

U.S. suspends Israel military deal

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United States said Friday it will suspend an agreement on strategic cooperation with Israel, retaliating for the Golan Heights annexation.

Officials also will scrap a plan to buy hundreds of millions of dollars worth of defense equipment from Israel.

The Reagan administration acted after joining 14 other nations Thursday night in a unanimous U.N. Security Council vote for a resolution that declared the Israeli annexation null and void and called on Israel to reverse the action.

The moves underlined the administration's concern over the impact of the annexation on Middle East peace negotiations and its anger that Israel acted at a time when international attention was focused on the military crackdown in Poland.

Israeli Ambassador Ephraim Evron called the U.S. moves unjust and said they were a "blow to Syria," which is a surrogate of the Soviet Union. "Israel captured the strategic Golan Heights from Syria in the 1973 Middle East War.

The Security Council action and today's suspension by the administration will not deter Israel from taking whatever action to ensure that the Golan Heights will never again serve as the base for Syrian aggression," Evron said in a statement.

Later, a senior State Department official told reporters U.S. officials had reason to believe Israel was going to use the Polish crisis as a cover to invade southern Lebanon. "Since that time we have expressed our concern to Israel and they have reassured us," said the official.

"We are putting Israel on notice that their actions on the charge that a move on Lebanon was contemplated by a spokesman for Israeli Embassy said, "I totally disagree."

Jewish groups were critical of the administration's actions in response to the Golan annexation.

Jack Spitzer, B'nai B'rith International president, called it "short-sighted," and said, "If it can only weaken America's — and the West's — position in the Middle East."

State Department spokesman Dean Fischer said the United States read to the Israeli Embassy Thursday night a statement saying:

"The Israeli action was taken with no advance notice to us or discussion with us. We are particularly disappointed that the government of Israel took this action just as we were facing a serious political crisis here and only a few weeks after we signed a memorandum of understanding on strategic cooperation.

"The spirit of that agreement obliged each party to take into consideration in its decisions the implications for the broad policy concerns of the other. We do not believe that spirit was upheld in the case of Israel's decision on the Golan."

The suspension means U.S. officials will not meet with the Israelis as scheduled in January to discuss methods of military cooperation under the agreement signed Nov. 30.

Under consideration were the pre-positioning of U.S. military supplies for the Middle East rapid deployment force at Middle East bases and joint naval exercises in the eastern Mediterranean.

In addition, the State Department said the United States "will not for the moment" proceed with the arms sale arrangement worked out this year.

The details had not been worked out, but U.S. officials estimate it would have taken several hundred million dollars off the crushing Israeli defense costs.

The State Department was less clear about what Israel will be required to do for the United States to lift the suspension of military sales and strategic cooperation.

Rewarding years for exiting mayor

BY SUSAN GALLAGHER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Hank Woodall humorously says his achievements as mayor of Twin Falls are as divergent as promoting City Council harmony and helping couples tie the knot.

Woodall, who did not seek re-election in November, has been mayor for the last two of his nine-and-a-half years on council, and he will relinquish his gavel when a successor is announced Jan. 4. The years have been rewarding, he says, "but you can't go on forever."

He became mayor in the wake of council discord, and he says that achieving unity has been the highlight of his two years in the position. Stormy isn't the word for Woodall's tenure as mayor, unlike that of his predecessor who weathered a recall election.

Other council members — who elect the city's mayors under Twin Falls' city-manager form of government — generally agree that Woodall has done a superior job in the lead role and has been an effective conciliator.

"When he took office," recalls one member, "I remember him saying, 'You know, there's no reason we can't enjoy this.'"

"When I came on, people seemed to have confidence in me, and as a result, there has been little or no bickering," Woodall says. "We've had heated arguments, but that's healthy."

A retired oil company executive, Woodall 69, was appointed to council in 1973 and subsequently won election to two four-year terms. He indicates that over the years, and particularly as cities' financial constraints have tightened, his advocacy of some rules has grown.

"People in a city should be able to get whatever services they want at whatever price they're willing to pay, with the approval of a majority vote, obviously," he says. "Not all of our legislators feel the same way."

His disappointments during almost 10 years of participation in local government have been relatively few.

Generally, Woodall says, Twin Falls residents have a favorable impression of city government, and he believes one example is the infrequency with which incumbents are defeated at the polls.

Technical problems at the city's sewage-treatment plant haven't cost City Council any credibility, according

Workers say 56 Poles dead

Coal mine violence reported

By United Press International

Truck drivers reaching the West from the coal fields of southern Poland said Friday Solidarity sources had told them 56 miners were shot and killed and 10 others beaten to death at a coal mine in Katowice province.

Striking workers also seized arms and explosives and threatened to blow up shipyards in the north and coal mines in the south unless the government ends its repressive military rule and releases Solidarity union leader Lech Walesa, travelers said.

But Poland's military rulers, apparently feeling firmly in control, told Poles they could buy Christmas vodka Saturday and warned that only hard work would bring an easing of martial law — a warning that strikes must end.

The latest travelers' accounts, which was not first-hand and could not be independently confirmed, differed from a government report Thursday that seven people had been killed in bloody clashes at Katowice.

The government also said Thursday about 400 people were injured Thursday around the country, most of them in street fighting around the Baltic port of Gdansk.

Workers were on strike at 43 plants, including the Lenin shipyard in Gdansk, and 4,000 workers have been arrested, U.S. government, the State Department said.

"The unsettled situation could continue for several more days," Communist party secretary Stefan Olszowski told Czech newspaper correspondents in Warsaw, according to official Polish television monitored in the West.

Official Warsaw radio reported 39 strikes around the country, including 30 factories in Gdansk.

The government radio meanwhile reported that "a number of weapons" had been seized by troops at the Panica Shipyard in Szczecin on the Baltic coast. The cache included 500 bullets, a grenade launcher, three "home-made" firearms, rubber clubs and metal sticks, Warsaw radio said.

Polish workers occupied a civil defense arms depot in Szczecin Tuesday and threatened to blow up the Warinski shipyard in the Baltic port, said a young Pole who arrived in Ystad, Sweden, by ferry Friday after a 4-day trip through Poland.

"I heard that people were occupying the Warinski shipyard and had arms," said Piotr Plechoczek, a 27-year-old truck driver from the Swedish-based Polish Union Association. "They also took over a civil defense depot, that had arms, and people occupying the shipyard said they will blow it up."

His father, a 61-year-old Gdansk Solidarity leader, said workers had taken canisters of explosive gas and threatened to blow them up.

Two Dutch drivers who identified themselves as Albert Brand and Beert Bos said in Helmsstadt, West Germany, they had been approached by Solidarity union officials when their 124-truck convoy arrived in Katowice Thursday and began unloading food supplies.

"They told us that 10 people had been beaten to death at the mine in Katowice on Wednesday when they refused to go underground on shift," Brand said.

"On Thursday, after they (the workers) had changed their action to a sit-in in the mine, 56 were shot dead by soldiers trying to storm the mine entrance."

"The Solidarity people told us and a priest confirmed that the miners underground are refusing to come up until all the Solidarity leaders who have been arrested are released," Bos said.

Terrorists to put American general on 'trial'

VERONA, Italy (UPI) — Red Brigades terrorists who kidnaped American NATO Brig. Gen. James Dozier said Friday he was being held in a "people's prison."

The terrorists said he would be "submitted to the judgment of the proletariat."

Thousands of police and troops fanned out across northern Italy in a massive manhunt for Dozier who was abducted Thursday night from his apartment in Verona by men disguised as plumbers.

In Washington, President Reagan

angrily called the kidnapers "cowardly bums... who wouldn't have the guts to stand up to anyone in public."

The Defense Department announced later in the day that a six-member "liaison" squad was being dispatched to an unnamed country in Europe to "make contact with appropriate officials as the situation dictates."

"It would be inappropriate to comment further," a statement said.

The Red Brigades issued a communique in a telephone call to the Verona office of the Italian news agency

ANSA, saying Red Brigades extremists from four regions of Italy — Venice, Milan, Rome and Naples — took part in the kidnap operation.

"We claim the kidnaping of the NATO hangman James Dozier. He is confined to a people's prison and will be subjected to the judgment of the proletariat," the Red Brigades said.

The communique says the terrorist organization would shortly issue a "leaflet" explaining why they kidnaped Dozier, 50, and possibly listing demands for his release.

The Red Brigades have put four other kidnap victims "on trial" this year. They also murdered two kidnap victims this year.

Dozier, of Arcadia, Fla., is the top-ranking U.S. officer at the headquarters of NATO's southern Europe land forces command. He was chief of logistics and administration of the integrated Nato Command, including army units from several NATO nations.

The kidnaping, the first of an American or NATO official by the terrorist group, posed a major political problem for Italian authorities.

Ellis-owned companies in court foreclosure proceedings

By MARTY TRILLHAASE
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Southern Idaho Production Credit Association has initiated an $8.6 million foreclosure proceeding against Buhl trout farmer Ken Ellis.

The proceeding is scheduled for a court hearing in Fifth District Court on Monday, when PCA lawyers will ask Judge Daniel Mehl to appoint a receiver to control Ellis's fish stocks. That hearing is scheduled to begin at 10:30 a.m. in the Twin Falls County Judicial Building.

Earlier this year, Ellis was involved in the controversial sale of his Crystal Springs fish hatchery to the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers. The Corps purchased the hatchery for $2.4 million, an amount that the U.S. General Accounting Office later said was three times too much.

PCA's 47-page complaint, filed with the court this week, alleges that Ellis borrowed $7,897,242 from the PCA during the period from March 1, 1976, until Nov. 30 of this year. In addition, the suit alleges that Ellis owes another $688,081 on the borrowed funds.

Submitted to the court were copies of 179 separate loan agreements, promissory notes, corporate resolutions, security agreements, financing statements, deeds of trust and real-estate mortgages.

"The lawsuit further alleges that Ellis lacks the cash to pay the loans and will require further cash advances to preserve and maintain his inventory of frozen and live fish. As such, PCA says it will provide the cash advances only under the condition that a receivership is appointed and that any further loans toward the hatchery operation be granted a top priority for reimbursement.

Named as defendants are firms in which Ellis is either the exclusive owner or the majority stockholder. Among these are Valley Trout Farms Inc., Aqua Life Inc., Farrago Inc. and Caribou Trout Ranch. Also named as defendants are some 35 corporations and individuals who may have claims against Ellis. By naming these parties as defendants, PCA is asking the court to determine the validity and priority of these claims.

In addition to the appointment of a receiver with control to maintain and preserve Ellis's fish stocks, PCA is seeking the following:

- A court judgment against Ellis in the amount of $7,897,242 as principal on the loan and another $688,081 as interest. In addition, the plaintiffs are seeking $160,000 as compensation for their lawyers' fees.
- A judicial foreclosure of all deeds of trust, security agreements and real-estate mortgages. Under such a provision, the court would authorize the sale of the properties. The proceeds of such a sale would be applied in payment of the judgment.

- A judgment holding that Ellis would be liable for any portion of the debt not covered by the proceeds from the sale of his property.

Just how these proceedings could affect a controversial application that Ellis has pending to construct two trout farms on Banbury Springs remained unknown Friday.

Ellis and two Boy Scout leaders filed an application this year to construct hatcheries using water that now supplies a Scout camp on the site, which is owned by the Idaho Power Co.

The filing was protested by adjacent landowners, an irrigation company, Idaho Power and the state Department of Fish and Game. Opponents recently presented a petition containing 387 signatures to the state Department of Water Resources, opposing the plan.

Loren Holmes, the regional director of the DWR, said financial ability is, by law, one of three criteria the department must consider in determining whether to grant water permits.

"One of the showings an applicant has to make is that he has the ability to carry out his plan," Holmes said.

He noted, however, that two other persons were co-applicants in the Banbury Springs water permit case announced recently that it had reached verbal agreement with Ellis to join the proposed project.

Holmes said he might schedule the twice-delayed hearing sometime in January, although he has received an informal request to postpone it again because one of the participants would be out of the area most of the month.

Attorney General warns of Soviet spies in U.S.

By LAURENCE McQUILLAN
New York Daily News

WILLIAM FRENCH SMITH
... a number of spies

WASHINGTON — Attorney General William French Smith charged Friday that a third of all Soviet bloc diplomatic personnel in this country are spies and warned that their numbers are growing rapidly.

Defending an easing of limits imposed on U.S. intelligence agents, Smith said "it is important for the American public to realize that hostile intelligence agents increasingly operate in the United States under a number of guises."

"About one-third of the Soviet bloc personnel in the United States assigned to embassies, consulates and the United Nations or other international organizations are believed to be full-time intelligence officers."

Smith also spoke of the rumored Libyan hit squad as reason for eased intelligence-gathering limits.

"As all of you know from press reports, the threat is real today," Smith said in a speech to the Angeles World Affairs Council.

"Libya's capability of sponsoring an effort to assassinate high U.S. government officials provides a sobering example."

"At a news conference earlier, Smith said the threat posed by foreign intelligence agents and terrorists operating in the United States has posts, he said, they also pose as businessmen, students, scientists, refugees and sometimes as reporters. "The likely number of foreign spies in our country in those guises has increased sharply over the last decade," Smith said.

He warned that "the number ... has grown so much that our FBI counterintelligence agents are greatly outnumbered."

Smith said the administration intends to provide new resources for the intelligence community and endorses increasing its personnel levels.

He also called for amending the Freedom of Information Act "to improve our ability to protect intelligence sources and methods."

Smith complained that the nation's intelligence agencies have lost some of their effectiveness in recent years following public reaction to disclosures of past abuses.

"Intelligence agencies and their employees became cautious and reluctant to do their jobs, and voice concern that cooperation among agencies was discouraged by rigid rules about jurisdiction."

President Reagan recently signed an executive order easing restrictions on the intelligence community, particularly the CIA, which for the first time was given permission to operate domestically as well as overseas in certain cases.

minus 3.1 percent accuracy, he said. The poll found "a majority" approves Reagan's performance on the economy and foreign affairs, though it gave no specific figures.

