Bell blasts local education quality

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Education Secretary Terrel Bell said Sunday that local school boards are "mainly responsible" for poor education.

He also said he believes busing to achieve desegregation is a mistake.

In an interview, Terrell reiterated President Reagan's intention to abolish his department.

Asked why the quality of education is so mediocre in many public schools, Terrell responded: "Local school boards are main[ly] responsible. The quality of [lead]ership on many city school boa[rds] has declined sharply in the last 10 years."

He said the boards are not "doing their duty in this country by setting less-than-rigorous standards."

The single most important priority for schools is discipline, not in conduct of students, but "mastery of an area of learning."

"We're all a bit inclined to slide here's not a standard out there to reach for."

Terrell urged a return to basics and fewer "social items" on the school agenda.

"There's too much time on social items in school — driver training [and] pep club and many other [thi]ngs except the central purpose [for] which the schools were created [in] first place."

Terrell defended Reagan's proposed cuts of 25 percent in education expenditures, but conceded the reductions will be "painful" and absorbed mainly by low-income and inner city children.

But, he said, the federal government provides only 8 percent of the money to schools and the 25 percent reduction amounts only to 2 percent of their total revenues. He declined to say "unequivocally" that additional cuts would not be made in 1983 and 1984.

As to the future of his department, Terrell said Reagan feels "creation of the department was a mistake, and we are committed to shifting the department to a non-Cabinet-level position in the government."

Bell said he favors limited tax credits for private schools, and disputed charges that such a credit would hurt the public school population.

"I don't believe the public schools will go down the drain or that there's going to be a mass exodus from the public schools."

Terrell said he does not plan any initiatives and will dissuade the Office for Civil Rights from initiating suits on busing.

He said busing is "victimizing the schools" and "making them try to correct a problem that others have caused over many years."

Budget's real size unknown

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The federal government is budgeted to spend $695 billion next fiscal year.

Or is it $715 billion? Or $725 billion?

A federal budget can be whatever people assume it to be. Budget figures are based on economic assumptions, and there are widely different opinions on which assumptions are correct.

The figure of $695 billion is used by President Reagan and Congress, with minor differences after the decimal point, for spending in fiscal year 1982, which begins Oct. 1 of this year.

But Robert Hartman, an economist with the Brookings Institution, told a seminar last week that even if all the program cuts scheduled by Reagan and Congress are made, actual spending will be $20 billion to $30 billion higher than they project.

Hartman is not alone. Data Resources Inc. and Chase Econometrics, two private forecasting firms, have come up with figures similar to his. The Congressional Budget Office estimated the Reagan budget actually will cost $721 billion.

Several differences in economic assumptions lie behind these spending figures. The most important is interest rates. The Congressional Budget Office says interest rates higher than the administration projects are likely to add $8 billion to interest the government pays on the national debt.

The administration based its budget figures on a sharp decline in interest rates, which it says will occur as the financial world perceives inflation dropping and no longer tacks "inflation premiums" to interest charges.

The Brookings institute contends that administration projections for expanded economic growth, combined with a tighter money policy by the Federal Reserve — which the administration supports — are likely to result in higher interest rates.

Other differing assumptions involve the rate of economic growth, which affects tax collections, and the inflation rate, which affects the cost of Social Security and other programs indexed to price levels.

Hartman said congressional use of what he sees as unrealistic estimates raises the danger that Congress may base its tax cut on a "false notion" of what the deficit will be.

The Atlanta killings are only a small percentage of the thousands of youths killed each year

Atlanta's child murders just tip of national tragedy

Newhouse News Service

WASHINGTON — The baffling series of murders in Atlanta has aimed a spotlight into one of the darkest corners of American society — the killing of children.

The FBI reports that 2,744 Americans under age 20 were murdered in 1979, hundreds by their parents.

Many others were killed during quarrels with other youngsters and adults or during robberies, sexual assaults and other crimes.

Some child abuse experts believe the number of child murders may be substantially higher than those reported by the FBI for 1979, the latest year for which such statistics are available.

A total of about 21,000 persons were murdered in the United States that year.

Of all murders, the killing of a child may evoke the strongest emotions.

"It is they who are our future, our hopes and our dreams," says Camille Bell, mother of a slain Atlanta child and a founder of the Committee to Stop the Children's Murders.

Who would kill a child? Many victims are teen-agers, killed by a "friend" or enemy close to their own age on the streets in a brawl or gang war.

The FBI 1979 report showed:

• Quarrels or brawls led to the murders of 806 youngsters, 714 of them in the 15-to-19 age range. In this category are fights over almost anything — drugs, money, girlfriends.

• Assailants killed another 208, most 15 to 19 years old, while committing a variety of property-related crimes including robbery, burglary, larceny, car theft and narcotics offenses.

• Crimes were suspected, but not proven, as the motive in another 144 murders of young people, mostly in the upper teens.

• Another 115 died in juvenile gang battles.

• Arson claimed victims of all ages indiscriminately, including 65 ranging from infants to 19-year-olds.

Teamsters

Williams has election challenge as top boss

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — Teamsters Union dissidents pledged Sunday to issue a convention floor alternative and fight for several reforms in the union constitution.

Pete Camarata, 55, a dockworker from Detroit and the only man running against Williams for the presidency, told reporters Williams' candidacy "is a disgrace for this union."

Camarata, leader of the dissident Teamsters for a Democratic Union reform movement, said his main reason for opposing Williams was his alleged mismanagement of the Teamsters Central States Pension Fund while a trustee for 22 years.

He said Williams "turned it into a Mafia bank." Williams resigned as a trustee under pressure from the Carter administration.

In the officers' report handed out to delegates as they registered Sunday, Williams assailed union-busting efforts in industry and urged union members to become more politically active.

Although he did not mention trucking deregulation legislation in the signed statement, the formal president's report cited it as the primary example of congressional efforts against organized labor.

Williams, three other union officials and a reputed Chicago underworld figure were named May 22 in an 11-count indictment handed down by a federal grand jury in Chicago, charging they tried to bribe Sen. Howard W. Cannon, D-Nev., for favorable action on a trucking deregulation bill.

A day before the indictment, a Senate committee asked the Labor Department to force Williams to answer charges that he is controlled by organized crime and violated his responsibilities as a trustee of the Teamsters' Central States Pension Fund.

The subcommittee recommended that if Williams refuses to answer the charges adequately, the government should seek a federal court order ousting him as Teamsters president.

Trouble at home

DETROIT (UPI) — The Teamsters union is having trouble in Michigan, its home state, with declining membership and FBI investigations of its leadership.

Teamster officials in six Michigan cities are targets of federal investigations, including a reported interstate kickback scheme involving the sale of union merchandise to members at inflated prices. FBI officials declined to name those union leaders under investigation until it is completed.

The union's membership dropped 20 percent in 1980 because of the state's slumping auto industry and membership in some locals has dropped as much as 30 to 35 percent.

"Undoubtedly, it is connected with the auto industry slump. We're losing some companies we thought would be around forever," union leader Robert Holmes said.

Holmes said changes in the delivery systems in the food industry which now use "drypack" and "prepack" techniques has reduced the number of Teamster delivery jobs.

"A lot of products are coming directly to the stores," he said. In addition, he said the Teamsters are plagued nationwide by non-union truckers who ship produce and other merchandise and whose numbers have grown since the recent deregulation of the trucking industry.

Artillery fire on beaches kill scores of Beirut sunbathers

UPI

A Christian jeep fires 106mm recoilless rifle at Syrian troops

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Hundreds of sunbathers were killed or wounded in artillery barrages that hit crowded beaches near Beirut Sunday.

Inside the city, heavy fighting was reported along the string of burnt-out buildings that separates east Beirut, the stronghold of the Christian militias, from west Beirut, where the Syrian forces rule along with their Palestinian and Lebanese allies.

One police source said 20 people were killed and 270 others were wounded. Most of the day's victims were civilians — particularly "innocent" sunbathers and people strolling along the beaches of west Beirut.

Sirens of ambulances traveling back and forth to transport the victims echoed throughout the city.

The sound of explosions echoed through the city center and the Christian-run radio station said the Syrians were using mortars, rockets and tanks to bombard the eastern residential sections of the city.

The fighting and subsequent chaos eased late Sunday following a cease-fire ordered by Lebanese President Elias Sarkis.

Israeli warplanes, which on Thursday bombed Palestinian guerrilla targets south of the city, overflew Beirut and broke the sound barrier but did not attack.

It was second cease-fire in 12 hours and the 27th since the current round of intensified fighting between the Syrians and the Christians began April 1.

During the night, shells landed near the presidential palace in the suburb of Baabda as Sarkis attempted to stop the fighting.

Fighting was also reported by in the beseiged Christian city of Zahle in the Bekaa Valley, 30 miles east of Beirut. The Christian radio station said Syrian forces fired flares over the city at night and sent helicopters hovering overhead at dawn.

It was Israeli attempts to prevent the Syrians from taking Zahle that led to the introduction of the SAM missiles that created the current mideast crisis.

The Syrian government meanwhile held its first test of the nation's civil defense capabilities since 1973.

Monday briefing

Faculty will appeal layoffs

MOSCOW, Idaho (UPI) — Several faculty members scheduled to be laid off by the University of Idaho and nearby Lewis-Clark State College have submitted formal appeals.

Three tenured faculty members at the U-of-I have submitted the notices, and more may arrive by mail to administrators this week. Nineteen U-of-I faculty and staff employees, 11 of them tenured, are affected by a $420,000 budget cut in the College of Agriculture.

Appeals of the layoffs had to be postmarked Friday, 15 days after the employees first were notified of the budget cuts, which were blamed on the state Legislature. Lawmakers restricted higher-education funding this year.

Sub commander loses his job

TOKYO (UPI) — The commander of the U.S. nuclear submarine that sank a Japanese freighter in a hit-and-run collision in April has been stripped of his post, Japanese news reports said Sunday.

A spokeswoman for the U.S. Navy in Japan said there was "no information" on the reports and in Washington, Navy spokesman Cmdr. Peter Litrenta said the "investigation is still under review" and "it's premature to discuss specifics" of possible disciplinary action.

Draft authority may expire

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan probably will let authority for draft registration expire this year, although plans for a U.S. arms buildup could necessitate a future draft, it was reported Sunday.

Aside from allowing draft registration authority to expire in December, Newsweek magazine also reported Reagan has promised a sizable military pay increase in October.

Newsweek said a return to the draft is almost certain if Reagan's plans for a massive military buildup proceed on schedule, since the increase in defense spending will require at least another 200,000 enlisted personnel by the mid-1980s.

Sadat agrees to united city

CAIRO, Egypt (UPI) — President Anwar Sadat said Sunday Jerusalem should remain a united city under a joint Arab-Israeli administration and Jews Moslems and Christians should have free access to it.

Hours earlier, speaking in Jerusalem after a Cabinet meeting, Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin said: "Jerusalem is the eternal capital of Israel, one city indivisible. Free access is assured to members of all religions to their holy places in accordance with the basic law of the land since the liberation and the reunification of Jerusalem."

Blast levels Caldwell house

CALDWELL, Idaho (UPI) — An explosion flattened a wood-frame Caldwell house Sunday afternoon.

The blast scattered glass and other debris into the street and adjoining lots, authorities said. No injuries were reported.

It blew out three walls of the house, brought down the roof, rained debris up to 100 feet away and broke windows in at least two nearby residences, said Caldwell Fire Department Capt. Olen Waner.

The single-story house was headquarters of the Dial-A-Sitter Inc. child-care business. No one was in the building because the business was closed Sunday, Waner said.

Morris Chamness, 58, said he was cooking eggs in his kitchen next door to the devastated house when he heard the explosion.

"It was like a bomb blast," he said. "I'm still shaking. My wife works graveyard, and it blasted her out of bed."

Chamness said his home's picture window was shattered and glass from his house and the exploded house covered his driveway and yard. He said a flaming object from the house landed in his yard, but a neighbor with a fire extinguisher put it out.

"It just blew up, like that," he said. "At first I thought some drunk had plowed into the house. But then I looked out and the walls (of the destroyed house) were all over. One came over toward my wall and another fell out toward the street. It was a big explosion."

Waner said the explosion sparked a few minor fires on and around the property, but they were extinguished quickly.

Waner speculated the explosion could have been caused by a build-up of natural gas in the house, but he said the incident was under investigation. No foul play was suspected, however, he said.

Waner said the house was about 50 years old, although he gave no estimate of damage.

Intermountain Gas Co. and Idaho Power Co. personnel were summoned to shut off utility service, Waner said, adding that no further danger was apparent.

14.6% of all victims from sealift

Cubans keep Miami homicides up

MIAMI (UPI) — A new survey shows that 14.6 percent of all homicides in Dade County were Cuban refugees who arrived in south Florida during the sealift last year.

The survey, compiled from autopsy files and police records by the Miami Herald, covered the period between the beginning with the start of the sealift April 21, 1980, and ended March 31, 1981.

The survey showed 72 Cubans were murdered within that period, but the figures conflict with the county manager's figures that show 57 were killed during that period.

The Herald said the 72 murders constitute 14.6 percent of all homicides in Dade County within that period, but the paper gave no figures for the total homicides.

The Herald also reported that the total number of Cuban refugees killed since last Friday has reached 90. The Herald said that figure constituted 62.1 percent of all Mariel deaths from all causes during that time, but gave no total figures, and also said that was five times the percentage in the general population.

"It's mind-boggling. An astronomical number," said Dr. Joseph Davis, Dade County chief medical examiner.

"Let's face it, the sudden upsurge of homicides in this community is not within the native population."

"Mariels kill each other," agreed police Sgt. Ernie Vivian. "If we didn't have them, our murder rate should be down by one third."

Nobody seems to know exactly why the murder rate is so high. One theory is that some of the refugees who came directly from Cuban prisons aren't used to being on the outside.

"Dealing with freedom and choices is not easy, especially for those who have lived through long periods of confinement," says Maria Valdes-Berola, a psychologist who deals regularly with recent refugees.

"The level of frustration is high when they are seeing overabundance in which they don't participate," she said. "They feel marginal to society."

Murders

• Sixty-eight young rape victims were murdered — including 13 girls under 10. The list included two boys ages 10 and 18. Other sexual offenses led to 30 deaths — including four girls and three boys under 10.

• Listed only as victims of "other" circumstances were 748. That number included 348 children ranging from newborn to 4 years old, making it the largest category for children in that age group. Many, if not most, were killed by their parents.

The federal government's National Center on Child Abuse and Neglect estimates that 1,000 children are killed each year through parental abuse or neglect.

The center's director, James Harrel, believes many child murders are not recognized because they look like accidents or aren't reported even when known to friends or relations.

For the frustrated adult who slams his or her child across a room in a fit of anger, the act of murder is usually an unplanned culmination of chronic abuse and maltreatment. Only a handful of these parents deliberately set out to kill their children.

