almost "immediately."

"She will be released tomorrow morning Iranian time to the custody of the Swiss, and the Swiss will make arrangements for her to get on the first available flight out of Iran."

"We understand that her health is good, that she has been fed and she's had some warm clothes that have been sent to her. We understand some money was made available," Ms. Stockman said.

Her departure would leave one American citizen still under arrest in Iran, Afghan-born national Zia Nassyry.

In Tehran, a Swiss diplomat confirmed that Mrs. Dwyer, a self-styled free-lance journalist and mother of three who came to be known as the "3rd hostage," may leave for home today — 281 days after her arrest.

Iranian prison officials and Iran's Pars news agency said Mrs. Dwyer was convicted on several counts of spying and sentenced to nine months in jail, retroactive to her arrest nine months ago.

The charges carried a maximum penalty of death. Four Iranians, for instance, were sentenced to death last week on charges they had spied for the United States.

By expelling Mrs. Dwyer, Iran seemed to serve notice it wanted no more hostage-cases with the United States, analysts said.

Another U.S. citizen, Iranian-born Mohi Sabbani, was unexpectedly acquitted of spy charges last week allowed to return to his wife in Tehran.

Dreary February day perfect for lambing

By STEVE LIPSON
Times-News writer

RUPERT — It was a cold, dreary day, with gray skies and a light wind.

"This is perfect lambing weather," said Dennis Burks Jr.

Indeed it is. If the temperature climbs above freezing, the snow scattered on the ground would melt, creating a sea of mud, which would make the 24-hour-a-day job of helping the new-born lambs enter the world that much tougher, as well as increase the risk of disease for the lambs.

If it were colder, it would increase the chances a lamb would be chilled and die before it could be hurried inside the sheds where the new-born lambs are kept with their mothers for their first two days.

The Flat Top Sheep Co. northeast of Rupert, next to the Snake River, is in the midst of lambing. The senior Dennis Burks, who has been lambing at that spot since joining his father in the sheep business in 1934, said they passed the halfway point over the weekend.

This is when the lambs are coming at their fastest rate, he said. — In total, Burks has about 5,500 ewes. They are giving birth to about 400 lambs a day now.

The Flat Top Sheep Co. is in the heart of what may be the winter sheep capital of the country, according to Stan Boyd, executive director of the Idaho Wool Growers Association. Several of the major sheepmen in the state have their lambing operations within a 20-mile-radius of Burks, he said.

Burks agrees, estimating there could be 70,000 to 100,000 sheep in the immediate area.

As he sips a cup of coffee during a short break in his work, Burks describes the key to a successful lambing operation — getting all the work done that has to be done.

On his ranch, it takes more than 15 people working night and day to get through lambing season. During the day they feed the sheep, clean the pens and corrals and mother and doctor the lambs. At night crew of two men stays up watching the expectant ewes and taking the new-born lambs inside.

"Sheep take constant care," Burks said.

A successful lambing operation is the key to success in the sheep business, he said. "A single lamb and ewe can't hardly pay its way." Burks said. The profits in the business come from twins, which about 60 percent of his ewes are having, and every lamb that is saved from the cold or disease.

The death rate among the new-born lambs is only about 2 percent, Burks said, thanks mainly to penicillin and the constant care. "I never get away from here. It's a problem even running to town to get groceries," Burks said.

About every half hour between 6 a.m. and 6 p.m., he drives a tractor with a sled in back of it through the "drop corrals" where the expectant mothers are grouped. He's looking for mothers that have just given birth or for any signs of trouble.

As he drives the tractor up to a ewe with a new lamb, the mother watches nervously and then starts to run away. A helper jumps from the sled and grabs her, using a long stick with a hook at the end to grab her by the leg. Then he has to wrestle the ewe onto its back into a compartment on the sled. The lamb is picked up by a leg and put in a smaller compartment behind its mother's head.

After a few minutes, when the sled is filled, the mothers and lambs are taken to one of enclosed sheds where they will be put in a private pen and watched closely over the next two days.

The new-born lambs cry and bleat, but all is quiet farther down the long row of pens in the shed.

The lambs will cry until they get their first drink of mother's milk, Burks said, then they settle down.

School equalization could hike Gem tax bills $11.5 million

By MARTY TRILLHAASE
Times-News writer

BOISE — Idaho taxpayers may see their property tax bills rise another $11.5 million next year in order to maintain state-aid levels for school districts.

State Superintendent of Public Instruction Jerry Evans last week called for an equalization of school levies throughout the state. Education Department officials say equalization is needed because the range between the lowest school district levy charged and the highest has grown as a result of a legislative mandate to freeze property tax revenues at 1978 levels.

That move, coupled with the 1980 re-evaluation of property has forced adjustments in the levies in order to keep a district's property tax collection within the frozen revenue limitation, says Tom Vopat, a finance officer with the Department of Education.

The difference in school levies results in a disproportionate distribution of state education dollars to school districts, Vopat said.

Under Evans' proposal, levies would be set at .34 of 1 percent. Ensuring an equal level of state support to all Idaho school districts that levy carries an $18.5 million price tag.

Mitigating the tax increase is the fact that taxpayers won't pay $7 million charged to them in 1980 due to a funding shortfall at the state level, education officials say.

In his presentation last week, Evans said 12 districts are levying less than 10 mills or .20 of 1 percent of the market value for assessment purposes, 41 districts levy less than 12 mills or .24, and very few are approaching the 17 mills or .34. This means most districts would receive additional property tax dollars if the Evans equalization plan is approved.

Providing for equalization of school district levies as well as establishing those levies at the level Evans is proposing would require approval of the Legislature. No specific legislation dealing has been proposed, but education department officials say they are meeting with legislators to discuss the concept.

Members of the House Revenue and Taxation Committee say lawmakers may approve the plan, but not at the level Evans is seeking.

"I think it's a question of equalization, all right, because that's something we've always tried to achieve," said committee chairman Steve Antone, R-Rupert. But he questioned whether his committee or the Legislature would support the levy hike, adding, "an increase in the school levy could eat away at the allowable levy for other taxing districts including cities and counties."

Instead, lawmakers could compromise by placing the school levy figure somewhere between .19 of 1 percent and the figure proposed by Evans.

Another member of the committee, Rep. Darwin Young, said he wants the levy placed at one of the lowest levies in the state.

Gas decontrol unlikely, McClure says

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Congress is unlikely to decontrol natural gas this year, a move that could double the cost of heating homes with the popular fuel, Senate Energy Committee Chairman James McClure said Sunday.

McClure, who said he personally favors decontrol of gas, said he expects President Reagan will press to end the federal price regulations, "but pressing for it and getting it are two different things."

"I doubt very much Congress is likely to completely decontrol this year," McClure said on NBC-TV's "Meet the Press."

The Idaho Republican also said he does not support the immediate dismantling of the Energy Department — a frequent target of Reagan's campaign rhetoric.

Decontrol of gas is being promoted as a natural partner to oil decontrol, ordered by Reagan. Analysts say ending gas price controls could more than double the cost of the fuel.

McClure noted gas controls now are being phased out under a new law and after "the two-year struggle to get us on a decontrol path ... Congress isn't likely to want to plunge right back into that thicket."

"You know, we're not very notable for taking on new battles, let alone reopening old ones," he said.

However, decontrol of gas "is right in economic terms," McClure said, because with oil prices freed from federal restraints, gas becomes increasingly attractive.

He predicted the end of oil controls would add only another 3 to 5 cents a gallon to the pump price of gasoline above the amount it has already jumped.

On the Energy Department, McClure said he could support "lopping off some functions and redirecting the agency," but reorganization should stop "somewhat short of taking the sign off the door."

"I don't support the immediate dismantling of the department," he said, because of "the signal it would send the other people around the world about the U.S. commitment to do something about energy."

McClure acknowledged Reagan clearly wants to do away with the agency, but he said, "I don't know that it was a Republican campaign promise."

He also said taming inflation must be the new administration's first goal, and "controlling the budget is a key to controlling the economy."

He predicted the battle between the White House and the Congress over where to cut spending will end with "little losses and big gains" for Reagan.

Trucker describes white fog from burst waste drum

HARRISBURG, Pa. (UPI) — Edward Cheroski still feels a burning pain from that September night in 1978, as if his "kidneys or whatever it is on my sides are like on fire, like if you take a knife and scraped me internally."

Jack Hunsinger remembers having his eyes burned by his night's work. His eyes are still blurry.

Cheroski and Hunsinger are two central figures in one of Pennsylvania's first major cases involving the illegal disposal of hazardous waste.

The state, armed with legal powers it received just last year from the Legislature, is prosecuting Lackawanna Refuse Removal Inc. for allegedly dumping thousands of gallons of poisonous industrial wastes in its Old Forge landfill in Lackawanna County.

Just how poisonous those wastes can be was chillingly outlined in testimony given by truckers like Cheroski and Hunsinger to the state Environmental Hearing Board.

According to allegations made by the board, Cheroski and Hunsinger made nighttime runs to dump deadly brews that contained three known carcinogens, five suspected carcinogens and toxic metals like cyanide, lead and mercury.

The truckers' testimony was released when the hearing board rejected an appeal by Lackawanna Refuse Removal of the state Environmental Resource Department's order to close and clean up the Old Forge dump.

The company argued in its appeal that the department could not prove the wastes buried at the dump were hazardous.

