UN condemns Israel for raid

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — The U.N. Security Council Friday unanimously condemned the Israeli raid on Iraq's nuclear reactor.

It called for compensation to Iraq and urged Israel to open its own nuclear facilities to international inspection.

The move virtually isolated Israel at the United Nations but had no binding force.

U.S. Ambassador Jeane Kirkpatrick joined the 14 other council members in voting for the resolution.

Relatively mild by the firebrand standards of some U.N. documents, the wording was the product of a week of marathon bargaining between Mrs. Kirkpatrick and Iraqi Foreign Minister Sadoum Hammadi.

and political sanctions against Israel. In the council's anterooms, the resolution was written and rewritten dozens of times.

What finally emerged was a sternly worded document that saved Washington's face in the Arab world but amounted only to an agreement to scold Israel but not punish it.

Mrs. Kirkpatrick praised Hammadi's "cooperative spirit, restrained positions and good faith" in reaching the compromise.

She also took pains to stress that, although the United States was voting against Israel, it was not abandoning it.

"The strength of U.S. ties and commitment to Israel are well-known to the members of this council. Israel is an important and valued ally. Nothing has happened that in any way alters the strength of our commitment or the warmth of our feelings. We in administration are proud of a friend and ally," she said.

"We means Israel chose to about the purposes of program have hurt, not peace and security of the sea. In my government's view, diplomatic means available to Israel, had not been exhausted."

Mrs. Kirkpatrick said, Israel erred in attacking the reactor June 7 — and erred in a way that had setback the chances of "peace and security" in the Middle East.

The resolution, said U.S. Ambassador Jeane Kirkpatrick at a press conference after the vote, was "satisfactory to no one."

But Mrs. Kirkpatrick said that while the compromise resolution im-

Reapportionment

Evans officially calls special session on July 7

BOISE (UPI) — Gov. John Evans today officially called the Idaho Legislature into special session to consider reapportionment and congressional redistricting.

Evans issued a proclamation ordering the extraordinary session of the 1981 Legislature to begin at 10 a.m. July 7.

The governor added only one other subject: revising election laws as needed to conform with the legislative and congressional district changes.

Revision of the district boundaries is necessary because of shifts in population shown by the 1980 census. Greatest gains in population came in the southwest and north, giving the 1st Congressional District considerably more population than the 2nd District.

The U.S. Supreme Court ruled nearly two decades ago that all districts should have substantially the same populations.

At present, Idaho has 35 legislative districts, with one senator and two representatives elected in each district. Following the 1980 census the state was reapportioned so that each district contained about 20,000 residents.

The 1980 census showed each of the 35 districts needed nearly 27,000 residents to be equal in population.

Without reapportioning, some districts now would be considerably larger than that, while others would be considerably smaller.

Evans conferred with legislative leaders before deciding to limit the session to the three subjects. In letters earlier to all lawmakers he said he would amend the call to add other subjects if there was indication or substantial support for them.

... as Illinois 'battles' over redistricting

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (UPI) — Armed police had to enforce order Friday on the floor of the Illinois House.

Irate Democrats, shouting and jostling for position, stormed the podium to try to block advancement of a Republican reapportionment plan. Charges of gerrymandering have flown thick and fast in the last month as the House met to solve its reapportionment problems.

Several lawmakers rushed to the front of the chamber and surrounded acting Speaker Arthur Teiseler late Thursday night as Teiseler ruled amendments proposed by minority Democrats were out of order.

About 10 minutes of name-calling, jostling and finger-jabbing followed, with other lawmakers shouting at each other on the floor.

"I'm elected here," Rep. John Matjjevich, D-North Chicago, shouted as a security guard tried to force him from the podium. "Don't tell me to leave. You leave before I do."

Rep. Dwight Friedrich, rushed to the House balcony and physically ejected a television cameraman he said was taping the uproar in violation of House rules.

"This all smacks of tyranny," Democratic Leader Michael Madigan of Chicago stormed after the uprising. "This is all reminiscent of tactics used by Nazis in Germany. It's a disgrace."

The reapportionment plans are expected to die in the Democratic-controlled Senate, forcing a special commission to reapportion the Legislature and the federal courts to redraw congressional district lines.

Stewart says woman on court may not be best

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Justice Potter Stewart said Friday it would be an "insult" to the Supreme Court if his replacement were chosen simply on the basis of sex or race.

It is far more important, he said, for President Reagan to name a "good judge" than it is to rush to appoint the first woman justice.

"It would be an insult to the court ... to appoint somebody just because he or she was not a white male," Stewart said, in a rare farewell news conference at the Supreme Court.

Stewart's "surprise" retirement announcement Thursday prompted a flurry of speculation about a successor — and presented Reagan a chance to appoint the first woman justice.

(See story Page A3). "So far as I am concerned," Stewart said, "the mark of a good justice is one whose opinions can be read and there is no idea if a man or a woman, a Republican or a Democrat, a Christian or a Jew, (wrote them) ... You just know he or she was a good judge."

He said thoughts of retirement were prompted by a letter he received in February 1980 from Donna Gallus, a St. Cloud, Minn., high school senior, who asked him: "Why you have stayed on the Supreme Court so long?"

Stewart, who became eligible to retire when he turned 65 in January 1980, responded: "I did not become eligible to retire until late last month. Under these circumstances, it has not occurred to me, at least so far, that I have remained as a member of the Supreme Court an unduly long time."

Stewart said he decided against retiring then because it was an election year and also because it would have been "very harmful" to the court to leave in the middle of a term.

Stewart said he won't be the White House May 18 to deliver his letter of resignation to Reagan, not wanting to "spring it" on the administration. He said Reagan's reaction was cordial.

And, he said, he told Chief Justice Warren Burger "early in the game" and told his other seven colleagues Thursday he would quit July 3. Stewart, 66, leaving after nearly 23 years, waived aside speculation about his health. He said he had been given a "clean bill" after a physical last fall, and is quitting solely to spend more time with his wife and family.

Noting that when he was appointed to the federal bench in 1954 he was the youngest federal judge in the country, Stewart joked — "I wanted to retire before I became the oldest."

Air traffic controllers

Senate: Controllers' boss lied, promised no strike

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Robert Poll, president of the Professional Air Traffic Controllers Association, gave false testimony to a Senate committee last year when he said there would be no strike in 1981, 36 senators charged Friday.

The senators led by Commerce Committee chairman Robert Packwood, R-Ore., demanded an "immediate explanation" and warned they would oppose any pay increase stemming from a strike or job action.

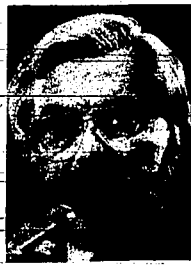

In a letter to Poll, the senators cited testimony he gave the Senate Commerce committee Aug. 25, 1980 when questioned about rumors that PATCO was preparing for a nationwide strike.

At one point, Poll said: "In no way is PATCO planning to go on strike in 1981 ..."

The senators said there were "serious concerns" that he falsely testified in formal testimony before the committee.

"We expect an immediate explanation of the inconsistency between your testimony and recent statements regarding PATCO's encouragement or endorsement of an illegal strike or job action on June 22, 1981."

ROBERT POLL 'no strike in '81'

Talks resume in bid to avert strike

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Negotiators agreed Friday night to resume negotiations today in hopes of averting a crippling strike.

Transportation Secretary Drew Lewis and the head of the Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization, Robert E. Poll, agreed to resume the discussions in the face of a threatened strike by thousands of air traffic controllers on Monday.

The two sides agreed to the new talks shortly after meeting with Federal mediator Kenneth Moffet, who is also mediating the professional baseball negotiations in New York.

Poll said the fact the talks were resuming meant there was still a possibility a strike could be averted. But asked if he would characterize the developments as "meaningful," he said "I won't know whether it's meaningful until tomorrow."

The two sides had not met since PATCO, whose members guide aircraft in and out of airports and among cities, rejected a contract offer Wednesday by the Federal Aviation Administration. Meanwhile, anxious travelers — jammed — airline switchboards as carriers began booking seats based on a severely curtailed route schedule to be used by the FAA during a walkout.

Travel agents were deluged with clients wanting backup reservations on buses, trains and rental cars. At least one airline, Pacific Southwest, said it would shut down during a strike.

Lewis briefed President Reagan at the White House earlier in the day, telling reporters: "We will not tolerate an illegal strike, nor will we negotiate with the union while a strike is taking place."

"These people are not criminals," he added. "We do not want to put them in jail, but we will," he said. "Poll said the controllers know they may face arrest and jail."

"They realize it. But ... they don't have an alternative. There comes a time in which you must take a position on something you believe in."

PATCO will take a strike vote Sunday. Members will walk out at the start of Monday's day shift if there is no contract.

Horse-hide results in prison

CHICAGO (UPI) — Two Pakistanis convicted of trying to smuggle into Chicago a kilogram of uncut opium were sentenced Friday to 15 years in prison and deportation after their release. U.S. District Judge John Powers Crowley said he was trying to send a message to Middle East drug dealers to stay out of the United States. "It is quite ironic that people around the world look on the United States as a great place to make a profit from the sale of heroin," the judge said.

PLO kills UN border guards

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Palestinian guerrillas abducted and then killed two U.N. soldiers of the United Nations peacekeeping force in south Lebanon Friday, the international organization charged. A U.N. spokesman in New York said a PLO soldier and a Palestinian gunman were wounded in a clash near the Israeli border, when a jeepload of "armed elements" — a U.N. code word for Palestinian militiamen — tried to cross a checkpoint into the U.N. buffer zone along the frontier with Israel. The guerrillas and killed two of them later. The other two escaped.

Screams lead to girl's rescue

OMAHA, Neb. (UPI) — A fireman blinded by dense smoke followed the screams of a 22-month-old girl Friday and rescued her from a burning apartment. Everett Colton, 38, a crew member on Headquarters Station Smoke No. 1, the first to reach the apartment, said his vision was blocked by smoke but he could hear a child's screams. He found Chahryna Turner in the kitchen and carried her out. She was treated for minor smoke inhalation.

Fire investigators said the blaze was started by Chahryna Turner's sister, a 12-year-old girl, who was playing with matches. Damage was estimated at $3,900.

Tornado kills one in Kansas

LAWRENCE, Kan. (UPI) — Two tornadoes smashed into a mobile home pipe and a shopping center late Friday, damaging 15 residential homes and 15 mobile homes, said police. At least one person was killed and dozens injured. The Kansas Highway Patrol reported 50 National Guardsmen had been called into the area to stop looting, help evacuations and assist the injured.

