

Right-to-work bill passes House

BOISE (UPI) — Idaho House Republican passage of a right-to-work bill Wednesday on the lower chamber.

The bill, which survived numerous attempts to kill it in the House State Affairs Committee and on the House floor, now heads for the Senate.

Representatives, stung by a bitter intraparty issue, hotly debated the bill for about Wednesday afternoon. Its supporters said it would give workers freedom to refrain from joining a union, while opponents said it would weaken unions.

However, the most emotional debate occurred Tuesday morning, when some Republicans tried to send the bill back to the State Affairs Committee, where it could have been bottled up and killed.

GOP supporters of the bill cried out against "meddling" with the measure by state Republican Party officials and Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho.

The Idaho GOP Central Committee, at the behest of GOP Chairman Dennis Olsen, passed a resolution last weekend saying consideration of the bill this year would be "counterproductive" to the party's attempts to take the governor's office away from the Democrats in 1982. McClure had said the same earlier.

"They've stuck us out on a limb, stabbed us in the back and watched us fall," protested Rep. Michael Strasser.

R-Nampa, said McClure, Olsen and the central committee.

He also had vehement words for fellow House Republicans who sided with the party's decision.

"When it comes right down to it, you don't have the guts to vote on this," he said. "Let's keep it here and vote on it and get it out of the way."

"This smacks of a deal," said Rep. Martin Trillhaase, Idaho Falls. "Let's vote the party honest" and vote for the bill, which was a GOP-backed issue in the 1980 election campaign, he said.

Reps. Mack Neibaur, R-Paul, and Gordon Hofffield, R-Jerome, also lashed out bitterly.

"The GOP Central Committee has decided that we can't... vote the wishes of our constituents back home," Neibaur said. "This is lousy. Why don't we send Mr. Olsen up here to make all the laws."

"(Olsen) is trying to elect a governor of the state of Idaho in here, and those things should not be on this floor," Hofffield said.

"I'm not so sure there shouldn't be a change there (the party chairmanship)," Hofffield added.

After the debate, the House voted down the motion to send it back to committee 41-37.

It then went to a full vote of the House where 7 Republicans and 13 of the 14 Democrats opposed the bill.

Panel OKs Neibaur's $195 million proposal

BOISE (UPI) — The Legislature's Joint Finance-Appropriations Committee Wednesday set a $195 million general fund budget for the state's public schools in fiscal 1982.

Rep. Mack Neibaur, R-Paul, successfully urged the budget-setting committee to approve his proposal, saying his plan would provide $172 million for the state's public-school foundation program. The governor had recommended $183.7 million.

Neibaur's proposal also included another $22.5 million to fund the teachers' retirement program and $445,900 for unemployment insurance.

His $195 million total compares to the governor's recommendation of about $207 million in total general fund support for public schools.

"One year ago, public schools were the only agency that didn't suffer a holdback because they could go to the counties for override levies," Neibaur said, adding lawmakers have continually appropriated more and more money for public schools each year.

"If we continue this kind of spending, it's just going to be a matter of time before the schools get everything we've got and we'll have to raise taxes."

But while some committee members protested, saying they preferred appropriating $200 million instead, on an 11-9 vote the committee adopted Neibaur's recommendation. Most of the dissent came from lawmakers who wanted to adopt the higher figure because they said the $195 million would force local school boards to turn to voters to raise additional cash through override property tax levies.

"The philosophy of this legislature, at least since I've been here, is to increasingly fund public schools out of the general fund," said Rep. Lawrence Knigge, R-Filer. "If we refuse to do this, all it's going to do is force override levies and the taxpayers are going to end up paying the bill."

Sen. Dane Watkins, R-Idaho Falls, also supported the $200 million figure, saying "even with $200 million we're going to see a lot of override levies around the state."

Sen. Dean Van Engelen, R-Burley, similarly said he felt the Legislature had the "obligation and responsibility" to fund public schools at the higher level. "A $200 million budget is not a fat budget," Van Engelen said. "It is a budget we can fit into our $422 million revenue projection. We have the right, we have the obligation and we have the ability to fit it in."

But Neibaur's supporters said funding public schools at the higher level would result in additional cutbacks in the state's other programs.

Area superintendents — appropriation will force override vote or staff cuts

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Magic Valley school superintendents Wednesday viewed the $195 million general fund budget recommended for schools by the Joint Finance Appropriation Committee with deep concern.

"We have to run our schools on whatever money we have. It may mean overloaded classrooms or a cut in programs. One thing we know for sure is that we will have school next year but we don't know how many changes will have to be made," said Superintendent Wayne Fagg of Minidoka County.

Gov. John Evans had recommended a $207 million minimum budget and Superintendent of Public Instruction Jerry Evans had asked for $217 million.

Most Magic Valley superintendents had supported Jerry Evans' proposal as being conservative but adequate to meet inflationary costs of districts. It would have given a 10 percent increase over current funding.

Twin Falls Superintendent Dr. James D. Sawin said he still supports the $217-million figure.

Some superintendents said if the $195 million becomes the final figure they will be forced to cut staff.

"About the only place to save money is in the staff since about 80 percent of the district costs go for salaries," said Blaine County's Richard L. Jones.

He said his district now receives $575,000 in override tax. "The people of Blaine County are very supportive of education. I think they would approve the override again next year, but I hesitate to say they would want to increase it or if the board would even ask that."

"The override represents about a sixth of our district budget. Should it fall, for some reason, it would mean drastic cuts in programs," Jones said.

Jones said he hopes equalization would make up for some of the loss of state funding in the various districts, adding equalization is excellent if it means everyone pays a fair share. If it takes away from some districts, along with shortages in state funding, then it compounds problems in those districts, he said.

Hagerman Superintendent Kenneth L. Black said, "I think we are underfunded if that ($195 million) is the final figure. We would have been in pretty good shape with $217 million, but I think all of the school districts will agree we will just have to hope for some increases elsewhere."

Fagg said Minidoka schools made drastic cuts two years ago, then restored 13 of the 23 teacher positions lost.

"We passed a $450,000 override last year by a 53 percent vote. A year earlier it lost by a sizeable majority. I don't think we are in a position to ask our voters to increase it at this time," Fagg said.

Cassia Superintendent-Norman F. Hurst said he feels the override of about $300,000 or six mills in his district is about maximum.

"We are locked in with the 1 percent (taxing limit) and this has eliminated any chance for growth or improvement. I think we are about average for district taxation and equalization would not give us any more local money."

"If the legislature would pass a law that our fuel and transportation costs would also stay the same, we could get by on the $195 million, but it looks like more cuts for all of us," Hurst added.

Filer waits on crumbling wall repair study

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES Times-News writer

FILER — Filer High School officials will find out Friday what they'll have to do to prop up their crumbling building.

"We are not doing anything until we get an engineer's report," Superintendent Sheldon Kovarsky said. "We hope we will have the report by Friday so we can make some plans for repairs or for other arrangements."

Earlier this week it was discovered part of the foundation in the old portion of the high school building is crumbling and a large support beam is sagging. John Priestler, Buhl engineer, inspected the building Monday to determine extent of the damage. In the meantime, some students forced out of classrooms by the deterioration may be shifted to other areas of the building.

Kovarsky said Wednesday there will be no lunches served at the school and the special education class in the school basement as well as classrooms on the main floor above the damaged area will remain closed at least this week.

"I hope it won't come to condemning the whole building as unsafe," Kovarsky said. "Right now we are planning to put in some supports and make repairs so we can continue using the building the rest of the year and maybe make more permanent repairs for next year."

The superintendent said there is one major problem — money.

"We don't have any extra money for costly repairs and the Legislature wasn't exactly good to us this week," Kovarsky said.

Wednesday morning the school's boiler, and heating system was inspected.

"The results were not good, but then they didn't tell us anything we didn't already know," he added.

"They told us (it) would either have to be replaced or rebuilt. They also said it would cost more to rebuild than to replace."

"If we replace it, we aren't sure how to get the old one out of the basement."

"The boiler inspectors suggested we relocate it and also replace all of the steam pipes under the old building and the newer portion because of the amount of steam that is leaking and buckling floors above the pipes."

"We haven't exactly had a good month. About all of the news we have had this month has been bad, especially in view of the financial outlook," Kovarsky said.

On Feb. 3 patrons of the Filer School District turned down a proposed $2.9 bond issue to build a new high school.

Supreme Court strikes down binding open primaries

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court Wednesday rejected open presidential primaries that allow voters to cast ballots in either party's contest.

The practice has been criticized as diluting the power of true party believers.

The 6-3 ruling was a victory for the Democratic Party, which challenged Wisconsin's 78-year-old open primary law binding delegates to the party's national convention to the results of the free-for-all voting. While Wisconsin may still hold open primaries if it chooses, it may not require delegates to follow the primary results, the high court said. That would be a violation of party rules that only allow declared Democrats to participate in delegate selection.

The party had argued delegates chosen through an open primary — where Republicans and Independents may vote — would "not fairly reflect the division of preferences among the Democratic identifiers in the electorate."

The court said the Democratic Party's constitutionally protected right of political association under the First Amendment allows it to exclude non-Democrats from its primary.

The ruling may affect the open primary system in Michigan, where George Wallace won the 1972 Democratic primary with the help of thousands of conservatives. Montana and Idaho also have open primaries. Although Idaho political figures declined comment on the decision until they could read it in detail, the Idaho attorney general's office said it should have no effect in the Gem State.

"There shouldn't be any change in Idaho's laws," said Deputy Attorney General Roy Eiguren. "In Idaho the presidential primary election law does not specifically bind a national party delegation to a particular candidate on the result of the primary."

He said Idaho delegates are not bound by law to vote for that particular candidate, "so there wouldn't be any change" under present state law.

Idaho currently has a bill, which has passed the House of Representatives, that would eliminate the presidential primary and return the state's primary to August. It has been blocked in a Senate committee. There also is another bill in committee that would do the same thing, but would change the date of the state primary to September.

Cross-over voting nearly derailed both Jimmy Carter and Gerald Ford's campaigns in close primary elections in 1976.

Cross wins Grammy awards

NEW YORK (UPI) — Christopher Cross, who calls himself "the new kid on the block" in the music business, swept the top honors Wednesday night in the Grammy Awards, the record industry's equivalent of Hollywood's Oscars.

The Texas-born Cross, a protégé of the Dobbie Brothers pop-rock group, was voted by his peers the winner of awards for best record of the year, best album of the year, best song of the year, best new artist of the year and best instrumental arrangement for all work on his debut album featuring the hit single "Sailing."

Kenny Loggins and Bette Midler captured best pop vocalist honors.

Anne Murray received a Grammy as best female country vocalist for "Could I Have This Dance?" and George Jones won as best male country singer for "He Stopped Loving Her Today." Roy Orbison and Emmylou Harris received a Grammy as best country duo.

The beebop-influenced singing group Manhattan Transfer grabbed honors in the jazz fusion category for the group's stylized rendition of jazz standards.

Harris goes on hunger strike

VALHALLA, N.Y. (UPI) — Convicted murderer Jean Harris is staging a jail hunger strike in a desperate bid to commit suicide, her lawyer said Wednesday.

"She told me that the only thing left for her was to die and the only way to do it is to stop eating," said attorney Joel Aurnou.

But the County Corrections Commissioner said he would not call Mrs. Harris' behavior a hunger strike. Commissioner Albert Gray said Mrs. Harris has refused meals since she entered the jail, but taken liquids. She has also eaten candy and bread brought by visitors, he said.

Gray quoted Harris as saying: "I can't see myself living like an animal in a cage for the rest of my life."

W. Germany plans mediation

BONN, West Germany (UPI) — West German mediation to end the violence in El Salvador could begin as early as March, a government spokesman said Wednesday.

The Bonn Cabinet decided to do all it can to bring together "the democratic powers" on both sides of the Salvadoran conflict, government spokesman Kurt Becker said.

Leftists, split into factions ranging from liberal social democrats to hard-line communists, and the U.S.-backed junta would participate in the talks, the West German spokesman said.

Violence feared at nuke sites

BONN, West Germany (UPI) — The Bonn government believes demonstrators soon will march against U.S. nuclear weapons installations in West Germany and fears the protests will be violent, government spokesman Kurt Becker said Wednesday.

Leading officials have expressed extreme concern over growing youth violence and the apparent growth of a "rent-a-mob" crowd ready to confront police at any demonstration.

The officials say the readiness to use violence at any march against U.S. military installations would be doubly dangerous because American soldiers guarding nuclear weapons would shoot attacking protesters.

Becker spoke one week after a controversial article in the magazine Stern published a map of nuclear weapons sites in West Germany.

