

Fighting worsens in Lebanon brings in missiles; Israel intensifies air strikes

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI)—Anti-aircraft missiles in Lebanon Thursday followed in support of Christian militia. The State Department described the fighting as "intense, dangerous and widespread." In Washington, the State Intelligence reports indicated a move of unspecified numbers into the strategic Bekaa Valley after Israeli jet fighters Syrian helicopters near the Tuesday.

In south Lebanon, fighting continued as Palestinian gunners shelled Israeli border settlements for a fifth day, slightly wounding eight people, Israeli officials said. The Palestinians said the shelling was in retaliation for Israeli air strikes against their positions over the past few days.

The state-run Beirut radio said the Israelis returned the fire by pounding a string of south Lebanon villages around the market town of Nabatiyeh and the coastal town of Tyre. Israel did not comment on the report.

The Beirut radio report said two persons were wounded and at least 10 houses destroyed by the Israeli shell-fire.

In Damascus, Syria's state-run radio reported Libya has placed all its "resources" at Syria's disposal to counter "Israeli aggression against Syrian troops in Lebanon." The radio did not elaborate, but observers doubted Syria would invite firebrand Libya into the Lebanese crisis.

However, calm prevailed in Beirut and central Lebanon following peace talks earlier in the week between Syrian officials and the chiefs of Lebanon's private but formidably armed Christian militias.

Reporters took advantage of the lull to check out a flurry of contradictory reports concerning the SAM-6 missiles, radar-guided surface-to-air weapons that have a range of 22 miles.

Near Ryak, northeast of Beirut and some five miles from the Syrian border, they saw three clusters of SAM-6 missiles, painted black-and-white and mounted on tracked vehicles in a freshly plowed field.

Alongside the missiles was another tracked vehicle fitted with radar antennae. Further south, the reporters spotted two other missile trucks each fitted with three missiles.

Syrian troops stationed around the missiles made no attempt to hide them or divert traffic from nearby roads.

State Department spokesman Fischer would not comment on the number of missiles involved but said the Syrians began moving them into central Lebanon over "the last couple of days" to protect their positions against the possibility of more Israeli air strikes.

The first indication that Syria and Israel were gearing up for a confrontation in Lebanon came when an Israeli military spokesman announced that SAM-6 missiles had been sighted in the Bekaa Valley.

But later Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin said Israel had no proof of the missiles' presence although it was investigating the reports.

Speaking to reporters in Tel Aviv, Begin also played down the risk of war with Syria, saying neither country wanted the Lebanese crisis to come to that.

Maximum 5-year term given Terris; lawyers to appeal

By MARTY TRILLHAASE
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Kevin Terris was sentenced to a maximum five-year prison sentence Thursday.

However, 5th District Court Judge Theron Ward's decision to send the former Filiz man to the Idaho penitentiary does not mean the end of the Terris case.

Terris' lawyers, James J. May and Jon Shinduring, moved immediately to appeal the sentence to the Idaho Supreme Court. Terris, now living in the Los Angeles area, was subsequently released pending appeal on $10,000 bond.

Terris pleaded guilty to a reduced felony charge of defacing, altering or obliterating vehicle identification numbers — which carries a maximum five-year sentence — following a five-day jury trial in December 1980.

He was originally charged with possession of "stolen property," a charge carrying a maximum 15-year prison sentence.

Ward's decision fell somewhere between the requests made by each side. May described the defendant as being the victim of a biased prosecution and urged Ward to place Terris on probation. The defense also produced character witnesses who said Terris was trustworthy and capable of completing a probation.

But Special Prosecutor Jeff Stoker called Terris a professional criminal who should be locked up for the full five years under a fixed sentence, without hope of parole.

Under an indeterminate sentence, the judge merely sets the maximum sentence to be served, and Terris probably would be paroled after serving a third of the sentence.

Testifying on his own behalf, a suspended Terris repeatedly broke down, cried and could not talk; once, a 15-minute recess was required.

The attempt to convict him took more than two years. Terris said it devastated his personal life, was a direct cause of his recent divorce, contributed to his loss of reputation and loss of financial assets totaling $80,000.

"There are no second chances for me. I have to put more thought into what I do," he said.

Stoker urged Ward to consider Terris' record as a reflection of the defendant's character. He added the murder charge was the only case dismissed due to a lack of evidence. Other cases charging Terris with possession of stolen property and obliterating vehicle identification numbers were dismissed on technicalities, Stoker said.

Terris' guilty plea last December came a day after he took the stand in his own defense. During the trial, Stoker charged a bill of sale the defendant said he had signed on March 2, 1978, upon purchasing a salvaged motor home, had not been printed until April 1 of that year.

Stoker said Thursday that Terris perjury on the stand also demonstrated the defendant was a calculating professional criminal. Stoker said he was breaking with his policy in recommending a fixed sentence.

By using such rhetoric, May argued Stoker showed an extreme bias. May said Stoker violated an agreement under which Terris had agreed to plead guilty by mentioning the alleged perjury.

He said Stoker was attempting to prosecute Terris on cases which had been dismissed because the former prosecutor could not prove the allegations.

U.S. jets being used in attacks

WASHINGTON (UPI) — U.S. intelligence sources confirmed Thursday Israel is using American-made planes and Syria is bringing Soviet-made missiles into the new fighting in Lebanon.

U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim met in emergency session for 3 1/2 hours Thursday with President Reagan, Vice President George Bush and Secretary of State Alexander Haig. The National Security Council held an early morning conference at the White House.

Waldheim said joint efforts of the United Nations and the United States are focusing on trying to establish an immediate cease-fire.

"Later in the day, it was reported there was a lull in the fighting in Lebanon."

The State Department said Thursday Israel had used "U.S.-supplied aircraft" in Lebanon. Most arms agreements forbid the use of American-supplied weapons outside the borders of a country except for regional or national self-defense.

American intelligence has confirmed the presence in Lebanon of SAM-6 surface-to-air missiles, according to State Department spokesman Dean Fischer. U.S. intelligence was "not able to confirm Israeli information that Soviet technicians were helping the Syrians."

The Soviet-built radar-guided missiles are designed especially for hitting low-flying aircraft, but also can strike as high as 60,000 feet. In the 1979 war, such missiles had a devastating impact on the Israeli Air Force.

Waldheim said in order to take over from the Syrian-manned Arab-Deterrent Force now in Lebanon, the United Nations would need a new mandate from the Security Council and that there are no plans to call the conflict into session.

The Soviet Union, a member of the Security Council, has said it will veto any move to establish a new U.N. peacekeeping force in Lebanon. U.N. units currently are limited to several areas in the southern part of the country.

The National Security Council was called into session at the White House Thursday morning, reportedly to discuss the "critical dangers of the fighting in Lebanon."

Syria was brought into Lebanon in 1976 to protect Christian forces from attacks by Palestinian groups, and were able to bring about a truce.

A "tacit understanding" reached that year between Syria and Israel barred, among other things, Syrian missiles from Lebanon and Syrian attacks on Christian forces, sources said.

Israeli diplomatic sources view the introduction of missiles into Lebanon as a "clear violation" of the agreement.

Couple found guilty of attempting to sell child

ROISE (UPI) — Air Force Tech Sgt. John Raean and his wife were found guilty by a U.S. District Court jury Thursday night of attempting to sell their infant daughter to another couple for $2,000.

The jury deliberated more than six hours before announcing the decision against Raean, stationed at Mountain Home Air Force Base, and his wife, Janice. The verdict was reached shortly after 6 p.m.

After hearing emotional closing arguments, Judge Fred Taylor amended the indictments against the Raean's, instructing jurors to determine whether the couple was guilty of attempted sale of the child, rather than actual sale.

"It does not appear in this case that a sale of a child occurred," Taylor said.

He said he did not want the jury to consider an actual sale because the Raean's never obtained cash in the alleged transaction. The penalty for attempted sale is a $5,000 fine and a seven-year prison term, while actual sale carries a 14-year maximum sentence and the fine.

Taylor also instructed the jury to consider the defense argument that the Raean's were entrapped by law enforcement officials. But he cautioned jurors to remember the couple was not entrapped if they had intended to sell the child and officials merely provided them with an opportunity for such a crime.

The Raean's are accused of attempting to sell their daughter, Shannon, on Nov. 9, 1980, to a couple, Sgt. John and Carol Holleman, working undercover for the Mountain Home Air Force Base Office of Special Investigations (OSI). They have pleaded not guilty to the charges.

William Raean took the witness stand Wednesday, he admitted accepting a $2,000 check from the Hollemans, but said he believed the baby was being adopted, not sold. He also denied that the words "ank" or "thy" were used in connection with the transaction.

Defense attorney David Wisbey, in his closing arguments, urged jurors to acquit the Raean's, saying they were led into a trap by 10 OSI agents and citizens working as informants for the investigative officers. He launched an attack against one informant, Mary Ann McMullen, who first informed the OSI officials about the Raean's alleged attempts to sell Shannon.

"I submit to you Mrs. McMullen should be on trial here," Wisbey said. "She preyed on Mrs. Raean's trust. She should be on trial for solicitation of a crime."

But Assistant U.S. Attorney Deborah Ball said Mrs. McMullen merely did her job as a citizen in reporting her suspicions and then helping OSI agents find out if the Raean's were serious about selling the child.

However she reported it, there is nothing wrong with a citizen giving a complaint — to law enforcement officials, Ms. Ball said.

While Wisbey said the Raean's had no "pre disposition" to commit a crime as late as Oct. 26, Ms. Ball denied that contention. She said the Raean's turned down an opportunity to give up the baby for a legal, free adoption.

Soft-coal miners in 36th day of walkout

Hard-coal miners reject pact, vote to strike

By United Press International

In northeast Pennsylvania, the anthracite miners, members of 42 UMW locals in nine counties, voted 1,400 to 540 in an unofficial tally to reject the tentative agreement with the hard-coal industry, union officials said.

Church said chief industry negotiator B.R. Brown was stalling a return to contract talks in the soft-coal dispute.

"For whatever reason he's spouting now, I can't seem to get Brown back to the bargaining table," Church said. "But in a way Brown is not in control of his actions. He may be president of Consolidation Coal Co., but really he is just a servant of Continental Oil Co.," (the parent firm.)

The bearded union leader said the rally might "serve as the symbolic two-by-four" needed to push the industry back to the table.

Brown did not immediately respond.

William Savitsky, UMW District 25 representative who led the union negotiating team in the month-long contract talks with the hard-coal industry, said the miners' vote surprised him "in a way."

"But I knew we would possibly have some problems. We felt we had the best package we could have gained at this time."

Savitsky said he would talk to miners to find out which aspects of the pact displeased them so "we can have some definite issues to be placed on the table" when negotiations with mine operators resume. He said the miners' operators appeared to be unable to work with provisions for wages and vacation pay.

No date was set for resumption of talks, he said.

But Assistant U.S. Attorney Deborah Ball said Mrs. McMullen merely did her job as a citizen in reporting her suspicions and then helping OSI agents find out if the Raean's were serious about selling the child.

However she reported it, there is nothing wrong with a citizen giving a complaint — to law enforcement officials, Ms. Ball said.

While Wisbey said the Raean's had no "pre disposition" to commit a crime as late as Oct. 26, Ms. Ball denied that contention. She said the Raean's turned down an opportunity to give up the baby for a legal, free adoption.

Soldier fighting extradition

COLUMBUS, Ga. (UPI) — A Fort Benning soldier wanted for the murder of three blacks in New York state refused to waive extradition proceedings Thursday and a hearing was set for May 8.

Pvt. Joseph Christopher, 25, a white Buffalo, N.Y., native, chose to fight his extradition to Buffalo to an appearance before Chateauboche Judicial Circuit Judge John Land. The judge then set an extradition hearing for May 8.

Christopher was moved from Fort Benning, where he was in custody on charges of slaying a black soldier in January, to the Muscogee County Jail to await the extradition proceedings.

An indictment was returned in Buffalo Wednesday in the shooting deaths of three blacks, and authorities say those deaths were similar to seven other killings of blacks in Rochester, New York City and Niagara Falls.

Prince Charles in U.S. visit

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Prince Charles, visiting the United States for the last time as a bachelor, arrived Thursday for a four-day trip that will include talks with President Reagan and a visit to colonial-era sites in Virginia.