"Ronald Reagan continues to be seen as a strong and effective leader," the report said. "Over 70 percent of the public considers those to be 'excellent' or 'good' descriptions of the president."

Wirthlin said six out of every 10 Americans said Reagan's economic program would "help" the economy and less than one-third considers his program to be harmful.

"Of paramount importance to most voters is the notion of balancing the budget," Wirthlin said. "In order to do this, voters prefer to see additional cuts in government spending rather than resorting to increased taxes."

Jet loses power over Pacific

HONOLULU (UPI) — An American Airlines 747 that lost power in two of its four engines while over the Pacific Ocean landed safely at Honolulu International Airport Friday afternoon.

The captain of Flight 7 from Dallas radioed an emergency while 900 nautical miles east of Hilo, on the island of Hawaii, after losing the portside engines. The crew was able to restart the No. 2 engine — the one closest to the fuselage — and the decision was made to continue on to Honolulu rather than try an emergency landing in Hilo.

"The flight landed safely and without incident," said an American Airlines spokesman in Honolulu. The passenger count was not available, he said.

The Coast Guard was notified of the plane's problem and dispatched a C130 aircraft to establish communications with the distressed plane and try to assist it if necessary.

The plane landed at 4:07 p.m. MST (7:07 p.m. MST) with emergency equipment standing by alongside the runway.

The Federal Aviation Administration said it will investigate the cause for the engine failures.

U.N. keeps troops in southern Lebanon

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — The United Nations Security Council extended the assignment of the 6,000-troop U.N. buffer force in southern Lebanon for six more months Friday, and two-term Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim stepped down as head of the world

The Security Council declined to authorize an increase in the U.N. Interim Force in Lebanon by 1,000 troops. In private deliberations, the Soviet Union categorically rejected any reinforcement of the force threatening to veto a resolution to this effect, diplomatic sources said.

The vote on the resolution restating the mandate of the force was 13-0, with the abstentions from the Soviet Union and East Germany, citing disagreement over definition of the mandate and financing arrangements.

Lebanon had urged the troop increase to enable the force to stand up to Israeli-supported rightist Christian militias and Palestinian guerrillas in its area.

Israeli Ambassador Yehuda Blum blamed the presence of 25,000 Syrian troops and 15,000 "PLO terrorists" on Lebanese soil for the tension in the area.

After the vote, U.S. Ambassador Charles Lichenstein said UNIFIL "has helped materially to prevent dangerous confrontations" and pledged continued U.S. support for the Lebanese government.

Bidding farewell to his Austrian secretary-general, the General Assembly adjourned Friday until February.

When the world body reconvenes a new U.N. Chief Administrator, Javier Perez de Cuellar of Peru, will take the seat at the assembly's green marble podium.

Unless a new world crisis develops the U.N. Security Council also finished its major business for the year.

GOP poll favors party members

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A new poll commissioned by the Republican Party shows a majority of Americans believe President Reagan is a strong leader and approve of his handling of the economy and foreign affairs.

The poll, which was taken by Reagan pollster Richard Wirthlin for Republican National Chairman Richard Richards, found that 80 percent of the respondents favor additional spending cuts if that is what is needed to balance the budget.

Of particular interest to Republican members of Congress, who were given a copy of the poll earlier this week, was that 56 percent of the respondents said they would be less likely to vote for their representative's reelection if they knew he or she was acting to delay Reagan budget cuts.

The poll also noted public identification with the Republican Party has grown substantially during the past year and a half.

But while it was running almost even with the Democrats a few months ago, the number of voters now saying they are Republicans appears to have leveled off at a point about 8 percent behind the Democrats.

"Contrary to reports of increasing dissatisfaction with the president and his policies, Ronald Reagan remains strongly supported," Wirthlin said in the poll memorandum to Richards.

"His job rating is almost as high now as when he took office; historically — presidential support — erodes sharply during the first year."

In the memo, Wirthlin said he surveyed 1,500 adult Americans by telephone Nov. 7-17. Such random samples generally are within plus or

Farmers hope for better organization in today's rabbit kill

MUD LAKE (UPI) — In a battle equated to wars humans wage against rats in big cities, eastern Idaho farmers Saturday will launch their second round drive to exterminate crop-eating wild rabbits.

Hundreds of club-wielding farmers will flush the burrowing creatures through ditches and across fields toward pens outside of Mud Lake, where some of them will be clubbed to death and others will be prepared for live shipment out of state.

Organizers of the operation predicted Friday that the second rabbit drive would be less chaotic than the initial roundup last Saturday, in which only about 2,000 rabbits were captured and clubbed to death after it was predicted that 15,000 would be slaughtered.

Farmers say the herds of rabbits in the area must be killed because they have ravaged at least $5 million worth of crops and threaten to drive many farmers into financial ruin through further crop consumption. Some of the several thousand rabbits farmers expect to round up Saturday will be shipped live to the South and to a few states elsewhere in the country — while some will be killed at the Mud Lake site and shipped to milk farms in Iowa, where they will be used as feed.

Idaho Farm Bureau Federation spokesman W.F. Whitton, in an address to an agricultural group at Burley this week, said people outside the West asking to have jack rabbits shipped to their regions is like Westerners requesting a shipment of big-city rats.

"The rabbits are in a class like rats," Whitton said. "They're just as destructive as rats in cities."

Whitton said the rabbits don't just eat the crops, they gouge out the roots so the plants can't grow back and farmers must replant their fields.

The roundup, which has been spurred by a once-per-decade rapid expansion of the jack-rabbit population in the West, has been denounced by animal protection groups. But coordinators of the drive said this week that there should be less wild club swinging and confusion this week because the farmers now have some experience and fewer observers will be on hand.

Whitton said Friday said the second round of the rabbit slaughter will be conducted in the method prescribed for the killing of domestic rabbits — with a single blow to the back of the head.

During the first roundup thousands of rabbits driven into the slaughter pens broke free before their escape route could be cut off. That sparked a club-swinging melee that was denounced by animal protection groups.

"Whitton said farmers would not use the 'gas chamber' slaughter method of rabbits driven into the slaughter pens as recommended by the Idaho Humane Society because an efficient way to expose the rabbits to carbon monoxide fumes could not be found quickly.

"It's more than wrapping the plastic around the pen and gassing them," Whitton said. "First of all, it takes a while for the rabbits to die that way, and there's a problem with the disposition of the carcasses."

Whitton said the fewer number of news media representatives expected for the second roundup and the absence of some of the inexperienced townspeople who helped in the first drive would reduce confusion.

Kittle Sitch, president of the Bonneville Humane Society in Idaho Falls, denounced the participation of children in the rabbit roundup.

She said children are impressionable and should not have been allowed to take part in last week's roundup.

She said the farmers showed a disrespect for life when indiscriminate clubbing erupted as the rabbits rushed out of the slaughter pens.

Major fire hits Lynn for second time

LYNN, Mass. (UPI) — The second major fire in a month in this city engulfed a plastics plant Friday, sending billowing black clouds of smoke into the air and bringing scores of firefighters to the scene.

Authorities said no injuries were reported in the blaze at the Lyncor facility, located about half a mile from Lynn's downtown urban redevelopment area devastated by a Nov. 28 firestorm.

The nine-acre fire erupted shortly before 11:50 a.m. in manufacturing wing at the U-shaped facility where plastic pellets are made, authorities said. The cause of the fire was under investigation.

It came nearly three weeks after a devastating firestorm destroyed four blocks and 17 buildings in the heart of the urban redevelopment area. The Nov. 28 blaze caused more than $20 million in damage. Arson was suspected in the November fire, but no one has been arrested in the case.

Authorities said specialists from the state Division of Environmental Quality Engineering were sent to the burned-out plastics factory to monitor the air quality in East Lynn, about eight miles north of Boston.

More than 80 firefighters, accompanied by 11 engines and four ladder trucks, brought the blaze under control shortly after 3 p.m., fire officials said.

Firefighter John Barry said plant employees apparently were out of the building before the fire became dangerous. Some workers at nearby plants were evacuated, but people living in houses across the street were allowed to stay.

Controllers finish training

OKLAHOMA CITY (UPI) — The Federal Aviation Administration said Friday 532 air traffic controllers have completed training at its academy since more than 11,000 controllers walked off their jobs in August.

The figure includes 59 survivors of the first post-strike training class already on the job in control towers around the nation, rookie controllers assigned to their first posts Friday and trainees completing final exams in radar operation who will join the work force after the New Year's holiday.

Half of the first class to begin training following the strike by the Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization failed the course. Adding that to those who dropped out, only 59 of the original 144 trainees received job assignments.

The second class had a 30 percent failure rate, an FAA spokesman said, and the third and fourth classes had failure rates of 19 and 18 percent respectively.

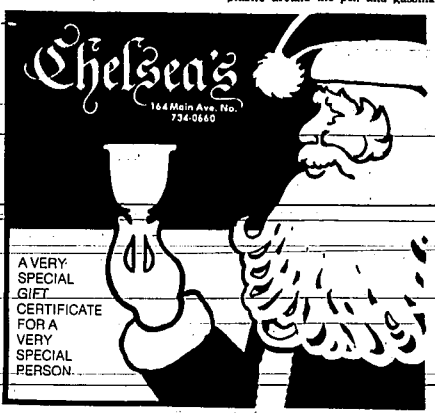

Approximately 1,600 students remain in various stages of training at the Mike Monroney Aeronautical Center, the FAA's only facility for training air traffic controllers.

Ski mask rapist receives sentence

DONALDSONVILLE, La. (UPI) — "Ski mask rapist" Jon B. Simonis, ruled sane by a state judge, pleaded guilty Friday to three of 81 attacks in a dozen states and was sentenced to three life terms plus 420 years in prison.

"You have caused serious physical and emotional hardship on your victims," Judge Charles Bechel said before passing sentence on the 30-year-old unemployed lab technician. "I am convinced your deeds were done in a deliberate fashion calculated to instill fear in your victims. This court is mandated to impose the maximum sentences possible. To do less would degrade this court."

Simonis was given the maximum penalties on all eight counts against him — three aggravated rapes, four armed robberies and one aggravated burglary. He got consecutive life sentences for the rapes, plus 90 years on each of four armed robbery counts and 30 years for aggravated burglary.

Interior Department reopens Grand Canyon to motorboats

WASHINGTON—(UPI)—Motorboats, banned in 1979 from the Grand Canyon segment of the Colorado River, will be allowed to resume operations in the wilderness area, an Interior Department spokesman said Friday.

The department also has issued final regulations permitting both oil and gas drilling and "hard rock" mining in five national recreation areas, said George Berkley, spokesman for the department's National Park Service.

Berkley said the change in the river management policy conforms to a congressional mandate, and the new mineral leasing regulations resulted from a 1979 court order.

Environmentalists blamed both actions on Interior Secretary James Watt.

Brant Calkin of the Sierra Club called the Colorado River reversal

"simply a sweetheart deal" Watt made with national park concession operators who hope to boost their profits with motorized raft trips.

In a speech last spring, Watt told park concession operators, "There's no way you could get me on an oil-powered raft on that river... I wanted bigger motors to move that raft out."

Ron Tiplon of the Wilderness Society called the new mineral leasing policy "gives the lie to Watt's talk about being a defender of the parks. It's a complete reversal of policy enunciated by (Watt's predecessor) Cecil Andrus."

National recreational areas earmarked for additional mineral leasing are Lake Meade in Arizona and Nevada, Glen Canyon in Utah and Arizona, Whiskeytown in California and Ross Lake and Lake Chelan in Washington.

Berkley said a 1979 court order directed the agency to issue rules on new mineral leasing policy in the five areas. Some existing leases predate creation of the recreation sites in the areas. Mining and drilling are also legal.

The order resulted from a 1973 Sierra Club challenge to leases the agency issued in Glen Canyon.

The Interior Department issued proposed rules permitting oil and gas drilling in 1980 and expanded them, on the strength of favorable public comments, to include "hard rock" mining as well. The final regulations were signed by National Park Service chief Russell Dickenson.

Offshore fuel leases top last 30 years total

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI)—The Interior Department will offer 200 million acres of offshore lands for oil and gas leasing bids next year — five times the amount offered in the past 30 years, Interior Secretary James Watt said Friday.

Visiting Portland for a round of fund-raising receptions and an aerial tour Saturday of the Mount St. Helens volcano, Watt said only 40 million of the country's 1 billion acres of offshore tracts were made available in the past 30 years, with half of those acres actually leased.

"When you restrict the supply to such small amounts, you force the prices up and only the 'seven sisters' can afford to bid," Watt said, referring to the world's seven major oil firms.

"I'm going to come in and offer 200 million acres in one year — that's five times what's been offered in 30 years — because I'm going to invite competition so that we don't just benefit the major companies as the past liberal administrations have done," he explained.

"We moved just the opposite of what the critics have been saying, because we believe in the marketplace, we believe in competition. We don't think we should protect and shelter the 'seven sisters.'"

Watt was the featured guest Friday night at a $25-a-person public reception attended by Gov. Ajliah, a $1,000-a-plate private dinner and a $2,500-a-person reception for a select group of business leaders, with proceeds going to the Oregon Republican Party.

About 250 demonstrators anticipating his arrival marched through downtown Portland, chanting "Stop Watt now!" and carrying signs, such as "Watt? Me worry!" The march ended with a rally and a $3 "anti-Watt hot dog lunch."

Watt said opponents who sharply criticize his stand on environmental issues have "misrepresented drastically what we have done" and show "a significant lack of integrity as they've addressed these issues."

When he took over the Interior Department, Watt said he found the pendulum "was out in left field, and I had to bring that pendulum down into the mainstream of the environmental movement. And we've been successful in doing that."

'Cattle rustler' helps out a fellow rancher

BLACKDUCK, Minn. (UPI)—Forty-five Hereford cattle that had been "rustled" from Melvin Yocum's farm all in the Christmas spirit — were returned Friday.

Yocum and his family returned to their farm near Blackduck late Thursday night after being away for five days and discovered the cattle were gone.