In the testimony, Cheroski recalled the night of Sept. 1, 1978, when one of a truckload of drums holding toxic wastes burst as it hit the ground during the clandestine operation at the dump.

"Out of the drum came a white fog," he said. "It would take your breath away. I was afraid out of the truck because it crept right towards the front of the tractor and I couldn't get out of the truck."

"This cloud just enveloped the whole truck. I had never seen nothing like this in reality. It looked like death to me."

"Right then and there, I couldn't breathe. I got awful headaches. I still get headaches from it."

"When I saw it starting to thin out, I jumped out of my truck. I fell on the ground. I almost crawled my way out of there."

According to the board's report, the fog drifted toward the borough of Old Forge and routed from home one family living a quarter mile away.

A policeman, alerted by complaints about the odor, traced it to the landfill.

While the accident happened at 7:30 p.m., the board report said, the odor was still present in Old Forge after midnight.

Senate Donovan probe over Soviets lambast Reagan policies

WASHINGTON (UPI) — There are no plans to reopen the Senate investigation of Labor Secretary Raymond Donovan's alleged links to organized crime, a spokesman for Labor Committee Chairman Sen. Orrin Hatch said Sunday.

However, the committee staff will look into fresh charges leveled against the former New Jersey contractor by five Democratic senators to see if the allegations should be turned over to the FBI.

"There are no plans to reopen an investigation," said Ed Darell, spokesman for Hatch, R-Utah. "I was a little concerned by the reports (the investigation was being reopened). I think that's a little strong."

"The committee will look at the charges," Darell said. "If it's something new, we'll pass it on to the FBI. If it's just a rehash, ..."

The five Democrats, in a letter released over the weekend, asked

Hatch to ask the FBI to reopen its Donovan investigation because of the new allegations.

Sens. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., Thomas Eagleton, D-Mo., Donald Riegle Jr., D-Mich., and Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, raised a new charge about Donovan's business dealings and questioned the thoroughness of the FBI's earlier probe.

In a statement Saturday, Hatch said, "All allegations, including the most recent ones, will be fully gone into and evaluated, in a thoroughly bipartisan manner" by the committee staff and, if warranted, turned over "to the appropriate federal officials."

The FBI has said it has been unable to substantiate charges Donovan had ties to organized crime, a dominant topic during his confirmation hearings. Donovan's nomination by President Reagan to the labor post provoked the strongest opposition of any Cabinet appointment.

A source said Hatch was "a little bit miffed" by the timing of the Democrats' latest move. The letter to Hatch was released after the senator had left Washington to visit Utah.

The new allegation concerns Donovan's old firm, the Schlavone Construction Co. of New Jersey, and the purchase of top soil in 1968 which allegedly originated from public land and was illegally sold to Schlavone.

A more serious complaint was that reporter Bruce Locklin of the Bergen (N.J.) Record had linked Donovan to a purported organized crime figure.

The FBI investigated a New Jersey contractor named Philip B. Moscato, who it said "has been reported to associate with organized crime elements," but added it has no information indicating any connection between him (Moscato) and SCC (Schlavone Construction Co.) or Mr. Donovan."

RAYMOND DONOVAN scores charges

MOSCOW (UPI) — The official Communist Party newspaper Pravda launched a triple attack on President Reagan's military, diplomatic and economic policies Sunday and warned the Third World to beware of America's "tentacles."

The attacks were contained in three separate Pravda articles critical of the United States. Even by the standards of the recent war of words between Moscow and Washington, the publication of three anti-American articles in the same newspaper was unusual.

"The Soviet Union will not allow anyone to dictate to it from a position of strength, or to put pressure on it," Pravda analyst Boris Averchenko said in a commentary condemning the United States for "spiraling up the arms race."

"A second editorial said the 95-nation group of non-aligned nations, meeting today in New Delhi, should beware of 'subversive activity against the movement by international imperialism and Peking hegemonism."

The official Communist Party newspaper advised the non-aligned states to remember their best friends were in the socialist bloc, not in the United States. President Leonid Brezhnev emphasized that point in a lengthy message sent to the session in India, the Tass news agency reported.

In an economic survey of Reagan's first two weeks at the White House, Pravda said, "several hasty measures ... make it clear how the economic problems will be handled."

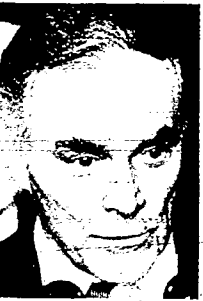

Citing decontrol of oil prices, Soviet commentator Oleg Anichkin said: "Rank and file Americans will pay for everything, while big corporations will make money."

He noted the Reagan administration is trying to balance its budget by cutting back sharply on social benefits, including health care and education.

"Only military expenditures are not subject to slashing," Anichkin said.

Intelligence exchanges sought by U.S.

Summit meetings with allies to end

ALEXANDER HAIG ... policies shifting

LONDON (UPI) — Secretary of State Alexander Haig said in an interview published Sunday that the Reagan administration will end regular summit meetings with U.S. allies but hopes to increase exchanges of intelligence provided the CIA can plug its news leaks.

Haig discussed the new administration's priorities for dealings with the European allies in an interview with London's Sunday Times.

Besides ending former President Carter's twice-yearly summit meetings and expanding the intelligence-sharing programs, Haig said the new administration is keeping its options open on nuclear disarmament and the SALT-2 Treaty.

"It has been my experience that achieving arms control is never the product of rhetoric or idealistic hopes," Haig said. "It is always the product of pragmatic reality."

"One could make the case that it was the consensus about denying Cruise missiles in Europe at the NATO ministerial meeting in December 1979 which created the circumstances that led to the start of the discussions between the Soviet Union and the United States on how to limit theater nuclear weapons," he said.

Haig said Soviet behavior in world trouble spots and what he called "technical flaws" in the SALT-2 treaty will affect how Reagan decides to deal with arms control.

"We are looking at these problems and I don't know yet how we will proceed from here — whether to develop a whole new treaty, whether to put fixes into the existing treaty or whether to do it by amendments," he said.

The secretary said he hoped to promote "a very close relationship" between the United States and its European allies. But he said he was abandoning Carter's semi-annual summit meetings because such sessions "should be reserved only for the most exceptionally significant issues."

"First and foremost, we have got to do a better job in developing and sharing common perceptions," Haig added. "That means sharing our intelligence, agreeing on the hard facts and recognizing that everybody can contribute to this process."

"But we can only expect our European partners to participate in such exchanges if they can be protected against immediate revelations on the front pages of American newspapers. We therefore, have to tighten up our international channels of communications," he said.

Haig said newly appointed CIA director Bill Casey "is very much dedicated to this."

Atlantans push hunt for clues

ATLANTA (UPI) — Volunteer searchers looking for clues in the disappearances of 17 black children combed vacant lots in a southwest Atlanta suburb Sunday.

Police checked a report of another missing black child.

Investigators refused to say whether the disappearance of Patrick Baltazar, 11, had been turned over to the special police task force assigned to the 15 child slayings and two missing-child cases reported over the last 18 months.

The Baltazar boy was reportedly last seen around midnight Friday near the Omni entertainment complex in downtown Atlanta.

For 18 weekends, volunteers have turned out on Saturdays to go through abandoned buildings and vacant lots in search of clues in the child abductions and slayings. Last week, they began Sunday searches as well.

Several dozen searchers gathered at shopping centers to search wooded areas of southwest Atlanta Sunday. About 400 turned out Saturday, combing fields in a poor section of northwest Atlanta, but all they turned up were some books, bits of clothing and what were believed to be animal bones.

Reagan to run again in 1984, former advisor predicts

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI) — One of President Reagan's top political advisers said Sunday Reagan will seek re-election in 1984.

"If anybody has any doubts about Ronald Reagan not thinking down the road three to four years from now and are thinking 'Oh boy, I'll run for president in 1984,' you'd better change your party," Lyn Nolziger told California Republicans on the final day of their three-day convention.

Nolziger serves as a White House political consultant and was Reagan's press spokesman throughout the presidential campaign.

"We'll be back in three years with the same guy," Nolziger said.

USAF scrambles planes on alert

WASHINGTON (UPI) — More than 400 U.S. Air Force bombers and tankers scrambled into the air Sunday in a surprise exercise by the Strategic Air Command.

The B-52 bombers, FB-111 fighter-bombers and KC-135 jet tankers took off within a 10-minute period from over 70 bases around the nation, a SAC spokesman said.

The surprise launch was ordered in response to a mock nuclear attack during the annual Global Shield exercises directed from SAC headquarters at Offutt Air Force Base in Omaha, Neb.

Col. Robert McManey, SAC director of public affairs, said the annual drill began two weeks ago and will run for several more days.

Public school equalization a must Idaho must strive to make sure its local schools are funded equally.

The principle of equalization is a keystone of the public school system and it has taken years to become accepted.

The Legislature needs to take action this year to reaffirm its avowed support of the principle that each student in each school district should have the same opportunity for an education.

As it stands under the 1-percent freeze on local budgets, that is not the case.

Some school districts are paying less than half that of others in local property taxes to support basic instruction.

More state funds go to the districts at the low end and fewer state dollars to those at the high end as a result. Almost all are paying less than the law requires.

The system needs to be made uniform by new legislation.

It is unfair that some should benefit through lower taxes at the expense of others. But educational programs also have an inherent tendency to inequality. The more burden on a district's patrons the less chance they will support override levies and bond issues if they are needed.