An indictment was returned in Buffalo Wednesday in the shooting deaths of three blacks, and authorities say those deaths were similar to seven other killings of blacks in Rochester, New York City and Niagara Falls.

Also on Friday, Prince Charles will confer with Secretary of State Alexander Haig, participate in a religious service at the Washington National Cathedral where the primates of the Anglican Church are meeting, tour museums, and attend an Oxford-Cambridge Society dinner.

On Saturday, he tours naval facilities at Norfolk, Va., visits the U.S. Nimitz, receives an honorary Phi Beta Kappa fellowship at the College of William and Mary, and tours Colonial Williamsburg. He leaves for London Sunday morning.

Empire State Building turns 50

NEW YORK (UPI) — A quarter-mile above Manhattan at the top of the Empire State Building, guests at a Golden Birthday Party drank a champagne toast under a low gray April sky Thursday to the tower that is the symbol of New York City.

"Here is a toast to the Empire State Building. We have a date to repeat this at the end of the next 50 years," said Lawrence A. Wien, one of the owners, as he lifted his glass.

Ceremonies celebrating the anniversary of the historic building — which has attracted 60 million visitors in its first half-century, two million in the last year alone — were held in its cavernous ground-floor lobby.

The ceremony was held a day early, the formal opening of the building was on May 1, 1931.

On the 57th floor observation deck, Wein and Harry B. Haiman, another tower, cut a birthday cake on which was inscribed "1931-1981." That deck is surmounted by a tower that reaches up to 102 stories, a point that was reached in a historic 1933 motion picture climb by a 30-foot ape called King Kong.

Block stamps for farm bill

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — Agriculture Secretary John Block, seeking midwestern support for the administration's request for a blank check in writing farm policy, Thursday claimed the Russian grain embargo caused serious damage to the agricultural industry.

"It is a great relief to have it lifted," Block told about 300 Missouri and Kansas farmers on a final stop of a four-city tour to promote the administration's farm bill. He also spoke Thursday in Chicago and Des Moines.

"Yes, it probably has done some permanent damage. It probably will take many years to recover," he said. "American farmers will have to redirect their energies. We have a lot to do."

Calling the farm bill a simple measure, Block outlined three basic points of the bill he said would boost the agricultural industry: reduction of the federal government's role in agriculture, increased agricultural productivity and exports, and farm programs of minimal cost to the government.

New early test for cancer?

ATLANTA (UPI) — Medical researchers at Emory University said Thursday with the discovery of a so-called "tumor marker," they hope to produce an inexpensive early test for cancer.

Drs. Rajender J. Chawla, an associate professor of medicine, and Frederick W. Miller, a research fellow, said large amounts of a protein called EDCI was found in the urine of persons suffering from breast cancer and other malignancies.

They said tests showed that 29 of 38 cancer victims involved in the project showed an average of 98 milligrams of EDCI per day in the urine while persons with other non-cancer illnesses had only from 7 to 14 milligrams.

The team said there were high outputs of EDCI in some patients with infectious diseases, rheumatoid arthritis and kidney damage, but they said that material was of a different molecular weight than the substance found in the cancer patients.

Reagan tabs Nimmo to head VA

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan Thursday chose California legislator Robert Nimmo, a one-time Reagan appointee and World War II pilot, to head the Veterans Administration.

At the same time, the president picked retired Army Lt. Gen. Edward Rowley, a favorite of conservative Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., to take the second spot at the Army Control and Discharge Command Agency under a chairman Helms proposed.

Nimmo, 59, who must receive Senate confirmation, served under Governor Reagan in California from 1970 to 1973 as U.S. property and fiscal officer, a position responsible for receipt and accounting of federal property and federal funds for the California National Guard.

A retired Army Air Corps colonel who served as a pilot during World War II, Nimmo, who lives in Atascadero, Calif., served in the California Assembly from 1973 to 1976, and in the state Senate 1976-1980.

From 1955 to 1970, Nimmo was employed by the California State Military Department in various military assignments. Before that, he was a livestock and grain farmer in Oregon.

Rowley, 64, will be special representative for Army Control and Discharge, serving under director designate Eugene Rustow, a Yale professor whose nomination was opposed by Helms.

Timex survives 5 months in stomach

CHICAGO (UPI) — Attention John Cameron Swaggy.

A self-winding Timex survived five months in the stomach of a 49-year-old New Yorker — and came out ticking.

Dr. Elliot B. Duboy, writing in the Journal of the American Medical Association, reports the case of a New York man who, confronted by a mugger, slipped his newly purchased Timex in his mouth and swallowed it.

Some time later, Duboy reported, the man was admitted to a hospital for treatment of another health problem. X-rays showed the watch — complete with its synthetic band and buckle — in his stomach and removed surgically.

"Even though the date and time were incorrect, the watch was intact and ticking and continued to tick for at least two hours, at which time it was sent to the pathology laboratory," said Duboy, of Southern University of New York at Stony Brook.

Brady watched

WASHINGTON (UPI) — White House press secretary James Brady is being watched carefully for signs that a new opening permitting leakage of air into his brain will mend without further surgery, a hospital spokesman said Thursday.

Dr. Dennis O'Leary, spokesman for George Washington University Hospital, said, "We're just watching things carefully and trying to keep him quiet."

"Everything is status quo," he said, adding that Brady's treatment now "is a matter of being patient."

Help courts preserve the system

By DOUGLAS D. KRAMER
Special to the Times-News

DOUGLAS D. KRAMER

Are judges too lenient? If so, is this the reason for increased crime in America? What should the courts do to satisfy society? These are crucial questions, and on law day it is appropriate to discuss them.

The public's perception of the court system is derived from the press which in turn understands little about the judiciary. The judiciary is at fault for hiding from the press—and the press is at fault for reporting only sensational cases and not enlightening itself about the court system.

The American press prints stories and court sentences in violent crimes and sex offenses, but seldom prints stories concerning property crimes and miscellaneous crimes. Politicians use judges as scapegoats without confessing that they make the laws and prescribe the sentences that are imposed, as well as the method of imposing the same. Nothing is said about overworked courts.

Courts were established by our founding fathers to protect people from excesses of government and solve disputes between citizens. Judges are the buffer between anarchy and a police state with free persons. Judges do not establish what is a crime or a law nor do they appropriate money for penitentiaries or jails. In Idaho the state pen is full and bursting at the seams, and almost every county jail is full. Also, more laws create more law suits.

In the Fifth Judicial District, which consists of eight counties, we have five district judges and 18 magistrates. In 1980, these judges and their personnel processed 46,468 civil and criminal cases. In 1981, these same judges started the year with a backlog of 10,652 cases. Approximately 30,000 of the cases in 1980 were criminal (including traffic) and all could require a jury trial if everyone pleaded not guilty.

If judges are lenient in some cases it may be because there are no jail cells left, or the complaining witness will not testify, or there are no facilities to treat the drug offender, the sex offender or the alcoholic; or there is no tax money to prosecute; or the courtroom is filled with people who really care; or that criminal is testily a good person who went bad only once; or there are not enough judges and juries to try the cases. How many courtrooms do we need?

It just may be that crime in America is caused by Americans. It just may be that crime is caused by a society that has taught its citizens that "me first" is more important than responsibility to our fellow human and his or her property. It just may be that society believes all that can be corrected with "there ought to be a law."

Law is the language of liberty. We survive as a nation—because we believe in the rule of law. We can only survive as long as we have faith in our elected officials and our form of government. As long as citizens want to read and hear the bad things, then the press will feed the desire. The desire is a national sickness that will destroy us.

If the people of this country want to treat their fellowman as a criminal, then they must provide the money to kennel them. I happen to believe that my fellowman is a creature of God and I believe most people agree. If elected members of the judiciary, legislative and executive branch do not agree, we are in serious trouble as a society. If taxpayers didn't cooperate, the system simply could not work as well as it does.

Law Day USA is the answer to the communists' May Day celebration. Under communism there is no need for independent judges. There is no need for lawyers. There is no private property to protect. There are no personal freedoms to protect—and in Russia there is Siberia.

Crime in America will decrease only when Americans dedicate themselves to respect on another's person and property. As long as government is the giver of all the law, then individual responsibility will be unimportant. A good shot of the "work ethic" would help.

It is far past the time when Americans should stop having faith in the system and pledge themselves to the fact that our laws and constitution are truly the language of liberty. That rights demand responsibilities. Idaho, as bad as some may think it is, has one of the best judicial systems in the United States. This fact will not last long if the pressures on courts and facilities continue without adequate compensation for judges and court personnel as well as jury compensation.

We need more jails, more secure mental institutions for the alcoholics and drug addicts. And we need more law-enforcement officers, judges and courtrooms.

Only 1.5 percent of the total state budget goes to the courts. The counties provide the court houses and jails. In 1980 the courts collected about $10 million in fines and had about $6 million appropriated by the legislature. Of the fine money, 25 percent went to the courts in the counties; 22.5 percent went to the schools; 10 percent went to the state and the cities' law enforcement received the rest.

The courts received nothing in the Fifth Judicial District not one mill of taxes had been levied in these eight counties for about three years for the court's basic operations.

Judges are dedicated people. Public understanding and participation would be much more helpful than uninformed criticism. As chief judge of this district, I call upon all citizens to help the courts preserve the system of a government of laws and not of people. I call upon all citizens to help the courts preserve the language of liberty.

Douglas D. Kramer is Administrative District Judge of the Fifth Judicial District.

Whatever 'law' means to you, serve, respect it

By MARTHA MEAD
Special to the Times-News

MARTHA MEAD

The word "law" has many diverse connotations. To most people, it means at least a sudden empty feeling of panic when a flashing red and blue light threatens encounter and a traffic fine. While I must admit I have known the feeling, to me "law" has a positive connotation. It is such an encompassing part of our lives, we tend to take its benefits for granted.

If I were to express my impression of "law" in a word, it would probably be "freedom." Because laws protect me and guide my actions, I am free to make other more specific or personal decisions. When parents set down regulations for their children, they free them for concerns with which they are better able to contend.

Just as our constitution is founded on divine laws, so each family's laws or rules of conduct are usually based on Christian, Jewish or other religious codes of ethics. The family unit and subsequently the community is the grass roots of the spirit and success of any system of law. An example of respect for and obedience to the law is important early in a child's life. Our laws, at best, cannot solve all problems, for they are subject to human error; but we must respect the loving and human intent which inspired their inception. Because of the limited number of persons able to administer and enforce our laws, each of us, if we expect the law to ever flow, is the one who must, in a spirit of mutual concern, serve the system.

Law Day deceiving theme

By JAMES M. CUNNINGHAM
Special to the Times-News

JAMES M. CUNNINGHAM

Law Day USA — a special day of celebration by the American people in appreciation of their liberty and freedom under law. Splendid words, liberty and freedom.

They conjure up visions of unrestrained personal activity, of unfettered freedom, of the happy appropriate words for us in describing Law Day 1981. The thesis that today's law is the language of liberty, as suggested in the theme of Law Day '81 is deceiving.

It is undoubtedly true that in many instances our laws secure for individuals the rights of freedom set forth in the federal constitution and elsewhere. No one will deny that the emancipation proclamation became law and secured for those formerly held in slavery the liberty and freedom enjoyed by all citizens of the United States; that the laws giving birth to women's suffrage secured for women the liberty to take part in the governmental process and the freedom to choose their favorite candidate at the polls. On the other hand, no one can deny that the inception of income tax laws, both federal and state, deprived most citizens of their liberty and freedom to enjoy all of the fruits of their labor.

By and large the business of law in today's world is the ascertainment of rights and the distribution of those rights among select individuals and groups as determined by the legislative, executive and judicial branches of our government. And for almost every right declared to exist and distributed to its beneficiary, a corresponding bill of freedom and liberty is extinguished and dies.

This is not to say that in all instances the curtailment of freedom is necessarily bad. Few would argue that tax dollars should not be used to heal and care for a sick and abandoned child. The child's well-being and right to life far outweigh our loss of freedom to enjoy the fruits of our labor represented in the tax dollars used to care for that child.

On the other hand I suspect that a vast majority of citizens would argue that the right of the snail-darter to procreate in the Tennessee River is not paramount to the freedom of the citizens of Tennessee to harness and use the energy contained in those waters, laws to the contrary notwithstanding.

The recently announced right of a minor to an abortion without parental approval and at government expense may be a praiseworthy discovery of individual rights. But does the right to abortion outweigh — the parents' freedom to guide and manage their family? Does it outweigh the citizen's right to the fruits of his labor?