Beltrami County Sheriff's Investigator Dave Bergstrom went out to Yocum's farm about 1 a.m. Friday. He spent all night out there taking pictures and accumulating evidence," he said.

Beltrami took pictures of the scene of the crime, photographing fresh footprints and tire tracks in the snow where someone had made several trips with a truck and hauled all the animals away. The tracks were very fresh — less than two hours old.

"I accumulated a whole stack of stuff," Bergstrom said, "and all of a sudden the case was solved."

John Davis, a neighboring farmer, notified Bergstrom he'd noticed the Yocum's watering system had frozen. He didn't know when the Yocums might return, and the cattle would die without water.

So to be a good neighbor, Davis got his truck and hauled all the cattle to his nearby farm.

What's what

Consider famous animals. Some of their names can be used again. Such as "Champion," Gene Autry's horse. And some of their names can't be used again, not comfortably, not yet. Such as "Trigger," Roy Roger's horse. It wouldn't do to name another dog "Rin Tin Tin." Yet thousands of dogs since the original have been named "Lassie." You couldn't name another gorilla "Gargantua." Nor another elephant "Jumbo." And would you name your cat "Morris"?

Q. The former "Beatles"—what were they called before that? And who founded the original group?
A. "Quarry Men." The late John Lennon.

People who like palindromes—lines that spell the same backward as forward—rate James Thurber's among their favorites: "He goddam mad dog, eh?"

Q. How can you hard-boil a dozen eggs without cracking their shells?
A. Put them in an inch of cold water in a pot with a lid. When steam puffs out, lift the lid, turn off the heat. Let them stand for 20 minutes without removing the lid. Then pour in cold water. That should do it.

Today is Saturday, Dec. 19, the 353rd day of 1981 with 12 to go!

The moon is in its last quarter.

The morning stars are Mars, Jupiter and Saturn.

The evening stars are Mercury and Venus.

Those born on this date are under the sign of Sagittarius.

British Arctic explorer William Perry was born Dec. 19, 1790.

On this date in history:

In 1777, George Washington and the Continental Army began a winter encampment at Valley Forge, Pa.

In 1968, Norman Thomas, six-time Socialist Party U.S. vice-presidential candidate, died at age 91.

In 1972, the splashdown of Apollo 17 ended America's moon exploration program.

In 1974, Nelson Rockefeller was confirmed by Congress as vice president after a six-hour debate in the House. He then took the oath of office and was sworn in.

A thought for the day: German philosopher Arthur Schopenhauer said: "Intellect is invisible to the man who has none."

Diplomat found alive under rubble

BEIRUT—Lebanon—(UPI)—Workers dragged a diplomat alive Friday from under tons of concrete where he was buried for 76 hours in the rubble of the bombed Iraqi embassy.

A Red Cross worker stumbled across unconscious Aziz Rashid as he searched for bodies from the blast that destroyed the embassy Tuesday, killing at least 32 people. At first the relief worker thought Rashid was dead.

Rashid worked six hours to pull him out from under a 3-ton iron girder that had fallen on one of his legs.

An Iraqi Embassy spokesman said Rashid, a low-ranking diplomat in his middle 40s, was in "good" condition and his leg was not broken.

"We had to go extremely carefully," one worker said. "The girder was bearing the weight of an entire floor collapsed above it."

Rashid recovered consciousness and became hysterical soon after he was discovered, a civil defense worker said. Workers beamed light onto him, caiming him, and a doctor fed him sugared water every 3 minutes during the rescue operation.

Red Cross workers said they had given up hope of finding survivors under the rubble before Rashid was discovered.

Other workers set up a pump and forced oxygen under the debris in the hope of saving any other survivors of the blast, which officials believed trapped 20 people under tons of concrete.

Another 107 people were injured in the blast caused by 550 pounds of heavy explosives that police said was planted on six pillars that supported the structure. The Army for the Liberation of Kurdistan claimed responsibility for the blast.

Iraqi Ambassador Abdel Razzak Lafeh and several of his aides were among those missing under the 5-story building, which was reduced to a mass of concrete and tangled metal.

An aide said Lafeh had just stepped into one of the embassy's elevators when the building exploded in the most serious attack ever on a diplomatic mission in Beirut.

Bomb rips Zimbabwe headquarters

SALISBURY, Zimbabwe (UPI)—A massive bomb blew off the top two floors of Prime Minister Robert Mugabe's residence here Friday—killing six people and seriously wounding at least 71 others.

Mugabe was not in the building. The blast destroyed the two top floors of the five-story structure, showering glass and debris on streets filled with office workers doing Christmas shopping during their lunch break.

"Police say it is a bomb but at the moment they're unable to say what sort of party spokesman Edilson Zvobgo said. "There were no government ministers in the building at the time of the blast."

The bombing came amid repeated charges by Mugabe in recent weeks that "subversive elements" were plotting to topple his black-majority government, which in April 1980 replaced the white government in what was formerly Rhodesia.

Police said three men and three women died in the explosion and 71 others were seriously injured—many of them shoppers cut by shards of flying glass.

Three of the victims were crushed to death when a wall collapsed in a bakery next door to the party headquarters, said Zvobgo.

Police immediately sealed off the area around the wrecked building, warning that the remaining floors of the building were in danger of collapse.

Mubarak plans visit to U.S.

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak has accepted an invitation for a state visit to the United States Feb. 3, the White House announced Friday.

"The President and Mrs. Reagan look forward to welcoming President and Mrs. Mubarak on behalf of all Americans on that occasion," said Larry Speakes, deputy press secretary.

"The visit will underscore the continuity of the broad and profound relations between our two countries and the friendship of our two people," he said.

Teacher Valez Peterson gives Kim Williams a little guidance in the use of her special hearing device

Crystal clear

Electronic devise helps first-grader learn the ABCs

By GLEN WARCHOL
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Kim Williams' rapid learning progress seemed to have stalled.

When Kim, who suffers from a moderate to severe hearing loss, entered a Heau Start preschool program at the age of 4, she had virtually no speech. But by the time she entered first grade at the Horizon Learning Center, a private school in Twin Falls, she was speaking well and was full of questions about the world around her. Aided with a talent for lip reading, she tackled first grade with zeal.

"That little girl has come a long way," says Kathy Williams, her mother. "She is quite a kid. She really is."

But in the last several weeks, her initial excitement in school seemed to have faltered.

A deaf child has to work harder to keep up with the rest. To get answers to her questions requires intense concentration, both on her teachers' lips and on the garbled sounds coming through her ears. With Christmas nearing, the problem was exacerbated by the noise of pageant rehearsals and practicing with large groups of children.

"When she first went to school, she was so excited. She asked questions all the time," her mother said. "But lately, she hasn't been asking questions. We kind of felt she'd given up."

But that was last week.

Now, Kim's eyes are bright, and she's excited about school and the world around her. It's due to a handful of electronics that have brought the jumble of sound around her into focus.

"The mad drum. . . ." Kim reads from her book, her finger under each word. Her pronunciation of "drum" is a little vague, and the "m" sound is lost.

Her teacher, Valez Peterson, interrupts, "That's drum, Kim." Peterson enunciates the word carefully into a small microphone that extends from a headset, much like the ones used by telephone operators.

"... drum man ran," says Kim, finishing the sentence and sounding each word clearly.

Hanging just below the pink strawberry printed on Kim's dress is a business-like black box about the size of a paperback book. It's basically a radio receiver with a small wire leading to Kim's ear.

The same electronic technology that is entertaining her peers in the form of video games, electronic puzzles and personal stereos has made it possible for Kim to hear more clearly what her teachers and parents say.

Kim's teacher or parents can wear the small microphone that transmits their words directly into the black box, where they are amplified and piped directly into Kim's ear.

Using the microphone, their voices don't have to compete with the thousands of sounds that bounce around the average classroom or home and create confusion in Kim's head. And that helps a great deal.

"It has made such a difference that it's incredible," says her mother after the first day Kim used the equipment. "When she came home yesterday, she didn't want to take it off."

The auditory trainer, as the electronic unit is called, has allowed Kim to enjoy things most of us take for granted. The unit can be plugged into tape recorders, record players and television sets to help Kim learn or just relax.

"When she used to watch television, she asked hundreds of questions about what was going on," her mother says. "Now, she can sit and watch TV, and she doesn't ask. She can follow what's happening."

Even this close to Christmas, however, electronic miracles do not come cheap. The auditory trainer, which cost in excess of $700, was more than Kim's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Dave Williams of Briarwood Lane in Twin Falls, or even the Horizon Learning Center could afford. But the Magic Valley Telephone Pioneers, a service organization of telephone company personnel, raised the money for the device, and the Beta Sigma Phi service sorority paid to have the unit adapted to Kim's particular hearing aid.

They figured it was a small price to pay to clear up a world of confusing noises for a first-grader.

Doctors still oppose plan

But Gooding officials claim plan helps hospital's finances

By STEPHANIE SCHOROW
Times-News writer

GOODING — The decision to approve the "concept" of an interim plan to house recovering alcoholics at Gooding County Memorial Hospital has been met with "extreme disappointment" by the chief of the hospital's medical staff.

Dr. Richard Short remains adamantly opposed to the plan to house 10 to 12 patients of the Walker Center for Alcoholism and Drug Abuse at the hospital until a new alcoholism treatment center is built.

After a meeting Thursday night with the Gooding County commissioners and officials of St. Benedict's Hospital of Ogden, Utah, which owns Walker Center, the hospital board voted 5 to 1 for a resolution indicating its support of the temporary plan if certain conditions are met.

Board members Trudi Bybee, Jody Faulkner, Monty Baker, John LeMoyné and Rod Spackman voted in favor of the resolution. Dr. M.V. Klingler voted against it.

Friday, Short said the resolution reinforces his contention that hospital administrator Ed Myers and board Chairman Spackman had made up their minds on the issue in October, "even if they said they hadn't."

Saying that the majority of the county's residents oppose the "diseasious" interim plan, Short contends that the board and hospital officials tried to implement the proposal without public input.

"I think they only slowed down to try and please the public when they learned the public did not approve of their action."

Short's contentions are disputed by county Commissioner Rick

Brailsford, who said Friday. "I don't think the resolution indicated they (the board) made up their mind at all; they simply approve the concept."

"I don't think the hospital can afford to let the doctors make the final decision," Brailsford said. "If they can convince the hospital board and the commissioners that medical care is going to be compromised, we certainly are going to listen to them."

"We are not going to compromise the financial status of the hospital just for the sake of the doctors."

Spackman said Thursday night that the resolution simply indicated the board's intention to take a work-out-interim plan that would not jeopardize regular patient care at the hospital.

The resolution asks for a study by the Idaho Health System Agency on whether the hospital could house Walker patients. Brailsford said Friday that he had contacted John Collins of the IHSA, who said he would begin making the study next week.

"Right now, the community has the same problems everyone else has. Who do you listen to? Someone says you got space available. Someone else says you don't," Brailsford said.

"I think if the Health Systems Agency says space is available, that will get back to the community."

However, Short said if the IHSA concludes the interim plan is possible, "I would feel they are not close enough to the problem."

"There just is no realistic way this many beds could be taken away from the hospital and not compromise the county taxpayer—at times," he said.

Thursday's resolution stipulates that St. Benedict's must agree to maintain a speeded-up construction schedule for the new facility, that it must be willing to return beds to the

Buhl residents told to boil their water

By SUSAN GALLAGHER

BUHL — State officials are recommending that residents in Buhl boil their drinking water.

Water samples analyzed Friday indicate that the contamination discovered at Poppelweil Elementary School has spread, according to Gary Burkett, an environmental engineer for the state.

Burkett said that a routine analysis obtained on Dec. 8 revealed coliform bacteria in the school's water supply. Tests indicated the school was the only victim.

Follow-up tests revealed contamination at two nearby dwellings on Thursday, and by Friday, the contamination had spread considerably, he said.

"At this time, we're unable to determine the exact extent of the contamination," Burkett said Friday afternoon. "There are portions of the city which are clear, but the possibility exists that the contamination could spread, so we are taking the precaution of issuing the boil-water order throughout the city."

The cause of the contamination remains undetermined.

Coliform bacteria does not produce disease in humans, but is an indication that other disease-producing organisms might be present in the water.

Ticket-buyers for the ballet left 'standing'

TWIN FALLS — Some people holding tickets to the sold-out Tuesday evening performance of the "Nutcracker Suite" may nonetheless be turned away at the door.

The 8 p.m. show in the Fine Arts Center at the College of Southern Idaho is sold to standing-room-only capacity, but realistically, there probably are more ticket-holders than there is standing room, says Betty Zuck, the manager of the downtown mall.

However, a sold-out matinee show still has enough room reserved for people holding tickets to the evening show who would like to exchange their tickets and attend the 2 p.m. show, she says.

Tickets can be exchanged only at Judy's bookstore, 120 Main Ave. N. About 100 people need to exchange tickets for all people to be guaranteed a seat at the two performances, Zuck says.

If persons are turned away from the evening show, they will receive a refund for the ticket.

"We haven't got 20 calls in on Monday," Butterfield said. "They're still calling."

She said that many reporters who quoted her had taken one word and made it into 10 to sensationalize the event.

"UPI and AP called," said Hosack,

Fire's aftermath

Extension cord might have sparked fire

By TERRELL WILLIAMS
Times-News correspondent

WENDELL — The cause of last week's major fire in Wendell may have been electrical.

Fire Chief Keith Hosack said Friday that unofficially, a faulty extension cord may have started the blaze, which burned the half-block around the Wendell Department Store.

"We're still investigating," he emphasized.

The chief said the fire appears to have started in the rear of the department store in an office, near or possibly inside the outside wall. This, too, he said, is unofficial.

"We look for the lowest part of the burn," Hosack said. "Chances are, that's where it started."

He explained that as a fire burns upward, falling debris piles up at the bottom of walls, and this often keeps the burn from going all the way down.

"We look at wires to tell if they burned in two and started the fire, or if they were burned by the fire," the chief said.