Reagan may have illegally made deal with controllers

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Ronald Reagan agreed to fire Federal Aviation Administrator Langhorne Bond and increase traffic controllers' salaries in return for their union's endorsement of his presidency. Those charges were made following submission of a supporting document to Congress Friday.

Democratic Reps. Allen Ertel of Pennsylvania and Buddy Roemer of Louisiana charged that the document turned over to the Justice Department, the House Judiciary Committee or possibly a special prosecutor on grounds it is illegal to trade an endorsement for the firing of someone. The memorandum of understanding, dated Oct. 20, 1980, is from John Leighton, general counsel of the Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization, to Michael Balzano, Reagan's labor adviser during the campaign. The memorandum said the OATCA had agreed to endorse Reagan. "As evidence of that understanding, Governor Reagan — through you, Bob Garrick and other agents — has agreed that the following will take place after the governor is elected to the presidency," the memorandum said. Among the listed items was one that Reagan had agreed "the present administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration will be replaced by a competent administrator." Another item was "increase pay of air traffic controllers." Bond resigned on Inauguration Day. It was immediately accepted by the new administration. The White House spokeswoman said they had no record of such a memorandum, noting they don't keep copies of documents from the transition period unless they were signed by Reagan.

The subcommittee also received a copy of a letter from Reagan to Robert Poll, president of PATCO, also dated Oct. 20, 1980. "I have been thoroughly briefed by members of my staff as to the deplorable state of our nation's air traffic control system," Reagan's letter said. "They have told me that too few people working unreasonable hours with obsolete equipment has placed the nation's air travelers in unwarranted danger. In an area so clearly related to public safety, the Carter administration has failed to act responsibly. You can rest assured that if I am elected president, I will take whatever steps are necessary to provide our air traffic controllers with the most modern equipment available and to adjust staff levels and work days so that they are commensurate with achieving a maximum degree of public safety." The White House spokeswoman confirmed the contents of the Reagan letter, and said the recent proposal made by PATCO by the Department of Transportation "is a fair package and meets their needs." "What we are doing now satisfactorily portrays what Reagan wrote in his original letter," the spokeswoman said.

Soviets building 1st space station

MOSCOW (UPI) — Western experts say the Soviet Union has begun the first steps toward assembling a large-scale, possible "permanent" space station. The announcement came as a mysterious Soviet research satellite launched on Friday with the Salyut-6 orbiting space laboratory.

Russians would send a manned capsule into orbit to perform further tests with the new space station unit. A Western space expert who has followed preparations for the current mission said it was a key test of building space stations by assembling modular components — in orbit. He estimated the Salyut-Cosmos combination was a 40-ton, 100-foot-long complex. The Soviet Union's most recent manned spacecraft was completed less than a month ago. President Jimmy Carter is presenting awards Wednesday to the crewmen from that mission, said the nation was ready to make the next step — to go over to the creation of permanent orbital scientific complexes. Once completed, such an installation would make space research work more economical, since only replacement parts, crew members and consumable supplies would need to be flown up to orbit aboard expensive rocket boosters. The Soviet space program has long been aiming toward a goal of building a long-term, large-scale space station — a development philosophy different from the idea behind the United States Space Shuttle, but one with the same underlying goal of conducting space research in a more efficient manner.

County prisoner arrested for 'vandalism'

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls County Sheriff's Department arrested a 19-year-old prisoner Friday on a charge of damaging jail property. Todd D. Richardson, 19, a Twin Falls County jail prisoner, is accused of cutting the plaster in part of a jail wall in May. The charge is a felony, regardless of the extent of damage. Sheriff James Munson said Richardson is in jail on two orders of commitment after having been released earlier on parole. Thursday, the Sheriff's Department transported Gary Hirsbrunner, 22, from Ada County to Twin Falls on two charges — first degree burglary. Hirsbrunner is accused of stealing equipment from West End Veterinary Clinic west of Buhl. Munson said Hirsbrunner, of Nampa, was jailed in lieu of $5,000 bond.

CAB suspends 'bumping' rules

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Civil Aeronautics Board has suspended its smoking and "bumping" rules for airlines if the air traffic controllers strike Monday. Additionally, the board said the companies would not have to provide amenities for stranded passengers if air traffic controllers strike Monday. The board also granted airlines permission to transport passengers this weekend who have booked reservations for travel on or after Monday. The smoking rules require airlines to seat all passengers in "no-smoking sessions" if they so request. Denied boarding compensation rules normally guarantee payment for passengers with reservation who are bumped and cannot catch another flight within a specified time. The CAB had issued partial exemptions of those rules Thursday. The board warned that if passengers are stranded due to flight cancellations during the emergency, airlines most likely will not provide overnight lodging and meals, as they often to during winter storms and similar emergencies. Thursday, the board released a list defining categories of priority passengers, mainly government, military and time personnel on official travel, medical personnel and cargo.

In Washington, Undersecretary of State Walter Stoessel summoned Israeli Ambassador Ephraim Evron to a meeting in which he relayed a message from President Reagan that Friday's U.N. vote implied no change in American commitment to Israel, Israeli sources said.

At the U.N., Israeli Ambassador Yehuda Blum sat in silence with his right hand resting grimly upon his chin, as all 15 hands were raised around the council's round table.

Blum said, "Anyone who thinks otherwise has not faced up to the horrific realities of the world we live in today." "Another biased, anti-Israel resolution by this council, will not bring peace any closer," he said.

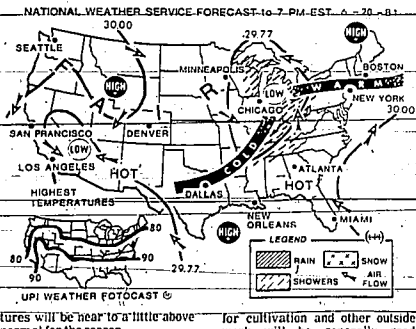

Blum shrugged off the U.S. vote as a "temporary irritant" and said the most important part of Mrs. Kirkpatrick's speech was her strong reiteration of American-Israeli ties. He said it was unhappy with the compromises it had to make to avert a U.S. veto and may take its fight to the General Assembly, where it was assured of more militant support. "That is what a compromise is," Mrs. Kirkpatrick shrugged. "It doesn't make anybody happy."

Blum said it was unhappy with the resolution while Israel said it wasn't all that bad. Blum said it was unhappy with the resolution while Israel said it wasn't all that bad. Blum said it was unhappy with the resolution while Israel said it wasn't all that bad.

Today's weather

Chance of rain increases through this weekend

Twin Falls, Burley-Rupert, Jerome-Gooding areas: Variable clouds through Saturday night. Chance of thundershowers this afternoon and evening. Clear Sunday with increasing chance of showers and thundershowers. Highs 80 to 85 today and in the 70s Sunday. Lows 50 to 55 degrees. The Twin Falls pollen count Friday was 46 per cubic meter of air. That's the weather outlook for the Magic Valley and much of Idaho. A strong westerly flow of air over the area continues to bring minor storms to the state every 20 to 30 hours, with brisk surface winds and varying amounts of cloudiness. Northern Idaho will have rain and the rest of the state will receive only sprinkles over the weekend. But clouds are expected to increase on Monday with showers developing on Tuesday and decreasing on Wednesday. Temperatures will be near a "little" above normal for the season. Summer arrives in Idaho at 4:45 a.m. Sunday. Little change is expected today from the conditions which prevailed across the state Friday. With the jet stream crossing Idaho between Lewiston and McCall, the main precipitation belt lay across the northern part of the state. Rainfall in that area was copious, with Pierce reporting .97 inch, Powell .90 and Penn .67. Mid-afternoon temperatures ranged from the middle 50s in the panhandle to the high 70s in southeastern Idaho. In the Magic Valley, conditions for cultivation and other outside work will be generally good through Wednesday. Showers today and again Tuesday may interrupt hay drying. Conditions for plant growth will remain good through Tuesday but rates will slow somewhat Wednesday. Pan evaporation is forecast at .35 inch today and Sunday. Spring conditions will be generally good today with winds mostly 5 to 12 mph, but deteriorating in the afternoon as winds reach 8 to 18 mph. Hottest temperature in the nation Friday 117 at Bullhead City, Ariz., and the coolest was 40 at International Falls, Minn.

Will a woman replace Stewart on highest court?

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan under pressure to appoint the first woman to the Supreme Court, said Friday "several" women are among those being considered to succeed Justice Potter Stewart.

But Reagan's aides said men also are on the list of potential nominees.

Edwin Meese, a long-time Reagan aide who is considered a possible replacement for Stewart, said again the president is committed to appointing a woman but has not decided whether the Stewart vacancy is the time and place to do it.

Most observers agree Reagan will probably get at least one other chance during his first term to make an appointment to the high court.

During the 1980 presidential campaign, Reagan promised "one of the first Supreme Court vacancies in my administration will be filled by one of the most qualified women I can possibly find."

Calling the appointment "without question one of the most important decisions that the president will make," Meese said Attorney General William French Smith has compiled a list of potential appointees.

White House Communications Director David Gergen said Reagan had not received the list from Smith, who quietly began the selection process last month when administration officials learned of Stewart's decision to resign to return to the private sector.

Reagan's directions to his staff, a spokesman said, were only that the candidate for the tribunal "be the most qualified person."

Reagan's statement that the women are being considered comes as the National Women's Political Caucus sent him a letter listing 700 women judges in the United States, including 43 on the federal bench and 12 on state Supreme Courts.

Among women mentioned as potential appointees are Carla Hills, 46, former secretary of Housing and Urban Development; Elizabeth Hanford Dole, 44, formerly on the Federal Trade Commission and currently White House liaison for public interest groups; Rita Hauser, 46, a New York lawyer and a former U.S. delegate to the United Nations; Corelia Kennedy, 57, a judge on the 6th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, where Stewart also sat, and Anne Armstrong, 54, former ambassador to Great Britain and White House counselor to Richard Nixon.

NWPC also listed as possibilities: Justice Shirley Abrahamson of the Wisconsin Supreme Court; Rita C. Davidson of the Maryland Court of Appeals; Ruth Bader Ginsburg of the U.S. Court of Appeals in Washington; former NLRB chairman Betty Murphy, and Shirley Hufstetler, a former appeals court judge in California and former secretary of education, among others.

Among men being prominently mentioned are Meese and Smith; William Clark, a close personal friend of Reagan's who left the California Supreme Court to become deputy secretary of state; Robert Turk, former solicitor general under Richard Nixon; and Anthony Kennedy, a Nixon appointee on the federal appeals court in California.