We must have laws. Society would cease to exist without them. But like it or not, most laws have a tendency to subvert freedom. The problem is the difficulty in determining whether the proscribed good a law is designed to produce outweighs the freedoms that law is bound to eliminate. All too often our legislators, judges, governors and assorted bureaucrats totally ignore the problem in their haste to award another right to deserving individuals and groups. It may ever be thus, so let us celebrate in appreciation of the liberty and freedom left to us — there may be less come another year.

Equality of law — What kind of justice do you want?

By ROBERT VAN NEST
Special to the Times-News

ROBERT VAN NEST

As one who is a complete layman in the field of law, I suppose that the thing that most concerns me is the equality of justice under the law. We all know that as long as there are human beings involved in making and carrying out laws there will be inequality. The policeman, the judge, the jury and the public all approach the law with their understanding of what the law should do and they will inject their prejudices as they interpret and enforce the law.

Unfortunately, it seems to me the system itself cannot always demonstrate equality. The wealthier person can often afford a more prestigious or competent attorney who can appeal one's case through several courts and make use of many legal maneuvers. Such a person will often get better justice than the person who cannot afford his own attorney. But, because we know that there can never be complete fairness in the administration of justice, does not mean that we should not seek to improve it, or not seek equality under the law. There are many these days who are critical of judges. Looking at a case only from what I read in the newspapers, I will admit there are times when it would seem that I would administer justice differently than some judges have done. Most judges are criticized for being too lenient and yet I am sure there are others who are quite stern in the penalties they mete out to offenders.

I have always had a great deal of compassion for judges. Their responsibilities are awesome. Life and death is in their hands. Their decisions not only affect the future of the offender but of his family and offspring. It takes a great deal of research and soul searching on the part of a good judge, I am sure, to try to administer justice equally for the good of both the accused and the public alike. Stern justice can make one a hardened criminal. If he isn't one already, and fill our prisons to overflowing. If he can commit crime again and get away with it.

I realize there are many criminals who are beyond rehabilitation, but I hope that somewhere in our judicial system there are those who are helped to give the error of their ways and given a chance and a reason for reform. It would seem to me that if a judge errs on the side of either leniency or sternness, he is probably hoping that somewhere along the way the criminal will change for the good. Judges are human, as we all are, and I hope our system will try to see to it that the best men and women we can find will be sitting on the bench. It seems to me that whether or not we have "equality under the law" depends on our values.

Take John Hinckley for example. I applauded President Reagan's humane attitude toward the man. He seemed to have a forgiving spirit and a hope that Hinckley will be able to find some answers to his problems. He also had compassion for the parents who are from my point of view, among those to be pitied.

But what is justice for John Hinckley? There are many who have a different set of values and who are not as compassionate as President Reagan. They would just as soon see criminals strung up and be done with it, and the sooner the better! Let me be a future assassin! And I must confess that in my worst moments I can understand how people can feel this way. Or yet, this didn't represent the attitude or values of our President. Would equal justice under the law have been done if Hinckley had been killed on the spot? I doubt it.

What about any mental problems he had? The President seems to imply that he believes the man had mental problems and should be helped through them in spite of what he did. Some in our society would say, "What one of us hasn't had a bad childhood, or a tough marriage, or something that might have made us go mad? Why should he be given any special treatment?" And yet, we all react differently to all kinds of situations.

I don't believe that those who "freak" mental illness should be dealt with leniently, but I'm sure we all must admit that there are those among us who are genuinely ill, mentally, and in need of special treatment. I am willing to let the courts decide that, and hope they will do it fairly.

Equal justice means that people will be given a fair trial if they are accused, and that they will not be tried by the public before the trial, as is so often done. As we all know, a Twin Falls prosecuting attorney was accused recently of possession of a controlled substance. He felt apparently, without of court trial, that he had already been judged by the public to be guilty and couldn't perform his duties properly under those circumstances.

I have never met the man, but if that is the case, I feel it is unfortunate. I think he should have first been allowed to have his "day in court."

More recently, a state legislator has accused the Boise planning and zoning commissioner of regularly taking "payments under the table." He certainly has a right to make these accusations, but without proof or an opportunity for the accused to respond. We must be allowed to face our accusers and let a judge or jury decide.

The unfortunate thing about this is that the public may assume guilt without a proper trial having taken place and livelihoods and reputations may be ruined. There must be equality under the law. But one of the bottom lines for me is, "What kind of justice do we want if it is the 'other guy' and what kind of justice do we want if it is a member of our own family?"

We seem to be ready to condemn the other person, the John Hinckleys of this world, but how would you feel if John Hinckley was your son? The importance of equality under the law hits home when we become personally involved. We can pontificate how we want stricter laws but would we feel the same way if a member of our own family were the accused?

For me, I believe that I would want justice done if it was one of my sons, or if it was John Hinckley. For, I never know when I may be the one being fingerprinted or when one of my friends or loved ones might be standing in the dock. What is fair for one, I hope will be fair for all.

In conclusion, let me affirm that I am in favor of strict and speedy enforcement of the law. We owe that to ourselves and to one another. But, whether it is a poor black person in the ghetto, or a prosecuting attorney, or a planning and zoning commissioner, or John Hinckley, or my mother, I will always hope that there will be the equality of justice under the law for all people. For if they are treated fairly, maybe I will too sometime.

U.S. studies show Laetrile ineffective

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The first major government-sponsored tests of Laetrile in cancer patients found the controversial drug — derived from apricot pits — was useless as a cancer treatment, doctors reported Thursday.

Researchers from four cancer centers said "no substantive benefit" from Laetrile was observed in terms of eye improvement or slowing the advance of the cancer or in improving symptoms from the disease.

A total of 178 patients with advanced cancer entered the unprecedented Laetrile trial sponsored by the National Cancer Institute beginning last July. Dr. Charles Moertel, study spokesman from the Mayo Clinic at Rochester, Minn., said his have died already.

Dr. Vincent T. DeVita, director of the cancer institute, said the study findings "present public evidence of Laetrile's failure as a cancer treatment."

"The hollow promise of this drug has led thousands of Americans away from potentially helpful therapy of scientific validity," DeVita said after the study results were presented at a meeting of the American Society of Clinical Oncology. "Now the facts speak for themselves."

In New York, Dr. Arthur Hollub, chief medical officer of the American Cancer Society, said, "Too many lives have been sacrificed to blind faith in the many Laetrile promises that could not be kept."

Robert Henderson, spokesman for the pro-Laetrile Committee for the Freedom of Choice in San Francisco, contended the study did not use the correct kind of Laetrile, also called amygdalin. But a cancer institute pharmacologist said it was chemically identical to that produced by the major Laetrile producer in Mexico. The cancer institute estimated last year that at least 70,000 Americans had used Laetrile to treat their cancers even though the Food and Drug Administration and the cancer institute had long contended it was worthless.

Although the FDA prohibits the interstate shipment of Laetrile, 22 states have legalized it.

In addition to the Mayo Clinic, the study was conducted at the UCLA Jonsson Comprehensive Cancer Center, the University of Arizona Health Sciences Center at Tucson and the Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center in New York.

"We tried very hard to conduct a scientifically honest, solid trial looking for any evidence of hope," Moertel said. "We have not found it."

Moertel said the findings reported Thursday were based on a "core group" of 156 patients.

Of the remaining 22 who entered the study, 14 were recently placed on very high doses of Laetrile. Ten have worsened, two have been stable for three to five weeks and two have yet to be evaluated.

In addition, one patient was ineligible because the initial cancer diagnosis was not confirmed, one left the study after only eight days, two died within three days of starting treatment from causes not directly related to cancer, and four are still being evaluated.

Moertel said only one patient showed a partial reduction in tumor size and that reduction lasted only 10 weeks. The tumor then grew even though the patient continued on Laetrile treatment.

He said the remaining patients of the main group for which definitive results were available failed to improve.

Within one month of starting treatment, 50 percent showed evidence of disease progression and 90 percent had worsened after three months.

Homosexual youth suing Boy Scouts for kicking him out

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — An Eagle Scout who was featured in a newspaper story on gay youth filed a $320,000 discrimination suit Thursday charging the Boy Scouts of America kicked him out because of his open homosexuality.

Timothy Curran, 19, with the assistance of the American Civil Liberties Union and National Gay Task Force, filed the suit seeking $320,000 punitive damages and $25,000 actual damages against the Mt. Diablo Council of the Boy Scouts in the San Francisco Bay Area.

"What's ridiculous," Curran said in an interview, "is that the Boy Scouts are saying that because I am homosexual, I am immoral. I think that's absurd. I am not an immoral person."

ACLU attorney Susan McGreevy said Curran, a journalism major at UCLA, was kicked out of the Boy Scouts after a series of articles on gay youth in Bay Area appeared last June in the Oakland-Tribune-Eastbay Today.

The articles, which were accompanied by a photograph of Curran attending the Skyline High School senior prom with a male date, quoted his belief that going to the dance as an open homosexual was a "political statement."

Ms. McGreevy said the Boy Scouts have taken an unconstitutional position that Curran is "per se immoral" because he is homosexual.

"Timothy has an outstanding track record as a young Scout," Ms. McGreevy said.

"He founded a Scout troop for the deaf in Oakland and was heartbroken when the Boy Scouts kicked him out and refused to allow him to attend the National Jamboree in Virginia."

Dave Park, Boy Scout general counsel, said Curran had applied for re-registration as a Scout and was refused because "he is an avowed homosexual."

"We feel homosexuality and membership in scouting are not compatible," Park said. "We feel we have the right to determine our own criteria for membership."

Curran said he had no trouble functioning as both a Scout and an open homosexual for three years before he was forced out of his troop. "I was annoyed to say the very least," he said. "I felt that my rights had been abridged. I felt like I'd been hit in the face."

Curran said he joined the Boy Scouts in 1975.

"I have enjoyed being a Boy Scout," he said. "I made a lot of friends. I gained a lot of skills and it was very beneficial for me."

"I thought that it was ridiculous of these people who knew my record, who knew that I was a good Scout, to say that simply because I was a homosexual — and for no other reason — that I was going to be kicked out."

Student cop breaks up drug ring

FORT WAYNE, Ind. (UPI) — Mike Pershing, a 24-year-old state trooper posing as a student broker up a drug ring at Northrup High School last June — he was having trouble with his grades.

Twenty arrests Wednesday climaxed a five-month investigation by the Fort Wayne Police. Nine students were charged with selling drugs. Eleven adults were charged with providing the narcotics.

Pershing — married and the father of two children, ages 11 and 15 — worked in the school using the name William Sims and claiming to be 19 years old.

He attended metals, mechanics, English, government and sociology classes and admits he was having some problems with his grades. That, he said, was due in part to being absent part of the time on other police work.

"My kids thought it was funny I couldn't keep up with their grades," said Pershing, who saw his family only on weekends.

State and local police set up the undercover operation last October at the request of Northrop Principal Douglas Williams.

He made drug purchases at prices ranging from 50 cents to $150.

Freedom is a risky business. Invest in it.

Think a radical thought. Test it out on your neighbor. Your co-worker. Your family. There's no need to tremble; no punishment will await you.

Instead, you will re-discover the miracle of being an American. Your idea may please one person and be a threat to another. No matter. To think a radical thought is your birthright, a special gift to you from our Founding Fathers.

Remember what protects you in the use of that gift is law; it is the power that makes liberty possible.

Freedom is not formlessness; liberty is not license. To be free is to succumb, over and over again, to the demands of responsibility. To be free is to believe that, in the open competition for the minds and hearts of men and women, the good idea will eventually triumph.

It is this belief that inspires the celebration of Law Day each year on May 1st. Join millions of Americans in this celebration. Be free and enjoy it.

Wining: an Idaho tradition is born

CALDWELL — Trellises at Ste. Chapelle Vineyards stand bare in the spring, like unemployed scarecrows awaiting crops.

Nearby, apple blossoms' pastel blush contrasts with the brown vineyard soil being tilled methodically by a worker.

The springtime scene signaling the advent of another crop of grapes, another crush and another vintage of Idaho wine has unfolded annually since 1975. In the dry Sunny Slope country southwest of Caldwell. In that span of time, the optimism characteristic of spring has increased steadily for Bill Broich, maker of Idaho's only marketed wine.