Two state inspectors will return to Wendell on Monday to discuss their laboratory findings with Hosack and possibly continue the investigation.

Reporters' calls 'taxed' officials, budget

By TERRELL WILLIAMS
Times-News writer

WENDELL — The population of Wendell nearly doubled when reporters arrived last week.

At least, that was how it appeared to fire Chief Keith Hosack and Wendell dispatcher Jeanette Butterfield after the fire.

"I'm sure the city budget would go for that," she said, laughing.

Hosack said the city budget for Rost, who also was wounded by 20 or 30 reporters, said that the sister of Dr. Paul Yocum, one of three doctors whose offices were destroyed by the fire, had seen a TV report on the fire the following morning at her home in Pennsylvania.

speculating that both wire services had picked up the story and sent it nationwide.

Even at home, the chief has received regular calls all week.

Butterfield said that reporters in Boise and other cities farther north had requested that their calls be returned.

"I'm sure the city budget would go for that," she said, laughing.

'Noel'

Pros, amateurs join voices to present holiday musical on the way to the stage and then sing favorite Christmas songs as the show opens.

Pastor Roger Loy of the Assembly-of-God will narrate the story of the birth of Jesus, which is largely told in song.
As Mary and Joseph, Lewis and Snow will sing duets and solo parts. "No Room," sung by Lewis, will be one of the highlights of the program. Wells will sing two solos, "Seeking for Me" and "A Star Was Born."

Mr. Lewis, who currently serves as the interim director of the Twin Falls YFCA, and his wife came to Twin Falls from Texas after his father, a pastor at the Jerome Assembly of God church, was injured.

Although his career is in the ministry, Lewis has made albums for a number of recording companies and has made numerous television appearances. And he has appeared in concert with such stars as Johnny Cash, June Carter and The Oakridge Boys.

His wife, an interior designer, has sung leading dramatic roles in musicals such as "Oklahoma" and "The Fantasticks."

Linda "Joey" Goss has recorded for studios in Georgia, has written three songs and has signed with the Benson Music Co. of Nashville, Tenn.

Lewis, his wife and sister all began their singing careers through church programs, and they say it is their first love.

"We are doing 'Noel' for the community and for the enjoyment we are all finding in it," Lewis says. "There is a great deal of enjoyment in giving people like our local singers an opportunity to do things they never dreamed they could do. We hope the public and people from all churches will come and enjoy it."

Linda Boer of Jerome will sing the role of Mary, while Kent Snow, a Robert Stuart Junior High school teacher, will appear as Joseph. Dusty Wells, a recording artist and native of Twin Falls, also will be a soloist on the program.

Joey Goss, a professional singer, recording artist and song writer, and sister of the director, is another of the soloists.

Other area singers with solo parts include Kim Kruger, who will sing "Go Tell It on the Mountain," and Steve Skolrud, who will be one of the junior performers.

Lewis says the production of "Noel" is a community program, open to everyone, free of charge.

It will not be the usual Christmas concert or musical program.

Lewis, who has arranged it especially for the holiday season in Twin Falls, will bring the choir into the church from the rear doors. They will mingle with the audience and enjoy it.

Nuclear fear prompts churches to promote peacemaking

By DAVID E. ANDERSON
UPI Religion Writer

The Old Testament words of the prophet Isaiah that are read at Christmas — and for Christians, signal the coming of Christ — are so familiar their meaning is often lost: "For to us a child is born, to us a son is given, and the government will be upon his shoulder, and his name will be called Wonderful Counselor, Mighty God, Everlasting Father, Prince of Peace."

This year, for a growing number of Christian worshippers, the last of those names given the promised messiah — Prince of Peace — will take on an added urgency, as church members wrestle with their denominations' involvement in the growing peace and nuclear disarmament movement.
Peacemaking has always been one of those words religious leaders have been free with in describing the task of the church in the world.

But in the past year, goaded by secular events, including statements by high government officials that a nuclear war can both be limited and won, a surprisingly strong anti-nuclear movement has grown up in the church.
It is a movement that has touched all levels of religious life, from individual Christian congregations to the highest denominational levels.
Most dramatically, the yearning for some progress toward nuclear disarmament was signaled by Pope John Paul II, head of the world's Roman Catholics, who in mid-December sent delegations to government officials in Washington, Moscow and the United Nations to warn of the "horrifying prospects" and "disastrous effects" of atomic warfare.

Others, too, are using the Christmas season to remind their followers of the peacemaking message in the Christian gospel.

"At every human level, peace is a live option," Bishop H. Ellis Finger Jr., president of the United Methodist Church's Council of Bishops, said in his Christmas message.
"The private, intimate, individual experience is one such level," he said. "Christ brings resolution to conflict, anxiety, suffering. He graciously grants forgiveness, acceptance, wholeness."
- At least three church bodies, the Lutheran Church in America, the Presbyterian Church in the United States and the Church of the Brethren, made peace and peacemaking the special focus of the December Christmas issue of their denominational magazines.

"There could be no more appropriate time to talk of peace than at Christmas in a world" saturated by war," the staff of the Presbyterian Survey said in introducing its issue.

Evans pushes Bunker Hill aid

BOISE (UPI) — Gov. John Evans has asked those responsible for handling the state insurance and public employees retirement funds to begin an inquiry into the attractiveness of Bunker Hill Co. as an investment, an Evans aide said Friday.

Pat Costello, legal adviser to the governor, said Evans has asked trustees for the retirement fund and the manager of the insurance fund to look into the possibility of investing monies from the two accounts in the Silver Valley minerals operation.

Evans announced Thursday he was considering the investment proposal as a way to induce potential Bunker Hill purchasers into exercising their 30-day option to acquire the mine and smelter.

Three businessmen — Duane Hagadone of Coeur D'Alene, H.F. Magruder of Wallace, and William Pfeiffer of La Jolla, Calif. — took the option earlier this month. They have until the end of December to go ahead with the $65 million purchase.

Costello said the trust funds would not be loaned or used as a loan guarantee for Bunker Hill.

"They would be a straight mortgage investment," he said. "They would have to be secured by real property. The trust would not hold stock in the operation."

He also said the trustees and fund manager would have to determine the security and profit potential of the investment before they could render any decision on the proposal.

"It would have to be a very solid, prudent investment," Costello said.

"We are committed to nothing at this point, and no one has asked us to step in," the lawyer said. He also said such investments "are totally within their (the trustees) discretion."

Costello said the final decision on possible investment of the retirement fund would be made by four banks which act as trustees for the account — Idaho Bank and Trust, First Security Bank, Idaho First National Bank and First Interstate Bank of Idaho.

Investment decisions regarding the insurance fund are made by the fund's manager and the director of the Endowment Fund Investment Board, he said.

Meanwhile, Lt. Gov. Phil Batt, who is running for the GOP nomination to face Evans next November, suggested Friday that Bunker Hill might not be a good investment for the two trust accounts.

"I think it would be unwise to use those funds in that manner," Batt said. "I doubt the state should jeopardize the very important retirement fund in any type of venture where risk is involved. They are not state funds. They belong to the retirees and they must be protected at all costs."

And another official seeking the Republican gubernatorial nomination, House Speaker Ralph Olmstead, said it would be smarter to offer tax incentives to the entire mining industry in Idaho than attempt to aid a single company.

Olmstead, R-Twin Falls, said if the Legislature enacted such incentives, they would serve as an enticement to potential Bunker Hill buyers without risking any trust funds.

Attorney General David Leroy said it is possible that legislative approval might be required before the investments could take place. On the other hand, he said, trustees have "wide discretion" to choose their own investments without the okay of lawmakers.

If the Legislature is asked to approve the proposal, both Batt and Olmstead said it was very unlikely that the plan could gain passage.

"I don't think the Legislature would go along with this. They have a history of being very reluctant to get involved with industrial bonding, for instance, and I think they would classify this proposal along with that," said Batt, who presides over the Senate during legislative sessions.

"There is a strong desire among legislators to provide incentives to help business prosper."

Grand jury indicts former Utah man

BALTIMORE (UPI) — A federal grand jury Friday indicted a former director of a Utah drug firm developing the drug DMSO on charges of illegally paying $30,000 to a federal drug official.

The indictment charged Dr. Stanley W. Jacob, a former director of Research Industries Corp., of Salt Lake City, with forwarding the payments to Dr. K.C. Pani, a medical officer with the Food and Drug Administration, between June 1975 and Jan. 15, 1979.

Assistant U.S. Attorney James A. Rothschild said Pani was responsible for reviewing all suggested uses for the drug dimethyl sulfoxide, a chemical byproduct of wood pulp and paper manufacturing that can penetrate human skin very rapidly and has been used to treat arthritis, spinal injuries, paralysis and other disabilities.

Jacob is charged with three counts of giving illegal gratuities to a government employee and Pani is charged with three counts of receiving illegal gratuities.

Jacob, 57, is an associate professor of surgery at the University of Oregon in Portland.

Feds can use bank heist evidence

BOISE (UPI) — A U.S. District Court judge refused Friday to suppress evidence gathered by the government in its case against two men suspected in the Sept. 21 robbery of a Riggin's bank.

Judge Ray McNichols denied the defense's attempt to have seven photographs thrown out of court, saying authorities acted properly in snapping the pictures when Harold David Bales and James A. Tooley were arrested south of Riggin's after the robbery of $46,000 from an Idaho Bank and Trust branch.

The photographs showed the alleged getaway vehicle and weapons the suspects allegedly used in a shooting with lawmen.

McNichols said he would hear arguments Jan. 11 at Moscow on a second-defense motion to suppress verbal evidence prosecutors want to use against the men.

In another ruling, McNichols refused a motion by Tooley for a separate trial. Tooley's lawyer, Charles A. Brown, argued that Bales had made self-incriminating statements which prosecutors intended to use against both suspects.

A trial date for Tooley, Tooley, Tulsa, Okla., and Bales, 44, a Utah State Prison escapee, will be set following the hearing at Moscow, court officials said. Tooley has pleaded innocent and Bales has pleaded innocent by reason of insanity to the charges.

Round to Idaho in insurance fight

BOISE (UPI) — Federal Judge Marion Callister Friday denied a Florida insurance company's motion for a preliminary injunction to prevent Idaho state insurance officials from enforcing state laws governing corporate tender stock offers.

John Alden Life Insurance Co.'s latest move in its attempt to assume control of Idaho's Continental Life and Accident Co. was rejected because Callister said the state laws in question should not be overridden by federal law.

U.S. District Court officials said John Alden's attorneys planned to appeal Callister's decision to the U.S. 9th Circuit Court of Appeals.

Callister announced his decision at the close of a three-hour hearing on John Alden's motion. The Coral Gables, Fla., firm contended the laws are unconstitutional. It said Idaho's statutes interfere with interstate commerce and directly contradict federal statutes covering the same subject.

But Callister said the U.S. statutes specify — because of a need to protect insurance policy holders — that state laws shall not be overridden by federal laws concerning disclosure requirements in stock tender offers.

John Alden and George Washington Life Insurance Co., Jacksonville, Fla., both are attempting to assume controlling interest in Continental.

Court officials said Callister did not act Friday on a motion by George Washington Life to bar John Alden's takeover attempt.

Panel appointed

SALEM, Ore. (UPI) Gov. Vic Atiyeh Friday named 15 people to the State Salmon and Trout Enhancement Program Advisory Committee.

The committee was created by the 1981 Legislature to advise the state Fish and Wildlife Commission.

Attorney general proposes fines for meeting law violations

BOISE (UPI) — The Legislature should establish civil fines for public officials who violate the state's Open Meetings Act and should eliminate insanity as a defense in criminal proceedings, Attorney General David Leroy said today.

Leroy said the two proposals are among 11 bills he plans to offer to lawmakers during the 1982 session. The bills would tighten up existing laws, expand the criminal code to cover certain offenses which are not currently illegal, or bring Idaho law into agreement with court rulings, he said.

His recommendation for amending the Open Meetings Act would subject officials to a $100 civil fine if they deliberate toward or make decisions on public issues behind closed doors. In addition, people who go to court to protest a closed meeting could recover legal fees if their position is upheld.

In the case of so-called "frivolous" lawsuits filed to harass officials, those officials could also recover attorneys' fees.

Leroy said his bill would not change current law to subject legislative caucuses to terms of the act. But he added that, in his opinion, such caucuses violate the "spirit" of the act if not its exact wording.

Another bill would eliminate insanity as a defense in criminal trials. Jurors would only decide if a crime had been committed, and if the defendant committed the offense.

If a guilty verdict were returned, the judge would hold a pre-sentencing hearing, at which time defense attorneys could argue that their client was suffering from mental defects or illnesses, Leroy said.

The judge could consider that information in passing sentence. A convicted defendant who argued insanity during the hearing could be sentenced to a jail term or to treatment at a psychiatric facility, the attorney general said. "Idaho would be the first state in the nation to make this necessary change," Leroy said at a news conference. "It doesn't change the protection of those who have legitimate mental defects or illnesses. But it would remove confusion from the courtroom as lay jurors try to determine the very complex issues surrounding that determination."

"It would keep that issue from being raised during the trial, but would not endanger or abrogate the defendant's constitutional rights," he said.

Other bills to be offered to lawmakers by the attorney general's office would:

- Prohibit the possession, sale or use of so-called "lookalike" drugs, those simulated substances which are "similar or identical in external appearance, or purport to have the same effects" as drugs already illegal under Idaho law.

- Make it a felony for police officers to steal, mutilate or falsify police reports. Leroy said the legislation was prompted by two recent incidents in Idaho where lawmen allegedly tampered with official reports.

- Expand the scope of child protection laws to include such sexual abuses as child prostitution, pornography, incest and rape. The attorney general said the current law defines crimes against children only as "molestation."

- Revise the state's pornography law in light of a recent U.S. Supreme Court decision which declared unconstitutional a Washington state law similar to Idaho's "Moral Nuisance Abatement Act."