Calvo Sotelo finally elected

MADRID, Spain (UPI) — Parliament deputies held hostage in an abortive Francoist coup earlier this week elected Leopoldo Calvo Sotelo prime minister Wednesday.

The deputy army chief of staff, a close adviser of King Juan-Carlos, was fired, reportedly for leading the revolt, but remained at liberty pending an investigation into his involvement with the coup.

Sources said the plotters tried to get King Juan Carlos on their side. He said he would rather be shot than join the revolt and stated he would resist any attempt to send him into exile, the sources added.

Inflation rate falls to 9.1%

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The annually adjusted inflation rate fell to 9.1 percent in January, the first time it has dropped below the double-digit level since last summer.

Lower food prices helped offset skyrocketing fuel costs in January, the Labor Department reported Wednesday, producing a 0.7 percent rise in the Consumer Price Index from December's mark.

"Frankly, I don't count on the food area to continue to offset future increases in energy," said Murray Weldenbaum, chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers.

The most surprising part of the Labor Department's measurement was the overall food index, which Weldenbaum said "actually went down 2 percent."

Trial sets Franklin's mood

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — Joseph Paul Franklin, accused of gunning down two black joggers, refused to stay at a Salt Lake motel because he claimed he found "nigger hairs" in the bed, an innkeeper told a federal jury Wednesday.

Viola Bowles said Franklin, using an alias, checked into the Evergreen Motel a few days before Ted Fields, 20, and Dave Martin, 18, were shot to death by a sniper as they jogged out of a city park with two white women.

She said Franklin came back to the desk a few minutes later and complained about the room. She said went to inspect and Franklin asked, "Do you have nigger mads here?"

"There have been niggers in this room. Those are nigger hairs in that bed," the woman said Franklin told her.

Franklin then became "irate" and checked out, she said.

The 30-year-old Mobile, Ala., native, a former member of the Ku Klux Klan and the American Nazi Party, is on trial in federal court for violating the civil rights of the two blacks by murdering them from ambush. Prosecutors said he shot the victims because of his extreme hatred of blacks.

Police in Indiana and Ohio, also want to question Franklin in connection with similar random sniper attacks on blacks.

Desk clerks at three other Salt Lake area motels also identified Franklin as a man who had stayed at their establishments between Aug. 10 and Aug. 15 of last year. The shooting's occurred the night of Aug. 20. All the clerks said Franklin used a different name.

Reed Neuberger said Franklin came to his motel and asked of he ever rented rooms to Negroes. The clerk said he told Franklin he would give him a room that had never been used by blacks and the defendant took it.

Neuberger also said Franklin wrote a false license plate number on the registration form. But the clerk walked into the parking lot later and wrote down the actual plate number.

All the clerks said the man that came to their motels was driving a brown Chevrolet Camaro similar to one owned by Franklin that was impounded by police in Kentucky. Other witnesses said they saw a similar car parked in a field where the police believe sniper fired at the two victims.

Utah Medical Examiner Wallace Graham testified earlier in the day that it was impossible to say exactly how many bullets were fired at the slain men — or the direction from which the shots came.

Graham said Martin was hit five or six times by bullets and bullet fragments. Fields was hit three times.

He also said he could not tell if the shots came from the field or from the Liberty Park, which is in the opposite direction.

Defense Attorney Robert Van Selver told the jury he believed the evidence would show that so many shots were fired that more than one gunman had to be involved. He said police were trying to frame Franklin because of his racist views.

A bomb threat also interrupted the trial briefly. U.S. Marshals cleared the courthouse for more than an hour while they searched the building with dogs trained to find explosives. No bombs were found.

But the threat came shortly before the noon recess, so the trial was only delayed for about 15 minutes.

Watt pledges better policies

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Interior Secretary James Watt said Wednesday government land use policies have been offensive and arrogant, and he pledged a new, better relationship with state and local governments.

"I see myself as one who will continue to be a sagebrush rebel," Watt said at his first news conference since he took office, in reference to the movement to open up public lands for development.

Watt met earlier Wednesday with 12 governors, all members of the Western Governors Conference, and discussed water, land and energy development. "We've been a bad neighbor to states, counties and private users," Watt told reporters.

"This is an offensive, arrogant way to manage public lands."

Watt said he looks forward to "a healthy working relationship" with the governors, but would not give them veto power over projects and decisions affecting their states.

He said no final decision has been made on his proposal for offshore oil and gas leasing tracts off northern California, and added he will listen to the views of California Gov. Edmund Brown Jr.

Republican Gov. Robert List of Nevada, chairman of the Western Governors Conference, said the meeting with Watt had been "the most productive, forthright, candid" discussion he has had with a federal official.

The governors particularly welcomed Watt's invitation to give him their priorities on projects within their respective state boundaries, List said.

"It's nice to be asked how you feel for a change," he said.

When Watt was asked whether he could support block grants to states for water development, he replied: "That would be an attractive alternative."

List said the governors did not disagree with Watt on any issue.

Watt gave vague answers when asked for comment on particular projects such as the Garrison water diversion project in North Dakota and Alaska lands, saying specifics would be outlined in President Reagan's March 10 message to Congress.

El Salvador, summit: Easy does it

President Reagan is urged to use caution in the first two major foreign policy tests of his administration.

One already is in motion, the U.S. decision to continue supporting the government of El Salvador. Although Reagan pledges U.S. involvement, there will not become "another Vietnam" — a team of U.S. Navy advisers has been dispatched to aid the government. That's exactly how "Vietnam" began.

It is understandable to defend foreign policy actions in the name of stopping Communism and checking Soviet influence in Central and South America. That was the intent in Vietnam but it failed miserably; the country will not stand for another such debacle.

Reagan must further define what U.S. foreign policy will be before we become embroiled in individual actions.

That leads us to the second, and most significant, test: the relationship with the Soviet Union. Reagan is considering whether to take up the summit fever issued this week by Soviet Premier Leonid Brezhnev. The president wisely is seeking the advice and counsel of his cabinet and America's allies before sending a signal back to Moscow.

It is inconceivable that the world's two greatest superpowers should continue the current rift in relations: the survival of the globe itself hangs in the balance.

There are many topics Reagan could pursue at such a summit: mutual arms reduction and renegotiating the SALT agreement being of most importance. But on a host of other issues, Reagan would, and should, link any future U.S.-Soviet understandings to Soviet intentions in Poland, Afghanistan, Western Europe, Iran, human rights, etc.

But we also can be sure Brezhnev would attempt to use such a summit to the Soviet's advantage, whether for propaganda purposes or to drive a wedge between America and her allies.

Reagan should carefully pursue reopening a dialogue between Washington and Moscow; any move toward establishing a summit should be taken with our allies fully aware of U.S. positions and possible ramifications.

OF COURSE IT'S A REAL BOMB — BUT IF WE TOLD RON THAT, IT WOULD RUIN HIS CONCENTRATION.

Equalize school levies

BOISE — The primary impetus for passage of the 1 percent property tax limitation was to express a general protest against governmental growth at all levels.

Almost equally important as a causative factor for the initiative was a feeling that property tax is inherently inequitable. Nothing galls a person more than paying a higher tax than his neighbor on like property.

The 1 percent initiative changed all that. In attempting to implement the measure, the legislature demanded that all property be put on the rolls at true 1978 value.

This resulted in a tremendous increase in total valuation within some counties. In order to prevent runaway tax increases, the legislature prohibited any increase in total tax collections within a taxing unit as a result of the 1 percent implementation.

This was a mixed blessing. The 1 percent accomplished one very beneficial purpose. Your neighbor is now assessed at approximately the same basis that you are.

Unfortunately, however, another inequity was created. Some school districts are levying the maximum 17 mills required for full participation in the state school funding formula. Others, due to crash reappraisal programs, levy less than 9 mills before they are controlled by the legislative freeze.

We need to abandon the freeze and allow all districts to levy the full participating amount in order to get their maximum total appropriation.

We all hate property taxes, and I'm no exception. Yet, unless we allow reasonable financing of schools from a local base, we will wipe out all local control. The school boards, if the state assumes almost all funding for public schools will eventually take their marching orders from Boise. This would be a tragedy, considering the fine record the boards have in directing the role of schools to fit local conditions.

An alternative would be to allow local units to levy non-property taxes. The dislocation which would result could be considerable. If one town levied a sales tax and its neighbor didn't, sales of major items would migrate to the non-taxpayer.

The three-legged stool of taxation (property, income, sales) has done a good job for us over the years while maintaining local control of our schools. We need to loosen the straight jacket on the local units so that this system can continue.

Phil P. Batt is Idaho's lieutenant governor.

"The United States may have to go fight El Salvador."

"El Salvador. What's that?"
"It's a country in Central America, and the Soviets and Cubans have been supplying their guerrillas with arms, so they can overthrow the military junta."

"You mean to say, Paw, the United States is seriously thinking of getting us into a war over El Salvador?"
"I ain't El Salvador, Maw. The Reagan Administration has been looking for a place to show the Soviets that we mean business. El Salvador just happened to be in the right place at the right time."

"That's what they said about Viet Nam, Paw."
"This is different, Maw. This is in our hemisphere. We can't let the Comies just ship in arms and equipment to guerrillas who don't like their government."

"What's the guerrillas' beef in El Salvador got to do with the junta?"
"No one is quite sure, Maw. I think it has something to do with them wanting land reform. It seems the powerful families in El Salvador are against it and the military is killing the peasants, and the government is trying to find a solution in between."

"And we're going to go to war to solve that one?"
"We ain't going to go to war yet, but I'm getting out my boots just in case, because Secretary of State Haig is taking a hard line against anyone who accepts arms from the Comies."

"I ain't against stopping the Comies, Paw, but I wish it was something more important than El Salvador."
"Haig's got no choice. They found captured enemy documents on the bodies of the guerrillas."

"I ain't heard anyone use 'Captured Enemy Documents' since Viet Nam. You got any idea how Haig hopes to stop the Comies from giving the guerrillas arms?"
"Wal, I don't want it handled about, but I saw on television that Haig was thinking about blockading Cuba if they kept it up."

"That's big stuff, Paw. We could get us in a war with Russia at the same time."
"You got to call their bluff sooner or later. That's why I'm getting my boots ready. If it really gets big, we ain't got enough boys in the service to handle it. They're going to need us old-timers to pitch in and fight."

"But you were in World War II. Won't they ask the younger boys to go first?"
"Ain't going to get no young kids to go into the service to fight for El Salvador. It's only old timers like myself who understand if you don't stop them in El Salvador, you'll be fighting them on the beaches of Santa Monica."

"I thought Reagan said he wasn't going to get us into no wars."
"This ain't a real war. It's just a test of our credibility. Maw, Nobody's going to ever believe us if we don't have a showdown soon."

"The whole thing smells more and more like Viet Nam, Paw."
"That's not for you to say, Maw. El Salvador has a lot going for it when it comes to seeing who blinks first. It's small, has plenty of jungles and if we win the hearts and minds of the people there, we can scare the hell out of Nicaragua."

"Nicaragua? What have they got to do with this?"
"That's how the guerrillas are getting their arms. Believe me, Maw, if this thing keeps up, we're going to be up to our necks in old mudda."

"When do you think they'll call you, Paw?"
"As soon as all the young kids in the country realize what's going on and take off for Canada."

Stop bike thefts

Editor, Times-News:
Open letter to the parents in Twin Falls and other concerned individuals:

If your child (or friend) etc., brought a bike home and said he found it, you might consider the following:
On Wednesday, Jan. 28, our son had his All-Pro Motorcross — stolen — from O'Leary Junior High. It had a blue frame, silver handle bars and fork, raised black seat, with new blue vinyl pads on it.

Thursday, Feb. 12, our son was injured in an accident coming home from his paper route on our 10-speed. In the process of getting the emergency taken care of, the bike was damaged and was left in a vacant lot on Buckingham and Long Bow. Someone took that bike, also. It was a silver 10-speed, with black tape around it, a new light in the front, Murray Phoenix 26. We have serial numbers and can identify both bikes.

Any information relating to these bikes would be most appreciated. Judging from ads, etc., in the newspapers, stealing bicycles is very common. We now have a paper boy with a badly broken arm and no bike.

Let's help each other to stop this thievery!

Answer to needs

Editor, Times-News:
In the past two weeks, the Times-News has printed two letters about the type and caliber of music alternatives being offered by Magic Valley radio stations.

The Board of Christian Radio of Magic Valley has heard the crying need for a radio station that would play good listening music.