"People who abuse their children demand a lot of them," says Dr. John MacDonald, a forensic psychiatrist who practices in Denver. "They expect their children to respond at an older level than their age.

"Often they themselves have been brought up with 'Spare the rod, spoil the child.' They have an exaggerated sense of righteousness or low tolerance for stress."

Many times the severe abuse resulting in a child's death is a tangled problem — snarled by poverty, alcohol and drug abuse, marital discord and the adolescent age of the parents themselves who may not have the experience or maturity to cope with parenting.

Child abuse experts point to a very strong correlation between family income level and the severe maltreatment that results in death.

A nationwide study prepared for the National Center on Child Abuse and Neglect reported that 27 children out of every 1,000 are maltreated in families earning less than $7,000 annually — a rate 10 times higher than in families with annual incomes of $25,000.

The roots of child abuse often stretch back to the parents' own childhood, when they were maltreated. That pattern is a difficult one to break, particularly in a family beset by other problems.

Adolescent parents, struggling for their own maturity, can find it difficult to cope with the constraints and demands of a family. Single parents face the strain of caring for a child alone.

Sometimes the child plays an unwitting role in his or her own abuse.

"An unwanted child born out of wedlock becomes a symbol of a disappointing relationship, or a symbol of someone who was raped or misused or whatever," says UCLA psychologist Dr. Morris Paulson. "The child becomes a scapegoat."

The acquaintance or stranger who kills a youngster usually does it for a different reason: fear.

"Many times the death of a child by an outsider is an attempt to cover the identity of the perpetrator after an act has been done, whether it is kidnaping, molestation or whatever," Paulson says.

Generally, pedophiles — those sexually attracted to children — are men who have difficulty in relationships with adults. By sexually attacking a child whom he views with a combination of affection and desire, the pedophile has an opportunity to be in control.

Often the person who sexually molests a youngster is someone known to either the child or the child's family — possibly a neighbor, stepbrother or friend. Thus, discovery can be a frightening prospect.

Pedophiles rarely kill the children they molest, but those who murder usually do so to avoid identification.

While parents and molesters may murder children impulsively, out of either anger or fear, there are those who hunt deliberately for the young victim.

Teenage gang members sometimes fall into this group.

"The younger gang members want to display their ferocity by beating up younger kids in fistfights and nonfatal altercations where they can prove their strength," says UCLA psychologist Dr. Fred Loya, who works with teen gangs.

"But when the gang member gets older, 15 to 18, the violence escalates. You get rival gangs trying to avenge prior deaths, or looking for excitement. They will go cruising in other neighborhoods, looking for other gangs, and will open up with shotguns."

The number of murders related to juvenile gang wars reached 115 in 1979, and all but five of those victims were 15 to 19 years old.

Even more frightening is the person, such as the unknown Atlanta killer, who seems to set out coldly and calculatingly to kill a child.

The premeditated murderer who goes after a child may sometimes lack the moral controls that would stop a normal person from committing such a crime. Or he may be functioning under some kind of delusion.

"When you look at notorious mass murderers like the Boston Strangler, Son of Sam, Charles Manson, the Texas Tower killer, if you read why they did it, what they have done is build a series of delusions and operate on them," says Dr. Peter Maida, an associate professor of criminology at the University of Maryland.

"This individual (in Atlanta), if it is an individual, may have constructed a world view which somehow involves black children," Maida says. "You couldn't characterize this as representing a large group of people out there who like to kill children. It may be a one-in-a-lifetime case."

There were 488 youngsters and teen-agers in 1979 whose murders were unexplained, where the circumstances and motives are not known — like those of the Atlanta youths.

India enters space age with spy satellite

NEW DELHI, India (UPI) — India fired a test spy satellite into orbit Sunday.

Indian scientists said the launch also proved the country's ability to produce intermediate-range ballistic missiles.

Scientists tracking the Indian-built satellite, equipped with "imaging" cameras to photograph outlines of land formations, said all its systems were functioning well.

Indian scientists said that with the launch their nation had attained the capability to produce intermediate-range ballistic missiles, but "today's launching of the space vehicle is not connected with the testing of missile systems," the Press Trust of India reported.

India put its first satellite into orbit last July in a demonstration of its IRBM's capabilities.

Observers of the Indian space program have said the photographic equipment aboard the satellite also can be used to observe military operations inside neighboring Pakistan and Himalayan China.

A four-stage solid-fuel rocket weighing 17 tons and standing 73.7 feet high blasted off from the lauching pad at Sri Harikotta, a coastal town on the Bay of Bengal, 60 miles north of Madras, the officials said.

Budget

He also said the practice removes what little public credibility is left with regard to federal budgeting."

Congressional Budget Office Director Alice Rivlin told the seminar there currently is much genuine uncertainty in economic forecasting. "In the face of uncertainty," she said, "there is enormous temptation for Congress to pick the optimistic end of the range.

"Budget committees year after year say, 'We can make it a little bit easier if we adjust the economic assumptions a little bit, and after all, you economists don't really know, do you?" — and we don't — so why not adjust the figures a little bit," Mrs. Rivlin said.

Hartman suggested budget committees start using ranges of economic assumptions rather than specific figures. Mrs. Rivlin suggested they try to err on the pessimistic side in picking assumptions "and then hope to be pleasantly suprised."

Hartman said economic estimates become even fuzzier when extended to 1984. He believes this should deter Congress from enacting a 3-year tax cut, as President Reagan wants. It becomes a very risky proposition to enact a multi-year tax cut and have any confidence in what the budget actually will look like in 1984, Hartman said.

Hunger strike to death vowed

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Vietnam-era veterans on a hunger strike repeated Sunday their vow to fast until death unless President Reagan meets with them.

Robert Muller, the executive director of Vietnam Veterans of America, in a message sent to the 11 hunger strikers from Washington, said Vietnam Veterans of America "do not support your continuing protest."

He said a letter from Donald Custis, acting administrator of veterans affairs, "has committed the president to the most significant goals Vietnam Veterans have been lobbying for over the past several months."

The hunger strikers rejected the letter from Custis last week, saying it proposed no change in veterans policy.

The hunger strikers, supported by veterans staging a sit-in at the Wadsworth VA hospital lobby, are demanding an inspection of the Veterans Administration by outside experts, additional research into the effects of the toxic defoliant Agent Orange and recognition of delayed stress syndrome as a disease.

"We understand Mr. Muller's concern and we appreciate his humanitarian gesture," said Ron Kovic, one of the "Inside Six" occupying the hospital lobby.

"But in all good conscience we cannot and will not end this strike until we are assured by the president, the administration and the American people that they are going to give us the homecoming and respect we so rightfully deserve."

Two the hunger strikers were in the 13th day of their fast while the others have gone without food for six to 10 days. Kovic, who is not participating in the fast, said nurses are monitoring the hunger strikers round the clock.

Boise Vietnam vets organize

BOISE (UPI) — Bitter veterans of the Vietnam War gathered at a Boise park Saturday to discuss organizational plans and vent their frustrations at the physical and mental effects of the Asian conflict.

Bob Secrist, president of the Idaho Vietnam Veterans Association, told fellow veterans the group plans to petition Gov. John Evans to appoint Vietnam veterans to the Idaho Veterans Affairs Commission. Secrist said representation on such a panel was one step toward securing better treatment for Idaho's Vietnam veterans. He said a list of nominees would be given to Evans.

Several veterans attending the Julia Davis Park meeting complained they were damaged physically by Agent Orange defoliant and harmed mentally by the war and attitudes surrounding the conflict.

Drought

Cattle rancher Bubba Mills of Lake Okeechobee, Fla., stands by one of the 100 head of cattle he has lost to the drought in that state. Mills used draglines to dig through 25 ft. of rock and muck to find water. Cattle climbed down to get a drink, but about 100 haven't made it back out of the hole yet.

Church is optimist coal pact will win

By United Press International

United Mine Workers President Sam Church Jr. said Sunday he was optimistic the tentative contract reached with the soft coal industry will be ratified.

"I think this is a good contract," Church told a news conference in Birmingham, Ala., where he began a six-state coalfield tour to urge acceptance. "I can't see any reason why they (rank-and-file) would vote against it. There's nothing controversial in it."

In March when the UMW first reached agreement with soft coal operators Church predicted that pact would pass by a two-thirds majority, but it was rejected by a 2-1 margin.

The new contract, if approved in rank-and-file voting Saturday, would last 40 months. Asked why so long, Church said:

"We went through two long strikes before this. This longer contract will allow our people to recoup and it will give us a little more time to build up the pension and health funds and allow our people to get through vacation periods.

"I tried to get a contract where we wouldn't have to go through all this suffering and I wasn't able to do it," Church said. "I'm sorry. The bearded union leader, who became a father for the fourth time Saturday, got a friendly reception from rank-and-file miners in Birmingham. He also held a meeting with officials of UMW District 20, which has 15,000 members.

Since the latest tentative pact was reached Friday, one union leader predicted that restoration of the non-union royalty clause would help assure ratification.

Tony Bumbico, UMW District 6 international executive board member from Ohio, said, "The royalty fee is back in and increased from $1.90 to $2.23.6 a ton. I think it (the contract) will fly."

A key reason the first agreement was defeated was that it did not include the royalty clause requiring coal companies to pay $1.90 into miners' health and welfare funds for each ton of non-union coal processed by union miners. UMW members feared the clause's exclusion would lead to increased non-union coal mining.

If the new contract is approved in Saturday's voting, the miners would return to work shortly thereafter.

That would come none too soon for states such as Kentucky, the country's largest coal producing state.

Lefever nomination support is lacking

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Paul Tsongas, D-Mass., a member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said Sunday there has been "no full court press" by the administration urging support for Ernest Lefever to be its human rights watchdog.

He said Secretary of State Alexander Haig is not pushing for Lefever's confirmation. Tsongas said he has not been approached by anyone in the administration "who is supporting this nominee."

The committee reopens its confirmation hearings this week, with President Reagan still backing his controversial choice for assistant secretary of state for human rights.

But Lefever's fate in the committee is uncertain at best. Committee opposition may doom the nomination. Additionally, sources close to Senate Republican leader Howard Baker say he has advised the White House not to discount the possibility Lefever may not be confirmed by the full Senate either.

Tsongas noted that on the day the hearings opened, three members were prepared to vote against Lefever based on the nominee policy of "quiet diplomacy" against human rights violations in other than communist countries.

"Making a distinction between torture of the left and torture of the right is fruitless."

Now, he said, there is "something like 11 who are prepared to vote against him" in the 17-member committee. "I think if they take it to the floor and make a real knockdown-dragout fight, this is the wrong nominee."

This week's hearing, with a closed session set for Thursday, will center on concerns expressed mostly by Democrats on the activities of Lefever's Washington-based Ethics and Public Policy Center and the use of infant formula in the Third World.

Specifically, it centers on conflict of interest allegations involving the research center's acceptance of $25,000 in contributions from Nestle, a large manufacturer of artificial breast-feeding substitutes.

Members have questioned Lefever's "conflicting reports and contradictory testimony" regarding a conversation with U.N. Ambassador Jeane Kirkpatrick before a recent vote on a U.N. code outlawing the marketing of infant formula.

The United States was the only nation to vote against the code, established by the U.N.'s World Health Organization.

Lefever acknowledged the Nestle contributions, but denied any conflict of interest.

There have been mounting calls on Capitol Hill for Lefever to voluntarily step aside as Reagan's nominee.

Even brothers don't back him

HARRISBURG, Pa. (UPI) — Four brothers of Ernest Lefever oppose his confirmation to a key administration human rights post because they consider his views contrary to their family's religious upbringing.

The Harrisburg Patriot-News said none of the four brothers, all of whom like Ernest Lefever were raised in the pacifistic tradition of the First Church of the Bretheren, supported his nomination. Two of the brothers would vote against Lefever's nomination, the newspaper said.

Donald Lefever said he disagreed with his brother's support of authoritarian leaders friendly to the United States because "they will tend to repress human freedom for many people."

Mail critical of U.S. vote on formula

WASHINGTON (UPI) — State Department officials say the U.S. vote opposing the World Health Organization code on infant formula powders has drawn an extraordinary amount of mail, 90 percent of it critical.

The avalanche of letters, the officials said, is still arriving.

The State Department argues that a vote restricting companies from trying to sell infant formula powders overseas would violate the U.S. Constitution. A spokesman said the administration decision "was a consensus reached at the highest levels of the White House policy staff, the Department of State and Health and Human Services and the U.S. Mission to the United Nations."

The WHO code was passed 118 to 1, with only the United States in opposition.

It opposes the aggressive sale of infant formulas for Third World countries because such campaigns discourage breast feeding, which is more nourishing and cheaper than bottle feeding.

The infant formulas, which must be mixed with water, can also be the source of infections and disease when no pure water supply is available.

U.S. automakers plan to study Japanese firms

DETROIT (UPI) — Ford Motor Co., in a rare move, is joining forces with the United Auto Workers union to study and learn from a common foe — Japanese car makers.

The No. 2 automaker and the UAW are planning to send a task force to Japan in June to analyze the use of assembly line robots, employee exercise sessions, labor relations and the singing of company songs on the job.

Ford and the UAW will study the Japanese methods in an attempt to increase productivity, quality and to generally make Ford more competitive.

The scheduled trip is the most recent of about 40 cooperative efforts between Ford and the UAW. The company and union have conducted joint involvement programs in plants throughout North America in moves to increase worker participation in company decision making.

U.S. must push Hanoi on MIA's

Are some of the more than 2,500 American servicemen listed as missing in the Vietnam War still alive, being kept prisoners in Southeast Asia?

Officially, the U.S. government has turned up empty on its efforts to find out. But private groups and investigators believe there is enough evidence to suggest many servicemen may indeed be hidden away in secret work camps inside Laos, Cambodia and Vietnam.

Only last week the U.S. announced a secret ground mission it sponsored found nothing of a suspected prison camp supposedly identified through spy-satellite photos. Vietnam also announced last week the remains of three U.S. servicemen had been found and will be returned once identification procedures are concluded.

News of both those incidents has sparked anew the missing-in-action debate. Specifically, it focused on criticism that the U.S. has not done enough to locate the missing men and that Hanoi not only is deliberately dragging its feet on the issue but is not telling the truth.

A television report Saturday indicated there is so much anti-U.S. sentiment in Vietnam that search teams will investigate suspected grave sites only at night so as to not upset nearby village residents. This sentiment is rooted in the belief the U.S. has reneged on its promise to provide economic aid to Vietnam.

While the White House and even special Congressional investigative panels hold little hope anyone missing is still alive, there is growing evidence in eyewitness reports from Southeast Asian refugees that groups of Caucasian men have been seen in work details or imprisoned in camps.

The Nixon, Ford and Carter administrations promised much but produced little to the families of those still missing.

The Idaho congressional delegation from Idaho should add its voice to this matter. Letters from individual, concerned Idahoans also should press for definitive efforts to locate the missing and discover whether some are still alive.

