

State surplus larger than expected

By LARRY SWISHER
Times-News writer

BOISE — Tax collections should exceed state spending by $13.5 to $19 million this fiscal year, which ends June 30. As of May 31, the state had collected $366.6 million in general account revenues, according to the Idaho Division of Financial Management.

The state budget was cut back to $380 million during the 1980 recession.

But with a month left in fiscal year 1981, collections would easily reach $393.5 million — $13.5 million more than expenditures, Larry Schleht, deputy director, said Tuesday.

Russell Westerberg, executive manager of the Associated Taxpayers of Idaho, was more optimistic. He predicted an overrun of $15 to $19 million.

Both projections are based on the latest figures from the State Department of Revenue and Taxation and other agencies.

Unless the state Board of Examiners restores some of the cutback in state spending, the money would become surplus for use by the Legislature.

The board is scheduled to meet next week in Boise to consider requests from state agencies to lift the spending holdback.

"What I failed to recognize (even) six months ago was the real strength of Idaho's economy," Westerberg said. "People are still working and are making more money than they did last year."

State revenues come from the sales tax, personal and corporate income tax, interest on investments, insurance premium tax and other sources.

The recession temporarily hit Idaho and caused tax collections to shrink but the state's economy recovered quickly, Schleht said.

"It actually started back in the winter months. We didn't see the downturn in revenue we had expected because of the national recession."

Schleht attributed the recovery to a relatively mild winter, which allowed such work as building and timber harvesting to get an early start.

Late last year, Westerberg expected the recession to force a reduction in personal income, but it did not happen.

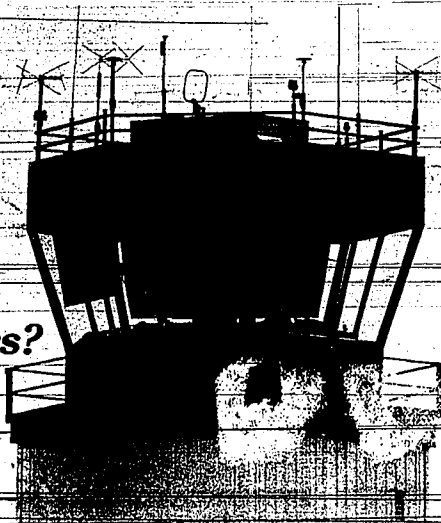

"The consumer hasn't had confidence. Sales tax collections are still flat," he said. People are not spending their earnings on automobiles, houses and other large credit purchases.

"But I think employers continued to grant cost-of-living raises and with a few exceptions did not respond to the national recession by laying off workers."

Although he predicted a flat economy this summer, Schleht said the current revenue picture portends well for fiscal year 1982 revenues as well.

The GAO has urged closing the Twin Falls airport tower, eliminating controlled approaches

Study urges tower be closed

By The Times-News
and United Press International

WASHINGTON — Millions of dollars could be saved by closing 66 unnecessary air traffic control towers — including the Twin Falls tower — a government study says.

The study by the General Accounting Office, the government watchdog agency, says a control tower at Idaho Falls also could be closed.

According to the GAO report, released last week, the Federal Aviation Administration could have saved $5.6 million in 1980 by closing 21 obsolete towers. It could have saved almost $1 million more by cutting the hours of operation at 17 other towers, the report said.

The FAA operates 444 towers at a cost of about $400 million a year. Twice in the last 12 years, the FAA has established new criteria for identifying unjustified towers. At the same time, though, it created "grandfather clauses" allowing existing towers that did not meet the guidelines to remain open.

"It's not easy to close an existing facility," said Bob Newby, facility chief at the Twin Falls tower.

For the FAA to act on the GAO recommendation and close the Twin Falls tower, it would have to conduct an impact study and hold hearings before Congress. Local residents would have a chance to protest and possibly block such a move, he said.

If the FAA were to shut its Twin Falls tower, the Twin Falls-Sun Valley Regional Airport would be uncontrolled as the Sun Valley and Burley airports are now, Newby said.

The burden would be placed on pilots to check conditions and make their own decisions during takeoffs and landings, he said.

Under those conditions, Newby said, Republic Airlines, which flies

DC-9 jets into Twin Falls, would probably pull out "as soon as possible."

However, Republic spokesman Walter Hellman said the airline currently serves about 10 airports without FAA control towers. Pilots rely on instruments to avoid other aircraft, Hellman said, while radio contact with company personnel on the ground gives them information on weather and ground conditions.

The GAO noted that FAA regional offices, in response to a query from FAA headquarters, had recommended 21 towers be closed.

Surplus funds won't be used to aid schools

By LARRY SWISHER
Times-News writer

BOISE — The lingering issue of increased funds for public schools appears dead for this year.

As a result, the Idaho Education Association's delegate assembly will probably be polled as early as August on whether to conduct an at-stand-until-vote strike vote of the 11,000 IEA members.

Three recent developments have blunted the efforts of teachers and others to get the Legislature to reconsider its $195 million appropriation for public education for 1981-82.

The developments are:
• Gov. John Evans said he would probably restrict July's special session of the Legislature to reapportionment, unless legislative support for other issues dramatically materializes. No major funding issues would thus be taken up until the regular 1982 session.

• Two of the three members of the State Board of Examiners favor using a $13.5 to $19 million state revenue surplus to reduce property taxes by $7.1 million.

• If the Board of Examiners returned the $7.1 million — which was the portion of last year's holdback in state spending made up by school district property taxpayers — school districts would not have the option of spending the money, the Attorney General's office has determined.

"It is unlikely a scenario other than board of examiners action will be available for relief to education," Attorney General David Leroy, a board member, said this week.

Leroy argues the tax reduction would encourage school district patrons' support of override levy elections and general support of education.

The money was collected in local school districts last year under Idaho

Lawyer denies any settlement offer made over Beans Inc.

By MARTY TRILLHAASE
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A local lawyer representing farmers in the Beans Inc. lawsuit said Tuesday he has not received any settlement offer from owners of the defunct Flier bean warehouse.

That statement comes in response to Salinas Mayor Jim Woods' claim that settlement negotiations were ongoing at the time the lawsuit was filed. Martin Taylor of Madera, Calif., was charged last month by Utah prosecutors with burning down the warehouse.

Woods is president and owner of Commodity Marketing Corporation, parent company of Beans Inc.

But Mark Stubbs, a lawyer representing the National Farmer's Organization in the ongoing lawsuit against Beans Inc., said he has never seen a settlement offer.

"Attorneys are obligated to communicate any and all settlement offers to their clients and we would pass any settlement offer immediately to our clients, the farmers, and give them the option," Stubbs said. "But no such offer has come forth."

Stubbs added lawyers authorized by Woods to negotiate have not directly communicated with the civil plaintiffs on the topic. Instead, Woods' representatives have been communicating with the Twin Falls County Prosecuting Attorney's office, Stubbs said.

Twin Falls prosecutors are exploring the possibility of filing criminal charges against Woods and Taylor.

Prosecutor Harry DeHaan acknowledged his office had been in contact with Woods' lawyers in Salinas, but added he has not received a settlement offer from Woods either.

DeHaan officially entered the case last month by initiating an inquiring magistrate proceeding, a move which gives him the power of subpoena to investigate the merits of filing criminal charges here.

Tuesday, DeHaan said his office had subpoenaed CMC documents, but he declined to say which documents were being called. The subpoenas represent the first step in an investigation the Twin Falls prosecutor said could take three months to complete.

DeHaan's efforts could figure prominently in the case because Woods and Taylor have indicated they will challenge the rights of the Salt Lake County Attorney's office right to file charges against them.

Lawyers for Woods and Taylor Monday disclosed they would seek a governor's warrant, a move which will require the Utah prosecutors to prove they can establish jurisdiction in the case, to a member of California Gov. Jerry Brown's staff before the defendants can be extradited to Utah.

A hearing before a member of Brown's staff is anticipated within the next 30 days.

The two defendants each have been charged with arson with intent to defraud and insurance fraud in connection with the July 30, 1979, fire which leveled one of the Flier bean warehouses.

Utah authorities entered the case because the insurance adjuster who represented the insurance companies that covered the warehouse, Glenn Bannerman, and one of the insurance companies, Fireman's Fund Insurance Co., were located in Salt Lake City.

DeHaan said he believes Salt Lake County attorneys can establish jurisdiction on the insurance fraud charge. But whether Salt Lake County officials can prosecute an alleged arson which occurred in another state is questionable.

"There is no question that we would have jurisdiction in the arson case," he said. But he added Idaho's arson statute requires a higher standard of proof than does the Utah law.

DeHaan disclosed he plans to meet next week with representatives of Idaho's and Utah's Attorney General offices to review evidence in the case.

Begin defends raid on nuke plant as 'moral act'

JERUSALEM (UPI) — Prime Minister Menachem Begin Tuesday defended the Israeli raid on an Iraqi nuclear reactor as a "supreme moral act" to save the Jewish state from another Holocaust.

If the plant is rebuilt, he said, it will be destroyed again.

Addressing a news conference in an emotional, defiant voice, Begin also rejected international criticism of the air raid on Baghdad Sunday and asserted that Iraq had been planning to build three to five Hiroshima-sized atomic bombs to drop on Israel.

He offered no evidence for the claim but said such an attack would cause up to 600,000 Israeli casualties and be comparable to another Holocaust.

"Despite all the condemnations heaped on Israel in the last 24 hours, Israel has nothing to apologize for," Begin declared. "It was a just cause. And it shall yet triumph... It was an act of supreme moral, legitimate national self-defense."

See related stories — A3

However, opposition Labor Party leader Shimon Peres said the Iraqi reactor posed no immediate threat and accused Begin of ordering the raid for "campaign considerations."

Begin faces a tough fight in June 30th elections, although his popularity in the polls has been boosted lately by the bellicose stand he has taken over the Lebanese missile crisis with Syria.

"We must tell the people what we feel: that the action was an election stunt," Peres said. "The reactor in Iraq has not yet posed a risk that required action at such an early stage."

Asked if Israel would deal a similar blow to Libya's attempt to develop atomic power, Begin said: "Let us deal first with that meshugana Saddam Hussein. The others we will deal with another time."

The Israeli prime minister, whom aides described as angry at U.S. criticism of the raid, said he had sent letters of explanation to President Reagan and Egyptian President Anwar Sadat.

Western diplomats said the raid, in which Israel used U.S.-built F-15 and F-16 jets to destroy a French-built nuclear reactor on the outskirts of Baghdad, was a keen embarrassment to Sadat, who only three days earlier met Begin at the Israeli leader's request to discuss the Lebanese missile crisis.

The diplomats also said the raid undercut U.S. envoy Philip Habib's efforts to defuse the Lebanese crisis by creating more distrust of the United States and enraging the Saudis, on whom Habib had been counting to negotiate with the Syrians.

Blanton convicted of bribery

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — Former Gov. Ray Blanton, booted from office in 1979 during a bribery scandal, was convicted Tuesday night of using his influence as governor to peddle liquor licenses to his friends.

The federal jury found Blanton, 51, guilty of one count each of extortion and conspiracy and nine counts of mail fraud after 45 hours of deliberations over six days. Blanton could be sentenced to 70 years in prison and fined $250,000.

His attorneys promised an immediate request for a new trial.

House passes anti-busing bill

WASHINGTON (UPI) — An anti-busing amendment, denying the Justice Department funds to sue school desegregation by shuffling students, sailed through the House Tuesday on a 265-122 vote.

The amendment, offered by Rep. Jim Collins, R-Texas, is identical to one passed by Congress last year but vetoed by President Carter.

Opponents said the measure would undermine efforts to end segregation, but Collins said, "The American people demand that we take action on this."

Only about a half-hour was devoted to debate of the amendment, tacked onto the Department of Justice authorization bill for 1982. The bill was later approved 353-42, and this difference with a similar Senate measure must be resolved.

Indian satellite disintegrates

NEW DELHI, India (UPI) — India's fledgling space program suffered a severe setback when an unmanned satellite bearing sophisticated cameras fell out of orbit and burned up in the Earth's atmosphere, a space official said Tuesday.

The "Rohini" satellite was launched only nine days ago and had been scheduled to remain aloft for 300 days. It was to take India's space program out of the experimental stage for the first time, space scientists said.

Fire outruns, kills biologists

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI) — Two biologists with the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service died of burns suffered while trying to outrun a forest fire in a game refuge near Kennedy Space Center, officials said Tuesday.

Don Pfitzer, a spokesman for the agency, said a line of squalls with gusting winds to 45 mph caught the men by surprise Monday as they dug a fire break.

Nephew of president slain

GUATEMALA CITY (UPI) — The bullet-riddled body of the kidnapped nephew of President Romeo Lucas Garcia was found in Guatemala City Tuesday less than one week after he was abducted, apparently by guerrillas, officials said.

A resident in the southern part of the capital found an unidentified boy in a street early Tuesday and reported it to friends who took him to the police to identify a motive for his disappearance.

The kidnap victim, on his way to work at the Agrarian Reform Institute when gunmen intercepted his car, was the son of President Lucas Garcia's brother, also an army general and one of the most powerful of Guatemala's military leaders.

No motive, clues in shooting

WICHITA, Kan. (UPI) — An autopsy Tuesday showed that a single bullet each to the head killed a couple who had been married only about a year, authorities said.

Police could find no sign of forced entry in the north Wichita home and no evidence of any struggle. Additionally, authorities have not found any suspects, determined a motive nor found many clues.

The bodies were discovered by the 16-year-old brother of Mrs. Rivers.

Mrs. Rivers had two boys, ages 3 and 6, who were in the one-story frame house at the time of the shooting, police said. The boys had checked on their parents but didn't know what was wrong so they didn't try to contact neighbors or authorities, police said.

Senate panel approves new federal death penalty bill

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate Judiciary Committee approved a sweeping death penalty bill late Tuesday.

It would include forms of terrorism and treason and attempted presidential assassination as capital crimes.

The Republican-dominated panel voted 13-5 for a measure that would put the federal death penalty back on the books, replacing a death-penalty statute that failed to meet a 1972 Supreme Court constitutional test.

The bill specifically provides the death penalty for terrorism that causes death and for acts of espionage or treason, even if no death occurs, if the defendant knowingly risked death or created a substantial damage to national security.

Directing acts of espionage or treason against nuclear weapons, military spacecraft, war plans, intelligence communications or major weapons systems or defense strategy would be considered "aggravating circumstances" under the bill and punishable by death.

In a 5-4 decision June 29, 1972, the Supreme Court ruled that the death penalty as usually enforced in the United States was a violation of the Eighth Amendment prohibition against cruel and unusual punishment.

The court held all death statutes unconstitutional that did not contain guidelines for jurors and judges in deciding whether circumstances warranted punishment by death.

The bill sent to the full Senate by the committee is modeled on a new Georgia law that has been approved by the Supreme Court. It calls for a separate hearing, following a conviction, on imposition of a death sentence.

Congress has established the death penalty for airplane hijackings that result in death, but has not yet enacted a replacement for its outlawed general death penalty statute. Thirty-four states have enacted new death penalty laws.

By a 9-4 vote, the panel approved the death penalty for attempted assassination of a president. That came after debate over whether the Supreme Court will allow capital punishment for a crime that does not result in death.

"The provision would apply if an attempt results in bodily injury to the president or otherwise comes dangerously close to causing the death."

Son, Howell Heflin, D-Ala., a former chief justice of the Alabama Supreme Court, said that definition is "highly subjective" and predicted the Supreme Court would hold it unconstitutional.

A committee staff member said constitutional experts testified in hearings that proposal would stand up. He said only the American Civil Liberties Union opposed it.

Small post offices may be closed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House Post Office Committee offered a half-hearted proposal Tuesday to close or merge thousands of post offices.

The proposal came as congressional panels worked to meet a Friday deadline for $35 billion in budget cuts.

The Post Office committee also suggested a delay in the nine-digit ZIP code to achieve budget cuts Congress ordered its committees to make.

But the panel made it clear it was offering the proposals only as technical compliance with the orders, and urged the full House to reject them.

The House Agriculture Committee, meanwhile, approved $2.5 billion in cuts in Agriculture Department programs for this year.

The measure includes a $1.46 billion reduction in food stamp spending approved earlier, and includes what Rep. William Thomas, R-Calif., called "unreal savings" in the dairy program.

The panel achieved a large chunk of its savings — $449 million — by simply claiming savings that Congress already made when it approved a lower minimum level for dairy price supports.

The House Education and Labor

Committee met Tuesday to work on its budget cuts but the meeting amounted to no more than political shadow-boxing between Democratic and Republican members.

Both sides planned to introduce a package of cuts but neither was prepared to do so. The committee broke up into the private sessions where the real work is being done, and scheduled another session Wednesday.

In a unique process called "reconciliation," being tested seriously this year for the first time, Congress will amend current laws to achieve the spending reductions ordered last month in the fiscal 1982 budget.

Examiners

law to make up a projected shortfall in state revenue.

It would be returned in the form of credits on county property tax bills, which are due in December.

If the board lifts the holdback for the schools, the owner of a home appraised at $94,000 in Twin Falls County would receive a credit of about $16 on his 1981 property tax bill.

"I think we are morally and legally obligated to pay that back," Secretary Pete Cernusca said, a member of the board of examiners, said Tuesday.

Another reason for lifting the holdback was advanced by Russell Westerberg, executive manager of the Associated Taxpayers of Idaho. He said property values would be reappraised next year and some would increase more than others. "If return of the holdback money were delayed until then, some property owners would receive more than others than they contributed in 1980."

"To get credit back to the taxpayer as nearly as possible in proportion to his contribution, they should make it as quickly as possible," Westerberg said.

The Board of Examiners is scheduled to meet next Monday in Boise to consider some $14 million in requests from state agencies to restore the holdback of state funds.

Since last year when the board ordered the $15.5 million holdback, state tax collections have rebounded. As of May 31, revenue exceeded state spending by $13.5 million, with one month left in the fiscal year.

Gov. John Evans, the third board member, and the Idaho Education Association have advocated, if legally possible, giving local school districts the option of using the funds to operate schools in 1981-82.

But Leroy and a Department of Education official said the law required the funds to be returned to taxpayers.

"If it has to be used for tax relief, we would just as soon let it be kept in the general fund of the state," IEA President LaMar Hagar said Tuesday.

The money could then be appropriated by the special session of the legislature in July. IEA members felt education was underfunded by the 1981 Legislature, Hagar said.

The IEA asked Gov. Evans to place the question of additional funding for the public schools on the Legislature's agenda.

If the special session did not address the funding question, the IEA's board of directors would poll the association's delegates on the question of whether to conduct a strike vote of its membership, Hagar said.

The poll was directed by a vote of the IEA's annual delegate assembly in April.

"I'm not sure what else we can do," he said. "We asked the governor to include it as part of the special session, but the way it looks, he's not going to do that."

Hagar said it appeared the poll of delegates would be taken but that he did not know what response would be received or when it might be taken.

The poll could be ordered by the next IEA board of directors meeting in August, he said.

Last month, Republican legislative leaders met with Cernusca and Leroy to discuss the holdback.

"It appears to me their feeling was we should look toward paying the taxpayer off first, and then that we shouldn't go into any vast amount of spending, if it is not necessary," Cernusca said.

He said he would view other requests and demands in terms of their importance and urgency.

"Then also, it might be well to leave some of these decisions to the next session of the Legislature," he said.

The same amount raised in each school district last year would have to be returned as a tax credit, Tom Vopat, chief of the Bureau of Finance in the Department of Education, said.

School districts would reduce their tax contributions to their counties by the same amount, he said.

In January, the Legislature projected $82 revenues at $422 million and state budget accordingly.

Gov. Evans had predicted revenues at $411 million.

Schlicht said the division was working on a revised projection significantly higher than the Legislature's.

He said a 14-percent growth in this year's tax collections would yield $450 million but that he felt more comfortable with a figure of $440 million.

Westerberg said he was sticking to the $422 million figure.

"The revenue projection committee of the Legislature has been very close to the mark," he said.

Legislative Auditor Bruce Balderson said he had not yet analyzed the latest revenue figures. Last month he predicted a $7 million surplus.

Tax Commission Chairman Jenkins Palmer, who has previously projected a $10 million surplus, was out of town Tuesday.

In August 1980, the Board of Examiners ordered the state budget cut by 3.85 percent, from $395 to $380 million, after state sales tax collections fell below the previous year's and income tax collections were static.

Today's weather

Twin Falls, Burley-Rupert, Jerome-Gooding areas.

Variable clouds with scattered showers at times today and Thursday. Winds variable but mostly westerly 5 to 15 mph. Highs middle 60s to low 70s both days. Lows 45 to 50. The Twin Falls pollen count Tuesday was 28 per cubic meter of air.

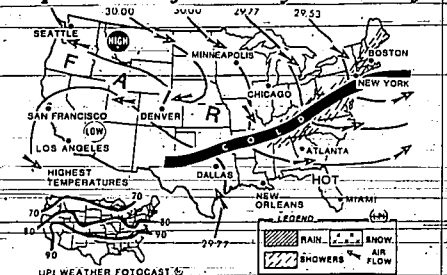

Camas Prairie, Halley, Wood River valley: Variable clouds through Thursday. Scattered showers at times today and Thursday. Highs upper 50s to middle 60s both days. Lows near 40.

Northern Utah and Nevada: Sunny through Thursday in Nevada. Mostly sunny today with variable clouds tonight and Thursday. Warmer days in Utah with highs in the 90s and in the 70s in Nevada. Lows in the 40s and 50s.

Synopsis: Sunshine was welcome in the Magic Valley Tuesday although there is a promise of more clouds and rain for late in the week.

While skies cleared in southern Idaho, overcast and a few showers were reported in the north. But another surge of moisture is on its way from the Pacific Ocean, the National Weather Service said, and is expected to maintain cool, damp conditions through the weekend.

Afternoon temperatures were generally in the 60s, with the warmest in Idaho being 75 at Hagerman. Morning minimums ranged from 24 at Stanley to 32 at Burley and Maeda.

Rainfall amounts were light, and only a little rain fell in the state. Early Tuesday afternoon, the National Weather Service issued a flood warning for the Teton River, which was still rising near St. Anthony and threatening to top dikes. The Snake River near Halsey was above flood stage but only minor problems were anticipated.

Earlier water releases were being made from Fallsides Reservoir to allow for heavy inflow from Wyoming rivers.

Conditions for cultivation and other outside farm work in the Magic Valley will be fair to locally good through Sunday. Because of a few showers, hay drying conditions will be poor to locally fair. Plant growth will be slow through the weekend due to mild temperatures.

Fan evaporation is forecast at 18 inch both days. Spraying conditions will be generally fair today with winds 5 to 12 mph but locally poor in showers.

Elsewhere in the nation Tuesday, the warmest temperatures were 112 at Blythe, Calif., while the coolest was 40 at West Yellowstone, Mont.

White House defends delay

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The administration said Tuesday its delay in confirming Israel's sneak attack on Iraq's nuclear reactor was "appropriate" and it made no attempt to deceive reporters.

State Department spokesman Dean Fischer said the Israeli government informed the administration of the attack shortly after it ended Sunday.

President Reagan was quickly informed, he said, but the administration did not confirm the attack until mid-morning Monday, after the Israeli government announced it first.

Washington did not immediately announce the attack because it wanted to gather more information, Fischer said, denying any collusion with the Israelis.

Congress split on 'violation'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Reacting cautiously to the Israeli raid on Iraq, members of Congress split Tuesday on a key question — did Israel violate U.S. law by using American jets to carry out the bombing mission?

Most members withheld their answers, pending briefings by the Reagan administration, but Sen. Mark O. Hatfield, R-Ore., called the destruction of the nuclear plant near Baghdad "one of the most provocative, ill-timed and internationally illegal actions taken in that nation's history."

Hatfield said the air strike was a "clear and unambiguous" violation of the Foreign Military Sales Act, which limits the use of U.S. weapons to defensive purposes.