Among the possible replacements for retiring Supreme Court Justice Potter Stewart (center) are several women, including (top left, clockwise), Elizabeth Hanford-Dole, Rita Hauser, Carla Hills and Anne Armstrong

Last brushfire in California is surrounded

RIVERSIDE, Calif. (UPI) — Firefighters surrounded Friday the last major brushfire in a rash of blazes that ravaged Southern California last week.

The fires had consumed 61,000 acres, killed one child, injured five other people and damaged or destroyed at least 20 buildings.

Although two more small fires started Friday in isolated areas of Riverside County, the week-long battle seemed to be about over in a six-county region of Southern California with containment of the 5,000-acre blaze in Dugan Canyon, more than 70 people fought the last major fire, which threatened several small farming communities and forced some evacuations before being contained.

At least 1,300 firefighters were on the lines and at least 40 buildings were destroyed, said Roger Land of the state California Department of Forestry. Most of the fires were small but some burned more than 10,000 acres of watershed with the worst of Southern California's official fire season yet to come.

James Scarlet, 6, was killed near his Riverside County trailer home from a fire that was deliberately set, investigators said. Three members of his family also were critically burned when powerful winds literally blew them into the path of a "fire tornado" Wednesday afternoon.

Volcano oozes lava in latest eruption

VANCOUVER, Wash. (UPI) — Scientists aboard a helicopter were able to confirm Friday that cloud-shrouded Mount St. Helens is erupting again.

No plume of steam or ash was reported rising from the volcano, but it was oozing lava upward from the crater to a new level.

Heavy clouds covered the mountain, but the helicopter crew found a break at mid-day.

"The chopper sneaked in far enough of a look so they can say there is some oozing," said Kathy Cashman, a U.S. Geological Survey geologist.

The eruption was described by scientists as "non-explosive."

The bad weather had frustrated courts Thursday to get a look at the pasty dome swelling up inside the volcano's gaping, horseshoe-shaped crater.

Seismic activity underground, the mountain continued at about the same pace since midnight Thursday when it dropped off to about two seismic events per hour.

Scientists for the USGS and University of Washington geophysicists department said increasing earthquake activity at the mountain Thursday and swelling of the crater floor, detected by instruments — pointed to a quiet eruption.

They said the event probably added to the size of the huge lava dome inside the volcano's crater, but it did not trigger millions of flash floods or significant ash fallout like the tremors that blasted that left 60 people dead or missing.

The volcano had six more explosive eruptions, followed by relatively quiet dome-building eruptions beginning in late December.

Miss Cashman said the buildup of activity over the last day or so was similar to the periods preceding three previous dome-building eruptions. She said there was a sharp increase in the number of shallow earthquakes and an increase in the swelling and tilting of the floor of the mountain's two-mile-wide crater.

Scientists continually monitor the mountain for such signs and have been increasingly accurate at pinpointing the arrival of the next eruption.

At last sighting, the lava dome in the crater — which surrounds the volcano's throat — was about 300 to 400 feet tall, 1,200 feet wide and 1,500 feet long.

"We're predicting it will increase in size, but we'll have to see," Miss Cashman said.

Impact of Mt. St. Helens on migrants to be studied

BOISE — The impact of the Mount St. Helens eruption on Idaho farmworkers is being studied in a month-long survey of the area's migrant and seasonal farmworkers.

The study will also attempt to determine the number of farmworkers in the state.

The study is being conducted by the Idaho Migrant Council in conjunction with the Division of Economic and Community Affairs in the Executive Office of the Governor. It is being funded by the Community Service Administration under Volcano Assistance.

The IMC has hired about 40 interviewers to conduct the study which will continue until June 23.

The survey will be conducted in 20 Southern Idaho counties along the Snake River Basin. The project has the potential to contact up to 20,000 farmworkers.

Unlike most door-to-door surveys, this study is utilizing a new method of counting unknown human populations developed specifically for this research project, according to an IMC press release.

Locations have been identified where migrant and seasonal farmworkers frequent. Interviews will contact farmworkers at these sites, which include labor camps, stores, laundromats, and work sites.

The survey will examine such items as: What emergency services are needed by farmworkers if the volcano erupts again; the demographic nature, composition and concentration of the farmworker population; and to what extent farmworkers need bilingual services.

The survey will gather data for inclusion in future grant proposals for the Idaho Migrant Council and other social service agencies around Idaho.

"The ultimate impact of the survey will be on future funding decisions and establishing Idaho Migrant Council policy in cases of natural disaster," said Hector de Leon, IMC director of internal operations.

Reagan allies ready alternative budget cuts

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan's budget allies said Friday they will challenge House Democrats by offering a revised package of budget cuts.

The alternative package will include changes in food stamps, welfare and several other federal programs. The Republican proposal would restore some funds Democrats propose to cut in trade assistance, impact aid to school districts serving federal workers, and pension funds for "downside dipper" who get military retirement benefits while working as civilian employees of the federal government.

Reagan, shortly after his inauguration, proposed a sweeping plan of budget cuts. Democrats countered with an alternative package, which has gone through the committee process to become a massive 4,000-page bill expected to reach the floor of the House sometime next week.

The president then planned to offer a complete substitute to the Democratic package, but settled on the trimmed-down version which will be brought directly to the floor of the House to oppose the Democratic proposal.

Before leaving for a Camp David weekend, the president announced his "full support" of the new plan and warned Congress to accelerate its efforts.

"Let there be no doubt: We can and we will put a stop to the fiscal joyride in Washington," he said, reading from a prepared statement.

Chiding Democratic lawmakers for altering his original budget proposals, Reagan said the nation's "needs are too important to tolerate this 'business as usual' attitude on Capitol Hill."

Budget director David Stockman told reporters enactment of the Republican budget proposal is "critical" to success of the administration's overall economic plan.

Stockman said that on paper the new plan would leave the administration $4 billion or $5 billion short of its announced goal to balance the federal budget in 1984. But he said that shortfall can be made up when budgets are considered next year or the following year.

The latest GOP package was unveiled Friday by House-Republican leader Robert Michel of Illinois; Rep. DeLoach, R-Ohio; and their conservative Democratic ally, Rep. Phil Gramm of Texas.

They said they did not know the total dollar impact of their proposal, but insisted it would reduce spending over the next three years $20 billion more than would the Democratic plan. The Democratic proposal would cut $37.7 billion in federal programs in fiscal 1982, with the impact carrying over into the following two years. Additional savings Republicans claim beyond the Democratic bill totaled $5.1 billion. That did not take into account more than $2 billion in funds they propose to put back into the budget for politically sensitive programs such as impact aid and a Social Security increase — both of which Democrats planned to delay.

The new proposal would include most of the block grants Reagan proposed and Democrats rejected to give states control over a variety of health, education and social-service programs now governed by the federal government.

A summary of the proposal showed it would cut $1.2 billion from food stamps; "close loopholes" in Aid to Families with Dependent Children; reduce subsidies for school lunches; impose a "means test" for guaranteed student loans; and restrict federal civilian pay raises to 4.8 percent in 1982 and 7 percent for the following two years. The Democrats differed on all of those.

Michel was trying to reach an agreement with House Speaker Thomas O'Neill, D-Mass., and Rules Committee chairman Richard Bolling, D-Mo., that would allow the Republican plan to be considered on the House floor when the budget debate begins next week. Michel wants to offer the plan, which includes 10 major reductions, five restorations and six block grant proposals, as a single GOP substitute. Staff sources said Democrats would rather vote on each separately.

Budget Committee Chairman James Jones, D-Okla., said if the House acts on the amendments separately, the action could drag on after the July 4 recess.

It appeared the Republican proposals would actually bring the total budget cuts to about the same figure as that claimed by Democrats — perhaps a little less.

But they argued some Democratic proposals would not achieve the reductions anyway, so the difference was greater than it appeared. Democrats insist their cuts are real.

Latta said the Republicans were accepting 90 percent of the work committees had done, but wanted to put "put some teeth" into Democratic proposals to cut entitlement programs which guarantee people certain social services from the government.

Congressman says lobbyist ads blackmailing Democrats

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Rep. Bill Nelson, D-Fla., said Friday a lobbying group was trying to "blackmail" him and other Democratic congressmen who voted for President Reagan's budget unless they agree in advance to back whatever changes the president wants.

A spokesman for the National Tax Limitation Committee acknowledged the group contacted Nelson, and had targeted him and the others for special pressure in the coming fight. But the spokesman said the blackmail accusation was "not precisely accurate."

The group identified the others as Reps. Don Albosta, D-Mich., Dan Mica, D-Fla., J. J. Poinsett, D-N.C., Ronnie Flippo, D-Ala., and Highower, D-Tex., Bill Chappell, R-Ia., Bo Ginn, D-Ga., and Earl Hutto, D-Fla.

Nelson, one of 62 conservative Democrats who voted for Reagan's budget targets in May, described as "blackmail" a threat to run adverse radio ads in his district if he refuses to pledge his vote. He said he would vote against Reagan automatically this time if the group follows through on the threat.

"I am in an outrage," Nelson told reporters, "because for the first time in my nine years in public elected office there has been a threat made on me that something would happen to me if I didn't vote a certain way."

"I'm going to make it clear that this member of Congress is not going to be subject to attempted intimidation and attempted blackmail," he said.

He said the group had bought all available time on a local radio station for Monday and Tuesday.

Committee spokesman David Keen said it was "not precisely accurate" that his group was attempting to blackmail Nelson. He said it was trying to bring constituent pressure on those Democrats considered most likely to give a waiver in the upcoming battle.

The scrap involves whether to adopt specific budget changes drafted by the Democratic-dominated House Budget Committee to meet spending ceilings, or to go for changes President Reagan wants.

A spokesman for Chappell confirmed his office also had been approached by the group, which it said told Chappell's office the group was playing "hard ball politics."

Test vote indicates anti-busing support

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate Friday indicated its overwhelming support for the strongest anti-busing legislation ever considered in Congress.

It rejected a liberal amendment that would have diluted the proposal's impact.

Sen. Lowell Weicker, R-Conn., eased his one-man filibuster long enough for the Senate to take the test vote — the first action he has permitted since he seized control of the debate four days earlier.

The Senate voted 45-30 against the Weicker amendment that stated nothing in the anti-busing proposal could keep the Justice Department from enforcing the Constitution.

The 46-33 defeat of identical language last year — exposed the growing opposition to school busing and the Senate's shift to the political right.

Still pending at the close of the day was the anti-busing rider offered by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., to the Justice Department authorization bill.

Helms' amendments would forbid the Justice Department from bringing or pressing any suit that would force the busing of students past the school nearest their homes.