It is our intent to meet the presently unanswered needs of listeners in the Magic Valley. The best, in our opinion, has always been from the Christian's appreciation of music. We, too, appreciate and are planning to broadcast Christian music — include good easy listening music, classical music, and tastefully done contemporary music for our youth.

Our proposed station will also emphasize news and public affairs programming and programs of a positive nature for everyday living and good family living.

Our proposed station will be the first public, non-commercial, non-profit stereo FM radio station in Idaho, featuring educational and Christian programming. We feel this would answer the problem and meet the needs and interests in our communities.

Presently, we, too, are crying out for support. We need volunteers and contributors to help raise the financial commitment to put the station on the air.

It is our intent to begin broadcasting in November or December, providing the financial resources are available and after approval and a review of our license application by the Federal Communications Commission.

The board would also encourage the Times-News to provide its readers with more details of what Christian Radio of Magic Valley is proposing.

We, too, heard the cry for good music; but are Magic Valleyans hearing the "sound" answer.

McClure, Hatfield maneuvering on BPA selection

Times-News Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON — The curious drama which has surrounded the guessing game of who would be selected to run the Bonneville Power Administration is now into its third month. The most recent clue to what's going on surfaced suddenly last Friday as Oregon Sen. Mark Hatfield was finishing his questioning of Energy Secretary James Edwards during an Appropriations Committee hearing.

"Do you have the name of the new Bonneville Power Administrator with you today?" Hatfield shot at the energy secretary. "No, sir," responded Edwards. "But if you can get together with the senator from Idaho (James McClure), I'm sure we can appoint someone."

Keeping up his end of the fast repartee, Hatfield responded, "Sen. McClure and I have agreed on the name of Johnson. Given the success of the firm Johnson and Johnson, it might not be a bad idea."

door. Hatfield makes it appear as though the administration is being slow in making the appointment. The energy secretary denies that, suggesting that Hatfield and his Idaho colleague cannot agree upon a name.

It has been a long waiting period for Hatfield, who said last December that there should be swift appointment of a new BPA administrator because the Northwest Power Bill was waiting to be implemented. Since that time, BPA Administrator Sterling Muro has departed office, leaving the agency in the hands of acting administrator for the first time in its history.

While the BPA administrator is important to senators, Hatfield and McClure are the Northwest — especially at this point in time — it's a job of much less importance to the Reagan Administration, which has generally been slow in appointing persons to many sub-cabinet jobs. The fewer sub-cabinet guys and agency heads the administration appoints before the budget hearings, the fewer obstacles the White House has in getting their budget message across in an undistorted form," suggested an observer.

But Hatfield's question to Edwards last Thursday might well have been a thin mask to disguise the fact that he and McClure had not yet worked out a deal.

As chairman of the Senate Energy and National Resources Committee, the choice of BPA administrator is presumed to be McClure's and therefore logically an Idahoan. But in carrying out this prerogative of first choice, McClure was sidetracked. His initial selection for the job was Ralph Wickberg, a member of Idaho's Public Utility Commission. But Wickberg ran into a barrage of criticism from Northwest environmentalists after his name surfaced in the region's newspapers. At that point, McClure kept up the appearance that Wickberg was still in the running, but Peter Johnson's name was also floated.

"It appears that Wickberg was McClure's guy until McClure got uncomfortable with the criticism of Wickberg," says an insider. "They scrambled around and recruited Peter Johnson, and I don't know whether Johnson really wants the job."

To save Wickberg's face, McClure says that, "These (Wickberg and Johnson) are my guys and I'll let the White House pick." But McClure has to have indicated to the White House that Peter Johnson is his choice.

But McClure says he is waiting for the White House. "If Secretary Edwards is ready to move, if the White House is ready to move, I am," McClure says. "I have not wanted to put a name out there to be shot at by every disappointed clientele."

McClure is trying hard to avoid any appearance of public disagreement with Hatfield. "I don't want to get into a fight with Mark Hatfield over this issue," McClure says. "As soon as I can be sure the White House is ready to move, I will move. But they wouldn't even talk about subordinate personnel until last week."

Reagan orders additional cuts to correct underestimate

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan's goals will require additional budget cuts in the range of $3 billion to $6 billion because the spending figures used to prepare the 1982 budget were underestimated, officials said Wednesday.

Domestic adviser Martin Anderson refused to give specific figures involved in a "re-estimate" just conducted by the Office of Management and Budget, but press secretary

Jim Brady told reporters the general range involved.

Anderson said Reagan had "instructed OMB and the (Cabinet) agencies to take another look at the budget and find additional spending reductions so as to meet the original goals he set forth on (Feb.) 18th."

That goal for 1982 called for $695.5 billion in spending, with a $45 billion deficit. The administration had proposed $41.4 billion in cuts to meet those figures.

The president, who aides said expressed concern but not surprise, received the information at a hastily called meeting of his economic advisers, including budget director David Stockman, Chairman Murray Weidenbaum of the Council of Economic Advisers, and Treasury Secretary Donald Regan.

The session forced cancellation of a scheduled National Security Council meeting.

Anderson told reporters after the meeting that "one of the things OMB has been doing during the last week or 10 days has been to re-estimate the base numbers used by Reagan in producing his economic recovery plan."

He said this re-estimate is part of the budget process and involves going over the figures "essentially from the ground up."

"The result of those re-estimations shows the outlay figures that have been used to date have been underestimated by several billion dollars a year," he said.

Anderson said the new figures are due to more precise and up-to-date estimates and changing circumstances. He said there is no intention to cut into the so-called "safety net" of social programs for the truly needy.

Officials refused to detail what spending had been underestimated, but one cited Medicare as an example.

Anderson said a wide range of budget cuts still are being considered, including possible changes in tobacco and dairy subsidies.

The administration's economic projections, aimed at a balanced budget by 1984, have not changed, Anderson said, and no consideration is being given to levying new taxes to make up the difference.

Reagan also devoted considerable time Wednesday to such foreign concerns as the proposed U.S.-Soviet summit and to studying what Jim Brady called "a wide range of options" to aid embattled El Salvador's military government.

Brady refused to characterize the options under consideration and said the president has made no decision on any type of assistance to El Salvador.

El Salvador and the possibility of imminent U.S. involvement. Baker said Reagan favors sending "50, 100, 150" U.S. military advisers to El Salvador, but not troops. No decisions have been made, however.

On the summit proposal made this week by Soviet President Leonid

Brezhnev, Francois-Poncet said the French and U.S. positions are similar. "Our policy is one of firmness and dialogue," he said.

Brady, however, appeared to foreclose any summit meeting soon, saying Reagan has no plans to travel overseas "in the near future."

Legislative leaders fight over pay plan

BOISE (UPI) — Republican and Democratic leaders in the Idaho House squabbled Wednesday over which party was responsible for the Legislature's sluggish progress in setting state budgets this year.

Minority Leader Melvin Hammond, R-Treasure, ignited the skirmish by accusing Republicans of "going forward and running in a circle" while considering a plan for state employees' pay.

"We're going to be here...until May," Hammond said. "Let's do something and get finished."

Hammond noted that GOP leaders in the House and Senate had pushed five pay resolutions in an effort to come up with an agreement to most members of the GOP majorities in the House and Senate.

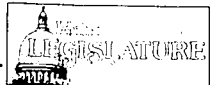

Hammond said the latest resolution, passed by the House Tuesday and sent to the Senate, was as inadequate as the others and predicted it was doomed because it was tied to a pair of benefit-cutting bills Democrat Gov. John Evans has threatened to veto.

He also charged that Democrats were closed out of discussions on the pay issue, which had been handled in the GOP caucus.

Until Wednesday morning, Hammond said, the Joint Finance Appropriations Committee had not set a single state budget because of the delay in coming up with a pay plan.

Majority Leader Walter Little, R-New Plymouth, however, said the Democrats had been "very negative" this session and had not recommended any alternatives.

"It's easy to criticize us if you don't have to be responsible for what happens," Little said.

The Senate Judiciary and Rules Committee Wednesday refused to introduce a bill to repeal the law which allows defendants to enter insanity as a defense in a criminal trial.

While the committee generally agreed with the provisions of the measure, senators said they would prefer to hold the bill and ask its sponsors to introduce it again next year. They said they wanted it held because it surfaced in the committee so late in the session and had little chance of passage before the Legislature adjourns.

The Senate Resources and Environment Committee Wednesday agreed to seek introduction of a measure which would allow the Idaho Fish and Game Commission to order yearly increases in hunting and fishing fees.

Under terms of the bill, the commission could adopt new fee rates, but would have to submit the schedules to the Legislature before they could go into effect.

In other legislative action:

- Rep. Rusty Barlow hit a brick wall in the Idaho House Wednesday when he tried to pull one of his proposals out of the House State Affairs Committee. Representatives voted 56-11 to defeat the Pocateo Republican's motion to put before the full House for a vote his proposed constitutional amendment which would prevent the Legislature from amending or repealing laws or constitutional amendments passed by the people.
- One lawmaker protested, "this legislation stinks," but the Idaho House still voted in favor of a bill to ban the importation into Idaho of skunks, raccoons and foxes.
- Rep. Gordon Hollifield, R-Jerome, said the measure — which would prevent the importation of the three species for sale as pets — was needed to protect Idaho from an influx of rabies.
- The lower chamber voted 37-32 to send the bill to the Senate.
- Rep. Robert Geddes, R-Malad, objected, saying the bill would harm ranchers in southeast Idaho. The bill had been amended to allow these businessmen to secure permits to import foxes, but Geddes argued that would be an unfair burden on them.
- Hollifield said a rabies epidemic "sneaks up on you before you realize it's there."
- The Idaho Property Owners Association has voted to oppose further legislative revisions of the 1 percent property-tax law. IPOA Executive Vice President Al Brewster, Pocateo, said Wednesday.
- Brewster said the IPOA's board of directors decided the 1 percent should be left as is, with special emphasis on retaining the 2 percent cap on yearly increased valuation of property. That clause's constitutionality has been questioned and lawmakers are considering whether to take it off.

Gasohol vote rescheduled

BOISE — A bill that would repeal a tax rebate on gasohol was rescheduled for a vote Friday in the Idaho House of Representatives.

Sponsors of the measure, House Bill 224, said they will wait to try to pass the repealer until another bill is ready.

Legislation to replace the rebate with a different funding source may be introduced in the House Revenue and Taxation Committee this week.

Brady refused to characterize the options under consideration and said the president has made no decision on any type of assistance to El Salvador.

In the morning, the president welcomed French Foreign Minister Jean Francois-Poncet for an "extraordinarily friendly" discussion of world affairs, said Brady.

He also held meetings on nuclear power with Senate Republican leader Howard Baker and Senate Energy Committee Chairman James McClellin.

No regrets over A-bomb drop

By United Press International

NO REGRETS

Paul Tibbets, commander of the U.S. plane that dropped the world's first atomic bomb on Hiroshima, says he has no regrets because he believes it saved both Japanese and American lives in the long run. Tibbets was flown from New York to appear on French television Wednesday, as Pope John Paul II prayed at the Hiroshima war memorial. "I have no regrets," Tibbets said. "I was allowed to bring the war to a close as quickly as possible. We know that invading Japan would have resulted in the deaths of many people, not only Americans but Japanese. History will support this, that the number of those who died from the two bombs made an invasion unnecessary."

BACK TO THE MARINES

Marine Sgt. Billy Gallegos, one of the 52 former American hostages in Iran, has left his home in Pueblo, Colo., to return to active duty at Quantico, Va. Gallegos, 22, has been on leave since the hostages' triumphant return to the United States Jan. 20. He has eight more months on his current active duty status and has said he does not plan to re-enlist, but may go to college, possibly to study law.

DIFFERENT KIND OF BENCH

A bench warrant has been issued in Martinez, Calif., for the arrest of Houston Oilers quarterback Ken Stabler for contempt of court in a child support case. The warrant was issued when Stabler failed to appear before Contra Costa County Family Court commissioner James Libbey Monday to explain why he has failed to pay $8,500 in child support to his former wife, Isabel Clarke Stabler of Phoenix, Ariz. The warrant is valid only in California, but it could make for an awkward schedule during football season.

LONDON (UPI) — Prince Charles and his future bride Lady Diana Spencer will move to Australia where the heir to the British throne will serve as governor general to prepare him for the duties of a king, it was reported Wednesday.

One day after the much-awaited Buckingham Palace announcement of Charles' engagement to the 19-year-old blue-eyed blonde aristocrat, Britain was abuzz with what is billed as the social event of the decade — the summer wedding that may be the most watched wedding in history.

"We're in Love and It's No Secret Anymore," blared the headline in the Daily Express, as London's popular press had a field day. The nation's two television networks interrupted normal programs to show specials on the engagement and London's tourist industry prepared for a summer bonanza.