At the same time, the state's budget problems are threatening the public school appropriation and the kindergarten program.

Some legislators are proposing an end to state support of kindergartens and making them optional upon a vote of the local property taxpayers. This would be a step backward for Idaho.

In order to save kindergarten, those local property owners may have to be willing to pay slightly more through a statewide equalization plan.

Surely this is preferable to the chaos and patchwork system that elimination of state support would cause.

A statewide property tax increase of about $18 million and a uniform levy has been proposed by State Superintendent of Public Instruction Jerry Evans.

Evans is right when he says taxpayers are more likely to revolt when they know others are not paying their share.

As State Sen. John Barker points out, an unequal system is not only unfair but can ultimately affect even those who are now benefiting from that system.

The tables could turn in the future and today's beneficiaries could be tomorrow's losers.

Under the equalization plan, school districts would not be forced to increase taxes. They could forego state funds if it were to their advantage.

In the Magic Valley the increase for a $40,000 home would range from $8 to $68, with most around $40 or less.

This would be offset since last year's tax payments were hiked by $7 million statewide because of a state revenue shortfall.

Many legislators are talking about a compromise on the size of the tax increase. Some districts would lose substantial benefits under equalization.

At the least the gap can be greatly narrowed.

Tax increases are unpopular but so are underfunded and unequal schools.

Work for less?

Editor, Times-News:
Right to work laws? Or should it be called the right to work for less.

According to the U.S. Department of Labor employment and earnings, May 1980, only four states had the right to work have exceeded the national average per capita income in 1979. Those states being Kansas, Nevada, Texas, and Wyoming. Nevada being the only right to work state that has consistently remained above the national average in per capita income. The other 16 states with right to work range from $1,718 to $141 lower than before they had right to work.

Of all 50 states, including District of Columbia, the U.S. average hourly earnings is $6.69 per hour. Idaho ranks 19 with $6.92 per hour. Of the right to work states, there are three states ranked above Idaho. They are Iowa, Louisiana and Nevada.

So, I must tell the people of Idaho "I can't afford to work for less." I'm sure with interest rates and inflation as high as it is, you can't afford this either.

I urge all working people to write to their senators, congressmen and representatives to strongly oppose any attempt to pass any form of so-called right to work. The above is not "propaganda" from the "big union chiefs," but facts and figures from the U. S. Department of Labor, Employment and Earnings.

CHARLESE MAXWELL

Individuals carrying studies from the Banks Street College of Education, Benjamin Bloom's writings, and many other studies which supported the theory that kindergartens are indeed a sound educational expenditure with measurable results.

It isn't necessary to go outside Idaho for proof of the value of kindergarten in 1981. We need only step into our neighborhood schools. I encourage any doubting legislator to do that today.

To paraphrase a recent editorial in the Idaho Statesman, which supports continued funding of kindergartens, I include the following: 95 percent of Idaho parents support this voluntary program where it's available; children of lower-income strata benefit particularly; every state except Mississippi has state supported kindergartens; first grade teachers praise the kindergarten results.

Since children are 5 only once, we don't have a second chance. We should continue funding this program which has the potential to reach every school age Idahoan as each begins his or her public school education.

Does kindergarten provide enough benefit for the dollars spent? As a current first grade teacher seeing measurable results on nationwide standardized test scores, I answer yes with hesitation.

You should be asking why a citizen is being asked to sell his property below the appraised cost when the purpose of the appraisal is to make sure the government pays no more than a fair price. Does not the citizen have a right to receive a fair price? Is it fair for one and not the other?

It would be nice to see some fair, objective reporting instead of the sensationalism and repetition I have lately observed.

Cut the frills

Editor, Times-News:
It appears from reading newspaper accounts of pending legislative action that some cuts will be made in the state concerning our school funding.

Of course, the cry has already gone out from the local officials stating they simply cannot operate without increased revenue.

I would suggest that our local school board and school officials roll up their sleeves and cut some of the "frills" from our present curriculum.

Why should we sacrifice the kindergarten program and have an accredited drill team and cheerleading program. With these two programs in mind I'm sure we can find more which fit the same category.

Perhaps it is time to take a good look at what is needed to provide "all" children with a basic education and stop wasting money on many extras that only include a few.

I would urge pre-school parents to contact your school board administrators and make your feelings known. I would also suggest that we need not sacrifice the kindergarten to the upper grades can have "extra curricular activities."

TV's vulgar programs

Washington Post Company

WASHINGTON — Ah, serendipity. Beneath the Washington Post's report of the press conference at which the Coalition for Better Television (CBTV) announced plans to organize boycotts of products produced by sponsors of the sleazebag television shows, there appeared a report by the Post's Tom Shales about a new show.

"A better title for 'That's My Line' might be, maybe, 'Sick Show.' The CBS entry in the amazingly incredible, real-life, variety freak-show genre... lurches impishly from a feature about a man who teaches other men how to pick up girls for quick sex to a fey hunk of sleazy about a Tepeka, Kan., clothing store where men strip down to their underpants while women ogle and shriek at them... Basically, it's another monomaniacal titillation derby."

Shales suggests that perhaps the pollution of the prairie by such vulgarity might be "television's tragedy." Any entrepreneur knows that if he is sufficiently vulgar, network camera crews will beat a path to his door. I have a less cheerful view of mankind: Tepeka or Timbuktu can produce ninies without television's help. Wordsworth, who lived a long way from Kansas and a long time before television, noted mankind's "degrading thirst for outrageous stimulation."

But the pure commercial logic of oligopolistic competition impels three profit-maximizing (which means basically: audience-maximizing) networks to pander to society's lowest common denominator. And in doing so, they drive it steadily lower. CBTV's aim is to temper that logic by adding a new variable to the economic calculations that control television.

Networks live lives of cheerfulness, not to say brazen, contradiction. They trumpet their prowess at causing people to buy material goods. Hey, we can modify behavior in 30 seconds. Yet they deny, or disclaim responsibility for, the coarsening consequences. Hours later, when the programs. You can almost — almost, I stress — admire the brass of the tiny coterie of network programmers who complain that CBTV's "narrow" portion of the public — perhaps only a few million citizens — may influence programming.

But more unlovely than the aggressive vulgarity of many programs is the raveling hypocrisy of the programmers as they criticize their critics. It is hard (and hardly obligatory) to credit the sincerity of people who shout "Censorship!" with that word's connotations of coercive state action — when people are simply planning to practice selective buying of beer and pantyhose. A network spokesman decreed that boycotts are "censorship" and are "a totally unacceptable method of trying to influence programming." I called to ask what he considered acceptable. He said — are you ready for this? — "Oh, writing a letter."

Plumbing the shallows of such minds will not dredge up serious arguments against boycotts. Another network theorist called to deploy for me all the stock phrases of First Amendment law. He accused CBTV of planning to "conspire" to create a "clear and present danger" (of a chilling effect) to the "expression of ideas."

Leave aside the inherent dishonourableness of a defense of programs like "Soap" or "Dynasty" or

"Three's Company" as vehicles of "ideas." People who argue that way are beyond, or beneath, embarrassment, so they do not blush when quoting Milton, Mill, Jefferson and Holmes to defend their rapacity.

It is bad enough that the networks are turning the airwaves into Love Canals of the mind. But a chemical company that recklessly dumps toxic wastes at least spares us the effort of claiming to serve civilization's spiritual well-being.

By invoking the noble language of the literature of liberty — "the free expression of ideas," and all that — the networks try to beguile the public into forgetting what networks never forget: Commercial television's purpose is to sell rivers of beer and mountains of pantyhose ("Hey, America! — Show us your Underalls!"). What CBTV proposes, far from being a "conspiracy," is as public as a calliope and as American as Martin-Luther-King's boycott of Montgomery, Ala., buses. The hysterical network response is heartening.

The networks' criterion of an "acceptable" protest is clear: Acceptable means impotent. It is acceptable for an individual to write a letter, but unacceptable for individuals to "conspire" — meaning organize — because organizing might work. An advertiser says "it only takes a percentage point or two shift in the retail sales of washing machines or K-cars to make a treasury of individuals to profits." Profits? Quit talking about those, dummy, and start quoting Milton.

Let's all get started. Dial soap helps sponsor the execrable "Flamingo Road." Aren't you glad you don't use Dial? Don't you wish nobody did?

For kindergarten

Editor, Times-News:
It was encouraging to me as a kindergarten advocate to open the Times-News this Sunday, Feb. 1, and find a front page exploration of this question.

We are all aware that the problems facing the Legislature concerning funding current educational programs are certainly difficult ones with no easy answers. Some of our legislators have said the answer could be amputation of the kindergarten program.

As one of many Idahoans who worked for legislation to include kindergartens as part of the state system, I see this logic as a giant step backwards. I wonder if it's necessary to revive the action group known as "Support Your Local Five Year Old" whose members worked for several years in the mid-1970s to convince members of the Legislature to vote approval of funding. Then, we testified before hearings and lobbied

Editor, Times-News:
In reference to your recent series of articles about the purchase of the Crystal Springs hatchery from Ken Ellis by the Corps of Engineers, I would like to see the record clarified.

You don't seem to have your facts very well in hand. Mr. Ellis has 125 cubic feet per second of clear, free flowing spring water by license and permit. This water flows year round with no assessments to pay. By contrast the Twin Falls Canal Co. water is selling at about $350 per share. It costs $1 per year for an owner to use the water which generally flows about 8 months out of the year.