New York: A love-hate affair

Los Angeles Times Syndicate

NEW YORK — New Yorkers are always complaining that "foreigners" (those who don't live there) are giving the city a bad name.

Actually we "foreigners" would have no idea what was going on unless New Yorkers told us.

I had the occasion to go up to New York on Sunday last week, and spend the afternoon in Queens at a gathering of friends. Then I announced I had to go into the city.

"How are you planning to go?" someone asked.

"I thought I'd take the subway."

"You can't take the subway," the person said.

"Why? It's Sunday. The subway shouldn't be too crowded."

"That's just the point," another friend told me. "It's much more dangerous to take it when it isn't crowded. You could be sitting in a car all by yourself, and that's when they'll get you."

"If they don't get you, the subway will," another person said.

"How could the subway get me?" I wanted to know.

"It's always breaking down. You could be stuck under the East River all night long."

"Maybe I'd better take a taxi."

"Be careful. Don't tell the cab driver you're from out of town, or he'll take you to Manhattan via Staten Island. They wait all day for people like you."

Another friend said, "If he does take you by way of Staten Island, don't argue with him. There was a story in the newspaper the other day about a man who complained the taxi was taking the long way from Kennedy Airport, and the driver beat him up with a tire iron."

"How long are you staying in Manhattan?" someone inquired.

"Just a couple of days."

"I'd take off that watch if I were you. They're getting awfully good at ripping off watches. If your wife is going to be with you, tell her not to wear any gold chains. They'll rip them off, too."

"Where are you staying?"

"Down in Gramercy Park," I said.

"You weren't planning on going out at night, were you?"

"I was hoping to. I understand there's a lot to see in New York City at night."

A friend said, "It depends on where you go. Always walk on a lighted street near the curb, and if they ask for your money, give it to them without arguing."

"Better still, don't walk anywhere. Take a taxi, and tell the driver to wait until you get into the hotel lobby," someone added.

"Is it all right to go to the theater?" I asked.

"It's all right to go. But coming back is where you could get in trouble. Whatever you do, stay off Eighth Avenue. That's where all the crazies hang out."

"Before you go, put all your valuables in the hotel safe, and be sure when you get back to your hotel you double lock your door. I know a guy who was sleeping in one of the best hotels in the city and found someone going through his trousers looking for his wallet."

"I think I better take notes," I said. "I hear the restaurants are pretty good in New York."

"It depends if they know you or not. If you go to one of the better ones, make sure you slip the headwaiter a $20 bill, or you'll be standing at the bar until 11 o'clock at night."

"When you're leaving for the airport during rush hour, give yourself two hours. If one car breaks down on the East Side Drive, you're a dead duck."

"Gosh," I said. "This sounds like a tough city."

"Why do you say that?" someone asked in a defensive voice.

"No reason," I replied, realizing I was on dangerous ground.

"That's the trouble with you out-of-towners. You're always knocking New York because you don't live here. It's the greatest place in the world."

"I wouldn't live anywhere else," another friend added. "I love New York."

"I better get going," I said.

"Why? It's only 4 o'clock."

"Well, if I'm going get beaten up with a tire iron, I better allow some time to go to the hospital."

"If you go to the emergency room on Sunday," a friend said, "make sure there's an English-speaking doctor on duty."

Cleaner now

Editor, Times-News:

Within the past months increasing large volumes of extraneous litter has been deposited upon school properties. This has caused, in addition to a lower school impression received when visiting our schools, a reduction in students' morale.

In an effort to combat this trend, several students from Minico High School have joined to create a community project. The primary goal of this project being to help curb the littering trend.

Our project was divided into two phases. To start out, we removed several loads of garbage from school property, which were then properly disposed.

In a second phase, which we are continuing to carry out, we are emphasizing to students the importance of keeping our schools, and the community in general, free of unsightly debris.

We recognize the efforts extended by the community in general, and the school faculty in particular. Our group's aim has been to supplement these efforts. We hope that upon completion of this project we will have set an example for others to follow.

We would like to extend our special thanks to Mr. Cazier and the entire Minico High School staff in helping to make this project possible.

Tax hardship

Editor, Times-News:

I want to comment on the 10-mill override that was passed in Blaine County by 11 votes May 5.

Including the 1% or 10 mills, last years' seven mills, and the 10 mills is a sum of 27 mills on the market value of property. In round numbers 30 mills would be like a $.03 or three cents sales tax on the market value of your property for five years. Your tax will be 1/27 times the market value set by the county assessor's office.

If the property owners wish to file for a hardship exemption claim before June 20, 1981, read on the back of your 1981 taxpayer valuation assessment notice. You must file a hardship exemption claim before June 20, with the county board of equalization. I presume the country assessor's office will have forms or write a letter in care of the county assessor.

Since the people or patrons did not vote in favor of the 10 mill override in Hailey, Bellevue, Gannett and Carey it seems unfair for those places to be taxed heavily.

I don't know what the solution will be or the outcome but I am concerned. I know the property owners need to be more organized and discuss school problems like the school officials do.

There was no meeting, investigation or discussion of this override that I know of.

If enough property owners file for hardship exemption claims before June 20, the county commissioners, trustees, assessor, school officials and state politicians might take another look and decide to have another election on this 10 mill override.

I know this is a real hardship and a monster on my back. This is really a hardship on the people in the towns mentioned. If they could afford the new tax they would have voted for it. Everyone wants the children to have the best education they can afford. The officials involved may find themselves unpopular and in embarrassing situations.

Farrah Fawcett is back. So what. Who cares?

Chicago Sun-Times

I knew it was too good to last.

For a while, Farrah Fawcett and her sparkling choppers and sheepdog hair seemed to be mercifully fading away.

For the last year or two, I hadn't read any stories about her breakup with Lee Majors, the million-dollar musclehead. I didn't see anything in the magazines about how she does her hair, or how many miles she jogs or how many bowls of granola and raisins she eats to keep that perfect plastic look.

But this week she's back in that most honored spot for instant American celebrities — the cover of People magazine. That means we are going to have to accompany Farrah through another phase of her life.

It doesn't seem fair. There are so many other people out there who are just as incompetent at acting as Farrah is. There are hundreds, even thousands, of equally blank, pretty faces.

She had her shot. For two or three years, we cooperated by watching in amazement as she wandered across the TV and movie screens, showing as much emotion as your average lamp. Her teeth were on more magazine covers than the teeth of the shark in Jaws (a better actor, incidentally).

So why is she back on the cover of People magazine? I don't know. All I know is that like millions of other Americans, I'm addicted to the silly stuff that People brings us every week. Who is now sleeping with whom. Who has stopped sleeping with whom. Who has kicked the drug habit. Who has stopped being a lush. Who has found Jesus. Who has lost him. Plus the favorite recipes of our biggest celebrities.

I suppose Farrah is back because People magazine feels it must not leave a story dangling.

And when I last read about Farrah, she was kind of dangling. Things weren't going good for her. She and Stone Face had gone to Splitsville, as the gossip authors put it. Her movies were flops. And Bo Derek's bosom had suddenly become more popular with American males than Farrah's teeth. We are fickle that way.

When I saw Farrah on my latest People, I thought: "Oh, oh, this must mean that she isn't dangling anymore."

But it turns out that this isn't true. As she herself admits: "I'm very unsettled at the moment." (I hope this news hasn't ruined your day.)

And it appears that the whole purpose of the lengthy story is for her to blab to People, and for People to blab to us, that Farrah is happy in her affair with Ryan O'Neal.

As a reporter, that kind of thing always amazes me. I have interviewed thousands of people. But not one of them has ever told me about his or her affairs. I wouldn't know what to do if they did. I'd probably ask where the washroom was, excuse myself, then sneak out the side door and not come back.

It was only in last week's People that Tanya Tucker described her sad trip to Splitsville with Glen Campbell. She felt compelled to reveal that Campbell, despite being well over 40, was a wild man in bed. I'm still waiting for the follow-up story, in which Campbell will admit it, or deny it, or just thump himself on the chest and bellow like Tarzan.

Anyway, in her return to the People cover, Farrah jabbered on and on about her affair with Ryan O'Neal.

For example: "If you have a man in your life, a lover who says, 'My God, you get more beautiful with age,' and I have that, you feel more beautiful."

Isn't that wonderful? But will Ryan O'Neal still be saying that when Farrah is 86 and doing her jogging with a walking stick? I'll bet not.

Farrah also discloses: "Ryan is the most honest person I know."

That's good. A girl like Farrah has some expensive jewelry, and she wouldn't want to let some burglar like Pops Panczko hang around her pad.

Farrah also revealed that talking about O'Neal sometimes makes her feel bad because she's still married to Lee Majors, and she doesn't want to hurt his feelings. Lee's feelings. I mean O'Neal apparently feels pretty good.

And Lee manfully said: "I'm not bitter about Ryan. I hope he realizes he has himself a helluva lady."

Frankly, I prefer the old-fashioned approach, in which a man whose wife was publicly discussing her affair would say something like:

"Me and my buddies are out looking for him. And when we find him, we're going to break his arms and legs and head."

But back to Farrah:

She says she doesn't know if she and Ryan will marry when she and the non-bitter Lee finally divorce. (She is hoping to gain custody of their Bel Air home, which shows she has her priorities straight.)

Marriage, says Farrah, is a very serious matter and one she will have to think long and hard about. When was the last time you heard a movie star say something as profound as that?

But she did disclose this very warm and personal goal in her life:

"I want to have a baby. I think life is more fulfilling when you have a little person who depends on you."

Isn't that nice? She wants a "little person" who depends on her.

Then my advice to her is this: Farrah, if you ever break up with Ryan, you might consider having your next affair with a midget.

Poland, world mourn death of cardinal as funeral is held

WARSAW, Poland (UPI) — Communist leaders and clergymen from around the world joined more than 300,000 faithful Sunday in a massive open-air funeral for Cardinal Stefan Wyszynski, the man who led the church in Poland for 33 years.

Pope John Paul II offered a special prayer for his mentor, calling him a "good and zealous pastor," and expressed sorrow that he was unable to attend the funeral.

Polish Cardinal Franciszek Macharski, considered a possible successor to Wyszynski, led the open air mass along with the Vatican secretary of state.

Macharski said the church will carry on the work of the controversial primate and read the pontiff's prayer at the mass, broadcast nationwide on radio and television.

"We will not surrender and nothing will perish out of the things for which and for whom the primate lived. We will take it over," the Polish cardinal said.

Downtown Warsaw's Victory Square was jammed with over 300,000 people and thousands more spilled out into surrounding streets, many weeping in grief for Wyszynski, who died Thursday of cancer. He was 79.

One held a banner that read: "such a father, primate and priest is given by God only once every 1,000 years."

Wyszynski's will was read out during the ceremonies, and in it he forgave the communist authorities for holding him as a "political prisoner" when he was jailed for his views in the 1950s.

Wyszynski was laid to rest in the crypt of Warsaw Cathedral after five hours of ceremonies attended by 14 cardinals and about 200 bishops. Philadelphia's Cardinal John Krol blessed the coffin with holy water before it was laid in the crypt.

Almost exactly two years ago, the pope with Wyszynski at his side, celebrated mass for a quarter of a million people from the same spot and under the same towering cross. Before the procession set off, Solidarity union leader Lech Walesa and a union delegation stood for half an hour as an honor guard at the coffin.

Isreal still has chance of surprise against Syria

By RICHARD C. GROSS
United Press International

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Despite all the diplomatic chatter over the crisis in Lebanon, Israel has not lost the opportunity to use the best weapon in its arsenal against the Syrian missiles in Lebanese territory — surprise.

The Israelis, outnumbered by the Arabs around them, long have used surprise as their chief military tactic.

Dozens of examples exist, but the one most remembered is the preemptive air strike against Egypt that started the third Arab-Israeli war 14 years ago Friday. It virtually knocked out the Egyptian air force before it got off the ground.

Analysis

The overall American assessment about a military confrontation with Syria over the 14 surface-to-air (SAM) missile sites the Syrians moved into Lebanon is that it would cost Israel too many casualties.

Yet, in the view of Reagan administration officials, Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin may have little choice but to attack the SAM sites if the shuttle diplomacy of U.S. envoy Philip Habib ultimately fails. Habib is to return to the Middle East this week.

"The longer Habib is there, the better are the chances of success," said a U.S. official who declined to be identified. "The best thing is if they keep talking."

It came as no shock to observers that Israeli warplanes attacked Palestinian guerrilla emplacements in Lebanon within hours after Habib left Israel last week. Israel routinely has not staged such strikes while a top-ranking U.S. official conducts diplomatic business in Jerusalem and elsewhere in the region, always wailing for the official to leave.

If it served no other purpose, the reported successful Israeli attack against a SAM-9 position manned by Libyans signaled the Syrians that Israel can knock out missile batteries without sustaining aircraft losses.

The Americans have helped by supplying the Israelis since the 1973 October war with electronic countermeasures to combat the Soviet-built SAMs.

Some U.S. officials said privately Israel should have attacked the Syrian SAM batteries in Lebanon immediately after they were emplaced April 29.

Failing that, one American said, a surprise operation still can be mounted while Begin "keeps talking, talking and talking" to Habib or even Egyptian President Anwar Sadat to lull the Syrians into thinking a diplomatic solution is possible.

An assault, the source said, need not be surgically precise because any military operation would run the risk of all-out war with Syria. The Syrians, in the American view, would fight back.

The strategy, then, should be to hit the Syrians as hard as possible to maximize the psychological message that "Israel will not tolerate a change in the status quo that threatens Israel, ever," another source said.

Bangladesh rebels threaten to kill loyalists

NEW DELHI, India (UPI) — Rebel troops who assassinated Bangladesh President Ziaur Rahman threatened Sunday to execute captured loyalist army officers.

Reports said at least 50 police died in fighting around the rebel-held port city of Chittagong.

Dissident troops led by Maj. Gen. Manzur Ahmed erected barricades on the main road linking the port with the capital of Dacca, about 130 miles to the north, the Press Trust of India said.

In a broadcast on Chittagong's captured radio station, the rebels claimed they had the support of Bangladesh's 4,000-man navy stationed in the southeastern port.

In Dacca, the government of Acting President Abdus Sattar called on the rebels to surrender or "face final and drastic action from the country's armed forces."

Sattar and Army Chief of Staff Lt. Gen. G.M. Ershad said in frequent radio broadcasts there were only a handful of rebels in Chittagong and they were already deserting.

Ziaur Rahman, known as Zia, was shot and killed by rebel troops early Saturday in the Chittagong government guest house.

A few hours after the assassination, the dissident troops fanned out in the thick jungles surrounding the city and killed 50 policemen in scattered fighting, Indian press reports said.

Ahmed, described by Dacca Radio as the former commander of the army garrison in Chittagong, immediately announced the formation of a seven-member revolutionary council and asked other army units to join the rebellion.

"Let us have a united stand to run the country and make it a real nation of the people," Manzur said in an appeal to the army over the Chittagong radio station. The rebels reportedly refused to turn over Zia's body to the government.