"I think it's great," said one girl. "She is such a perfect bride for him. And, besides, it gets our minds off everything else, doesn't it?" At the White House, an aide said President and Mrs. Reagan were "delighted" to hear of the wedding. It said the Reagans spent a weekend with Prince Charles at the Palm Springs, Calif. estate of former U.S. Ambassador to Britain Walter Annenberg and found him "a very bright, charming and witty person."

The Guardian newspaper reported that Charles, 32, could become governor-general of Australia after he marries Lady Diana at Westminster Abbey in July. The appointment, presumably, would keep him in Australia until he succeeds his mother, Queen Elizabeth II.

The newspaper said the prince would move to Australia under an "informal arrangement" worked out by Foreign Secretary Lord Carrington and Australian Prime Minister Malcolm Fraser.

It did not say what would happen to the present Governor-General Sir Zelman Cowen, who under the Australian constitution represents the queen in the British Commonwealth nation.

Buckingham Palace and Fraser

both called the report "mere speculation," but evidence supported the idea, which has been raised in the past, as a means to give the prince experience in the kind of responsibility he will shoulder as king.

Immediately after Prince Charles asked her to marry him three weeks ago, Lady Diana left for a vacation in Australia, with her mother, who has family connections there.

The prince, who has expressed a liking for the country on several visits and spent one year at the exclusive Geelong School, leaves March 30 for a four-week visit to Australia.

In a joint interview after the engagement announcement, Charles and Lady Diana also admitted they had yet to find a suitable place to set up home in Britain.

ONE BORN EVERY MINUTE

Mempphis, Tenn., officials know a good thing when they see it, and this one is a chance to make an extra $85,000 off 'n' roll fairs. How? By selling expired city auto stickers depicting Elvis Presley's Graceland Mansion for $5 each. The decals were on their way to be burned, said city Finance Director Martin Mosby, when a man from Canada offered buy 1,000 of the decals for $17.75 each. With 17,000 of the stickers left, officials decided to do their own selling.

Green ribbons are reminder of children

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Americans wore yellow ribbons to remember the hostages in Iran. In that same spirit, some Philadelphians are wearing green ribbons to express sympathy for the parents of missing and slain black children in Atlanta.

"I was just thinking what I could do in a small way in sympathy with the mothers down in Atlanta," said Georgia Dean, a Philadelphia woman with seven grandchildren who began the campaign of support as the chain of Atlanta child murders grew.

Twenty black children have been killed or have disappeared in the same Atlanta neighborhood in the past 19 months, despite an intense investigation by a special police task force, no arrests have been made.

Mrs. Dean said she chose the color "of the grass and trees" because for her it represents life. She got the idea to wear the ribbons from the yellow ribbons displayed as a welcome home message for the American hostages held in Iran, but the hope conveyed by the green decorations is much more grim, she said.

"There is no way we could bring the children back ... all we would hope is that no more children would be killed," she said.

Support for the symbol is gaining momentum. Philadelphia City Council has passed a resolution encouraging the wearing of green ribbons to show concern for "the black children of Atlanta."

The black woman who described herself as "a senior citizen," says she has seen the ribbons tied to bushes and adorning the halls of schools and churches.

Mrs. Dean said she was surprised that people had tried to offer her money to further the green ribbon cause. "I say 'What for? I don't want any money. I just want the kids alive.'"

"The only thing to do is pray. There is nothing else you can do," she said.

7-year-old robs bank of $1,000

NEW YORK (UPI) — A small boy — possibly as young as 7 — robbed a midtown bank of $1,000 Wednesday, wielding a silver automatic pistol, police said.

Police said the youth approached a window, pulled the gun out of his pocket, pointed it at a teller and demanded money.

Chinese women's group deplores pinup explosion

PEKING (UPI) — Female pinups are causing concern in parts of China. The women's federation of one province, Jiangsu near Shanghai, has complained that "pictures of women are now being used indiscriminately and at random in calendars, posters and as trade marks and in one 'grotesque' show."

"These pictures defame the image of Chinese women," the federation said in demanding the withdrawal of all such offending material.

The federation told the appropriate government department that "greater focus should be placed on artistic and ideological beauty" rather than women.

Thermal Developers look at Guyer to heat Ketchum

By STEVE LATHROP
Times-News correspondent

KETCHUM — A private developer is exploring the possibility of developing Guyer Hot Springs to provide heat for the entire town of Ketchum. Dayon Development Co. of Newport Beach, Calif., is considering development of Guyer as a utility, and has opened negotiations with spring owner Dave Brandt.

An Idaho Office of Energy report published last October concluded: "Space heating the town of Ketchum... appears to be economically viable."

However, Bill Eastlake, the report's author, said last week engineering and fact-finding are required to back up assumptions made in his economically oriented report.

Since 1927, Brandt has used Guyer's artesian flow to operate a small utility. That system now heats approximately 40 buildings in Ketchum, and provides hot water to the Bald Mountain Hot Springs swimming pool.

Guyer Hot Springs is located at the foot of Bald Mountain, near the base of Warm Springs ski lift.

The Office of Energy report Guyer's natural flow at 996 gallons per minute at 159 degrees Fahrenheit.

The report proposes drilling five wells to a depth of 500 feet near the spring. These would produce a peak flow of 3,500 gallons per minute, at a temperature of 190 degrees Fahrenheit. When distributed in a system of foam-insulated mains, that output would be sufficient to meet Ketchum's peak heating needs, the report says.

"The projected cost and savings seem so dramatic as almost to demand a space heating system for Ketchum," the report says. "The projected geothermal cost is only 12 percent of the cost of natural gas, and even less compared with the other fuel alternatives."

A table in the report predicts a town-wide geothermal dollar savings of more than $2 million in 1985, with a population of 12,100; and more than $8 million by the year 2000, with 19,370 people. The 1980 population is listed at 10,391.

Those savings figures are compared to what it would cost to heat using natural gas.

The report projects only estimated construction costs for a geothermal system. It allows nothing for the cost of acquiring Guyer Hot Springs.

Citing the estimated minimum $1.6 million development cost of a city-wide heating system, Brandt indicated Tuesday he does not want to pursue expansion himself.

However, Brandt says he has been approached by Dayon representative Russ Pinto, and that they have been negotiating "in a minor sort of way."

Brandt declined to estimate an asking price for Guyer Hot Springs. Dayon already owns land adjacent to Brandt's property.

Pinto, who formerly served as Ketchum's city planner, has also approached Ketchum officials to discuss a city-wide utility. City Administrator Jim Jaquet and Mayor Gerald Seiffert said they had talked to Pinto about such a system. Both said the talks were informal, and Jaquet indicated limited city interest in Pinto's proposal.

"That's always been something we'd like to do," Jaquet said. "The big question is how do you finance it?" Jaquet said the city presently puts a higher priority on acquiring the Ketchum Spring Water Co., a privately owned domestic water system, which serves the central part of Ketchum.

Pinto and Dayon representatives in Newport Beach did not return phone calls.

Smorgasbord: Buhl School Board plans fundraiser for purchase of new band uniforms

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

BUHL — Buhl School Board members have a taste treat in store for the community March 14.

With the help of a number of volunteer cooks and kitchen helpers, the board will be staging its first Community International Smorgasbord in an effort to meet a commitment the board made toward purchase of high school band uniforms.

School Board Chairman Lila Bell said the whole idea is "stolen" from the community of Homedale. Last year, she said, that community raised nearly $11,000, but she said the Buhl school board doesn't expect quite that much success. Buhl trustees are hoping to raise several thousand dollars.

The smorgasbord will include home cooked foods from many nationalities.

"There will be everything from tacos and chorizos to rohtiky and fortune cookies," Bell said.

Booths will be set up for each group of native dishes, including Mexican, European, Hawaiian, American and Chinese cuisines. The smorgasbord will be open from 4 to 8 p.m. Tickets are $4 for "all you can eat."

Bell said Ruth Perkins, who adopted a Finland exchange student and then visited the family in Finland, is a specialist in rice pie and berry cakes. A work party to prepare some European dishes was held Wednesday night. They were frozen and will be baked later.

"Buhl's leading Italian, Dave Monroe, has agreed to fix something Italian for us, and we have cooperation from the whole community," Bell said.

There will be family rates and reduced prices for children.

Bell is chairman of the event by popular demand. She attended a meeting to discuss replacement of the 20-year-old band uniforms recently and committed her fellow board members.

"I got a little carried away and promised we would, as individuals, come up with a third of the cost of new uniforms," she confessed.

"I hope the community will support me and buy a lot of tickets," she added.

Bell estimated the board can make $2 per meal at the $4 ticket price because of the many donated food items and the free labor.

A contest is under way by school students to sell tickets. The board will treat the winning class to a skating party and pizza, she said.

School officials estimate the uniforms will cost about $13,000 with band members raising a third and the school administrators covering the other third.

Bell said if this year's project is successful, she is sure band members will want to do it again for some worthy future cause.

Blaine sets zone application moratorium

HAILEY — Blaine County imposed a 120-day moratorium on applications for light industrial zoning Monday.

The board of county commissioners acted after a light industrial rezoned passed at the Jan. 12 meeting, apparently triggered 20 similar applications. "We realized from the number of them that it was a situation which had to be dealt with," said commissioner Barry Luboviski.

Luboviski said the commissioners felt existing towns within the area lack enough light industrial zoning. He said the commissioners would use the 120-day moratorium to try to work out criteria for a floating zone light industrial district in Blaine County.

Although the County does not have any floating zones at present, it is now considering establishing the mapless, criteria-based zoning to manage mobile homes and geothermal development in addition to light industrial areas.

Crystal Springs sale evaluation delayed

TWIN FALLS — A federal evaluation of the proposed Crystal Springs trout hatchery sale won't be presented to a Congressional committee until late this morning.

according to committee spokesman Bob Loftis.

A re-examination of the proposed sale, requested by the House committee and conducted by the U.S. General Accounting Office, was completed Wednesday. GAO Senior Evaluator Phil Olsen planned to orally present his findings to the House committee the same day they were completed.

The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers is seeking the hatchery, owned by Buhl trout farmer Ken Ellis, for steelhead rearing in the Lower Snake River Fish Mitigation Program. The proposed sale price is reportedly about $3.2 million, a figure critics of the sale claim is too high.

Highway loop decision expected

Officials meet next week to discuss Twin Falls route's fate

By MARTY TRILLHAASE
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Local and state officials will meet next week to determine whether to continue efforts to build a highway belt route around Twin Falls.

Twin Falls city and county officials will meet with board members of the Twin Falls Highway District and representatives of the Idaho Department of Transportation March 6. The meeting will be in the highway district office at 2 p.m.

Lloyd Shewmaker, president of the highway district board, said the meeting is intended to determine whether officials will proceed with designating a location for the route or discard the concept entirely.

Opposition to the plan from persons who could be involved in right of way disputes in the event the route is built, plus a shortage of local and state highway funds, have stalled the plan, he said.

"We're going to have to do something or we're just going to have to admit that we're not going to do anything — just let things go, I suppose," Shewmaker said.

Two hearings concerning the location of the route, designed to give through traffic an opportunity to skirt Twin Falls on a north-south route and thereby avoid heavy traffic on Blue Lakes Boulevard North or the Eastland Drive, were held in 1980.

The first hearing, conducted by state officials, concerned the western half of the proposed route. That portion would run along U.S. 93-30, swing east of Twin Falls and come back at the corner of Blue Lakes Boulevard North and Pole Line Road, where a special interchange is planned. From there, traffic would cross the Snake River on the Perrine Bridge.

The latest hearing, held in May 1980, concerned the eastern portion of the route. Three alternative route locations, at the time of the hearing, were Eastland Drive, a route one-half mile east of Eastland or on 2000 East Road, a mile east of Eastland.

Construction of the project could be approved by state highway engineers, Shewmaker said. As a result, land for right of way along the proposed route must be protected through zoning or purchased at the local level, he said.

Obtaining right of way easements is also crucial in demonstrating local support for the project, he said.

Moreover, a shortage of state and local highway dollars has put some road maintenance projects on hold, not to mention construction of a new route.

Rural hospital study set

By STEPHANIE SCHOROW
Times-News writer

BOISE — To combat what appears to be a mounting crisis in rural health care, state health planners are launching a study of rural hospitals.

The study will attempt to define "what kind of role rural hospitals should be playing," said Mary Giannini, director of planning and implementation for the Idaho Health Systems Agency, which is funding the study.