But Assistant Senate Democratic leader Alan Cranston called the attack a defensive measure and probably not a violation of the law or any agreement between Washington and Tel Aviv.

Four House Democrats from northeast states defended the raid, saying Iraq publicly stated it would use nuclear bombs against Israel.

France condemns its 'friend'

PARIS (UPI) — President Francois Mitterrand Tuesday condemned Israel's raid, but Foreign Minister Claude Cheysson said the attack would not damage French-Israeli relations.

The government also announced that most of the 150 French technicians working on the Baghdad nuclear project would be evacuated.

Speaking during a visit in southeast France, Mitterrand said: "Any violation of the law will lead to our condemnation, whatever may be our feelings for Israel."

Cheysson, who earlier in the day lodged a protest against the attack with the Israeli ambassador, said in a radio interview that while Paris denounced the air strike, "France will not go so far as to strain its relations with Israel."

Egypt seeks arms embargo

CAIRO, Egypt (UPI) — The Egyptian parliament Tuesday asked the U.N. Security Council to consider military aid to Israel and several politicians said Egypt would protest by withdrawing its ambassador in Tel Aviv.

Foreign Minister Kamel Hassan Ali, in a strongly-worded statement delivered to the parliament, called the Israeli attack an "act of international terrorism" that violated the Camp David accords signed by Israel and Egypt.

Parliamentary observers said anti-Israel sentiment in the debate was the strongest since the Camp David treaty was signed in 1979. But despite the harsh rhetoric, none of the speakers suggested the treaty be renounced.

Soviets say U.S. aided raid

MOSCOW (UPI) — The Soviet Union said Tuesday the Israeli air attack on Iraq's nuclear reactor was "an act of gangsterism" inspired and financed by the United States.

"Billions of dollars flow in a continuous stream from the banks of the Potomac into the Israeli treasury to finance the Israeli aggression," an official statement carried by the Tass news agency said.

The United States has said it had no prior knowledge of the Israeli action.

"This act of gangsterism is a link in the long chain of Tel Aviv's crimes of which the ruling circles of the United States of America are direct accomplices, and in effect, inspirers."

How does U.S. react?

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Pentagon raised the possibility Tuesday of suspending weapons deliveries to Israel pending a decision on whether the Israelis violated U.S. law by using American warplanes offensively to destroy Iraq's nuclear installation.

Four more F-15s — the aircraft that dropped the bombs on the Iraqi facility Sunday — were scheduled to be delivered to Israel Friday at General Dynamics plant in Fort Worth, Texas.

Pentagon spokesman Henry Catto said it was "too early to tell" whether the delivery would be made. "I can't rule it in and I can't rule it out," he said.

But sources said top administration officials were upset that the Pentagon had discussed the possible cutoff.

Reagan met for 75 minutes with Secretary of State Alexander Haig and Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger and other National Security Council advisers to review the Israeli-Iraq situation.

Acting White House press secretary Larry Speakes said they discussed the U.S. position if the United Nations Security Council condemns the attack, but he declined to say whether halting the flow of arms to Israel was considered.

State Department spokesman Dean Fischer said no decision was expected on a report to Congress for another 24 to 48 hours, and there would be no immediate decision on the delivery of the F-15s.

Following, State Department and

CIA briefings for members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, Sen. S.J. Hayakawa, R-Calif., said the administration "may very well decide it was a legitimate defensive action" and that "perhaps a slight majority" in the Senate would agree.

Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, said it was "unlikely" the United States would embargo arms sales to Israel. "But," he said, "this is the first time any nation has used our arms to go 600 miles across two countries to hit another nation. So, this is something we have to consider most seriously."

Congress would have the final word and could override a recommendation by Reagan to halt the weapons deliveries or to cut off future sales to Israel but the White House already has indicated a cutoff was unlikely.

The United States has publicly condemned the air strike.

"It is Reagan's first major foreign policy crisis," a Pentagon official said.

Haig said Israel "possibly" violated U.S. law but declined to comment on whether there would be an aid cutoff.

"There was not one crater around that place. Every bomb went where it was supposed to go," one source said.

Catto expressed admiration for the "technical precision" with which Israel carried out its raid. "But," he said, "we strongly condemn the act."

The State and Defense departments and the National Security Council were investigating whether Israel violated the 1976 Arms Export Control

Was Iraq building a bomb?

VIENNA, Austria (UPI) — The head of the International Atomic Energy Agency said Tuesday a January inspection found no evidence the Iraqi nuclear reactor, attacked by Israel, was being used to make nuclear weapons.

But the Union of Concerned Scientists said the reactor was capable of producing enough plutonium each year to build a Nagasaki-type bomb, and several Middle East experts said there is no doubt Iraq was moving toward manufacturing a nuclear weapon.

"We have watched the Iraqi development with tremendous care and detail. Our estimates were that they would be ready with a bomb in three to five years," said one knowledgeable source close to U.S. policymaking on the Middle East.

That schedule, according to the expert, may be set back but the Iraqis will not give up their determination.

"They haven't lost the technology, merely some equipment, so it's just a matter of construction and money," he said.

Iraq has denied the reactor would be used to build a bomb. Iraq is a signatory to the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty, which is widely believed to possess either several working nuclear bombs or the capability to assemble several quickly, is not a participant of the treaty.

IAEA Director General Sigvard Eklund said Iraq had accepted IAEA safeguards "on all its nuclear activities" under the non-proliferation pact, adding during a January inspection all reactor fuel was accounted for.

But Cornet Undersecretary of State Joseph Sisco said "the evidence has been quite strong that the purpose of the installation was to develop a bomb."

Rather than halting the process though, the Israeli attack may increase other countries' determination to have an "Islamic bomb."

In addition to Iraq, Sisco said, Pakistan and Libya are possible countries seeking completion of a nuclear device.

Sisco said the United States made a serious effort to persuade the French not to sell Iraq enriched weapons-grade uranium. "We failed."

Kania backs union, but says Soviets justified

WARSAW, Poland (UPI) — Polish leader Stanislaw Kania, under pressure from Moscow to get his house in order, said Tuesday that criticism from Communist allies was fully justified.

He urged Poles to overcome "one of the most dramatic moments" in the nation's 1,000-year history.

His speech at the opening of a crucial Communist-Party Central Committee meeting came as the powerful Catholic church intervened to keep labor peace by postponing a strike.

Kania said the ruling Politburo was determined that the emergency full party congress, at which many reforms could be introduced, will take place as scheduled next month.

The meeting, which adjourned after seven hours to resume Wednesday, included at least one call for a restructuring of the leadership and reintroduction of a hardline stance.

One delegate, Zygmunt Najdowski, from Torun, warned: "The Solidarity union must be faithful to its statute if it does not want to be responsible for an eventual tragedy of the nation."

In the continuing barrage of press criticism from Poland's Communist neighbors, the Soviet labor newspaper Trud accused Solidarity leaders of becoming politicized, and a Czechoslovak newspaper warned that the rise of "counter-revolutionary forces" in Poland was identical to Czechoslovakia before the 1968 Soviet invasion.

Kania said that concern prompted a letter from the Soviet leadership. "Our friends have full rights to such reaction."

He quoted the letter as saying "Serious danger which hangs over socialism in Poland constitutes a threat to the very existence of the independent Polish state."

At the Communist Party session called in the wake of the letter, party boss Kania called for stricter discipline within the party and hit out at "frightening" anti-Sovietism and lack of public order.

But he stressed the ruling Politburo would not aver from its policy of labor and social reforms that resulted from last summer's labor unrest.

"The politburo is of the opinion that this policy has no sensible alternatives," he said.

Solidarity earlier made an unprecedented appeal to postpone, at least until July 3, a warning strike set for Thursday in four northern provinces.

The appeal, to branches in Bydgoszcz, Plock, Wloclawek and Torun was an unprecedented step and came after the highest Polish church leaders called on the union to suspend the strike.

The strikes had been called to protest alleged government inaction in punishing officials responsible for the beating of three unionists in Bydgoszcz March 19.

More riots mark latest Iranian power struggle

ANKARA, Turkey (UPI) — Revolutionary guards used tear gas and fired bullets into the air Tuesday to break up a second day of demonstrations in Tehran by more than 15,000 supporters of Iranian President Abolhasan Bani-Sadr.

Dozens of people were reported injured when the demonstrators clashed with followers of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini.

It was the second straight day of rioting sparked by the government's shutdown of Bani-Sadr's newspaper, and an escalation of the political war between Bani-Sadr and the Iranian government dominated by Khomeini's militant Muslim followers.

"Dozens of people were injured, several by knives, in the clashes" one witness said, reached by telephone from London.

In the biggest rally, about 15,000 people, some carrying Bani-Sadr's photograph, marched through the streets of Tehran in defiance of a government ban on demonstrations announced Monday.

The protests turned violent when supporters of the president were challenged by armed gangs sympathetic to Khomeini, and Revolutionary Guards intervened with tear gas and fired shots into the air to disperse the rioters, witnesses said.

Members of the leftist Muslim guerrilla group, Mujahideen Khalq, also joined the president's followers, shouting "long live Bani-Sadr."

Bani-Sadr's newspaper, Islamic Revolution, failed to appear Tuesday after a pirate edition was published Monday in defiance of the government's shutdown order.

Bani-Sadr called the ban on his newspaper part of "a movement aimed at eliminating your elected president," but Khomeini hinted he would deal with Bani-Sadr "as I have dealt with the former shah" if the president did not "come back to the Koran," the Islamic holy book.

Bani-Sadr has been charged by a Khomeini-appointed government commission with violating the constitution and ignoring a ban on political speeches.

The commission's actions combined with other moves against him have won Bani-Sadr, elected in an overwhelming victory in January 1980, to label the government a "dictatorship."

In a short reply to Bani-Sadr, Khomeini said Monday, "It is dictatorship... when someone does not submit to the judiciary, or the public prosecutor."

The reactor raid: Israel defies pact

Israel's daring raid on Iraq's nuclear reactor will shake the fragile tenets of America's foreign policy in the Middle East.

How much fallout will occur depends on two reactions: That of the Reagan Administration toward the Israeli use of U.S.-supplied planes in the raid, and that of the angered Arab world.

The U.S. joined the chorus of other nations in condemning the military strike, but President Ronald Reagan is not disposed toward punishing Israel by embargoing arms shipments. Given the powder keg atmosphere of the region, America does not want to be caught short in any wider military confrontation.

The Arab world's reaction probably will not be military in nature, out of respect for Israel's war machine and because it still lacks a consensus. But scientific and Middle-East experts say the raid only will intensify Arab efforts to produce an atomic bomb — an "Islamic bomb" — somewhere in the region.

Reagan's condemnation of the raid should go further than his somewhat mildly-worded response. Israel constantly has been testing the arms agreement with the U.S., i.e., "How far will they let us go?" The Iraq bombing is the most flagrant violation yet of the arms agreement.

If Israel can get away with using U.S.-supplied weapons for such unilateral offensive actions, other nations supplied with American arms may feel they can use them at will. Where will the U.S. draw the line?

The raid most certainly jeopardizes the foreign mission of U.S. diplomat Philip Habib. Until now he was attempting to ward off a looming confrontation between Syria and Israel. The Iraqi raid changes and complicates the picture. It is difficult to see how cool heads can prevail given the increased militaristic nature of Prime Minister Menachem Begin's government.

That the raid was so successfully carried out is another example of Israel's prowess in surprise operations. It also suspiciously comes at a time when Begin is seeking re-election. But one wonders whether Israel is dealing the military card too often, whether the luck and success it has enjoyed will some day backfire.

Despite Iraqi and French claims the nuclear reactor would not have been used to produce an atomic bomb, the technology certainly was not far behind. Israel argues its raid was pre-emptive, that it wanted to minimize any radiation threat a strike on a fully operating nuclear facility would have brought.

The significance is not that Israel put Iraq's atomic reactor program back three years.

It is that the spread of nuclear technology and thus atomic weapons is occurring faster than we would care to believe.

Israel is reportedly the possessor of such a weapon. The Arab world will not stand still until it has an "equalizer."

When that happens, the aspects of an apocalyptic confrontation won't just be conjecture any more.

Los Angeles Times Syndicate

The White House has proposed a serious relaxation in the 1977 Foreign Corrupt Practices Act, which was intended to prevent American companies from bribing foreign officials.

The administration maintains that the United States is losing too much business to competitors because we can't grease the palms of some of our best customers.

If Congress goes along with it, American executives are going to have to do a complete switch, as most of them had given strict orders not to offer bribes for contracts abroad.

The truth of the matter is, U.S. company sales reps are out of practice. A friend of mine from a multinational confessed this to me the other day. "I was pretty good at bribing politicians abroad in my time," he told me. "But I think I've lost my touch."

"It will come back," I assured him. "It's like a foreign language. All you need is a little practice."

"That's why I came over tonight," he said. "It was hoping you would help me brush up."

"Sure," I told him. "Why don't you play yourself and I'll play the brother-in-law of the president of a country where you're trying to get a big order."

"That would be great. Let's pretend that we're having dinner at the brother-in-law's palace."

"You're on."

"Your Excellency, thank you for your wonderful hospitality. I have never had such a sumptuous banquet in my life."

"It is my pleasure, Mr. Doppel. Tell me, what brings you to Enchilada?"

"My company is interested in arranging a contract for the sale of puppy formula. We believe this could make a great health contribution to Enchilada, as it would save your dogs from breast-feeding their young."

"Everyone has been offering us puppy formula. What are your terms?"

"A five-year, low-interest, financed contract in which you would guarantee to buy $10 million of formula at world market prices."

"That's very interesting. My brother-in-law would like that. But what about his wife's foundation for the widows and orphans of Enchilada?"

"We would be happy to make a contribution."

"Good. The money is to be deposited in Switzerland."

"Why Switzerland?"

"That is where the foundation has its headquarters."

"No problem. Then it's a deal?"

"Not yet. I'm sure your country is interested in the welfare of our people. I am the president of Enchilada, United Way, and we are in the middle of our fund drive."

"Of course. Our company always gives to the United Way."

"Here is the numbered bank account of the Enchilada United Way in Liechtenstein. Just have your bank wire my cousin's bank in Miami. He is treasurer of the fund."

"Our bank will attend to it. Can we sign a letter of agreement now?"

"I'm not in the position to sign such a letter. That has to be done by my uncle, who is minister of commerce. I will write a note to him, but I warn you he's a tough man to deal with. He only accepts diamonds."

"We'll find diamonds. Anyone else on the list I should know about?"

"If you could find it in your heart to spare a few dollars for Army Chief General Valdez's Veterans Hospital, he would be eternally grateful."

"Of course. Where is the hospital?"

"It hasn't been built yet. But he'll be happy to show you the plans."

"If my company has anything to say about it, he shall have the hospital."

"You've done great," I told Doppel. "You're going to make a great comeback in the international bribery business."

"Where," he said, relieved, "for a while I thought I had lost my last ball."

More on abortion

Editor, Times-News:

I read with interest Larry Swisher's column regarding abortion in Sunday's paper.

I find some of his remarks to be hard-hitting and correct, others flawed, and one point without substantiation.

To say that "many people—perhaps a majority of Americans—and most legal scholars, doctors and scientists disagree" that human life begins at conception is unsubstantiated. In fact, this unresolved question is before the Congress at this very moment. Let us weigh our words carefully.

Secondly, I would point out that the anti-abortion movement is not a "decade old." It is certainly as old as this country, and has served as the norm, historically. Only within the last 10 years has this norm been so seriously eroded and jeopardized. And I also find that the term "rights" is tossed about indiscriminately, and that the grammar would be served better if the term "desires" were inserted in its stead. English certainly has its limitations, and we must carefully discern whether we speak of desires, fancies and conveniences or whether we speak of rights which by definition recognize the dignity of the individual and the sanctity of human life. Rights is a moral (or) issue, whether we care to acknowledge it or not, and we cannot begin to defend human rights once the foundation which embraces personal self-worth and esteem is laid and universally applied.

But Mr. Swisher is correct when he states "the most treasured gift of the U.S. Constitution is a guarantee of basic rights of individuals against the will of the majority" (cf. Mr. Swisher's statement: "Public opinion polls have found a majority of Americans favor legalized abortion"). Remember, the Supreme Court conceded that if persons were established (again, an unresolved question) the unborn child would be entitled to the full protection of the Constitution. We would then witness this most treasured gift being offered to the most defenseless children in our country.

And Mr. Swisher is also correct when he states "Many unwanted children would be born," and "women would still seek abortions—illegal, dangerous and gruesome." If today's bills become tomorrow's legislation, Let notice be served to those who support the current conservative trend: This legislation is not an end in itself. Will we speak the truth and ignore the love? Will we load people down with burdens they can hardly carry and not lift one finger to help them? When the unwed teenager cries for help, will the church be the first place she will look — or the last place?

Will we open our hearts, our homes, our wallets, or leave these functions to the government? When the mother-to-be despairs "This child is unwanted"—can we compassionately wanted? Are we selling the earth, or just salting the pews?

Supports Sneeds

Editor, Times-News:

I am writing to you after reading Friday's Times-News concerning the cemetery in South Burley.

I feel bad to think we here in Cassia County and Burley have so many concerned do-gooders with so little to complain about that they must take to criticizing people like the Sneeds, which are certainly assets to this Burley community.

These people (the do-gooders) are questioning many things that do not seem to me as their concern at all.

I own cemetery lots in this cemetery and I for one am more than satisfied with the Sneeds' work and I believe we owners are getting a great deal more in services than we have paid for. We should help the Sneeds if we are dissatisfied, and I feel Roland Willis and Frank Jolley certainly owe the Sneeds an apology. Let's hope the do-gooder committee is smart enough to knock it off before the Sneeds dump the problem in their laps, because the Sneeds were not kidding when they said they would make them a gift of the cemetery.

Let's all appreciate Ron and Eleanor because of their hard, dedicated work for your loved ones and us.

Adults kicking habit, but the kids are puffing away

Washington Post Writers Group

BOSTON — There is the inevitable flash of recognition. Yet another study on smoking. Yet another report, each more meticulously researched and analyzed than the last, proves what we already know: Anyone who smokes is nuts.

This time the public service message is brought to you in the New England Journal of Medicine. After spending 10 years studying more than 25,000 people in California, the researchers tell us that the risk of dying from coronary disease is twice as great for smokers as for quitters. The risk of dying from any cause is one and one-half times greater for smokers than quitters.

In short, we have rounded up the usual suspect: cigarettes.

This study, like the others, will be followed by a word from our favorite sponsor, those wonderful people down at The Tobacco Institute. The Tobacco Institute apparently employs legions of goons who spend their days devising baroque rebuttals to scientific research. Once they ascribed the rise in lung cancer to "enhanced detection capability."

But they are also followed by something else: a sudden increase in the number of adults trying once again from the top to quit. Today there is at least one ex-smoker for every smoker (we even have a President who switched to jolly beans), and 90 percent of the smokers in this country want to quit.

Still, what I find frightening is simply this: As more and more smokers try to stop, a whole new crop of kids starts to smoke.

The Marlboro man of 1981 is actually a teenage girl. The fastest-growing group of smokers in this country are young women below the age of 23. They are now even more likely to smoke than teen-age boys.

The hooking of the young is crucial to the tobacco business, because 75 percent of the smokers in the country were regulars by 21 and virtually all of them were smokers by 23.

Knowing this, I continue to wonder why we not only allow the hooking of our children, but actually subsidize it. The tobacco industry spends more than $1 billion dollars a year in tax-deductible money pushing its products in ad campaigns obviously aimed at the youth market. We spend more than $7 billion a year in smoking-related health costs. We spend more money waste more time and talent looking for a cure to the diseases we could easily prevent.

But the people who favor bootlegging sponsors of it-rated television don't put the screws on the tobacco merchants. The public that freaks out when kids smoke pot looks the other way when they smoke cigarettes. The same Sen. Jesse Helms who leads the fight against the "killing of babies" supports public subsidies of a substance that kills adults.

There was something symbolic in the flap this year over using Brooke Shields in a government anti-smoking ad. The government, more worried about teenage sex than teenage smoking, refused to harness her popularity even for the campaign against cigarettes.

The question I ask here are old ones. Like the questions about gun control, we usually ask them when somebody else dies. But nothing happens.

Probably the best explanation of the whole tobacco scenario can be seen in former HEW Secretary Joe Califano's new book "Governing America." In less than two dozen pages, he describes the power of the tobacco lobby, the political smokescreen that shrouds our health.

In a wonderful moment, he describes trying (mischievously, I suspect) to enlist the tobacco industry in a "public-service" campaign urging kids not to smoke.

He receives one letter from the head of the company that makes L&M's and Chesterfields. Raymond J. Mulligan, righteously refused because "the mothers and fathers of this nation, whether smokers or nonsmokers, should continue to have freedom of choice in the education and training of their children."

"This is the cynical response of an industry that hides behind 'American values' and 'pro-family' rhetoric while it destroys the health of another generation."

"It is hard to get exercised about what we already know. It's easy to become immune to the bad news. Califano describes it simply: 'Cigarettes have killed more Americans through heart disease, lung cancer and emphysema than all our wars and all our traffic accidents combined.'"

Reagan tax plan formally presented for House action

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan's latest tax plan was formally introduced in Congress Tuesday.

It was sweetened for individuals and rejiggered a bit for business. Reagan declared the "carefully crafted" package offers true tax relief.

After some last-minute tinkering to satisfy protests from business groups, the administration delivered the finished proposal to Rep. Barber Conable, R-N.Y., who jointly introduced it with Rep. Kent Hance, D-Texas.

Treasury Secretary Donald Regan then met with Conable and the other 11 Republicans on the House Ways and Means Committee, which will have first crack at the proposal.

Reading a statement on behalf of the president, Regan said the administration "is fully committed" to the bipartisan bill.

In a statement released at the White House, the president pronounced the measure "carefully crafted" after consultation with both Republicans and Democrats, and said it "offers true tax relief and a new economic beginning."

The package calls for a 33-month, 25 percent cut in individual tax rates, an accelerated depreciation schedule for business investments, and such "sweeteners" as a reduction in the marriage penalty and larger exclusions in estate tax rules.

Conable said, "I certainly support the outline of the bill... but I reserve the right to make technical changes." For example, he said he would prefer the initial-business tax cut proposal, known as H.R. 3, "but we want to win this issue for the president."

The latest changes "have been worked out with the business community... and have broad appeal in Congress," Conable said.

Meanwhile, Ways and Means Committee chairman Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., caucused with the panel's Democrats to discuss legislative strategy. The committee plans to begin work on a tax bill Wednesday afternoon, but probably will not get down to any decisions until next week.

"I have no intention of stalling," said Rostenkowski, who has proposed an alternative Democratic tax cut to reduce rates 15 percent over two years.

In an interview with the Cable News Network, Rostenkowski described his bill as "more cautious, more prudent" than the administration's 33-month package, which he complained was "being written in the basement of the White House."

The Reagan package announced last week would cost $37.4 billion in fiscal 1982 and is a far cry from the lean tax bill the president initially proposed. That plan simply called for a three-year, 30 percent individual tax cut and accelerated depreciation for businesses.

Reagan was forced to widen the tax bill — and scale back some business tax cuts to make room for other changes — to attract the crucial support of some Southern Democrats.

The president's original tax proposal would allow business to depreciate investments in buildings over 10 years, equipment over five years and vehicles over three. To save money, the administration last week proposed to stretch out building depreciation to 15 years and to slow down the rate of equipment investment that could be written off during the five-year period.

The original measure would have allowed businesses to use a 200 percent "declining balance" — doubling its rate of depreciation — in figuring equipment write-offs. Last week, the White House proposed a 150 percent figure.

Administration and congressional sources said the new plan would allow 175 percent depreciation in 1985 and 200 percent in 1986, restoring more than one-third — of the $50 billion chipped from the original plan.

Presidents Reagan and Jose Lopez Portillo chat

State visit helps end U.S.-Mexico tension

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Mexican President Jose Lopez Portillo wrapped up a two-day state visit with President Reagan, Tuesday.