It takes 80 shares of Twin Falls Canal Co. water to make one second of water. $350 times 80 equals $28,000. Each cubic foot per second of Twin Falls Canal Co. water is now selling for that price. That water is nowhere near as good as what Mr. Ellis is selling the Corps and it only runs two-thirds as long each year. 125 times $28,000 equals $3.5 million. That doesn't figure in any land, or pipelines, or buildings.

Sex education: Get government out, parents back in

© The Boston Globe Newspaper Co. Washington Post Writers Group First of two parts

BOSTON — The debate is an old one and our disagreement remains as fierce as our anxiety. On the highly emotional subject of teen-age sex and its risk, teen-age pregnancy, we argue about the causes and about the cures with growing intensity.

Is it all the result of liberation or immorality, sexism or equality, ignorance or education, family neglect or government intervention? Have sex education and birth-control clinics promoted teen-age sex or prevented teen-age pregnancy? Our concern for our children's lives supplies ample energy to fuel this debate through the decade.

Now we have a new and powerful captain of one team, Richard Schweiker. As point man for the new right, the secretary of the Department of Health and Human Services went on record recently against government roles in either contraception or sex education. He told reporters that he was against prescribing birth control for unmarried teen-agers under Medicaid and opposed to government involvement in sex education.

He took over the role as leader of the "pro-family" side in this medical-moral issue. And in doing so, he drew on the popular notions that somehow or other the "experts" are part of the problem instead of the solution, that somehow or other the programs are encouraging teen-age sex in the guise of controlling teen-age pregnancy.

This idea, one that grips so many of us, rests on shaky historical grounds. Teen-age sex — under another name, premarital sex — is as old as people. Even in the "repressed" 1950s, 25 percent of the women and more of the men had sex before age 20. At least half of the teen-age marriages were what we used to call so charmingly "shot-gun weddings."

The growth of teen-age sex in the 1960s grew in part out of the exposure of these "underground" facts of life. It also grew out of the simultaneous glorification of sex in the media. From rock lyrics to movies to ads, we were given a hard sell and teen-agers turned into some of the more glib consumers.

If the "sexual revolution" for adults was based in part on the availability of birth control for adults, it is only natural that this affected those half-and-half. But Idaho trend was set into motion before the first federally funded birth-control clinics were open to teen-agers. In terms of sex education, then as now, it was overwhelmingly the business of local school boards, not the federal government.

As Frank Furstenberg, a sociology professor at the University of Pennsylvania and long-term researcher in the field says, "Whatever the government did, it did in response to the problem. They didn't create it." Why then is the debate so heated? Surely part of the reason for the backlash against the experts is that they promised more than they could deliver. Parents were looking for a prescription of protection. If pregnancy grew out of ignorance and accident, the professionals offered education and prevention. Now we know it isn't enough.

Family planning clinics have helped stem the rise of the "epidemic of teen-age pregnancies," but they haven't turned it around. Neither sex education nor birth control clinics have — or probably could have — drastically affected the rise in teen-age sexual activity.

So even if the experts have not handed out typhoid blankets of sexual information to our children, they have also not provided the perfect vaccine against their exposure.

But the more emotional part of the parent backlash has grown out of our anxiety about the fact that sex educators and family planners are talking directly to our children, giving them messages with which we may or may not agree. It feeds our real sense that somehow or other we've lost control or moral influence in this crucial area of our children's lives.

It is easy to cry, as Schweiker has, that the government has interfered in family matters, taking away this function. It isn't that simple. But the professionals and parents have become the "us" and "them," suspicious or at best separate.

On the Soviets

Ambassador says nuclear arms treaty necessary

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Unless the United States and the Soviet Union soon ratify a nuclear arms treaty, the superpowers are bound to "go to war" within two or three decades, the outgoing U.S. Ambassador to the Soviet Union said Sunday.

In an interview on ABC-TV's Issues and Answers, Ambassador Thomas J. Watson, 67, said the American and Soviet systems "are on a collision course."

"Given no change in direction in the Soviet way of doing things and no change in our way of doing things, there is bound to be an explosion down the line somewhere. Let's say somewhere in the next two or three decades."

Watson, a former IBM president, doubted Reagan's public attacks on the Soviets will prove beneficial to the United States, and said they could lead the Russians to "call our bluff."

"Any posturing in dealing with the Russians, in my opinion, is not useful," he said.

Referring to the controversial, 1979 SALT treaty to limit nuclear arms, Watson advised the Reagan administration to "get back to the SALT table."

He said failing to sign the arms treaty — shelve indefinitely when the Soviets invaded Afghanistan — "would only trigger a new nuclear arms race," a possibility he called "desperately dangerous."

Watson, who just returned from 14 months in Moscow, opposes conditioning the signing of a treaty on Soviet involvement throughout the world, the so-called "linkage" favored by Reagan.

"I think you are comparing a mountain with a molehill. You talk about linking a nuclear treaty — when you are dealing with something that can destroy the whole Western world — and an operation in Poland...or misbehaving in El Salvador," he said.

"I think these are terrible things, and I think they should be responded to with conventional arms. Comparing the two different things together is not in the same ballpark."

Watson said he has had nightmares about the possibilities of a U.S.-Soviet confrontation in the Middle East.

"Iran, for instance...it's all perfectly safe as long as we're confronting Iran from the South and the Soviets are confronting from the North. But if Iran suddenly becomes a non-entity, if the government collapses, then Soviet and American forces are facing each other," he said.

"The thing that concerns me is that you can very easily stumble into a confrontation... If we try to use bluff or threat in terms of nuclear weapons, that is an absolutely non-productive course."

THOMAS WATSON...predicts collision

Lawyers, prisons blamed for crime

HOUSTON (UPI) — Chief Justice Warren Burger said Sunday America's tidal wave of crime is the result of a legal system that allows continuing appeals and a prison system that fails to rehabilitate criminals.

Burger, in his 12th annual "State of the Judiciary" address to the American Bar Association's midyear meeting, offered a prescription of speedy trials and education of prisoners as a "response to the reign of terror in American cities."

The "deterrent effect of swift and certain consequences: swift arrest, prompt trial, certain penalty and — at some point — finality of judgment" would improve the criminal justice system, the Supreme Court justice said.

Burger advocated trial "within weeks of arrest" in uncomplicated crimes, with appeals court review following closely behind.

He also suggested allowing reopening of criminal cases for review only when there has been a "true miscarriage of justice" — no matter how long ago it occurred.

Although his suggestion could mean ignoring police and prosecutor misconduct in some cases, Burger said it is necessary because, "The judicial process becomes a mockery of justice if it is forever open to appeals and retrials for errors in the arrest, search or the trial."

The criminal process, he asserted, "often goes on two, three, four or more years before the accused runs out all the options."

"Even after sentence and confinement, the warfare continues with endless streams of petitions for writs, suits against parole board, wardens and judges," Burger noted.

The prospect of freedom robs the prisoner of incentives to learn new skills to enable him to re-enter society, Burger said. Inmates should be discouraged from becoming "jailhouse lawyers," he added.

"No prisoner should leave prison without at least being able to read, write and do basic arithmetic," he said.

He warned that turning the system around would be "long, painful (and) costly." But, he said, it will be "less costly than the billions in dollars and the thousands of blighted lives now hostage to crime."

"It is as much a part of our national defense as the Pentagon budget," Burger noted many of the nation's 300,000 prisoners are under 30 years old and could make a new life if taught a marketable trade.

"To confine offenders behind walls without trying to change them is an expensive folly with short-term benefits," he said.

Buildup closing in on U.S. edge, senator claims

SEN. JOHN TOWER...threat growing

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Soviet Union is catching up with America's naval strength and technological superiority, and its military buildup poses the threat of inferiority for the United States, Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, said Sunday.

"We stand to lose equivalence in strategic nuclear weapons. The American Navy may be neutralized in the oceans. Our longstanding technological supremacy in aircraft and other weapons could be wiped out," the new chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee said in an interview with U.S. News and World Report.

"Military power is Russia's only trump card. But Moscow can use it to split our alliances and make it hot for us in the Third World, where the stakes are getting very high."

He also said the Soviet military buildup poses the danger of "nothing less than military inferiority."

Tower said the Soviets "have gone into the intervention business in a big way." But he said the Russians don't want direct confrontation with the United States for the immediate future, preferring, instead, to leave that role to "a handful of surrogates, such as Cuba."

The United States is going to have to increase its defense budget by $11 billion or $12 billion "for openers," he said.

"race-track" basing of the missile. On the B-1 bomber, which President Carter killed, Tower said "an interim bomber" along the same concepts of the B-1 is needed "that will give us a bridge between the B-52s and high-technology airplanes like the Stealth," a radar-evading bomber.

Tower also said there is a serious problem of losing experienced military personnel that will not be solved by the draft. He said the draft registration begun by Carter must be continued "for mobilization purposes."

"Any move to abolish the program now would also send the wrong kind of signal to our allies and our enemies," he said. But he said if the personnel problems in the military are not resolved, "we may have to go to the draft."

Conable sees tax cut winning OK this year

WASHINGTON — Rep. Barber Conable, R-N.Y., ranking Republican member of the tax-writing House Ways and Means Committee, predicted Sunday Congress will hear the "thunder of the electorate" and enact a tax cut this year.

But whether it will follow the lines of the so-called Kemp-Roth proposal for a 10 percent cut in each of the next three years depends on a number of factors, including President Reagan's popularity, he said.