Rural hospitals are having difficulty attracting qualified professionals, including both doctors and nurses, Giannini said. Low utilization of services means rural hospitals often suffer from poor cash flow.

Many rural hospitals are unable to buy or update equipment to keep up with advancement in medical technology. Often they must use obsolete and aging equipment, Giannini said.

The IHSA will gather information on problems of rural hospitals through questionnaires sent to hospitals, regional health advisory councils and community leaders. Information will be compiled and presented at community forums in which hospital administrators, health planners and citizens can brainstorm solutions.

Hospitals that are 30 miles or 25 minutes from a "regional center" are considered "rural." Idaho's regional centers are: Twin Falls, Boise, Idaho Falls, Lewiston, Coeur d'Alene and Nampa/Caldwell.

Local rural hospitals include St. Benedict's Hospital, Jerome; Cassia Memorial Hospital, Burley; Minidoka Memorial Hospital, Rupert; Gooding County Memorial Hospital, Gooding; Blaine County Hospital, Hailey; and Moritz Community Hospital, Sun Valley.

A rural hospital study was first proposed by the Health Professional Task Force, a 10-person committee set up by the IHSA. Chaired by Ivan Stone, a Jerome architect, its members include Bob Campbell, administrator at St. Benedict's.

A study design is being drawn up by Tim Bird of Boise, a temporary full-time IHSA employee. Bird, who has worked as a planner and consultant with the state Department of Agriculture, the CETA program and the Office on Aging, said a questionnaire will be sent out early in March.

Community forums will be held in April, and the IHSA hopes a representative from the American Hospital Association or from a national health organization will facilitate discussions, Giannini said.

Pilots sneak past Kimberly, 52-45 Players vote to strike

Valley defeats Wendell to stay alive in A-3 play

WENDELL — Glenns Ferry has gained the preferred route to the state tournament.

The Pilots pulled away from Kimberly in the fourth quarter for a 52-45 victory in the semifinals of the Fourth District A-3 Boys Basketball Tournament Wednesday night.

Glenns Ferry will visit Idaho Falls next week while top-ranked Kimberly must defeat Valley tonight at 8:15 p.m. to gain the other berth allowed the district.

Valley held off charging Wendell 64-55 in Wednesday's first game to eliminate the hometown Trojans. The Vikings are within a game of state after finishing seventh in the Canyon Conference.

In Wednesday's junior varsity action No. 1 Declo topped Gooding 58-51 and No. 2 Kimberly halted Valley 47-44. The winners meet Friday at 6:15 p.m. for the junior varsity title. Filer and Glenns Ferry will meet today at 6:15 p.m. for the consolation crown.

Last season the Pilots took second in the district to Filer and had to defeat Homedale in a special playoff game to make the state tourney.

This year the district tourney is not over and the Pilots are state-bound. "We're glad to be going," Brown said. "Last year we got their hard way. This is better."

Glenns Ferry used balanced scoring and a plug-the-middle defense to hand the Bulldogs the seven-point deficit.

The Pilots led by as much as 13 in the final two minutes, but the game was much closer.

Glenns Ferry held its own on the boards with the Bulldogs and prevented Rich Thompson's squad from getting much going inside.

"We controlled the tempo and did what we had to do," Brown said. "We went flat there in the third period at both ends of the court but we were able to hold on."

Kimberly, thanks to a four-point play by Dave Wright and Rich Crothers, took an 8-4 lead midway in the first quarter. But the balanced attack of Bill Steht, Don Shrum and Tim Black put the Pilots into a 12-11 lead at the first break.

Deacons surprise Virginia

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (UPI) — Frank Johnson hit a slam-dunk and two free throws in the final seconds of overtime Wednesday night to help No. 11 Wake Forest hand third-ranked Virginia its second straight loss, 76-66, in an Atlantic Coast Conference game.

Johnson, who led Wake Forest with 22 points, sank two free throws with 1:37 left in overtime to give the Deacons a 65-63 lead. The Cavaliers, who suffered their first loss in 23 games Sunday to Notre Dame, tied it at 65-65 with 1:08 to play on Jeff Lamp's baseline jumper.

But Jim Johnstone and Mike Helms sank a pair of back-to-back foul shots in the final seconds to give Wake Forest a four-point lead. Lamp scored 26 points to lead Virginia, 23-2 overall and 12-1 in the ACC. Ralph Sampson, who hit only one basket after the first half, scored 14 points before fouling out with 1:37 left in overtime. Lee Raker added 10 for the Cavaliers. Alvis Rogers scored 13 to follow Johnson's 22 for Wake Forest, 21-4 overall and 9-4 in the conference.

Camas tips Bliss, 40-37 Dietrich only unbeaten left in Northside tourney

By LARRY HOVEY

GOODING — It was Dietrich in a breeze and Camas County in a surprise in the Fourth District A-4 Basketball Tournament Wednesday night.

Dietrich, double clutching and streaking away in the second quarter under the guidance of Tracy Perron, knocked off Gooding State 57-33 to become the only undefeated team in the tournament.

Earlier, Camas County, apparently out of it with 3:27 left, whirled from behind on a man-to-man defense to send defending champion Bliss to the sideline on the short end of a 49-37 count.

Gooding State and Camas County, the third and fifth seeds when the playoffs opened last week, collide at 7:30 tonight at the Gooding gymnasium. The winner goes against Dietrich at 7:30 p.m. Friday and would have to beat the top-seeded team twice to take the title and berth in next week's regionals.

Camas Co.-40, Bliss-37
Camas County became its most dangerous just seconds after appearing on the brink of doom.

For three quarters the Musers and Bears staged a basket-matching contest without proving much. Neither team was shooting well and both were hampered by turnovers.

Going into the final period, however, the upstart Musers held a three-point margin.

Then suddenly Bliss cut loose. Dale Hobby pulled the Bears to within one and Alvin Pittman pumped through three straight buckets. Hobby stole the ball and drove for a crippler and with 3:27 remaining, the Bears seemed to have vindicated their second seed with a 35-29 lead.

It was a false hope. During a timeout, Musher Coach Ed Blankenship shifted his troops into a man defense that completely shut off the Bears.

Dave Simon hit a field goal and Ed Atlap collected two free throws. With 2:29 remaining, Kent Wolfe chopped the deficit to 35-34 and for the next 45 seconds there was no scoring.

Then Atlap sent the Musers ahead 36-35 and nearly a minute later put Bliss in deep trouble with a pair of free throws. Bliss turned the ball over and Wolfe made them pay for it with two more charities. With 17 seconds showing, Camas County had come from death's door to an insurmountable 40-35 lead.

Blankenship acknowledged he count feel the door closing on his Musers after Pittman's surge.

Senior Dan Coates, holding his head in his hands and making no attempt to hide the tears of disappointment, summed it up.

"That's it," he called loudly, angrily, resigned to the fact his career had ended and there'd be no second trip to state.

"What can you say?" asked Coach Jerry Couch. "Camas County played a helluva game. When the pressure was there they stayed steady and we didn't."

"In a game like this you pay for your mistakes — and we made plenty of mistakes tonight."

Couch said nothing that happened surprised the Bears. They just couldn't stop the Musher comeback.

"All week long we talked about when they came with the man — and we knew they would — we'd go into our passing game. But when they came out of the zone, we just didn't react well to it. We should have taken it out, balanced out the floor and organized, and then moved up into our offense. But we didn't go to our spots and we never got it organized at all."

Couch discounted a theory that Bliss had started celebrating a victory about three minutes too early, letting down after its sudden break to a seven-point lead.

"I don't think so," he said. "The first thing in the huddle (during the critical timeout), I screamed at them 'no one's won this game yet.' It's something you do all the time, keep the players aware of what could happen. I knew the way Camas County was playing we couldn't get lax."

TAMPA, Fla. (UPI) — The executive board of the Major League Baseball Players Association voted Wednesday to strike on May 29 unless the free agent compulsion issue is settled.

Marvin Miller, executive director of the union, met with the executive board for more than three hours and then announced the vote was unanimous.

"The players are in a defensive position, taking the only action that the contract allows them to prevent the owners from taking back the rights of the players and, in our opinion, taking the first step toward ending free agency altogether," Miller said.

Miller said the way is still open for negotiations on the issue but said no talks have been scheduled with management.

Miller said the players will not be polled until just prior to the strike deadline. He said the action taken Wednesday was necessary because of a contract provision that the players make their decision known prior to March 1.

Miller also said the contract prevents the owners from halting spring training or preventing the start of the regular season.

Miller noted comments made recently by George Steinbrenner, owner of the New York Yankees and one of the most successful at signing free agents, and said he was surprised at Steinbrenner's position.

"I don't think he understands the issues. The owners are really aiming this at him, not just Steinbrenner but those who have operated the most successfully," Miller said.

Miller said other baseball officials referred to Steinbrenner as "that sleep word who has caused this whole mess."

Miller said the owners' position is in effect saying that they cannot regulate themselves and are attempting to use the players as a means of regulating themselves.

He said the players have no demands on the negotiating table and had no right to strike until the owners recently announced their position on compensation.

"It was only when the owners made the decision on Feb. 19 to unilaterally put into effect the demand which in our opinion would gut the free agency system that we were able to act," he said. "We are still ready, willing and able to negotiate a settlement. I haven't given up."

Miller said the Players Association had made two proposals on compensation, both of which had been rejected "out of hand" by the owners.

He said one was a recommendation that the owners create a pool of money to be used as compensation.

on his way out of the dressing room.

"Nice game, Alvin," Couch called, then turned back to say "It was Alvin's best game of the year. I'm really proud of him. He came a long way this winter and this is the first year he's played much."

Dietrich 57, Gooding St. 33

Dietrich destroyed Gooding State's hope for a second reversal of form when senior forward Tracy Perron turned clinician and staged a second-quarter clinic for the Redskins and the watching fans.

Looking at 6-7 sophomore Ken Anderson and 6-3 Sonny Cabbage, Dietrich knew there would be trouble underneath. So he used a double-team offense to null Gooding State into a false sense of security.

The first quarter was as low keyed as a funeral dirge. Dietrich fiddled with the ball for 2:15, well out from while the Redskins waited in their zone defense. At the end of the quarter, a couple of Russ Galt's free goals and another by Cabbage had Gooding State on top 8-6. Sam Wilding and Sam Weber pushed the Redskins advantage to 14-8 three minutes into the second period.

Talent thick in LPGA field

INDUSTRY, Calif. (UPI) — Beth Daniel, Sally Little, Nancy Lopez-Melton, Amy Alcott and JoAnne Carner — winners of 18 tournaments and more than $1 million in 1980 — head the field in a $150,000 LPGA tournament starting today at the demanding Industry Hills golf course complex.

The 72-hole event, with $22,500 going to the winner, will be played on Industry Hills Eisenhower course, a 5,978-yard, par-73 layout 30 miles from Los Angeles.

The tournament is sponsored by Olympia beer. Of last year's top five money winners, only Donna Caponi Young will miss the Industry Hills event. The winners of all four 1981 events were scheduled to play, including Little, Carner, Alcott and Sandra Palmer.

Carlton's award misplaced

MIAMI (UPI) — Steve Stone had a surprise waiting for him when he reported to camp for the first day of the Baltimore Orioles' spring training Wednesday.

The right-hander, whose 25-7 record led baseball last year, found a plaque signifying the Cy Young Award waiting for him. There was only one problem — it wasn't his.

Instead, he had the award intended for Steve Carlton, the Philadelphia Phillies' left-hander who was the National League Cy Young winner.

"I know I'm not very well known, but you'd think they'd be able to tell us apart because Carlton has a lot more strikeouts than I do," a smiling Stone said.

"Don't worry about it, Steve," said Mike Flanagan, one of the Orioles' three Cy Young winners. "You can say you're the first pitcher in history to win the award in each league — in the same year."

A total of 25 players, including 18 pitchers, took part in manager Earl Weaver's first workout. The only regular player other than pitchers and catchers on hand was second baseman Rich Dauer, who came to camp early on his own.

UCLA center reinstated

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Highly touted freshman Kenny Fields, kicked off the UCLA basketball team last week by Coach Larry Brown, was reinstated Wednesday by Brown, who said he overreacted.

Fields, a 6-foot-9 center, was suspended by Brown Feb. 16 for reasons never made clear by the coach or the school. Fields had been a starter during the first half of the season then was benched. Fields' parents began chastising Brown for his decision and sources said Fields had become a "problem" for Brown.

But Wednesday he changed his mind. "I have principles that cannot be violated," Brown said. "I feel I was justified in suspending Kenny. The thing that I'm most upset about is that because I think so much of this team and the importance of a team, I over-reacted. Because of my own hurt, I gave Kenny no alternatives."