He proclaimed an end to "tense" relations between the two nations that have traditionally cast Mexico as the junior partner.

"It is not only to give, not only to help," Lopez Portillo said during a warm exchange of toasts at a state luncheon in the East Room. "The most important thing of all is respect."

"If all the powerful people in the world were to truly understand what respect means to the weak people, the world would truly change."

Reagan announced the two presidents reached agreement on several issues and that he accepted an invitation to join 21 other leaders of industrialized and developing countries for a mid-October summit in Cancun, Mexico.

He said the leaders agreed the "special nature of relations required a special framework for doing business" and announced the formation of a foreign secretaries council headed by Secretary of State Alexander Haig and Mexican Secretary of Foreign Relations Jorge Castaneda de la Rosa.

He said the two leaders also agreed to discuss "outstanding fisheries problems on a similar urgent basis," and agreed to supply "substantial quantities" of U.S. grain to Mexico during 1982.

Attorney General William French Smith briefed the Mexicans, Reagan said, on the various options being considered to deal with undocumented migrant workers.

"I assured the president that the United States would take Mexico's interest in this problem fully into consideration, as well as the interests and rights of the individual migrants themselves."

Renewal of bracero plan hit

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Hispanic, labor and religious groups Tuesday denounced an administration proposal to invite nearly a million Mexican "guest workers" to the United States.

The plan, still under consideration by the White House, is believed to have been discussed by President Reagan and visiting Mexican President Jose Lopez Portillo.

Attorney General William French Smith met Monday and Tuesday with Mexican officials traveling with Lopez Portillo to discuss proposals and options for a U.S. policy on immigration, said Justice Department spokesman Tom DeCar.

Smith heads an inter-agency task force on immigration and refugee policy expected to send its recommendations to the White House within two weeks.

DeCar declined to comment on the nature of the discussions.

At a news conference held to protest the guest worker proposal, one Hispanic leader called the idea "a form of legalized slavery"; another, "international servitude, bondage."

Msgr. George Higgins, a widely-known advocate for low-income workers, predicted the proposal to allow up to 750,000 "guest workers" into the United States from Mexico "would mean the end of the United Farm Workers union. They (the union) couldn't organize them. If they wanted to."

Many speakers at the news conference complained the old "bracero" program, which brought about 5 million Mexican farm workers into the United States during a 22-year period ended in 1964, only increased problems of illegal aliens.

Antonia Hernandez of the Mexican American Legal Defense and Education Fund said if "guest workers" complain about poor working conditions or try to organize other workers, their employer can revoke their work permits and deport them.

Rep. Edward Roybal, D-Calif., noted that while unemployment has risen 1.6 percent overall, the rate for Hispanics is 10.2 percent, and for blacks, 13.6 percent.

"The administration cannot possibly justify asking its own unemployed to face the competition of an extra 500,000 to 750,000 guest workers," he said. "A bracero program under any new name may be in the best interests of some big businessmen desiring cheap labor, but not in the best interests of America and its growing unemployed population."

Howard Samuel, head of the AFL-CIO Industrial Union Department, called the program "doubly exploitive," pushing Mexican workers into the least attractive jobs at low pay, while simultaneously depressing wages and working conditions for competing U.S. workers.

Bill would penalize waste

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A skeptical Senate panel Tuesday heard a proposal to cut the budgets of federal agencies achieving less than a 2 percent savings each year by eliminating fraud, waste and abuse.

Sen. Bob Kasten, R-Wis., said his bill would add an enforcement mechanism missing in past congressional efforts to eliminate billions of dollars wasted each year in government operations.

Sen. Pete Domenici, R-N.M., co-sponsor, cited a report that $14 billion could have been saved in 1981 by improving efficiency.

Under Kasten's bill, 10 percent of each agency's appropriation would be withheld until the end of the fiscal year and be paid only if the agency could prove it eliminated an equal amount of misspending or prove none existed.

The agencies would have to file advance plans each year for rooting out fraud, waste and abuse, and report its achievements at the end of the year.

Chairman William Roth, R-De., of the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee, asked how Kasten's bill would prevent an agency from simply cutting services by 2 percent instead of cutting out fraud and waste.

"Any plan... may not provide for the reduction of services provided pursuant to programs administered by the agency," Kasten responded.

Edwards: gas controls may be needed longer

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Natural gas price controls might be needed even beyond 1985, Energy Secretary James Edwards indicated Tuesday.

Edwards told reporters the 1978 Natural Gas Policy Act, under which controls are supposed to be lifted on 60 percent of all conventional gas by 1985, would cause "a big step-up" in prices.

The law's five-year gradual timetable for letting gas prices rise, he anticipated market levels was based on the faulty assumption that competing oil would be selling for about $17 a barrel in 1985. It already sells for between $32 and $41.

But the secretary noted the administration is still "dedicated to accelerated deregulation" of the controls.

Edwards, who has reportedly been arguing within the administration against swift gas decontrol, mentioned two possible plans for freeing gas prices.

"You could accelerate the price between now and 1985 or you could extend decontrol to say 1987."

President Reagan campaigned vigorously on a Republican Party platform calling for accelerated decontrol of oil and gas prices. Budget director David Stockman and Interior Secretary James Watt reportedly are pushing for fast gas decontrol, while Edwards's new position delights critics of that strategy.

Gas utilities and pipelines generally oppose any speed-up in the current timetable.

HUD claims waste cut

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Department of Housing and Urban Development said Tuesday it already has clamped down on contracting waste which a government watchdog has estimated totaled up to $1 billion since 1975.

The agency also challenged the massive waste figure offered by Al Ripskis, a 20-year HUD employee who has been a thorn in the side of housing secretaries for years with his public criticism.

But Ripskis said HUD's "insipid" response to his charges is an indication the Reagan administration will continue "business as usual" and fail to cut wasteful expenditures by the sprawling department.

He said the administration seems "to be better at the meat cleaver approach — destroying programs rather than salvaging the good parts and getting rid of the bad parts. On fine surgery, they're inept."

Taylor holds party for losers

By United Press International

LOSERS CELEBRATE

This time the invitations went out to the losers. What they had to celebrate was failing to win a Tony Award — but then they were in good company since the list of non-winners included people like Glenda Jackson, Chita Rivera, Maureen Stapleton and Jessica Tandy. The party for losers was thrown by Elizabeth Taylor — also a loser — in a private room at Sardi's Monday night. Miss Taylor was nominated for "The Little Foxes." The Tony went to "Piaf's" Jane Lapointe.

PRISON DIET

The woman convicted of killing the "Scarface Diet" doctor has gained 15 pounds in jail. That's what Jean Harris, serving 15 years to life at the Bedford Hills, N.Y., Correctional Facility for the murder of Dr. Herman Tarnower, told local television reporter Kristy Wilker. Mrs. Harris, 58, also said, "I've slept more in the last few months than I have in the last 35 years."

PAPAL HOMAGE

Leonard Bernstein will conduct a benefit concert introducing some of his original compositions in the Vatican Friday in homage to Pope John Paul II. He will lead the orchestra and chorus of the national Academy of Santa Cecilia. The proceeds of the concert, titled "Homage to the Conquering Pope," will go to the Bambino Gesù children's hospital in Rome.

"CURSEAHOLICS"

Paul White, founder and director of "Curseaholics Anonymous," wants Congress to make public profanity a felony. White, 22, of Cambridge, Mass., says Americans utter 1 billion curse words daily and swear more than 700,000 times a second. He defined cursing as "a vulgar language which is used as an alternative language in our society to show masculinity, machismo or to insult someone or their property and artifacts."

NO COMMENT

Prince Charles strolled from the British embassy in Paris to the nearby Elysee Palace for a 40-minute chat Tuesday with new French President Francois Mitterrand. Neither the prince nor the palace had any comment about what the heir to the British throne and the Socialist president discussed. Charles was in town to attend a ball for the United World Colleges. Mitterrand, incidentally, plans to attend Charles' wedding.

ALTERNATE ROUTE

A pair of teenage hitchhikers took seriously those Greyhound commercials about "Next time take the bus." They took one: Louis Lemire, 19, of Menominee, Mich., and a 17-year-old pal from Calgary, Alberta, decided that with the thermometer at 111 degrees, it was too hot to hitchhike. Instead they took an unattended bus from a Phoenix, Ariz., Greyhound depot and drove it to Tucson, where it overheated and broke down. Police picked up both boys.

Allen Ludden dies at age 63

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — TV personality Allen Ludden died Tuesday of complications from cancer and a stroke suffered last October. He was 63.

He was best known for baffling hundreds of celebrities as host of the long-running "Password" game show.

Ludden's wife, actress Betty White, was at her husband's bedside at Good Samaritan Hospital in Los Angeles when he died at 12:30 a.m. MDT, a family spokesman said.

A memorial service was being arranged in Los Angeles. Burt will be in Mineral Point, Wis., Ludden's birthplace.

The spokesman said Ludden had suffered from cancer for many months and was struck down by a "stroke-like medical problem caused by steroid treatment for the cancer."

Ludden had been hospitalized periodically since suffering a stroke last fall at his Monterey, Calif., vacation home.

He remained unconscious for several weeks following the stroke and was listed in critical condition at Monterey's Community Hospital. He later rallied, according to a family spokesman, and did not suffer any former "Password" host paralysis or speech impairment. Ludden was transferred to Good Samaritan a month after the stroke and was released from the hospital last December, but suffered several relapses.

"Allen was in and out of the hospital for most of this year," the spokesman said. "He never really regained his health."

As host and moderator of such game shows as "GE College Bowl," "Password" and "The Liar's Club," Ludden was a popular figure on national television and a prominent member of Hollywood's social scene.

In addition to his TV career, Ludden wrote books for youngsters, including "Plain Talk About College," "Plain Talk for Women Under 21" and "Plain Talk for Men Under 21."

Ludden won an Emmy in 1976 for "Password" and produced two other game shows, "Stumpers" and "Allen Ludden's Gallery."

Ludden was a former Austin, Texas, high school teacher and an instructor at the University of Texas, where he had earned a masters degree in English.

Ludden and Miss White were married in Las Vegas in 1961 after they had co-starred in "Critic's Choice" in New England summer stock. It was the second marriage for Ludden who was a widower with three children: David, Martha and Sarah, when he married the blonde comedienne.

Kin back son evicting his parents

WICHITA, Kan. (UPI) — Relatives of an elderly couple threatened with eviction by their son support the move, but a wheelchair-bound Elizabeth Johnson said Tuesday she isn't ready to leave her house or be sent to a nursing home.

Mrs. Johnson, 77, and her husband, Ed, 81, have been threatened with eviction by their son from the home where they have lived since 1955. The son, Clarence Johnson, 50, will not explain why he filed the eviction petition.

His sister, Connie Urah, said her parents need constant medical care and her brother has tried unsuccessfully to reason with them about getting proper care. Another relative said Clarence Johnson wants his parents to be sent to a place where they can receive constant medical attention.

Elizabeth Johnson, a stroke victim suffering from cancer and confined to a wheelchair, said she has promised her husband they will stay there.

"He wants to stay here until he dies," she said Tuesday. "And I've promised him that."

An eviction petition filed by Clarence Johnson claims he is the legal owner and — as landlord — he can force them out of the home anytime he chooses. He said the home was deeded to him in 1974, although his parents have filed a countersuit contesting their son's claim that he is the legal owner.

"He figured it was kind of a nuisance to have us here," Mrs. Johnson said of the eviction action. "But he has no reason to look after me. I'll get along all right. I've got neighbors to look after me, although it's kind of nice having family do it."

"I guess they all (her relatives) are dead set on us going to a nursing home... I might go to one some day but I'm not ready to go now. I can take care of myself."

Mrs. Johnson said she wished her son would talk to her so they wouldn't be forced to take the matter through the courts.

"He hasn't come by in a long time," she said. "I wish we could get it settled."

Her son said he has taken his telephone off the hook to end a steady stream of abusive calls about his attempts to evict his parents. He said many of the comments were short — "Good morning, you creep" — before the callers hung up.

Four other Clarence Johnsons in (Tulsa) city phone book say they have also received abusive calls from people trying to reach the man attempting to evict his parents.

Elimination of party lines could take 7 years: analyst.

BOISE (UPI) — Mountain Bell Telephone Co. should be given seven years to eliminate party-line service in Idaho, an Idaho Public Utilities Commission staff analyst told the PUC Monday.

The PUC has said Mountain Bell should be able to convert to a totally one-party system in its Idaho service area within five years, but rate analyst Leif Erickson testified Monday that the utility should be given until 1988 to complete the project.

The utility has been receiving an increasing number of requests to eliminate multiple-party service and the PUC has ordered "the utility to study a conversion program" on an estimated 21,000 Idaho customers still are on party lines, the PUC said.

He said the utility should be allowed to conduct an engineering study to determine the best method of eliminating multiple-party service.

Erickson also cautioned the commission not to go along completely with a trend toward reliance on a "cost of service" rate system.

"If the value of service concept was abandoned in its entirety and all services were to be directly cost-related, basic telephone service would most certainly be too expensive for certain groups of customers," he said. Staff auditor Bert Garlock criticized the utility's proposal to impose annual automatic rate increases during implementation of a completely one-party system.

She said to avoid collection by the utility of a "double count" on investments and expenses, the PUC should allow Mountain Bell to instead collect revenue for the project in periodic general rate increases.

Report predicts sluggish Idaho growth

By ROBYN C. WALKER
United Press International

BOISE — Employment growth in Idaho this year is expected to be flatter than earlier projections and recovery in 1982 also is expected to be sluggish, according to a report compiled by the Idaho Division of Financial Management.

For most of the past two years, Idaho's economy has moved with changes in housing starts nationally and the resulting effect on the state's timber producers, the report said.

The forecast projected a downturn in employment at sawmills and logging camps, averaging 600 fewer jobs the second quarter of 1981. However, the report predicted that the lumber industry would recover in the fall and continue during 1982.

Employment in mobile home construction and other wood product-related industries also is expected to fall slowly throughout the year, the report said.

"These declines are directly due to sharply reduced housing starts in the wake of higher interest rates," the report said.

It said additional increases in interest rates may cause overall employment growth for the state to be even flatter than the 1.7 percent projected for the year.

However, the report said, "At this level of housing starts, pent-up demand will result in an even faster acceleration when conditions improve than would otherwise be the case."

Decreases in state and federal budget expenditures also will have a dampening effect on the general economy, the report said. It said more than 700 public workers were laid off in Idaho this spring and further reductions may be forthcoming over the next several months.

Although employment opportunities in Idaho are expected to improve in 1982, that recovery at 2.4 percent is far lower than was experienced during the 1976-78 recession, the report said. This is partly due to lower long-term expectations for growth in the housing market and to energy price adjustments.

Within the last two years, Idaho's rate of growth has declined with per capita income falling to well below the national average and population growth slowing down, the report said.

During the 1970s, Idaho was one of the fastest growing states in the nation in population, employment and income.

Migration of out-of-state residents into Idaho is expected to fall from 11,847 people last year to 8,523 this year. The trend is expected to continue through 1982 with 7,642 persons expected to move into the state.

Housing starts in Idaho are expected to hit a low mark this year with 1,121. Growth is expected to resume in 1982 although housing starts nationally are not expected to increase until 1984.

Because Idaho's economy is heavily reliant upon its natural resource base, growth in the 1970s has placed pressures on that base. The report said the public sector will be faced in the future with resolving such problems as competition between agriculture and the population for water and energy; the environmental impact of mining and forest industries and the pressures of an expanding population on the state's natural and economic resources.

Theft so severe hearings scrapped to work on bills

Work begins on legislation to stop oil thefts

DENVER (UPI) — Sen. John Melcher said a Senate committee investigating alleged oil thefts from federal and Indian land believes the problem is so severe it has scrapped plans for future committee hearings to begin work on legislation immediately.

Melcher, in a copyright article in the Denver Post, said current problems in regulating federal and Indian oil and gas leases are far more serious than the infamous Teapot Dome scandal of the 1920s which rocked the Harding administration and ultimately landed Harding's interior secretary, Albert Fall, in prison.

Melcher, D-Mont., said the "corrective legislation" being drafted by the Senate Select Committee for Indian Affairs would toughen the authority of the U.S. Geological Survey by giving the agency the authority to track oil from the wellhead to the refinery and will include tougher requirements for seals and locks on tank valves, stiff monetary penalties for violators and lease-cancellation provisions for instances "where it's obvious you can't trust them (oil companies) to act in good faith."

"I think more oil has disappeared because of laxness of inspection by the (USGS) over the past decade than ever was lost at Teapot Dome," Melcher said.

"We know the opportunity to swipe oil exists" on most of the 18,000 Federal and Indian oil leases across the U.S., Melcher said. "I can't put a handle on how much has been swiped. But when the Geological Survey tells us it knows it can lose $1 million a day in royalties, you're talking about a pretty big magnitude."

Melcher said a report of the committee's research of alleged abuses of oil field regulations and outright thefts of oil should be completed by July and the drafting of the legislation should be completed by August.

State worker arrested for drug possession

IDAHO FALLS (UPI) — An investigation by state and local authorities has resulted in the arrest of an Idaho Water Resources Department official and three other people, officials said.

William Rudolph Rhoads, 37, Idaho Falls, accompanied by his attorney, was arrested at the city-county law enforcement building Monday, said Ron Cron, an Idaho Falls police spokesman.

Cron said Rhoads, a senior resource analyst with the state agency, was the fourth person charged in the case. Three Idaho Falls-area residents were arrested Friday, and one more arrest was expected. Cron said.

Charged with two counts of possession of a controlled substance with intent to deliver and one count of possession of a controlled substance, Rhoads posted a $10,000 property bond late Monday afternoon and was released pending a June 16-17 preliminary hearing along with the other defendants.

Stephen Charles Crawford, 39,

Ammon, was being held in the Bonnevill County Jail Monday in lieu of $80,000 bond. He was charged with four felony counts of possession of a controlled substance with intent to deliver.

His wife, Karen Crawford, 25, and his son, Stephen Samuel Crawford, 18, were charged with one count each of possession of a controlled substance. Mrs. Crawford was released on her recognizance and the younger Crawford was jailed in lieu of $5,000 bond.

Teton's Sunday ban on beer sales upheld

BOISE (UPI) — In a split decision today, the Idaho Supreme Court ruled that cities have the right to regulate the sale of beer on Sundays.

The city of Teton enacted an ordinance banning all beer sales on Sundays. Prior to that time, sale of packaged beer for off-premises consumption was permitted in the city on Sunday.

In response to the new ordinance, several proprietors of retail stores brought a lawsuit against the city on the grounds that the ordinance was in violation of state law and the federal and state constitutions.

The 7th District Court upheld the ordinance and the retailers appealed the decision to the Supreme Court.

In a 4-1 decision, the state Supreme Court ruled that in two previous opinions it had found no constitutional barriers to local bans on Sunday beer sales.

The 7th District Court upheld the ordinance and the retailers appealed the decision to the Supreme Court.

Court upholds gas rate hike

BOISE (UPI) — The Idaho Supreme Court upheld today an Idaho Public Utilities Commission decision which granted Intermountain Gas Co. a uniform 1.31 percent rate increase in 1981 to cover the cost of purchasing natural gas.

The decision was appealed to the state high court by J.R. Simplot Co. Simplot argued that the PUC's decision to grant an increase in rates was based upon an inadequate hearing.

Simplot contended that the commission failed to determine Intermountain's total revenues, expenses, appropriate rate-base and rate-of-return and how those factors would be affected by the requested increase.

The Supreme Court held that in cases where a utility has no control over substantially-increased costs, a pass-through rate increase to cover the additional costs will not impact the authorized rate of return and a full rate proceeding is not necessary. Simplot also argued that the method of spreading the increase to customers by initiating a uniform, per-consumer increase was inconsistent with existing multi-level rate schedules.

However, the court held that where the objective of the commission is only to pass-through the increased cost of natural gas.

New attitudes, alliances can help Pisceans obtain satisfaction, success

GENERAL TENDENCIES: It is possible to wind up whatever tasks you have left undone and clear the slate for future challenges. A good time to take inventory of yourself. Make plans for the future.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Be sure to get an early start on regular routines so you'll have more time for important matters later on. Try to please loved one.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Discuss with associates what is expected of you. Try to understand the viewpoints of opponents. Be wary of outsiders.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) You'll have to be well organized to compete the new tasks that are facing you. Take needed health treatments.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Find the right way to have more harmony at home and take the initial steps in such direction. Relax tonight.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) A good day to enjoy yourself with congenial persons. Try and rectify any mistakes made with the one you love.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Make sure you keep appointments today. Show kindness and consideration to one of your closest friends.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Don't neglect to pay bills that are due now. Contact a financial expert and discuss future plans. Show others you have wisdom.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Health improvement measures should be taken early and then engage in personal matters that need your attention.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Study personal matters well and know how to handle them to your satisfaction. Be more cheerful.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Get busy taking care of routine tasks so you can engage in personal desires later. Seek the advice of a loyal friend.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Handle business matters early in the day. Make sure to pay your bills on-time and keep a good credit rating.

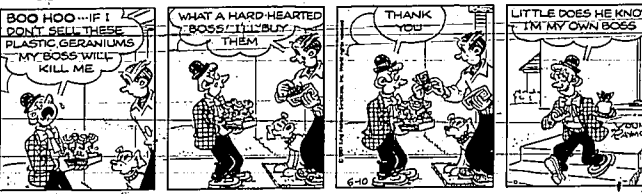

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) A new attitude toward your routine tasks can give you more satisfaction. New alliances could mean greater success.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... He or she could easily have fixed ideas, so be sure to give the right training early in life, otherwise there could be trouble instead of success. The fields of accounting and finance are fine since there is a practical person in this chart.

What's what

At least half population miss Burma Shave signs

Q: You said more than half the population won't know what you're talking about if you mention flypaper. What proportion has never seen a roadside Burma Shave sign?

A: At least half, too. Do you know the first such roadside sign "jingle" ever written? Allen Usher, son of the company founder, started it all in 1926 with "Cheer up/Face The War Is Over." No Pulitzer for that, sure enough. It's also said that more than half the population has never seen a rug beater. Nor a stove lid lifter.

To that exceedingly short list of couples married at least 80 years, please add the names of John and Alice Stough of Clare, Mich. Alice, 97, writes poetry. John, 100, says, "I always keep a bottle of whiskey handy for my cough." He administers his medicine in a teaspoon.

Am told the name of no other town in the world has as many o's in it as Australia's Woolloomooloo. Undoubtedly.

"MUTINY ON THE BOUNTY"

Q: You referred to the book "Mutiny on the Bounty" as "fictional." Wasn't it actual history?

A: Yes, Charles Nordhoff and James Norman Hall researched the records diligently to put that one together. It wasn't fiction, just fictionalized, treated in the manner of fiction. Robert Pitcairn, a midshipman with the English explorer Philip Carteret, was first to sight Pitcairn's Island, where the Bounty mutineers later landed. Pitcairn was the son of John Pitcairn, who led the redcoats at the Battle of Lexington on April 19, 1775. That wasn't in the book. Likewise not in the book was the fact that Captain Bligh much later faced another uprising in Australia. Rebels under his command again tossed him out of power.

MATH AND LIT

Women who like mathematics tend to be good drivers. Women who like literature tend to be good cooks. So says a student of that field known as behavioral science.

Was long the custom in Chile to shave the heads of convicted pickpockets so they'd be easier to spot in crowds.

Natives who customarily sit on the ground instead of in chairs don't get varicose veins. British medical researchers make that claim.

Last course of a traditional Chinese dinner is soup.

Pickets halt miners

United Press International

Angry mine construction pickets idled over 30,000 of the nation's 160,000 unionized soft-coal miners Tuesday, closing pits in at least five states.

The workers, bitter over the return to work of their United Mine Workers' colleagues while no construction contract was reached, moved miners to honor picket lines on the second day of strike since the UMW ended a 72-day strike.

Initial estimates by coal industry and UMW officials showed the most impact in West Virginia where as many as 40,000 of the state's 50,000 active miners were picketed away from their work sites.