Wines born in the state of potatoes and trout adeptly hold their own in competition, whether it occurs on grocers' shelves or in the distinguished court of winetasting's international judiciary, according to Ste. Chapelle marketing director Harry Lawless.

Several Ste. Chapelle wines Broich has produced since graduating from amateur to commercial winemaking in 1975 enjoy international acclaim. The 1979 Wine and Spirit Competition Ltd. tastings in London yielded five awards for Ste. Chapelle, including a gold medal for the 1977 Special Idaho State Johannsburg Blessing.

Awards aside, however, Lawless said simple curiosity often prompts wine drinkers' first sips of Ste. Chapelle.

"The fact that it's made in Idaho causes a reaction," he said. "Some people who see Idaho on the bottle try our wine out of curiosity. They realize it's a quality wine and buy it again."

Uncouthness, however, superseded curiosity when restaurant-going puppets Kermit the Frog and Miss Piggy chose nameless Idaho wine in the recent Muppet movie. Comedian Steve Martin's "Shedrin" as he served the dating twosome "Idaho's finest" created only a mild ripple at Ste. Chapelle, Lawless said. But winery representatives nonetheless contacted the filmmaker to inform him Idaho indeed produces wines, and good ones, at that.

Moreover, Idaho wines are appearing in prestigious circles. Artisans include the Washington colleagues of Idaho Sen. Steve Symms, whose family is in partnership with Broich.

Ste. Chapelle wines are sold in about 33 states, and plans call for market expansion, Lawless said. But he added there is no desire to build the Caldwell operation into an industry giant. Ste. Chapelle produces 50,000 12-bottle cases of wine annually, and ultimately will limit yearly production to 85,000 or 90,000 cases, he said. That ceiling has proven successful for small California wineries emphasizing a quality product, according to Lawless.

The 10 or so varieties of Ste. Chapelle wines range from $4 for a rose to about $11 for the chardonnays. Prices are influenced by an array of factors, among them production costs, the principle of supply and demand and the price of grapes sold by contracted growers, Lawless said.

Not all Ste. Chapelle wines are produced from grapes grown on limited acreage near Caldwell, an area with soil and climate virtually ideal for viticulture. Eastern Washington vineyards provide some of the grapes, Lawless said, and Ste. Chapelle recently signed a contract with a small-scale grower in the Hagerman Valley. Purchase prices range from $450 for a ton of chenin blanc grapes to $900 a ton for chardonnay grapes, Lawless said.

Commercial winemaking, he noted, is an extraordinarily costly venture.

Evidence of that includes the relatively small, French oak casks which house aging white wines and sell for $300 each. Less expensive casks of American oak impart a slight harshness desired in red wines, Lawless said.

Harshness, he noted, carries over into the tough reality of winemaking as a business. The poetic "veneration of winemaking, wine drinking has little bearing on the day to day operation of a winery," he said.

"The mortality rate among wineries is quite high," he said. "I think there are two main reasons for that. One, it's a very expensive business to be in. Two, people see winemaking as somewhat glamorous, and they get in it without really understanding what's involved."

But opportunities exist for winemakers prepared to accept challenges posed by an increasingly selective public. Trends among the wine-buying populace include a favor for low-alcohol wines, Lawless said. Ste. Chapelle's new soft chenin blanc has a low alcohol content of 7.2 percent. Another of the company's new products is champagne, scheduled for release in 1983-84 at about $15 a bottle, Lawless said.

Idaho's only other winery, a small one in Wilder, hasn't placed wines on the market, he said. "When he releases his wine," Lawless said, "I guess we will officially call ourselves an industry. The Idaho wine industry."

Complimentary tastings of wines presently marketed by the Idaho "industry" are offered at Ste. Chapelle Vineyards Monday through Saturday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

The tasting and sales room is closed Sundays in accordance with a ban on Sunday wine and beer sales in unincorporated areas of Canyon County. Broich contends the ban smacks of collusion between the Mormon Church and Canyon County commissioners, a majority of whom are Mormons. Commissioners replied they will reconsider their stand. If given petitions bearing signatures of 9,300 residents favoring repeal of the ban.

Wine enthusiasts also can visit the company's Boise tasting and sales room, 340 S. Eighth St., from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. Monday through Saturday and from noon to 5 p.m. Sundays.

Tours of the winery are available year-round and allow visitors a thorough look at the octagonal building divided into winemaking operations, business offices and the tasting and sales room. The building was inspired by the Ste. Chapelle chapel in Paris, which Lawless said housed the Shroud of Turin, believed by some historians to have covered Jesus Christ.

Autumn is the best time to visit the western Ste. Chapelle, Lawless said. Then, the winery operates to the rhythm of the annual crush, the air's fruitly pungency intensifies — and new season heights with the promise of another Idaho vintage.

Demand rising for hard-to-find tomes

By WILLIAM D. LAFFLER
United Press International

A good book, like the good man in the old country music song, sometimes is hard to find.

But when it is found, both the sumner and the seeker enjoy a feeling of mutual satisfaction.

Rare books appeal generally to collectors who are willing to pay a premium price for a hard-to-find tome, such as "The Outsider" by H.P. Lovecraft or "The King in Yellow" by Robert W. Chambers. But in recent years there has been a growing demand for "out-of-print" books that can be found and purchased for relatively small sums.

Literary magazines often print classified advertisements offering help in finding scarce books or "out-of-print" items. A fee is charged in addition to the "going price" of the book.

Books become out-of-print when the publisher has exhausted his supply and decides not to print a new edition.

Some "classic" books are overstocked in stores which have not returned them for compensation.

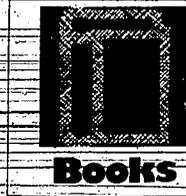

Six years ago Waldenbooks, a chain of more than 700 bookstores, decided to inaugurate a free search service in an attempt to win new customers. The idea germinated in 1972 when Viola Morris was manager of the Walden Books store in Lubbock, Tex. Some of her customers were disappointed because books they wanted no longer were in circulation.

She began looking for out-of-print books in 1975 when she became district manager for the chain in Houston. The operation started in one store and then spread to others in the area. Within a few years it was growing into a nationwide operation called "Booksearch".

Gay O'Connor, now in charge of the over-all operation, was hired to run the service on a full-time basis from an office in Friedwood, Texas. She now processes more than 2,500 requests a month.

"Most of these titles can be found, and often at a price lower than the average hardcover," Miss O'Connor says.

Miss O'Connor said the store manager asks a customer who wants an unavailable book to fill out a form listing the title, author's name and whether a first edition, or autographed copy is needed. The information then is fed to Miss O'Connor's office and she tries to locate the book through her contacts.

Books

about 150 rare and used book sellers. As an example, a customer asks for a first edition of a book that is out of print. When it is found, the customer is notified and given the price. The customer is not obligated to buy, even though time and money were involved in the search. There is a minimum price of $7.50.

Miss O'Connor said it generally takes six to eight weeks to find a wanted book. Occasionally, she said, some orders are not easily filled.

"I took me nearly four months to find a specific version of Longfellow's 'Hiawatha' for a customer in North Carolina," she said. "But it made somebody very happy."

The most expensive book Miss O'Connor ever sold was "Ben Green Tales," by Ben Green, for $150. There is no great profit motive involved in finding out-of-print books," a Waldenbooks spokesman said. "We buy at wholesale from the dealers and sell at retail, but there are the costs of overhead, space, telephone, ads in 'A-B' Bookman, employee time, and others. We don't lose money on the service but there is not much profit in it either. It pays for itself."

Jacob Chernofsky, editor and publisher of A-B Bookman, the trade journal for antiquarian book dealers, said there is no substance to the belief that out-of-print books are expensive. "Newspapers pay up to the $50,000 first edition," Chernofsky said. "But these are rarities. The fact is that most out-of-print books sell in the trade for a few dollars. It's a very rare title that costs more than $15."

'Heaven's Gate' painful, $36 million cinematic washout

By Roger Ebert
©1981 Chicago Sun-Times

HEAVEN'S GATE, directed and written by Michael Cimino. Produced by Joann Carroll. Classified R-16.

We begin with a fundamental question: Why is "Heaven's Gate" so painful and unpleasant to look at? I'm not referring to its content, but to its actual visual texture. This is one of the ugliest films I believe I have ever seen.

Its director, Michael Cimino, opens his story at Harvard, continues it in Montana and closes it aboard ship. And yet a grim industrial-pall hangs low over everything. There are clouds and billows of dirty yellow smoke in every shot that can possibly justify it, and when he runs out of smoke he gives us fog and such incredible amounts of dust that there are whole scenes where we can barely see anything.

That's not enough. Cimino also shoots his picture in a maddening soft focus that makes the people and places in this movie sometimes almost impossible to see. And then he goes after the colors. There's not a single primary color in this movie, only dingy washed-out sepia tones. I know, I know. He's trying to demystify the West, and all these other things that directors try to do when they don't really want to make a Western. But this movie is a study in stretched excess. It is so smoky, so dusty, so foggy, so unfocused and so brownish yellow that the ushers ought to pass out. A director is in deep trouble when we do not even enjoy the primary act of looking at his screen.

Movies

But Cimino's in deeper trouble still. "Heaven's Gate" has, of course, become a notorious picture—a hoodoo dog that cost something like $36 million and was yanked out of its New York opening run after the critics ran gagging from the theater. Its running time, at that point, was more than four hours. Perhaps length was the problem? Cimino went back to the editing room, while a United Artists executive complained that the film had been "destroyed" by an unfairly negative review by New York Times critic Vincent Canby.

Brother Canby was only doing his job. If the film was formless at four hours, it is insipid at 140 minutes. It is so incompetently photographed and edited that there are times when we are not even sure which character we are looking at. Christopher Walken in several of the initial Western scenes before he finally gets a closeup and we see who he is. John Hurt wanders through various scenes to no avail. Kris Kristofferson is the star of the movie, and is never allowed to generate enough character for us to miss him, should he disappear.

The opening scenes are set at Harvard (well, they were actually shot in England, but never mind). They show Kristofferson, Hurt and other idealistic young men graduating in 1870 and setting off to civilize a nation. Kristofferson decides to go West to help develop the territory. He explains this decision in a narration, and the movie might have benefited if he'd narrated the whole thing, explaining as he went along.

Out West, as a lawman, he learns of a plot by the cattle-breeder's association to hire a private army and assassinate 125 newly arrived European immigrants—who are, it is claimed, anarchists, killers and thieves. Most of the movie will be about this plot, Kristofferson's attempts to stop it, Walken's involvement in it, and the involvement of both Kristofferson and Walken in the private life of a young Montana madam (Isabelle Huppert).

In a movie where nothing is handled well, the immigrants' arrival being gangbanged by several men, leaps in with six guns in both hands and shoots all the men, including those aboard Huppert, without injuring her. In a big battle scene, men make armored wagons out of logs and push them forward into the line of fire, even though anyone could ride around behind and shoot them.

By the movie's end, we can identify only one of them for sure. She is the Widow Kovach, whose husband was shot dead near the beginning of the film. That makes her the emblem of the immigrants suffering. Every time she steps forward out of the mob, somebody respectfully murmurs "Widow Kovach" in the subtitles. While the foreigners are hanging onto Widow Kovach's every insight, the cattlemen are holding meetings in private clubs and offering to pay their mercenaries $5 a day plus expenses and $50 for every foreigner shot or hung. I am sure of these terms because they are repeated endlessly throughout a movie that cares to make almost nothing else clear.

The ridiculous scenes are endless. Samples: Walken, surrounded by gunmen and trapped in a burning cabin, scribbles a farewell note in which he observes that he is trapped in the burning cabin, and then he signs his full name so that there will be no doubt whom the note was from. Kristofferson, "discovering" Huppert being gangbanged by several men, leaps in with six guns in both hands and shoots all the men, including those aboard Huppert, without injuring her. In a big battle scene, men make armored wagons out of logs and push them forward into the line of fire, even though anyone could ride around behind and shoot them.

There is more. There is much more. It all adds up to a great deal less. This movie is $36 million thrown to the winds. It is the most scandalous cinematic waste I have ever seen, and remember, I've seen "Paint Your Wagon."

Count on it, summer will see another 'Dallas' conspiracy game

NEW YORK (UPI)—It's a conspiracy, never doubt it. Lorimar Productions and CBS are out to get us, once and for all, with "Dallas," and Friday night they'll inflict yet another "Who Shot J.R.?" summer seizure upon an already feverish audience.