Reports on the situation in Chittagong were sketchy as the government cut off telephone and telegraph communications, sealed the nation's border and canceled most incoming and outgoing international airline flights.

The government also kept a state of emergency in effect throughout the country of 88 million and major cities were put under a curfew.

In Washington, President Reagan expressed shock at the assassination and said the world "had come to respect President Zia's profound and compassionate commitment to a better life for his people and his dedication to the rule of law."

Ziaur's slaying came in the midst of a major Cabinet shake-up but diplomats said they doubted the assassination was planned from inside the government.

Today, Bank of Idaho changed the face of banking forever. And our name, too.

From this day forward, banking will never be the same.

Because this is the day that the face of banking changed forever.

The day banking got easier for Westerners.

The day banking got more convenient for Westerners.

The day we at Bank of Idaho changed our name along with 20 other Western banks to form the First Interstate Bank system throughout the West—a network of banks serving people in nearly 900 offices in 434 communities throughout an 11-state territory.

So from this day on, our new name is the First Interstate Bank.

But just because we've changed our name doesn't mean we've changed the way we do business.

We've got the same offices we had when our name was Bank of Idaho.

And the same good people.

And the same friendly service.

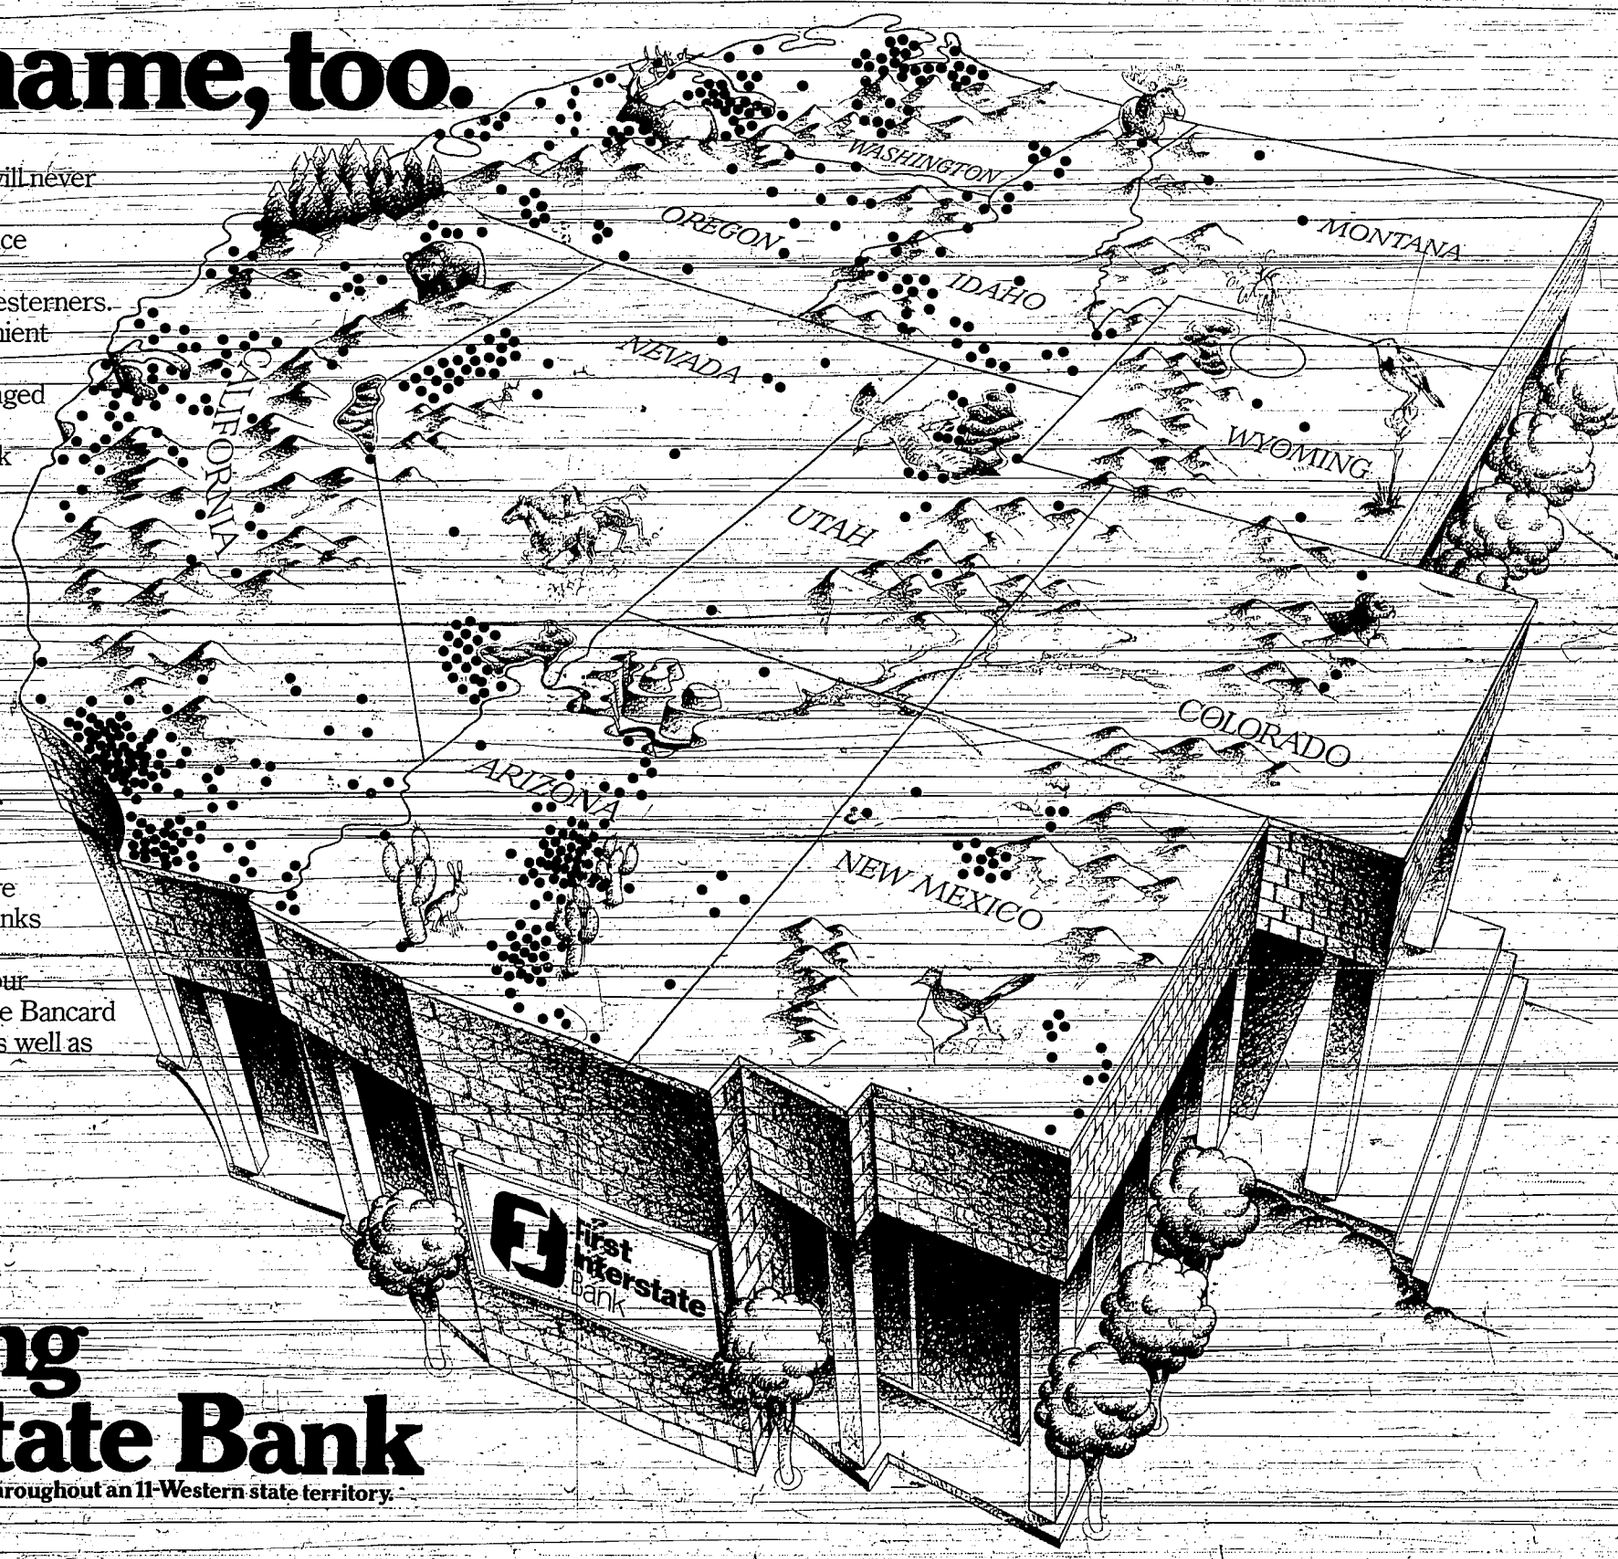
The big difference is that now we're part of a network of First Interstate Banks in the West.

So now, when you bank with us, your personal check and your First Interstate Bancard will be recognized all over the West—as well as in Idaho.

Come on in and help us celebrate.

It's a new beginning for us.

And for you.



Introducing First Interstate Bank

The first and only bank system that can serve you throughout an 11-Western state territory.

Sinatra to perform in S. Africa

By United Press International

SINATRA IN SOUTHERN AFRICA

Frank Sinatra will perform July 24-Aug. 2 at the Sun City Hotel Casino in the Republic of Bophuthatswana, the black "homeland" created by the South African government. Some visitors have suggested Sun City — a two-hour drive from Johannesburg — would be more aptly named "Sin City" for its high-stakes gambling and topless cabaret. But Sinatra's attorney, Mickey Rudin, toured the town and liked it. In announcing Sinatra's plans, Rudin declined to discuss apartheid, but said, "Having had this opportunity to visit Sun City and the Republic of Bophuthatswana, I know that whatever the motives of South Africa were in establishing this country, the result is right. My investigations have shown that there is no reason why Frank should not come here and I hope it will encourage other performers to come."

MONKEY BUSINESS

A woman bootlegger in India who trained monkeys to attack police and strip off their clothes when they raided her illegal brewery has been outwitted by officers armed with peanuts. Police said Janakabai Dhangar trained her monkeys to attack anyone wearing a khaki uniform who came near her home in Nasik city, 90 miles northeast of Bombay. While the officers were busy trying to keep their clothes on, the the woman allegedly got rid of her illicit liquor stocks. But two cops finally thought to throw peanuts to the monkeys and caught Mrs. Dhangar red-handed with the brew.

FAULTY REPORTING

Poland's independent Solidarity union has denounced as untrue a report by American freelance writer Harley Lippmann that he was hidden in Solidarity "safe houses." A spokesman called the story "a fraud" and "an insult to serious journalism." The article was distributed by a syndication company of the New York Times and appeared in The Times of London and other leading newspapers, but not in the New York Times itself. Lippmann, who was a Fulbright student in Warsaw in 1975-77, went to Poland on a tourist visa in February. Sources at the U.S. Embassy in Warsaw said Lippman claims to represent a "Jewish organization within the AFL-CIO."

HIJINKS WITH JACQUES

Monday night is ballet star Jacques D'Amboise's big night of the year. That's when the National Dance Institute takes over the Felt Forum at Madison Square Garden to show 700 boys from the public school system dancing the way he has shown them.

Warning: Love can cost you

DALLAS (UPI) — A Dallas psychologist has issued a warning to those head over heels in love.

"Trying to buy happiness can be costly, especially if there's no down payment," he said.

Psychologist David Hammond said he regularly sees patients who lose all sense of reality when showering their loves with gifts and attention.

For instance, there's the man who wants an $18,000 sports car. He talks his intended into signing for the financing. He breaks the engagement, keeps the car, and she gets stuck with the $400-a-month payments.

Or the woman who wants to have her nose bobbed, bosom enhanced, and eyes and bottom lifted. Her boyfriend forks over the cash for the doctor. She takes her new body to someone else. He's still paying on the $5,000 he borrowed for the operations.

"They think it's a down payment on living happily ever after," Hammond said. "But what they usually end up with is finance charges ever after."

"It's a definite pattern. I work for several large corporations where it's my job to counsel employees who may be going through a bad time.

"A young woman came in all shattered and disillusioned. She had been dating a young man for a long time. He just wasn't interested in getting married. He was more interested in buying a sailboat. He dropped hints that it would be a wonderful way to spend a honeymoon. But he said, he couldn't afford an engagement ring and the boat."

The woman suggested he buy the ring and she'd spring for the boat, Hammond said. She even put the boat in his name. But five days after he got the papers, he broke the engagement. He never got around to getting her the ring. She's sued to get the boat back.

"But she doesn't have much ground to stand on. It was given as a gift. It was all done legally. It's just a very expensive lesson she's had to learn."

Hammond said the woman confessed she never was sure her boyfriend wanted to marry.

"She thought if she came up with such a fantastic gift, then he'd see how much she really loved him. Maybe that would make him see what a wonderful wife she would be."

Hammond said there are two types of people who get themselves in such situations: the users and the doormats.

He sees the doormats and warns them that if they let their hearts rule their pocketbooks, they can be sure of finding an unforgettable love.

"Even after that love has walked out, there is going to be a constant reminder every time the finance payment is due."

Party honors homecoming of duck wounded by arrow

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — Donna the Duck, the 24-ounce mallard pierced by a 3-foot arrow, Sunday returned to the daily routine she had followed with her mate and four ducklings before the injury catapulted her to national fame.

She was seen swimming on the pond at the 13th fairway of the Sahara Country Club golf course with her mate, apparently having forgiven his reported unfaithfulness.

Donna — who became a celebrity when she was removed from the golf course May 25 by federal agents who drugged her bread — was treated to a red-carpet homecoming Saturday at a champagne and corn reception attended by 100 guests.

The duck apparently ignored the advice of a song writer that now that she was a star she should forget her faithless mate, who, it was reported, was cavorting with another female during Donna's absence from the pond.

She was seen peacefully swimming at his side.

Sahara Hotel officials had a "Welcome Home Donna" banner behind a podium set up for speeches to celebrate the bird's return.

"We toast Donna for her courage and for the feelings of love and humanity she has inspired in us all," said Paul Jarvis, vice president of sales and marketing for the Las Vegas "strip" resort.

Stars' kids didn't phase him

BOISE (UPI) — Read Gorringe says he never was intimidated by the star status of the parents of some of the students he taught years ago at Ketchum.

Some celebrities who spent the winter in the Sun Valley resort area enrolled their children in the Ketchum school that Gorringe headed in the early 1940s.