"We feel extremely bitter about the miners going back without us," said Jerry Foster, a West-Virginia construction worker.

Stan Skages, financial secretary for Local 1582, added, "If we can halt coal production, we think we can get an agreement."

The construction workers, whose number fluctuates from 11,000 to 16,000 because of seasonal jobs, have been off the job since March 27, the day their contract with the Associated Bituminous Contractors expired.

Known as ABC workers, they are members of the UMW, but are not covered by the pact that returned the soft coal miners to work.

Talks between the UMW and the ABC recessed Monday to give both sides a chance to caucus for reviews of material. The workers perform building operations and drive trucks.

With talks in recess, West Virginia construction workers, primarily from District 17, met Monday night and targeted mines which they planned to close down.

In two-, three-, and four-, they roared off in their vehicles, establishing picket lines in the heavily unionized district. They said they would shut down District 17 Tuesday and vowed to spill the strike into other districts in West Virginia and into Ohio and Kentucky.

Protesting vets ousted from hospital

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Hunger-striking Vietnam-era veterans and their supporters were ousted Tuesday from the tent city they erected on the lawn of a Veterans Administration hospital three weeks ago to protest inadequate medical care.

Seven protesters, including a woman, were arrested and carried out of the lobby of the Wadsworth Hospital when they refused orders from VA officials to vacate the premises.

The protesters, who broke off negotiations with VA officials last weekend, had expected to be evicted from the hospital grounds this week and most of them left peacefully.

Some of the veterans said they would move their protest to the gates of the White House. Others said the hunger-strike would continue at a Los Angeles church.

Acting VA general counsel Robert Coy said the government regretted having to oust the demonstrators but that it was handled with courtesy on both sides.

"I hope we now can proceed to address some of those concerns in a different format and a different manner," Coy said. "I can give you my assurance and the assurance of the VA that we're going to make every effort we can to address these issues that they believe are so important and which, in fact, are."

Atlanta cops work on leads

ATLANTA (UPI) — Investigators are "working desperately" to find solid information to support circumstantial evidence linking Wayne Williams to the slayings of some of Atlanta's young blacks.

They may have a witness who can provide such a break, it was reported Tuesday.

A source close to the investigation said police detectives Monday night and early Tuesday questioned a man who "came forward" to connect Williams with Joseph-Bell, one of 28 young blacks slain in the past 22 months.

The report was confirmed by several police department sources.

The witness said he saw Williams, a 23-year-old freelance photographer questioned for 12 hours by FBI agents last week with the 15-year-old two days before Bell vanished March 2. His body was found in the South River April 19.

"We may have the necessary links to move in the next few days," said the source, who asked not to be identified.

He said investigators already have a whole lot of circumstantial evidence. They feel good "about the witness."

He said Williams "had come to our attention two or three times" in other cases and investigators were "working desperately" to gather evidence to link him directly to the murders or dismiss him permanently as a suspect.

The source said the witness "came forward" late Monday and detectives were confident about him because of "the way" he came forward.

Phil Peters, director of the Georgia Bureau of Investigation, said "it would be premature to say yes, he is a suspect; or yes, he is going to be arrested. There is due consideration being given to all the facts developed in the last few days concerning this man."

Crime lab technicians were expected soon to complete their tests on fibers and hairs taken from Williams' northwest Atlanta home.

Williams was released after questioning at FBI headquarters last week, but police made no effort to conceal the fact that he was still a suspect.

UAW votes to rejoin AFL-CIO

DETROIT (UPI) — Top executives of the United Auto Workers voted unanimously Tuesday to rejoin the AFL-CIO.

The action heals a 13-year rift in the nation's labor establishment and boosts its political muscle.

The remarriage will be complete by July 1, UAW officials said.

It is intended to give labor a more unified front against what the UAW views as a strengthening conservative attack upon the social programs it fostered.

Unanimous approval for the move came from the 26-member UAW International Executive Board, reaffirming a vote in favor of reaffiliation among rank-and-file delegates in April.

"Our board believes strongly in the principle of a united labor movement," said UAW President Douglas A. Fraser. "Reaffiliation with the federation will strengthen that movement in one of the most difficult periods working people have ever faced."

The UAW, with 1.3 million members in the United States, is the nation's second largest labor union. The largest — the 2 million-member Teamsters Union — remains outside the AFL-CIO.

The addition of the UAW will boost the federation's membership to approximately 15 million members.

Former UAW president Walter Reuther, who died in a plane crash May 9, 1970, led his union out of the AFL-CIO in 1968 amid deep personal, political and philosophical differences with former federation president George Meany.

Several internal movements to reaffiliate were thwarted by Reuther associates on the UAW's executive board, but the bulk of the opposition, including former Secretary-Treasurer Emil Mazey, retired last year.

Local UAW political-action groups will decide for themselves whether to join with their AFL-CIO state and local counterparts, but national lobbying efforts of the AFL-CIO will be on behalf of all UAW members.

The UAW will pay about $2.5 million a year in dues to the federation. UAW officials said the dues of its members will not be increased.

Chicago suburb vote will eliminate sale, possession of guns

MORTON GROVE, Ill. (UPI) — A suburban Chicago community broke a revolt Monday night when village trustees voted to ban the sale and possession of handguns.

"As far as we know, it's the first village in the United States to ban both the sale and possession of handguns," said village Trustee Neil Cashman, who sponsored the ordinance. "I'm talking about any municipality. Many have tried but it has not passed."

He said between 70 and 70 percent of the village's residents oppose handguns.

"Municipalities around the country have the right to make their own laws," said Trustee Gregory Youstra. "We are simply saying let it begin with us. We may be wrong. Let the Supreme Court of the United States adjudicate that point."

But the action was just the first shot in what could be a legal revolution — a constitutional fight against the powerful National Rifle Association. Pres. Ronald Reagan has repeatedly sided with NRA in opposing any handgun ban.

Aides to Blanton are found guilty

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — A federal jury convicted two of former Gov. Ray Blanton's top aides of influence-peddling charges Tuesday but remained undecided on Blanton's possible guilt.

Judge Bailey Brown ordered the jury to continue its marathon efforts to reach a verdict on the extortion, conspiracy and mail fraud charges against Blanton.

The jury, in its sixth day of deliberations found former Blanton aides Clyde Edd Hood and Jim Allen each guilty of one conspiracy and six mail fraud counts.

The charges resulted from what federal prosecutors described as a scheme by Blanton and his aides to use Blanton's influence in office to obtain liquor licenses for friends of the administration in return for bribes.

All three defendants sat expressionless as the verdict was read. Blanton then walked over to Hood, shook Hood's hand, and said, "I'm sorry."

Hood gave the governor a wan smile and just shook his head.

THE FRESH TASTE OF SUMMER

Luscious ripe peaches, tart-sweet plums, golden Bartlett pears, juicy nectarines... can anything taste better than a bite of fresh summer fruits? Only a bigger bite of one of these spectacular fruit-filled summer desserts!

As mouthwatering California tree fruits reach their peak of abundance and flavor, select one of these recipes and treat family and friends to a special dessert. All the recipes use versatile unflavored gelatin as the base. Gelatin lets you create shimmering molds, light and airy parfaits and souffles, ultra-smooth homemade ice cream, and crystal-clear glazes that give fruit tarts a professional touch. And, since unflavored gelatin has no color of its own, it lets all the natural flavor and beauty of the fresh fruits shine through.

Choose "Luscious Peach Souffle," a delicious blending of fresh ripe peaches and rich cream with just a hint of almond flavor in a cold souffle that's bound to impress. Or, try "Sparkling Fruit 'N Wine Dessert," a shimmering wine gel that enhances the fresh flavor of juicy California nectarines and plums. Mix and match the plums—there are over 30 major varieties to choose from—then vary the wine, and you'll find the dessert takes on a whole new flavor. "Creamy Chocolate Pear Parfait" combine two terrific go-togethers—succulent ripe Bartlett pears and rich chocolate—in one scrumptious dessert. It's surprisingly simple to make, yet so delectable in taste that you'll serve it proudly to guests.

Another company special is "Fruitfully Glazed Cheesecake Tart," almost too pretty to eat. This elegant dessert tart has a rich cheese filling, enhanced with orange liqueur, and a beautiful California fruit garnish. The glistening glaze is a simple gelatin-liqueur mixture that gives the tart that special final touch. And, when you want to give the family a real treat, recapture the old-fashioned goodness of homemade ice cream with "Nectarine Ice Cream." Its melt-in-the-mouth natural nectarine flavor and texture make every spoonful a real delight.

So, take a bite... enjoy a spectacular summer dessert while fresh California fruits are at their peak.

• LUSCIOUS PEACH SOUFFLE

- 6 cups chopped fresh California peaches
- 2 envelopes unflavored gelatin
- 3/4 cup sugar
- 4 eggs, separated
- 1 cup milk
- 1 teaspoon almond extract
- 1 cup (1/2 pt.) whipping or heavy cream, whipped

In blender or food processor, puree 3 cups peaches.

In medium saucepan, mix unflavored gelatin with 1/2 cup sugar; blend in egg yolks beaten with milk. Let stand 1 minute. Stir over low heat until gelatin is completely dissolved, about 5 minutes; stir in pureed peaches and almond extract. Pour into large bowl and chill, stirring occasionally, until mixture mounds slightly when dropped from spoon.

In large bowl, beat egg whites until soft peaks form; gradually add remaining sugar and beat until stiff. Fold egg whites, then whipped cream and remaining peaches into gelatin mixture. Turn into 1-1/2 quart souffle dish with 2-inch collar and chill until firm. Remove collar and garnish, if desired, with additional sliced peaches and almonds. Makes about 12 servings.

• CREAMY CHOCOLATE PEAR PARFAITS

- 1 envelope unflavored gelatin
- 1/2 cup cold milk
- 1/2 cup milk, heated to boiling
- 3/4 cup sugar
- 3 cups chopped unpeeled fresh California nectarines
- 2 cups (1 pt.) whipping or heavy cream

In 5-cup blender, sprinkle unflavored gelatin over cold milk; let stand 3 to 4 minutes. Add hot milk and process at low speed until gelatin is completely dissolved, about 2 minutes. Gradually add sugar and nectarines and process at high speed until smooth.

Pour gelatin mixture and cream into cream can of at least 1-1/2 quart capacity ice cream machine. Process and freeze according to manufacturer's directions. Makes about 1-1/2 quarts.

• CREAMY CHOCOLATE PEAR PARFAITS

- 1 envelope unflavored gelatin
- 1 cup cold milk
- 1/2 cup light cream or half and half, heated to boiling
- 1/2 cup cold light cream or half and half
- 2 eggs
- 1/3 cup sugar
- 2 squares (1 oz. ea.) unsweetened chocolate, melted
- 1/2 teaspoon vanilla extract
- 4 to 5 fresh California Bartlett pears, cut into thin wedges (about 3 cups)
- 2 tablespoons brandy

In 5-cup blender, sprinkle unflavored gelatin over 1/2 cup milk; let stand 3 to 4 minutes. Add hot cream and process at low speed until gelatin is completely dissolved, about 2 minutes. Add cold cream, eggs, sugar, melted chocolate, vanilla and remaining milk; process at high speed until blended. Pour mixture into medium bowl. Chill, stirring occasionally, until mixture mounds slightly when dropped from spoon.

Meanwhile, in medium bowl, toss pears with brandy.

In parfait glasses or dessert dishes, alternately layer gelatin mixture and pears; chill until set. Garnish, if desired, with additional pear wedges and mint. Makes about 6 servings.

• SPARKLING FRUIT 'N WINE DESSERT

- 2 envelopes unflavored gelatin
- 1/4 cup sugar
- 1-1/2 cups boiling water
- 2 cups rose or white wine
- 1 cup sliced fresh California nectarines
- 1 cup sliced fresh California plums

In medium bowl, mix unflavored gelatin with sugar; add boiling water and stir until gelatin is completely dissolved. Stir in wine. Chill, stirring occasionally, until mixture is consistency of unbeaten egg whites. Fold in nectarines and plums. Turn into 5-1/2 cup mold or bowl and chill until firm. Makes about 8 servings.

• FRUITFULLY GLAZED CHEESECAKE TART

- Pastry for single-crust pie
- 1 envelope unflavored gelatin
- 5 tablespoons sugar
- 1-1/2 cups boiling water
- 3 tablespoons orange-liqueur or peach brandy
- 1 package (8 oz.) cream cheese, softened
- 1 teaspoon grated orange peel
- Fresh California Fruit Garnish*

PASTRY:

Preheat oven to 425°.

Between two sheets of waxed paper, roll pastry into 11-inch circle; turn into 9-1/2 inch tart pan or 9-inch pie pan. Bake 10 minutes or until lightly browned.

GLAZE:

In small bowl, mix 1 teaspoon unflavored gelatin with 1 tablespoon sugar; add 3/4 cup boiling water and stir until gelatin is completely dissolved. Stir in 2 tablespoons orange-liqueur; chill, stirring occasionally, until mixture is consistency of unbeaten egg whites.

CHEESECAKE TART:

Meanwhile, in medium bowl, mix remaining unflavored gelatin with remaining 4 tablespoons sugar; add remaining 3/4 cup boiling water and stir until gelatin is completely dissolved. With electric mixer, beat in cream cheese, remaining 1 tablespoon orange-liqueur and orange peel until smooth. Turn into prepared crust. Chill until partially set; arrange Fresh California Fruit Garnish on tart. Brush fruit with partially set glaze; chill until firm. Makes about 8 servings.

*FRESH CALIFORNIA FRUIT GARNISH—Use 1 of each of the following, sliced: nectarines, peaches, pears and plums.

Forget calories, make a chocolate cake from scratch

Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS—Divine madness is making a delicious chocolate cake from scratch. Mixes are a great invention but it's easy to forget how special an "honest" cake really is.

For a change, splurge on pennies, time and calorie pride. Your family won't mind. Try the following recipe which was developed many years ago by Helen Victor of Twin Falls. The recipe calls for heavy, thick cream gone sour.

If you aren't lucky enough to have the real sour cream, use dairy sour cream and add 1 cup softened butter or shortening to the recipe below.

Note: Helen Victor's recipe was used for many years at Woolworth's lunch counter when the store was in Twin Falls downtown mall.

HELEN VICTOR'S REAL SOUR CREAM CHOCOLATE CAKE

- 1 cup sugar
- 1 cup thick heavy cream gone sour
- 2 eggs
- 1 teaspoon vanilla extract
- 1/4 cup cake flour, sifted and measured
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- 2 squares unsweetened chocolate, melted
- 1 teaspoon soda
- 1/4 cup boiling water

Preheat oven to 375°F. In mixing bowl, beat sugar with sour cream and eggs. Stir in vanilla extract. Add flour and salt; mix well. Stir in melted chocolate an when well-blended, stir in mixture of soda and boiling water; mix well. Pour batter into 2 greased and wax-paper-lined 8-inch cake pans. Bake 25 minutes, or until cake tests done. Cool and frost with Sour Cream Frosting. Sprinkle with shredded or flaked coconut. Makes a 2-layer cake.

SOUR CREAM FROSTING

- 2 tablespoons butter, softened
- 3 cups powdered sugar
- 5 tablespoons real sour cream (if dairy sour cream is used, add a bit more as necessary)
- 1 teaspoon vanilla extract

In mixing bowl, combine softened butter, sugar, sour cream and vanilla extract; beat well. If necessary, add more cream until frosting is of spreading consistency. Frost cake; sprinkle with shredded or flaked coconut.

REAL YOGURT CHOCOLATE CAKE

- 3 squares unsweetened chocolate
- 1/2 cup water
- 1 cup plain yogurt
- 1/2 cup (1 stick) butter
- 1 cup sugar
- 1/2 cup firmly packed light brown sugar
- 3 eggs
- 1 teaspoon vanilla extract
- 2 cups sifted cake flour
- 1 teaspoon baking soda
- 1 teaspoon salt

Preheat oven to 350°F. In saucepan, over low heat, melt chocolate in water, stirring constantly. Cool. Stir in yogurt and set aside. In mixing bowl, cream butter with sugars; beat until light and fluffy. Beat eggs in, one at a time. Stir in vanilla extract. Sift together flour, soda and salt; add to creamed mixture alternately with yogurt mixture. Pour batter into a 13 by 9 by 2-inch greased and floured baking pan. (May use 2 8-inch round cake pans.) Bake 35 minutes, or until cake tests done. Cool and frost with Sour Cream Frosting and sprinkle with shredded or flaked coconut.

CHOCOLATE-YOGURT FROSTING

- 1 package (6 ounces) semi-sweet chocolate pieces
- 1/2 cup plain yogurt

In saucepan, over low heat, melt chocolate pieces, stirring constantly. Remove from heat when melted and stir in yogurt; cool. Spread on top of cake and sprinkle with shredded or flaked coconut.

THIS WEEK'S BEST MARKET BUYS

Take advantage of lower-priced cantaloupes this week. California's sending us plenty of their best. Other fruits beginning to show their colors are cherries, nectarines, plums and apricots but prices are high. Wait a few weeks for more reasonable costs.

Spring vegetables will get lower in price as our weather gets warmer.

June is Dairy Month. Celebrate by taking advantage of special dairy buys. Be careful to check "specials" against regular shelf prices. Sometimes there isn't any difference.

Rediscover the fun of making a cake from scratch with this recipe developed in Twin Falls

Try strange ingredients

By DEY BENNETT
Chicago Sun-Times

There's a sort of perverseness in cooks—and most of us would admit it occasionally—who take pride in the shock value of their creations.

The "being able to stir" beans into a bread or sauerkraut into a cake without being detected. How delightful it is (cackle, cackle) when someone exclaims over a marvelous, golden spice cake only to be told that the "being able to stir" beans from yams, his least favorite food.

It's a game of sorts, and worse games have been played with food.

The scenario may be familiar.

A dish is set before guests or family members who are invited to dig in. While the host looks on, a cheshire-cat grin. Then, only when diners are finished, satisfied and complimentary about the dish, does the cook unveil the secret ingredients. Or, in another version, a dish is set before the family and everyone gets to guess the mystery guest in it.

Where these odd couplings of ingredients really come into play is in cakes. Many a mismatch can be hidden if enough butter, sugar and spices are added to the mix. I get an occasional chuckle when I bring in some juscious-looking cake for my colleagues; wait eagerly until the last crumb is taken, and then grandly announce that the dessert contained mayonnaise or sauerkraut or baked beans or eggplant or some other equally unlikely ingredient.

The idea is to create a cake that uses inexpensive ingredients that imitate the more expensive ones, or a cake that, because of its unusual ingredients, is especially delicious.

This fascination with strange cake ingredients has been going on for years.

Among the economical substitution cakes is the almost famous mayonnaise cake. It's a moist, flavorful chocolate cake that uses no shortening or eggs.

Dorothy Holland, of Kraft, said the recipe dates to the '40s when there was a shortage of eggs and vegetable oil. The original recipe, which she claims used Kraft Miracle Whip and cocoa, was developed by a consumer.

"It was a very palatable cake, and the recipe spread around the country by word of mouth," said Holland. "During the '50s we did an ad with the cake recipe. It just keeps surviving."

She said the cake is still on Kraft's list of most-requested recipes.

Another make-do cake is the chocolate sauerkraut cake.

No one outside the Midwest seems to have heard of this cheaper version of chocolate-oonut cake. The cake uses sauerkraut that is rinsed until no acid taste is left. Then the sauerkraut is mixed in a cocoa batter.

In some recipes, the sauerkraut cooks for a while. Its only mark is a moist texture. In other recipes, the sauerkraut remains intact and bears a close resemblance to the more expensive coconut.

Years ago when flour was scarce, spuds made their way into cake batters. "The potatoes made a moist cake," said Pam Becker of General Mills.

Potato cakes are rarely made these days except as a curiosity, although they taste as good as ever, especially following the recipe James Beard included in his "American Cookery" cookbook.

Some cooks add, unlikely ingredients simply for novelty.

POTATO SOUP CAKE

Time: about 1 hour
Cost: less than $2.00
2 1/4 cups cake flour

- 1 1/2 cups sugar
- 4 teaspoons baking powder
- 1 teaspoon baking soda
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon cinnamon
- 1 teaspoon ground cloves
- 1 1/2 cups condensed cream of tomato soup
- 1/2 cup hydrogenated shortening
- 2 eggs
- 1/4 cup water

Frosting (follows)

Measure flour, sugar, baking powder, soda and spices into large bowl. Add soup and shortening. Beat at low to medium speed of mixer for 2 minutes, scraping down sides of bowl constantly. Add eggs and water. Beat 2 minutes more, scraping bowl occasionally.

Pour into greased and floured 13-by-9-by-2-inch pan. Bake in preheated, 350-degree oven for 40 minutes or until cake tests done. Let stand in pan for 10 minutes; remove and cool on rack. Frost with cream cheese frosting or a favorite white frosting.

CREAM CHEESE FROSTING

- 2 ounce packages softened cream cheese
- 1 tablespoon milk
- 1 1/2-pound package confectioners' sugar, sifted
- 1 teaspoon vanilla

Blend cream cheese with milk. Gradually add sugar, blending well. Blend in vanilla.

CHOCOLATE MAYONNAISE CAKE

Time: about 40 minutes
Cost: less than $2.95

- 2 cups flour
- 1 cup sugar
- 1/2 teaspoon baking powder
- 1 teaspoon baking soda
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- 3 tablespoons cocoa
- 1 cup mayonnaise
- 1 cup lukewarm water
- 1/2 cup chopped walnuts

Whipped cream frosting (follows)

Sift together flour, sugar, soda, baking powder, salt and cocoa. Add mayonnaise and water. Stir until smooth. Lightly grease and flour a 9-by-13-inch baking pan. Pour batter into pan. Bake in 350-degree oven for 25 minutes or until toothpick inserted in center comes out clean. Cool in pan on wire rack. Frost with whipped cream frosting.

WHIPPED CREAM FROSTING

- 3 tablespoons cocoa
- 1/2 cup sugar
- 1 cup whipping cream

Beat salt.

Combine all ingredients. Chill several hours. Whip cream mixture until stiff. Spread on cake and refrigerate until serving.

PANTRY SHELF CAKE

Time: about 2 hours
Cost: less than $7.15

- 1 cup raisins
- 3 cups flour
- 1 teaspoon each baking soda and salt
- 1 teaspoon each cinnamon, nutmeg and cloves
- 1/2 cup shortening
- 1 1/2 cups sugar
- 3 eggs
- 1 cup sweetened applesauce
- 1 cup cherry preserves or jam
- 1 cup preserved watermelon pickles, chopped very fine
- 1 cup black walnuts, finely chopped

Cover 1 cup raisins with boiling water. Let stand 5 minutes, then drain thoroughly. Sift together flour, soda, salt, cinnamon, nutmeg and cloves. Blend together shortening and sugar, creaming well. Add eggs, one at a time, beating well after each addition. Stir in applesauce, cherry preserves and watermelon rind. Blend in dry ingredients gradually. Stir in walnuts and drained raisins.

Pour batter into well-greased and lightly floured (on bottom only) 13-by-9-by-2-inch pan. Bake in preheated, 350-degree oven for 30 to 35 minutes. Cool and frost if desired.

This oven gives instructions

CHICAGO (UPI)—There is a new microwave oven that goes one step beyond telling the cook how to prepare food. It demonstrates.

The prototype microwave, on display at the Consumer Electronics show in Chicago this week, has a five-inch color television screen that can be used as a television, a clock, a video display terminal or a cooking instruction guide.

The invention, by Matsushita Electronics, the parent company of Panasonic, Technics, Quasar and National, has a built-in cookbook offering recipes for six different categories of food.

After selecting the category with a cursor, the next step is to select a specific course. If, for example, it's a roast, the microwave will provide the approximate cooking time and list ingredients are recommended.

And if all the ingredients aren't on the pantry shelf, the microwave will spit out a printed shopping list.