Matuszak arrested

HAYWARD, Calif. (UPI) — Defensive lineman John Matuszak of the Oakland Raiders has been arrested on charges of drunken driving and possession of a concealed .44-caliber Magnum revolver and a bayonet.

The pistol, police said, was loaded with six live rounds.

Matuszak was arrested shortly before 10 p.m. Monday and released several hours later after his car was spotted weaving down Hesperian Boulevard.

He was cited, but not jailed, police said Tuesday, a customary procedure for misdemeanor charges.

Four officers were called to back up the arresting officer when Matuszak, 6-7 and 260 pounds, refused to submit to a sobriety test and allegedly became abusive.

Police said they found an open bottle of rum in the car and accidentally discovered the bayonet and handgun concealed under a floor mat.

Matuszak was the center of attention in New Orleans during Super Bowl week when he broke curfew and was fined $1,000 for visiting a French Quarter bar until 3 a.m.

Dalling gets Ricks' AD job

REXBURG, Idaho (UPI) — Glenn W. Dalling, head basketball coach at Ricks College for the past 13 years, was named Wednesday as the school's athletic director, effective July 1.

Dalling replaces Dr. Charles M. Grant, who has been called as a Latter Day Saints Church mission president.

Ricks now is seeking a new head basketball coach for the 1981-82 season.

PSU eliminates basketball

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — Portland State University announced Wednesday it is discontinuing men's basketball and de-emphasizing its football program in a curtailment of some athletic programs because of financial problems.

Only baseball is being retained in major college status in the men's program, along with volleyball and basketball in women's sports.

PSU Athletic Director Roy Love outlined the school's athletic future at an afternoon news conference. He said beginning with the 1981-82 school year, the university will sponsor 12 intercollegiate sports. They are:

Football, wrestling, baseball, golf, cross country and distance running in track in the men's program, along with women's volleyball, basketball, softball, tennis, cross country and distance running in track.

IOC threatens five Olympic members

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The president of the International Olympic Committee warned Wednesday that the Olympic committees of five nations may be expelled from the Olympic movement for being under the excessive control of their governments.

Committee president Juan Samaranch identified the nations as El Salvador, Costa Rica, Panama, the Philippines and Madagascar of the threat. He said a deadline to comply with the IOC regulations or be expelled will be set when the IOC executive board meets April 9 in Lausanne, Switzerland.

"We realize that national Olympic committees must have good relations with their governments," Samaranch said. "But we must also insist that they retain their independence and not allow governments to dictate to them."

"If the Olympic committees of these five nations do not alter their regulations it is with great sorrow that I announce we must suspend them."

"The basic problem is that national Olympic committees are made up of voting members representing national Olympic federations (from each individual sport)."

He said that in the case of these five nations "the national representatives are not elected but appointed by the government," saying that meant "the national Olympic committees are not duly constituted and are under the influence of their governments."

Samaranch, at a news conference that ended a four-day meeting of the IOC executive committee, again expressed the IOC's unhappiness that the debt-ridden committee which organized the Winter Games in Lake Placid, N.Y., last year was too broke to make good on about $100,000 in refunds owed to about 30 national Olympic committees.

Owens testifies against Kush

PHOENIX, Ariz. (UPI) — Former head football Coach Frank Kush bullied both his players and assistant coaches at Arizona State University into lying to cover up his striking a team punter, one aide testified Wednesday.

Bob Owens, who spent his third full day on the stand in Kevin Rutledge's $2.2 million suit against Kush, also testified George Hamm, ASU vice president for student affairs, told him he saw Kush strike Rutledge following a poor punt in the 1978 ASU-Washington game in Seattle.

Owens said Hamm, who is a co-defendant in Rutledge's suit, did not indicate if he mentioned the punching incident to anyone else.

Rutledge, who now punts for the University of Nevada-Las Vegas, is suing Kush, former assistant coach Bill Maskill, ASU President John Schwada and Hamm along with the state Board of Regents.

Rutledge claims he was punched by Kush during the 1978 game, then harassed into quitting the team and forfeiting his athletic scholarship.

Owens said he never saw whether or not Kush struck Rutledge, but retained an attorney when Kush began insisting that Owens had been near him on the sideline when the alleged incident occurred.

Elk have the right-of-way when it comes to trails in Yellowstone. Steam and mild temperatures this winter have made food plentiful and skiing spotty.

Yellowstone: Winter sights endangered

By RON ZELLAR
Times-News writer

OLD FAITHFUL, Wyo. — It's been a bad year for coyotes and rangers at Yellowstone National Park. Numbers of both species are threatened — the coyotes because a mild winter sustained animals that otherwise might have succumbed to old age or starvation. The rangers because cost-cutting is likely to trigger cut-backs next season in park programs.

The dilemma for Yellowstone is that, while winter and off-season visits are becoming more popular, inflation and belt-tightening have made it harder to maintain the 3,400-square-mile park.

Two campgrounds were closed last summer at a savings of $70,000. But park Superintendent John Townsley estimates Yellowstone is losing $400,000 of its $3 million budget a year to increased costs, an amount roughly equal to the cost of the park's interpretive program.

Fuel costs alone increased last year by $200,000. A decision will be made in the two to three months whether to lock the park's gates next winter. Visitors during the peak summer months outnumber those in winter by more than 30 to 1.

Letters opposing any closure have poured into the National Park Service headquarters in Washington, D.C. But Townsley replies the park must stand ready to do its part to help trim the national budget.

What attracts winter visitors to Yellowstone are its scenic thermal contrasts and the abundance of wildlife that crowds near pools and geyser basins in search of food.

Bison, which in summer are limited to scattered males rejected by the herd, number in the hundreds and include yearling calves with wobbly feet. Trumpeter dot the Firehole River like tufts of snow, their long necks reaching for bottom vegetation.

Elk are everywhere. Along the roads, in the geyser

Two types of snow vehicles congregate for a look at bison grazing along Firehole River basins, just off ski trails and standing motionless but scarcely hidden in small clumps of trees.

The spectacle attracts two types of visitors.

It is not uncommon to see 500 snowmobiles in the Old Faithful parking lot on a Saturday or Sunday. A blue haze visible for miles hangs over West Yellowstone in mid-morning. Elk and bison along the Madison and Firehole rivers seem untroubled by the constant whine of engines.

Ten passenger snow-coaches ferry skiers and snowshoers to the Old Faithful snow lodge and trailheads along the way. The round-trip fare from West Yellowstone to Old Faithful is $36.50 and requires three hours on the way, including stops to view animals and thermal attractions.

Persons interested in this mode of travel can enhance the experience by asking around and requesting a veteran driver.

Wayne Whitmore, who has been making the West Yellowstone circuit for 10 years, tells his riders fascinating tidbits about the habits of bison, as well as which geysers had their plumbings altered by the last major earthquake in 1959. One of his regular stops is a sand bank that, even in February, is warm to the seat and might be capable of cooking a roast several feet down.

Snowmobile and snowcoach accidents are surprisingly few, Whitmore said. Washboarding can throw a careless rider from his machine, although roads are groomed several times a week.

Park officials have recorded 10 accidents so far this season, and only one of those involving broken bones, according to Joan Anzelmo, the park's public information director.

On Feb. 18 a snowmobiler rounded a curve near Biscuit Basin and plowed broadside into a bison calf. The driver complained of slight injuries, but the calf had to be destroyed.

Skiers actually pose a greater threat to animals in a normal winter, Anzelmo said. With unlimited access to the park's terrain, skiers and snowshoers can force big game animals out of enclaves in their weakened condition, denying them vital food and shelter.

Persons seeking reservations at the Old Faithful snow lodge would do well to plan ahead and avoid Presidents Day weekend in February. This year on Feb. 14-16, the park recorded 2,700 snowmobilers and 400 snowcoach passengers. The lodge had been booked for months.

Warm, sunny days interspersed with lighter-than-usual snowfall have made skiing conditions in the park spotty this winter. Untracked powder could still be found in the shadows last Saturday but 60-degree temperatures Monday compressed the layer, exposing bare spots.

Park residents other than coyotes and ravens have thrived on the mild winter. Their numbers will multiply. But nature's delicate balance goes on, and a harsh winter next year likely will mean a higher number of winter deaths.

Human visitors may or may not be around to watch.

Outdoor recreation hearings set

MAGIC VALLEY — Several forums will be held in the area next month, allowing citizens to provide input on outdoor recreation needs now and in the future.

The Idaho Department of Parks and Recreation is conducting hearings across the state to see what the residents want. This is not limited to state parks, but includes all outdoor recreation activities such as backpacking, golf, tennis and white water trips.

The forums will start with a short slide presentation describing the programs which presently provide many of the outdoor recreation activities available to Idahoans. Smaller groups will then be formed to discuss specific issues. From those small discussion groups, issues and needs will be determined in order to plan for outdoor recreation activities that residents desire.

All interested citizens are invited and encouraged to participate in the forums.

The locations and dates for hearings in the Magic Valley area include:

—Halley, March 9, Wood River High School Library.

—Gooding, March 9, Gooding High School multi-purpose room.

—Burley, March 9, Burley Junior High.

—Rupert, March 10, East Minico Junior High.

—Shoshone, March 10, American Legion Hall.

—Jerome, March 11, Jerome High School.

—Twin Falls, March 12, YMCA Sunrise Room.

—Fairfield—March 13, Camas County High School gymnasium.

All meetings will start at 7:30 p.m.

Hagerman fishing derby to start Sunday

HAGERMAN — The Hagerman Valley annual fishing derby will be held starting Sunday.

The Hagerman Valley Chamber of Commerce is sponsoring the derby to coincide with the opening of the fishing season at Frank Oster Lakes and Riley Creek, located on the Hagerman Wildlife Management Area just south of Hagerman.

The fishing derby will culminate on March 7 with a pancake and trout breakfast followed by the awarding of several prizes for the largest fish taken during the derby by registered anglers.

Anglers of all ages are invited to participate and may register with any of the participating Hagerman Valley merchants between 8 a.m. Sunday and noon March 7.

The breakfast will be served at the new Hagerman Valley Senior Citizens Center between 8 a.m. and 1 p.m. March 7. The cost will be $2 for adults and $1.50 for children 12 years and younger.

Prizes to be awarded may be seen at the Polish-Palace Restaurant in Hagerman during the week of the derby.

Trout and bass caught in the Frank Oster Lakes and Riley Creek will be eligible for the contest as will trout caught in the Snake River. March 1 is the opening date for the lakes and creek in the Hagerman WMA while the Snake River is open year.

Spokesman Bill Wilson said some 12 to 14 merchants are participating in the fishing derby, which was held for the first time last year.

Consider hunting rock chucks

By STU MURRELL
Special to the Times-News

The rock chuck or yellow-bellied marmot is a common sight in the Magic Valley and since it can cause considerable damage to cropland, is classified as an unprotected species.

This classification allows it to be hunted year round which amounts to about a six-month period because of its hibernation habits. It usually comes out of its den sometime in late February and goes underground in July or August. This above ground period coincides with the normal appearance of green vegetation and the drying up of the desert areas where it evolved.

There is considerable confusion about the hunting laws for unprotected species such as the rock chuck. A person must have a hunting license to carry an uncased firearm in the field for any reason, including hunting unprotected species. The one exception to this would be a landowner hunting on his own land for animals causing damage. A person cannot purchase a hunting license until they are 12 years of age.

Trespass laws also cause some misunderstanding. A person must ask permission to hunt upon the cultivated or enclosed lands of a landowner. If there is any doubt about a hunting spot, ask permission first. A landowner and his friends can hunt on his property even though it may be posted to "no hunting."

When you obtain permission, find out what areas are safe to shoot on that particular farm. Most farmers are more than willing to grant permission since beans, alfalfa and pasture grasses are all favorite foods of this voracious eater. I have observed several acres of beans lost to a single colony of 20 to 40 rock chucks.

They weigh from four to 12 pounds and have an average litter of six to eight young, so can multiply rapidly. They usually breed in March with the young born in the latter part of April or early May. In about four weeks, their growth is sufficient for them to venture from the den.

There appears to be more rock chucks now than when I first moved here in 1971. This has occurred with relatively heavy hunting pressure.

A person must be extremely careful shooting around the settled areas in our irrigated farmlands. Light, fast varmint bullets in the .22 caliber such as the .223 or .225 are excellent since they will normally disintegrate on impact and not ricochet. The .22 long rifle is very ricochet prone and must be used with a good backstop for safety. Avoid shooting over the tops of rock piles on skylined chucks since you have no way of determining where the bullet may go if you miss.