Gorringe, 62, principal of Boise's Hillcrest Elementary since 1965 and retiring this spring after 41 years in education, says he didn't operate differently when it came to stars' kids. Film stars Gary Cooper, Norma Shearer and others put their children in the Ketchum school.

Gorringe viewed his experiences with celebrities' children as only one of the necessary stepping stones that led to a long career as an educator. He ended up spending the bulk of his career in Boise.

One incident at the Ketchum school, however, sticks in his mind.

"Gary Cooper asked if his daughter could go only a half-day," he said. "I told him that wasn't the proper procedure and said it could only be for medical reason. A couple of days later, here came a telegram from a doctor in California who said it was because of respiratory problems."

Nightmare on 'dream' vacation

Idahoan describes pope's shooting

COEUR d'ALENE, Idaho (UPI) — Anne Colborn finally decided to plunk down $2,500 dollars for the European vacation she had dreamed about.

She's back home in Idaho now, and says, "It sure wasn't the kind of vacation I thought it would be."

Ms. Colborn is a fixture at Coeur d'Alene's Templins restaurant, having waited tables there for 31 years. Now she spends a lot of time filling people in on her experience at a tragic moment in history — when Pope John Paul II was seriously wounded in a pistol attack May 13.

Ms. Colborn was 25 feet away from the pontiff when the shots rang out in Vatican City. Relating her experience to the Coeur d'Alene Press, she said "everybody just froze" and watched as the pope was rushed away and police grabbed his alleged assailant.

The shooting shook her to the point that she decided against spending a few days in New York to top off her vacation. The day her flight landed at New York on the return trip, a bomb went off at the airport.

"I'm glad I didn't know about it then, though — I had really had enough," she said.

Her journey was to have been the tour of a lifetime for Ms. Colborn. It was a chance to visit some of the historic and holy places of her lifelong Catholic Church.

The $2,500 fee was staggering for her, but "it didn't take long to say yes" when she had cousin in South Carolina who asked her to go.

Ms. Colborn had a good view of the waving pontiff as he passed through St. Peter's square. She was only 25 feet away when the shots were fired. Her view was obstructed by other people straining for a close glimpse of the pontiff, but her ears registered the grim incident.

The quick shots sounded to her like "two little bangs — like firecrackers."

Nearby, Anne Odre, Buffalo, N.Y., fell, pierced by one of the bullets that had passed through the pope's body.

"There was no confusion," Ms. Colborn said. "That was the funny part. Everybody just froze. People didn't move out of their seats. Only the Swiss guards were moving about. The whole thing was full of police."

Like all of those who wept and prayed in the aftermath of the shooting, Ms. Colborn was stunned by what had happened.

"I didn't know what to think. He was such a happy person. He looked like he was just thrilled to see all the people.

"It's terrible that people have to do these things to make themselves noticed. The shooting affected me. I was going to stay a few extra days in New York, but I decided to skip it. It was all you could think of."

Hemophiliacs attend special summer camp

HOUSTON (UPI) — Thirty-nine young hemophiliacs left home for a week Sunday — most for the first time ever — to attend summer camp.

The way 9-year-old Chris Wright put it, "The best thing is that you can get away from parents."

Because of the disorder that affects his blood's ability to clot and makes even a minor injury a life-threatening situation, Chris never has been able to venture out without his family nearby.

His mother, Becky Wright, said she jumped at the idea of giving Chris the opportunity to go to camp because "when you have a child with a special problem, it is important for you to let that child assert his independence."

"I am less worried about him going to camp than I would be about him staying with friends," she said. "There are medical facilities at the camp."

Activities such as backpacking, arts and crafts, horseback riding, swimming and team sports have been arranged for the boys — ages 7 to 14 — who come from all areas of Texas.

But the rougher side of camp life will be missing.

"Because of the nature of the illness, there will be no contact sports," said Jan Mouche, a nurse coordinator with the Gulf States Hemophilia Center in Houston.

Even with the extra precautions, however, Ms. Mouche said camp officials expect some problems since contrary to what most people think, a hemophiliac does not have to be cut or wounded to start bleeding.

Ms. Mouche said internal spontaneous bleeding often occurs, which is more dangerous than bleeding from cuts.

Dear Abby

Saga of bowlegs continues: no straight-line plot

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
—Universal Press Syndicate—

DEAR ABBY: You were way off base with your answer to the fellow who was bowlegged and miserable. It was no help to tell him to thank God he had legs! What about people who want nose jobs? Do you tell them to thank God they have noses?

Ruth Gordon, the actress, appeared not long ago on a talk show and told the world she had had surgery to correct her bowed legs. She even lifted her skirt to display the results!

Then there was a 6-foot model on TV named Veruschka who thought her feet were too long, so she had an operation to shorten her toes.

Sarah Miles came on the Johnny Carson show and told how she was self-conscious because her ears stuck out, so she had a plastic surgeon pin them closer to her head.

That bowlegged fellow doesn't have to "accept" his deformity. He should find an orthopedic surgeon who will straighten his legs.

DISAPPOINTED IN YOU

DEAR DISAPPOINTED: I certainly shot from the hip on that one. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: This is 1981, and so much progress is being made in the field of medicine and surgery that medical students are being told that only one-fourth of what they will learn in medical school today will be up-to-date medical procedures by the time they graduate!

Bowed legs can be straightened out by "Rolfing." Many movie stars have had it done. One of Charlie's Angels appeared on the Merv Griffin show and she said she used to have bowed legs, but now she has two of the straightest legs you could ever hope to find — thanks to Rolfing!

I'm sorry you will have to eat crow on this one, but you gave the bowlegged kid a bum steer.

— ANTHONY

DEAR ANTHONY: I wrote to Paul Solomon, associate producer of the Merv Griffin show, and asked him about "Rolfing." His reply:

DEAR ABBY: How can you call yourself a Californian and know nothing about Rolfing? Have you also not heard about the isolation tanks that feature 800 pounds of Epsom salts?

Rolfing is a technique of muscle massage and manipulation, developed by one Ida P. Rolf. She claimed all kinds of miraculous transformations, and I'm sure bowlegs was among them.

— PAUL

DEAR PAUL: And now I am informed by orthopedic specialists who tell me that bowed legs should be straightened not only for cosmetic reasons but for therapeutic reasons. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: Regarding the letter signed "BOWLEGGED AND MISERABLE": There is a surgical procedure called "Coventry-osteotomy" in which the bone is cut below the knee, a section is removed, and the bone is then reattached to straighten the leg. The procedure is done separately, with approximately nine months between each leg operation.

If you were to research this particular operation with an orthopedic surgeon, you would find that it is done for reasons other than cosmetic — to prevent degenerative arthritis in later years, for example.

DEAR READERS: So now you have it, friends. Mother Nature is definitely not the last word. You don't have to go through life bowlegged, knock-kneed or pigeon-toed. The miracles of modern medicine have changed all that. You sure could have fooled me!

He keeps million $$$ wardrobe

By JULIE HATFIELD
© Boston Globe

Frank Foster is in charge of keeping a million dollar wardrobe looking like a million dollars.

No easy task, when the wearers are dragging their skirts through icy mush, jumping onto the shoulders of various men and throwing their bodies into back-wrenching tailspins.

The costumes for the combined Ice Follies and Holiday on Ice will last all of one year. After that, they'll be stored in a warehouse for seven years until the ice show owners can declare them a tax loss.

They ought to be distributed to museums. As Foster, wardrobe supervisor for the show explains, the work involved in making these elaborate costumes — many of them feathered, hand-beaded and hand-sequinned — is done by old women only ("Young women won't do the handwork") and is slow, painstakingly difficult and expensive.

"The ladies at Eve's Costume Co. in New York — the only costume company still doing this work — sit all day over the wrong side of a costume, pulling beads and sequins into place one at a time with a crochet hook," he says. "They are working now on next year's costumes, which will be entirely different. One basic leotard and beaded top can run $1,500. When these women are gone, there will be no more beaded and sequinned costumes."

The costumes, $1 million-worth in a $3 million production, are a vital part of this year's show, which Foster says is "the best ever." The color and the dazzle in the form of beads, sparkling costume jewelry and sequins is spectacular. Each floor-length beaded skirt, bodice and feathered and bejeweled hat for the undersea number cost $6,000. The collars alone on another costume are made from European-imported feathers and cost $1,500 each.

It is up to Foster to make sure these costumes are returned to their rightful rack after each performance, numbered to correspond to the person they fit, checked for rips and tears and broken zippers and missing beads, topped with a dust cover, cleaned, crated and packed at the end of each run, and put into the seven semitrucks which carry the costumes, sets and curtains to the next town. When a skater gets sick, it is Foster's chore to fit a substitute into the appropriate costume by means of alterations.

This goes on for 10 months of every year.

Four times each year the costumes that require dry cleaning are sent out, at a cost of thousands of dollars. The rest of the garments are washed in the Sears Roebuck washer and dryer which Foster carts along with the rest of the traveling paraphernalia. Costumes covered with droopy little petals of fabric (star Linda Fratianne wears one) are the bane of Foster's existence: "They curl, and I have to constantly starch and iron them back to shape." He uses about seven cases of spray starch a year.

Despite the minutiae, Foster raves: "I love it!"

There is no such thing as a weekend to Foster, who describes a typical Saturday as beginning at 10 a.m. and ending at 10:30 p.m. after the last of three shows in one day. Once the orchestra begins playing, he says, it does not stop until intermission, and some of the costume changes must be made in one minute and 20 seconds.

About 10 dressers are hired in each city to help with this task. "Zippers break constantly," notes Foster, who makes sure each zipper has a hook at both the top and bottom so that, even if it splits, the costume cannot fall off while the skater is performing. If a seam rips, the woman skates on, with one of Foster's "good old safety pins" in her costume.

What's what

Some dreams frighten people to their deaths

"Oriental Nightmare Death Syndrome" is the name doctors have given to a strange ailment that kills some people in their sleep. During the last four years in the United States, 18 transplanted Laotians, mostly young men of the preliterate mountain society called the Hmong, have thus died in the night. And autopsies revealed no cause. Such fatalities in the Philippines are attributed to "bangungut" meaning "nightmare." Belief is these people with their voodoo-like convictions are frightened to death by their own dreams.

Color of the symbolic Russian bear depends on where you live. Americans see it as a big brown beast. The Chinese think of it as of the white Polar variety.

Most profitable of the national magazines now is said to be "Penthouse" with $11 million in revenues each month.

— MALDEN COLLECTS

Q. How much money does actor Karl Malden get for a season of those American Express TV commercials?

A. $500,000. Takes him about 30 days to film them. So you can figure it at almost $16,700 a day.

Q. What's "pedestrianism"?

A. A term used for long-distance running 120 years ago. An American Indian named Deerfoot was the acknowledged best of the marathon men then.

Q. You say nobody's hair ever turned gray overnight because of worry. Has anybody ever lost hair because of worry?

A. Now that really has happened, say the medicos. Maybe not overnight. But within a few days. Either all the hair or patches of it. Big emotional shocks have been known to cause such fallout. But the hair does grow back, usually.

— LEO WOMEN —

Here's a stargazer who contends that Leo women are more likely than others to marry twice. First time, they're apt to wed impulsively. Second time, they're inclined to approach matrimony in a more deliberate manner, taking their guidance from the head instead of the heart. This student of the stars admits the foregoing applies to numerous twice-married women of other signs, but says the tendency seems to be more pronounced among the Leos.

Japanese denture makers report in high spirits that they now can fashion better false teeth out of coral than from ceramics.

City Council

Hearing set on changes in P&Z rules and maps

TWIN FALLS — Public hearings on proposed planning and zoning regulations and maps will be held by the Twin Falls City Council Monday.

In addition to their regular City Hall meeting at 7 p.m., council members will hold a public work session at 4 p.m. Monday at the Mandarin House restaurant in the Blue Lakes Mall.

The proposed zoning ordinance developed by the Twin Falls Planning and Zoning Commission underwent several changes at the suggestion of local builders and realtors last winter. Further revisions recently were made by the City Council in a series of work sessions.

Twin Falls Community Development Director LaMar Orton said the council's changes include:

• Deletion of all design and review requirements. Previously, such requirements were carried out with the idea of fostering compatibility of new structures and the surrounding environment.

• Addition of a provision stating living units in existing duplexes conditionally can be placed under separate ownership.

• A ban against placement of a billboard within 1,000 feet of another billboard.

• Retaining the city's ban on rotating signs. Planning and zoning commissioners had proposed easing the ban currently in effect.

• A ban on commercial signs in residential zones. Presently, persons engaging in home occupations are allowed signs by permit. The city staff has recommended ordinance language specify schools and churches in residential zones will be permitted to erect signs.

In addition, the city staff has recommended the council amend the draft ordinance to clarify the council's authority to review any planning and zoning commission action. According to city officials, a strict interpretation of the draft ordinance would not allow the council to review commission action, except under appeal conditions.

In other business Monday, the council will hold a public hearing concerning an appeal by Donald Crosby, who wants to operate a saw sharpening shop at his home, 283 Heyburn Ave. W. On April 28, the Planning and Zoning Commission denied Crosby's request for a special use permit to operate the shop.

The council will also hear Alfred Benkula's request for a special use permit to operate an auto body repair shop at 255 Blue Lakes Blvd. N. The proposed shop site carries a commercial zoning designation. It is just east of a residential zone.

On April 28, the Planning and Zoning Commission denied the request by a 4-3 vote on grounds that access to the property was inadequate, and the impact on adjoining residential property could be undesirable.

Other agenda items before the council include consideration of a traffic study recommending limitation of right-hand turns on Addison Avenue at Eighth Street North. The council requested the study to determine alternatives to a traffic back-up problem created as a result of street "cruisers" using Eighth Street North as a turn-around point.

The council also will consider amendments to the city's Master Street Plan.

Health district gets grant

Smoking program to begin

By BONNIE YAHVAH
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A smoking education program has been started by the South Central Health District.

The district received a $2,200 grant this spring from the Idaho Cancer Coordinating Committee for the program, which will continue through June, health educator administrator Barry Kling said.

The agency hopes to receive about $5,600 next year to maintain the program, Kling said.

Health educator Vickie Austin will present programs on smoking to service organizations in the area during June.

"We don't want them to be scare tactics. We want people to realize what the physical effects are when they light up a cigarette," Austin said.

"Hopefully we will touch some minds and motivate them into quitting. I think most smokers would like to quit but they just don't feel they can do without them."

Austin said she believes many people would be more likely to quit smoking if doctors and dentists would encourage their patients to quit and would remind them of the hazards.

In her presentation, Austin will use an apparatus called an equalizer to demonstrate the amount of carbon monoxide inhaled into the lungs when cigarettes are smoked.

The carbon monoxide remains in a person's bloodstream for 48 hours and occupies space normally taken by oxygen, she said. Because there is less oxygen in the bloodstream, the heart must pump faster to distribute oxygen to all parts of the body.