When the cook returns from the store, the next step is to ask the microwave how to cook the roast. Instantly appearing on the screen will be a visual display of how the meat should be seasoned.

Once the roast is prepared and behind the oven door, the microwave does the rest. When the roast is ready, warning beeps will sound and the microwave will announce, "Completed."

But the oven is not done trying to impress its user. Because oven doors are usually warm, if not hot, after a meal is cooked, the microwave will open the door itself. All the cook needs to say is the word "door," into a microphone attachment and the door opens.

For those who feel they can handle simple kitchen chores without an electronic nursemaid, the oven—not expected to be marketed until 1984—also can work just like the basic microwave oven.

Comments from those watching a prototype model being displayed Wednesday varied from, "You have to be smart to cook now," to, "It's going to help men out a lot when their wives go on vacation."

Another curious onlooker asked if the futuristic microwave could cook a TV dinner. The answer: "Yes, of course."

There will be an answering service. To obtain information about physical and speech therapy call 733-5745. Calls will be answered.

Wranglerettes select queen

FILER — Cindy Littler of Filer has been chosen the Filer Wranglerettes Queen for 1981.

The 18-year-old rider, who works at Acme in Filer, has ridden with the club for several years.

Maureen Allen of Twin Falls was the first runnerup and Lynette Sweesy of Buhl, second runner up in the queen contest. Wendell White of Twin Falls also competed but was not eligible because she is not 16.

Contestants were judged on outfits, modeling, speech and personality at a brunch. During the horseshooting competition contestants rode their own and another contestant's horse through various patterns and answered questions on horsemanship.

Littler is eligible to compete at the Snake River Stampede in Nampa as well as the Miss Rodeo Idaho contest.

Homecoming for Albion school

ALBION — A homecoming event for all alumni of the former Albion college is scheduled June 27 at Albion and Burley.

Keith Amende, president of the Albion State Normal-Southern Idaho College of Education Alumni Association, said registration will be held from 10 a.m. until noon at the Albion Elementary School. Former students will be able to browse through old albums and meet former classmates.

A buffet dinner is scheduled at 1 p.m. in Price's Cafe in Burley, with a business meeting to follow from 2 to 4 p.m.

Cover charges will be $2 per person. Persons planning to attend are asked to send their dinner fee to Amende at Albion.

Erma's European visit details restrooms

By ERMA BOMBICK
Field Enterprises, Inc.

We were visiting with a couple the other night when the woman revealed that she and her husband were going to Europe for the first time.

"What luck," said my husband. "We've already been there and I'm sure we could enlighten you on what to see and what to miss. Erma even kept a diary. Why don't you get it out?" he said. "Even I never seen what she's written in it and it might be nice to relive some of the places we've been and the things we've seen."

"Did you visit London?" asked our guest.

I hummed through the pages. "London: The loo — that's what they call their restrooms. Are generally clean. Rather primitive chain-like apparatus to flush. Take own tissue."

"That's it?" asked my husband. "What about Germany?"

"Let's see, Germany. I have three listings. The women's restroom facilities by the Rhine were adequate although the roller towel was quite soiled and looked like it hadn't been changed in days. The one in the department store in West Berlin, however."

"Why don't you read us what you have about the 'Eliffel Tower'?" I mean tower."

"The Eiffel Tower restroom had soap and tissue, but the lines could throw you into kidney failure. Oh, and don't forget Amsterdam. That's an experience. This is important. Don't forget to take Dutch currency — and the exact change."

"Any country I shouldn't miss?"

asked the woman, jotting down notes.

"Switzerland," I said, referring to my diary. "The mirrors were sparkling, there was no water standing on the floor, and the locks were secure on the doors."

"The woman leaned in to whisper, 'Is it true what they say about ITALY?'"

I flipped over a few pages and gave it to her to read. "I'm sorry word is true. Read on until you get to the part about the woman who kept looking for the 'flush mechanism.'"

"I don't believe this," said my husband. "Do you mean to tell me you spent four weeks going through Europe seeing breathtaking cathedrals, exciting countryside, historic landmarks, and you don't have one word about the Louvre or the Sistine chapel?"

"Of course I have notes on the Louvre and the Sistine chapel. There was no paper in the Louvre and the Sistine chapel had a dirty Italian word on the inside of the looth. What do you think I am? A spoiled American tourist?"

Neapolitan Spoonable Shake and Pineapple-Lime Refresher taste good and are nutritious

Milk drinks satisfying

BOISE — It's that time of year again when you can feast June or any summer month with supremely satisfying milk drinks.

Whether they're used as a special snack on a hot afternoon or dessert on a humid evening, milk drinks are refreshing and nutritious. All three given here are tempting combos of milk, fruit and ice cream or sherbet.

Neapolitan Spoonable Shake has the same consistency as a milk shake. Each of its three layers is frozen separately, then spooned into glasses before serving. That gives a colorful, tiered effect in keeping with the theme, Neapolitan. The flavors are vanilla, chocolate, and strawberry, requiring ice cream favorites.

There's nothing better for lifting witted spirits than a combination of crushed pineapple, limeade concentrate, ice cream and cold milk. Even the cool green tint, enhanced with a bit of coloring, is designed to revive you before sipping.

Peaches and raspberries have long been a favorite combination. For a frosty beverage, puree the peaches first, then add cold milk and raspberries to make the drink.

None of these drinks will be difficult to make if the directions are followed in the order given. Make certain ingredients are chilled or frozen, as specified.

NEAPOLITAN SPOONABLE SHAKE

- 1 pint vanilla ice cream, softened
- 1/2 cup cold milk
- 1 teaspoon coconut extract
- 1 cup sliced fresh strawberries
- 1/2 cup cold milk
- 1 pint strawberry ice cream, softened
- 1 large banana, peeled and cut into pieces
- 1/2 cup cold milk
- 1 pint chocolate ice cream, softened

Place vanilla ice cream, 1/2 cup milk and coconut extract in blender container; cover. Blend until well mixed and smooth. Pour mixture into a bowl and freeze. Place strawberries and 1/2 cup milk in blender container; cover. Puree until smooth. Add strawberry ice cream and blend until well combined. Pour mixture into a second bowl and freeze. Place banana and 1/2 cup milk in blender container; cover. Puree until smooth. Add chocolate ice cream and blend until well combined. Pour into a third bowl and freeze. Freeze mixtures until spoonable, about 2 hours. To serve, layer about 1/2 cup of each mixture in tall, chilled glasses. Serve immediately.

PINEAPPLE-LIME REFRESHER

- 1 can (8 ounce) crushed pineapple, in unsweetened juice, chilled
 - 1 pint vanilla ice cream, softened
 - 1 can (8 ounce) frozen limeade concentrate, thawed
 - 3 cups cold milk
 - green food color, if desired
 - pineapple wedges, if desired
- Place pineapple with juice in blender container; cover. Puree until smooth. Add ice cream and concentrate. Blend until well combined. Add milk and food color. Blend until frothy. Serve immediately in tall, chilled glasses garnished with a pineapple wedge.

FROSTY PEACH MELBA DRINK

- 1 can (8 ounce) sliced peaches in syrup, chilled
 - 2 cups cold milk
 - 1 pint raspberry sherbet
 - 1 teaspoon almond extract
 - fresh mint, if desired
- Place peaches and syrup in blender container; cover. Puree until smooth. Add remaining ingredients. Blend until smooth and frothy. Serve immediately in tall, chilled glasses garnished with fresh mint.

Limiting a fat youngster's food may be a mistake, expert says

By PATRICIA McCORMACK
Health Editor

NEW YORK (UPI) — When fat hampers around the anatomy it forms a pot belly or a "backporch" or "saddle bags."

The descriptions, it turns out, aren't too bad — when you consider fat as stored energy. What better place to store anything than in a pot, on a backporch or in saddle bags?

The idea of living off stored energy in fat comes up in a report in the University of Georgia "Research Report."

"Some obese people carry enough energy in their body fat to last more than 200 days without eating, whereas a lean person could last only 20-25 days," says Dr. Roy Martin, professor of foods and nutrition in the university's College of Home Economics.

But for the American population, where availability of food is not a factor, that is not the problem. The problem is the negative effects of obesity.

Extra baggage puts a strain on the musculo-skeletal system. But that's not all. The report says fat tends to weaken the body's resistance to other types of illness — diabetes, heart attacks, infection and bone diseases. Then, there's what Martin calls "the social prejudice."

He gave an example from a survey of apartment owners. The survey showed the owners will rent to the lean person when there is a choice between a lean and a fat applicant.

Rather than coming up with wonder diets aimed at helping fat persons to shed, Martin directs his research to basic questions — the answers to which may show there's more to overweight than what passes the lips in the first place.

In his three years at the university in Athens, Martin has garnered $250,000 from the National Institutes of Health, the U.S. Department of Agriculture and the Meat and Livestock Board to seek answers to these questions:

— Are dietary requirements different for genetically lean and obese persons?

— What metabolic factors are involved in the excessive accumulation of fat?

— What is the role of the brain and endocrine systems in the regulation of food intake and obesity?

— Are the number and size of fat cells influenced by food intake or vice versa?

— Martin claims prevention and treatment of obesity depend on answers to such questions. Until the answers come in, he advises overweight people to exercise and pay attention to what state-of-the-art preaches about proper nutrition.

In the report, Martin focuses on the fat child. His research leads him to believe it may be a mistake to limit a fat child's food — the usual first step taken by parents trying to help an obese offspring.

"Treatment of childhood obesity by simple dietary restriction may lead to serious developmental problems," he says.

He based his conclusion on laboratory work involving rats who become fat at an early age.

Researchers found that dietary restriction is harmful to skeletal growth of the young fat rats. When the plump rats get the same amount of food as lean ones, the fat rats suffer impairment of bone growth and muscle development.

This suggests to Martin that protein and mineral needs for muscles and skeletal growth may be higher for those with a genetic or inborn tendency for obesity in childhood.

Martin and his associates are trying to find the right dietary combination necessary for cutting down on juvenile-onset obesity — without causing problems for normal muscle and skeletal growth.

Beef, chicken, eggs are bargain

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Agriculture Department told American consumers Tuesday they may find the best bargains of the year in beef, chickens and eggs this month.

In a food marketing alert sent to buyers for schools, hospitals and other institutions, the department's Agricultural Marketing Service suggested consumers "buy and use beef, broilers and eggs during June due to expected heavy supplies of these items."

"Prices of these basics may be near low levels for the year," the department said.

Several months ago, department economists expected meat prices to rise sharply this year, but those predictions turned out to be wrong and food prices have been stable this year, holding down the cost-of-living index.

The department said a sharp increase in slaughter of cows and grass-fed cattle over the past few weeks "appears to be in response to higher interest rates and subsequent drops in feeder cattle prices."

Total beef production this year may be 2 percent higher than a year ago. Cattle prices are a little higher than last year, but most producers are still unable to break even, the department said.

Broiler production, meanwhile, is about 3 percent greater than record levels of last year. The department said broiler producers are losing 5-6 cents per pound on each chicken.

MARINATED CHICKEN

- 1 chicken, cut up in pieces
 - 1 bottle (8 oz.) soy sauce
 - 1/2 cup lemon juice
 - 1/2 cup vegetable oil
 - 1 medium sized can jalapeno peppers, and juice
- Cut up fryer chicken in pieces. Mix together the rest of the ingredients and marinate chicken overnight. Do not rinse off chicken next day. Broil or bake your favorite way. Chicken will have a unique flavor.

American cooks just beginning to appreciate flavor of cardamom

HUNT VALLEY, Md. — Cardamom may be a "sleeper" spice whose time has come.

Though the very name conjures visions of ancient India, American cooks are just beginning to know and appreciate cardamom's spicy-sweet flavor, lemony undertones, and cooling aftertaste.

The spice originated in India, where it is much valued for curry and other dishes, and is celebrated as the "Queen of Spices." Cardamom's history is even older, though. The Roman Apicius, perhaps the world's first cook book compiler, recommended cardamom after any culinary over-indulgence.

It is used as well as well in the fifth century B.C. treatise on the Hindu science of medicine; known as the Ayurveda. Ancient Indian physicians asserted the use of cardamom was effective in warding off evil spirits, and for curing many diseases. The Arabs believed the spice aided digestion, helped to cool the body, and acted as a powerful aphrodisiac.

Although India consumes 40 percent of the cardamom it produces, the largest single consumer of the spice today is a country which must import its cardamom, and which reserves it for one exclusive use.

This is coffee-crazy Saudi Arabia, with its passion for flavoring its cups with ground cardamom. All of the Middle East shares this passion and together these countries consume over 60 percent of the world's supply.

This beverage is known as qahwa, a symbol of Arab hospitality. No business transaction may be entered into before the cups of coffee, cardamom-flavored, to induce tranquil thoughts, have been served and enjoyed.

No social visit is properly conducted in the Arab world without the ritual of the qahwa. Tradition has it that the perfect guest may enjoy three cups of the powerful brew, poured from its brass coffee maker. As with British high tea, the serving of qahwa is marked by great cardamom. Because the Arabs display their cardamom before serving the qahwa, they will only green cardamom (a term which refers to the color of the outer pod). The reality is, the greener the pod, the less intense the flavor of the seeds inside.

As a result of this huge demand in the Arab world for appearance-pleasing cardamom, the rest of us enjoy a supply of the spice which is less pleasing in appearance, but more flavorful.

Cardamom, a member of the ginger family, comes in several forms. Whole cardamom is the pod containing the seeds. Seeds alone are usually labeled de-corticated cardamom. Ground cardamom—usually means that the whole pods (which are without taste), as well as the flavorful seeds, have been ground together.

Then whole cardamom pods removed and the seeds crushed, are equal to 1/2 teaspoon ground de-corticated cardamom.

In the United States this spice is known almost solely in those areas of the country where Scandinavian immigrants settled. To learn about the subtle warmth of cardamom, you might want to try the following recipe. The recipe is from the Spices of the World Cookbook by McCormick.

CARDAMOM MEATBALLS

- 1 pound ground beef
 - 1/2 pound ground pork
 - 1/2 cup dry bread crumbs
 - 1/4 cup chopped onion
 - 1 teaspoon ground cardamom
 - 1/2 teaspoon salt
 - 1/4 teaspoon ground black pepper
 - 2 eggs, lightly beaten
 - 2 tablespoons salad oil
- In a large bowl combine beef, pork, bread crumbs, onion, cardamom, salt, black pepper and eggs; mix thoroughly. Shape into 1-inch balls. In a large skillet heat oil until hot. Add meatballs; cook for 10 to 12 minutes, turning meatballs to brown evenly. Serve as an hors d'oeuvre or as a main course. Makes 28 meatballs.

NORWEGIAN CARDAMOM SWEET ROLLS

- 2 cups milk, scalded
 - 2 envelopes active dry yeast
 - 1/2 cup butter or margarine, softened
 - 1/2 cup sugar
 - 1 teaspoon ground cardamom
 - 2 teaspoons salt
 - 3 eggs
 - 2 teaspoons pure vanilla extract
 - about 7 1/2 cups all-purpose flour (unsifted)
 - 1 cup seedless raisins, divided
 - 1 egg white, lightly beaten
 - 3 tablespoons chopped almonds
- Cool milk until lukewarm (110-115°F.). Sprinkle yeast on top of milk; let stand for 10 minutes (do not stir). In a medium bowl cream butter, sugar, cardamom and salt. Add eggs, one at a time, mixing well; blend in vanilla (mixture will look curdled). Stir yeast and milk; mixing until yeast is dissolved. Combine with butter mixture. Gradually add flour, mixing until a soft dough is formed. Turn onto a lightly floured board. Place 1/2 cup raisins in the center of the dough. Fold in half; knead several times. Repeat three times, adding 1/2 cup of remaining raisins each time. Place in greased bowl; turn dough to bring greased surface to top. Cover and let rise in a warm place until double in bulk, about 1 hour. Punch down dough. Divide dough into 36 equal pieces; shape each into a ball. Place on two lightly greased baking sheets; cover and let rise until double in bulk, about 1 hour. Preheat oven to 375°F. Brush top of dough with egg white; sprinkle with almonds. Bake until golden, 15 to 17 minutes. Yield 36 rolls.

Cardamom, a member of ginger family, is known only in areas where Scandinavians settled

Tofu new U.S. yogurt?

DES MOINES, Iowa (UPI) — Earl Kaplan would be happy if tofu — a sort of soybean cheese — turns into the new yogurt of the American diet. He says the new yogurt could be like that, "Kaplan said, tracing the acceptance of yogurt in the past decade. "When we provide the right recipes, people seem to like it. It supplies a lot of protein and tastes good."

Dennis Strayer shares Kaplan's enthusiasm for the future of tofu — and other soybean foods — and believes education is the key. "This is just on the verge of really exploding," Strayer said.

Strayer and Kaplan have vested interests in the success of soybean foods — Strayer heads one of the oldest soybean seed farms in the nation and Kaplan is a partner in Iowa's only tofu firm, American Pride.

But their sentiments are widespread in the soyfood business, a tiny part of the soybean industry which overall recouped a billion in sales last year. Soyfoods account for only 3 percent of the soybeans used in the United States.

"The soyfood industry is not even half a billion dollars," said Richard Leviton, publisher of Soyfoods magazine in Colrain, Mass.

"A lot of it has begun as a cottage industry and has grown. Mostly, they are entrepreneurs. A lot of it, while innovative, is low technology."

Leviton traces the history in the soyfood industry from the mid-1970s, when soyfoods spread beyond ethnic uses and health food stores. The industry is still small. Sales of products are counted in pounds, not tons.

Strayer Seed Farms in Hudson, Iowa, hits both ends of the industry. It produces edible soybean varieties for growers and it sells the finished product. A pamphlet lists several recipes for using soybeans.

Soyfoods have their greatest popularity on the East and West coasts. "It's a food he (the consumer) is unexposed to in the Midwest at least," Strayer said. "I think it (winning customers) is going to be more educational ... about how to prepare these foods."

The Agriculture Department is reviewing its rules on the school-lunch program and has listed tofu as one of the foods that might be allowed. It is being tested in some schools in Santa Cruz, Calif., said Jane Mattern, of the USDA's Food and Nutrition Service.

"We expect to get information from out there; how it is being used," Ms. Mattern said, cautioning a decision has not been reached. "There has been a lot of interest in this one."

Producers look eagerly at the possibility of tofu in school lunches. "If you can get kids to eat it at school, it's a way to get it into the home," Strayer said. "It's also a way of controlling lunch costs."

Soyfoods come in a variety of products. They include tofu, soy nuts, prepared in the same way as peanuts; tempeh, a fermented soyfood held together by roots of the tempeh culture; miso, a high-protein paste and condiments such as soy sauce, tamari and shoyu.

Tofu, tempeh and miso are staples of diets in several Asian countries.

About 25 million pounds of tofu were sold last year in the United States, making it the most popular of the foods, Leviton said.

Kaplan said Maharishi International University helped supply a market for American Pride, located in Fairfield, Iowa. Leviton said many soyfood businesses are near colleges.

"There was just a need for a high-quality vegetable protein ... and then we just started expanding into retail markets," Kaplan said. "Soy nuts are on the rise in popularity," Leviton said. "They taste good and have a lot of protein."

A California firm is producing a candy bar using soy nuts, he said, and a Michigan firm is looking into soybean butter.

Most of the soyfood firms in Iowa are devoted to soy nuts. Strayer Seed produces "field" and "vegetable" soybean seeds. The "vegetable" varieties are preferred for soyfood products, Strayer said, because they are larger, have a higher protein content and have "a less heavy taste."

The seed firm, with the help of farmers, grew about 1,800 acres of vegetable soybeans last year. Production will be "substantially larger" this year.

Farmers are paid premium prices, $1 a bushel higher than the futures market, to grow the beans, which yield less than field beans. Extra work is necessary cleaning equipment and weeding fields.

"It's a very specialized market and I wouldn't recommend someone getting into it without having someone to market it," Strayer said.

There are other means to get soybeans into the unman diet. Some firms use high-temperature treatment to produce texturized soybean protein.

The American Soybean Association says soy oil consumption in the United States amounts to five gallons a person each year. Soy oil is popular for use in salad dressings, margarine, cooking oil and shortening.

Try-lard-not cheese for mouse traps

LONDON (UPI) — When mice invade the kitchen you bait the traps with cheese, right?

Wrong.

"Cheese is not a good choice," says the consumer magazine Which. "Mice don't like it very much."

The magazine surveyed Consumer Association members in Britain and found one in 10 had so many problems with mice they had to call in outside help. So the magazine gave its readers a do-it-yourself advice.

Traps "must be correctly placed, with the trap set at right angles to the paths used by the mice," it said. "And it is a good idea to set a number of traps close together."

"In fact, bait the cheese yourself with cheese, stale, dried fruits, nuts or fat for better results," it said.

Potato now becoming a fashionable vegetable

SAN FRANCISCO — The potato is finally taking its rightful place as a fashionable vegetable. No longer is it being called "ordinary" and "everyday."

Each more people are discovering that the potato is actually very chic. What could be more elegant than a steaming baked potato flavored with butter and sour cream and crowned with caviar or smoked oysters? It's a unique appetizer called Potatoes Imperial that will get your special dinner off to the perfect start.

People used to think of potatoes only as an economical side dish. Potatoes Imperial is just one recipe that shows how attitudes have changed. The potato's versatility is becoming as well-known as its good nutrition.

Another example is Potatoes Parmigiana, where small whole cooked potatoes are coated in spices and cheese and served topped with prosciutto, an Italian ham. It, too, is easy to make, yet looks and tastes wonderful.

For a potato first course to serve chilled, there's Potato Salad Chinoise. Potatoes, radishes and cucumbers are marinated in a spicy soy mixture, refrigerated then artistically arranged as an eye-appealing and delicious dish.

Although all these dishes have an elegant flair, they're surprisingly reasonable in cost. That's because of the potato, one of the best food buys around at just pennies per serving. Because potatoes don't put a dent in your food budget, you have room to splurge on luxuries like caviar and prosciutto.

Potatoes are a favorite vegetable of fashion designer Cathy Hardwick. She often starts a company dinner with one of these recipes from her collection and always gets rave reviews.

So when you want to give your next dinner party a new look, take Cathy Hardwick's advice and start with potatoes, the fashionable vegetable of the '80s.

POTATOES PARMIGIANA
18 small potatoes (about 3 pounds)
1/2 cup butter or margarine
1/2 teaspoons each basil and dill weed
1/2 teaspoon each salt and pepper
3/4 cup grated Parmesan cheese
1 teaspoon paprika
6 slices prosciutto-ham

Watercress sprigs
In Dutch oven with tight-fitting lid, cook potatoes in 1 inch-boiling water until tender, 25 to 35 minutes. (Check water occasionally and maintain 1 inch level.) Drain. In large skillet melt 1/2 of the butter over medium heat. Stir in 1/2 of the herbs, salt, pepper and hot potatoes. Cook about 5 minutes, shaking skillet frequently. Remove from skillet and keep warm. Repeat with remaining butter, herbs, salt, pepper and potatoes. In small bowl combine cheese and paprika. Roll hot potatoes in cheese mixture to coat. Place 3 potatoes each on individual serving plates. Top with rolled ham slices. Garnish with watercress. Makes 6 servings.

POTATOES IMPERIAL
6 hot baked potatoes (3 to 5 ounces each)
6 tablespoons butter or margarine, softened
6 tablespoons sour cream
Salt, to taste
Pepper, to taste
1/2 cup fresh caviar or 1 jar (4 ounces) caviar, or 1 can 3 1/2 ounces) smoked oysters, drained

Watercress sprigs
Snow peas, steamed
Split and fluff potatoes. Gently mix into each potato, 1 tablespoon each butter and sour cream and salt and pepper. Place on individual serving plates. Top each potato with caviar or oysters. Garnish with watercress sprigs and steamed snow peas and serve with additional sour cream, if desired. Makes 6 servings.