"This time even Linda Gray, who plays an abused and boozey Sue Ellen to Larry Hagman's vile J.R., doesn't know what sort of a cliffhanger the season's final episode will pose.

"I'm completely in the cold," she said Wednesday. "The final scene was shot in bits and pieces. I know I'm going to be a hot one, with everything just coming together, but I don't know the outcome."

All last summer, of course, Miss Gray said the same thing when asked the most burning question since the one about angels dancing on pinheads. "I've got a pretty good idea," was as close as she would come to an answer for glassy-eyed fans and bookmakers just after the final scene.

In fact, Miss Gray was one of the very few who did know who shot J.R. "I knew because I had to do the loop for the final segment," she admitted.

"I had the voiceover saying it was Linda who shot him," she said. "I had a picture of Kristin on the screen."

But she was true to the code of silence that ultimately made the CBS prime time cooer the biggest tremor ever registered on the open-ended Nielsen scale.

She only slipped once. "I was doing 'Good Morning America,'" she said, "and David

Hartman asked me, 'do you know?' I said, 'I have a pretty good idea,' as usual, then he asked me 'if my children knew. I said, 'well, they don't know that they know, but one of them has guessed it.'

The minute I said I'd made a terrible mistake right after the show I called home and told them, 'Mommy goofed — don't talk to the press.'

Jeff, 16 — the true guesser — and Kelly, 14, didn't talk, but the press certainly called.

Now, if "Dallas" can survive the writers' strike, which already has delayed a planned May 14 production start, and the tragic death of Jim Davis, another summer of suspense will be dangled as ratings bait.

The death this week of Davis — who played crusty old Jock Ewing on the series — was a blow both to the script and to the cast.

"Jimmy wanted to work, even though he wasn't feeling well," Miss Gray said. "He was worse off than anyone I knew. But, replace him? I don't know — it would be devastating. He was the epitome."

"At least he left on top, doing what he loved best."

Despite the woeful image of her television character, Miss Gray also is doing what she loves best and she's fierce in defense of her fellow cast members when reporters write snide things about big egos colliding on the set.

"They want what happens on screen to happen in real life and when it doesn't, they invent it," she said. "We're family. We've got a repertory company that works."

And what, exactly, is it that makes "Dallas" work like a self-operating gold mine for CBS?

"Dallas' epitomizes, especially for foreigners, what America is," she said.

Snake fouls fail-safe system

DALLAS (UPI)—The power system at the Woodlawn minimum security prison was supposed to be fail-safe but a hungry snake apparently got the word too late.

"Only God could create an animal that could knock out those generators, doing what every engineer thought to be impossible," said Sheriff's Lt. George Williams.

Dallas County Sheriff's deputies were still wondering Wednesday how a 4-foot-long King snake managed to knock out the main generator and two backup generators at the jail, which has no bars.

The three-hour power failure caused no major problems and all 200 inmates stayed in their places at the facility, which is used mainly to hold those convicted of misdemeanors.

The King snake apparently crawled into the facility looking for food, unnoticed by the guards, and slithered into the generator shed. The resulting shock "catastrophed" the reptile into the backup generators, disabling all three.

What's what

Basic life also short for Australian mole

The life of the male marzipan mole of Australia is pretty brief. He's born; he eats enough to stay alive until a four-day season of romance in June. He mates once. Then he drops dead.

In the lingo of the big kitchens, a professional chef's store is referred to as his plano. And chatty gourmets choose to my things like, "He plays a torplaso."

Minidoka teachers seek talks tonight

By KARY MILLER
Times-News correspondent

RUPERT — Minidoka School District teachers said Thursday they want to continue negotiations tonight.

In a press conference, teacher negotiator Desmond Welch said a certified letter was sent to school board chairman Hal Stevenson requesting a formal, open negotiations meeting at 8 p.m. at East Minico Junior High School in Rupert.

However, Stevenson said Thursday night he had received no notification concerning the meeting.

"The school board doesn't know anything about it," Stevenson said. "From all the rumors, evidently there will be some notification, but I haven't received anything yet."

Welch said the teachers tonight want "to develop compromise language" for a clause in the negotiations procedure contract to maintain standards. The board previously offered the teachers an 8 percent raise in return for elimination of the clause.

According to a press release Welch handed out Thursday, the 8 percent offer also is being disputed.

"In no way can any of the board's proposals be listed as 8 percent. In reality, they are 6 percent. They also said that if the override levy is successful an additional 2 percent would be available."

Prior to the press conference,

Welch said in a meeting with 125 teachers that all items discussed were approved unanimously.

All the group's teachers signed a petition stating in part the teachers want to "either return to the negotiating table or request mediation."

"If the board doesn't show tonight, Welch said, "we will have no alternative but to declare an impasse and go to mediation." This would bring in a neutral third party to assist us in working out our differences."

The teachers' stand on the maintenance of standards clause is that the board cannot take away any negotiated or nonnegotiated items without going into talks first.

Superintendent Wayne Fagg has said school boards cannot negotiate anything binding on a future board, as this clause does.

Welch said teachers are unaware of any such ruling and requested the board provide proof.

Welch also addressed the amount of the levy request. Gordon Watford (chief school board negotiator) said in executive session, "We need an absolute minimum of $350,000 to maintain status quo."

The board then came out and asked for $160,000 and Welch said "I almost look like the board is willing to let education decline." He said the $350,000 did not include any teacher salary raises.

Isabell and Rene Schatz contend they will use the addition to the back of their house as a sausage 'kitchen'.

Sausage 'kitchen' stirs air in Filer

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

FILER — A family room turned sausage plant in a residential district of Filer has the city's zoning board baffled.

The board this week voted to recommend that the Filer City Council hold a public hearing on the case. Mrs. Schatz said objection to the business are invalid. She explained there would be no odor from the operation because they have installed air conditioning and air-cleaning equipment. The building addition will be clean and attractive, she said.

"There are five other home businesses on the street. What is good for them should be good for me," she claimed.

The owner said Filer Building Inspector Leo Taylor knew the couple planned to make sausage in the building and had no objection. Taylor has declined comment on the case.

In a statement presented in the zoning meeting, the couple said they would have no employees and would run the business themselves. They said there would be no retail sales. Orders would be taken from restaurants and other outlets for delivery. When the business outgrows the home facility, it will be converted to a family room in the regular part of the home.

The Schatzes say the city clerk failed to write "kitchen" on the permit and just listed the family room. Filer building permit procedure calls for the clerk to make out a permit which the applicant verifies with his signature.

Mrs. Schatz said objection to the business are invalid. She explained there would be no odor from the operation because they have installed air conditioning and air-cleaning equipment. The building addition will be clean and attractive, she said.

In a statement presented in the zoning meeting, the couple said they would have no employees and would run the business themselves. They said there would be no retail sales. Orders would be taken from restaurants and other outlets for delivery. When the business outgrows the home, they said, it will be relocated.

Zoning board members told the Schatzes that in keeping with the zoning ordinance, if they would bring in a petition signed by all people living within 300 feet of the property, the variance could be granted without a public hearing. Petitions submitted Tuesday night did not include names of several of the closest residents. One neighbor, Virginia Steelman, attended the meeting and protested the proposed operation.

Zoning board members said they had no reason to believe the building addition was other than a home improvement until cinder-block walls and a smoke stack began reaching skyward, taking on the appearance of more than the average family room. The construction is nearing completion but a stop work order has been issued pending a City Council decision on the variance.

Isabell Schatz said the couple will have to hire a lawyer to help them through the hearing, but she expects they will soon be making sausage in their kitchen.

Niagara picnic area could remain open

By RON ZELLAR
Times-News writer

WENDELL — A group of North Side residents is nearing a solution to keep Niagara Springs picnic area open this summer.

The ad hoc Niagara Springs committee requested commitments Thursday to periodically mow lawns and collect garbage at the picnic area. Committee members also were working on a proposal to hire someone part-time to perform maintenance and other duties.

Niagara Springs is managed by Idaho Department of Parks and Recreation personnel from Malad Gorge State Park, one of three parks that were to remain closed this summer due to legislative funding cutbacks.

Parks department officials, however, reached an agreement earlier this month with Glenna Ferry residents to keep Three Island State Park near that community open during the peak summer tourism season. Glenna Ferry residents agreed to provide volunteer labor and some financial support.

Law Pence, project coordinator for the Wood River Resources Council, is one of about a dozen North Side residents seeking a similar solution for Niagara Springs. Pence said Thursday he is optimistic the popular picnic area can be kept open if the committee can enlist the help of groups who use the area.

The Idaho Department of Fish and Game, which operates a steelhead trout hatchery at Niagara Springs, has agreed to mow the lawn every other week and haul garbage as time permits, Pence said. State parks representatives will do needed start-up work on the irrigation system and mow the lawns on alternate weeks.

Pence said the federal Green Thumb program, which provides public service jobs and training for senior citizens, might be able to fund a half-time worker to irrigate and perform other odd jobs.

Some cash will be needed to replace such staples as sprinkler heads and garbage cans, he said. Committee members decided to compile a list of groups who use the picnic area to solicit contributions.

The ad hoc committee includes representatives of Gooding County, the Wood River Resources Council, Fish and Game, the Gooding County Soil Conservation Service, the Jerome Rod and Gun Club, and the Cities of Wendell and Gooding.

Education board to review finances

BOISE — The State Board of Education meets May 7 and 8 in Lava Hot Springs to discuss implementation of the "state of financial exigency" it declared last month.

The board also will set executive salaries for the fiscal year beginning July 1.

Board meetings are open to the public with the May session in the Lava Hot Springs community hall. Meetings will run from 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. Thursday and from 8:30 a.m. to noon on Friday.

In its April meeting, the board declared a "state of financial exigency" for the four higher education institutions in the state, the Division of Vocational Education and the two University of Idaho special programs which include agricultural research and cooperative extension service.

At that time, presidents of the institutions and administrators of vocational education were asked to return in May with recommendations on internal allocation of available funds for the fiscal year of 1982. They were also asked to recommend plans for implementing necessary staff and program reductions. Salary adjustment recommendations from the various institution heads will also be heard.

The opening day sessions begin with public hearings on room and board rate changes and fee increases proposed by the four major colleges and universities. Following the hearings, the board will hold a "joint session" to consider budget request guidelines in preparation for developing the 1983 fiscal year funding.

Also on Thursday the board will consider agendas for the four higher education institutions, vocational education and vocational rehabilitation divisions — the State School for the Deaf and Blind at Gooding and the State Department of Education.

Friday's agenda begins with a presentation by the Western Interstate Commission for Higher Education. Board members will then take up salary schedules for executive employees, including presidents of institutions, agency heads, deans and top administrative officers.

Bullington is CSI speaker

TWIN FALLS — The 1981 commencement exercises for the College of Southern Idaho May 8 will feature speaker Richard Bullington of Boise State University.

The 15th annual graduation exercise is set for 8 p.m. in the CSI gymnasium.

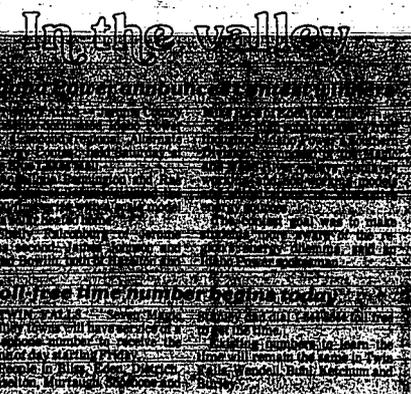

Bullington is executive vice president of BSU and has been with that institution since July of 1969. A graduate of the University of Alabama, he completed postdoctoral work at Arizona State University. Bullington served as professor and chairman of the department of elementary education at Arizona State prior to coming to Idaho.

The commencement ceremony will feature organist Helen Connolly for the processional and recessional and

Rev. Ray Wright of the Jerome Methodist Church, invocation and benediction. CSI Board Chairman Leroy Craig of Jerome will offer greetings. Dr. Roy Strawser, academic dean, will present keynote addresses for associate of arts and associate of science degrees. Orval L. Bradley, vocational director, will present candidates for associate of applied science degrees, and College President James Taylor will confer degrees.

A total of 367 of the 492 graduation candidates will receive diplomas in the ceremony.