In an interview on CBS-TV's "Face the Nation," the New York Republican said, "As in past, the president will propose and Congress will dispose" on the tax cut issue.

"The president won't get everything he asks for," he said, "but the voters have spoken" in favor of a tax cut that, like accompanying budget cuts, will be applied evenhandedly across the board.

Asked when it might be enacted, Conable said: "I think it will be coming down the pike pretty fast... Reagan is dedicated to it and congressmen still hear the thunder of the electorate echoing in their ears."

But when asked if the Kemp-Roth proposal for a 10 percent across-the-board cut each year for three years would survive intact, he acknowledged there probably "will be trade-offs to a degree."

Presidential initiative "is terribly important" with respect to both spending cuts and tax cuts, Conable said. If Reagan shows a "strong sense of direction" and enough early progress to achieve acceptance with the people, the Democrats in Congress are "very likely to be cooperative in the early stages of the administration."

They "will launch counter-attacks if they find the mandate eroding. If they sense the public mood changing," he said. He said the same is true of conservative Republicans who will be "ready with alternatives" if they find Reagan's programs stalled or ineffective.

"Success is important for any president," he said, and that success will depend on luck to a considerable extent.

Conable said Reagan is doing fine so far.

Deportation trial for auto worker

CLEVELAND (UPI) — An auto worker goes to trial in U.S. District Court Tuesday to defend his American citizenship against allegations he was a sadistic guard known as "Ivan the Terrible" in a Nazi death camp.

John Demjanjuk, 60, a Ukrainian immigrant, is accused of torturing untold numbers of inmates and guiding thousands of Jews to their deaths in two Polish camps.

Demjanjuk, an assembly line mechanic for Ford Motor Co. since 1952, steadfastly denies the allegations, maintaining he spent much of World War II as a prisoner of war.

Cupid's guise may change but his aim still unerring

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A fresh exhibit of antique Valentine's proves that while Cupid's guise may change with the times, his aim has been unerring.

The Smithsonian Museum display — "Won't You Be My Valentine" — shows off nearly 700 years of European and American Valentine's Day cards. The oldest cards are the most elaborate, festooned with gold and layered with paper lace.

Scantly clad, winged Cupids were a favorite theme of early Valentine makers, who portrayed nymphs driving carriages, rowing boats and leveling their arrows at unsuspecting young lovelies.

Most early 19th century cards were imported from Europe, since Valentine's cards were not made in the United States until the mid-1800s when Esther Howland of Worcester, Mass., introduced handmade, lace-embossed cards.

Mrs. Howland employed dozens of young women who painstakingly cut and punched out the designs and hand-colored decorations to make the romantic missives.

By the Civil War, cards began adopting contemporary themes. One 1865 card depicts an Army tent draped in an American flag. It promises the sender's sweetheart he will fight with a "warrior's arm" for her.

Humorous cards started popping up about the turn of the century, some "not in the best of taste," according to the Smithsonian's John Hoffman, who collected the Valentine retrospective from the museum's collection of 60,000 greeting cards.

One card made in the 1920s shows a cherub aiming his bow at a flapper. "Every girl Cupid hits, he Mrs.," reads the caption.

During the '40s, military themes surfaced again, with leggy young ladies in brief uniforms offering romantic greetings to fighting men in Europe and the Pacific.

Rock musicians heading for Caribbean

By United Press International

ROCK IN THE CARIBBEAN

An English immigration official says Elton John and Stevie Wonder will travel this week to the Caribbean island of Monserrat to record music with one or more former Beatles. The official, who asked not to be identified, also says jazz bass player Stanley Clarke arrived Saturday to record with Paul McCartney, already in the island, and possibly George Harrison and Ringo Starr. McCartney is reportedly staying at a 12-bedroom mansion where measures to keep intruders away are tight. Sources say all three former Beatles will cut a record, possibly this month, as a tribute to their slain partner, John Lennon.

THIN ICE

Speaking of John Lennon, the musician's widow is releasing a song this week that she and her husband prepared the night he was slain. Yoko Ono says she found it difficult to finish up the project — "Walking on Thin Ice" — but forced herself to do it because her husband was so enthused about it. On the record jacket, she offers a touching personal comment: "I hope you like it, John." Lennon co-produced the record. Ironically, it contains lyrics about personal loss.

STAUBACH, MAYBE, FOR CONGRESS

Former Texan Albert Forrester, now of Virginia, is leading a move to draft former Dallas Cowboys quarterback Roger Staubach to run against Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas. Forrester says 700 letters seeking campaign funds already have been mailed. Forrester says the letters will help determine if there is sufficient support for Staubach to run. The former quarterback, who was vocal in his support of Ronald Reagan during the presidential campaign, has not said he will run, but he also has not stopped the attempt to draft him.

A CHARLIE CHAN MOVIE

Four San Francisco area television stations have refused to carry commercials for an upcoming Charlie Chan movie. A fifth station, KRON, says it will carry the spots Feb. 9-15 for "Charlie Chan and the Curse of the Dragon Queen," starring Peter Onorati as the Chinese detective. The film opens in 800 U.S. theaters Friday. Chinese for Affirmative Action asked bay area stations to refuse to carry the advertisements. KTVU, KPX, KGO and KPIX agreed. Much of the film was made in San Francisco last spring amid protests that the film was racist and insulting.

JACKPOT

Actor David Young, one of the stars in the soon-to-be-released movie, "The Gringos," won a $335,000 jackpot at the Flamingo Hilton Hotel in Las Vegas. Young says he went to Vegas for a weekend when he was supposed to be studying scripts in his Southern California home. He hit the jackpot Friday night after dropping about $30 to $40 in the "progressive" machine, in which the possible jackpot increases each time it is played.

GREATEST CLOSEUP

Brazilian film-maker Glauber Rocha, long considered among his country's left-leaning artists, met military President Joao Baptista Figueiredo for just 30 seconds in Portugal and decided Figueiredo could be the new leader of the Third World. "It was just 30 seconds, but in those 30 seconds... I looked deep into his face," says Rocha. "It was the greatest closeup of my life. I saw the suffering and the greatness of Brazil in Figueiredo's face."

Citizens fearful in slayings' wake

ROCKFORD, Ill. (UPI) — Shopkeepers and gas station attendants close their businesses and residents bolt their doors at night in dread fear of what police believe is a lone gunman who has killed six people in less than a week — all in broad daylight.

The first four victims were in this northern Illinois industrial city of 150,000. The most recent two were in neighboring Bellini, Wis., 20 miles north across the state line.

Police in both cities said they are convinced the victims were killed by the same gunman. Rockford police said they are seeking to question a man wanted on a robbery warrant in Chicago. He is believed to have recently lived in Rockford.

Little pattern has emerged. Two victims were black and four were white. Drugs and gambling debts have been ruled out mostly. Only small amounts of money were taken from two of the victims. All were slain in daylight hours.

Rockford police Sgt. James Anderson keeps mostly mum on the investigation.

"Large caliber," he said in describing the murder weapon. "That's all I can say."

One thing is certain because of the recent murders. Residents are flocking to local gunshops to arm themselves.

The spree began Jan. 27 when Willie Fredd, 54, and Albert Pearson, 20, were found dead on the floor of Fredd's Groceries. Each had been shot several times. The next morning, Kevin Kniser, 18, was killed in a nearby Clark Oil service station. Five bullets were found in his head and body.

PBS proposes pay TV network

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Public Broadcasting Service unveiled a plan Sunday to establish a pay television network offering a featured artistic presentation every night and educational programs during the day.

In one of its most significant ventures since its creation in 1967, PBS would create the Public Subscriber Network as a partnership between public television stations and the nation's top theater, dance and opera companies, orchestras, museums and educational institutions.

Referring to the partnership as the "Grand Alliance," a 41-page outline anticipates entering about 50 markets by 1983 with 360,000 families, subscribing initially and a potential of 1.2 million subscribers by 1990.

Subscribers would pay $10 to $13 per month but public television subscribers would get discounts.

The service would permit commercials — although PBS describes them as "institutional messages" — which it said would be clustered for minimum programming disruption.

"We think it holds great promise for providing outstanding programming," PBS President Lawrence Grossman told reporters at a briefing.

The proposal was mailed last week to the network's 165 member stations for review. It goes to the PBS board of directors for consideration March 3 and if it is approved, PBS will launch a $1.5 million development project to continue testing its feasibility.

The Public Subscriber Network would be distributed nationally over the public television satellite system. It would be made available locally by public television stations via cable or subscription television, a multipoint distribution service or other system, depending on the community.

The network would provide a much-needed economic boost to public television, which has been scrambling for ways to supplement its traditional revenue sources — the federal government, corporate underwriters and individual subscribers.

Grossman projected a budget of $36 million for the first year of operation. The report predicts a small profit in the first year and "very substantial income for the partners being generated in subsequent years" — climbing from $19 million in 1983 to $158 million in 1990.

Additional future revenue sources could include publication subscriptions, mail order cassettes, videodisc and book club sales, ticket sales, travel services and educational course materials.

Meningitis vaccinations set at school

HOUSTON (UPI) — Health authorities Sunday prepared supplies of syringes and vaccine in an attempt to combat an unusual outbreak of meningitis at an elementary school that both alarmed and mystified medical experts.

Four area residents have already died — from the disease — and officials said another case had been confirmed.