POTATO SALAD CHINOISE
6 potatoes (about 2 pounds)
1 bunch radishes, sliced
1 small cucumber, cut in 2-inch julienne
1/2 cups white vinegar
1/2 cup soy sauce
2 tablespoons vegetable oil
2 teaspoons grated lemon peel
2 teaspoons grated fresh ginger
Lettuce leaves
2 tablespoons toasted sesame seeds
In large saucepan with tight-fitting lid cook potatoes over medium heat in 1 inch boiling water, just until tender, about 30 minutes. Drain and cool. Carefully cut potatoes lengthwise into 1/4-inch thick slices. Place in shallow bowl. In another bowl combine radishes and cucumber. In small bowl whisk together remaining ingredients except sesame seeds. Pour soy sauce mixture equally divided over potatoes and radish mixture. Toss gently. Cover and chill about 2 hours. Line individual serving plates with lettuce. Arrange potato slices and radish mixture on top, equally divided. Spoon over some of the marinade and sprinkle with sesame seeds. Garnish with whole radish, if desired.

Try out each part of appliance

CHICAGO (UPI) — The time to try every feature of a new electrical appliance is soon after it is installed in your home — even if it means using a feature more often than necessary during the product's warranty period.

This advice comes from The Major Appliance Consumer Action Panel, representing manufacturers of computers, dehumidifiers, dishwashers, disposers, gas incinerators, home laundry equipment, ranges, refrigerators and freezers, room air conditioners and water heaters.

The panel often finds itself in the distressing position of trying to help consumers with appliances problems they did not discover until their warranties had expired, says an article in the May issue of the MACAP Consumer Bulletin.

If an appliance has a defect that shows up during the first few times you use a particular feature, don't live with it. Tell your dealer promptly, the article says, and give the dealer time to correct it.

If you are dissatisfied with the dealer's action, report the problem to the manufacturer, the article adds, and always keep records to document your case. The records should include: When the problem was first noticed; when it was reported to the dealer and/or manufacturer; and the servicing history; what was done, when and by whom.

If you are still dissatisfied, write MACAP, giving your name, address and telephone number, the kind of appliance, brand, model and serial number, the name and address of the dealer and/or service agent, the location of the appliance and a clear description of the problem and the difficulties it presents. MACAP will then study the problem and recommend a solution.

Start your next dinner party with one of these fashionable potato appetizers

Too much exposure to sun bad

NEW YORK (UPI) — Parents tend to forget children are exposed to the sun all summer long, not just for two weeks a year at the beach, says Robert M. Sayre, a photobiology researcher.

Sayre says prevention of accumulated exposure requires daily skin care, beginning in childhood, to avoid premature aging and skin problems in later years.

In a speech at a recent science seminar in New York City, he said:

"Children are out in the sun much more than adults... children may spend 100 days or more per year in the sun. Probably they are accumulating three- to 10-times more exposure per year than they will have as adults."

"We must all try to educate our children that accumulated sun exposure is not beneficial," Sayre said. "Sun-damaged skin looks old. The greatest chance of reducing accumulated sun damage must be through good skin care in the sun begun as early as possible."

"Faces, ears, arms and hands require more protection," he said, "because they are always in the sun and tend to show aging changes due to sun exposure earlier and to a greater extent."

"We need a new strategy of skin care in the sun, one which involves the daily use of a sunscreen," he said. "Until now all scientists have been in agreement that 'sunburn' is bad."

"Today, we still need to prevent sunburn, but to attain the goals of reducing skin cancer and delaying aging changes, means that every little bit of unprotected exposure counts. It all adds up. Our skin remembers."

"Until now, no one was especially concerned about exposures that didn't produce a sunburn," he said.

"Big deal, my 30 minutes in the sun today really did nothing," some people say. I am here to tell you that that is not true," Sayre said.

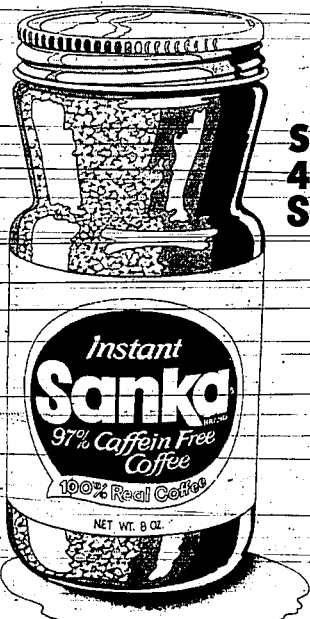

"... our two weeks at the beach appear to represent no more than one-third of our yearly exposure. Reducing that fraction through the use of sunscreens during our vacation has to help. But during our normal, daily activities, we are still accumulating over two-thirds of the original annual exposure."

"Sayre is director of the Coppertone Solar Research Laboratory in Memphis, Tenn.

Nutrition now known to be a major factor in remaining healthy

Stuffed shells and tomato sauce make a vegetarian casserole low in cholesterol

ENGLEWOOD CLIFFS, N.J. — Nutrition, a rapidly young and expanding science, has done much to improve man's status on earth.

The occurrence of many illnesses once considered major public health problems — pellagra, rickets and scurvy to name a few — has been dramatically reduced due to nutrition research. However, there still exist areas of uncertainty.

A major health concern of the '80s is how food and nutrition affect heart health. Nutritionists report that for many people, diet has a significant influence on blood cholesterol levels which in turn has been shown to increase the risk of heart disease.

The advice is based on current guidelines in choosing and preparing food. And, apparently people are listening. Public awareness of nutrition has been growing by leaps and bounds. Books are being published, articles written and best of all, people are asking questions and taking steps to learn the answers.

This is seen by various trends — a major one being the decreased consumption of fatty red meat. Years ago, a well-marbled slab of beef with lots of visible fat was the ideal. Today, it just isn't the case. According to a recent survey of a major supermarket chain in the west, consumers want leaner meat — "Fat is out — Lean is in." Concerned with the health implications of fat and cholesterol, shoppers seem to be switching from fatty red meat to poultry, fish, pork and less fatty cuts of beef.

Another indication of consumer interest is seen by the vast number of cooking schools offering classes in "awareness" cooking. Classes in vegetarian cooking, low-fat, low cholesterol cooking and low salt cooking are springing up across the country accommodating those interested in modifying their diets or those interested in learning more. In Long Island, N.Y., was originated by two women who were forced to modify cooking habits due to family members suffering from heart diseases. The teachers stress balanced eating. Their recipes reduce saturated fat, cholesterol and sodium. The enthusiastic response has resulted in classes attended by people from every walk of life.

In support of National Nutrition Month sponsored by the American Dietetic Association, the following recipes were developed. They are compatible with major trends happening across the country. One is a meatless main dish; another a banana bread — eliminating high-cholesterol egg yolks and the third a nutritious fish dish. They fill the need for recipes that fit into today's lifestyles of healthful eating.

STUFFED SHELLS

- 1/2 cup corn oil
- 1 cup coarsely chopped onion
- 1 cup coarsely chopped — green pepper
- 2 cloves garlic, minced or pressed
- 2 cans (16 oz.) tomatoes, undrained, chopped
- 5 teaspoons chili powder
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 24 jumbo shells (for filling)
- 1 can (20 oz.) chick peas
- 2 tablespoons chopped parsley
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 4 ounces Monterey Jack, cheese, shredded (1 cup)

In large skillet heat corn oil over medium heat. Add onion, green pepper and garlic. Stirring frequently, cook 3 to 4 minutes. Add tomatoes, chili powder and salt. Stirring occasionally, simmer 20 minutes. Cook and drain shells according to package directions. Drain chick peas; reserve 1/2 cup liquid. With potato masher coarsely mash chick peas. Stir in reserved liquid, chopped parsley and salt. Place about 2 cups sauce in 13x9x2-inch baking dish to cover bottom. Stuff each shell with about 1 tablespoon chick pea mixture. Place stuffed shells in baking dish.

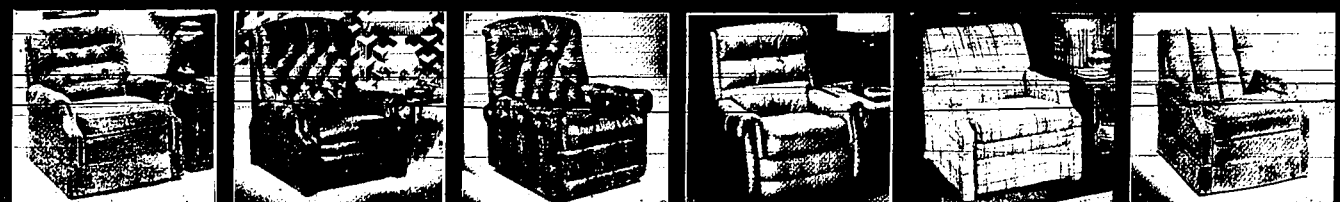

Spoon remaining sauce around shells. Sprinkle with cheese. Bake in 350°F oven 25 minutes or until hot and bubbly. Makes 6 servings.

BANANA LOAF

- 2 egg whites, lightly beaten
 - 1 cup mashed bananas (3 to 4 small)
 - 1/4 cup sugar
 - 1/4 cup corn oil
 - 1 teaspoon vanilla
 - 1/2 cups unsifted flour
 - 1/2 cup chopped walnuts
 - 1/2 cup raisins
 - 1/2 teaspoon baking powder
 - 1/2 teaspoon salt
- Grease and flour 8 1/2 x 4 1/2 x 2 1/2-inch loaf pan. In medium bowl stir together egg whites, banana, sugar, corn oil and vanilla. In small bowl stir together flour, walnuts, raisins and baking powder. Stir in banana mixture until well mixed. Turn into prepared pan. Bake in 350°F oven 60 to 65 minutes or until cake tester inserted in center comes out clean. Cool in pan 10 minutes. Remove from pan. Cool completely on wire rack. Makes 16 1/2-inch slices.

SPINACH STUFFED FISH

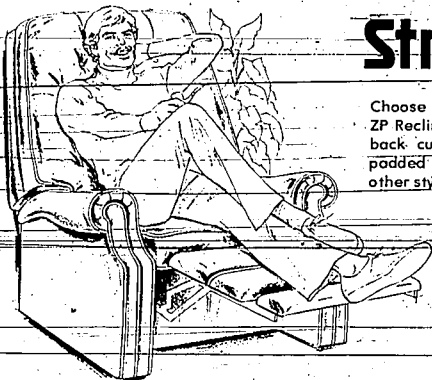

- 1 pound fish fillets
 - 1 package (10 oz.) frozen chopped spinach, cooked, well-drained
 - 1/2 cup corn oil
 - 1/2 pound mushrooms, sliced (2 cups)
 - 1 medium onion, chopped (1/2 cup)
 - 1 cup dry white wine
 - 1/2 cup chopped parsley
 - 1/2 teaspoon pepper
 - 1 lemon, sliced
- Cut each fish fillet in half lengthwise. Spread about 1 to 2 tablespoons spinach on each fish slice. Roll each fillet jelly-roll fashion; fasten with wooden pick. In large skillet heat corn oil over medium heat. Add mushrooms and onion. Stirring frequently, cook 5 minutes or until tender. Stir in wine, parsley and pepper. Add fish rolls and lemon slices. Cover and simmer 10 to 15 minutes or until fish flakes easily. Makes 4 servings.

"WE SERVE TO SERVE AGAIN"

Walker Center prepares for accreditation

By BRUCE HAMMOND
Times-News writer

GOODING—The Walker Center for Alcoholism and Drug Abuse is preparing for an accreditation examination this summer.

At the same time, center officials have moved a little closer to gaining state approval to move the treatment facility to a new site adjacent to Gooding County Memorial Hospital.

"Basically we're seeking certification from the Joint Commission on Accreditation of Hospitals because it tells patients that very high standards are demanded at a facility," Center Director Carl Bergstrom said Tuesday.

An accreditation subcommittee is expected to survey the Walker Center "sometime later this summer," Bergstrom said. "This is a group that specializes in psychiatric, problem adolescent and alcoholism treatment programs like ours."

This is the first time the center has sought national accreditation.

Center officials and representatives from St. Benedict's Hospital in Ogden, Utah, which now operates the Walker Center, will present arguments for moving the center's location at a state hearing in mid-July.

Bergstrom said he would appear before the Idaho Health Facilities Review Board to provide information before the board renders a final decision in late July on whether there is sufficient need for the center to move.

Housed in the old state tuberculosis hospital, the Walker Center has about five-times the needed space, according to Bergstrom.

The proposal is to build a new, 12,000-square-foot structure near the Gooding hospital. This new 24-bed treatment center would cost about $1.2 million, but at no cost to the public.

The present building is a 82,000-square-foot, 30-bed facility. Bergstrom said a large portion of the center's budget is consumed in heating the large building.

People from St. Benedict's will be presenting to their board of directors a week from Friday a request that a portion of this building's funding be raised through a fund raising drive," Bergstrom said.

"The idea behind a fund drive is that it would keep financing costs down, which would result in less cost being transferred to the patients," Bergstrom said.

Other funding alternatives St. Benedict's is considering is "raising financing and seeking outside investors to be repaid on a rental basis."

If the state approves the center's proposed move, a January 1983 completion date has been projected for the new building. However, no money can be spent on architect plans or bids issued until the state approves the move, Bergstrom stressed.

"In the interim we're continuing treatments and normal operation," Bergstrom said.

The facilities review board has not received any public hearing request concerning the proposed move and may act on the center's proposal without public comment.

Another impact of the proposed move could be increased income for the Gooding hospital, which has been actively seeking new business. Bergstrom said the center would probably gain access to the hospital's support and nursing services, mutually aiding both facility.

Teacher contract still not settled by Jerome teams

By BRUCE HAMMOND
Times-News writer

JEROME—Teacher contract settlement still alludes Jerome school negotiators after a sixth meeting Monday.

"All we did is come to an agreement that we needed help," said Jerome Education Association negotiator Craig Ainsworth.

Consequently, a second try-at-mediation has been requested by the JEA. Monday's negotiations talk was the first meeting of the JEA and the Jerome School Board since progress was made during mediation May 18.

"I think both sides are afraid to give up anything," Ainsworth said. "Both sides are waiting for a total package to be offered."

"We're not that far apart, but we need someone to help put the total contract package together," Ainsworth said.

Board negotiator Robert Gould of Education Consultants, Pocatello, echoed Ainsworth's comments Tuesday saying neither side wants to make a large initial compromise because this could put that party at a disadvantage if fact finding is called for at a later date.

"Both sides really want to get resolution," Gould said. "My feeling is that the board has to move a little bit and so do the teachers."

However, practically no movement occurred between the two groups Monday. Negotiated items and their status is as follows:

- Salaries were not discussed and remain with the board's offer of a 7.7 percent increase in raises compared to the JEA's request of 10 percent. This amounts to about a $37,000 difference.
- Grievance procedures have been settled.
- The duration clause of the 1981-82 contract being negotiated remains unsettled with the board wanting to specify an expiration date and the teachers wanting the contract to continue until a new contract is signed.

- Sick leave edged slightly closer to settlement Monday with the teachers asking 9 days per year with a possible accumulation of 110 days as opposed to the board's offer of 9 days per year with a possible accumulation of 100 days.
- The trustees have agreed to a sick leave bank, a program where healthy teachers donate days of their sick leave to a reserve for teachers stricken with a long-term illness. Composition of the governing committee of the bank, however, remains unresolved.
- Board members are remaining fast in their desire to have professional leaves handled by the school district's policy council. The JEA wants a specific number of days of professional leave granted to each teacher.

While both Ainsworth and Gould are confident the 1981-82 contracts can be settled with more negotiation, school board members voiced concern about the length of this year's negotiations.

During Monday's regular board meeting, trustee Jerry Cullen said if a second mediation session can not be scheduled within 30 days, the board should consider calling for fact finding.

A fact finder is an outside person hired to issue a proposed solution based on the merits of both sides' arguments.

"We don't want these negotiations to drag on into the school year next fall," Board Chairman Alvin Chojnacki said following Monday's board meeting.

"If it's going to be 30 or 60 days before the mediator (Tom Curdie of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service) can schedule another session, the board may decide to call for fact finding," Chojnacki said.

"But right now we're waiting for another try at mediation."

Ron, Kay Hurst take a short break in the front yard of their home, one of the earliest constructed near Hagerman

Home restoration work, but worth it

By TERRELL WILLIAMS
Times-News correspondent

HAGERMAN—This old house is worth restoring because it is built like an army tank.

Owner Kay Hurst said this of the 1906 farm house southeast of Hagerman she and her husband Ron are renovating to its original condition.

One of the first homes built in Hagerman Valley, this two-story brick building will be registered with the Idaho Historical Society as a Historical Landmark when it is restored. The Hursts may then apply for a grant or low interest loan to do further work on the house.

Like an antique car restored with original regulation parts, the Hursts are tediously making this pioneer home just as it was 75 years ago.

Original stained-glass windows are being reframed; layers of paint covered with layers of wallpaper are being scraped off, and upstairs hard wood floors are sanded and will soon be varnished. The old ornately carved doors will be refinished and wood ceilings, now sprayed with glittering acoustics will once again show through.

"Mostly we're in the process of stripping it right down to the original finish," Kay said. "It's taken us longer to get the (linoleum tiled) floor up than anything else. This one room (the parlor) took us three weeks. We were scraping and scraping. I couldn't believe it."

Removing the front porch enclosure and non-original heating systems has kept the couple busy since they bought the house a year ago.

"Over the years they put in just about every type of heating you can think of," Kay commented. "We figure they originally had potbellied stoves and a wood burning stove in the kitchen." This is just what will be re-installed, she added.

According to Farrell Christopherson of Wendell, who was born in this house his parents built, the bricks for the three bedroom, full basement house were made by his father Oscar. Each wall is constructed with double brick, which is still in excellent condition.

"My father bought an old brick-making machine and made them off the old Kerns Ditch (about 100 yards from the house)," Christopherson recalled.

The Christopherson family, including Farrell and his 11 brothers and sisters, moved to Wendell in 1918 and the house was sold to John Penfold who raised his three children in the solid brick house.

Tearing up the old tiles is a slow, tedious job

Ron Hurst said he and his wife plan to move into their dream house in about three months. Although they work late every night, progress seems slow, he added.

After each full day in his tire-retrading facility in Wendell, working over-racing tires in hot moisting machines, the San Diego native heads for Hagerman to scrape floors and trim oak and fruit trees on the surrounding four acres.

Drinking fresh spring water and watching apples grow help make the work more pleasant, but not much easier. Ron said, scraping up the old floor tiles.

"They're coming up, but they're not coming up easy enough, I'll tell you that," he said.

Catastrophe coverage

Lincoln County board gets line on insurance

By JAENE BUCKWAY
Times-News correspondent

SHOSHONE—Catastrophe insurance is being offered through the Idaho Association of Counties, Lincoln County Commissioners learned Monday.

Commissioner Everett Ward reported on a meeting with Jerome County elected officials concerning the insurance and possible benefits to Lincoln County. Ward told the commission a complete profile of catastrophe insurance for the county will be available by October.

In other business, the commission heard reports from Scott Irwin and Don Loveland of the State Tax Commission on tax appraisals for feedlots and utilities in Lincoln County.

According to Lincoln County Assessor Imogene Hetsley, county and state tax officials have agreed to continue appraising feedlots in Lincoln County based on cost of operation minus property depreciation.

Feedlot operators had requested their appraisal be done according to a profit-to-loss ratio, but since no commercial feedlot operations exist in Lincoln County, only small family operations, the tax commission has refused this request.

In a letter to the county commissioners, The Northside Snowbirds requested funds from the county's snowmobile licensing fee. Part of these license fees are returned to the snowmobilers for use in improving trails, campground areas and rest sites.

The county commissioners tentatively approved the request, but an exact percentage of the fees to be returned to the snowmobile group has not been finalized.

Wendell student recognized

WENDELL—A Wendell seventh-grade student has received national recognition for an essay she wrote on smoking.

Lucy Kearsley, daughter of Kent and Paulette Kearsley, won a certificate of award in the U.S. Public Health Service's Anti-smoking Poster and Essay Contest. Judge Fernandes of the Office on Smoking and Health announced this week.

The 200 winning posters and essays, selected from over 43,000 entries, will be displayed in the main building of the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services in downtown Washington, D.C. throughout the month of June, Fernandes said.

Kearsley's winning two-page essay discussed the effect peer pressure has in prompting many people to start smoking.

Speakers' bureau operating

JEROME—In an effort to establish an education service, St. Benedict's Hospital is operating a Speakers' Bureau and offering group hospital tours.

The free-of-charge Speakers' Bureau and tours are being offered to schools, civic and social clubs and other community groups.

Topics available from the bureau include: hospital management and public relations, medical records, nursing, X-ray, respiratory therapy, physical therapy, laboratory, pharmacy, dietetics, surgery and health industry careers.

For information on these programs, contact St. Benedict's public relations department at 324-4301, ext. 250.

Benefit bike ride Saturday

HAGERMAN—A Bike-a-thon will be held in Hagerman on Saturday.

Sponsored by the Hagerman Quick Response Unit, proceeds will benefit the St. Judes Children's Research Hospital.

"The hospital is mostly for research on cancer, leukemia, that type of thing," Q.R.U. President Mike Johnson said.

Registration will be at 9 a.m. at the City Park, and the Bike-a-thon will start at 10 a.m.

First prize for the most money collected will be a BMX-Bike, donated by Valley Schwinn Cyclery in Twin Falls and Phil's Market in Hagerman. Second prize is a $25 savings bond. Those collecting $75 worth of pledges from the 20-mile-ride will receive backpacks from St. Judes. A tee-shirt will be given for each $25 collection.

New Teapot Dome operator

MIDWEST, Wyo. (UPI) — The government has decided to replace the operator the Navy's Teapot Dome petroleum reserve, citing dissatisfaction with management and other practices.

Lawrence-Allison & Associates West Inc. will replace Fenix & Scisson Inc. of Tulsa, Okla., whose five-year contract expires in October, The Casper Star-Tribune reported Tuesday.

A recent evaluation found the two companies are "essentially equal," with Lawrence-Allison somewhat stronger in managerial experience and Fenix & Scisson stronger in "heads-on" experience, said Ray Romatowski, acting undersecretary of energy, who made the decision to change operators.

However, Fenix & Scisson had a "generally weak" performance in certain areas, such as planning and well-testing, and had problems in other areas as well, he said.

For instance, it had "no adequate procurement management system, or a satisfactory property management system after over four years of operation," he said.

Also, there was a "clear indication of a lack of adherence to prescribed federal procurement policies, procedures and practices," reflecting a lack of responsiveness to federal requests, Romatowski said.

The firm "repeatedly" indicated its willingness to respond, but had not been able to solve the problems, he said. Most were solved only when Department of Energy staff members identified them, recommended corrective measures and then insisted that they be placed in effect, he said.

Fenix & Scisson local manager George Beck said he did not "necessarily agree" with Romatowski's statements. He declined further comment.

Teapot Dome, one of three naval petroleum reserves, produces 3,400 barrels per day from no fewer than five separate formations and contains an estimated 26 million barrels of recoverable oil, said Navy Capt. Gordon Gilmore, national director of naval petroleum and oil shale reserves.

It was the center of a scandal in the Warren Harding administration. Harding's interior secretary, Albert Fall, was sent to prison for accepting bribes to allow oilman Henry Sinclair to drill in the reserve.

He alleges Farm Equipment Exchange of Jerome owes him $1,250.39 for goods and services purchased on an open account. London also seeks a lawyer's fee of $500 and costs of the suit.

COURT — Seeley, Jones and Fuller,

Jerome attorneys, filed suit June 2 in 5th District Magistrate Court against Donald Fairbanks of Jerome. The law firm alleges Fairbanks owes it $177.25 plus interest, for services rendered on an oral contract. They are asking for a lawyer's fee of $150 and court costs.

COURT — Farmers' Insurance Company of Pocatello filed suit June 3 in 5th District Magistrate Court against Corrine Thelma Harrel of Jerome. The company representatives allege Harrel operated her vehicle in a negligent and careless manner, colliding with a vehicle insured by their company. They claim she owes them $1,429.26 for personal injuries and property damages their client received in the accident. Also sought are costs of the suit and a lawyer's fee of $700.