The 1981 graduating class has 183 associate of arts and associate of science recipients and 309 associate of applied science recipients.

Blaine school levy outcome to decide county assistance

HAILEY — A Blaine County School District appeal for supplemental budget funds from the county rests on the outcome of Tuesday's $80,000 override election.

Facing potential massive budget cuts because of reductions in state and federal school funding, district Superintendent Richard Jones went to the commissioners Monday to try and make up the difference.

Jones asked the county board to consider appropriating school funds from money paid to the county in lieu of taxes by the federal government. In-lieu payments produce more than $200,000 a year for Blaine County because 90 percent of county land is federally owned, Luboviski said.

The commissioners did not commit the county to support the school budget. Commissioner Barry Luboviski said the commissioners were reluctant to make promises to Jones prior to the override election. "I had the feeling the reason he was there was just to make us aware of the problem — the way we left it was if the override isn't approved you come back to us," Luboviski said.

Jones has said if the override levy were defeated it would cause sharp cutbacks in school services, including:

- Firing 20 percent of the district's teachers.
- Cutting text books and supply funding by 90 percent.
- An end to almost all extracurricular activities.
- Suspending all purchases or replacement of equipment with the exception of one school bus.

Disabled organizations planning nationwide action

Local DAV group joins protest over proposed VA cuts

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Veterans throughout the country will be penalized by the loss of benefits under cuts currently proposed by the administration. So says Henry Lytle, service officer and commander of the Stradley Chapter, Disabled American Veterans in Twin Falls.

Lytle said Thursday his and other veteran organizations are urging veterans to become informed on the proposals and to write their senators and congressmen for help.

"They have forgotten all about us," he said. "We were good enough to fight for our country, but the benefits we earned are being taken away from us."

He said the major veteran facility in Idaho, the Veterans Administration Hospital in Boise, is not scheduled for closure at this time.

"But you never know. If it should close, I don't know what veterans here would do. Many of those most disabled can hardly get that far from home now for their medical treatment," he said.

Proposed reduction in veteran facilities and benefits will be among the major topics discussed in the upcoming Idaho DAV convention here June 4, 5 and 6 at the Holiday Inn.

Lytle said Norman E. Hartnett, national director of services for the DAV, will be speaking in Twin Falls.

"He has asked that we take our story to the public and our appeals to our congressional delegates," Lytle said. "Lytle said information was received from Hartnett following an April 13 briefing of veterans service officers by Dorothy Starbuck, Veterans Administration chief of benefits director. The President is proposing a reorganization of claims processing and loan guarantee procedures, which Lytle said would reduce benefits available to veterans and make them more difficult to obtain."

Hartnett wrote that both disability and death benefits would be significantly decreased under the administration proposal.

He also said VA contact offices in nine major cities in the nation would be closed and personnel reduced. Contract offices are scheduled to close Sept. 30 with personnel in the contact office and VA medical facilities reassigned to regional offices where possible.

There are currently no contact office closures contemplated in the proposal, but under the reorganization proposal only one would serve the western area. Tugboat for the western office is being considered for Seattle, Portland or San Clemente, Calif.

Who are those guys?

POCATELLO — Evidence suggests Shoshoni Indians are not responsible for most archaeological sites in southern Idaho, according to an Idaho State University researcher.

Robert Butler, curator of archaeology at the Idaho Museum of Natural History, said he has analyzed data regarding cultural artifacts previously thought to indicate Shoshonean "trapping people" were in southern Idaho at least 8,000 years ago. However, Butler believes the artifacts found in the Snake River Plain and in the Lemhi Mountains were mistakenly identified as Shoshonean. No conclusive evidence exists to indicate a Shoshonean presence much before the middle of the 18th century, he said.

Palladas plan discussed

IDAHOA FALLS — Officials of the Water and Power Resources Service met this week with Idaho Falls-area residents to discuss emergency preparedness below Palladas Dam.

The probability of failure of Palladas Dam is extremely small, according to a WPRS spokesman, but the briefings in several eastern Idaho communities were part of a nationwide effort to prepare inundation maps and preparedness plans for all federal dams whose failure would endanger human life or cause substantial property damage.

Women's meeting Saturday

BOISE — The Idaho Commission on Women's Programs is co-sponsoring a conference tailored for working women Saturday at Boise State University.

The program will focus on preparing women for the psychological and emotional challenges of moving into and up in business.

A second conference, to be held in June, will focus on skills useful to the "displaced homemaker," or the women who, due to widowhood or divorce, must enter the job market after years of dependence on husbands. The program will be co-sponsored with the Center for New Directions at the College of Southern Idaho.

Boise bank robbed

BOISE (UPI) — Boise, Idaho, and Ada County sheriff's officers were searching Boise Thursday for two men who escaped this morning from the Ada County jail.

A third escapee, Justin Chance, who is charged with armed robbery, was taken into custody by officers shortly after the jailbreak, said Ada County Sheriff Chuck Palmer.

Palmer said the men escaped through wire netting over the top of the jail's exercise yard. The escape was discovered during a periodic check by officers of the exercise area.

The sheriff said the three men stole a vehicle from the parking lot of the Ada County Public Safety Building, where the jail is housed. Another vehicle was stolen by the escapees a few blocks away, Palmer said. One of the vehicles had been recovered.

The other two men were identified as Nathan Crispin, who was being held on a probation violation on a murder charge in Utah; and Robert Morgan, who is charged with kidnapping, burglary, and use of a firearm in the commission of a felony, Palmer said.

Medicaid funds repaid

BOISE (UPI) — Repayment of $122,531 in Medicaid money to the federal government by the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare was announced Thursday by agency director Milton Klein.

A claim for the funds was made against the state after the department paid nursing homes a $135 profit incentive per day for each Medicaid patient. The bonus was paid from 1974 to 1976.

But the federal Health and Human Services declared the payment violated Medicaid regulations.

About 60 percent of Idaho's Medicaid bill is paid by the federal government and it is this percent of the $1.35 payment that was questioned. The extra payment to nursing homes was stopped by Klein when he became director of the state agency in 1976.

Birds of Prey suit dismissal still sought by government

BOISE (UPI) — U.S. government attorneys have renewed efforts for dismissal of a lawsuit which challenges former Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus' withdrawal of acreage for an expanded birds of prey area in southwestern Idaho.

Sagebrush-Rebellion Inc. earlier this month amended its lawsuit over creation of the raptor refuge to include Andrus' executive order, which withdrew almost 490,000 acres inside the proposed area from agricultural development. The group contends Andrus violated national law and the U.S. Constitution by withdrawing the acreage without public hearings.

While attorneys for Interior Secretary James Watt and Bureau of Land Management officials initially did not oppose the Sagebrush group in its efforts to include Andrus' action in the suit, they renewed efforts this week to have the entire case dismissed.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Jeffery Ring asked for dismissal of the case, contending the organization has no legal claim and lacks standing to bring the suit. He also says the court doesn't have jurisdiction over the case because the issue is pending before Congress.

The government's motion to dismiss the case joins another motion filed by the National Audubon Society, which has entered the lawsuit on behalf of the U.S. government.

That organization contends Andrus' order was perfectly legal and says the Sagebrush group is a "political advocacy organization created with the intent and purpose of promoting transfer of valuable federal lands from public control, use and management to private ownership for personal gain."

A Great Way To Start Your Day

Several proven horses forced out of Derby

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI) — At the tender age of 21, Larry Barrera hasn't been on this earth quite long enough to know how cruel fate can be. On a sunny Thursday morning at Churchill Downs, he found out the hard way.

All Barrera wanted was a chance to realize a dream that has served to motivate him for years. He wanted a chance to run a horse in the Kentucky Derby. A victory would have been sweet, but not absolutely necessary. Barrera simply wanted to be involved in the great chase for the roses.

With his chin resting heavily in the palms of his hands, the tears began to well in Barrera's eyes and his voice, tinged with a trace of bitterness, began to crack after the 20 starters for Saturday's 107th Kentucky Derby were announced Thursday morning.

A 7-year-old rule limiting the Derby field to 20 had been invoked for the first time. Seven years ago, in the 100th running of the Derby, 23 starters went to the gate and turned the race into a stampede. Barrera, who trains Flying Nashua, was 21st in line for this year's edition.

In order to pare the field to 20, Churchill Downs officials decided to use career earnings to determine who will run. When Wayward Lass, the only filly in the field, was entered early Thursday morning, Flying Nashua was bumped from the chase.

"There are so many expenses you have to incur to get here," said Barrera. "As sure as I'm standing here, I can't believe that filly will run in the Derby. I think the race track is embarrassing itself."

Trainer John Campo, who drew the No. 7 post for Pleasant Colony, put his arm around the young Barrera and tried his best to comfort him.

"I don't like the rule," answered Barrera. "I think it stinks. I don't like the way it's written."

Barrera wasn't the only trainer who felt the wrath of the Churchill Downs rulebook and Wayward Lass drew the disastrous 20th post. The filly may well be scratched from the Derby to run today's Kentucky Oaks. It would be difficult enough to repeat Genuine Risk's Kentucky miracle of a year ago, but to try it from the outside post in a field of 20 would be nothing short of ludicrous.

The filly's trainer, Jose Martin, will confer with Wayward Lass' owners and a decision will be made by this morning. Should they scratch the filly, no replacements can be made.

Fred Wirth, who trains local favorite Mythical Ruler, was also forced out of the race. So was Law Me, an Ed McClain trained colt who stood little chance in a race of this class.

"I think the people who should think they were shafted are the three major horses that got thrown out," said Wirth. "Some people think to run in the Derby is an honor. Others obviously don't. There's going to be a lot of (local) people disappointed."

Disappointment was not the order of the day for Campo and Stanley Hough, who trains 2-1 favorite Proud Appeal. Hough was "pissed as can be" when his colt drew the fifth post. "That's what we were looking for," he said. "It's real honey-suckle."

Splendid Spruce, the West Coast Invader whose last outing was a victory in the Santa Anita Derby, drew the No. 1 post at 15-1.

Golden Derby will leave from the No. 2 hole under Julio Espinoza and has been entered as a coupling with Proud Appeal at 2-1. Partner, under Sandy Hawley, is 10-1 out of the No. 3 post and is one of seven field horses.

If all 20 starters leave the gate, the gross value of the Derby will be $392,900.

Cure the Blues with Willie Shoemaker in the Irons is one of the Kentucky Derby favorites. It's odds were 9-2 Thursday.

Trainer calls move unfair

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI) — Fred Wirth, trainer of one of the horses barred from the Kentucky Derby by Churchill Downs, denounced the move Thursday as unfair.

The 50-year-old Wirth, who has never had a Derby mount, suggested that some of the horses in Saturday's field didn't have the racing credentials to merit eligibility in the Run for the Roses.

"I think the people who should think they were shafted are the three major horses that got thrown out," said Wirth, whose colt Mythical Ruler had developed into a hometown favorite among Derby-wise Louisville racing fans.

"Some people think to run in the Derby is an honor," added Wirth, who said participation in the Derby should depend instead on racing quality.

"This horse has squashed his opposition," said Wirth, noting that Mythical Ruler — winner of both the Spiral Stakes at Latonia and the Stepping Stone purse at Churchill Downs — has hosted Derby entries Classic Go Go, Television Studio and Golden Derby.

Two other Derby hopefuls — Law Me and Splendid Spruce — in the Blue Grass at Keeneland and Santa Vicente stakes winner Flying Nashua — also were barred from the Derby by the track, which entered the 20-horse field on the basis of most career earnings.

Larry Barrera, trainer of Flying Nashua, appeared close to tears after Churchill Downs racing secretary Lou Dolan announced that the 20-horse limit indeed had been reached.

"I think the race track is embarrassing itself," said 21-year-old Barrera, who was hugged by the outspoken trainer of Derby entry Pleasant Colony, John "Fat Man" Campo of New York.

Minico wins, can tie Bruins

BOCATELLO — Minico defeated Bocatello 1-0 Thursday afternoon to put itself in a position to grab at least a share of the Gem State Conference baseball crown.

The Spartans, 9-2, can insure a title share with a win at Bonneville today. If the Spartans win and Twin Falls loses its final league game Saturday, Minico would today means Twin Falls could do no worse than tie for first place.

Ken Parkin hit two home runs, his fifth and sixth of the season, Thursday to help the Spartans' drive. Jeff Schow added two triples.