An identical amendment was vetoed by Congress last year but approved by President Jimmy Carter. Supporters expect President Reagan to accept the anti-busing rider.

Peace Corps vows no spies

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Peace Corps will follow a strict policy of staying out of the intelligence-gathering business in foreign countries, its new director said Friday.

Director Loret Ruppe told a 20th anniversary conference of former Peace Corps volunteers that she and Secretary of State Alexander Haig sent messages to U.S. embassies around the world in May stating the behind-the-scenes policy of no spying or intelligence work for the overseas volunteers.

The 1,500 former volunteers gave Mrs. Ruppe her biggest applause when she pledged "to keep the Peace Corps separate from intelligence gathering."

But there were groans when she said budget limitations would force the corps to reduce the current total of 5,700 volunteers now serving in more than 60 countries — Operations in Korea, Colombia, Nicaragua and Ivory Coast will be closed and about 200 volunteers trimmed from the program in 1982, she said.

Butz sentenced for tax evasion

FORT WAYNE, Ind. (UPI) — Former Agriculture Secretary Earl Butz was sentenced Friday to 30 days in prison and five years on probation for income tax evasion.

U.S. District Judge Jesse Eschbach said he considered Butz' "age, lack of previous offenses and long record of community service in deciding to convert all but 30 days of the prison sentence to probation. He also fined Butz $10,000.

Butz, 71, pleaded guilty May 22 to failure to report $148,114 of taxable income earned in 1978. In return for the guilty plea, the Internal Revenue Service dropped charges concerning 1977 taxes.

All the income was legal, and most came from speeches to agriculture and Republican groups around the nation.

Eschbach said it would be at least two weeks before paperwork was completed, and Butz was allowed to report voluntarily to the Metropolitan Corrections Center in Chicago to serve his 30 days behind bars.

"I've always held the highest regard for the law," Butz told the court. "I'm guilty of the crime charged and I have to live with it every minute of every day of my life."

Suspect demands gag order

ATLANTA (UPI) — Wayne Williams said in an affidavit Friday that media attention focused on him had ruined his reputation, endangered his life and caused him to fear mob violence.

Attorneys for Williams, questioned three times about the slayings of 29 young blacks, argued before U.S. District Judge Orinda Evans that the media should be restrained from using their client's name in reports about the 22-month-long series of killings.

"Because of the nature of the investigation and the extensive period of time it has remained unsolved and the mental climate and attitude of the citizens, the media focus has greatly endangered my life," Williams said in a 12-point affidavit filed by his attorneys.

"If my character and reputation have not already been ruined, it will be if the court does not stop the media from printing information connecting me and the murder cases of Atlanta's children."

Williams added that he was "screed of mob violence" and "if the court does not do something immediately to stop the media...my life — or what is irreparable."

Attorneys Mary Welton and Jim White, representing Williams, entered over the objections of media attorneys three hours of video tapes of television newscast and about 55 national and local news articles.

Meanwhile, attorneys for the news organizations argued that it was impossible for Williams' constitutional right to privacy to have been violated since the Constitution deals only with government interference in an individual's life.

"They also said Williams was a public figure because of police action in regard to him.

Judge Evans wondered aloud if the media, because of its pervasive influence, might be considered a quasi-government agency, and whether news reports might have transformed Williams into a public figure.

Attorneys argued against both contentions. "The petition asked the court to bar the media from referring to Williams as a 'suspect' and to restrain news organizations 'from further use of his name, picture, likeness, address, films of his home and other means of identification."

Film, record piracy curbs urged

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The movie and recording industries Friday urged Congress to impose stiff prison terms to curb massive piracy and counterfeiting of films, tapes and records by organized crime.

James Bouras, representing both the Motion Picture Association of America and the Recording Industry Association of America, estimated the pirates are netting at least $1 billion a year.

Both organizations endorsed a bill by Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, to make the crimes felonies, provide fines of up to $250,000 and impose five-year prison terms for big-scale operations, Bouras said.

Renee Szymbala, a Justice Department official, told the Senate Judiciary subcommittee on crime that the department supports the Thurmond bill. But she recommends it be strengthened through a number of technical changes.

Bouras testified the present misdemeanor statute does not deter the crimes and is so mild it even discourages serious prosecutions.

"These people make so much money they simply laugh at the misdemeanor penalty," he said.

Bouras said the pirates can easily copy stolen video and sound cassettes that cost millions of dollars to produce and make huge untaxed profits abroad or funnel them into legitimate U.S. retail markets.

He said pirates buy cassettes and records from unscrupulous employees, shippers and theater operators who sell to organized crime.

"There are scavengers in the industry — pirates who pirate on each other," Bouras said.

By counterfeiting legitimate labels and packaging, he said, the pirates deceive honest dealers and their customers. But the customer realizes too late he has been cheated because the pirated copies are usually inferior.

Court asked to strike down Vermont's rape shield law

MONTPELIER, Vt. (UPI) — A lawyer for two convicted rapists asked the Vermont Supreme Court Friday to strike down parts of the state's rape shield law.

They charged it protects rape victims at the expense of a defendant's right to a fair trial.

Attorney William Sessions asked the high court to throw out the sexual assault convictions of Jeffrey Patnaude, 22, of Winooski, and Ellwyn Poquette, 24, of Burlington.

The two were convicted last year of taking part in the gang rape of two young women in Williston in 1978.

Sessions argued the trial judge wrongly kept out evidence one of the victims had voluntarily engaged in group sex with other men in the past. He argued that evidence would have bolstered the defense argument the women consented to have sex on the night in question.

The trial judge barred the evidence under Vermont's 4-year-old rape shield law which says rape victims cannot be questioned about their sexual past, with certain exceptions.

Sessions told the high court the men had a right under the 6th amendment to the U.S. Constitution to present all evidence relevant to their case.

He said one of the women "had engaged in group sex... consensually, within a couple of months (of the rape) ... group sex that was remarkably similar in many respects to the facts of the alleged crime."

Chittenden County Deputy State's

Attorney Susan Via argued the rape shield law "did not interfere with the right of Poquette and Patnaude to a fair trial.

"You need not sacrifice the women of this state on the altar of the 6th amendment," she told the five justices.

"The cases are legion — victims are no longer to be put on trial for having been assaulted," she said.

Ms. Via argued that the trial judge did allow considerable evidence about the past contact of one of the victims with Poquette and Patnaude. "These victims were not pristine and the jury did not see them as pristine," she said. But, she argued the additional evidence the defense wanted to introduce — about one victim's past sexual conduct with other men — was not relevant to the case.

She said the evidence would have been introduced simply to prejudice the jury against the victims and to attack their credibility.

According to Ms. Via, other court rulings in other states have made it clear, "because a woman says yes to one man at one time, doesn't mean she will say yes to other men at other times."

"That is like arguing in an aggravated assault case that if you are a rough, tough guy with a criminal record, people have the right to stab you," Ms. Via said.

The court took the arguments under advisement.

Coppers search for choppers

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A set of George Washington's false teeth is missing and believed stolen from the Smithsonian Institution.

"We are 'needless to say' deeply distressed and deeply humiliated," said Lawrence Taylor, a spokesman for the National Museum of American History. "The Smithsonian holds these items in trust and it is a very grievous and painful loss to us."

The gold and ivory teeth, made for Washington in 1793, are one of four still-existing sets of teeth Washington owned.

The loss was discovered by a museum employee Thursday morning. The teeth were in a locked storage room. The museum said a thorough search of the building and grounds failed to produce any trace of the missing items.

The value of the teeth belonging to Washington was not immediately known, said Taylor, and Smithsonian policy forbids disclosing the worth of items in its possession.

"I have no idea how we'd put a value on something like that," he said. "It would be difficult."

The FBI was notified of the disappearance of the items and investigators are examining the possibility the most recent incident might be linked to a series of thefts earlier this year.

DIDEFIED
Robin Russell may have been the last Englishman unable to recognize Lady Diana Spencer, the 5-foot-10 fiancée of Prince Charles, Russell, who was working as a gate supervisor to the Royal Enclosure at Ascot racecourse, didn't recognize her and wouldn't let her in without her badge. Not even when her private detective explained who she was. "She still has to show a badge," said Russell.

HAYDENS IN AFRICA
Jane Fonda and her husband, Tom Hayden, say they are focusing their political activities to mobilize American public opinion against the apartheid racial policies of South Africa. They are in Salisbury, Zimbabwe, after being refused admission to South Africa. They plan to meet Zimbabwe Prime Minister Robert Mugabe Monday. Jane told a news conference that violence is inevitable in South Africa if apartheid continues.

PENN OFFER
Leonid Bralovsky, son of a Soviet Jewish dissident sentenced to Siberian exile, has been invited to attend the University of Pennsylvania, if the Soviets give him a visa. A Soviet court Thursday sentenced scientist-editor Viktor Bralovsky to five years exile on charges of slandering the state. Son Leonid, 20, was denied entrance to a Soviet university because of his father's activities, according to Penn sources. A Penn spokesman says the State Department is trying to intercede with Soviet authorities to grant Leonid a student exit visa. But the spokesman said he is not optimistic it will be granted.

CANNED HAM
Former heavyweight boxing champion Leon Spinks, who lost June 12 to Larry Holmes, has been named "Ham of the Month" by a Chicago ham company. Krakak Polish hams gave Spinks the award "under the category of 'pig in a poke' as he has met head-on the qualifications of a fighter — one adept at giving and/or receiving the blows of life with grace and good humor." Spinks will receive a 5-pound canned ham, tied with a yellow ribbon.

SPURNED FIRE CHIEF
Fire Chief Robert Reister admits he cut a lock from the hair of a woman store clerk, but he doesn't think he should have been convicted of assault and battery. "It was a damn bad joke," Reister, 46, said after he was fined $55 in Evansville, Wyo. Reister snipped the lock of hair when Loretta Carson, 27, said she was too busy to chat and turned her back on him. Reister was suspended for three days.

HOLLERIN'
The 13th annual National Hollerin' Contest is expected to draw 10,049 people Saturday — 10,000 visitors plus the 49 residents of Spivey's Corners, a "hollerin' capital of the universe." The contest, begun in 1969, honors a time when farmers had only their voices to communicate long distances. Saturday's contestants will launch long, piercing, falsetto wails, each lasting up to 45 seconds. Last year's contest drew 10,500 spectators, who heard Tennessee farmworker Dennis Hammons — the only winner so far — suck a lemon to loosen up his throat — out-holler 19 competitors.

First-in nation

Lady joins Oregon Lions

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — Mary Mulfur, 23, a top Pacific Northwest amateur golfer, has become the first lady Lion in the nation.