- Make it a crime for someone to solicit the commission of an illegal offense. Leroy said the proposal was prompted by an incident in Lewiston earlier this year where someone allegedly hired an undercover officer to kill a policeman, but could not be effectively prosecuted under current law.

New guard post ready at prison

BOISE (UPI) — State Corrections Director C.W. "Bill" Crowl says an additional guard tower at the Idaho State Penitentiary may be manned shortly after the beginning of January.

Crowl said the frame for the tower was erected this week, and a construction crew will install the glass and electrical wiring over the next two weeks.

The tower sits next to the three-story Prison Industries Building and affords a view of inmate activities there and in a "blind area" of the prison, Crowl said. Prison Industries contains volatile liquids, such as lacquers and paints, that could do much damage if set afire if there were a repeat of the July 1980 riot, Crowl said.

"It was one of the buildings the inmates gained access to during the riot," he said. "If we ever did have another disturbance, nobody else could get access to that building."

The tower is the second to be added to the prison since the riot. One that opened in June sits among several cell houses.

The new tower cost $15,000, and was begun about two months ago, Crowl said.

Fire season leaves state deep in debt

BOISE (UPI) — Idaho owes about $600,000 to the federal government for fire protection on state and private lands but has no money to pay its bills, State Lands Board members were told Thursday.

The debt was caused mainly by underfunding by the Legislature, said State Lands Department Director Gordon Trombley.

Most of the debt arose, however, because the U.S. Forest Service charged more than expected for fire protection of state and private lands within national forest boundaries, said Assistant Director Jack Gillette. Gillette said the department must budget for fire protection on the basis of estimates made more than a year in advance.

Also, the Forest Service may have priced charging more to capture what it considers its full cost, he said.

Gov. John Evans, chairman of the Lands Board, said the state should meet its obligations to federal agencies, and asked if Trombley would seek extra funding from the Legislature next session to cover the debt.

Trombley said the department first wants to negotiate with the Forest Service to try to save money before bringing the board to make that decision.

Instrument firm plans expansion

POST FALLS (UPI) — General Instrument Corp., Post Falls, announced plans this week to spend more than $2 million expanding and upgrading its computer keyboard manufacturing facilities near this birth Idaho community.

Plant manager Joe O'Donnell said the company is expecting continued growth in its business during 1982.

Nationwide, General Instrument is an industry leader in the manufacture of cable television hardware, video recording systems and programmable micro-electronic circuits.

Wyoming trucker charged in crash

THERMOPOLIS, Wyo. (UPI) — A Wyoming truck driver has been cited for driving too fast for road conditions in a collision with a school bus carrying children that hospitalized two young girls and the bus driver.

Hot Springs Memorial Hospital spokeswoman said Thursday a 57-year-old girl received a broken ankle in the accident. A 13-year-old girl and a bus driver, Lola Cordingly, 45, were held for observation.

Thirteen other children reported minor injuries, but none required hospitalization.

Restyled Gem license plates appear

BOISE (UPI) — About a dozen of Idaho's newly designed license plates have been distributed by the state Motor Vehicle Division, says Stuart Gowans, supervisor of the Ada County office. Ada is the first county to distribute the plates. Like their predecessors, the new license plates carry the state's name across the top and the "Famous Potatoes" slogan, preserved after a tuxor two years ago, across the bottom. Both lines are more prominent now. Instead of thin lettering, the "Idaho" line is now the same one used in the state's tourist advertising and road maps. The testimony of Idaho spuds also is in fatter type, called Souvenir Bold.

The result is a license plate that will be easier to identify for policemen — and cheaper to produce, said Chuck Bonney, acting chief of the Vehicle Service Bureau of the Motor Vehicle Division. "Economy is the main reason," Bonney said. Both new lines will be printed on each plate, rather than being embossed, in which the metal is raised, Bonney said. The new process will require less time for state prison inmates at Idaho Prison Industries to produce, he said. The Idaho Department of Law Enforcement, which was forced to lay off 15 employees earlier this month because of a tight-budget, will save between $10,000 and $15,000 a year on the new plates.

from the previous production cost of roughly $300,000 a year, Bonney said. Another feature of the new plates is a marked space in each lower corner for "even year" and "odd year" registration stickers. Bonney said the new sticker placement will make it easier for police officers to tell whether a car's registration is current. The 3M Co. of Minneapolis came up with the design changes earlier this year. The changes were approved by former Motor Vehicle Division Director Pat Riceci, Bonney said. The first batch of plates was delivered to the Ada County office in October.

Sivak's lawyers say decision months away

BOISE (UPI) — Attorneys for convicted murderer Lacey Sivak say it could take the Idaho Supreme Court up to two years to decide whether to uphold Sivak's death sentence imposed earlier this week by a Fourth District Court judge. "By the way, they've decided things in this case, and probably take 18 to 24 months before they make a decision on this case," said Ada County Public Defender Klaus Wiebe, one of two court-appointed attorneys representing Sivak. Wiebe and attorney Rolf Kehne said they will appeal Sivak's sentence on a number of issues, but declined to comment specifically on what issues would be brought before the state high court. Kehne said he and Wiebe would continue to fight for Sivak's life, perhaps in federal court — if the state Supreme Court upholds Sivak's death sentence. Sivak, 22, is scheduled to die by lethal injection at the Idaho State Penitentiary on Jan. 26. Sivak's attorneys and Ada County Prosecutor Jim Harris have said they expect that the execution will be stayed until the Supreme Court reviews the case.

Sivak and a co-defendant, Randall Bainbridge, 23, were convicted on first-degree murder charges in the slaying of Garden City gas station cashier Dixie Wilson on April 6.

Bainbridge is scheduled to be sentenced in January. Sivak is the third person, and the first Idahoan, to be sentenced to death under the state's 1978 lethal injection law. Previously, persons sentenced to death in Idaho courts were executed by hanging.

Porn raid nets picture haul

WEST JORDAN, Utah (UPI) — Police and U.S. Postal Service officials say a raid on a West Jordan, Utah, home netted thousands of photographs of nude women Thursday as officers completed eight months of investigation into a pornography distribution operation in the city. West Jordan Police Chief Cal Farr said city detectives, county deputy sheriffs and U.S. Postal inspectors participated in the raid. Dale Broughton, 38, was arrested in the raid, he said. Farr said officers confiscated thousands of dollars worth of pictures of women and girls.

Broughton was booked into the Salt Lake City County Jail on charges of "distributing pornography" and "sexual exploitation of a minor." Both charges are second-degree felonies.

Oil man endorses open hunt

CODY, Wyo. (UPI) — Glenn Nielson, founder of Husky Oil Co. Ltd., said no more public land, including the Washakie Wilderness, should be withdrawn from energy development.

Nielson told a meeting of the Cody Country Chamber of Commerce this week that he hopes "vociferous minorities don't succeed in convincing Congress to pass adverse legislation."

Nielson said the withdrawal of large amounts of public lands from energy development has resulted in America being dependent on foreign countries for oil and gas.

Nielson said the United States has the resources to meet its energy need, if more land is not withdrawn from development.

Shoshone National Forest supervisor Ray Hall said he believes leasing in wilderness areas is a "public policy issue" that should be decided by Congress, not the U.S. Forest Service or other federal agencies.

Hall said a Forest Service recommendation to open 13 percent of the 700,000-acre Washakie Wilderness to energy leasing is highly unpopular. He said he has received 1,000 letters in favor of development and 750 against development.

Watt target of protest

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — About 150 protesters staged a nighttime march through downtown Portland Friday to protest the policies of Interior Secretary James Watt, due to visit the city later in the day. Waving placards saying "Watt? Me worry!" and "Dump Watt" the marchers gathered for a rally beneath a statue of Teddy Roosevelt astride his horse, listening to speakers from Greenpeace, the Oregon Environmental Council and other groups denounce Watt.

Another sign read "I can't afford $1,000 for dinner! Watt, why don't you meet with ordinary people?" Watt's visit was to include a number of fund-raising receptions and dinners, including one reportedly costing $2,500 a plate. He also planned a Saturday aerial tour of Mount St. Helens.

Petitions calling for Watt's replacement were passed through the crowd and a skit entitled "The Rape" was performed. Watt, a white-haired "Watt" ripping up the signs labeling other actors as "The Innocent" while a "judge" and "prosecutor" watched and smiled.

Fraud increasing

SPOKANE (UPI) — The Spokane-Bellingham Bureau says that the invoice is on the increase in the Inland Empire. Bureau Manager Maury Hickey said the latest one was for $350 and came from a phony business directory firm. The warning to businesses is to look each bill before making a payment. Phony schemes are forwarded to the postal inspectors for action, according to Hickey.

Blaze strikes offices

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A pre-dawn blaze erupted in a downtown Broadway Plaza high-rise and gutted two floors before firemen extinguished the blaze.

There were no injuries and cause of Thursday morning's $250,000 fire in the 32-story building was being investigated by arson specialists.

The fire broke out on the eighth floor in a two-story office occupied by a law firm whose partners include former state Attorney General Evelle Younger.

"It was a tricky fire mainly from the standpoint that there was a great deal of smoke in the building and that the fire communicated from the 8th to 7th floors via a spiral staircase," said fire spokesman Ray Walker.

A force of 22 fire companies confined the flames to the lobbies and hallways of the two floors, which were extensively damaged, but smoke spread throughout the building and some offices on lower floors received water damage.

There were about a dozen people inside the building when the blaze broke out shortly after 5 a.m., less than an hour before office workers normally began arriving.

Guests in the adjoining Hyatt Regency Hotel were not evacuated.

The fire was the second in a two days in a Los Angeles high-rise office building. A blaze set in a bathroom caused minor damage to a 27-story Crocker Bank building in the Sherman Oaks district early Wednesday evening.

About 700 people were evacuated from the structure, but none were injured. The cause of the blaze was under investigation.

Controller offered job with patrol

TUCSON, Ariz. (UPI) — The Justice Department has asked local striking air traffic controllers if they would like jobs as Border Patrol agents.

William Taylor, president of the local Professional Air-Traffic Controllers Organization, said Thursday he got a letter asking him to tell his fellow strikers about Immigration and Naturalization Service job openings.

Taylor, who received a criminal conviction because of his role in the controllers' strike, said the situation is ironic. A person convicted of a felony cannot take a job with the government.

Taylor, 38, president of PATCO Local 572, and Billy J. Florence, 31, local vice president, were convicted of participating in an illegal strike against the government.

U.S. District Court Judge Mary Anne Richey suspended the pair's sentence Nov. 30, but gave both men one year of probation. They could have received up to 366 days in jail and fines of $1,000.

"I wonder if they'll hire us for the Secret Service to protect the president, but still not allow us to control his plane?" Taylor said.

When striking controllers were fired, the Reagan administration vowed they never would work for the government again. Later, the administration relented and decided they could seek federal jobs but not as controllers.

Jackpot on slot delights student

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — Kay Mathis, the wife of a certified public accountant and a student at the University of Nevada, Las Vegas, won a $29,000 slot machine jackpot at the Flamingo Hilton Thursday.

She played the giant jackpot machine 10 minutes and invested $20 before lining up a row of 7's.

Mrs. Mathis said she recently completed finals at UNLV and went to the Flamingo Hilton to celebrate. The 46-year-old woman has a son, Jon, 14, and is married to CPA Gary Mathis.

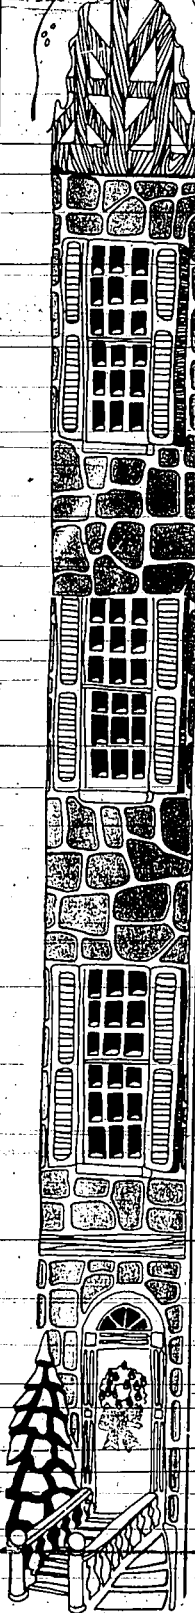

"It is the best Christmas present I've ever had. Those 7's sure are beautiful," she said.

Light earthquake jolts Orem area

OREM, Utah (UPI) — A minor earthquake shook the northern end of the Utah Valley Friday, in the Orem area, but caused no damage to buildings, according to Utah County Sheriff's deputies.

The quake was reported at 3:47 a.m. Researchers at the University of Utah Seismograph Station said the quake measured 2.2 on the Richter scale. The epicenter was located four miles east of Orem, in the mouth of Provo Canyon.

University seismologists said the "small quake was energetic enough to be felt in the Orem area and in the Edgemont subdivision. We also had one report of dishes being knocked off shelves in a home in Edgemont."

WSU charge falls short; McMahon ends with 342 yards

WSU's Ken Collins contains Jim McMahon

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — Jim McMahon, the most prolific passer in college football history, closed out his collegiate career Friday night by passing for 342 yards and three touchdowns to lead Brigham Young University—to a 38-36 victory over Washington State in the fourth annual Holiday Bowl.

McMahon, a 6-foot, 183-pound senior from Roy, Utah, set an incredible 55 NCAA records in his BYU career and tied another. He passed for 254 yards in the first half of Friday night's game and was named the most valuable offensive player. BYU finished the season with an 11-2 record while Washington State concluded its season with a 6-3-1 mark.

BYU, the Western Athletic Conference champion, has appeared in all four Holiday Bowls, defeating Southern Methodist last year after losing to Indiana and Navy in the first two games.

BYU split end Dan Plater opened the scoring by catching a 35-yard touchdown pass from McMahon with 9:46 left in the game. With a 31-7 lead, McMahon was then hauled in a seven-yard McMahon TD pass early in the second period and fullback Waymon Hamilton burst one-yard for BYU's third touchdown of the first half. McMahon added a 20-yard field goal as BYU took a 24-7 halftime lead.