The Spartans jumped to a 4-0 lead in the top of the first inning. Schow tripled in Lynn VanEvery for the first run before Parkin hit a two-run homer to right.

Renese Smith, who relieved Chris Johnson in the third inning, gained the pitching win.

Ed Beckstead will pitch against Bonneville today.

Rockets celebrate rise to NBA finals

HOUSTON (UPI) — The Houston Rockets, who spent the regular season boring fans and stumbling to a 40-42 record, flew home Thursday with the reward for their loyal followers: the NBA Western Conference Championship.

"We finally did it," exulted veteran guard Calvin Murphy surrounded by a small crowd of fans at Intercontinental Airport. "We realize that we're Western Conference Champions, and we're on the way to a World Championship."

Murphy said the Rockets and their coaches spent most of the night partying after they beat the Kansas City Kings 97-88 Wednesday at Kansas City to take the best-of-seven series in five games.

"I hope the guys take a little better care of themselves tonight than they did last night and ensuing nights, but last night was a night for enjoying, reflecting, telling lies and bragging," Coach Del Harris said.

Cheerleader Billy Paulz said winning was "just really very satisfying" and felt "excited and confident. We've done it before and we feel we'll do it one more time."

Harris — whose team has played in the shadow of the more successful football Oilers and baseball Astros, but was first to bring a world championship series home — had yet to absorb the Rockets' new status.

"I'm still working on a little more," Harris said. "It's great. We feel that everybody's worked awfully hard for it."

"People say, 'Well, are you surprised?' Well, not when we've invested the time and energy we've invested. We know what we've had to do to get here."

The Rockets will face either Philadelphia or Boston, who are battling for the Eastern Conference Championship. Philadelphia leads that best-of-seven series 3-2. Their next game is tonight in Philadelphia.

"We didn't beat either of them in the regular season," Center Moses Malone said in the Korper Arena locker room after the game. "But it will be different this time. We didn't back in here. We got here by playing ball."

Paulz said he wanted Philadelphia to win so the NBA Championship series could begin Sunday, leaving the 76ers only Saturday to prepare.

Philly vows to overcome late pitfalls

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — The Philadelphia 76ers insist they're not going to be haunted by the last two minutes of the game that gave new life to the Boston Celtics in the NBA Eastern Conference finals.

But the 76ers realize very well they could have spent Thursday preparing for the start of the league championship series against the Houston Rockets rather than another grinding, emotional physical contest against the rejuvenated Celtics.

"What's done is done," Sixers center Darryl Dawkins said, looking ahead to Friday night's sixth game of the best-of-seven series at the Spectrum. "You can't worry about it. We would have liked to win (Game 5) but we didn't. They worked real hard and deserved to win."

Down six points with 1:51 remaining Wednesday night, the Celtics recovered with some frantic defensive play and clutch free throw shooting by M.L. Carr. They won 111-109, to stay alive and prevent a five-game wipeout by Philadelphia for the second straight year.

The Sixers, who have pulled out of wins of one and two points in this series, turned the ball over four times and missed two shots in the final 1:51.

"We could have had this one but we didn't," said Bobby Jones, who missed the 76ers' last shot with seven seconds left. "We'll just have to work that much harder Friday. I expect another game like this. I think we'll have the crowd behind us then, which should pump us up a little more."

Philadelphia Coach Billy Cunningham was concurred — but not alarmed — by the late collapse.

"stretch," he said. "They really hit the boards at the end and we can't afford to let that happen again. We just have to go get them Friday. We won't dwell on this."

The Celtics picked a tough place to stage off elimination one they will be looking to break on 4-11 1979 at the Spectrum that dates back to January 1979. They came close last Sunday before falling 107-105.

If the Celtics can break the Spectrum jinx, the seventh and deciding game will be played Sunday at Boston Garden.

Philadelphia guard Maurice Cheeks, who played just 10 minutes due to sinus headaches, was examined Thursday morning at Temple University Hospital and later practiced with the team. He is expected to play tonight.

Carey boys, Camas girls win Northside track titles easily

CAREY—There were no major surprises in the Northside Conference track finals Thursday.

The Carey boys overpowered their competitor while the Camas County girls flooded its side with depth to win handily.

Carey had double winners in Troy Murray, both hurdles, and freshman Mattie Conner who won a pair of field events. Jim Exon of Richfield doubled up in the 200-meter dash and triple jump.

But the big point winner was Bliss senior Russ Presley who took three firsts and a second to account for all but eight of the Bears' 46 points.

Presley was credited with conference records in winning the 400-meter dash in 53.4 and he ripped the long jump at 23.92. He placed upper in the first in the 100-meter dash but had to settle for second behind Exon in the triple jump.

In the girls division, Glenda Fowers won three for Dietrich, taking the high hurdles, shotput and high jump while Carey's Susan Shaffer had a rare double in winning the 3200-meter run and shotput.

The meet completed the regular season for the participating teams which now are pointed toward track in Coeur d'Alene. There will be a meet against the other 12 A schools in district preliminaries, starting at 4 p.m. Wednesday in Bruln field. Preliminaries are planned for all races through the 400-meter dash, including hurdles, and all the relays except for the mile.

The only champions to be established Wednesday will be in the 3200-meter run.

The field event finals will start at 9 a.m. Saturday with the running finals about 1:30 p.m. The top finishers will advance to state the following week in Boise.

CSI women set records, qualify for nationals in victory at TVCC

ONTARIO, Ore. — School records and national qualifying marks overshadowed the CSI women's victory in the Treasure Valley Invitational Thursday.

The 400 and 1600-meter relay teams set school records and qualified for nationals in 49.2 and 3:57.25, respectively. The national qualifying marks were set in the 400-meter relay, the previous year in the national finals in any school records were provided by Karen Sobotka with a 1:23.35 in the 100; Susan Sweet with a 2:17.91 in the 200; and Jeannie Robinson with a 4:56.44 in the 400.

The CSI women dominated the meet, securing 77 points against NNC's 37, Treasure Valley 28, Eastern Oregon 24 and a partial Boise State team at 10.

The Eagles swept the top three places in two events. Sobotka led Ginger Proctor and Kathy Dolzal across the line in 23.7, the 200 and Jeannie Robinson with a personal best of 59.3 in the quarter, chased across by Proctor and Kathy Dolzal.

Robinson finished second in the 1500 despite her school record with Tammy Jacqueline collecting third in the 1500.

Michelle Durkin ran the intermediate hurdles in 65.58, her best of the year but a half-second off national qualifying. Sweet similarly was a half second away in the half mile.

In the field events, Laurie Larsen won the javelin at 135 with Laurie Hart fourth and the 200-pound-up second in the long jump at 16.5.

"The girls really had a super day," said Coach Kar Kleinkopf. "But despite that, I think they all can do better next week (in nationals). Our 1600-meter relay team has a 3:57.25 and we can continue to point that down. Nationals was won in 3:55.1 last year and I not sure but this bunch can't get it down there."

Members of the 1600 relay were Sobotka, Kathy Dolzal, Proctor and Sweet. Qualifying in the shorter event were Sobotka, Proctor, Liz Dolzal and Durkin.

"We have five qualified for nationals and some of them run on our relays so we have several events we're eligible in," Kleinkopf pointed out. "I feel certain that Susan and Michelle can get a half second off their time in nationals."

He said the men and women's teams will leave Twin Falls Wednesday for the region in finals slated Friday and Saturday in Albany, Ore.

With the bases loaded, Grubb—who extended his hitting streak to 12 games—singled home Wills and Mickey Rivers. Putnam followed with his second double of the game to score Buddy Bell and Grubb.

Kansas City reliever Ronie Marlin gave up a run in the sixth on a sacrifice fly by Wills. The final run came in the seventh on a balk by Paul Spillertoff, scoring pinch runner Bill Steiner.

At Baltimore, hot-hitting Ken Singleton belted his second homer and Mike Flanagan, 2-2, fired a three-inning lead-off homer. Singleton hit a 490-foot homer in the eighth, leading the Orioles to a 4-2 victory over the Yankees.

At Cincinnati, Mike LaCoss, Joe Price and Tom Hume combined on a five-hitter and Dave Collins collected three hits to help his Angels overcome a 2-0 deficit in marking the Reds' triumph at Cincinnati.

LaCoss, 1-2, who had yielded 10 hits and 10 runs in eight previous innings of work, blanked the Padres for six innings before pinch hitter Joe

At Cleveland, Toby Harrah belted a two-run homer and Bo Diaz raced to second on a throwing error by catcher Jim Frazier in the seventh inning that enabled the Indians to defeat the White Sox. Rick Waits, 3-0, got the win while Ross Baumgarten, 2-2, took the loss.

At Boston, Gary Ward, Roy Smalley and Glenn Adams each had a two-run homer in the victory and extend the Red Sox' losing streak to four games.

At Seattle, Dave Rozema pitched a two-hitter and Lance Parrish and John Wickett scored in first-inning runs to power the Mariners to an eighth-inning jam and Hume took over in the ninth to get his third save.

At New York, Tim Lincecum drove in three runs and winning pitcher John Candalaria batted in a pair to help the Pirates hand the Mets their sixth straight loss. In sweeping the three games, Pittsburgh outscored New York 2-4, 1-2, scattered 10 hits over 8 2/3 innings before leaving it favored the Kent Batcher. Tekuldt walked the only batter he faced and Grant Jackson came on to get the final out and notch his first save. Dave Parker homered for Pittsburgh.

Rangers blank Royals again

The Texas Rangers' pitchers continued their misery ways Thursday night, blanking the Kansas City Royals for their fourth straight shutout—one game away from tying a league record.

Rick Honeycutt pitched a five-hitter and Johnny Grubb and Pat Putnam drove in two runs each in the fifth inning, helping the Rangers to a 4-0 victory over the Royals. Combined with shutouts in a three-game sweep of Boston, Rangers pitchers have 36 straight scoreless innings.

The AL record for consecutive games and 54 innings, set by the 1974 Orioles.

Texas took a 1-0 lead in the third, when Bump Wills doubled home Billy Sample, who had opened the inning with a lead-off homer. Grubb, 2-1, followed with a two-run homer and Pat Putnam added a two-run homer in the fifth. Grubb, 2-2, struck out two and walked one to notch his third complete game.

Reynolds gave the Astros a 3-0 lead, when he homered off Tommy Boggs, 1-3, in the first inning following a leadoff walk to Denny Walling. A run-scoring single by Cesar Cedeno and a two-run homer by Cruz gave the Astros a 5-0 lead in the third.

The New York Islanders outplayed the New York Rangers for two periods Thursday night, but it was the Stanley Cup champion Islanders who left the rink as winners.

Butch Goring scored twice—once while short-handed. An early three-goal period that gave the Islanders a 3-0 victory over the Rangers and a 2-0 lead in games in their Stanley Cup semifinal playoff series.

The best-of-seven NHL series now switches to Madison Square Garden for Games 3 and 4.

In the other NHL semifinal game, Calgary beat Minnesota 3-2 to even their series at one game each.

With the Rangers leading 3-1 on first-period goals by Kevin Stumpf, Dean Talafous and Anders Hedberg, the Islanders erupted for three goals in a span of 4:33 to take a lead they never lost.

Islanders beat Rangers in third

Besides Goring, Mike Bossy scored for a 4-3 lead. Clark Gillies, Anders Kallur and Bossy scored insurance goals for the Islanders in the third period, with Kallur's coming short-handed. Wayne Merrick scored the first Islanders goal.

Bossy scored the second of his goals at 10:21 off a neat passing play, with Mike McEwen and Denis Potvin for his ninth playoff goal.

The Islanders took a 4-3 lead at 4:44 of the second, when Goring pounced upon the rebound of a Gord Lane shot and sent a 5-foot forehead shot past Bunker.

In the third, Gillies capped a power play with his sixth playoff goal at 12:59 and Kallur scored his second goal of a Bryan Trottier feed at 14:27.

Briefly in sports

Dallas wins NBA coin flip

NEW YORK (UPI) — Short of an opportunity to draft a needed big man when Ralph Sampson opted to remain at Virginia, the Dallas Mavericks, by virtue of winning a coin flip Thursday, zeroed in on star undergraduates Isaiah Thomas, Mark Aguirre and Buck Williams for their No. 1 pick in the June 9 NBA draft.