Ms. Mulfur was installed Thursday as a member of the Lloyd Lions Club in northeast Portland — the first time a woman has been accepted into any of the international male-fraternity clubs. "Somebody's got to be the pioneer," the real estate firm secretary said Friday. "I guess they were willing to make the sacrifice, if you want to call it that."

Ms. Mulfur said she was asked to join by fellow employees at the Menasha Realtors' firm who were members of the club. She has worked at a firm office for five months and recently passed the state licensing test to become a sales associate. "The organization is doing things that are important in the community and I wanted to make a contribution," said Ms. Mulfur, daughter of the executive sports editor of the Oregon Journal, Bill Mulfur.

Her acceptance into the Lloyd Lions Club in Portland came after the board voted 11-1 to accept her and run the risk of the international organization taking away its charter. The one member who voted against her said he would quit.

Robert Blank, president of the Lloyd Lions and a fellow worker at the realty firm, said the decision came after several months of club discussions. "This is part of our goal to triple our membership with quality members," Blanks told a club breakfast meeting Thursday.

This was not the first time that Ms. Mulfur had struck a blow for her sex. After an outstanding career as a prep golfer — including winning the Oregon girls high school golfing title twice and being named three times as an all-state golfer — she became the first woman to get a sports scholarship to attend the University of Washington as a freshman. She also served on the Athletic Advisory Board to the UW president.

She graduated in 1980 as a speech communications major.

Because of her success in golfing, including winning the Portland City Tournament, Brigham Young University Invitational, Oregon Junior Tourney and being three times runner-up in the Oregon state women's tourney, she had considered turning professional, but later dropped the idea.

Lion spokesman Joe Weston said the club was looking for a "strong woman" to take the pressure of being the first.

"We know we run the risk of losing our charter," he said, noting that Lion International rules state males only.

A spokesman for the Lion's women's auxiliary in Oakbrook, Ill., said she expected the new woman member in the former men's only group might incite much "discussion" between the main office and the Portland club. "We don't have lady Lions," said the Lioness.

Duchess of Windsor celebrates 85 years

PARIS (UPI) — The duchess of Windsor quietly celebrated her 85th birthday Friday.

She passed the day in the mansion where she has been living in virtual seclusion for the past four years since her divorce.

"She received lots of flowers and some gifts from her most intimate friends," a close friend of the duchess said. "But there were no visits from friends and no calls to her house. She has received — from Buckingham Palace."

The late King Edward VIII gave up the English throne to marry the American divorcee. Friends say she never recovered from the death of her husband from throat cancer in 1972.

It was in 1936 that the King gave up his throne after less than a year to marry "the woman I love," as he described the three-married Mrs. Wallis Simpson in his abdication broadcast.

The couple met at a London dinner party in 1930, where the Mrs. Simpson was seated next to the prince of Wales.

"That was how it all began," the duchess recalled years later in her memoirs. "I had no idea at the time that the terrible conclusion of which I had not and could not have the slightest intimation."

For the last nine years, the Duchess has been living in her mansion on the edge of Boulogne Wood near Paris.

Birthday party quiet for Anastasia

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (UPI) — A woman who claims she is Anastasia, the last grand duchess of Russia, celebrated her 80th birthday Thursday at her home with about 75 guests.

Usually a recluse, Anastasia Manahan is the wife of retired University of Virginia history professor Jack Manahan.

Mrs. Manahan's claim has been doubted since she first made it in the 1920s. She has consistently maintained that she is the only survivor of the Russian royal family that was executed in the July 1918 Bolshevik revolution.

She moved the Charlottesville in 1968 to marry Manahan and has lived in virtual seclusion ever since.

100-year-old Oregon woman celebrates with elephant ride

WINSTON, Ore. (UPI) — Nina Rust celebrated her 100th birthday riding on the back of an elephant.

Asked if she wanted to go around one more time Thursday on the 10-year-old elephant at Wildlife Safari she said, "No. Not until next year. It is a bit bumpy."

The staff at the safari, a large enclosure for a variety of wild animals, provided cake and a plaque to Mrs. Rust, who first rode an elephant at the site last year on her 99th birthday.

Mrs. Rust added another "first" to her list this year, however. She was recently taken as a birthday gift on a flight over the southwest Oregon area by Roseburg Skyways for her first airplane ride.

U.S. was told Iraq could build nukes

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The State Department was told last year that the Iraqi atomic reactor that Israel destroyed was geared to produce nuclear weapons.

Roger Richter, an International Atomic Energy Agency inspector who resigned from the IAEA Tuesday in order to appear before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, testified he warned the State Department last year that Iraq is embarked on a nuclear weapons program at facilities closed to IAEA inspectors.

"I believe the Iraq nuclear program was organized for the purpose of developing a capability to produce nuclear weapons over the next several years," Richter said in his testimony.

Richter said outside the hearing that the facility was nearly completed when the Israelis bombed it June 7 and, once in full production, it could have given Iraq weapons-grade plutonium before the mid-1980s. "IAEA is incapable of safeguarding a facility of this type under the present safeguards approach," he testified. "There is no question that Iraq would be able to divert material from this reactor and reprocess it (into weapons-grade material) at the unsecured facilities supplied by Italy."

Richter and other nuclear scientists appeared before the Senate committee in its second day of hearings on whether the Israeli raid was defensive or offensive. Under its arms agreement with Washington, Israel may use American weapons only for defensive purposes.

Physicists Robert Seldon and Herbert Kouts agreed that Iraq's destroyed reactor could have produced weapons-grade plutonium.

But both said the Iraq's French-built reactor is not the best type for a nation seeking nuclear weapons.

"It's not that they didn't want to get the best system possible," Richter said. "It's just that they couldn't get it."

Richter was the only American inspector at the Vienna-based IAEA's Middle East and South Asia bureau. He said Iraq never allowed him to visit the site but opened it only to Soviet and Hungarian inspectors.

NRC briefed Israel on attack

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Nuclear Regulatory Commission specialists briefed two Israeli engineers eight months ago on the ability of heavy bombs to damage atomic reactors.

At the time, they suspected the Israelis might be planning an attack, it was disclosed Friday.

NRC spokesman Frank Ingram said that in requesting the meeting with NRC structure specialists last October, the Israeli Embassy implied that Israel was worried about the possibility of a nuclear reactor attack.

Ingram said the meeting was held at the NRC's Office of International Programs, where it remained until the week after the Israeli bombed Iraq's experimental atomic facility outside Baghdad, Ingram said.

Habib makes one last try to stop war

JEDDAH, Saudi Arabia (UPI) — U.S. envoy Philip Habib flew to Saudi Arabia Friday, still doggedly searching for a solution to the Lebanese missile crisis.

But there were signs that Israel's patience with his peace mission had just about worn out.

However, diplomatic observers hoped that, with the U.N. Security Council debate on the Israeli raid against an Iraqi nuclear reactor out of the way, Habib's mission might begin to inch forward.

While the missile crisis marked time as the Arabs awaited the outcome of the council debate, Habib conferred in Israel with Prime Minister Menachem Begin and later with Israeli opposition leader Shimon Peres.

Peres appeared to be more willing than Begin to give Habib more time, saying "the diplomatic process should be tried."

Begin told reporters Thursday he had not put any deadline on Habib's mission. But at the same time he warned the crisis "cannot go on indefinitely," and declared that "if the diplomatic way does not bring positive results, we will not mince words, we will use the military means in order to get rid of those missiles."

Bani-Sadr's critics open final attacks

ANKARA, Turkey (UPI) — Moving in for the kill, Iran's fundamentalist clerics stepped up their attacks on President Abolhasan Bani-Sadr Friday.

He was denounced as a liar, a political "incompetent" and a "disgrace" to Islam.

Forced to flee his home and office and go into hiding to protect his life, Bani-Sadr's whereabouts are not known.

Rumors circulated that he might have evaded guards alerted to detain him at the border and fled to Turkey. Other unconfirmed reports said he was hiding at an air force base near his home town of Hamedan in western Iran.

Turkish Foreign Ministry officials said they had no knowledge of the fugitive president's whereabouts since he dropped out of sight Tuesday.

The Majlis, Iran's parliament, was preparing to resume a debate Saturday expected to lead to Bani-Sadr's impeachment.

In addition to impeachment, Bani-Sadr also faced a set of nebulous legal charges that could bring him before the trial bench of the man who is also his chief accuser and most implacable foe — chief court justice Ayatollah Mohammad Beheshti.

Asian states criticize Haig

MANILA, Philippines (UPI) — Secretary of State Alexander Haig's efforts to forge an anti-Soviet consensus in Asia ran into criticism Friday.

Several allies cautioned against a hasty expansion of U.S. military aid to China.

Haig, in Manila for a conference of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN), was pushing the view that all Asian nations including China should unite against what the Reagan Administration sees as a Soviet threat.

But some of the ASEAN officials were critical of the United States for not consulting with its allies before making the important decision to sell China arms and high technology items.

Indonesian Foreign Minister Mochtar Kusumadimadja told reporters the prospect of China buying advanced arms from the United States "made his nation uneasy."

Legislator's award fleeces bad lobbying

BOISE (UPI) — State Rep. Peggy Bunting awarded her Golden Fleece Award for "Bad Lobbying" to the Idaho Freedom to Work Committee Friday.

While Mrs. Bunting gave the group representing Idaho's municipalities a high grade of 8 on a 1-10 scale of measuring successful lobbying, she attacked the right-to-work organization, saying other lobbyists should take care not to alienate lawmakers by using the same techniques.

"The Idaho Freedom to Work Committee has the poorest presentation of any issue that's ever come before me in my tenure in office," she said, adding that her discussion of the lobbying techniques was not related to the merits of the group's backing legislative designed to eliminate mandatory union membership as a condition of employment.

When legislators don't support the group's plan, she said, they receive threats from the organization's leaders, saying "we'll keep your constituents well informed that you do not agree with our position," she said.

Mrs. Bunting, Sen. Mike Mitchell, D-Lewiston, and Rep. Michael Gwartzney, R-Boise, appeared on a panel concerning relations between lawmakers and city officials along with Idaho Falls Mayor Tom Campbell, Nampa Councilwoman Marguerite Brown and Engle Mayor Jerry Deckard.

Police investigate chase deaths

BOISE (UPI) — Boise Police said Friday a motorcyclist killed when his cycle crashed into the side of a police car was wanted in at least three states.

Police Lt. Richard Maus said the cyclist had been identified as Thomas Allan Torres, 30, Concord, Calif.

The crash also killed a prisoner in the police car. Truman Romans, 27, Boise, and seriously injured Patrolman William Kirkpatrick, who was in stable condition at a Boise hospital.