McMahon started slow in the game, completing just one of his first seven passes. College football's most prolific passer then hit a hot streak and finished the half with 21 completions in 31 attempts for 254 yards.

Washington State's lone TD of the half came after safety Joe Taylor blocked a BYU punt and WSU took over at the BYU 24. One of WSU's quarterbacks, Ricky Turner—who completed two-of-10 passes for 37 yards—then capped a five-play drive with a two-yard touchdown run midway through the second quarter.

BYU's defense opened the second half with cornerback Tom Holmoe intercepting a Clete Casper pass and returning it 35 yards for a touchdown in the opening minute of the half.

With a 31-7 lead, McMahon was then hauled in a seven-yard McMahon TD pass

Casper and then Turner, made a charge.

Immediately following the interception, Washington State's option offense got untracked and produced TDs on its next three possessions, closing the gap to 31-28. The first touchdown came on Don LaBomme's 21-yard scoring romp followed by a five-yard TD run by Robert Williams and a 13-yard touchdown run by Turner to cap WSU's 21-point blitz.

Turner's quick feet were mainly responsible for the second two scoring drives as WSU alternated quarterbackbacks. Scott Pettis caught an 11-yard pass from McMahon to open the final period, giving BYU a 38-28 lead, before Mike Martin burst one-yard for Washington State with 5:12 left in the game and Turner ran for the two-point conversion to close out the scoring.

WSU got the ball back on a BYU punt with just over four minutes remaining, but after a penalty, had to return the kick. BYU took possession on its own 19 with 2:28 remaining and immediately went to its ground game to waste the clock.

Waymon Hamilton came up with two big runs to provide first downs, the first beating a first-and-15 from his own 30 to the WSU 41. Two plays later, with WSU out of time outs, Hamilton picked up another first down at the WSU 24.

Jim Harris, Washington State's leading regular-season rusher, injured his tailbone in the second quarter and was lost for the rest of the game.

Bruins edge Burley to win home opener

24-point fourth quarter breaks tight game

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — It was rhythm and blues at Twin Falls gymnasium Friday night.

The homecoming Bruins got their rhythm going in the final quarter just when Burley hit the blues — or blahs — and carried off a 57-55, non-conference victory.

For three quarters the Bruins generally held a narrow lead although there were frequent lead changes in the third period. But two minutes into the last quarter, seniors Joe Shelby — bombing off the baseline — and Steve Galley and Steve Meyerhoefer came up with points that pushed Twin Falls rapidly away.

Although Twin Falls suddenly was shooting well, it was rapid because Burley couldn't get anything to go down — with the exception of one free throw — for five minutes.

To that point, Burley, with a 1-6 record, held a 48-47 lead. Meyerhoefer then made a short penetration move worth a three-point play and Twin Falls was off to the races.

Shelby and Galley scored and Bowen Call hit a follow shot. Burley switched into a man defense and Meyerhoefer immediately took it to the glass for two more.

After Burley's Dave Asher got that lonely free throw, Call hit a three-point play and Galley hit twice from the line to explode Twin Falls into a 63-49 advantage. Tim Knight, a bulwark for the Bobcats but hampered by three early fouls, then broke the field goal drought but it was way too late.

"We weren't moving the ball against their zone — and they were doing a great job in the zone — the whole game. But then in the fourth quarter we caught that rhythm. When we get that started we can free up shots and tonight it opened up for Shelby on the baseline," Coach John Astorquia said.

Boys Basketball

Although Twin Falls didn't start the game shooting well from the outside, it ended up hitting from 15. It didn't surprise Astorquia.

"When we get on rhythm we can make the shots. The rhythm gets the shots and the flow just keeps the kids shooting well," he said.

Astorquia also paid tribute to Knight, Burley's 6-4, 225-pound jumping jack.

"Knight was good for us tonight. He played very well, very physical and the referees let it go a little under the boards. It was good for us because we had to find out if our juniors would bang with them. The juniors didn't back off on the boards and they got some big rebounds for us coming down the court," the coach said.

Astorquia said he was concerned because Burley's "wings were doing a great job of passing the ball. We were trying to front and get off-side help underneath and their wings simply pinned us with pinpoint passing."

Prior to the game Burley Coach Gary Swan worried about his team's inability to shoot well in the second half of the past few games. As the third quarter opened, it appeared his fears were assuaged. The Bobcats hit their first six shots from the field and put heavy heat on Twin Falls.

"They started missing a little later in the third and then hit that lull. That's the way it's been going," Swan said. "Except tonight we came to the complete stop."

Swan agreed that having to take Knight out of the fray in the early going because of the three fouls set Burley's chances back.

"He's our leader. He's the guy we depend on to hold it together, to get the board, game started and get us some points off the offense board," Swan said. "I felt our other guys did a very good job for us tonight but you always miss a player like Tim."

Knight was particularly impressive in the third quarter in helping the Bobcats overcome a three-point Twin Falls lead. He started it off by blocking a Twin Falls shot underneath and turned that into a short jump ball. He followed with another shot block and with 2:04 left in the quarter added two more points on a follow shot.

He had six points in the third quarter and Burley's first six points in the final period, the third field goal giving the Bobcats their last lead.

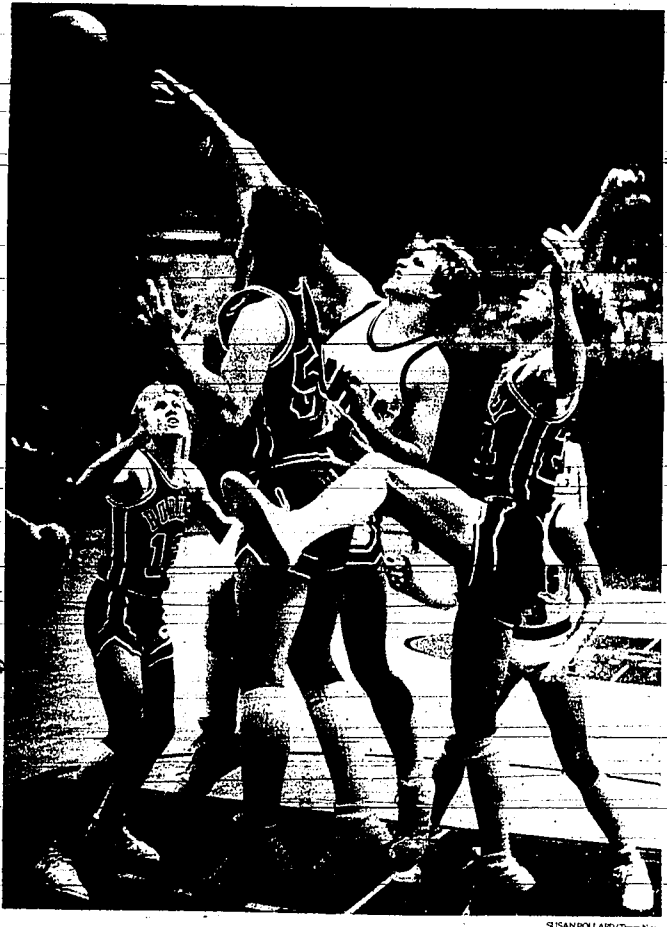

Twin Falls stayed in the game in the first quarter by scoring off the rebound when the long shot wouldn't fall. The Bruins had a 13-6 lead but that was as big as it could get. Jim McCord and Dave Basler got inside points and Brad Turner fluffed three from long range as the Bobcats pulled to within one in a low-scoring first six minutes of the second period. At halftime, Twin Falls had a 29-26 lead, thanks to Shelby's late shot.

The teams had offsetting buckets to open the second half and then Asher came up with two straight inside field goals to give Burley its first lead. Shelby sent Twin Falls back on top but Asher and Turner replied for the Bobcats' biggest lead at 36-33.

Twin Falls regained it on two Galley goals but Knight replied with four Burley points. That's how it went until the rhythm and blues struck with just under seven minutes remaining in the game.

Wind, QB's ankle are worry ISU

WICHITA FALLS, Texas — Two factors beyond Idaho State's control could negatively affect the Bengals today: the wind at Memorial Stadium and quarterback Mike Machurek's limited mobility.

ISU Coach Dave Kragthorpe velleed his disappointment when he and the Bengals arrived here for their first workouts Thursday, but it was clear the stiff, cold winds disturb him. He doubtlessly had visions of Machurek's passes and Cass de Brujin's punts, ISU's two key weapons, dying in the turbulent sky.

Friday, however, the breezes subsided slightly and the cold front which had been surrounding Wichita Falls started to dissipate. Pioneer Bowl officials expect the temperature to reach 20 degrees today, weather the Bengals can certainly handle.

One Bengal, split end Charles Ewing, says even bad weather won't bother the players.

"We like playing at home but we can adjust to anything because we're just ready," Ewing said.

"If it (wind chill) gets to be a factor, we'll just put on some gloves and that's it."

Putting on a glove won't heal Machurek's sprained right ankle. ISU's all-American will start today, but during Friday's workout he moved hardly at all, spending most of time handing off to running backs out of the shotgun formation.

Because the shotgun allows the quarterback to move less, look for the Bengal to use it early and often with Machurek in the game. If ISU can open up a big early lead, as in its first two playoff games against Rhode Island and South Carolina State, Kragthorpe doubtlessly will replace Machurek with Dirk Koetter, who has done a more than adequate job filling in recently.

As for the other injured Bengals, tight end Rod Childs is still hobbling on his bad right ankle and remains doubtful. Split end Chris Corp has recovered well from his sprained knee and will play.

Bowl games are always accompanied by parades and other special activities, and the Pioneer Bowl is no exception. Probably the most entertaining — and filling — pre-game festivity was Friday's Pioneer Bowl Chili Pop-wow.

More than a dozen groups of cooks gathered in a warehouse and invited the public to sample their chili. Even the local newspaper, the Wichita Falls Record-News, got into the act with its "On Your Front Porch Chili."

At one booth, a male mannequin, covered with a white sheet, lay prone holding a sign that read, "here lies an Idaho State Bengal ... one of Pocatello's finest."

Another booth offered, beside chili, Rocky Mountain oysters, which aren't oysters at all, of course.

One vat of steaming chili was decorated with a sticker reading: "don't tell my mother I'm a chili cooker. She thinks I'm a piano player in a warehouse."

At one point a reporter was stopped near the Rocky Mountain oyster booth by a widely grinning man. "Here comes a boy who hasn't got a Christmas package yet," the man said. With those words, a youngster behind the counter handed the reporter a small gift-wrapped package. Receiving the gift was a shock — literally: The reporter pulled back, startled by the electric "zap" package.

Wichita Falls was abandoned as the Pioneer Bowl site two years ago because of potential bad weather and a wish for bigger crowds.

This north-Texas town began playing host to a bowl game in 1971, one of many small-college post-season games in the days before a playoff system was developed.

In April of 1979 the town was ravaged by one of the largest blizzards ever recorded.

Although the damage caused to the stadium by the winds was quickly repaired, the NCAA chose to move the Division I-AA game out of town in an attempt to upgrade its image. In 1980 the game drew 5,000 fans in Orlando, Fla. and last year it attracted 7,000 in Sacramento, Calif.

Neither town wanted the game back and Wichita Falls did, so the NCAA relented and came back to Texas.

Colonels' pass defense vs. ISU air attack

may decide 1-AA title

By CHRIS HAFT
Times-News writer

WICHITA FALLS, Texas — A football game's final score reflects the outcome of not one confrontation, but many.

A kickoff team's performance against a kick return unit, an offensive line's effort against a defensive front, or any one of dozens of on-or-off-the-field battles may determine the verdict.

Today's Pioneer Bowl between Idaho State and Eastern Kentucky for the Division I-AA championship could be dominated by one such confrontation: ISU's passing offense against EKU's pass defense.

The Colonels' pass defense is solid but not superb. EKU defenders have intercepted 26 passes in 13 games, a creditable figure, and they have limited opponents to 138.5 yards a game through the air.

CESAR CEDENO to Reds' outfield

Cincinnati sends Knight to Astros for Cedeno

CINCINNATI (UPI) — The Cincinnati Reds Friday traded third baseman Ray Knight to the Houston Astros for outfielder Cesar Cedeno.

The Reds, who recently lost two-thirds of their starting outfield when Ken Griffey was traded to the New York Yankees and Dave Collins became a free agent, are trying to rebuild their outfield. Earlier this month, they acquired outfielder Clint Hurdle from Kansas City.

The departure of Knight, a hard-playing, dependable third baseman, means the Reds may try Johnny Bench at third base.

The Reds said Cedeno has told them he wants to play center field. The Reds previously said they intend to play Hurdle in right field.

Although Cedeno, 30, suffered an ankle injury last season, the Reds had their team doctor examine Cedeno three days ago and he gave Cedeno a clean bill of health.

"We are extremely pleased to be able to make this trade," said Reds President Dick Wagner. "A player with the skills that Cesar Cedeno possesses adds so much to a ballclub."

"Cesar wants to play center field and we look upon this trade as adding great depth to our outfield. He is a ballplayer with all the tools. He is an aggressive player. We have talked about needing to add speed to our club. This is a big step in that direction."

Wagner said the trade reminded him of one the Reds made 10 years ago with Houston, another deal designed to bring speed to the Reds, who at that time had just moved into a new stadium with Astroturf.

"This trade reminds me a bit of our trade for Joe Morgan," said Wagner. "We were looking for speed."

In trading Knight, who batted .259 last season, the Reds are giving up one of the Reds' fans favorite players and one of the most dependable players on the club.

Knight became Cincinnati's regular third baseman after Pete Rose became a free agent. Knight quickly won fan approval with his hustling style of play that reminded many of Rose. He often played when he was hurt and had a reputation for giving his all.

"We hate to see Ray Knight leave the organization," admitted Wagner. "You never like to give up a good player, and Ray Knight is a fine ballplayer."