The vaccination program was ordered to begin at 9 a.m. today at Dodson Elementary School, which has 765 students. Free shots will be given to all students, faculty members and staff. Authorities said the shots were safe and caused no serious side effects.

Dr. Robert MacLean, deputy director of the Houston Health Department, said the girls at the elementary school were all in the same class and some socialized with each other after school. In addition, three pre-school siblings of the infected students also contracted the disease.

"The quickest and safest" action is to vaccinate, said MacLean.

The vaccination program was agreed upon Saturday following a lengthy meeting that went into the night between officials of the U.S. Center for Disease Control in Atlanta, the Houston Health Department and Dr. Ralph Feigin, chief of Texas Children's Hospital and a specialist in infectious diseases.

MacLean said "It was the opinion of experts we consulted — that where there was this type of incidence in a short period, we should probably vaccinate."

The newest case of meningitis was found in a patient already hospitalized, said a spokeswoman for Dr. Feigin's office. Early symptoms led officials to believe the patient was suffering from something else, but test results confirmed Saturday the illness was meningococcal meningitis.

Since the first of the year, city health officials say there have been 30 confirmed cases of meningitis and four deaths. In all of 1980 there were only 25 cases reported. In addition to the 30 cases in Houston, four other cases were suspected.

Poles strike today; talks fail

WARSAW, Poland (UPI) — Last-minute talks between the government and the Solidarity union collapsed Sunday.

A union spokesman said a general strike by up to 300,000 workers in southwest Poland would take place as planned today.

A Solidarity spokesman said the on-again, off-again negotiations in the southwest province of Jelenia Gora "were broken off and postponed without indicating when they would be resumed again."

"Znam means that tomorrow we will go on strike as it was planned previously," he said.

"It means confrontation," he added.

He said about 450 factories as well as public transport and other services will be affected. Estimates of the number of workers involved ranged from 130,000 to 300,000.

Other strikes and protests were planned today in eastern and southern Poland in support of a Rural Solidarity independent farmers union.

In a move that could trigger yet another dispute between the government and the union, the Warsaw regime said an investigation of Poland's most prominent dissident organization, the Committee for Social Self-Defense (KOR), showed it was engaged in foreign supported "anti-state activities."

Both actions came one day before a crucial meeting of the Communist Party Central Committee to discuss Poland's independent unions and "the shaping of their socialist character."

The new agency said KOR, many of whose members belong to Solidarity, "is supported by foreign centers of political subversion, which deliver all technical and financial means and support the anti-socialist activity of the organization."

Top government and Communist Party officials have warned with increasing frequency that "anti-socialist" elements in Solidarity were trying to turn the union into an opposition political party.

Soviets grant exit visas

MOSCOW (UPI) — Soviet authorities, in an apparent relaxation of their clampdown, on emigration, have granted hundreds of exit visas since mid-January, Jewish sources said during the weekend.

There was no official announcement or explanation, but some Jews linked the change in policy to the 23rd Communist Party Congress, which opens Feb. 23.

Diplomatic sources who follow the situation confirmed the increase in visas, but said the trend may only last a few weeks.

"They want to raise our hopes so we won't cause any trouble during the big event (the Congress)," one activist

Arguments disrupt non-aligned meet

NEW DELHI, India (UPI) — Arguments over Afghanistan, Cambodia and the Persian Gulf war flared Sunday on the eve of a four-day conference of non-aligned nations.

Pakistan rejected an offer to conduct talks with neighboring Afghanistan on terms for a Soviet troop withdrawal, but agreed to meet the Afghans if Iran joins the discussions.

Iran was being represented at the meeting by Bezhad Nabavi, its chief negotiator in the hostage crisis.

Before leaving for New Delhi, Nabavi served notice he will ask the conference to condemn Iraq and suspend its membership in the non-aligned movement until it withdraws its troops from Iran.

He also rejected any possibility of mediation between Iran and Iraq at the meeting.

Pakistani Foreign Minister Aga Shahi told reporters on his arrival in New Delhi that talks with Afghanistan must include Iran, which has refused to join the tripartite meeting because Tehran opposes any contact with the Soviet-installed Afghan regime.

Afghanistan has accused Pakistan and Iran of aiding the Moslem rebels fighting the Moscow-backed Marxist regime in Kabul.

Shahi denied that he would meet privately with his Afghan counterpart Shah Mohammad Dost during the non-aligned conference, and said: "I do not see why there should be so much opposition to a dialogue among the three sides."

U.N. Secretary General Kurt Waldheim is expected to work behind the scenes to remove the obstacles blocking talks on Afghanistan.

Former Laotian pilot says Americans held

SEATTLE (UPI) — A former Royal Lao Air Force pilot insists 40 to 50 American servicemen who served in the Vietnam War are still being held captive by the Communist government in Laos, the Seattle Post-Intelligencer reported Sunday.

In a copyright story, the newspaper identified the former pilot as Sayfa Phounsavan, who now directs the Lao Family Center, Inc., agency in Seattle.

"The truth is that there are today 40 or 50 Americans, most of them pilots who were shot down over Laos during the (Vietnam) war, being held prisoner there now," said Sayfa.

He said his information came from the hundreds of Laotian refugees who seek services from his agency.

"The people coming to the Lao Family Center tell me that Communist found many Americans alive in the jungles and have kept them," he said.

Sayfa predicted that the Americans being held captive in Laos will be freed for "several more years of forced labor."

"The governments there use the Americans to teach them how to fly the airplanes and helicopters abandoned in 1975," Sayfa said. "They are also being used as English instructors and for other work."

Sayfa said that in the decade before the Communist "Pathet Lao" army swept into control of Laos in April, 1975, he flew rescue missions for American fliers shot down over the Ho Chi Minh trail inside Laos.

During this period, the CIA trained and armed groups of Hmong tribesmen and other Laotians who helped in the jungle search for the downed Americans.

Sayfa said it is these searchers who are gathering in his office with their persistent reports of surviving American prisoners.

Khmer Rouge claims Viet forces repulsed

PHUM THMEI, Rebel-held Cambodia (UPI) — Khmer Rouge guerrillas claim they have forced Vietnamese troops to retreat from key positions and to adopt a defensive strategy in their 2-year-old war against Cambodian rebels.

"The Vietnamese have launched no important military initiatives in more than a month," Khieu Samphan, prime minister of the deposed Khmer Rouge regime, told UPI in a weekend interview at his jungle headquarters in western Cambodia.

"They have abandoned a number of important positions and are retreating to cover in their bunkers," the communist guerrilla leader claimed.

Western military intelligence analysts confirmed that Hanoi's 200,000-man army of occupation in Cambodia has been unusually quiet recently, but said they considered the inactivity "very temporary."

But the Vietnamese, who have lost a number of strategic outposts to persistent attacks by hardened Khmer Rouge rebels, may have difficulty regaining lost ground.

Sihanouk hints at return

PEKING (UPI) — Former Cambodian leader Prince Norodom Sihanouk said Sunday he plans to end his self-imposed exile and lead the effort to drive the Vietnamese from Cambodia, but only if China agrees to his plans.

Sihanouk's declaration to re-enter active Cambodian politics came only seven months after he announced his retirement, saying he would remain in exile in China and North Korea.

"I agree to head a government and a united front to fight against Vietnamese colonialism in Cambodia," Sihanouk said in a message to a friend, which was made available to foreign journalists in Peking.

He stressed, however, that his return depended on acceptance of five conditions by Peking and by the Khmer Rouge, who are fighting the Vietnamese-installed regime in Phnom Penh since the overthrow of the Khmer government of Pol Pot in 1979.

Electrical short suspected in fire

NEW DELHI, India (UPI) — Authorities said Sunday they suspected an electrical short circuit caused the fire that swept through a circus tent packed with school children and their teachers, killing 66 of them and injuring more than 450.

The dead included 45 children, among them eight who died at hospitals a day after fire consumed the main tent at the end of a kiddie matinee at the Venus Circus in Bangalore, 1000 miles south of New Delhi.

Circus performers were prevented from summoning immediate help because the telephone lines were dead, officials said.

Natural family planning sessions begin Feb. 19

TWIN FALLS — Natural family planning will be discussed in a series of four monthly classes at St. Edward's Parish Hall.

The sessions, sponsored by the Couple to Couple League, will begin Feb. 19 at 7:30 p.m. They will be taught by Bob and Colleen Fries, a CCL certified teaching couple.

As an organization the League dates back to 1971 when John and Sheila Kippley teamed with Dr. Ronald Prem, professor of obstetrics and gynecology at the University of Minnesota School of Medicine. Dr. Prem heads the League's medical advisory board and is convinced of the value of having well trained couples instruct other couples, Fries said.

The method taught by the League is a system of fertility awareness in which several symptoms of female fertility are used in a cross-checking way for the greatest reliability and confidence.

According to the CCL, this system (called the sympto-thermal method) can achieve 99 percent effectiveness in actual practice. The League notes that this system is not the same as the calendar rhythm and that it is an improvement over both the temperature-only method and the Billings' ovulation method.

The League also states that its method assumes that every woman has irregular cycles.

The non-profit League is an interfaith organization dedicated to providing education about natural family planning. Typical classes are attended by couples from all faith backgrounds, Fries said.

The League attributes this to disenchantment with the Pill and also to an increased concern about the current status of sexual morality in Western culture.

The League emphasizes that the natural methods of conception regulation can be practiced for all the fertile years without the risk of endangering health and that many couples have found marital enrichment through the practice of natural family planning.