Police are investigating the actions of Kirkpatrick who stopped his patrol car in the path of a fleeing motorcyclist early Thursday shortly before a collision.

The 12:30 a.m. accident at the intersection of Chinden Boulevard and 36th Street followed a chase at speeds between 70 and 90 mph through Garden City, acting Police Chief Vern Bisterfeld said.

At a news conference held to announce the investigation, Bisterfeld was asked if he could say Patrolman William Kirkpatrick acted "prudently" in trying to intercept the cycle with a patrol car with a prisoner inside.

"I don't believe I could," Bisterfeld replied. Reporters asked Bisterfeld if he would have acted as Kirkpatrick did in the same situation.

"I would say, as a rational individual, it was not that particular matter," Bisterfeld said.

Romans had been picked up minutes earlier after a sobriety check. The accident also sent Kirkpatrick, 27, to the intensive care unit at St. Alphonsus Hospital in Boise with head and internal injuries and broken ribs.

The results of the department's internal investigation will be turned over to the city attorney's office, Bisterfeld said. He said he wants to complete the investigation by early next week. If the investigation de-

Syphilis cases increase in south Idaho

CALDWELL (UPI) — A syphilis epidemic in the south Idaho area has spread through Canyon and Owyhee counties and as far east as Idaho Falls, Southwest District Health Department officials say.

Twelve cases of syphilis have been diagnosed in the past month, eight of those in Canyon and Owyhee counties, said Jim Faust, SWDH public health educator. Two cases have been found in Idaho Falls, one in Challis and one in Ontario.

The number of people who may have had sexual contact with the infected persons "is pretty mind-boggling; it runs into the hundreds," Faust said. He said several assistants, including a Spanish language translator, have been combing through ranches and bars of southern Canyon and Owyhee counties, tracking down those who might be infected with the potentially fatal disease.

The outbreak is the largest ever in the county, SWDH Director—one of the largest in Idaho, Faust said.

The first SWDH cases discovered doubles the number reported last year and is nearly half the number of syphilis cases reported in the state so far this year. Many of those with syphilis also have contracted gonorrhea.

The health department became aware of the outbreak about the fourth week of May and held a VD clinic on a Malba-area ranch June 12 where 12 persons were examined and two cases diagnosed, Faust said.

Symms, McClure protest strike

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In reference to a threatened air controller strike, Idaho Sen. Steve Symms said Friday he was "shocked that a group of federal employees would show such a complete disregard for the well-being of the country."

He urged President Reagan to adopt a firm stance against the threatened strike by the Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization.

"At a time when so many hard working, taxpaying citizens are foregoing wage hikes and, in some cases, taking pay cuts to keep their businesses open, the PATCO demands are way out of line," Symms said.

Idaho Sen. James McClure said the safety of the public "cannot be held hostage to the special interests of the air traffic controllers. There's much more at stake here than a labor dispute."

The Republican said the resolution urges the president to seek a permanent injunction against the strike, request large penalties against the union treasury and against union officials for violations of the injunction.

Accident victim dies

MOUNTAIN HOME, Idaho (UPI) — A 25-year-old airman from Mountain Home Air Force Base was killed Thursday when the car he was driving left Simco Road about 20 miles west of Mountain Home and rolled over.

Elmore County Deputy Sheriff Dana Ross said Michael Launkkila, a native of Tampa, Fla., was dead when he arrived at the crash scene at 4:01 p.m.

The reason for the crash was not known.

A passenger in the car, Kevin Tucker, was taken to the base hospital by Elmore County Deputy Sheriff Glen Parsons but was not seriously injured.

Anti-crime group meets

BOISE (UPI) — Crime prevention officers from throughout Idaho will gather in Boise next week to create a statewide association, L.G. Hopkins, head of the Idaho Crime Prevention Office, announced Friday.

"The officers coming to this meeting have long discussed the need for a statewide association of crime prevention practitioners," Hopkins said.

The session will be held Monday through Wednesday.

Man given 10-year sentence for lewd, lascivious conduct

By MARTY TRILLHAASE
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A 33-year-old Twin Falls man received a maximum 10-year prison sentence Friday for committing lewd and lascivious conduct with a 14-year-old girl. Clifford Kay's conviction Feb. 20 by a 12-member jury means the defendant will immediately go to prison while his lawyer prepares an appeal before the Idaho Supreme Court.

Under a new state law, defendants sentenced to more than five years in prison cannot be freed pending an appeal.

Kay will be eligible for parole after serving almost a third of his sentence. Prosecutors charged Kay with attacking the girl on Aug. 1, 1979.

The sentence imposed by 5th District Court Judge Theron Ward received a lukewarm response from the father of the victim. "Justice was a long time in coming and (the sentence) was about 50 percent what it should have been," the father said. "I was real satisfied with the prosecutor but it just took too long."

Kay's lawyer, James May, called several witnesses Friday in an attempt to win a lenient sentence. Among the witnesses were members of Kay's family, a co-worker and lawyer Monte Carlson, who represented the defendant in a prior criminal matter.

May asked Ward to commit Kay to the North Idaho Correctional Institute at Coeur d'Alene, which would have placed the defendant in custody for four months and then on a probation. The lawyer argued Kay and his family already had been punished by publicity surrounding the case.

May added Kay's family would suffer if deprived of his income, saying, "I would submit that this family will be destroyed if he's sent away."

Twin Falls County Deputy Prosecutor Jim Meservy argued for a stiff sentence in view of the seriousness of the offense.

"I think to put someone on a straight probation or a 120-day ride would, in the public's eyes, diminish the seriousness of the crime," Meservy said.

In other cases, Ward ordered a suspended five-year prison sentence for violating his probation. Thomas Trevino, 29, pleaded guilty May 23, 1980, to aggravated assault. He was placed on a two-year probation after serving four months at the state penitentiary.

Idaho Bureau of Probation and Parole officials charged Trevino was involved in an altercation at a bar, consumed alcoholic beverages, carrying a concealed weapon and not making restitution.

Ward also ordered Jay D. Brown, 19, of Twin Falls, to spend four months at the Cottonwood facility in lieu of a suspended 15-year prison sentence for first-degree burglary. He will be eligible for probation at the end of the 120-day term.

Ricky Lee Chilton, 19, of Twin Falls, was placed on probation in lieu of a "year and a day" sentence for burglarizing a Twin Falls supermarket in May.

As part of his probation, Chilton has agreed to pay roughly $1,500 in restitution.

Tim Smith of Twin Falls pleaded guilty to delivery of a controlled substance at the Cottonwood facility a presentence investigation. Smith is free on $2,500 bond pending sentencing. He faces a maximum 15-year prison sentence for selling a pound of marijuana, valued at $575, to state seasonal jobs in March 1980. He originally pleaded not guilty to the charge Feb. 6.

Allowed in some rural areas

Officials OK mobile home ruling

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls County Commissioners Friday approved a measure allowing mobile homes in some rural areas of the county.

The commissioners also approved measures that will eliminate refunds on expired building permits and prohibit the dumping of materials into canyons in the county.

The three-member commission unanimously approved the moves. Public hearings on the issues had preceded the sessions. The commission's decision will become effective after notice is published early next month.

The vote to allow mobile homes in areas of the county zoned for residential-agricultural use applies only to areas surrounding cities without areas of impact.

The issue, first endorsed by the Twin Falls County Planning and Zoning Commission in 1979, had not been finalized until it became clear some cities would not adopt areas of impact, Zoning Administrator Ed Woods said.

Cities which do not have areas of impact include Buhl, Filer, Hansen, Murtough and Hollister, although some are in the process of adopting impact areas.

Commissioners said they approved the proposal because economic conditions were leading families to consider mobile home purchases. They added government regulations make mobile homes as structurally sound as a conventional house.

"There is definitely a place for mobile homes in Twin Falls County because of the high interest rates that are prevalent today," Commissioner Merl Leonard said.

Commissioners also moved to prohibit the dumping of materials into the canyons, a move which made a long-standing county policy official, Leonard said.

Exceptions to the policy may be allowed if permission is obtained from the Bureau of Land Management or from the owner of the affected property.

Commissioners justified prohibiting refunds on building permits which lapse if construction is not commenced within 180 days, saying the county still spends funds to process the permits.

Although the county's uniform building code prohibits such refunds, the county zoning office has not been following the code in the past, paying up to $1,000, Woods said.

Commissioners also moved to clarify language in its mobile home location permit policy, ruling out refunds if the location is not commenced within 180 days.

Sun Valley Co. makes plans

Baldy to get new snow-makers

SUN VALLEY — Sun Valley Co. executives Friday announced a plan to expand snow-making facilities on Bald Mountain.

Sun Valley General Manager Wally Huffman described a two-fold objective for the new snow-making machinery: Huffman said the equipment is aimed first of lengthening the ski season.

With typical fall temperatures, Huffman said, consistent Thanksgiving openings could probably be achieved.

Providing continuing good skiing in high use areas was the second objective in installing the equipment, Huffman said. Mountain crews now transport snow to replace snow worn out by heavy traffic on some parts of the mountain. The new equipment should reduce that need and free crews to do a more extensive job grooming the runs, Huffman said.

Next fall will see snow-making for the first time on mid and lower River runs, Roundhouse Lane, Gutwoser Lane, and Meadow Hill. All these runs are on the River Run (east facing) side of Bald Mountain. Previous snow-making efforts were confined to the Warm Springs (north facing) slopes. The new equipment, estimated to cost $325,000, will add 52 acres of ski run area to the 145 acres already subject to artificial blizzards.

In addition to adding the snow-making equipment, Huffman said Sun Valley plans to pursue an extensive cloud-seeding program next fall. He said he believed cloud seeding had proved helpful in each of the last two seasons.

Several fires reported locally

Fire destroyed a historic barn and about 10 acres of wildlife habitat Thursday at the Idaho Department of Fish and Game-owned Niagara Springs Wildlife Management Area south of Wendell.

And another fire partially destroyed a shed, horse corral and some riding tack on privately-owned land west of Gooding.

Bill Webb, regional fish and game supervisor, said employees were burning brush when a spark ignited dry weeds and a steady breeze swept the Wendell fire into the nearby barn.

He said three trucks and men from the Wendell Fire Department responded to the blaze and contained the fire.

Gooding County Sheriff Robert Aja said the second fire on the Don Gay residence about two miles west of Gooding, caused almost $1,000 damage.

Aja said some horses were in the corral at the time of the fire, but they were removed safely. The cause of the fire was still under investigation.

Fire officials in Twin Falls County also reported several fires Thursday, apparently related to burning involved in seasonal clean-up work.