A pair of binoculars is a real asset in spotting a partially hidden animal since they blend in beautifully with their surroundings.

Don't overlook the eating possibilities of these animals, particularly of the young ones in late summer. They have a dark, rich meat that is pleasant tasting if properly prepared. I dress and quarter them like a chicken, roll in flour, brown well and then slow cook in a deep pot with a wine and mushroom soup covering. Just don't tell anybody what they are eating and they'll be pleasantly surprised.

Stu Murrell is the regional conservation educator for the Jerome regional office of the Idaho Fish and Game Department.

Third light for brake cuts collision chances

Your chances of getting hit in a rear-end collision evidently could be cut in half just by installing a third brake light under the middle of your car's back window. Studies show cars so equipped last year were involved in 54 percent fewer rear-enders than cars without such high lights. No big expense, that. You could do it for a few dollars.

Some translations of Exodus XXII, 18 read: "Thou shalt not suffer a witch to live." This was the authority numerous European executioners cited when they put witches to death in bygone centuries. Certain scholars now, however, claim it was a mistake. The passage should have been translated: "Thou shalt not give a witch justice."

NO RAINBOW

Q. You said you can only see a rainbow with your back to the sun. That's wrong—I saw one high in the sky, right under the sun.

A. That was a solar halo, evidently, not a rainbow. A solar halo makes a complete ring around the sun when light is reflected through ice-crystal clouds high up, and sometimes you can't see all of it. Such is the explanation of the skywatchers.

Q. What sort of wood is in bowling alley lanes?

Helms recalls boom days at Milner

By LORAYNE O. SMITH
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — There was a serious housing shortage at Milner in 1908.

That was the year Gene Helms arrived with his brother, Isaac, at the site of the newly completed dam which diverted the water for the new Twin Falls Tract. As he remembers it, the settlement which had sprung up as the result of the construction project was a "pretty wild town."

The longtime Twin Falls resident and former state brand inspector estimates some 1,500 people were living there, overflowing the several existing rooming houses.

"There were men living in tents and shacks all over the town," Helms said, "because there were not enough houses to hold them."

He recalls in addition to a bank and several general stores there were three or four saloons and a drug store.

Now 87 and in poor health, Helms was not up to fully describing all the different things he has done in his life which range from serving as a Twin Falls county sheriff's special deputy and performing at rodeos with his trained mule to punching cows as a young man with a stint of farming.

But the highlight of his working years was the stretch served as a state brand inspector. That work was much more interesting than farming, he indicated.

His home across from the South Park ball diamond reflects his interest in Western artifacts and a fireplace built of unusual rocks from throughout the United States and Canada attests to his handwork. Most of the rocks, many of which are phosphorus and glow under black light, were brought to him by friends who knew of his hobby.

Helms was born in eastern Colorado March 16, 1893. His first job after arriving in Milner as a youth of 15 was helping build the North Side canal system which had to be lined with cement because the lava rock was too porous to hold the water. He also was involved in construction of Wilson Lake near Hazelton, built as part of the irrigation project.

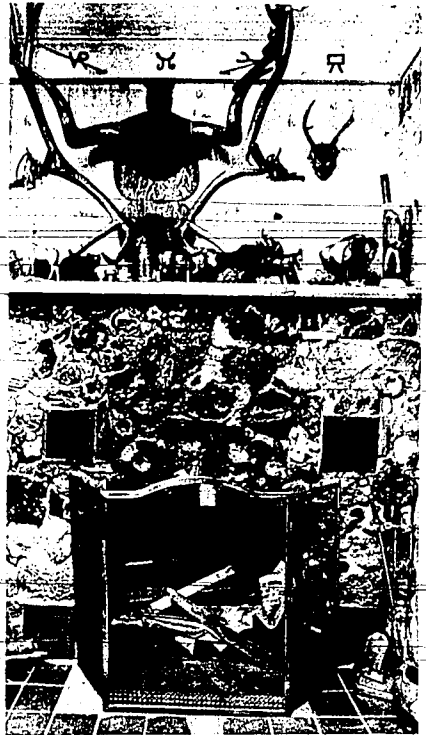

Then he drifted, working for a man who hauled freight to other construction sites such as the Oakley dam which was completed about 1912. It was an all day trip to haul grain and oats or lumber to Oakley from Milner.

After that he punched cows, spending a summer alone on the desert in Jerome County near where the Hunt Relocation Center was built in World War II to hold Japanese-American citizens.

He lived in a tent by a waterhole in isolation hard to imagine today.

When the United States entered World War I Helms went overseas, returning unharmed, but was sick with influenza in France.

After the war Helms worked for ranchers throughout the area, including a time as camp tender for the Clyde Bacon Sheep outfit and ranches at Three Creek before turning to farming.

Helms built this fireplace with rocks from many states

Later he farmed in the Greenwood community southeast of Hazelton for several years and then farmed north of Kimberly at the old Red Cap corner. He left there in 1945, moving to his present home in South Park.

A son, Collins Helms of Twin Falls, said his father worked for the railroad a short time before becoming a state brand inspector in the late 40s.

During the 18 years he served in that post, Helms spent his days checking brands, tracking down rustlers and also, on occasion, became involved in road blocks for hunters out of season. He also was called to patrol two or three times a week and was involved in some of the biggest manhunts in local history, he said.

All brand inspectors are law enforcement officers, but in addition Helms served as a special Twin Falls county deputy.

Florida has largest percentage of elders

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (UPI) — California and New York numerically have more residents 65 and over, but Florida leads the nation in the percentage of its population aged 65 and over, a new study revealed.

Florida had 1,510,000 residents 65 and older in 1979 — 17.6 percent of the state's total population, states the 1980-81 edition of "Older People in Florida '79 Statistical Abstract."

California's 2,243,000 elderly represent 10.1 percent of that state's residential population, while New York's 2,095,000 are 11.8 percent of its total population, the study says.

Leading all Florida counties in the percentage of its population aged 60 or older was Charlotte County on the Gulf Coast, with 32.2 percent, according to April 1, 1979, estimates.

The 272-page volume, published by the University of Florida's Bureau of Economic and Business Research and the Center for Gerontological Studies, also reported:

- The median income for families with heads of household aged 65 or older in Florida was $9,571.
- As of January 1980, 1,099,271 Floridians 65 and older had active driver licenses and, of this number, 329,587 were 75 and older.
- Medicare hospital insurance reimbursements for persons 65 and older in Florida increased from $532 million in 1975 to $555.6 million in 1979.

Plight of elderly couple worsens daily

SALEM, Ore. (UPI) — Clarence Fairley, 72, was twice falsely accused of attacking an elderly neighbor and twice jailed.

He finally straightened out his legal problems, but now his heating oil has been shut off and he and his ailing wife are being evicted from the trailer park where they live.

The nightmare started for the Fairleys in the midst of Thanksgiving dinner when police arrived to arrest Fairley on charges of assault, burglary and attempted murder based on a statement by a neighbor, Minnie Davis, 87. She claimed that Fairley had entered her home with a paper bag over his head, struck her three times on the head with a hammer and cut her with a knife.

Mrs. Davis, suffering from injuries, was treated at a hospital and released. Fairley was jailed in a tiny isolation cell and finally released from jail without bail Dec. 4.

On Jan. 8, he was back again, this time after Mrs. Davis accused him of assaulting her with a rock and locking her in a shed for two hours. Again Mrs. Davis was found injured.

Fairley was released Jan. 12 after polygraph tests showed he was telling the truth when he denied assaulting Mrs. Davis. His court-appointed attorney, Paul Saucy, said there was no other evidence to tie Fairley to Mrs. Davis' injuries and all charges against him were dismissed. Police have no suspects in the attacks.

But Fairley's problems were not over. He returned home to find his wife, Pearl, ailing, and short on food and medicine and shivering with only an electric space heater to heat the couple's aging mobile home.

He also found an eviction notice from Rose Haven Mobile Park.

Mrs. James Lacey, who manages Rose Haven with her husband, said today she has been under "a lot of pressure" to evict the Fairleys after his arrest.

"We were caught in the middle," she said, adding they were now reconsidering the eviction notice. "We are going to meet with them Friday night."

Saucy, who has persuaded Rose Haven to extend the eviction date to March 1, said the only place the Fairleys could find to move — if they could pay the cost of moving their home — was in Monmouth 20 miles away.

Fairley, a retired interior decorator with monthly income of $368 from Social Security and a veteran's pension, is also trying to obtain heating oil for the mobile home's furnace. But he said he was told the oil company would not deliver more to him until he paid for a previous barrel he purchased.

Saucy said Fairley owed for a barrel of oil which ran out while he was in jail.

"Everybody tells me Mr. Fairley is poor as a church mouse but honest," Saucy said. "They say if Mr. Fairley says he'll pay, he'll pay. It may be only two or three dollars a week but he'll pay."

Saucy said he has received calls from people who had offered to buy out their home but other oil companies refused to deliver less than 100 gallons and the Fairley heating unit can hold only 89 gallons.

Grown children often resemble their parents

By CY BRICKFIELD
Special to the Times-News

Who was it who first observed that as they grow older some parents and their adult children tend to become so alike that they eventually can barely stand each other?

In all honesty, I haven't the vaguest idea of who this perceptive person was, but I'm convinced he or she must have had Bernard Sloan and his mother, Dora, — or at least someone very much like them — in mind as the object of the implication inherent in the seemingly casual remark.

Sloan is a flittyish New York advertising man who recently wrote a revealing book about his family's experiences during the final nine months of his mother's life when, after being diagnosed as being terminally ill with a form of bone cancer, she came to live with the Sloans in their Westchester County home.

While "The Best Friend You'll Ever Have" is hardly inspirational, it is definitely instructional about the potential problems, perils and pitfalls facing anyone who attempts to shelter and care for an ailing parent with whom he or she has not had a particularly good relationship in previous years.

I think I know something about what is involved in caring for an ailing parent, having cared for my mother at home during her final years. As I recall, there were some hardships, but they were more often than not offset by the fact that my relationship with her and my late father had been a good one and that the times in which we lived were different.

It was shortly after World War 2. I had recently returned home from service with the Air Corps in Europe and had neither a wife nor children to support. Nursing homes were nowhere near as prevalent then as they are now at home care was more the rule than the exception.

Then, too, I had my brothers' assistance in this endeavor and the home in which my mother was being cared for was the family home in which we had all grown up.

The situation with which Sloan and his family had to contend was essentially the antithesis of what my family faced. To begin with, he is an only child who married out of his family's faith, an act of defiant temerity his mother never really forgave.

Even after 20 years, she also never truly accepted his wife, Ethel, and their two sons, although she fully expected them to respect — if not revere — her.

For 30 years she had been living in Arizona, having moved there originally on Sloan's father's health. When the elder Sloan died after eight years in Phoenix, the widow remarried, only to be widowed again 12 years later.

Although it is never explicitly spelled out in the book, I get the feeling that since his father's death (and perhaps even before that) Sloan and his mother had had only infrequent minimal contact with each other. Then one night, she phoned: "Bernie — I'm sick."

He flew to Arizona and brought his ailing mother home with him. Under most circumstances this would be a difficult experience for all concerned, but the difficulties were compounded and exacerbated by the unresolved conflicts between mother and son — and by the personality of Dora Sloan Raskin. As portrayed by her son, she was a witch on wheels, the overblown personification of every Jewish mother joke sprung to life with a vicious vitriolic vengeance.

At her most peaceful, she was a "kvetch" — a Yiddish term for one who has perfected to its most ultimate extreme, the art of complaining. It is an accomplishment to be reckoned with, but Sloan's mother went still further, twisting each digging remark even deeper to achieve an effect unlike that of jagged salt crystals being ground into the open wound that was her son's psyche.

"Yet in 'The Newsweek' essay out of which this book grew, Sloan confesses that "we were positive she would relinquish her prejudices in exchange for love and care. No such luck. Instead of making an attempt to adjust to our household, my mother tried to manipulate the four of us to center our lives around her."

Despite the subject matter, "The Best Friend You'll Ever Have" is not as grim a book as one might expect since Sloan sprinkles his account with wry, sometimes bitter wit which provokes frequent chuckles and occasional belly laughs.

Still, the story is not a pleasant one, but perhaps that is all the more reason why it should be read by adult children whose parents may someday need to move in with them and by parents whose children may someday need to open their homes to them.

Read it now, and maybe you'll be able to avoid some of Sloan's mistakes and misperceptions. Perhaps you'll learn as Sloan never did, to question the validity of your own motivations in such a situation. At the very least, you'll have a better idea of what you're getting into, and will thus be able to make your decision knowingly.