Mechanic halts rolling truck, saves scurrying pedestrians

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — A quick-thinking, quick-footed mechanic who leaped into the cab of a runaway truck and slammed on its brakes has been credited with saving the lives of as many as 20 scurrying pedestrians in downtown San Francisco.

"I figure he probably saved 20 lives," said police officer Karl Karlsson, who was on the scene. "That truck was headed right for a crowd of people at California and Montgomery streets when he stopped it."

Karlsson said he would nominate Mario Evola for the police department's hero award. The two-ton delivery truck was parked on the South side of California Street near Kearny at 8:45 a.m. Monday when it mysteriously began rolling away from the curb and down a hill.

Carol Schmidt had stopped at a flower stand at the corner and saw the whole thing. "I heard men shouting and whistling and I thought maybe the men wanted the truck driver to come back because he'd forgotten something," she said.

"Then I realized there was no one at the wheel."

The truck rolled through an intersection and began to pick up speed. The light was green and that was sheer luck," Miss Schmidt said.

The truck veered over to the wrong side of the street and hit two parked cars and a truck and slammed into a van going up California Street. But nothing seemed able to stop runaway and it continued to roll until it ran past Evola, who had parked his tow truck on the street to help a customer whose car wouldn't start.

"At first I thought the truck driver had missed a turn or something," he said. "Then I thought, 'Oh my God, there's nobody in that truck.'"

When Evola dashed to the truck and leaped into the cab it was moving at 15 mph toward a group of pedestrians on the sidewalk waiting for a signal at Montgomery Street and California.

"I had to run like hell to get it," Evola said. "I'm a mechanic. I know about trucks and I knew if I could get in it I could stop it."

The crowd that had gathered cheered Evola when he got over the cab, but he "just faded into the crowd," according to Miss Schmidt.

"I just did what I thought I should do," Evola said later. "If I think of it now, I was crazy to do it. If you stop at the time, you don't do something like that."

The unidentified driver of the runaway truck, which belonged to Casey Moving Co. of San Francisco, was cited for failing to curb the truck's wheels, police said.

Three people in the damaged van were hurt, but their injuries were reported as minor.

SANTA CRUZ, Calif. (UPI) —

Snuffing speculation that he would plead insanity, David Carpenter told a Municipal Court judge he was innocent of two murders attributed to the notorious "Trailside killer" who has terrorized Northern California hiking trails.

Carpenter, an ex-convict with a severe stutter, nodded in agreement Monday when defense lawyers told Judge William Kelsey their client was pleading innocent.

The charges involved the March 29 slaying of Ellen Hansen, 20, a University of California-Davis student, and the May 2 killing of Heather Seages, 20, who was a student at a Hayward trade school where Carpenter was an instructor. They were killed in the mountains east of Santa Cruz.

"multiple-murders" and the killer laid in wait for his victims. A conviction under special circumstances could lead to a sentence of death in San Quentin prison's gas chamber.

Carpenter, who served sentences in state and federal prisons on sex and robbery convictions, nodded in agreement when his lawyers denied the "special circumstances."

Auctioned dish brings $150,000

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A 12th Century Chinese dish measuring 5 1/2 inches in diameter sold for $150,000 at Sotheby's auction house Monday night.

The Song Dynasty dish, bought by a local art dealer whose name was not disclosed, had an imperial poem engraved on its gray crackle base.

A Tang Dynasty horse, almost 30 inches high, sold for $72,500 to a New York City art dealer, and a rare 14th Century-Celadon-Neping, or vase, measuring 10 1/2 inches high, sold for $55,000 to a Singapore collector who entered his bid over the telephone.

There were other long-distance bidders from London, Geneva, Munich, Hong Kong and Toronto.

Shoshone board approves budget

SHOSHONE — The Shoshone School Board approved a budget and hired a sixth grade teacher Monday.

Superintendent Ken Crothers said the general fund for the 1981-82 school year will be $720,458, up from $688,671 for the school year just ended. The board last month approved a new salary schedule for teachers with increases averaging between 7 and 8 percent.

Trustees hired Lee Garr, a sixth grade teacher from Murtaugh to fill its lone teaching vacancy.

The board also certified results of the May 19 school election. District voters approved an override levy by a vote of 209-155.

Budget wins OK of Camas board

FAIRFIELD — The Camas County School Board approved its 1981-82 budget Monday in an otherwise brief trustees meeting.

Superintendent Harold Stroud said the general fund will be $494,002, a 5.6 percent increase over the past school year's budget of $467,950. Teachers received a salary increase averaging 6.18 percent.

The Camas County board also canvassed votes and certified an override levy approved in the May 19 election. The override passed 90-13. Two incumbent trustees were unopposed.

Film producers, geologist's kin reach accord

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — An "amicable agreement" has been reached between producers of the film "St. Helens" and the family of a geologist killed in the volcano's cataclysmic May 18, 1980, eruption.

U.S. Geological Survey scientist David Johnston died while monitoring the mountain's changes, but the movie character's name will be David Jackson, said Michael Murphy, executive producer of the film, to premiere in Portland June 19.

Besides the Portland showing — the proceeds of which will be donated to the Oregon Museum of Science & Industry — the movie will be shown June 20 in Longview, Wash., as a benefit for survivors and families of those killed in the disaster.

The film is scheduled to be released to other theaters around the country later in the summer, Murphy said.

The film will star Art Carney in the role of Spirit Lake Lodge owner Harry Truman, who gained national fame for his refusal to leave his home despite warnings of an impending eruption. Johnston's parents, who live in Oak

Lawn, Ill., in November publicly expressed concern about the movie's portrayal of their son, claiming the script distorted events and portrayed a relationship between Johnston and Truman that did not actually exist. The producer also said the film "reveals new findings about the eruption and showcases never-before-seen footage of the cataclysm."

Actor released from hospital after month of diagnosis

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Henry Fonda, who spent a month in a hospital for diagnostic evaluation of a heart condition, has been sent home in satisfactory condition.

Fonda underwent exploratory heart surgery May 15 as part of the diagnostic evaluation. Fonda, who was honored at the last Academy Awards with a special Oscar, for "brilliant accomplishments, and enduring contributions to the art of the motion picture," has had several serious illnesses in recent years. He had a pacemaker implanted in 1974 and in 1976 underwent surgery for removal of a benign tumor from under his right lung. In 1979 he had another operation to relieve discomfort in an arthritic hip injured in a fall. In April he spent two days in a San Diego hospital for a heart catheterization, a diagnostic procedure used to determine if there is a blockage in the vessels supplying blood to the heart.

Governor serves stint as juror

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI) — Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr., declaring he could be "fair and impartial," was picked Monday as a juror in a criminal trial of a man charged with slaying two lives on his brother-in-law's car.

Brown, who once fought having to serve on jury duty, told reporters he planned to do state work in a small office specially provided for him in the courthouse while waiting for a case.

But a few minutes later, he was in the courtroom of Municipal Court Judge John Stroud for the case of Stamenko Rodoljic, 45, who is accused of making annoying phone calls and $84 worth of vandalism.

After several potential jurors were excused and others were removed, Brown was seated on the 12-member panel that included four teachers, an auctioneer, a carpenter and a psychology graduate student.

"You know the law, perhaps better than I do. Can you assure me you will follow the law as I instruct you?" Stroud asked Brown, who said he could.

"Is this case going to interfere with any things you have to do?" Brown was asked by defense lawyer Mark Rose. "It may take two or three days."

"No, I don't think so," replied the governor.

Brown, who has taken a tough-on-crime stance in recent months, told prosecution and defense lawyers that he could render a "fair and impartial verdict."

Rodoljic, who emigrated from Yugoslavia more than 10 years ago, stared at the floor while prospective jurors were being questioned. He is a balding man with sideburns to the bottom of his ears. He speaks little English, his lawyer said.

Asked how he felt about having the governor on his jury, Rodoljic said in halting English: "I no care."

He is in the process of a divorce and is charged with malicious mischief for allegedly slaying his brother-in-law's tires in January and making obscene or threatening phone calls.

Other potential jurors were asked if they would be influenced unduly by the governor's views when they deliberated.

"I've disagreed with him before," said Anna Holmes, a

Daring Coast Guardsmen rescue pair trapped in boat

NEWPORT, Ore. (UPI) — Two divers refused the mission as too dangerous, but a pair of "very brave" Coast Guardsmen fought gale winds and 12-foot seas to rescue two fishermen trapped for nearly 12 hours in the engine room of an overturned fishing boat.

Brothers Todd and Terry Mason of Newport survived by staying in an air pocket of the capsized Odyssey. Neither required hospitalization after their rescue Monday.

Two private boats fought stormy seas all day Monday, towing the stricken 65-foot fishing vessel to shore in the hope that its missing skipper, Gary Cutting of Newport, would still be alive in an air pocket in the boat's bow section.

But after the boat arrived at Yaquina Bay dock late Monday, Coast Guard divers searched its underwater holds and found no sign of Cutting, who was presumed to have drowned in the capsizing. He was last seen trying to abandon ship when it capsized around 3 p.m. PDT Sunday, seven miles off Alsea Bay at Waldport.

"The case is closed pending further developments," a Coast Guard official said Tuesday.

Machinist-Mate-2nd Class Richard White — just two days shy of ending his Coast Guard hitch — spearheaded the successful rescue of the Mason brothers at 3:45 a.m. Monday when he volunteered to be lowered from a helicopter onto the bobbing boat's slippery hull.

At the time, ocean swells were 8 to 10 feet high in gale-force winds. White slipped off the hull once, but got back on and knocked on the hull.

Helicopter pilot Lt. (jg.) Al Seidel said he could tell White had heard something inside, even though the storm's roar made it impossible to hear the rescuer.

"His face lit up," he said. "He was gesturing and pointing to the hull."

White admitted later that he was so scared he almost threw up.

Cmdr. Patrick Wendt called the actions of Coast Guard divers Bill Shires and Pat Miller of the Coos Bay station "extraordinary."

"The first divers on the scene assessed the weather and the sea conditions as too hazardous and declined to attempt to dive," Wendt said.

Shires and Miller, however, "went into a strange vessel, in pitch darkness, under gale conditions," he said. "They weren't able to test the equipment they were using. There wasn't time. It was a very brave act."

After knocking was heard on the hull, Shires made two searches inside the pitch-dark vessel before finding the two fishermen in the engine room, where an air bubble had formed.

The third time, he took two small masks and air bottles to the crewmen and strung up a line with lights on it every 10 feet.

"I gave them a crash course in diving," Shires said. "I told them they were going to be able to get out and that they would get out alive."

The biggest problem, Shires said, was getting through the floating gear inside the overturned boat. He said the door to the engine room was very hard to open.

Harassment suit seeks $3 million

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Rosemary Lovejoy wants Southern Pacific Railroad to pay her $3 million in punitive damages because of "extreme mental anguish" resulting from sexual harassment by a male supervisor.

Feminist attorney Gloria Allred filed a Superior Court petition Monday on behalf of Ms. Lovejoy, who was hired by the railroad in 1978 as a police officer.

In addition to the railroad, the suit named Ms. — Lovejoy's supervisor, Robert Trejo, as a defendant, saying Trejo sexually harassed and molested her.

Car rolls over edge of bluff

SEATTLE (UPI) — The car began rolling toward a bluff, slid about 100 yards down the steep hillside and wound up lying upside down against a tree.

But the 83-year-old driver suffered only minor injuries.

The driver, Ruth Riches, was taken to Harborview Medical Center where she was reported in satisfactory condition with face cuts and back pain.

Witnesses said she desperately tried to start her car as it began rolling down West Parkmont Place towards the bluff.

Dan Edwards, 18, chased the vehicle in a futile attempt to stop it. Mrs. Riches was "grinding on the starter" while coasting down the hill, Edwards said.

"I thought if I could reach her I could put it in park something," he said. "But it was too fast."

After the car rolled down the bluff, Edwards raced down and helped stop Mrs. Riches' bleeding from a head cut until firemen arrived. The firemen had to force open the car's door to remove the woman. They placed her on a stretcher and carried her down the rest of the bluff to an aid car that rushed her to the hospital.

Police did not give any indication why the woman was unable to stop her car using its brakes.

District 411 approves $8.37 million budget

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Trustees of Twin Falls School District 411 Tuesday night adopted an $8.37 million budget for 1981-82, up about 8 percent over the current year's budget.

The adoption followed a public hearing held during the regular June board meeting and attended by about 20 people. There were no comments offered by the public following an item-by-item review by school administrators.

The new budget compares to $7.68 million for the total general fund budget last year.

Superintendent James Sawin said the majority of the budget is salaries. The board has agreed to an 8 percent increase in teacher salaries for the coming year, which is reflected in the total budget increase figure.

"We are able to offer this budget for the coming year without the necessity of an override levy," Sawin told the board. "This means using our entire carry-over fund this year, and of course we cannot continue to do this in the coming years."

The budget includes $750,000 in carry-over revenue compared to $450,000 budgeted last year. Sawin said the policy of the district and the recommendation of auditors has been to retain part of the carry-over revenue each year for future lean years. By using it all for the coming year, he said, his staff is aware of the position it places the district in for future budgeting.

Board member Eugene Champlin said, "We simply cannot continue to operate with the reduced revenue and tight money without an override or some other new source of revenue in the coming years. We will have to make some change."

Board Chairman Byron Snyder complimented the staff, which has worked since February on the 1981-82 fiscal year budget, saying they have done an excellent job of providing for quality education at a minimum cost.

The school district, which Sawin said is the third largest employer in Magic Valley, anticipates $1.3 million in maintenance and operation taxes, up from $1.2 million a year ago. Other revenue will include $25,000 from tort taxes for liability insurance; tuition of about $13,000; investment earnings, $100,000, or double the amount earned last year; and county and state allowances through the educational support program, $5.30 million, up from $5.10 million last year.

Kimberly district sets teacher's pay

By SUSAN GALLAGHER
Times-News writer

KIMBERLY — The Kimberly School Board Tuesday adhered to its earlier faculty pay offer and said teachers have until June 22 to accept it, and thus assure 1981-82 employment.

The board said teachers will be offered a base salary of $11,100, a monthly fringe benefit pool of $75 and a salary schedule offering incremental raises annually. Kimberly teachers, who do not enter formal salary negotiations, had proposed an $11,300 base and $81 fringe pool.

Employment of replacement teachers will be considered if existing faculty meet the offer or return the contracts by 3 p.m. June 22, the board said.

The district's offer is the only affordable alternative, outgoing School Supt. Vernon Exner said at Tuesday's meeting.

"There's no question in my mind that the board has given as much as you can possibly give," Exner said.

In other business Tuesday, the board approved a 1981-82 General Fund budget of $1.1 million, representing an increase of about $95,000 above the current year's General Fund. A public hearing on the budget drew no public comment.

For Exner the budget approval was his last in 40 years as an educator. Exner will retire from the Kimberly School District this week. His replacement is Principal George Powell of Kimberly Elementary School.

In other business Tuesday, Exner advised the board school lunch prices could rise to about 80 cents next year to offset the loss of federal subsidies.

The board said its compensation agreement with teachers engaging in further education does not require the district meet a teacher's child-care expenses incurred while a teacher attends class. The board rejected such a reimbursement request by a teacher.

The board heard a report by architect Jim Smallwood, who said he is satisfied with the elementary school expansion project, and is confident the district's new industrial arts facility is nearing completion.

Ken Ling and Brack Hale show Governor John Evans around the empty Kellwood plant which is up for sale.

County commissioners Evans to help Kellwood tenant search to decide land issue

TWIN FALLS — A Filer man will find out next week if he can sell half of his land for residential use and sell the rest to the city of Filer.

The Board of County Commissioners will decide next week if Rick Routt can parcel out 40 acres of his land after he sells the other 40 acres to the city of Filer for installation of improvements to the city's sewer system.

The commission Tuesday heard arguments for and against the request filed by Routt. Another public hearing on the matter was set for 11 a.m. June 16 in the commissioners' office.

Routt has told the city of Filer that if the remaining 40 acres of his land, now zoned for agriculture use, cannot be rezoned, then he would not be able to sell the land to the city.

Filer is under a federal Environmental Protection Agency mandate to improve its sewer system, and hopes to build a fourth sewage treatment lagoon on the site.

The commission also scheduled another public hearing for June 16 to make a decision on a proposed amendment to the county's comprehensive land use plan.

The amendment would set up procedures for dividing parcels of land considered to be non-productive for agricultural use below the current 20-acre limitation.

Commissioners also gave their formal approval to revise the city of Twin Falls' area of impact by moving the city's boundaries one-quarter mile to the section lines.

The move, which the city council is expected to formally approve July 6, was meant to avoid property owners in the area of impact being under both city and county zoning authorities.

Last month, the county zoning board denied Routt's request to rezone half of his 80 acres, 1/4 miles north of Filer.

Charles Howard, consulting engineer from Edwards, Howard and Martens in Twin Falls, told the commission that waste water from the proposed sewage lagoon, which will have a high nitrogen content, could be sprinkled onto the parcels of land for irrigation use.

A pump will be installed at the north end of the re-zoned area to catch any runoff water and pump it back to the land, he said.

But Robert Carlson, whose mother, Isabel, owns land adjacent to the Routt property, didn't buy the idea. "I've seen too many of these cotton-picking things," he said. "They sell five acres and nobody farms it. It goes to weeds."

Carlson said he was concerned that waste water still might run off into a nearby creek, and trash and weeds from the re-zoned land would blow onto his mother's property.

TWIN FALLS — Governor John Evans toured the vacant Kellwood Co. hosiery plant Tuesday, promising to help find a tenant for it.

But he was pessimistic about the chance Twin Falls will see a new industry occupy the plant in the near future.

The Kellwood Co. was one of the largest employers in Twin Falls before closing last summer. The plant south of Twin Falls, which sits on 20 acres, is on the market for $3.1 million.

"There's got to be somebody out there," the governor said. However, high interest rates and a flat economy have discouraged most businesses' expansion plans, he said.

Hewlett Packard, which has a plant in the Boise area, is interested in expansion, Evans said, but not until "the economy brightens." He said he will talk to company officials about the Twin Falls facility.

Evans also said the state's Division of Economic and Community Affairs will lend assistance. The "normal procedure" large companies follow when thinking of locating a facility in Idaho is to contact state officials through the division, he said. The state then steers them to communities with the desired facilities and environment.

Unfortunately, Evans said, the division was the victim of budget-cutting during the last session of the Legislature and is scheduled to lose half its personnel on July 1.

"It's an unfortunate circumstance because it is critical we get this type of assistance," Evans said.

The afternoon tour of the Kellwood facility for community business and political leaders was arranged by Brack Hale, the Boise real estate agent who is handling the sale of the building. Between that and a morning tour for real estate brokers who might be able to assist in selling the building, about 70 people saw the facility Tuesday.

The governor was invited to attend by the Twin Falls Chamber of Commerce. Chamber Manager Mike Peterson said the governor would be a good salesman because he meets people from throughout the country.

The major part of the effort to market the facility begins next week when Hale will travel to the "Silicon Valley" south of San Francisco, where most of the country's major electronics firms are located. "That's our market," Hale said.

Buhl Council hears July 4 celebration plans

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES

BUHL — The 75th anniversary celebration for Buhl is taking shape for the Fourth of July holiday weekend.

Jim Barker, Buhl Jaycee celebration chairman, told the Buhl City Council Monday night the program will generally follow Sagebrush Days activities of past years, with special emphasis on the anniversary.

On July 3, he said, a pancake breakfast — will open the day's festivities. There will be downtown street activities including a band concert and jailing of clean shaven city councilmen and other town officials, he said.

A beer-garden program is planned the night of July 3. The rodeo will be held both nights with a "wild-trot" scramble in the park for children. Also on July 3 will be the Chamber of Commerce fish fry.

The annual parade will be held at 10 a.m. July 4 with the fireworks display and another rodeo event also planned, Barker said. In addition, to Jaycee sponsored events there will be baseball and softball games.

There will be no carnival this year, he said, but some cotton candy and other sales booths will be set up in the downtown area for a festive atmosphere.

In other business Monday night, the Buhl officials heard a complaint from a dog owner who was charged $24 for a three-hour impoundment of his dog, Alfred Baxter said he has refused to pay the fine because it is outrageous and reminded council members he is being taken to court by the city in an effort to collect it.

Baxter said he would pay the fine, but it was his first offense and he believed someone picked up his dog from his Melon Valley home and took it to Buhl. Councilman Terry Lechner said the city has to pay $30 to the canine officer for picking up the dog and the impoundment fee is only $3.

Councilman Dale Thorsberry reminded Baxter he could pay the fine or he could wait for the court decision, saying the court might not rule in favor of the city.

Baxter said he signed a promissory note to pay the fine in order to get his dog released from the pound.

An ordinance, aimed at getting motorists now ignoring parking meter violations in Buhl to pay their fines, was placed on first reading. The ordinance would change the violation from a criminal matter to a civil one and could be handled by the city attorney rather than a special prosecutor.

Contract signed in Wendell

WENDELL — The Wendell School Board signed a 1981-82 contract with teachers Monday evening.

"Both parties were very pleased with the negotiations we had this year," said Superintendent Glen Gilbertson of the new contract.

"We do not play the negotiating game. It was simple, professional and rapid last year."

The board granted a base increase of $500, raising a beginning teacher's pay from $10,300 to $10,800. Also, steps were added to the schedule for faster advancement based on teachers' educational background.

For example, a teacher will now receive financial reward for each nine hours of college work instead of the previous 15 hours. "This gives teachers more incentive to get back to school, and to improve their skills," Gilbertson explained.

In other school board business, a budget with a 10.6 percent overall increase was approved.

"Salaries always dominate a budget," Gilbertson said, explaining the increase. Costs for transportation, textbooks and supplies.

Donna Henry, a Gooding elementary teacher, was hired to teach 5th Grade in Wendell. Jackie Westendorf, a Wendell 5th grade teacher, will teach 1st elementary vocal music during the next school year.

Charge reduced to battery

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls County Prosecutor Michael Henderson Tuesday reduced the charge against Bobby Butler, 47, of Twin Falls to battery.

The amended charge is a misdemeanor. Butler's case will be remanded to 5th District Magistrate Court, Henderson said he believed a trial would be held in lower court.

Butler is accused of assaulting Jack Asher of Twin Falls. According to the charge, Butler allegedly struck Asher's face on July 13, 1980, after the victim arrested Butler's wife, Geraldine, for willful concealment.

Butler was arrested at a party at the Safeway Store, 1147 Flare Ave. E. Charges against Geraldine Butler were later dropped.

Man bound over for robbery

TWIN FALLS — A Boulder, Colo. man was ordered Tuesday to answer charges in 5th District Court that he robbed a local drug store earlier this year.

Chris Henry Wall, 26, was bound over to district court following a preliminary hearing in 5th District Magistrate Court.

Wall, held in the Twin Falls County Jail in lieu of $25,000 bond, is charged with robbing Professional Pharmacy, 666 Shoshone St., on Jan. 2.

A warrant for Wall's arrest was issued March 23. The defendant opted to fight extradition and was transported to Twin Falls last week after a governor's warrant was issued.

Kidnap suspect pleads guilty

JEROME — A 23-year-old Colorado man pleaded guilty Tuesday to kidnapping and beating a Hazelton woman May 14.

Arturo Nava is charged with kidnapping and aggravated battery. The two charges could mean a maximum 35-year prison sentence, according to Jerome County Prosecutor Roger Burdick.

Nava allegedly took an unidentified woman from her home near Hazelton about 2 a.m., "brutally beating and raping her," Burdick said.

Rape charges were dropped late last month in exchange for Nava's guilty plea to kidnapping and battery, as requested by Nava through his public defender Dennis Adamson of Jerome.

Four victims of tire slashings

TWIN FALLS — Three Sherry Lane residents and a resident of Eleventh Avenue East reported tire slashings Monday morning, according to Twin Falls Police.