The Kimberly Fire Department was summoned Thursday morning after sparks from trash burning in a barrel ignited a 2-ton haystack southeast of Twin Falls. Assistant Fire Chief Dave Vawser said the hay was destroyed.

Twin Falls Fire Department officials said they responded to three grass fires, all minor.

Illegal-alien suspect pleads

BOISE — One of 10 Idahoans recently indicted for transporting illegal aliens pleaded guilty Friday to a reduced charge.

After entering his plea in U.S. District Court in Boise, Matthew M. Wissel, 23, of Mountain Home, was fined $250.

U.S. Attorney Karl Shurtliff said Wissel's charge was reduced from a felony to a misdemeanor after he agreed to plead guilty to the lesser offense.

Wissel was originally accused of transporting an illegal alien from Boise to Mountain Home.

The lesser count was for aiding and abetting a known illegal alien. The maximum penalty was three months in jail and a $250 fine.

During March 28 through 31, Wissel assisted Jesus Larios, also known as Jesus Zavala, whom Wissel knew to be an illegal alien from Mexico, to prevent his apprehension by Immigration and Naturalization Service officers, according to court documents.

Trout farm hearing Monday

TWIN FALLS — Debate on a trout farm proposed for Billingsley Creek near Hagerman begins Monday with a second round of hearings in Twin Falls.

Opponents to the Troutco Inc. application for water diversion will present testimony Monday and Tuesday before Kenneth-Dunn, Idaho Department of Water Resources director.

Witnesses called on behalf of Troutco were interviewed during two days of hearings in early May.

Monday's session is tentatively scheduled to begin at 9 a.m. at the Shields Building on the College of Southern Idaho campus.

Neighboring property owners to the Troutco site claim water quality and property values will be significantly harmed by another trout farm on Billingsley Creek. Troutco members say their proposal will not alter water quality and will change a long-time gravel pit into a landscaped hatchery.

Local students sweating it out for scarce summer jobs

TWIN FALLS — Summer job hunting is meeting with little success for many Magic Valley college and high school students this year. Department of Employment officials say.

Craig Hobbey, labor market analyst for department office in Twin Falls, said his records currently show about 400 student applications on hand locally with only about 100 placements since schools closed.

"I tell the young men and women that we will help them all we can, but they had better get out and pound the pavement door-to-door if they want to get a job," Hobbey said.

He said there are fewer jobs available this year through state, city, and federal agencies that normally employ temporary summer help. All appear to be cutting back under tight economic conditions, he said.

"There is less money so there are less jobs. The CETA program has been cut, but at this point we aren't sure what the (Congress) is going to do so we are accepting fewer young men and women into the program.

The same is true with the Young Adult Conservation Corps," Hobbey said.

The state has closed some parks, eliminating summer maintenance and administration needs, he said. Nearly all other agencies face funding cuts and as a result there are fewer Bureau of Land Management, Forest Service and even home town recreation jobs available.

Hobbey said there are still about the same number of seasonal farm jobs but these, too, are not very plentiful in listings with his office.

More automation has cut down the irrigation pipe moving jobs, Hobbey said, although there are always some available. Student workers are still pretty choosy and usually stay only a few days on many farm jobs.

"It's either too hot, too windy or the work is difficult and not to their liking," Hobbey said.

Typical of the federal agency job situation is that of the Bureau of Land Management District in Shoshone. Personnel Clerk Carlotta Oneida said the district employs 63 summer workers this year while in other years as many as 100 young students have been working out of Shoshone. The 63 were hired from about 300 applicants, she said. This year there were fewer applicants, mainly because of a new system of working with duplications in application files. The jobs are open to anyone 18 years of age and older. Like the Forest Service jobs, many involve fire fighting, but there are also wildlife assistants, range technicians, biologists, archaeologists and outdoor recreation planners hired on a temporary basis each summer. Oneida said. Joe Berry, Sawtooth National Forest personnel director in Twin Falls, said hiring by his agency is definitely down this year. He said about 150 students are working in seasonal jobs on the Sawtooth this year, including fire fighting, recreation and all other summer positions.

Berry said he does not have a comparison for previous years but he knows there are normally more than 150 students on the summer payroll.

Baseball talks termed charade by mediator

NEW YORK (UPI) — Player and club owner representatives, looking to end the worst strike in baseball history, broke off negotiations after less than 90 minutes Friday with the federal mediator calling the talks a "charade."

Federal mediator Kenneth Moffett said after the talks ended around 4:20 p.m. EDT that no further negotiations would be scheduled until he had some indication there would be movement by either side. He did not anticipate such a meeting during the weekend.

The walkout has lasted eight days and has canceled 100 games. In 1972 the strike lasted 13 days but wiped just 86 games.

"There's no point in this charade," said Moffett. "I had some indication that there would be movement today but obviously that's through it is absolutely useless to try to keep the two sides' representatives together if there is nothing to talk about."

Bob Boone, the Philadelphia Phillies catcher who has been active in attempts to settle the problematic free agent compensation issue for six months, said the two sides did meet face-to-face, something that had not done in the previous session Wednesday. But he also called the meeting futile.

"Unless they have something to offer, coming up here every day and putting on a charade that something is happening is fruitless," Boone said. "We have to have some assurance there will be something substantial on the table."

Several players said after the third brief and unproductive session of the week that the strike, which began June 12, was staged and planned by the owners.

"We feel this whole situation of being on strike has been orchestrated and organized by the owners," said Boone's spokesman Mark Belanger. "We have made numerous opportunities to address the stated objectives (of the owners) and they have all been turned down."

"The proposal they put on the table 18 months ago is still on the table. We rejected it then and we reject it now and until it is removed we are on strike."

Even Tom Seaver, the Cincinnati pitcher who has shied away from making any statements, criticized the owners' chief negotiator, Ray Grebey.

"The position Ray Grebey has taken is absolutely destructive," Seaver said. "We go up there and sit down and then find out he has nothing to say leads me to believe the strike was forced, was planned by the owners. The fact that they bought strike insurance aids that view. It's a destructive, very disturbing situation to have take place."

"If they are trying to 'alienate' the players, they are certainly doing a good job of it. But they are dealing with competitive people here."

"No matter how much they say they don't want a strike and they are not trying to break up the Players' Association," added Rusty Staub of the New York Mets.

"It certainly doesn't look that way. They knew this was a strike issue."

Grebey, who criticized the media for harping on rumors of a rift among the owners, said he will return to the negotiations when he is asked.

"It's unfortunate that the strike continues," said Grebey. "We have a difficult issue to deal with. We'll be back at the table when Ken Moffett call us back."

In the brief encounter between the two sides, Boone said the players asked the owners' representatives if they had any questions or comments on the latest proposal, one involving a "pool concept" for free-agent compensation presented last week by the players.

"Once again we asked if they had any problems or questions with our proposal or anything else to put forward," he said. "The answer was 'no, we have nothing,' so we decided 'until' we have something forthcoming from them there will be no further talks."

Burns battles through gathering gloom to nab Open lead

ARDMORE, Pa. (UPI) — Big George Burns, finishing in the twilight, overtook the field with seven birdies for a 4-under-par 66 Friday that gave him a one-shot lead after the second round of the U.S. Open.

Following an opening round of 69, Burns was left with just one stroke in front of Australian David Graham and two in front of Jack Nicklaus and Tommy Valentine.

"I've never played good in this tournament and I don't know what to expect," said Burns, who has made 24 birdies in his last four rounds since changing putters. "All I can do is go out and try to catch the feeling I've had the last two days and not make any mistakes."

"I've kept the ball out of trouble the last two days and I've had no calamities."

Graham, who left the tour because of fatigue a month ago, saved a fuke par on the final hole to shoot his second successive 68, a score, matched by Nicklaus, the defending champion in quest of a record fifth Open championship.

Nicklaus could have had a share of the lead except for a double bogey on the 16th hole.

"I played as well as I can except for one shot at 16," said Nicklaus, who put a crick in his ball with a feeble 4-iron attempt from the rough that traveled only 20 yards. "A 68 is a good round. I'm in pretty good position and have nothing to complain about."

Greg Norman, another Australian whom Graham said "has all the potential to become the finest golfer in the world," sank birdie putts of 18 and 20 feet on the front nine en route to a 67 that put him in a tie for fourth place at 138 with John Cook, Bill Rogers and Bill Kratzert.

Cook suffered his only bogey in two days on the final hole, leaving him at 70 while Rogers wound up with a 68 when he double bogeyed the 18th. Kratzert shot 69.

Tom Watson, the Player of the Year for the last four years, was in strong contention following a 69 that put him in a group at 139, four shots off the pace.

Graham, the 1979 PGA champion, bogeyed the third hole but then picked up four birdies with putts ranging from 6 to 15 feet before getting another bogey on No. 17. His big effort of the day, though, came on the 18th when he hooked his drive into the left rough, barely three feet within the out-of-bounds mark, but managed to save par.

"I didn't feel well for 2 or 3 weeks before the Memorial," said Graham, who won the Phoenix Open this year but has missed the cut six times in 14 starts. "Had I not been the defending champion I would have withdrawn. I had a shortage of potassium and had no energy."

Valentine, who lost in a playoff to Watson at the Atlanta Classic two weeks ago, and whose primary goal here is to finish high enough to qualify for the Masters, sank a 25-foot birdie putt on the 10th hole and then managed to avoid trouble on the wickedly difficult, closing holes of the 6,544-yard Merion Golf Club for a 66.

Watson, still seeking his first Open championship, was joined at 139 by opening round leader Jim Thorpe (73), Jim Schroeder (68), 1976 Open champion Jerry Pate (69), Scott Simpson (67), Lanny Wadkins (68) and Jack Renner (71).

Watson was 3-under after sinking a 12-foot birdie putt on the 13th hole, and envisioned a big round for himself, but he then bogeyed Nos. 14 and 16.

"I'm playing better now than I did in Atlanta (where he won two weeks ago)." I'm excited about my chances in the next two days," said Watson, who despite his great PGA success has never won an Open, after his 1-under par 69 put him at 139 overall and among the leaders.

"My round was much better than yesterday's," Watson said. "I started off well. I played more aggressively. I hit more drivers, hit the ball where I wanted to. I hit some good iron shots."

and, generally, I was happy with the way I was hitting the ball."

"My confidence is better than yesterday's (too). Yesterday it was 'shaky.'"

Watson said Thursday only the luck of his lies in the rough had allowed him to finish at even-par since he had missed six of the 18 fairways.

Friday, fortune ignored Watson, forcing him to rely on his considerable skills.