Dallas won the toss without uttering a sound. Commissioner Lawrence O'Brien tossed a silver dollar into the air and Detroit Pistons General Manager Jack McCalloskey called "heads." The coin came up tails for the fifth straight year in flipping for first draft rights.

Detroit will get the second pick.

Soph Miller fires one-hitter

TWIN FALLS — Brock Miller tossed a one-hitter and had three hits to lead the Twin Falls High School sophomore baseball team to a 12-1 win over Burley Thursday.

Miller fanned 12 Burley batters and had a double. Shawn Humbler was also three-for-four as the two combined for six of Twin Falls' 11 hits.

The sophomores, 16-2 this season, will host Highland in a twinbill at noon Saturday.

Allison gains Winston pole

TALLADEGA, Ala. (UPI) — Bobby Allison, making the fourth qualifying run of the day on his home track Thursday, edged Buddy Baker to capture the pole position for Sunday's $347,000 Winston 500.

Allison, who won the pole position in the Daytona 500 in February, topped the 2.66-mile Alabama International Motor Speedway in a down-sized Buick in an average speed of 195.864 mph.

Baker, the Winston 500 defending champion, turned in the second fastest qualifying time, also in a Buick, with an average speed of 195.269 mph. He will be in the outside front row for Sunday's race.

Allison, who leads the Winston-Cup championship point race, had a time of 48.891 seconds, while Baker drove his fastest lap in 49.055 seconds.

Rookie Mike Alexander, a short track racer driving a Buick, qualified third at 194.523 mph and was followed in fourth place by Dale Earnhardt. Earnhardt, the 1979 Rookie of the Year, drove his Pontiac around the super-fast speedway at an average of 194.504 mph.

Feds trailing antler thieves

GARDINER, Mont. (UPI) — Federal agents on the trail of persons they say may have stolen elk antlers from Yellowstone National Park have raided homes and businesses at Gardiner, Livingston and Ennis, Mont.

There were no arrests in the raids Thursday, but National Park Service rangers and agents said grand jury indictments may result, one horn buyer was quoted as saying.

Elk antlers are in high demand in the Orient, where they are considered "a powerful aphrodisiac. Elk are often slaughtered for their antlers, and entrepreneurs find value in horns that have dropped naturally.

Within the park, antler "drops" are considered a part of the natural ecosystem and cannot by law be removed. But scavengers can get 50 cents a pound for old horns and $4 to $5 a pound for fresh antlers, officials said.

At Billings, Mont., Assistant U.S. Attorney

Robert Zimmerman would not confirm the raids on two homes at Gardiner, immediately north of the park, and on a commercial warehouse at Livingston and a business at Ennis.

Walker nixes Montreal bid

ATHENS, Ga. (UPI) — Herscher Walker, an All-American tailback in his first season at the University of Georgia, Thursday turned down an offer from the Montreal Alouettes to pass up his remaining three years of college and play in the Canadian Football League.

"I have made my decision which is to play football at Georgia," Walker said in a prepared statement. "I was born in America and I does not seem right to leave the country to play professional football.

"My parents said the decision was up to me but they helped me a great deal in seeing that you shouldn't have to leave the country to make a living and I appreciate their support."

Seattle inks 16 free agents

SEATTLE (UPI) — The Seattle Seahawks have signed 16 free agents, including University of Washington tight end David Bayle, the club announced Thursday.

A two-year starter, Bayle played in both the Sun Bowl and Rose Bowl during his career. Prior to joining the Huskies, Bayle played two seasons at Pasadena City College.

In addition to Bayle, the Seahawk free agent signings included: quarterback Mike Tice of Maryland; running backs Harry Sydney of Kansas, Bill Fern of Illinois State and Dan Boonhower of Kearney State; and wide receivers Paul Johns of Tulsa, Al Laubenthal of Dayton, Jeffrey Postell of Morehouse and Ken Thompson of Utah State.

Bruin netters split with Wood River

HALLEY — Twin Falls High School concluded its first tennis season in some 20 years Thursday afternoon with a 6-6 tie against Wood River High.

The Bruins swept the boys' singles and won two of the three girls' singles but had trouble in doubles play.

"We finish (the regular season) with two wins, three ties and three losses and that's a super start for season," Twin Falls Coach Clovis Johnson said. "We nearly won today. Last time we split with Wood River."

Indy opens Saturday

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — Controversy may take a back seat to competition this year when the madness surrounding the Indianapolis 500 gets underway Saturday at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway.

A record 105 entries were received by Speedway President John R. Cooper for this year's race, and the list is a very impressive collection of racing names.

Besides seven former champions — A.J. Foyt, Al Unser, Bobby Unser, Mario Andretti, Tom Snead, George Rick Meares and defending champion Johnny Rutherford — the group includes 20 rookies. Some of the rookies, like Rich Vogler and Steve Chassey, have forged strong records in other U.S. Auto Club divisions and are creating an air of anticipation around Gasoline Alley.

The track opens for practice Saturday. Time trials are scheduled for the weekends of May 9-10 and May 16-17, and the race will be held May 24.

The garage area is going to be very crowded, but Speedway officials have said that all teams seriously battling for spots in the 33-car field will have garage space.

"Everybody's going to have a garage and there won't be anyone outside," said Speedway superintendent Charlie Thompson. "We had some teams outside Gasoline Alley a couple of years ago because we had some people with garages who didn't have any intention of racing."

Things seldom remain constant at the Speedway, and this year is no exception. Last year the USA allowed cars to have skirts, which hung below the car tub and created a vacuum, pushing the car down and allowing it to corner faster.

This year the USAC has said nothing can hang below the tub of the car, and that may make the race a little more dangerous.

"It's a completely different ballgame without them and it's not nearly as safe," Rutherford said.

Besides being more difficult to handle, most cars are designed for ground-effects with skirts because the USAC's rival organization, Championship Auto Racing Teams (CART), allows skirts for its 1981 season.

The nature of the race will change even more next year, when USAC will allow only stock block engines.

Close games mark play on diamonds

TWIN FALLS — Several games were decided by close scores in Thursday's Twin Falls City League softball play.

In men's play Ron Blake hit two homers and two doubles in five trips and batted in four runs only to see his team, Club 93, fall to Corner Pocket 19-15.

House of Beans took a 16-15 win over IMCJC. Pennys—Rolando—Sallinas and Gilbert Sanchez each had three hits for the losing squad while Ken Reeves had four hits for the winners.

In a not so close game, Coors of Magic Valley drowned Filer Mug & Jug 12-2. John Bryant had four hits, including a homer, for Coors while Mike Sheller had two singles for the losing squad.

Southern Idaho Teasing received four singles from Larry Beasley in a 9-8 win over Kentucky Fried Chicken. Terry Sheppard led KFC with a homer and single.

In women's action it was Pepsi Cola over Budweiser 7-5. George K's getting past Payless 12-9 and Coors defeating Twin Falls Merchants 11-6.

Several games reports were turned in to the Times-News Thursday night without scores or other information needed for publication.

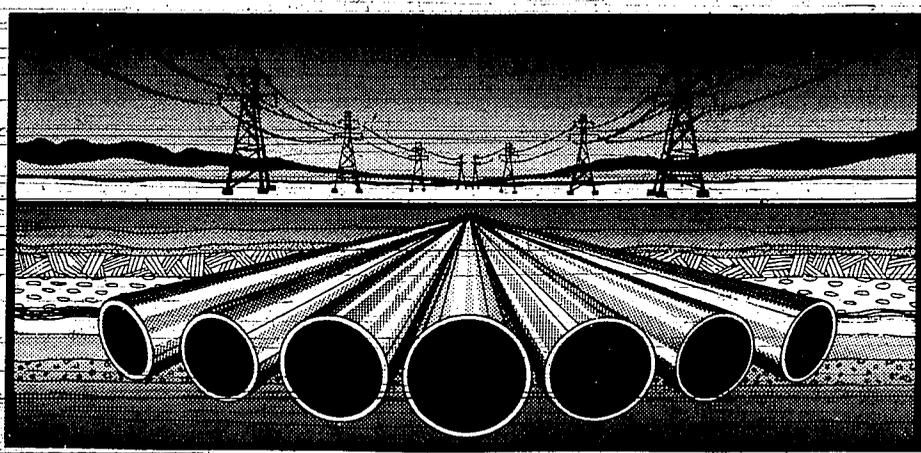

Idaho's surplus of natural gas can offset Idaho's shortage of electricity.

Intermountain has a surplus of natural gas that could be used efficiently to heat Idaho homes and business buildings. In fact, the available gas not being used could heat 100,000 more Idaho homes.

On the other hand, Idaho is facing a shortage of electricity according to authorities, so it should be used for space heating. It could cost a billion dollars to build new thermal power plants to heat that many more homes with electricity, and rates would increase dramatically. If won't be necessary to build as many new power plants if we use natural gas for heating and water heating.

Intermountain's distribution system is already in place and can deliver this surplus gas to all major communities in southern Idaho with little expansion in plant or facilities. We would then be conserving precious electricity for higher priority uses like power requirements for our industry, new jobs and essential electrical service in our homes.

The balanced use of energy will cost you less in the long run.

Handsome faces winning male acting roles

BY VERNON SCOTT
UPI Hollywood Reporter

HOLLYWOOD — There was a time in movieland when all leading men were handsome and all their leading ladies beautiful.

Well, almost all.

In the '30s, '40s and '50s — the movies' golden years — there were film likes of Gary Grant, George Cooper, Clark Gable, Robert Taylor, Tyrone Power, Errol Flynn, Ronald Colman, Gregory Peck. An endless list.

Not all the celluloid heroes were descendants of Adonis. There were also Paul Muni, Spencer Tracy, John Garfield, Wallace Bery and Jimmy Cagney, to be sure.

But the better looking the actor, the better the chance for movie stardom in those glamorous days.

Then along came the '60s and '70s. The handsome profiles diminished. Enter Dustin Hoffman, Al Pacino, Robert De Niro, Anthony Quinn, Lee Marvin, Rod Taylor, George C. Scott.

This is not to imply that any of these gentlemen are less than good looking by contemporary male standards of beauty. But they are not in danger of winning Mr. America awards.

Psychologically, it is thought male audiences can more easily identify with a rugged-looking guy and that women are less intimidated by heroes who aren't prettier than they are.

Also, Hollywood finally concluded that less-than-handsome men were better actors who got so pretty — or ugly — as Ernest Borgnine, Tracy, Steiger and Marvin — were winning Oscars and pretty boys were not.

There is, moreover, a certain satisfaction among ordinary-looking guys — in theaters and among TV viewers who are homeily, undernourished, character-figures — a tall, muscular handsome guy.

Thus the heavies for a long time were tall, square-shouldered, blue-eyed blood types taking their drubbings from short, dark guys with prominent noses.

Now interest seems to be turning in favor of handsome guys again. Perhaps it is the dawn of a new era in which good-looking actors will no longer lose roles simply because they could pose for collar ads.

Television seems to be leading the way with John Schneider in "Dukes of Hazzard," Robert Ulrich in "Vegas," Gil Gerard in "Buck Rogers" and Tom Selleck in "Magnum P.I."

Selleck might have been identified as a perfect example of "beefcake" had he come along a generation earlier.

He is a big man — 6-foot-4, 200 pounds — with a square jaw, hazel eyes, a straight nose and, well, the son-of-a-gun is handsome enough to make the rest of the male population want to punch out his lights.

His effect on the gentler sex might be compared with Bo Derek's impact on men.

During this past decade of ordinary leading men, Selleck remained frustrated, turned back time — and again — from good roles because he was bigger than the leading man and better to look at than the leading lady.

In a period of seven years he made five pilots for television Series, none of which succeeded. "I rarely worked in episodic TV shows," Selleck said. "They kept telling me I was too tall. And every time I did a pilot it tied me up for a full year. I wasn't able to make a commitment to another series."

Magnum P.I. has been in the Top 20 in the Nielsen most of the season, often bouncing up into the top 10.

The show is set in Hawaii with Selleck playing a tough ex-Navy intelligence officer-turned-private investigator battling the bad guys.

"I love working in Hawaii and I'd like to make it my permanent home base. Maybe, if I had another occupation... I might get island fever, rock happy, but as an actor I can spend eight or nine months there and enjoy every minute.

"The main problem is our work schedule. We put in 80-hour weeks over there, six days a week. I don't don't mind. It's finally in a hit show and that's what counts."