Victims were Ken Leonardson, 1958 Sherry Lane, John Houser, 1850 Sherry Lane, Pamela Cisco, 1930 Sherry Lane and Ted Popplewell, 1541 Eleventh Avenue E.

Damages stemming from the incidents ranged from $20 to $100.

HAILEY — Candidates for the Days of the Old West Queen Contest are now being accepted.

The contest is open to all girls ages 16 through 20. Deadline for entering is June 24. The Days of the Old West will be held in Hailey on July 3 and 4.

The winning queen will receive a saddle. To enter, call Lennie Uhrig, 788-2827 or Marge Jansen, 788-4018.

Team to release MVMH exam results today

TWIN FALLS — A team from the Joint Commission on Accreditation of Hospitals Tuesday finished its examination of Magic Valley Memorial Hospital.

Assistant Administrator Steve Fisher said a press conference will be held today at 1:30 p.m. to discuss the team's recommendations.

On Monday and Tuesday, four persons from the Chicago-based JCAH reviewed the hospital's policies and procedures. The team, composed of Harry Weir, a fellow in the American College of Hospital Administrators; Dr. James Phipps; Gladys Sheeran, R.N.; and Harold Gottlieb, administrative training, will make a written report on their findings to the JCAH board.

The board will make the final determination on whether the hospital will receive accreditation for one or two years or be denied accreditation.

A summation conference on the team's initial recommendations was held Tuesday with the hospital's staff. The public was not allowed at this conference.

The team will also visit Cassia Memorial Hospital this week for an accreditation inspection.

Nearly 1,300 youngsters start baseball campaigns

By MARV CLEMONS
Times-News sports editor

TWIN FALLS — It is time to pick your favorite.

Maybe it is butterfly's flares, the Orange Crushers, Carter's Peanuts, Sandy's Swimmers, the Gem State Bullpups or the Little Rascals.

Those six teams and nearly 100 others started the summer-long pennant-chase Tuesday as the Twin Falls Recreation Department started its youth sports season.

Nearly 1,300 boys and girls will be playing baseball and/or softball on organized teams daily at both Harmon Park and Frontier Field this summer. The teams started official games Tuesday after a practice period and league championships will be determined the first week in August.

There is a separate boys league for each grade, first through sixth, in the program. By law, girls can compete with the boys in the first three grades. The girls can also compete on softball teams. There is a softball league for each grade from four through seven with eighth and ninth graders combined into one league. All players must play at least one inning of each game and most teams will play a dozen games over the next two months.

"We have about 825 boys playing and some 450 girls," program director Dennis Boyer said Tuesday. "The numbers are down from last year since Filter is not bringing its kids over this year and the Migrant Council said it couldn't fund the teams it did last year."

Boyer has a staff of nearly 20 people to help out with umpiring, preparing of fields and running of the office at Harmon Park. Also involved are several volunteer coaches and various Twin Falls firms help sponsor the teams.

Tuesday was the day players got rid of the butterflies. The Little Rascals and the Gem State Really Bullpups battled in a fifth grade softball game typical of most season openers.

"Mom, I've got to go," said a freckled, four-foot-tall blonde. "The coach wants us."

A middle-aged man looking on from the third row of the bleachers added his knowledge as the Bullpups took fielding practice. "You should have had that one dummy."

As his girls stood on the seat in the dugout to avoid the muddy floor, the Bullpups coach provided the time-proven strategy. "Swing hard and when you hit the ball, run hard," he said. "Listen to your coach and when you run, run hard."

"I'm nervous," the girl informed her teammates. "I'm the first batter."

"Come on, you can do it," her teammates responded.

"Where do I go?" the brunette, bat in hand, asked as she walked in the general direction of home plate.

She made her way into the batter's box as another time-worn adage came from the coach. "Don't try to kill it, just swing level."

The Little Rascals batted their way into an early lead, but the Bullpups took advantage of some wild pitching in the second inning to go to a 3-1 lead.

"Way to go!" a happy father yelled from behind the fence as his daughter fielded the third out of an inning.

"Shut up, Dad," came the reply. "I've got to concentrate."

The Bullpups maintained their 10-8 lead through the five-inning game despite solid slugging from some bigger Little Rascals and the harmonious, game-long chant from the Little Rascals: "Hey batter, heeey baattttttteerrrr, SWING."

Will the Bullpups parlay their opening day victory into a pennant or will the Little Rascals rebound to gain the title?

Minico teammates top rodeo contenders list

By MIKE PRATER
Times-News writer

FILER — For the past two seasons, Rupert's Tauna Bradfield has won a high school all-around cowgirl title.

Although the Minico High School junior is leading in a quest for another, her best friend and teammate, Shelly Kendall, could put an end to that string when the Sixth District High School Rodeo opens the first of four shows tonight at the Twin Falls County Fairgrounds.

As a freshman, Bradfield was the top all-around cowgirl at the State High School Rodeo. Last season, she was the Sixth District winner, running away from the field with 394 points.

Following two preliminary rodeos

this spring, one at Rupert and the other in Twin Falls, Bradfield has 137 points. Kendall, also a junior, has earned 135.

Both have had a large impact on high school rodeo the past two seasons — locally and nationally.

Bradfield added a state barrel racing title to her list of awards last year and earned a berth in the National High School Finals where she placed high in the barrel racing. Kendall won a state pole bending title last season and also has national experience.

Although Kendall competes in five events, one more than Bradfield, the defending champion still ranks as a slight favorite, according to Sixth District rodeo secretary Jeanette Peterson.

"They're both placing in all their events, but Tauna is placing high where Shelly is down the list in a couple of events," Peterson said. "But I've seen rodeos before when a good hand couldn't do anything. Rodeos are very unpredictable and either could win."

Heading into the rodeo, Peterson is second in pole bending and goat tying, and fourth in barrel racing, cow cutting and breakaway roping. Kendall is fifth in breakaway roping and team roping, ninth in goat tying, third in pole bending and holds a first place in barrel racing.

Others contending for the all-around title are Monica Egguilior of Rupert, Cheryl Peters of Hansen and Bonnie Slimer of Rupert.

On the other hand, the boys race is a runaway.

Filer's Hobie Peterson, the defending state all-around champion, holds a commanding 44-point lead over defending district champion, Terry Laumb of Declo.

Peterson used the last two rodeos to set himself in good position for this one. He is first in calf roping and steer wrestling and second in team roping and cow cutting. Laumb is third in calf roping, fourth in bull riding and cow cutting and ninth in team roping.

"If Hobie places well, he should win the all-around," Jeanette Peterson said. "But 44 points is a lot. That much to make up in one rodeo. Terry is a good hand and I know he is capable of winning, but he needs help from Hobie."

A tough battle could develop for the reserve champion. Behind Laumb in the standings are Twin Falls' Tim VanOstran, with 78.5 points, Brad Hutchison of Raft River with 61 and first round leader Eric Kasel of Twin Falls.

Kasel held a one-point lead after the Twin Falls rodeo, but fell behind with a poor showing in the Rupert show.

Individually, Robert Timmons of Twin Falls and Darrin Brown of Rupert look strong in bull riding, according to Peterson. Troy Jucker of Buhl should also be a strong factor in rough stock. Kenny Tuma of Twin Falls and Ellen Tinkstrom of Filer lead the team roping. They are the only duo that has caught three of four attempts.

Twin Falls and Minico are locked in a two-way duel in the Class A team race. Minico picked up several points at Rupert to set the stage for this weekend. In the Class B race, Filer has jumped into a large lead.

The top four placers and the winners of each go-around will advance to state June 24-27 in Filer.

The rodeo, which is sponsored by the Filer Kiwanis Club, starts at 8 each night, following a queen presentation at 7:45. The stock will be provided by Stephens Brothers of Middleton and the announcer will be Lon Hatch.

Tickets are $3.50 for adults, $3 for children 12-18 years old, $2 for children 6-12, and children under six are free.

Four-night package tickets are $12 for adults, $8 for children 12-18 years old and $6 for children 6-12 years old.

NBA draft

Dallas, New Jersey reap top players

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Dallas Mavericks and the New Jersey Nets, two clubs thirsting for a taste of the good life in the NBA, came away with a slantage crop in Tuesday's college draft.

The Mavericks, an expansion team that lost 67 of 82 games in their maiden season, opened the 18th annual draft by selecting All-American forward Mark Aguirre of DePaul.

The Nets, looking to bury their recent past, move to a new city and arena this season accompanied by a new coach. And with three picks in the first round, the Nets scored handsomely, choosing a pair of Maryland frontliners, Buck Williams and Albert King, and forward-center Ray Tolbert of NCAA champion Indiana.

The Pistons, who lost the coin flip to Detroit for the rights to No. 1, chose guard Isaiah Thomas of Indiana as the No. 2 selection. The Nets followed with Williams as No. 3. Atlanta went with Al Wood of North Carolina as No. 4 and Seattle picked Danny Vranes of Utah as No. 5.

The draft held to form in the first round with the only possible surprise coming on the 17th pick, when Kansas City took Kevin Loder of Alabama State.

The Hawks, originally slated to pick sixth, traded for the Bulls' No. 4 spot late Monday night to ensure the acquisition of Wood.

Aguirre, who helped make DePaul one of nation's capitals of college basketball, has an exceptionally soft shot and the ability to go underneath. He averaged 23 points a game but his college career ended on a discordant note when DePaul was eliminated in its first game of the NCAA Tournament.

The selection of the 6-foot-7 All-American came after a curious change of heart by Dallas. The Mavericks initially leaned toward Thomas but quickly soured on the point guard, claiming his attitude was not right.

Ironically, Aguirre was considered the player with a suspect attitude.

"I have no idea how that got started," he said. "I did come up in discussions with Dallas but we came to terms about it. There was no way I thought I was a bad actor. I've always been a straight shooter."

Thomas, an extraordinarily gifted playmaker, led the Hoosiers to Big Ten titles in each of his two years. The 6-1 All-American said he is dumbfounded over the flap with Dallas.

Celtics take Ainge; hope he'll switch

BOSTON (UPI) — The Boston Celtics grabbed the backcourt help they needed in Charles Bradley of Wyoming and Tracy Jackson of Notre Dame, but the world champions may have landed the biggest plum of Tuesday's NBA draft with the selection of All-Everything Danny Ainge.

The Celtics, in another of General Manager Red Auerbach's celebrated drafting coups, grabbed the brilliant Brigham Young guard, a consensus All-American, with the eighth pick in the second round. Ainge probably would have gone in the first three choices had it not been for his professional baseball career with the Toronto Blue Jays.

Ainge, a career 20.9 scorer at BYU, has repeatedly said he prefers the life of baseball to that of basketball. But the Celtics are hopeful they can persuade the 6-foot-5 guard to change sports.

"We had a lot of offers for that pick (Ainge's) and we didn't turn them down to play games," said Auerbach, who spoke to Ainge before the draft.

Bradley and Jackson are also 6-foot-5 guards who can play forward and will help the Celtics in the backcourt. But the prospect of Ainge in the Boston lineup was more enticing.

Ainge is in the first of a three-year, $500,000 contract with Toronto, a pact which prohibits him from playing baseball. But he is battling in the 1960s, and the Celtics gambled he may have a change of heart.

"I hope he hits 160 a game for us," cracked Celtics Coach Bill Fitch. "Ainge would make an excellent Celtic. A lot of people second-guessed Red when he took (Larry) Bird a year early (White Bird was still at Indiana State)."

Ainge, talking from Chicago where the Blue Jays were playing the White Sox, reiterated his desire to stay in baseball. But he did say if he were to play basketball, the Celtics would be an ideal team.

"There's no question in my mind, and there will be, that major league baseball, if everything is equal, is a better game than basketball," he said.

"I think a fact that a team like the Boston Celtics might have an effect," he added. "I mean, if I was drafted by some other team there would be absolutely zero chance of ever going to play basketball. I would have no desire to play."

Ainge emerged as one of the college game's top performers in the NCAA playoffs. Against UCLA in the East Regionals, he poured in 37 points and personally outscored the Bruins at halftime. And his magnificent solo effort resulting in the winning basket in the final seconds of BYU's 52-51 victory over Notre Dame ranks as one of the great clutch plays.

Davis to stay at CSI

TWIN FALLS — College of Southern Idaho rodeo coach Shawn Davis has signed a one-year contract with the school.

Davis made it known earlier that he was seeking employment elsewhere, but after coming to terms with school officials, made a commitment to stay in Twin Falls.

"Basically, they agreed to the same things as before and added a few things to take care of some problems," said Davis, who refused to say what the problems were. "The support of the community had the most to do with my decision. They really feel strong about the program. My family also had a lot to do with the decision. They really like it here."

Davis was disgruntled with school officials after they dropped the rodeo program, along with three others at the school, earlier because of financial reasons. All the programs and coaches were later reinstated. Davis admitted he didn't want to fight for his job and the program each summer.

"But everything worked out for the good," he said. "I found out I had a lot of people willing to give me employment that I wouldn't have known about if this thing hadn't come out. But right now, I feel good about everything. I can finally settle down and concentrate on my job."

Davis and the CSI rodeo will compete at the National Finals Collegiate Rodeo in Bozeman, Mont., next week. Davis is the head of the rodeo and left for Bozeman Tuesday. The team will leave Saturday.

Former Wimbledon champion Chris Evert Lloyd said Tuesday "it would take a broken leg" to keep her out of this month's Wimbledon following her withdrawal from the Surrey grass court tournament with a knee injury.

Lloyd was ordered to rest the damaged tendons in her right knee for four or five days, by British Davis-Cup physician John Mathews has even forbidden her to climb the stairs of her Wimbledon home.

The American star, 26, said "the only way I miss Wimbledon is if I break a leg when I start practicing again."

Lloyd damaged the knee during the French Open championships in Paris last week and needed ice treatment before she lost her semifinal match against the Soviet Mandzhukova who went on to win the title.

Evert Lloyd won the Wimbledon title in 1974 and 1976 and was losing finalist in 1973, 1976, 1979 and 1980.

Billie Jean King bade a sad farewell to tennis in Britain Tuesday when she was eliminated in the second round of a pre-Wimbledon tournament before just 280 spectators.

King, who won 20 Wimbledon titles but this year will not be playing at the Wimbledon championships for the first time in two decades, was ignominiously beaten 6-3, 6-2 by fellow-American Barbara Hallquist.

"It is a pretty good chance that this was my last British tournament," 37-year-old King said. "I can't imagine playing here again."

Jon Ross, a three-year letterman and co-captain of Navy's football squad for next season, resigned from the U.S. Naval Academy Tuesday because he was found guilty of cheating on an examination.

Ross, 21, a native of Phoenix, Ariz., is expected to be immediately ordered to two years active duty as a Navy enlistment man, but said he hopes to apply for readmission to the academy when his tour is completed.

Ross was found guilty of violating the academy's honor code by having handwritten notes in the text of a book being used in a final examination in one of his courses this past semester.

Veteran guard Mike Gale was traded to the Golden State Warriors from the Portland Trailblazers Tuesday in exchange for two future draft picks.

A Warrior spokesman said the 6-4, 190-pound guard was acquired in exchange for a second-round draft pick in 1982 and a second-round pick in 1985.

If Golden State should acquire a new second round choice in 1982 or 1984, Portland would have the option of using one of those choices in place of one of the 1982 or 1985 selections.

Iron man Elvin Hayes came home to Houston Tuesday, the city where he started his NBA career 13 years ago and said he did not want to be an aging dodo to draw defenders from around Moses Malone.

"I came here to play basketball," said Hayes, who in 13 NBA seasons has only missed seven of 1,066 games — two because of his grandmother's death.

"I expect to be in the top 10 in blocked shots. I expect to be in the top 10 in rebounds, and I expect to be up there in scoring. I'm not here as a decoy."

Hayes, whom the Rockets acquired from the Washington Bullets Monday in exchange for second-round draft choices this year and next, said he did not mind if he was not a starter for Houston.

However, conversations with team officials indicated Hayes will start in place of Billy Paultz.

Richard Todd, former Alabama star quarterback says if the New York Jets don't make him an offer he can refuse he'll play out his option this fall.

"If the front office and I can't agree on a new contract, I may go ahead and play out my option and see what happens," Todd said.

"Even if that happens, that doesn't necessarily mean I'm unhappy with the Jets or the Jets are unhappy with me. It just means I might like to test my luck on the free agent market, because a lot of things are happening."

Todd is entering his sixth year in the pros. The 27-year-old Mobile native said quarterbacking a losing team for five years has taken its toll.

"I hate it. I don't know of a worse feeling in athletics," Todd said Monday. "I play with broken bones and I can even give a good account of myself. But it's hard to play week after week, year after year and wind up losing."

Bob Tway of Oklahoma state, Don Blake of Utah State and Joey Sindelar of Ohio State are repeat-ers to the eight-member Collegiate Golf All America team honored Tuesday night.

Others of the elite squad sitting on the dias at the All American Collegiate Foundation Dinner included Ray Barr, Houston; Keith Clearwater, Brigham Young; Ron Comans, Southern California; Jodie Mudd, Georgia-Southern; and Joe Rassel, Oral Roberts. The team is selected by the Golf Coaches Association of America.

Holmes prediction: Early end for Spinks

DETROIT (UPI) — World Boxing Council heavyweight champion Larry Holmes walked out on a few taunting pro-Leon Spinks fans at the end of his last heavy workout Tuesday, declared himself "sharp" and again predicted an early end for his challenger in Friday's championship fight.

"Did he finish his workout?" Spinks asked of Holmes' workout when he too, had finished. Informed the champion had, he replied, "I would have walked out too."

Tell Larry Holmes he's got my blessings and I wish him the best of luck," Spinks said at the end of his informal press conference. "And I'm coming for him."

"I want his gusto," Spinks said, "and that's the best."

Spinks, hunched in during his workout at Joe Louis Arena by a large but orderly crowd shadow boxed, hit the heavy and speed bags and jumped rope for close to an hour.

He worked out with Vonzell Johnson, but for the first time did not spar with the light heavyweight whose speed and style are close to Holmes'. Spinks will hold another workout Wednesday.

"This was my last day of working," Holmes said after going two rounds with Jerry Williams, a heavyweight who will fight on the undercard. "Eddie (trainer Futch) said I didn't need to go only two rounds."

"Eddie and my brother got together. They noticed I was casing off against him. It's not to fight, too, and they didn't want him to get hurt. It wasn't doing me much good anyway."

A smattering of hecklers irked Holmes at the end of his workout. He began his usual speech to a crowd of about 500 but, speaking without a microphone, he was often drowned out by the talking in the audience.

"Quiet. Quiet or I'll leave. I won't talk to you," Holmes said.

"If you don't, Leon will," a heckler responded.

"Well, get Leon then," Holmes said, ducking under the ring ropes and walking to his dressing room.

Holmes said he sparred 125 rounds for the "belated" dedication of two-year-old Joe Louis Arena but "I went 185 rounds for Trevor Berbick (in a successful title defense April 11) and I never really slacked off."

"I'm much sharper now than I was before. I feel better, too," said Holmes, who indicated he would weight about 213 for the fight and thus have about a 13-pound weight advantage to go with his five-inch edge in reach.

Spinks said Monday at his first press conference he intended to "cling like a T-shirt" to Holmes but the champion shrugged that off by saying "that's going to be very hard to do."

"I've got long arms and fast hands. He'll get one or two blows coming in, then I'll tie him up," Holmes said.

"Leon's made for Larry Holmes," the champion said. "My manager wishes I could fight a guy like Leon Spinks every time. I face a fighter like him and I give him my left jab and a quick right hand. I should look like a million dollars against Leon."

Reagan, Valenzuela meet during luncheon for Portillo

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ronald Reagan and his family in the movies, Tuesday met Fernando Valenzuela — a rookie pitching sensation from Mexico who has starry-eyed Dodger fans predicting he'll someday make Cooperstown, too.

The Los Angeles Dodger rookie told reporters he was "very proud and happy" to be here.

Valenzuela broke in by winning eight straight games, five of them shutouts — perhaps the most sensational start ever by a rookie pitcher. And even though he has dropped three of four decisions since, Valenzuela packs ballparks wherever he pitches.

Born in Navajola, Sonora, Mexico, Valenzuela speaks little English.

Through his translator — John Gavin, U.S. ambassador to Mexico — Valenzuela said the day was "doubly important because my president is here also and I should be delighted to see them (Reagan and Lopez Portillo) both today."

"I'm very happy and very proud that the president has invited me to the 'White House,'" he said, auto-graphing baseballs for some reporters.

Reagan, who called Valenzuela a "great pitcher," portrayed one of the greatest — Grover Cleveland Alexander — in the film, "The Winning Team." Reagan also did recreations of Chicago Cubs games during the 1930s.

"Asked if he thought he would win 20 this year, Valenzuela replied:

"I don't know how many I will win. I'm just going to do my best."

NHL spreads out honors

MONTREAL (UPI) — On a day when the National Hockey League took time out to honor everyone from the league's past and current stars to a human-fly who calls himself the "Spiderman," few substantial business developments were revealed Tuesday at the third day of the league's annual congress.

At the annual awards luncheon, the first All-Star team members and the league's award winners were in attendance to accept their plaques and trophies.

Former Montreal Canadiens winger Gilles Tremblay co-hosted the affair with broadcaster Dan Kelley, as more than 1,000 people crowded into the Grand Salon at the Queen Elizabeth Hotel to pay special tribute to former NHL president Clarence Campbell.

Todd is entering the All-Stars and awards winners had been officially announced last week; the only surprise was the introduction of Dan Goodwin, alias Spiderman, who carved a niche for himself on Memorial Day by climbing the outside of Chicago's Sears Tower — the world's tallest building.

Earlier in the day, it was revealed former Toronto Maple Leafs great Frank Mahovlich, ex-Boston Bruin scoring star Johnny Bucyk and former Leafs defenseman Alvin Stanley would be this year's inductees to the Hockey Hall of Fame.

League president John Ziegler paid tribute to all the award winners. In acknowledging rookie-of-the-year Peter Stastny of the Quebec Nordiques, he said it was "especially gratified that the brothers Stastny had not gone to Vancouver."

It was a wry comment on the only occurrence yet to cause a ripple at the congress — the signings by the Canucks of two Czech players, Jiri Hlinka and Jiri Bubla, who had been previously drafted by other NHL teams.

Winnipeg Jets general manager John Ferguson, who had drafted

Hlinka at a special draft of four Czech players held May 28, filed an official tampering charge with Ziegler's office Tuesday.

In declaring the two signings illegal Monday, Ziegler indicated the issue would have to be resolved at the league's board of governors meeting in Chicago later this month.

Illinois boss hopes sanctions will be dropped by Big Ten SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (UPI) — University of Illinois President Stanley Kieberry said Tuesday he is optimistic most or all of the sanctions imposed by the Big Ten Conference can be withdrawn by early August.

Kieberry said the year-old study of the university's organization and conduct in intercollegiate athletics is nearing completion. He said he hopes that study will be the basis for withdrawing the sanctions.

"We hope to draw on this study and implement several improvements," Kieberry told a news conference.

One of the changes, he said, would strengthen the role of the faculty representative as a spokesman for the university. That and other improvements would help strengthen the school's internal structure and minimize errors, he said.

"And, I am hopeful as a result of those steps that the faculty representatives of the Big Ten will take those as a demonstration of articles of good faith on the part of the university and that they will remove all or at least most of the sanctions prior to Sept. 1, 1981."

Originally, Big Ten Commissioner Wayne Dugas said the sanctions would go into effect July 1. Later, after a meeting between top U of I administrators and the faculty representatives in Bloomington, Ind. — the implementation date was moved back to Sept. 1.

The sanctions include three years of probation and a two-year ban on postseason play for all Illinois men's teams. The penalties also would prevent Illinois from sharing in Big Ten athletic revenues for two years.

Kieberry, who met again with some of the faculty representatives last week in Urbana, said he was "very encouraged" with the results of the meeting.