"But you have to give up something to get something. Knight has been a real credit to the Reds. He is a gentleman and a winner. He's come up through the ranks, he's worked hard, he's played with pain. He's performed under pressure. We wish him well."

Knight, who will be 29 on Dec. 28, has a lifetime major league average of .265. His best season was in 1979 when he batted .318.

Cedeno has a lifetime batting average of .289 over 12 seasons, all with Houston. He owns 10 Houston career records, including hits, runs and games. He stole over 40 bases in seven different seasons and won five Gold Glove awards for his defensive play.

Astros general manager Al Rosen said the team hoped to play Knight at third base and move regular third baseman Art Howe to first base — the position Cedeno has played for two seasons.

Rosen said Cedeno had asked to be traded a "couple of years ago" and the Astros now felt the time was right.

"He had asked to be traded and he was given every indication that he would be when the time came," said Rosen. "Certainly in making the trade we are not demeaning his efforts on behalf of Astros or as a quality player."

"We know we gave up a good player in Cesar Cedeno and we know we have a good player back."

He said there had been no overwhelming negative fan reaction to the trade and that while Cedeno was a good player, he did not consider him a legend in Houston sports.

"Time doesn't make someone a legend," he said. "I don't consider Cesar a legend. I think legends are born after they're gone."

In last year's strike-shortened season, he hit .271, with five home runs, 12 stolen bases and 34 RBI. In 1980 he hit .309. His best year was 1973 when he hit .326, with 56 stolen bases and 25 home runs.

Last year, Cedeno split time between center field and first base before undergoing surgery to repair damaged ankle ligaments.

Reds physician Dr. George Ballou examined Cedeno on Tuesday in Cincinnati and gave him a "clean bill of health."

Austin overcomes slow start to drop Jausovec

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (UPI) — Tracy Austin woke up from an early case of the blahs to overcome Milma Jausovec in three sets Friday night and advance along with Pam Shriver to the semifinals of a $250,000 tennis championship.

Austin, still feeling the effects of her three-hour and 20-minute marathon against Chris Evert Lloyd the previous night, had to struggle for another two hours and 18 minutes before subduing Jausovec, 1-6, 6-4, 6-4.

"The first set I wasn't even there," Austin said. "I couldn't get my concentration going. It was very tough to pick up after last night."

In contrast, Shriver simply overwhelmed Jaeger to coast to a 6-3, 6-2 victory in the final singles match of the double-elimination portion of this tournament.

Austin and Shriver, given a second chance after losing earlier in the week, thus gained Saturday's semifinals along with Evert and Martina Navratilova, both of whom had 2-0 records.

A coin flip was held to determine the semifinal pairings. Shriver herself flipped the coin and it resulted in her meeting Navratilova with Evert going against Austin for the second time in three nights.

The tournament is known as the Toyota Championships and offers a $75,000 prize to Sunday's winner.

Jausovec, playing the best tennis of her career this year, stunned Austin with service breaks in the third and fifth games to take the opening set in 26 minutes. It was the first time in six career meetings that the 25-year-old Yugoslavian won a set from Austin.

It wasn't until midway through the second set that Austin seemed to regain her rhythm and the turning point for her came in the fifth game. There were nine deuces before Austin finally broke through on her fifth breakpoint.

"That fifth game was very important," Austin said. "It went back-and-forth, back and forth. That kind of got me back in the match."

The 19-year-old Californian then raced off to a 3-0 lead in the final set with a pair of breaks and another break gave her a 4-1 advantage. Jausovec managed to keep her hopes alive with a break in the eighth game and she staved off two match points in the ninth- and two more in the 10th before Austin ended the match.

Shriver, who now owns a 5-1 career mark over Jaeger, broke service twice in the opening set and two more breaks gave her a 4-1 lead in the second. Jaeger came back with a break for 4-5, only to have Shriver break in the seventh game.

Navratilova and Shriver later teamed to win their doubles semifinals from the South African duo of Tanya Harford and Rosalyn Fairbank, 6-0, 6-2. Their opponents in Sunday's final will be Rosemary Casals and Wendy Turnbull, who defeated Anne Smith and Kathy Jordan, 6-2, 6-3.

Depew, Bruins pass Buhl in OT

BUHL — Marcia Depew scored six of her fourteen points in the overtime period to give the Twin Falls Bruins a 47-43 victory over Buhl Friday night.

Buhl jumped out ahead in the extra period when Karl Easton hit two free throws. But the Bruins came back under Depew's wing. The senior tossed in the clinching field goal with 11 seconds remaining in overtime.

Hagerman 30, Oakley 25

OAKLEY — Turnovers and outside shooting were the keys for Hagerman Friday night as Pirates defeated the Hornets 30-25.

Behind most of the game, Oakley rallied in the fourth quarter to tie the score at 25-25 with just two minutes remaining. But sloppy offense cost the Hornets as Hagerman went on to take Oakley for their fourth consecutive win.

Leading scorers for Hagerman included Stacey Pharis tossing in 12 points and Kristin McPadden added six more in the victory.

Sophomore Cherrilyn Severe led Oakley in scoring with 10 points.

Oakley, 6-3, travels to Castleford Jan. 6 while Hagerman, 6-5, hosts Murtough Tuesday night.

and that was the difference tonight," Jerome Cohen Jim Stauffer said.

Jerome's Marge Marshall added 12 points in the triumph.

Jerome, 12-1, travels to Wood River Jan. 7 to battle the Wolverines.

Kuna defeated the younger Tigers in the junior varsity contest 41-31.

Twin Falls led 17-13 at halftime, but Buhl came back to outscore the Bruins 27-23 in the second half to send the game into overtime.

Depew got some help in the scoring department from Lisa "Krab" 18 points while Kristi Gilbert added 12. Buhl's Easton led all scorers with 20 points.

"The most we were down by was six and we came back because of our defense. We had a chance to tie it in overtime but lost the ball and Depew scored with 11 seconds left," Buhl Coach Janet Smutny said.

Free throws also played a key factor in the Indians' defeat. Buhl missed four free throws in the extra period.

Buhl, 5-5, travels to Burley to battle the Bobcats Monday while Twin Falls, 7-4, travels to Meridian to face the defending state champions the same night.

Twin Falls also took the junior varsity contest from the younger Indians.

Clemson's Ford edges Fry for UPI honor

CLEMSON, S.C. (UPI) — Danny Ford, a Bear Bryant protégé who steered Clemson to an 11-0 record and No. 1 rating in only his third year as a head football coach, Friday was named UPI's college Coach of the Year.

"I'm thrilled to death," drawled Ford, a lanky Gadsden, Ala., native. "But I'm not naive enough to think it was an individual honor for Danny Ford. More than anything, it was a team effort."

"I'd be crazy to say I'm not very happy," said the boyish-looking coach, an All-Southeastern Conference lineman under Bryant, the venerable Alabama coach. "I'm thankful to a lot of people. I think this award also goes to many folks who don't get recognized very often."

Ford received 35 votes for the UPI award in balloting by 100 sportswriters across the country. Hayden Fry, who coached Iowa (8-3) to its first winning season in 20 years and a Rose Bowl berth against Washington, was runner-up with 25 votes.

Pittsburgh's Jackie Sherrill received 12 votes, Bobby Collins of Southern Mississippi-10 and Howard Schellenberger of Miami (Fla.) six.

"It's a big honor," said Ford, whose record is 26-9-0 at Clemson. "But I think anyone at Clemson would like to swap it for a win over Nebraska at this point."

The Tigers will be a slight underdog when they shoot for the national championship Jan. 1 against the fourth-ranked Cornhuskers in the Orange Bowl.

The Tigers also were underdogs in 1978 when they whipped Ohio State 17-15 in a Gator Bowl shocker that brought Woody Hayes' coaching career to an inglorious end just as Ford's was beginning.

Ford said Clemson must accept that role until the school establishes itself as a perennial power.

"That's just another step we'll have to take in the direction we're trying to go, to show that we can play with the big guys," Ford said. "Nebraska plays well every year. They just don't have down years, so they deserve all the recognition they get."

Ford, who worked as an assistant at Alabama, Virginia Tech and Clemson, was named Clemson head coach when Charley Peil took the top job at Florida 19 days before the Gator Bowl game against Ohio State.

Ford said he'll never forget that game — his first as a head coach.

"We were scared to death because of their record and their great tradition as a football school," he said. "It was a thrilling win for Clemson. Some things happened that took something away from the game, but the most important thing was that it was a big win for us."

Late in the game, a Clemson defender picked off a Buckeye pass and was tackled near Ohio State's bench. A national television audience saw Hayes storm onfield and hit the Clemson player. Hayes lost his job the next day.

"Those of us on the sidelines didn't know what had happened. We never knew until the next day," Ford said.

"Well, just the honor of playing Ohio State and winning was a great thing for us," he said. "It showed we had a good football program compared to some of the other football powers in the country."

Ford coached Clemson to an 8-4 record and a Peach Bowl berth in 1979, and a 6-5 slate last year.

This year, the Tigers, en route to the Atlantic Coast Conference championship, matched the school's best record — an 11-0 season in 1946, which included a Gator Bowl victory over Missouri.

Among Clemson's 1981 highlights was a 13-3 victory over Georgia, making the Tigers the only team to beat the Bulldogs in the last two years, and, considering Clemson's strength is on defense, a shocking 82-24 victory over Wake Forest.

Clemson followers were upset Nov. 28 when ABC-TV reported on alleged Tiger recruiting violations. Two former high school players from Knoxville, Tenn., told ABC they were bribed by an alumnus who wanted them to attend Clemson.

Tiger defense will test Collier

S. Mississippi faces Missouri tonight

ORLANDO, Fla. (UPI) — Led by run-and-gun quarterback Reggie Collier, the 15th-ranked Golden Eagles of Southern Mississippi tangle with the Missouri Tigers tonight in the Tangerine Bowl.

Collier, who finished ninth in the Heisman Trophy balloting, is the first quarterback in major college football to run and pass for more than 1,000 yards each in a season.

The 6-foot-4 junior averaged 6.6 yards a carry while rushing 100 yards and scoring 12 touchdowns to pace Southern Mississippi's 9-1-1 season. He threw for six more scores and completed 81 of 139 passes.

"I'm just part of a line machine," says the easy-going Collier, who considers the Missouri defense anchored by All-America tackle Jeff Gaylord, "one of the better ones we'll play all year."

"They're big and strong and they'll do a great job in the secondary covering our receivers."

Collier's favorite targets are Ray Powell, 20 catches for 254 yards and the touchdown, and Mike Livings, 16 receptions for 197 yards and a touchdown.

When he isn't handling the ball himself, Collins looks for Southern Mississippi's leading ball carrier, tailback Sammy Winder.

The flashy senior ran for 1,029 yards, including five 100-yard games, and 12 touchdowns this season.

But making yards against Gaylord and the rest of the Missouri defense won't be easy. The Tigers were seventh in the nation in total defense and allowed just 246 yards per game.

The Missouri offense is led by quarterbacks Brad Perry and Mike Hyde. Hyde directed the Tigers to five straight victories before injuring his hand and yielding to Perry, who will start Saturday night.

The two completed 165 of 332 passes for 2,008 yards and nine touchdowns. Wide receiver James Caver, who also led the conference in kickoff returns, was the Tigers' leading receiver with 33 catches for 509 yards and a touchdown.

Tight end Andy Gibler pulled in 27 passes for 223 yards and a pair of scores as the second-leading receiver. Sturdy Bob Meyer leads the ground attack for Missouri, which finished the season 7-4. The 5-10 power runner rushed for 791 yards and eight touchdowns.

He'll be trying to run through Southern Mississippi's "Nasty-Bunch" that led the nation in scoring defense, giving up only 8.1 points a game.

The Golden Eagle defenders are known for the quick, aggressive play. "We don't have any outstanding players, so we don't get much recognition," says linebacker Greg Kelly who led the team in tackles with 133. "But we'll hit you. We have a lot of characters with character."

Sophomore noseguard Jerald Baylis says the defense's big job is to neutralize Meyer.

"He's a hard runner, a hard man to bring down," said Baylis. "We haven't seen anybody yet control him. If we can stop them as a running team, then we can control them as a passing team."

Orange Bowl brass wants no beer

MIAMI (UPI) — The Orange Bowl Committee says it is trying to stop the sale of beer in the Orange Bowl stadium at its New Year's night game between Nebraska and Clemson.

The NFL Miami Dolphins have the opposition rights at the stadium and so far have refused to let beer during the Orange Bowl, despite a unanimous vote against it by the Orange Bowl Committee.

"There has been a great hue and cry from Orange Bowl members about the sale of beer in the Orange Bowl," committee President Steve Huchson said. "In addition to the smell and the spills, there is a perception that there is more mischief, misbehavior and general disorder since the sale of beer began. This perception has been confirmed as accurate by the police department."

But Bob Brodhead, director of finances for the Dolphins, disagrees.

"Our basic position on the situation is that the people who are complaining are a minority," Brodhead said.

"Our sales indicate that many more people buy beer at the games than do not, by an overwhelming majority."

"Anyone who wants to find out who is causing the problems can get an answer just by coming around and following the cleanup crews on Monday morning (after the Sunday Dolphin games). They will see a lot of booze bottles and a lot of cans of beer of different brands than the ones we sell."

It is already illegal to bring alcoholic beverages into the stadium but Brodhead contends that stopping beer sales would not stop drinking or rowdiness.

Lubick named CSU's offensive boss

FORT COLLINS, Colo. (UPI) — New Colorado State University football coach Loen Fuller has named Iggy "Sonny" Lubick, former head coach at Montana State University, as offensive coordinator and coach of the runningbacks.

Lubick, 43, is the fourth assistant to be named by Fuller, who is in Austin to help prepare the Texas Longhorns for their upcoming Cotton Bowl game against Alabama. Lubick's team compiled a 21-10 record during the four years he served as head coach at MSU, beginning in 1978.

Lubick, a graduate of Western Montana College, began his coaching career in 1960 as football, basketball and baseball coach at Beatty, Nev., High School. He then coached at the high school in Butte, Mont., before moving to MSU in 1970.