For further information and pre-registration, call Colleen Fries at 825-5376.

Classic look

NEW YORK (UPI) — Boys' wear for spring has a clean, classic and coordinated look, says Patricia Van Olinda, fashion editor for an infants' and children's wear magazine.

Clear, bright colors dominate. Ms. Van Olinda writes in the October issue of course, in active wear.

Some are combined with whites or neutrals, especially heather gray and khaki. "Plaids, looking stronger in sport coats and pants than they have in many seasons, are also light and bright."

Pastels are also represented, some in stripes with more traditional colors and in shirts.

Dear Abby

Loving, not judging, will help wayward daughter, 17

By VAN BUREN
© Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I'm concerned about our 17-year-old daughter. Before she started high school she was a good girl and got good grades. But she's a senior now and her grades are slipping, and I can't trust her because she lies about where she goes and what she does.

My main concern is that I know she's been having sex with every boy she goes out with. I'm sure she had an abortion last year, but she never admitted it. I gave her every opportunity to tell me, but she never did. We've gone around several times lately about her curfew and dating habits, but she does as she pleases, paying no attention to my rules.

I don't want to be too strict for fear she'll get married just to get away from home like I did — much to my regret. Her father is no help. He's very hot-headed and isn't able to talk calmly to her. He puts her down, calls her a tramp, and lets her know he doesn't trust her.

I've heard that some girls have sex with a lot of boys because they never get any affection from their fathers. Is that true? I've thought of writing to you many times, but never knew where to start. I love her and care what happens to her, Abby. Please help me.

—WORRIED MOM

DEAR MOM: If you really love your daughter, you will put her into the hands of a counselor with whom she can communicate comfortably. It's true, girls who were ignored by their fathers tend to become promiscuous in their search for the understanding and affection they miss while growing up. Don't be judgmental. Let her know that you love her, and let the counselor do the rest.

DEAR ABBY: Has "Add my 2 cents" worth concerning "the other woman" plight? I have been "the other woman" in a married man's life for three years. He's too decent to leave his wife, but I'm willing to wait forever if necessary. I would rather have 50 percent of him than 100 percent of any other man I know.

NO COMPLAINTS, N.C.

DEAR NO COMPLAINTS: If you're satisfied with the crumbs, it's your business, but most "other women" tell me it's a crummy existence. It's also for the birds.

DEAR ABBY: The letter about the 9-year-old who told Santa all he wanted for Christmas was a mommy who didn't smoke inspires this letter.

I used to operate a small excavating business that included digging graves. Whenever I was asked, "Do you mind if I smoke?" I'd reply, "I don't smoke myself, but I encourage others to. It's good for my business."

—DIGGER McTAVISH

CONFIDENTIAL TO J.G. IN WINNIPEG: Get a dialogue going. "Speech is civilization itself. The word — even the most contradictory word — preserves contact. It is silence which isolates." (Thomas Mann)

ALBION — Sgt. 1st Class Kenneth L. Hunter, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack L. Hunter of Albion, has arrived for duty at South Korea.

Hunter is a first sergeant.

RUPERT — Airman 1st Class Richard A. Reed, son of Rozella Reed of Rupert, has graduated from the U.S. Air Force air traffic controller course at Keeler Air Force Base, Miss.

Graduates of the 16-week course learned procedures to regulate air traffic and direct aircraft to radar-controlled landings and passed the Federal Aviation Administration Certification examination. They also earned credits toward an associate degree in applied sciences through the Community College of the Air Force.

Reed will now serve at Tinker Air Force Base, Okla.

WENDELL — Navy Sonar Technician 3rd Class Charles W. Donaldson Jr., son of Ida J. Donaldson of Wendell, recently participated in the rescue of 285 Vietnamese refugees in two separate incidents.

He is a crewmember aboard the guided missile destroyer USS Robinson, homeported in San Diego, and operating as a unit of the U.S. 7th Fleet.

During routine naval exercises in the Gulf of Thailand, the ship spotted 285 refugees packed into a crippled 24-foot wooden cargo boat. The ship embarked the group, the largest number rescued at one time since former President Carter stepped-up rescue efforts in 1979.

Approximately 240 miles south of Saigon, an overcrowded 35-foot wooden boat was sighted with 23 people aboard. While boarding the refugees, two women and one infant fell overboard. Several sailors jumped into the extremely rough sea and held the refugees afloat until they could be helped aboard the ship. Only one woman could be revived. The refugees said they had been adrift at sea for three days without food or water.

A 1979 graduate of Wendell High School, Donaldson joined the Navy in June 1979.

Exercise benefits differ for women

DAYTON, Ohio (UPI) — Women do not get the same benefits as men from vigorous exercises because of a difference in metabolizing cholesterol, says a researcher at the University of Dayton.

Research shows that exercise such as long-distance running, walking, swimming, bicycling or cross-country skiing can increase high-density lipoprotein levels in men's blood. These exercises are thought to decrease the risk of coronary heart disease.

Low levels of HDL, which carry about 20 percent of blood cholesterol, have been associated with increased risk of heart disease.

The role HDL plays in preventing heart disease is uncertain, but Lloyd Laubach of the university's physical and health education department said HDL may help prevent cholesterol deposits in arteries by carrying the substance away from body tissues to the liver, where it is broken down and excreted.

Sun Valley employee and snowcat driver Glenn Shepard inspects slopes on Bald Mountain while skiers head for the top

Last word in grooming ski runs

Sun Valley farmers special breed

By RON ZELLAR
Times-News writer

KETCHUM — A special breed of farmers takes over when skiers on Sun Valley's famous Bald Mountain pack it for the day.

They work morning and night using equipment that compares in power, function and price with conventional farm implements.

The main difference is their medium is frozen. The terrain is frequently steeper than 45 degrees, and their busy season runs at full tilt when other farmers are repairing equipment or vacationing in warmer climates.

"What we do is farm snow," agreed Denzel Rowland, slopes director on Sun Valley Company's three ski hills.

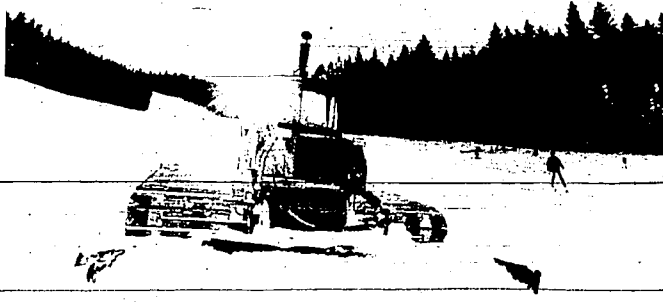

Company employees till portions of the 1,275-acre mountain every night, "buffing up" heavily traveled areas and leveling moguls that affect intermediate skiers the way north-south irrigation corrugates affect a westbound haywagon.

Grooming has earned the ski area a reputation that entices visitors back and brings in mountain crews from other resorts for the last word on how it's done.

Ski resorts are competitive, acknowledged Sun Valley Mountain Manager Max McKinnon. But when it comes to handling snow and assuring skier safety, officials charged with grooming hills go out of their way to trade information.

"Owning the right equipment is half the battle," McKinnon said.

The company purchased nine of the most advanced snow cats available in 1978. Diesel engines in each of the units power hydrostatic pumps, which "excort" 500 horse-powers on two independent tracks,

Almost no hill is too steep or too slippery for the snowcats enabling the machines to maintain course even on tricky double fall lines.

Steep runs like "Exhibition" are groomed infrequently because of need, not because the track vehicles aren't up to the task, McKinnon said.

Each of the new-generation crawlers is able to move moguls with a front-mounted blade and chew up clumps with a screen roller that adjusts like a tandem disk.

A new piece of equipment called a rototiller has been tried on the mountain, although Sun Valley Co. has not purchased one to date, McKinnon said. The attachment works much the same as a garden tiller, churning hard-packed snow into a reconditioned bed on which to plant skis and poles.

Hiring drivers, snowmakers and lift maintenance workers who know their jobs and care about the product is the other half of the management equation, McKinnon said.

Many of the company's snowcat drivers are heavy equipment operators during the summer, Rowland said. Several are farmers or farm employees. Most also are avid skiers.

"We have very little turnover in drivers," McKinnon said. "A lot are skiers. They like to check what they do, and they know the mountain."

McKinnon and Rowland have worked together on Sun Valley slopes for 8 1/2 years. The two previously worked together at a ski resort in Yosemite Valley, Calif.

Grooming at night poses no special problems, the two men said, though operators can easily become lost in a snowstorm. Drivers stay in contact with each other and the valley floor using sophisticated FM radios. When trouble does arise, wind chill can drop the mountain temperature to well below zero.

New snow eases the load of keeping the slopes in shape, McKinnon said. Many skiers prefer to pack their own powder, for which the mountain is famous. The truly hard work, he said, comes when sun has been the dominant weather force for weeks at a time.

Snow-making equipment helped the mountain through a 30-day dry spell that ended two weeks ago. But meticulous grooming kept the rest of the mountain open, and elicited favorable comments from visitors and locals who did not wait for a heavier snowpack.

When new snow allows crews to get ahead, they can groom lesser used areas and take some pressure off familiar runs, Rowland said.

Sun Valley Co. also provides little extras not found at many resorts — items which collectively help justify the resort's $18 daily fee for skiing one of the nation's best-known mountains. Kleenex boxes are mounted near lift lines. Pliers and screwdrivers are chained to signboards for emergency repairs. And ski "ambassadors" situated in strategic spots help direct traffic and offer advice on conditions.