Eighty percent of U.S deaths caused by lung cancer are directly related to smoking, she said, and 20 percent of all cancer is caused by smoking.

Babies of mothers who smoke during pregnancy have a higher risk of being born prematurely, stillborn, and dying during their first year of life, she added.

The weight of a baby whose mother smokes is often about six ounces less than the weight of a baby whose mother did not smoke, and there is also a possibility the child's growth would be stunted throughout his life, Austin said.

The percent of smokers in the U.S. decreased during the past two years from 33.7 to 32 percent. But because the population increased, 100,000 more people are smoking, she noted.

Government studies now show women are quitting smoking in greater numbers than men. "As soon as they quit, if there is no irreparable damage, in 10 to 12 years it's as if they had never smoked at all," she said.

Norland farmer Don Dozier, sitting with his dog Nod, believes he has finally hit 'paydirt'

Paydirt

Norland man says his land is a 'gold mine'

By STEVE LIPSON
Times-News writer

NORLAND — There's gold in them there fields — at least according to their owner Don Dozier.

And that seems only fair, he said, because in 15 years he never made money raising crops in them.

Dozier is serious when he claims to have hit paydirt in his own fields north of Paul. This is real gold, he said. It is not traces washed down from the mountains. He believes his farm sits atop a mother lode.

How much gold does he think there is?

"The numbers are staggering," Dozier said. A "minimum-type" estimate might be $1 billion.

Dozier said he first found out his fields contained gold nine years ago.

He wanted to dig a few pits on the marginal farmland because it floods nearly every year. The pits would catch the water and protect his fields but he needed a way to make digging the pits pay for itself.

He knew the soil contained clay, so it was tested to see if it could be sold to a brick maker. The test showed plenty of clay, plus traces of gold.

Dozier did not get excited about the small traces of gold, though. "It was just a conversation piece."

Last fall, he was ready to sell his land to buy better farmland, but before he did, he wanted to make sure the land was not worth keeping for its mineral value.

He had tests done specifically to look for gold. Those assays showed gold content in his soil ranging from $2 per ton to $80 per ton, he said.

Dozier then began a crash course in geology. He can describe the three ways gold is formed, always through volcanic activity, and the reasons he is now convinced his 640-acre farm is on top of a mother lode.

When gold is formed, other minerals such as mercury, tungsten, cobalt and quartz are also present.

Man drives car over canyon wall

GOODING — A young Jerome man survived a plunge into Snake River Canyon about midnight Saturday.

But he had a night-long wait for help.

Gooding County Sheriff Robert Aja said Brad Hays, about 20, of Jerome was driving out of the canyon on the Niagra Springs road about midnight Saturday when the car hit a rough area of the road, went out of control and dropped over the canyon rim.

The sheriff said Hays' car rolled about 350 feet down the canyon, coming to rest in a pile of boulders. Fortunately, Aja said, Hays was thrown out about a third of the way down and landed clear of the careening vehicle. He said if the driver had remained in the car he would not have survived. The car was demolished.

It was not until Sunday morning that someone discovered the accident and notified officers, Aja said. Hays suffered a broken ankle, head cuts and severe bruises over his body. He was taken to St. Benedict's hospital in Jerome where his condition was listed as stable Sunday night.

Drowning victim's body still not found

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls County sheriff's deputies said searchers looked without success again Sunday for the body of Ray Hawkins, 47, Buhl, who slumped out of a boat into the Snake River last week after he apparently suffered a heart attack.

Sheriff Robert Aja of Gooding County said the Snake River water is extremely high, swift and murky, making search efforts difficult. He said boats are being used in the search but are patrolling the edges of the water to watch for the body to rise.

As swift as the water is, he said, the victim's body may have washed down stream for a considerable distance. Officers, volunteers and members of the Buhl and Twin Falls Search and Rescue units were still at the scene of the drowning late Sunday evening.

Critics fear safety impact of electrical hook-up fee idea

By RON ZELLAR
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Critics of a proposal to charge hook-up fees to discourage new electric heating and cooling say the plan could lead to fewer inspections and more fires.

However, in northern Idaho, where such a system has been in use more than a year, officials report few problems with people trying to sneak new furnaces past inspectors.

Twin Falls heating supply firms sell baseboard heaters and air conditioners for hundreds of homes each year. Grover's Pay-N-Pack last year sold 1,200 baseboard heaters, according to store manager Cal Wilson.

Many smaller units are installed without inspection permits, say state fire inspectors, a practice that could well increase if use penalties are added to inspection fees.

The Idaho Public Utilities Commission adopted the $50-a-kilowatt fee in March to provide service for new space heating, air conditioning and large water heaters in the Idaho Power Co. service area. Contractors have estimated the fee would add $750 to the cost of a new home heated and cooled with electricity.

The IPUC delayed implementing the order and heard new testimony last week after appeals from Idaho Power Co. and a Boise heating and contracting firm.

Don Louder of Twin Falls, who owns Magic Valley Refrigeration, testified at the hearing that imposition of the hook-up fees would hurt sales of energy-efficient electric heat pumps without saving any energy.

Residents who prefer electric heat or cannot afford spiraling fuel oil bills will find ways to get around the order, he said, many by installing less efficient systems themselves.

Russ Sheridan, state electrical inspector in the Twin Falls area, said the State Electrical Bureau was understaffed now and could not be expected to help police the new order.

Sheridan also said fees that rely on electrical inspection permits could make it more difficult to accomplish the bureau's safety objectives.

Bureau Chief Artie Barker of Boise agreed.

"It could encourage people to put in service that is too small for their needs," Barker said. He said it has taken 40 years to convince owners of

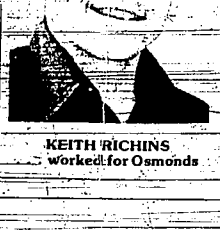
Rupert man likes setting explosions for 'special effects'



KEITH RICHINS
worked for Osmonds

By LINDA CATES
Times-News correspondent

RUPERT — Keith Richins is a small, shy man who makes big explosions.

"When I blow up a car, I use a half stick of dynamite and a lot of contact cement," said Richins, who is leaving the teaching profession to go back to making special effects for movies.

Richins says that doing special effects is "just fooling around and getting paid for it."

A 1970 graduate of Burley High School, Richins said his interest in special effects started as a youth.

Richins' hobby developed into a paying enterprise when he worked part-time at BYU in the scenery department. By 1978, he had advanced to doing effects for Osmond Studios for the Donny and Marie Show.

Because there are no movie companies in Idaho, Richins is moving to Utah where, according to him, there are more movies made than in any other state in the union. "There are 22 movies being filmed there at this time."

Richins had worked previously in Utah on numerous productions before he accepted a job at East Minico Junior High School as shop teacher last fall.

Last year Richins and two fellow workers from Utah, Rick Josephson and Lynn Maughn, teamed up to do the special effects for the movie, "Windwalker."

"We spent 10 weeks living in Park City and drove 60 miles every morning to the top of the Uintah Mountains for the filming," said Richins.

A family man with a wife and two children, Richins said the problems of working on location led him to try teaching school. But, "I can't feed my family on teachers' wages."

Richins is presented with some complicated problems when working on a movie. "One special effect we had to do in "Windwalker" was to burn down an Indian village," he said.

"We ran natural gas into the huts and used pilot lights and contact cement. I use contact cement because it makes lots of black smoke when it burns."

Richins said they took four consecutive nights to complete the burning of the village so that film crews could get the proper footages of film as called for in the script.

Another special effects job for "Windwalker" was an avalanche. Richins said they placed some explosives under a cornice of snow to create the avalanche.

Richins said he and his associates are specialists in the use of explosives for special effects.

"We don't go about it like a demolition crew. They'll blow a car to bits and there will be nothing left. We create a lot of noise and smoke instead."

Richins claims that his job is not dangerous. "There is no danger if you use sense. I've never been in a critical situation."

Richins has signed no contracts as yet for the summer, but he has an offer to work on a documentary and he hopes to land a job with the Osmond Studios. "I would like to do special effects on the back lot at the Osmond Studios for tourists," said Richins, who doesn't like to be away from his family for on-location filming.

older homes to install wiring that is adequate for today's appliances.

The IPUC has not determined how the new fees would be implemented. Public affairs spokesman Deanne Kloepfer said the commission typically asks the affected utility for suggestions on enforcement. The fees likely would apply only where heavier wiring is required.

Gary Cox, a Washington Water Power Co. division supervisor in Lewiston, said his company asks customers and contractors how large their new heating and cooling units are when responding to orders to install or upgrade service.

Cox said WWP experienced few enforcement problems with the new order in the past year. He added, however, the situation is different because the fees apply only where natural gas is available, and WWP also supplies natural gas to its service area.

"If we were discouraging business for ourselves in favor of a competitor, it might be a different story," he said.

Idaho Power officials testified that the order discriminates against new homeowners and residents who want to replace older, less-efficient furnaces, adding that natural gas suppliers also should be required to implement conservation programs as electric utilities have done.

Louder said if the fee is adopted he would probably advise customers to reduce the size of backup units, which are used only in cold weather. A heat pump for an average home requires between four and six kilowatts, he said. Resistance heaters used when temperatures drop below 10 degrees can add as much as 15 kilowatts to a house's electrical rating.

The commission heard testimony favoring a system of energy conservation credits to offset fees charged for new homes. Other witnesses urged exempting rural areas which do not have access to natural gas service.

The hearing record was left open for additional comments until Monday. A final decision is expected within a few weeks.

Gold

When gold deposits are washed into river beds over the generations, he said, those "associated minerals" are no longer present.

All of the associated minerals have been found on his land, Dozier said.

Finding gold is one thing, extracting it economically is another. Dozier set up a test plant last winter to see if he could profitably separate the gold from the soil.

"It uses an agitation process, like a large blender, pulverizing dirt to a liquid, then using gravity separation. It's a simple process," Dozier explained. "Gold is heavy so it falls, while other dirt washes away."

Simply put, it worked, he said.

So, at this point, Dozier sees nothing to stop him from beginning to mine, perhaps by fall.

Is this too good to be true? Dozier said he thought it was. His neighbors did not beleive it at first, either. Many others who have heard of the discovery still do not, he said.

But two or three of his neighbors are waiting anxiously to see if he succeeds, Dozier said. If he does have gold that can be economically extracted, there is a good chance they do too.

Getting started is expensive, though. His test plant yielded about $100 of gold, which he had made into a button. The button is not his, though. He needed it to help pay for the refining and testing.

To raise money, Dozier brought his father, Lester Dozier, and brother, Cecil Dozier into a family corporation to mine the gold. In addition to mining on the farm, they have also filed mining claims for about 1,300 acres of Bureau of Land Mangement desert land nearby.

They will still need more money to begin, Dozier said. He expects to give up about a half interest in the gold mine to attract investors. Once that is done, however, they will have a project that can go on for generations, he believes.

Ironically, the mediocre farmland that may turn out to be a gold mine, will also become better farmland if it is mined, Dozier said.

The mining will mix sand from lower levels with the clay in the topsoil, making a better combination for crops, Dozier said. Plus, he will finally be able to dig his flood-control pits.

SLC team hits 9 to win Twin Falls softball tournament

TWIN FALLS — Terra-Scape of Salt Lake City turned back the pages of softball history and handed McU's-Grainey's some of its own medicine Sunday.

Defending champion Terra-Scape used nine home runs and a barrage of other hits to defeat McU's-Grainey's of Boise 18-15 for the championship of the Twin Falls Slowpitch Major Softball Tournament at Harmon Park.

Before several team members split up and went different ways a few years ago, McU's displayed a powerul hitting attack which included several double-digit-home-run games. But the new-look McU's, with a new co-sponsor in Grainey's, didn't have what it used to Sunday.

The Boise team jumped out to a quick lead, extending it to 8-4 in the fourth inning. But after Terra-Scape scored twice to make it 8-6, Dave Doezie started off a show that sent several balls over the left-field wall. Doezie powered a line drive into the crowd of fans with the bases loaded. And with the exception of a brief setback in the fifth, Terra-Scape never trailed.

McU's-Grainey's abandoned its long game and resorted to a multitude of singles. Before leaving the fifth, McU's-Grainey's had taken an 11-10 lead.

Terra-Scape opened its half of the fifth with three home runs in six pitches to make it 13-11. Doezie then picked up his second round-tripper of the game, this time knocking in three runs to make it 16-11.

McU's-Grainey's got three solo shots in the sixth to make it 16-14, but Randy Jackman and Doug Tate of Terra-Scape, each hit their third homers of the game in the bottom of the sixth to establish the final margin.

In all, Terra-Scape sent nine balls out and McU's added five more.

Terra-Scape defeated only two teams to reach the finals. It knocked off Corner Pocket of Twin Falls in the quarterfinals and Douglas Distributing of Salt Lake City in the semis.

On the other hand, McU's-Grainey's worked its way into the finals by beating five teams and if it had won the first game with Terra-Scape, it would have been forced to defeat them again.

Douglas Distributing, who knocked McU's-Grainey's into the losers bracket, finished third.

Individually, Tony Saras of McU's-Grainey's, who was the only bright defensive spot in the championship game, was the tournament's Most Valuable Player. Saras also hit .667. Rory Barnes of Douglas Distributing went 18-for-24 for a .750 average, which was good enough to win him the tournament's Leading Hitter Award.

Rupert's Phillips wins season's last moto-cross event

ALBION — Professional Motor Sports Inc., closed its Marsh Creek Moto-Cross season Sunday with 11 winners and under sunny blue skies.

Of the 11 winners, Joe Phillips of Rupert came away with the top prize of $72 in the open expert class. A total of 60 riders competed on the 1.4 dirt track.

Professional Motor Sports Inc. will pick up with another season sometime later this summer. Phillips, an organizer for the races when he's not on his bike, said the group was shooting for "sometime in August."

In other categories, Burley's Clay Crofts won the mini-bike race.

In the 125 class, Chaney Brewer of Buhl defeated Omar Gonzales of Burley for the beginners title. Twin Falls—Ed—Drexler topped Todd Anderson of Burley in the intermediate chase and Doug Dubach won the expert class, picking up $72. Dubach is from Costa Mesa, Calif., and travels the Northwest competing in moto-crosses during the summer.

Ron Fassett led a group of three winners in the 250 class. The Minidoka resident out-raced Scott Luttmer of Hagerman for the top prize in the beginners division. Sun Valley's Terry Berg was crowned the top racer in the intermediate class and Curtis Holmes of Burley was the expert victor. Holmes also won a check for $72.

In the open class, Merle Egan of Burley was the winner of the beginners race and Ted Luttmer of Hagerman won the intermediate chase. Richard Thompson of Burley won the old-timers race.

Looking forward to career in Los Angeles

Ken Landreaux wants to show Twins he's no 'head case'

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Among baseball insiders, Ken Landreaux is known for having one of the sweetest swings in the game. There have also been whispers that he is one of the supreme "head cases."