In the end, unfortunately, Sloan himself also emerges as a first class "kvetch" complaining constantly about the advertising agency for which he works, the detached attitudes of his friends, fellow commuters who try during the course of the train ride to obtain free advice about advertising, apartment house janitors, airline personnel and a plethora of people and practices too lengthy to list.

One should not be surprised, however, by the trail: after all, like mother like son!

Americans support arts

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Pollster Lou Harris testified Wednesday more and more Americans are participating in the arts and they are willing to pay higher taxes to ensure federal support of the field.

Harris told the House postsecondary education subcommittee his survey of a cross section of the American people last July shows the support is evenly distributed across the country.

Because of inflation, a quarter of the work force is now moonlighting, Harris said. As a result, the number of work hours for the average adult has risen from 40.6 to 46.9 a week and the time for leisure pursuits has fallen from 26 hours to 19.

High level health training program offered at college

TWIN FALLS — High level health training is being offered through the Sun Valley Health Institute sponsored by the College of Southern Idaho.

Instructor Jan Mittelder explains high level health training deals with individual health, recommends and educates the individual on specific lifestyle changes and then motivates one to maintain those changes over a lifetime.

She said, "This type of health training is a safe and fun approach to maintaining excellent health through positive lifestyle adjustments."

The training session begins March 14 at the CSI Gymnasium. Registration deadline is March 5.

She said participants will find improvement in the way they look and perform life's activities. The program consists of three main areas including exercise, nutrition and stress management.

Each individual is tested at the beginning of the institute and given a profile sheet showing the present health condition. It covers 10 basic areas. These include resting heart rate, blood pressure, physical fitness determination, percentage of body fat calibration, blood lipids test, coronary risk analysis, stress anxiety scale, abdominal strength determination, trunk flexion determination and an evaluation of nutritional habits.

Legal challenge pending

CLARKSVILLE, Ind. (UPI) — The United Methodist Church's Board of Church and Society has joined a legal challenge to current Selective Service registration now pending before the Supreme Court.

The Board has voted to join in the filing of a friend-of-the-court brief being prepared by several other religious and women's groups which challenges draft registration as discriminatory against men.

The amicus brief will also challenge the inclusion in the registration process of persons "whose religious conscience forbids their participation in all stages of armed conflict" as a violation of the "free exercise" clause of the First Amendment.

Romantic look popular

DALLAS (UPI) — Traditional, glamorous and romantic describe the furniture and room settings shown at the Dallas Market Center's annual winter market. Floral print sofas and loveseats set the theme. The most popular were rose or dusty coral prints on off-white, deep blue or forest green. Shapes were soft but not bulky or overstuffed. High-backed wing chairs were part of the picture.

Occasional tables, secretaries and dining furniture were in traditional designs and woods.

Glamorous designs included modernist, all-white settings similar to Hollywood sets for Rogers and Astaire and Jean Harlow movies.

The romantic look included ruffled draperies, piles of pillows, print-on-print fabrics and a brass fourposter bed with net and lace hanging.

IDAHO DEPARTMENT STORE - DOWNTOWN TWIN FALLS

Alice Anderson and John Van Buren, both of Twin Falls, have roles in 'Kismet.'

Dilettantes preparing 'Kismet'

TWIN FALLS — Every week night for the past months the Morningside school is filled with a group of adults ranging in age from 15 to 50.

They represent every part of Magic Valley. By day they are teachers, lawyers, salesmen, farmers or students. But between 7 and 10 p.m. they are the Magic Valley Dilettantes, working on the group's 1981 musical, "Kismet."

The musical, which has an Arabian Nights type setting, will be presented at the CSI Fine Arts Auditorium March 6, 7, 8 and 12, 13 and 14.

Some are veteran performers like Roger Vincent of Filer who plays the leading role, Jim Latham of Twin Falls who plays the heavy, and Jim LaGrone of Castelford who has participated in 21 consecutive Dilettante annual productions.

Some, like Jack Van Buren, are newcomers, while other leading ladies in "Kismet" such as Alice Anderson and Dianne Stauffer, have already been "bitten" by the theater bug.

According to Mary Cook, Dilettante

publicity chairman, one does not have to be able to sing, dance or act to participate in the group.

"To be a working member you need only have an interest in helping the show. If you are handy with a hammer or a paint brush, call Tom Kolough who is building the set and needs all the help he can get," she said.

Help also is needed in makeup, sewing costumes or helping locate props, she said.

Since the Dilettantes were organized more than 20 years ago, proceeds from their yearly productions have been used to provide scholarships for young musicians and actors as well as for other civic projects.

As in past years, there will be special "Opening night" tickets which include dinner at the Turf Club prior to the show. Cost will be $35 per couple, with dance music provided by the Sun Valley Trio. Reservations for the opening night dinner tickets should be made by calling 734-6131. Regular show tickets can be purchased at the Music Center and Sullivans in Twin Falls, Sav-Mor Drug in Buhl, the Merc in Castelford, Ryan's Music in Jerome and Grosche Drug in Shoshone.

Rupert girl wins honors in voice

RUPERT — Deanna Trevino, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Trevino of Rupert, has won first place in voice in the Northwest Division, Music Teachers' National Association.

The division includes the states of Alaska, Washington, Oregon, Idaho, Montana and Wyoming.

She had previously placed first at the Idaho Music Teachers Association, Competition in Boise.

Trevino now qualifies to compete nationally when high school music students from throughout the United States meet in Phoenix, Ariz., on April 27 for the national competition.

She won a Burley Music Club scholarship last year and also placed first when the Idaho Federation of Music Clubs met in Boise in 1979 she performed with the All-Northwest Choir in Billings, Mont., and was soloist with the All-State Choir in 1980.

She has studied voice with Picalo Wood of Burley and is presently studying with Martha Mead of Twin Falls.

She plans to enroll in the music school at the University of Idaho next fall, majoring in voice and piano.

MR. AND MRS. ALFRED HOUSE
Collins-House

TWIN FALLS — Irene Collins of Arco and Alfred House of Twin Falls exchanged wedding vows Feb. 20. A dinner party honoring the couple was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Clair Daniels Saturday evening, hosted by the bride's daughters, Shirley Daniels and Janice Keller. The couple will host an open house for friends and relatives Sunday from 2 to 6 p.m. at the home of Alfred House in Twin Falls.

MR. AND MRS. JOSEPH A. MAXFIELD
Wright-Maxfield

BUHL — Camille Wright and Joseph A. Maxfield were united in marriage Feb. 7. The Rev. Malachy McNeil performed the candlelight ceremony at the Immaculate Conception Church in Buhl.

Mr. and Mrs. Gail Wright are the parents of the bride and Mrs. Robert Maxfield is the mother of the bridegroom. All are of Buhl.

The bride wore a gown of fitted Chantilly lace with the bodice adorned with seed pearls over chiffon; a Queen Anne collar and fitted lace sleeves with pearls at the wrists. The chiffon skirt had lace and seed pearl appliques, with a Schiffl lace rulle at the bottom of the gown forming the chapel length train. Her bouquet was of roses and button poms.

A double pearl rosary, a gift from her sister, Marcia, was placed within the bouquet. She wore a gold necklace with ruby and pearl settings, belonging to her great-grandmother.

The bride and bridegroom gave the readings during the nuptial mass, and the couple recited in unison the couple's prayer at the closing of the mass.

Marcia Wright was maid of honor and Mrs. Ray Stevens, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid. Kathi Jaynes was taper lighter. John Maxfield was best man and Brian Crawford was usher.

Mrs. Robert Thornborrow was organist, and a trio, composed of Mrs. Frank Karel, Mrs. Wayne Iverson and Barbara Karel, sang.

A reception followed the ceremony. Shari Van Sickle was in charge of the guest book and Terri Koch and Mary Overturf displayed the gifts. Mrs. Don Wright and Mrs. Charles Hollingsworth served the cake. Mrs. Clifford Maxfield poured coffee and Mrs. Clifford Montgomery served punch.

The couple will make their home northeast of Buhl.

Helms

Asked about rustling, Helms said "More of it goes on than people know about."

During these years Helms bought a mule which became such a pet that its owner subsequently trained him and together they got into the amateur rodeo circuit in Magic Valley with a clown act.

"Dad would ride his horse to the sales ground and the mule would follow along like a horse," Collins Helms said.

He said his father would take out the back seat of his car to transport his pet animal around.

The elder Helms said he and his mule had performed at many towns, including Blackfoot, Carey, Hailey, Rupert, Blackfoot and Wells, Nev., and for two years at the Twin Falls County Fair at Filer.

He also appeared at horse shows in the area. He kept the mule until about three years ago when it, too, became the victim of old age and arthritis, Collins Helms said.

Long an avid big game hunter which interest he continued until recent years, Helms' front porch is filled with trophies as well as many oldtime articles. His collection contains wagon wheels, a horse collar, a spittoon from the court-house and old fashioned brass scales which he said were the first scales in Bellevue.

Among his most cherished possessions are an 1830 Gunn's Domestic Medicine book which brought Helms a prize at the Filer fair, and an 1876 painting of a mule.

After he retired from the brand inspector's post, Helms continued working for many years. His job included working a night shift loading and unloading trucks at the Twin Falls Livestock Commission Co. and serving as a guard for First Security Bank.

He only quit working about three years ago.

Helms' first two wives both died and in 1960 he married Greta Will, a widow the family had known for many years. He has four children, Collins Helms of Twin Falls, Willis Helms of Soap Lake, Wash., and Elnora Jennings of Hansen and Lenora Rountree of Twin Falls; 15 grandchildren and numerous great-grandchildren.

Forgetting people's names not hereditary, it's universal

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
© Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I can't remember names! When introducing friends, I panic and draw a total blank, and just want to crawl into a hole.

Could this be inherited? For years, whenever my closest friend visited me, my father would come to my room and say, "THAT GIRL is here." (He couldn't remember her name.)

Don't suggest the technique of association. My neighbor, Mrs. Glassey, whose name I associated with "glass-eye," I once called "Mrs. False Teeth."

I've even tried making up little rhymes to help me remember, like: "Maggie, Maggie, her pants 'are baggy." Or, "Mary, Mary, her lip is hairy."

Help! It's embarrassing!

— GRACE IN FLORIDA
DEAR GRACE: Try this: When you are introduced to someone, if you didn't hear the name, ASK immediately. Then address the new acquaintance by name immediately after you've met. And keep using his name every time you speak to him. When you depart, use it again.

When you see him again, if you have forgotten the name, don't agonize over it, simply say, "I'm sorry, what is your name?"

This falling is not hereditary, it's universal. And the reason one "forgets" a name is usually because he didn't hear it in the first place.

DEAR ABBY: I've been happily married to a man who was married before. That marriage lasted for 14 years. The problem concerns his mother, who insists on calling me by his first wife's name. Afterward, she is embarrassed and apologizes. I can understand how this could happen early in our marriage, but Abby, we've been married for three years, and she's still doing it!

This gives me the feeling that she doesn't really recognize me as her son's wife, or perhaps she wishes he was still married to his first wife. I was told she was very close to wife No. 1, but hasn't seen her since the divorce.

I'm sure other second wives have had this problem, too. What's a good solution?

— NO. 2 AND HANGING IN THERE

DEAR NO. 2: Accept it as a 14-year habit that is hard to break, and try not to read anything negative or unkind into it.

DEAR ABBY: I am practically a hermit at the age of 32 because of underarm wetness (perspiration). I have tried every anti-perspirant advertised, but nothing has helped. I'm not complaining about odor; it's the wetness that drives me crazy. Please, Dear Abby, can you give me some hope? I am so embarrassed. I'll do anything! — BRITISH COLUMBIAN

DEAR B. C.N.: See an endocrinologist about your overactive sweat glands. And inquire about the new surgical procedure that prevents excessive underarm sweating. Don't give up. Not all can be helped, but many can.

(Do you have questions about sex, love, drugs and the pain of growing up? Get Abby's new booklet: "What Every Teen-Ager Ought to Know.")

GENERIC VEGETABLES

— From Swensen's —

At Swensen's there's no-name on the lettuce and no-brand on the celery and no-mark on the tomatoes. We just call lettuce, lettuce, and tomatoes, tomatoes, and we can't even impress you with their scientific latin (you know, like tomatucus, brightredicus) names, but we're sure we can impress you with the low generic-like prices on our wide variety of fruits and vegetables that are the highest quality available. (Which is more than you can say for some generic products around town.) Anyway, if you're tired of paying jewelry store markups for fresh fruits and vegies, and you can tell a good head of lettuce when you see one, then you need to visit Swensen's this weekend for delightful inexpensive salad material . . . and many other good things as well.