"When we're on the hill, people often come up to tell us what a good job we're doing," said Chuck Webb, Sun Valley Co. assistant general manager, as a local resident approached him to do just that.

Shadows growing longer on the Warm Springs lift signal the end of another ski day and the start of another grooming shift.

Viewed from below, the snowcats' headlamps twinkle on the mountain's arteries, lending romance to the resort's nighttime setting. The scene from above is even more spectacular, McKinnon said, though it is off-limits to the public for reasons of safety and liability.

The grooming task itself requires a relatively close field of vision, he noted.

Seen from the farming perspective, drivers are merely racing with or against the weather to keep the garden in its best possible shape. Satisfied pole planters are their best measure of success.

Lab waste statement in works

IDAHO FALLS — The U.S. Department of Energy is seeking advice on the preparation of plans for radioactive wastes stored at the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory.

The DOE published a notice in the Jan. 26 Federal Register of plans to write an environmental impact statement for long-term management of transuranic waste buried and stored at the INEL Radioactive Waste Management Complex.

Transuranic waste is material contaminated with traces of long-lived radioactive elements such as plutonium. Approximately 3.9 million cubic feet of transuranic wastes are stored on the 144-acre waste-management complex. By 1985, the quantity may increase to 4.5 million cubic feet.

The impact statement will provide a management plan for the buried waste, if necessary, and the location of a processing facility, according to a DOE news release. Environmental, technical and socioeconomic factors will be considered.

Interested organizations and the general public may submit written comments regarding the planning process if they are postmarked by Feb. 24. Comments should be addressed to: J.B. Whitsett, chief radioactive waste programs, U.S. Department of Energy, 550 Second St., Idaho Falls, Idaho 83401.

No issues identification meeting has been scheduled in connection with the process. If public response shows the need for such a meeting one will be scheduled, according to DOE spokesman R.L. Blackledge.

Management, taxes topics for seminar

TWIN FALLS — Taxes, money management and unusual business opportunities for women will be covered in a day-long business seminar at the College of Southern Idaho Tuesday.

Sponsored by the Center of New Directions, the program is designed to provide information for individuals thinking of starting their own businesses or for those already in business who need hints for better management and operation.

The seminar begins at 8:30 a.m. with registration in Room 117 of the Shields Building. Rita Larom, director of the Center of New Directions, will open the program with Nancy Narvis, management consultant, Small Business Administration explaining how that agency can help with new or existing businesses.

Burglars strike restaurant cars

TWIN FALLS — A burglary at North's Chuck Wagon, 1859 Kimberly Road, and two vehicle burglaries were being investigated by Twin Falls police Sunday.

Officers said someone broke into the restaurant between 10:45 p.m. Saturday and 7 a.m. Sunday. Missing was $600 in quarters.

Clayton Clough, 1153 Niath Ave. E., told police someone took $410 worth of sound equipment and a racquet ball racquet from his car Friday night.

He said the vehicle was parked in the alley behind his home when it was entered.

Another vehicle, a jeep owned by Ben Schreiver of 554 Fillmore Street, was also broken into near his home sometime late Friday night or early Saturday. Officers said thieves took a console, cassette tapes and other sound equipment valued at $336.

Fuel program closing down

BOISE — The Idaho Office of Energy announced this week it will close down its fuel set-aside program and return leftover funds to the Legislature.

Ken Green, IOE director, said his office received word from federal sources that President Ronald Reagan's deregulation of the oil industry will eliminate the necessity for such programs.

"We expect the program to be completely closed down within one month," he said, including federal offices for hearings, appeals and assignment of supplier with which the IOE worked closely.

The office will ask that its budget request for the 1982 fiscal year be reduced by $45,000.

Patience asset for Pioneer School head

Burley school employs Montessori techniques

By LINDA CATES
Times-News writer

BURLEY — Jim Southworth is a small, quiet man with an endless reservoir of patience.

As the only teacher and administrator for 27 youngsters ranging in age from 3 to 12 years, Southworth may need all the patience he can muster. He uses Montessori teaching techniques in running his private school here.

Originated by a woman in Italy who worked with children in a mental institution, the Montessori methods spread to the United States in about 1957, Southworth said.

The classroom at Southworth's Pioneer School shows evidence of the Montessori philosophy. Located in a white-brick building at the corner of 13th Street and Miller Avenue, Southworth's large, carpeted classroom has low-shelved materials within easy reach of pupils.

The 3-year-olds learn in the same room as the pre-teens with simple objects designed to foster concentration and manual dexterity. One such device is a small tray with two juice glasses sitting on it, one glass containing rice. A 3-year-old is taught to carefully pick up the glass of rice on the left and pour its contents into the empty glass on the right without spilling. Upon completion, the child turns the tray around to place the rice-filled glass on the left again, as a way of teaching the pre-reading skill of left-to-right concentration.

"Even wiping the tabletops is learned from left to right," said Southworth.

"The students learn from practical life," he added. "Some may think the environment is uncontrolled, but it isn't. Everything is directed and for a purpose."

Another teaching device for pre-schoolers is a sand table where children may shape letters from the alphabet by tracing with their fingers in a tray filled with sand. Color-coded cards are nearby with sandpaper letters that little fingers can feel.

Older children at Pioneer contract each day for the work they will do. "We started out with daily goals in math, reading and botany. Now we are working in math, spelling, reading, botany, biology, geography, history and penmanship. Progress charts filled out by students are kept on the bulletin board.

Southworth held a junior high school in Coeur d'Alene set up a Montessori program there. He spent two years there before coming to Burley less than a year ago.

Southworth feels his students are gaining an education equal to one gained in public schools. In some ways there are more benefits, he said.

"These students are seeing that they are part of the universe. There is a correlation to everything in the universe, and they see themselves as part of that," he said.

There is no grading at Pioneer School. Southworth keeps progress reports on students' mastery of the concepts that are part of the Montessori method.

"We have a tea party," said 8-year-old Candy Taylor when she described the meeting when parents come to the school to hear about progress of their children.

One important part of the Montessori method is the students' relationship with a line drawn on the classroom floor. "The line is the place for learning," said Southworth. "If I have any teaching or lecturing to do, I do it from the line. If a student is out of control, I say to him, 'Would you sit on the line, please?' He knows then that he has something to learn."

Southworth said the Montessori method teaches concepts as opposed to just process. It builds concentration, builds motivation and individualism. It fosters a desire to learn.

In the classroom, 6-year-old Jason Horejs said he can choose between doing activities or papers. "I usually do papers," he said, "because I like papers best." When asked what an activity was, Jason pointed to a large board filled with removable dowled pegs. "That's an activity," he said.

Married typists work better than single Typists who are married do better work than typists who aren't married. More keyboarding, fewer mistakes. That's the claim of a researcher in the West Germany city of Paderborn. At first glance, you might think the wives studied in this particular project just naturally happened to be swifter than the single ladies, coincidentally. But the researcher tested numerous young unattached women, then tested them again shortly after they went to the altar. Their efficiency jumped considerably immediately after the marriages.

DOG SOUP

Q. In the vernacular of truckstop waitresses, what's "Dog Soup"?
A. Water.

Q. Why is "bone china" called that?
A. Because it's made from bone ash, the white porous residue left from heated dehydrated cattle bones. Plus clay. Plus other ingredients. European pottery makers came up with it when trying to duplicate fine Chinese porcelain.

Q. What's the average price of a two-bedroom house in California's Santa Monica or Beverly Hills?
A. Santa Monica, $206,000. Beverly Hills, $411,000.

Little defies pressure to win Turnberry event

MIAMI (UPI) — South African Sally Little sank a three-foot, pressure-packed putt on the third playoff hole Sunday to win the $18,750 first prize in the second stop on the LPGA tour at Turnberry Isle.
 The putt gave Little a par-five on the 18th hole, but it was good enough for the victory because her opponent, Judy Rankin, hit her third shot into the water at the right of the green and had to settle for a bogey.
 Rankin, Little and JoAnne Carner all shot five-under par 283 for the regulation 72 holes. All scored pars on the first playoff hole, the par-four 16th.

 Then on the par-three 17th, Rankin and Little both found the green, but Carner hit the left-bunker about 45 feet from the pin.
 Carner's blast out of the sand was 15 feet long, and she two-putted for a bogey that dropped her out of contention. Both Rankin and Little two-putted to make it a two-way contest going into the third and final sudden death hole.

from the defense, but he made success possible at trick one when he dropped the five of clubs after his partner's ten held the trick. Retaining the ace and queen of clubs, Oswald, who took two he led a diamond and finessed his queen. West took his king and queen and then Oswald, by playing ace and queen on Sammy was careful to drop the six under the ace and hang on to that tiny deuce. Then he cashed the ace and jack of diamonds while West got rid of a spade.

Alan: "It looked like the bad diamond break had doomed Sammy to defeat since he could not get to dummy's hearts, but he found a way to get there. He cashed the ace of hearts and ace-king of spades."

Oswald: "West had chucked a spade on the third diamond and dropped a heart on the second spade. Now Sammy threw him in with that carefully preserved deuce of clubs. West took it and had to give dummy the last two tricks to give Sammy his contract."

Alan: "Note that Sammy got help. If West had not cleared the clubs when he is at trick two and merely led a red suit, the play could not have been developed."