Those whispers intensified in March when the Minnesota Twins traded the 26-year-old outfielder to the Los Angeles Dodgers for infielder-outfielder Mickey Hatcher.

How else do you explain trading a proven veteran whose 31-game hitting streak last year was the American League's longest in 31 seasons, for a player who entered this season with a .249 career batting average in only 177 plate appearances?

"Maybe they didn't like me," Landreaux said.

The left-handed hitter, who batted .305 and .281 in his two seasons at Minnesota, does not take it as a personal affront that he was viewed with disfavor by the Twins' front office.

"All you have to do is look at who they let go before me," he said. Among the top-caliber players who left Minnesota before Landreaux were Larry Hisle, Lyman Bostock and Rod Carew.

The Landreaux trade was viewed even more suspiciously since the Twins called him the "key" of four players they acquired from California in 1979 in exchange for Carew.

"I really don't know why they traded me," Landreaux said. But he noted the Twins under owner Calvin Griffith have never been known to be especially generous with their employees.

Minnesota did shell out big money to sign Roy Smalley, Butch Wynegar and John Castino. But Landreaux said, "It was obvious they didn't want to pay me what I thought I'd be worth. I disagreed with their program. I did things that had nothing to do with their policies.

"Sometimes I wouldn't take batting practice, and they didn't like it. But I was just pacing myself, doing what I had to do to be ready. That's how I got the reputation for being an attitude problem."

Dodger Manager Tom Lasorda said he hasn't had any problems with Landreaux, who has been instrumental in the team's flying start, plugging what had been a hole in center field and coming up with timely hits.

"He's one of best young players in the game," said Dodgers' left fielder Dusty Baker, "and he's becoming one of the best players, period."

Second baseman Davey Lopes concurred.

"Landreaux has solidified the whole team," he said. "He's our trump card. I don't know why the Twins gave up on him, but I'll tell you one thing, I'm sure glad they did."

Landreaux, who grew up in nearby Compton before starring at Arizona State, thinks his exile from Minnesota may have been hastened by the manner in which he wore his baseball pants. Honest.

He said for as long as he can remember, he has stretched his pants as far as they will go, mid-calf length, so that only the stirrups of his socks show.

"I just like the fashion," he said. "Rolling my pants up doesn't feel comfortable."

Landreaux said certain people in Minnesota — he won't use names, "they know who they are" — didn't approve of his style.

The controversy over Landreaux's attire started last May, while Landreaux was in the midst of his 31-game hitting streak.

"They had this insignia on the socks, a TC like they have on their caps," he said. "The way I wore my pants, the insignia was covered. The front office came to me, and said, 'That's the rule, that's how we want it done.'

"They said they were going to fine me $1,000 a day or $100. I forget how much. So I filed a grievance with the players association.

Stadler survives thief for Kemper win

BETHESDA, Md. (UPI) — Craig Stadler survived the theft of his golf ball on the final hole Sunday to fire a two-under par 68 to win the $400,000 Kemper Open golf tournament.

Stadler's score broke the 72-hole course record by five shots with a 10-under par 270.

Tom Watson and three-time Kemper Open winner Tom Weiskopf tied for second, six shots back of the burly Californian who carded 67-69-66 for his first three rounds over Congressional Country Club's 7,056-yards.

John Cook finished fourth at three-under-par 277, a shot ahead of Dave Edwards. Dave's brother, Danny, Tom Kite and D. A. Weibring were the only other players to break par, finishing one-under 279.

Stadler's only problem Sunday came on the 18th hole when he hooked his drive into the trees. A fan picked up the ball for a souvenir, but Stadler was given a free drop.

After punching a shot back on the fairway, Stadler needed two shots to reach the green and rolled in a two-foot putt for bogey and the victory.

After finishing second last year, three shots behind John Mahaffey, Stadler held a two-shot lead over John Cook and Weiskopf entering the final round.

Both fell under Stadler's relentless consistency. Cook on a yo-yo three-over par 73 round that included three birdies and six bogeys and Weiskopf on a two-over 72 with a double-bogey six on the 14th.

Kite and Weibring matched 70s Sunday. Kite's even-par round was his third of the tournament, to go with a 68 Saturday.

Dave Edwards had a one-under 71 Sunday while Danny, the second-round leader six under par, finished with a two-over 72.

Stadler, who last year won the Bob Hope Desert Classic and the Greater Greensboro Open, picked up a check for $72,000 pushing his year's earnings to $146,452. He also went over the half-million dollar mark, pushing his career total to $535,272.

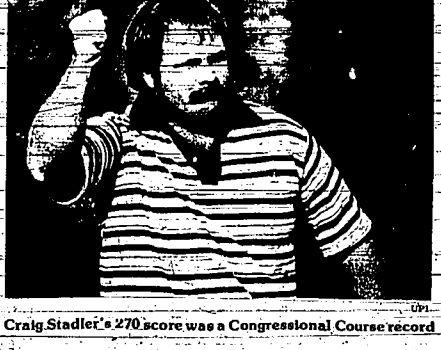
Watson made a semi-serious run at Stadler, firing a three-under par 67 Sunday. But Watson's bid for his third victory of the year fell short when he took a bogey five on the 17th hole and finished at four-under 276.

Watson never got back the strokes he lost Saturday when he 4-putted the 602-yard ninth hole for a double-bogey seven.

Jerry McGee, the 1979 Kemper Open winner at Quail Hollow Country Club in Charlotte, N.C., before the tournament moved to Congressional, fired Sunday's best round, a 4-under 66, but finished 1-over for the tournament.

Mahaffey's previous course record 275 was good enough to win last year when Congressional's slick greens were baked hard by week-long temperatures in the 90s and no rainfall.

Congressional, its greens softened by rains Wednesday night, Thursday and again Saturday night, played easier than last year when Mahaffey had to play the final nine holes three-under-par, including birdies on the final two holes, to get five-under for the tournament.



Craig Stadler's 270 score was a Congressional Course record

Carlton wins eighth straight

By United Press International

National League

Fernando who?

While rookie sensation Fernando Valenzuela has been getting all the headlines, steady Steve Carlton simply continues to win. The unbeaten Carlton fired a five-hitter to win his eighth game of the season Sunday and batterymate Bob Boone delivered a two-run single to lead the Philadelphia Phillies to a 6-1 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals.

The triumph moved the Phillies into first place in the National League East and knocked the Cardinals out of the top spot for the first time since May 8. St. Louis has lost six of its last seven games.

In tying Valenzuela for the major-league lead in victories, Carlton struck out six and walked three. It was his 10th victory in a row over St. Louis and 30th lifetime since beig traded by the Cardinals to Philadelphia in 1972.

St. Louis took a 1-0 lead in the third on Tom Herr's RBI single, but the Phillies touched loser Silvio Martinez, 1-4, for three runs in the fourth. A walk to Mike Schmidt and singles by Dick Davis and Garry Maddox produced one run and, after Larry Bowa reached on a fielder's choice and stole second, Boone drove in two more runs with a single.

Montreal 5, Pittsburgh 1

At Montreal, Andre Dawson cracked his 12th home run and Gary Carter delivered a two-run single to back the six-hit pitching of Steve Rogers and spark the Expos.

New York 3, Chicago 2

At New York, hot-hitting Dave Kingman drove in a pair of runs with a double and his 11th homer and Randy Jones went 6 1-3 innings for his first Met victory, leading New York over Chicago.

San Diego 5, Atlanta 1

At San Diego, Luis Salazar collected four hits and Juan Eichelberger and Gary Lucas combined on an eight-hitter for the Padres.

Salazar's four-hit performance, following two hits in his last two at-bats Saturday night, gives him six straight hits and lifted his average 17 points to .299.

San Francisco 6, Houston 1

At San Francisco, Tom Griffin and Al Holland combined on a six-hitter and the Giants took advantage of the wildness of Nolan Ryan to defeat Houston.

Ryan, 4-3, walked six, tossed three wild pitches and had a balk before leaving the game after seven innings.

Los Angeles 16, Cincinnati 4

At Los Angeles, Derrell Thomas delivered three RBI singles and Rick Monday contributed a two-run homer to pace an 18-hit attack by Los Angeles.

After falling behind 4-0, the Dodgers erupted for seven runs in the third inning and added six more in the seventh to strengthen their NL West lead over Cincinnati to 5½ games.

Angels win 1st under Mauch

By United Press International

American League

Chicago had its share of improbable events Sunday.

First, Juan Beniquez, batting only .169, drove in four runs to spark California to a 7-4 victory over the Chicago White Sox in the first game of a double-header and present new Angels' Manager Gene Mauch with his first triumph.

The victory snapped the Angels' 10-game losing streak against Chicago.

Then, umpire Dale Ford, upset by what he called "taunting" by Chicago announcer Jimmy Piersall, threatened to force the White Sox to forfeit the second game of the double-header because he feared the incident could lead to a "riot".

Ford charged that Piersall, the Sox' color announcer, was leaning over the broadcast booth and making obscene gestures toward the umpiring crew. Ford, the first base umpire in the first game, claimed Piersall's actions were deliberately done to arouse feelings against the umpires.

Beniquez, who had only one RBI entering the game, drove in two runs with a bases-loaded double in the second and added a two-run single in the fifth off starter Steve Trout, 4-2.

Bobby Clark and Bert Campaneris singled home the Angels' final runs in the ninth.

Mike Witt, 4-4, struck out six and walked two in going the first seven innings for the victory.

In the nightcap, Carlton Fisk doubled in Mike Squires from first base with none out in the 10th inning to give the Chicago White Sox a 2-1 victory for a split. Squires led off with a walk off reliever Don Aase, 1-1, and scored on Fisk's line drive to left field that made a winner of Lamarr Hoyt, 4-1.

Cleveland 7, New York 2

At Cleveland, Len Barker, 4-2, fired a six-hitter for his first victory since his perfect game May 15 and Alan Bannister and Bo Diaz drove in two runs apiece. It was Barker's first career victory over the Yankees in six decisions. Rudy May, 4-4, took the loss.

Minnesota 5, Kansas City 4

At Bloomington, Minn., Dan Goodwin singled in pinch runner Gary Ward with two out in the eighth. Goodwin's single off the glove of shortstop U.L. Washington dropped Dennis Leonard to 5-6. Jack O'Connor, the third Minnesota pitcher, allowed no hits in 2 2-3 innings and earned the victory.

Oakland 6, Toronto 5

At Toronto, Wayne Gross' sacrifice fly capped a two-run ninth that helped Oakland break a 10-game road losing streak and snap Toronto's four-game winning streak. Reliever Bob Owchinko earned the victory while Bo McLaughlin fell to 0-4.

Detroit 5, Baltimore 4

At Baltimore, Lynn Jones stroked a two-run double in the seventh and designated hitter Stan Papi belted a two-run homer Sunday to rally Detroit from a four-run deficit. Reliever Kevin Saucier earned his fifth save, preserving the victory for reliever Aurelio Lopez. Scott McGregor, 5-2, took the loss.

Milwaukee 5, Boston 2

At Boston, Marshall Edwards knocked in a pair of runs and Jim Gantner led off the game with his first home run of the year. Pete Vuckovich, 6-2, was the winner while Steve Crawford, 0-4, took the loss.

In other games, California was at Chicago for the nightcap and Seattle was at Texas.

Seattle 5, Texas 3

At Arlington, Texas, Joe Simpson went 3-for-5 and drove in three runs and Dan Meyer was 4-for-5 with an RBI. Brian Allard, 3-1, combined with Shane Rawley to scatter 11 hits with Rawley earning his fourth save. Ferguson Jenkins, 3-4, suffered the loss.

The Mariners had $3,500 worth of equipment stolen early Sunday morning and were forced to wear their practice jerseys, Milwaukee Brewers' caps and Texas batting helmets for the game.

Valentine joins Mets

NEW YORK (UPI) — His stormy 4½-year relationship with the Montreal Expos behind him, Ellis Valentine officially joined the New York Mets Sunday to begin life with "my new family."

The gifted 26-year-old right fielder drove down to New York from Canada and met the media in an impromptu press conference in Manager Joe Torre's office following New York's 3-2 triumph over the Chicago Cubs.

Valentine, 6-foot-4 and 218 pounds, is a former All-Star and Gold Glove winner who fell out of favor with Montreal management, which questioned his attitude. He will not be available for duty until Friday, when he is eligible to come off the disabled list.

"If he can pinch hit, I'll play him," said Torre, who wants to make sure Valentine's pulled hamstring recovers completely.

Valentine played in only 86 games with the Expos last year, suffering from a fractured cheekbone, a hip injury and a sprained wrist. A lifetime .290 hitter, Valentine batted .315 in 1980 and had 13 homers and 67 RBI in his limited appearances.

He won the Gold Glove in 1978 when he had 24 assists and he represented the Expos in the 1977 All-Star Game. Valentine averaged 24 home runs and 78 RBI between 1977-79, but he has never played in more than 151 games in a season.

"I had a few problems in Montreal," he said. "I had bad emotions and I didn't think I was treated fairly.

"This is like being with a new family."

Borg embarrasses American opponent in French Open

PARIS (UPI) — Five-time champion Bjorn Borg, carrying out a merciless execution on center court, beat Terry Moor of the United States in straight sets Sunday to advance to the quarterfinals of the $611,000 French Open.

The 24-year-old Swede swept to a 6-0, 6-0, 6-1 fourth-round victory with a supreme display of skill which set the alarm bells ringing for major rivals Jimmy Connors and John McEnroe.

Moor, good enough to be listed 34th in the ATP world rankings, could only marvel at Borg's performance.

"Borg is a player in another world," said the 29-year-old from Memphis, Tenn., who suffered the most lopsided defeat of his professional career.

After losing the first two sets and trailing 0-5 in the third, Moor's only goal was to win a game and prevent an embarrassing whitewash. He managed to do this in the next game to the accompanyment of a tremendous roar of approval from the crowd of 17,500.

"It was the biggest cheer I have ever had since I started playing tennis. I thought of going down on my knees like Borg does when he wins Wimbledon, but I decided not to," Moor said, using his humor to soften the defeat. "I can't remember ever having lost 17 straight games before and I hope it never happens again.

"This is the first time I have played Borg and I don't want to play him again," the left-hander continued to say. "I can't see how anyone can beat that guy. He's just awesome."

Borg, whose next opponent is 15th-seeded Hungarian Balazs Taroczy, denied allowing Moor to win this one game.

"I never feel sorry for any opponent. When I go out there to play I just go out to win my match. If its 6-0, 6-0, 6-0, that's fine with me," he said.

The world's top-ranked player, who had been sidelined for six weeks with a shoulder injury, was pleased with his form.

"I have won four matches here now and I am improving my game with every match, this was the best game so far for me in a long time. I was not missing anything and moving well. I feel very confident."

While Borg needed only 73 minutes to eliminate Moor, Taroczy was made to labor three hours, 18 minutes before edging French hope Thierry Tulasne 7-5, 6-3, 5-7, 6-3.