He managed quite well without it for two-thirds of the round, sinking a 12-foot birdie putt at No. 13 to put him 3-under for the round.

Thorpe, after his 66 Thursday, had trouble sleeping, waking up at 6 in the morning, and said he was satisfied with his 73 given the blowing winds and hard greens at Merion.

Schroeder, who had to qualify to play in the Open, thought he had enough problems after blowing putts of 3 and 5 feet for bogeys on the final two holes, but then was told by USGA official P.J. Bestwright that he and playing partner Forrest Fezler were being penalized two strokes for slow play.

But Schroeder and Fezler, who had a 72 for 142, appealed, and for the first time ever the USGA Rules Committee rescinded the severe penalty.

California amateur Joe Ransett pushed his second consecutive 70 to tie at 140 with 1973 Open champion Johnny Miller (71), Jim Colbert (69) and Lon Hinkle (71).

Lee Trevino, who won the Open when it was last played at Merion in 1971, skied to a 76 and missed the cut with his 149. Also out were Gil Morgan, John Mahaffey and Ed Sneed, all at 148.

J.C. Sneed, who had started the day a shot behind, Thorpe, suffered a quadruple bogey on No. 16 to sink to 77-144.

Watson excited about final two days of play

ARDMORE, Pa. (UPI) — Tom Watson says his play Friday in the second round of the U.S. Open was much better than the one-stroke improvement over his first-round score would indicate.

"I'm excited about my chances in the next two days," said Watson, who despite his great PGA success has never won an Open, after his 1-under par 69 put him at 139 overall and among the leaders.

Paul denies owners trying to break union

CLEVELAND (UPI) — Cleveland Indians President Gabe Paul Friday denied baseball owners are trying to break the players' union, but said the owners are determined to win compensation for free agents.

"Some people think the owners are out to break the players' union. That's nonsense," Paul said. "I can't believe some of the players are gullible enough to swallow that one. There will always be a players' union."

But Paul told a City Club luncheon owners will stand united against the current free agent system, which he said has created unfair competition.

"There is a very solid front. The clubs are going to stand up and be counted," Paul said as the strike by members of the Major League Players Association swung through its eighth day.

GABE PAUL calls owners unified

Paul actually was pinch-hitting for players' union representative Marvin Miller, who was forced by the strike to cancel his scheduled appearance at the club's weekly forum.

The Indians president made it clear, however, that he and Miller are on opposite sides of the bargaining table.

"Your must give Miller a lot of credit," said Paul. "He's done a lot for the players, but he's gone to far."

NBA Pacers available for 'right' price

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — The general manager of the Indiana Pacers said Friday the team is for sale but denied owner Sam Nassi wanted to move the NBA club to another city.

"Bob Salyers, general manager and team counsel, told a hastily staged news conference. "There are absolutely no plans to move the Indiana Pacers to another city at any point in time as long as Sam Nassi owns it."

But Salyers did say Nassi has confirmed that "for the right price the Indiana Pacers are for sale."

The Indianapolis News said Friday Nassi indicated if he couldn't find a buyer in Indianapolis he was willing to move the team and sell it. Nassi complained he lost $3 million in the two years since he bought the team.

Salyers said the Pacers would remain in Indianapolis for the 1981-82 season regardless of who owns the franchise and said the possibility of leaving Indianapolis at any time in the future is slim.

"The Pacers have eight years remaining on a 10-year lease with Market Square Arena," Salyers said, noting that a franchise transfer requires approval of three-fourths of the NBA club owners.

Salyers said Nassi's financial disappointment with the Indianapolis operation is based on past performance and not with ticket sales for the upcoming season.

The Pacers announced price increases of $2 to $5 a ticket for the coming season and there had been reports that sales had been slow, Salyers said.

As for the pressure, he said, "I'd tend to be lying if I didn't say I was a little edge, leading a prestigious tournament like the U.S. Open."

Leonard said the fight would end before round 13 but trainer Angelo Dundee disagreed.

"Kalute looks like a banger but he isn't. He'll beat on you steadily but not for a knockout. He'll be around at the end," Dundee said.

Kalute, a Ugandan living in Denmark, is 36-0 and has never been knocked down. He is expected to have a slight weight advantage.

The Pacers made the NBA playoffs last season for the first time. In the old American Basketball Association they won three championships.

"The discouraging thing is we turned it around, and we didn't make money," Nassi said. "Even if we went on to win the world championship, we still would have suffered tremendous losses. You have to come to a point where you make money."

"Kalute comes in here and he quietly goes to work," said Arum. "He started working out hard three months before the fight. He pays good money to bring in the best sparring partners. He's working on his body punching. The fight will go the same way, slowly but surely, that body punching will pay off."

Arum said Leonard "comes to the training session to put on a show, sign some autographs."

Leonard doesn't fear weight increase

HOUSTON (UPI) — Sugar Ray Leonard, preparing for next Thursday's WBA junior middleweight bout against Ayub Kalute, says he will have no problems moving to a higher-weight class.

Leonard, who has been going through quick, brisk pickup workouts, says his weight is down to 152, a drop of four pounds from late last week.

He claimed it is easy for him to go from the 147-pound junior-weight class, his usual division, to the 154-pound junior-middleweight limit for this fight and back to 147 for a mid-September bout against Thomas Hearns.

Leonard said the fight would end before round 13 but trainer Angelo Dundee disagreed.

At a news conference Wednesday, Leonard dismissed talk that his hands hurt, pounding his right fist on a table for emphasis.

Brown wins golf title with late charge

TWIN FALLS — In a familiar script with the same finish, Twin Falls' Karen Brown exploded for her third straight Times-News Magic Valley Women's Golf Championship Friday.

Again Brown made her move on the final nine to overhaul Lori Vegwert of Burley and notoriety simuna Robinson of Twin Falls. She won the title by five shots, making the fact she was down four strokes with 10 to play even more impressive.

Brown simply went on a birdie binge. She was four under women's par with 33 on the final nine.

For a Vegwert it was another tournament of frustration, marking the third time Brown has overtaken her coming to the wire.

It appeared that Vegwert might have things well in hand when Brown posted a rare triple bogey on the eighth hole. That gave the Weber State team member a four-stroke lead.

The comeback began almost immediately, although Vegwert gave it unexpected impetus when she missed a short putt and settled for a bogey on No. 9. Brown picked up another stroke on 10 and then evened things up with birdies on Nos. 11 and 13.

She took the lead with a par on the three-par 14th when both chipped short but Brown got her putt down. On 15 Brown knocked her approach shot to within three feet for a birdie while Vegwert's second shot ran over the green and she had to take a five.

If Brown wondered if she could hold the lead over the final three holes, the golfing gods answered her question on 16. She pushed her drive into the right tree line which also defines an in-course out-of-bounds boundary. But the ball hit a branch well up one tree and rebounded back into the fairway.

"Hey, my first break," the champ-to-be said.

It was almost too much as Brown then chipped to within four feet for another possible birdie but this time she had to settle for par.

Nether Vegwert nor Brown was willing to concede the triple bogey on No. 8 might have been a turning point. "Not unless it just made me mad," said Brown, asked if that had perked her concentration up. "My second shot was to the right of the green and I had to get over the trap with my third shot. I didn't and I had to take an eight."

Asked if the sudden four-stroke lead may have caused her to relax prematurely, Vegwert smiled. "Maybe, but I think it just woke her up."

Vegwert said she definitely knew the handwriting was on the wall when Brown's drive on No. 16 stayed in bounds.

"At first I thought 'hey, maybe I can get back in this thing,'" she said with a smile. "Then I thought 'no, it's going to hit something and come back in.' Sure enough. Then I knew I had to finish something like birdie, birdie, eagle to maybe just get a tie."

Vegwert said she didn't feel any added pressure going into the final nine holes. "It just seems like I tend to lose my concentration or something," she said.

Robinson capped her best tournament effort ever, had a couple

Lewis jumps wind-aided 28 feet, 7

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI) — Carl Lewis, the 19-year-old star from the University of Houston, posted a wind-aided long jump of 28 feet, 7 3/4 inches in the trials of the Athletics Congress Track and Field Championships Friday — the second longest jump in history under any conditions.

Five weeks ago, Lewis jumped 28-3/4 and that jump, like Briday's, was aided by excessive wind. However, he has accomplished both 28-foot-plus jumps at sea level while Bob Beamon's world mark of 29-2 1/2 was accomplished at mile high Mexico City during the 1968 Olympic Games.

Lewis needed a jump of 36-1 to qualify for Saturday's final. Larry Myricks, the veteran who has beaten Lewis eight times in as many head-to-head competitions, made the qualifying distance on his first try and promptly left the 100-degree plus Hughes Stadium for an air conditioned hotel room.

Lewis fouled on his first try and then got off the 28-7 3/4 on his second attempt, aided by a wind of 4.57. He already has won both the 100 meter dash and the long jump this year in the NCAA indoor and outdoor Championships and should be a take both during the TAC Championships. It would be the first time anyone has accomplished that feat since the immortal Jesse Owens won both events in 1936.

The temperature climbed over the 100 degree mark at Hughes Stadium by midday and those who had the misfortune of running at that point paid a price — some ran from a track that some said was as hot as a pancake griddle. Those who ran a little later did so into the teeth of a stiff breeze. High hurdler Gregory Foster said he had never run into a wind like that "in all my life."

But Foster advanced to the hurdles semifinals later in the program, along with such other favorites in the event as Greg Veatch, Charles Foster, Sam Turner, Larry Cowling and Rod Milburn, the gold medal winner in the event at the 1972 Olympic Games in Munich.

Tom Byers led qualifiers in the 1,500 as Steve Scott, America's premier miler, had the third slowest time of the 12 who survived. The 1,500 final is on Sunday's windup program of the three-day meet.

The meet is sponsored by the Mobil Oil Co.

A familiar hand

South ducks the first spade and wins the second one. He checks for a way to collect nine tricks.

He can attack clubs. If West holds the king, a finesse produces four club tricks plus three hearts and two spades. But if the finesse loses, South can only come to eight.

South can attack diamonds first and finesse against the queen. If West holds that queen, South won't need a club finesse. If East produces the queen, then South can still try the club finesse. He goes down two, but he is trying for game and does not worry about an ace finesse.

So South leads his eight of diamonds and lets it ride. East takes his ace and clears the spades, but South rouses the diamond finesse and scores three diamonds, three hearts, two spades and a club for his nine tricks.

Why did we say this hand appeared in many forms? Suppose that East held the ace-queen of diamonds and West the king of clubs. East could win the trick with diamond with the ace. The unfortunate declarer would take the supposedly proven diamond finesse and go down on a makable contract. (NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.)