The 17-year-old Frenchman stretched Taroczy to the limit before fading in the fourth set with the score 3-3.

Paraguayan Victory Pecci continued to have an easy passage to the last eight. The South American, whose third-round opponent Gene Mayer retired because of injury Saturday, had little trouble against 14th seeded Wojtek Fibak of Poland, who surrendered tamely 6-2, 6-1, 6-3.

The other half of the draw will be completed today when second-seeded Jimmy Connors meets fellow-American Mel Purcell, No.3 seed McEnroe faces Ecuador's Ricardo Ycaza, fifth-seeded Czechoslovak Ivan Lendl plays 13th seeded Peter McNamara and seventh-seeded Argentinian Jose Luis Clerc plays Brazil's Carlos Kirmayr.

McEnroe made heavy work of his third-round match Sunday, dropping a set before beating 19-year-old French-based Uruguayan Diego Perez 6-1, 2-6, 6-0 6-4.

American teen-ager Kathy Rinaldi continued to steal the limelight from the leading contenders in the women's event, beating 11th-seeded compatriot Annie Smith 6-1, 4-6, 6-3 to become the youngest player to reach the quarterfinals.

Rinaldi, who celebrated her 14th ... ay only two months ago, pulled back from a 1-3 d.f. ... it to take the deciding set and score her second big upset. On Saturday she banished eighth-seeded Australian Dianne Fromholtz.

"Anne played very well in the second set," Rinaldi said before telegramming news of her victory to her father and coach in Stuart, Fla. "I just hung in there, I really wanted to win that match bad. I guess my dad must be feeling proud. I am only sorry he could not make it over here to see me."

The young American faces a severe quarterfinal test against fourth-seeded Czechoslovak Hana Mandlikova, a 6-3, 6-1, winner against American Bettina Bunge.

Rinaldi's idol, four-time champion Chris Evert Lloyd, peeled off the last 11 games to beat Britain's Virginia Wade 6-3, 6-0 in her fourth-round match and set up a repeat of last year's final against Virginia Ruzici. The Romanian No. 5 seed, champion in 1978, earned her quarterfinal date against Evert with a 6-3, 6-3 victory over American Pam Teeguarden.

Villeneuve surprisingly captures Monaco Grand Prix; Jones 2nd

MONTE CARLO, Monaco (UPI) — Canadian Gilles Villeneuve won his first Formula One auto race in almost two years Sunday, driving his Ferrari to a dramatic and unexpected victory at the Monaco Grand Prix.

The 29-year-old driver bided his time for most of the 76-lap race, held in blazing sunshine around the streets of his adopted hometown, before taking advantage of others' misfortunes to beat second-place Australian Alan Jones by 40 seconds with a time of 1 hour, 54 minutes and 23.38 seconds for the 155 miles.

He profited from a disastrous error by early leader, Nelson Piquet, which put the Brabham-driving Brazilian out of the race, and from fuel problems bedevilling Jones to snatch the lead with just four laps left.

Only seven of the 20 starters survived the heat and the tortuous 2.058-milecircuit to take the checkered flag.

Experts predicted the turbo-charged Ferrari would overheat and blow up but Ferrari was the only team with two cars to finish.

Villeneuve, 30 seconds behind Jones with 10 laps to go, took his chance after the World Champion made a lightning pit-stop for fuel.

He caught Jones's ailing Williams, sped past at the start of the 73rd lap and pulled away to win by almost 40 seconds.

It was the Canadian's fifth Grand Prix win and his first since the U.S. East in 1979.

Jones's second place lifted the Australian to second spot in the world drivers' championship standings.

He has 24 points, two more than Piquet but still 10 behind teammate Carlos Reutemann of Argentina, who Sunday broke a record sequence of 15 consecutive finishes in the top six when he was forced to retire with gear-box trouble just before the halfway mark.

Mario Andretti, winnner of the disputed Indianapolis 500 a week ago, crashed out in the opening seconds.

Just after the race started two cars collided. Going up the hill from the first bend, the Alfa Romeo of Andretti, the 1978 world champion, and the McLaren of Italian Andrea de Cesaris touched wheels, and both went out of the race.

Villeneuve is confident of improving his ranking this year.

"The next few Grand Prixs will suit our turbo-motors," he said. "Today I had some trouble at the beginning with road-holding but I got over that as my car got lighter as fuel was used."

Piquet started from pole position and dominated the race for 53 laps. He led first from Villeneuve and then from Jones, opening up a commanding 30-second advantage before the world champion's aggressive driving brought the two bitter rivals nose to tail for several laps.

But then Piquet made a bad mistake which cost him the race and the chance to reduce the gap on Reutemannin the drivers' standings.

On the 54th lap, Piquet tried to overtake backmarkers Patrick Tambay and Eddie Cheever, but lost his steering and slid into a guard-rail.

The heat and demanding circuit took their inevitable toll as cars blew up or drivers lost concentration.

Frenchman Jacques Laffite drove steadily throughout in his Talbot to take third place.

Reynolds wins first LPGA crown

GREENWICH, Conn. (UPI) — Cathy Reynolds, battling an attack of bronchitis, fired an even-par 72 Sunday to win a $125,000 LPGA tournament by two strokes.

Reynolds captured her first title in four years as a pro while Betsy King took second.

Reynolds, who carried a two-shot lead into the final round over the 6,239-yard Stanwich Country Club course, finished with a 72-hole total of three-under-par 285 to collect the $18,750 first prize. Her triumph was the second straight first-time victory on the women's tour.

King shot a one-under 71 to finish at 287, good for $12,250, while Amy Alcott, who carded a 73, and Kathy Whitworth, with a final-round 72, tied for third at 289. JoAnne Carner was alone in fourth place at 290 after shooting a 74. South African Sally Little, in second place at the start of the final round, withdrew after 12 holes with hip and lower back problems.

The 24-year-old Reynolds, from Kansas City, Mo., credited her husband and caddy Dana Deveraoux and PGA star Tom Watson for her success.

"I'm sure that was the longest hug on the tour ever," a beaming Reynolds joked after after embracing her husband upon sinking her final putt on the 18th, collecting the $18,750 first prize. "Dana has given so much support; he's such a positive person."

Reynolds also said Watson had been a big help.

"He's the greatest, most consistent player in the world," Reynolds said. "We met in Kansas City a few weeks ago — Tom is is also from K.C. — and he helped with my short game: chipping, putting, bunker. I owe him a big thank you."

Reynolds, fighting bronchitis and an obvious case of nerves, had an early bogey on the second hole, but birdied the sixth, eighth and 10th holes before running into trouble with bogeys on the 11th and 17th.

King, who started the day three strokes back, closed to within two by the turn, but had a bogey on the 10th and never got closer than two strokes again.

"I had said yesterday that shooting even par in the final round would win," said Reynolds, who had scores of 70, 71 and 72 in her first three rounds. "I'm glad I was consistent and I can't tell you how much this means to me."

It was the first time in two years that first-time winners had captured titles back-to-back on the LPGA tour. Kathy Hite captured last week's stop for her maiden victory.

"It's been a good month for first-timers," King said after congratulating Reynolds. "I came close. This was the best finish of my career. And my best check."

Defending champion Beth Daniel finished at 294, tied for 15th place.

Nancy Lopez-Melton, who ballooned to a second-round 80, finished 20 strokes off the pace in 53rd place — her worst finish in her four-year career.

Broncos deny link of drugs to crime

DENVER (UPI) — The key figure in a cocaine-marijuana investigation of three Denver Broncos starters says the players' drug usage was strictly social and they had no ties to organized crime.

The investigation, begun seven months ago, is being conducted by the National Football League and the Colorado Organized Crime Strike Force.

NFL Commissioner Pete Rozell has the authority to suspend the players, whose names have not been made public, fine them or even void their contracts.

"At this point we have been assured that no criminal prosecution involving any players is contemplated," said an NFL spokesman. "However, violations of NFL drug policies may be indicated."

Meanwhile, the man who was the Broncos' chief drug connection told the Rocky Mountain News that he supplied cocaine and marijuana to eight to 10 Broncos during the past several years.

The interview was conducted at a Colorado prison where the dealer — who requested anonymity — is awaiting trial on assorted charges. He said he felt compelled to publicly discuss the investigation because "I want to help the players as much as possible. I think people have gotten the wrong impression."

A former restaurant employee, he said he began dealing drugs on the side in 1977 — the year Denver went to the Super Bowl. And it was that year he met several Bronco players, with whom he played chess and backgammon.

"I might get together with one or two on Monday and drink wine and snort some coke," he said. "For the players, I think it was a way to escape reality. Those players weren't taking the drugs to help them in a game. It was for relaxation. The pressure on them is so intense."

The drug dealer said he provided cocaine to about 30 to 40 prominent Denver residents, including members of an area district attorney's office, and that the eight to 10 Bronco players he serviced represented only about 5 percent of his business.

"I sold to players who were on other teams and dropped into town," he said.

He said he sold to some former All-Pro who probably will be in the Hall of Fame one day. He said he also had dealings with former members of the Denver Nuggets' basketball team.

The drug dealer, whose claims were supported by lie detector tests, said he obtained the cocaine he sold from a friend who made regular flights to Bogota, Colombia, and that organized crime was not involved.

"Those NFL guys have been in here (the prison for interviews) a bunch of times, and that's (organized crime) what they seemed most concerned about," he said.

"The players were just into the social use of drugs, like practically everybody else. The only thing I ever got out of any of the Broncos was a couple of tickets to a game once, and I didn't even use them."

Authorities unable to locate Shavers

WARREN, Ohio (UPI) — A felony warrant charging former heavyweight boxer Earnie Shavers with writing a bad check has still not been served, though it was issued a month ago.

Trumbull County Sheriff Richard Jakmas said Saturday he has been unable to locate Shavers, despite repeated trips to his Mecca Township home.

The warrant accuses Shavers of purchasing gold coins from the Pilloli Coin and Stamp Co. of Boardman with a $9,875 check which he could not cover.

Jakmas said Shavers' wife has told deputies that her husband is out of state. Boardman police were told he was in Maryland.

Shavers announced his retirement from the ring in February and currently operates a janitorial service in Warren.

In April, the Trumbull Savings and Loan filed foreclosure action on its $75,000 mortgage on Shavers' home, but the case is still pending.

J.C. Watts signs with CFL's Ottawa

OTTAWA (UPI) — Former Oklahoma quarterback J.C. Watts, the Most Valuable Player in the Orange Bowl the past two seasons, Sunday signed a 2-year contract with the Ottawa Rough Riders of the Canadian Football League.

Watts had been drafted as a defensive back by the New York Jets in the eighth round of this year's NFL draft. But a desire to play quarterback led Watts to sign with Ottawa.

The 5-foot-11, 192-pound quarterback spearheaded the Sooners to two straight Orange Bowl victories over Florida State, including a superb performance last season when he returned to throw the winning touchdown pass after earlier being knocked out of the game by a tackle.

In the 1980 season, Watts completed 31-of-80 attempts for 905 yards and gained another 673 yards on the ground.

The signing of Watts was the first major one for the Rough Riders, who earlier dealt former star quarterback Condredge Holloway to the Toronto Argonauts and lost free agent fullback Mike Murphy when he signed with the Montreal Alouettes.

Automobile death to be checked out

PENTICTON, British Columbia (UPI) — The head-on collision that claimed the life of hockey player Don Ashby is under investigation, an RCMP officer said Sunday.

Constable Al McKinnon said a report of the accident, which occurred about 10 miles north of Penticton Saturday morning, will be placed in the hands of the crown prosecutor in Penticton.

Ashby and his wife Terry were returning from Witchita, Kan., to their home in Kamloops, B.C. when they were involved in a head-on collision with a pick-up truck about 8:30 a.m. MDT.

Ashby played most of last hockey season with Witchita Wind of the Central Hockey League, the top farm club of the NHL Edmonton Oilers.

McKinnon said Ashby, 26, was trapped in his vehicle for about an hour before rescuers could extricate him. He was taken first to hospital in nearby Summerland, B.C. and then transferred to hospital in Penticton, where he died about 1:30 p.m. MDT.

His wife was treated in Summerland hospital for a broken jaw and facial lacerations. She was released from hospital and taken to Kamloops with her parents.

The driver of the pick-up truck, Raymond Storteboom, 21, was treated for bruises and released, while his passenger received a broken jaw and bruises.

Fan kills himself over team's play

GELSENKIRCHEN, West Germany (UPI) — A 24-year-old fan of the Schalke 04 soccer club, apparently depressed by the team's poor showing, killed himself Saturday by jumping from a pedestrian bridge near the club's Park Stadium.

Schalke 04, which tied 1-1 Saturday against Nuernberg, is in 17th place out of 18 teams in the West German First Division. The team faces relegation to a lower division next season.

Police said he jumped after leaving the stadium in what appeared to be a fit of depression at the club's poor showing.

Well-known French cycle racer killed

RIJEKA, Yugoslavia (UPI) — Michel Rougerie, one of France's best-known motorcycle racers, was killed Sunday during a 350cc Grand Prix race won by American Randy Mamola.

Rougerie, 31, crashed on the second lap of the race and was struck by another rider. He was taken to hospital, but was dead on arrival.

Mamola increase his lead in the 500cc World Championship with the victory over Italy's Marco Lucchinelli Sunday.

The two Suzuki riders battled throughout the race and at the finish there was only 20 yards between them after 83 miles of racing. The two riders raced so closely that on a few corners their machines actually touched as they jousted for the lead.

For most of the race, the duel between Lucchinelli and Mamola was joined by Kenny Roberts and Barry Sheene and Graeme Crosby. Mamola's Suzuki teammate, but they were unable to keep the grueling pace.

Roberts finished third and held on to second place in the World Championship, but Lucchinelli's second place, coupled with his win in the last Grand Prix in France, has lifted him to third place in the championship, only three points behind Roberts.

By Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag

Oswald: "F.M. Hargreave has a regular article in 'International Popular Bridge' about the 'Frenzied Four' who play hilariously bad bridge at a British golf club. Here they are at their 'best'."

Alan: "You can't fault South's opening six notrump. He had read that 33 high-card points were enough for a slam, and he held 33 points."

Oswald: "Hargreave describes how South cashed four spades to start proceedings and continued with the ace and king of diamonds. He didn't really count, but he did notice that East had shown out on the second diamond so he stopped to cash the ace and king of clubs and ace of hearts. He had noted that the queen of clubs had not fallen, so he led a red 10."

Alan: "South had led the 10 of diamonds by mistake. West played his jack and South asked, 'Don't you have any hearts?' East replied, 'I don't have to answer that question' and eventually South saw what he had done."

Oswald: "Strangely enough, the slam was now cold. West had to lead a diamond to South's queen and poor East had to throw the queen of clubs or unguard the queen of hearts."

Alan: "However, South still went down. East threw his queen of clubs, but South had forgotten that the jack of clubs had been played from dummy, so he tried unsuccessfully to cash two more heart tricks."