Fuller, who was named the Rams' head coach on Dec. 7, earlier named Rick Johnson and secondary coach Craig Ridge as offensive line coach and Phil Bounds as coach of the linebackers.

Jackrabbit a 'news' veteran

By STU MURRELL
Special to The Times-News

JEROME — The Idaho jackrabbit didn't realize it was such a star until all the recent publicity but it has periodically appeared in the news since the early 1900s.

Records show they had rabbit drives in southern Idaho dating back to 1918 when one drive near Rupert accounted for 20,000 rabbits. In Harney County, Ore., they paid a five-cent bounty on 1,029,000 rabbits in 1915. They hit another peak about 1931 and periodically have risen and fallen in about 10-year cycles.

In 1971, they were at their last peak when I first moved to Magic Valley. Disease hit the population that year and it was difficult to find a rabbit in 1972. The present, high population will probably die back this year or then and then all we will have to worry about is those coyotes without their usual prey species.

In 1971 and 72 we had quite an influx of coyotes into the farmlands looking for food species.

There are actually two species of jackrabbits in Idaho and they are both officially classed as hares rather than rabbits. Rabbits are born naked and helpless whereas hares have fully haired young that are ready to fend for themselves shortly after birth.

The blacktailed jack, weighing four to six pounds, is the most common species in southern Idaho. A whitetailed jack weighs up to 10 pounds and turns white in the winter.

Blacktails are normally found at lower elevations in the dense sagebrush stands and the whitetailed species prefer more open, foothill country.

Both species are edible but the whitetailed jack is the better of the two. The snowshoe hare also is classed as unprotected, turns white in the winter and weighs in at about three to four pounds. It lives in more timbered habitat.

Jackrabbits have the ability to multiply rapidly, producing several litters of three to six young in a period from January to mid-summer in southern Idaho. The males fight vigorously for female attention and have been known to disembowel their opponent by striking them with sharp nails on their powerful hind feet.

The jackrabbit is listed as a "predator" in Idaho, is unprotected and can be hunted year around with no bag limits. A person must have a valid hunting license to hunt rabbits, or for that matter, to carry a firearm in the fields of Idaho for any hunting activity.

Another owner of land can spotlight for jackrabbits or other predators on his own land. The landowner can also allow hunters on his land to hunt unprotected species of wildlife by issuing written permission.

The exception to this law occurs in Twin Falls County where a county ordinance was passed which prohibits shining an artificial light over six volts in any area if there is a firearm present on the person in a vehicle.

The Fish and Game code states it is illegal to spotlight on public land areas without a special permit from the department.

Stu Murrell is the regional conservation educator for the Jerome office of the Idaho Fish and Game Department.

It will cost you more to hunt, fish in 1982

BOISE — Many of Idaho's fishing and hunting fees will be increased starting Jan. 1, 1982.

The fee hikes range as high as $50 for a non-resident trapping license to as little as $1 on other licenses. Some fees will not be hiked.

The changes, approved by the 1981 legislature, represent the balance of increases requested two years ago by the Department of Fish and Game.

The increases are expected to raise about $445,000 in additional funds for the last half of fiscal year 1982 and $1.5 million in a full year.

Jerry M. Conley, the department's director, said that the extra money is needed to offset the cost of inflation and maintain services at present levels. Any added services would be limited primarily to conservation enforcement, he said.

The only fee hikes to be proposed to the 1982 legislature will be for those who use fish and wildlife principally for commercial purposes. If approved, they would raise about $12,300 in added funds to help pay costs of administering the licenses and permits, according to Conley.

A nonresident hunting license will go up to $75.50, up $15 from the fee charged in 1981. Nonresident tags for elk, bighorn sheep and mountain goat will each be increased by $25 to $150.50. A nonresident trapping license will also be $150.50.

The fee for a resident combination license will be $15.50 — a $3 increase — and a fishing license goes to $10.50 from $8.50. The cost of a resident hunting license will stay the same — $6.50.

Fees for resident deer, bear and turkey tags are $6.50 each, $1 more than in 1981, and resident elk tags will be $12.50 instead of $10.50.

Other resident tag fees, include $25.50 for antelope, and $60.50 for moose, bighorn and goat tags. All reflect $10 increases.

Aerobics one way to achieve year-round fitness program

Sliding families, busy with holiday preparations, or those who will be getting their equipment for Christmas can be counted to appear on the slopes the day after Christmas.

For many of these first day skiers there will be some sore muscles and tired legs. Others will get from opening to closing of the lifts and go dancing Saturday night.

Chances are the latter group has been participating in some type of aerobic exercise program during the past few months. Keeping in shape does make a difference.

The skier, downhill or cross country, is not only exercising harder than normal, but doing it in a higher elevation than the normal environment. Early this season a skier suffered a heart attack and died at a local resort despite of ski patrol and a medical doctor's assistance.

Many skiers launch a crash exercise program in the fall that ends as soon as they skiing. It is important to continue the exercise program throughout the ski season, especially for the weekend recreational skier. The best exercise plan is one that is carried out every day of the year.

National Ski Patrol statistics show skiers most prone to fractures are those who are tired or whose muscles are weak and unable to support the bone in a sudden fall.

For the individual without enough self discipline to maintain a 30-minute-a-day exercise program on his or her own, there are organized and professional programs. Aerobic exercise is the most valuable form of conditioning for skiing and many other sports.

Sherrie Hull, a fitness specialist who conducts aerobic classes at Sage Gymnastics, caters to a number of skiers. Although the program is called aerobic dance, she said it is actually a fitness sport.

"You don't play sports to get in shape, you get in shape to play sports," she said.

The aerobics program is something anyone can do, she said. It is done to music and begins with simple stretch exercises, working into more vigorous movements.

"In aerobics we establish a target pulse rate for each individual. We then work through exercise to maintaining this rate for at least 15 minutes.

"The heart must have exercise and this is 20 minute continuous movement exercises the heart," she explained.

Hull said there are mostly women in the classes. The term aerobic dance turns off some of the men, she said, although more and more men are becoming interested. Classes are planned for both men and women and even on a co-ed basis in the future.

In January, Hull will start a fitness control program. This is designed for non-dancers, but if the individual is a dancer, so much the better.

Aerobic type exercises are the best for the cardio vascular system, but also the only exercises that burn up body fat. When the individual enrolls in Hull's class, she determines the percentage of body fat. This, the age and general condition help here tailor the exercise program to the individual. The pulse rate is monitored during exercise and the work increases until the target pulse rate is reached. Hull, who is a certified fitness specialist from the Aerobics Center in Dallas, Tex., said her own body fat was at 22 percent, about average, when she began the exercise program. It has since dropped to 18 percent. Body fat percentage is a major cardio risk factor. Once a person begins, Hull recommends continuing aerobics if maximum health and fitness benefits are to be achieved.

In addition to morning and evening classes, there is lunch-hour program planned for working people. Instead of eating lunch the worker substitutes an hour of aerobic dance or exercise. Hull said the more a person exercises the less he or she is inclined to eat heavily, an added exercise benefit.

This week's ski report sounds like a gift from Santa. Sun Valley reports about six inches of new snow this week with packed and powder conditions with six areas in operation including Christmas Bowl and Seattle Ridge. Temperatures have been ranging in the 30 to 35 degree bracket this week.

Pomerelle has 36 inches at the lodge and 32 on the mountain. About 18 inches of it is new this week. Runs are groomed as well as open powder. The resort is open from 2 p.m. to 10 p.m. with night skiing every night except Sunday.

Magic Mountain, after a long wait or adequate snow, will open Wednesday for a daily schedule. Manager Joey Anderson said there is more snow than at anytime last season and all runs are packed. She said a few spots on ridges could use three or four inches more of snow and she is hoping for at least a light storm over the coming weekend.

Soldier reports the best skiing of the season with a heavy storm of a foot of natural snow earlier this week.

All resorts will operate daily through the holiday season and bus service will be available.

Frenchwoman wins first downhill

SAALBACH, Austria (UPI) — Marie-Cecile Gros-Graudenier finished one second ahead of her nearest rival Friday to score her maiden World Cup victory in the first women's downhill race of the season.

The 21-year-old, who slipped down the 2,387 meter course in 1 minute 41.00 seconds, was the first French skier to win a women's World Cup downhill since Jacqueline Rouvier placed first at Val d'Isere, France, in 1972.

Swiss downhill specialist Doris de Agostini placed second in 1:42.00 and Austrian Siegrid Wolf grabbed third place with 1:42.31.

"I just kept going, concentrating hard and not thinking about the falling girls ahead of me," a smiling Marie-Cecile said after her victory. "I knew I had nothing to lose."

Bad weather endangers men's downhill event

CRANS-MONTANA, Switzerland (UPI) — A downpour and high winds forced the cancellation of Friday's men's World Cup downhill race. The event was scheduled for Sunday and left a question mark over the race itself.

"If conditions improve, there will be two practice runs on Saturday and one on Sunday before the race," World Cup committee chairman Serge Lang said.

The possibility would be to have Monday's Super-G race on Sunday and the downhill Monday, Lang said. "But Monday is definitely the last day available for a race."

If the downhill is canceled, it will be rescheduled for Jan. 8 at Morzine, France.

Tagging, tracking salmon migration a four-year process

TILLAMOOK, Ore. (UPI) — Tracking the migratory habits of salmon is a four-year job involving an elaborate tagging process that produces some surprises — like the time a Japanese fish came calling on its Pacific Northwest brethren.

Monitoring the long journey for thousands of salmon from spawning grounds to the ocean and home again begins, when Barbara Hatfield reaches into a net full of three to four inch coho fingerlings suspended over a sink at the Trask River Fish Hatchery.

She pulls the slippery youngsters out one at a time, clips off their adipose fins, then flips them over, putting their snouts into a square machine. The machine inserts a harmless stainless steel pin into the head of each small fish, then they are put into a drain tank.

The task takes about 15 seconds per fish. The young salmon are now marked and pinned and sent to a rearing pond at the hatchery.

Hatcherymen also spawn coho and fall chinook in the holding ponds. Millions of eggs are taken from these fish, placed in the hatchery incubation tanks for a period of one to three months, depending on temperature of the water.

At the end of incubation, the eggs hatch with the small fry kept in the hatchery until they grow large enough to enter rearing ponds for tagging.

About 50,000 of the cohos are tagged for release to the ocean to follow their migration instincts.

The steel pins in the heads of tagged salmon provide information for the researchers, including the identity of which hatchery they come from and which particular batch of fingerlings they were included in.

A key in finding the "pinned" fish involves the clipped adipose fins. When a fish is caught or returns to spawn, the hatcheryman looks to see if the fin is gone. When a fish without the adipose fin is sighted, it is given to biologists on duty at the hatchery during spawning season.

That fish is measured, weighed and the portion of the head which contains the pin is removed. At the laboratory, the pin is examined under a binocular microscope. Notches in the pin give information the researchers are looking for.

Researchers at the Trask River Hatchery have found that the fall chinook from the hatchery travel down the Trask River to the Pacific Ocean, then north to Alaska where they stay until spawning time. Those fish contribute to the Oregon and Washington chinook catch.

The cohos are a different story. They travel south to waters off northern California then return at the end of their migration cycle to spawn at the Trask hatchery. Those fish contribute to the Oregon and Washington coho catch.

The Trask program is successful, hatching 90 percent of the eggs spawned from cohos and chinooks at the hatchery.

The low return ratio is not a problem because each female salmon produces thousands of eggs and one male salmon can fertilize the eggs from six females.

Most of the Trask hatchery fish are caught commercially, with sport fishermen getting most of the rest. Commercial and sport fishermen report the catch of tagged fish to the Oregon Fish and Wildlife Department. The information is cataloged for reference to migration of the particular brood.

Occasionally, a strange salmon is caught. Rich Barry of the Fish and Wildlife Department tells of a fisherman catching a steelhead in the Sandy River east of Portland that had been tagged in a Japanese hatchery. That was an unusual migration of a fish 8,000 miles away from home.

That is the purpose of the tagging program, to tell researchers where the fish travel, with catch reports indicating the route of the migrating fish take in their four-year life cycle before returning home to spawn.

Idaho hunter education program gets 'AA' rating

BOISE — Idaho's hunter education program administered by the Department of Fish and Game received an "AA" rating for 1981, the second highest rating possible.

Milt Williams, hunter education coordinator for the department, said the rating was awarded by the International Association of Fish and Wildlife Agencies, which makes an annual evaluation of hunter education programs in the nation.

Nation's economy heads into steep plunge

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Almost the entire economy has joined auto and housing in a steep roller coaster plunge after an upward ride only a few months ago, the latest government figures showed Friday.

The Commerce Department tentatively projected a 3.4 percent shrinkage in the gross national product since September following a 1.4 percent expansion in the gross national product from July through September.

The figures for the value of all goods and services were seasonally adjusted, at annual rates and documented the sharp reversal in the economy from the third to the fourth quarter.

The generally acknowledged "break even" point for the GNP necessary to keep employment from getting worse is a rate that increases about 4 percent a year.

"This is not just an automobile and housing phenomenon. It's rather widespread," said Robert Dederick, an assistant secretary of commerce.

"The Bureau of Economic Analysis has projected that real GNP will be down substantially in the current quarter."

"We're seeing a lot of volatility in economic activity from quarter to quarter," economist William Dunkelberg of the National Federation of Independent Business said.

Dunkelberg said current business may be better than the figures show.

"If you talk to businessmen lately, business has been pretty good," he said. "People are buying."

The year began with a mini-boom, a GNP rate that soared 8.6 percent from January through March. Then, from April through June, there was a contraction of 1.6 percent. The third quarter, originally reported to be down slightly, then up slightly, recovered much of the ground with the 1.4 percent gain made final for last quarter.

If the tentative projection for the current quarter — circulated internally at the Commerce Department Friday for use in budget and deficit forecasts — turns out to be correct, the total GNP for 1981 will have increased about 1.9 percent over 1980 after adjustment for inflation, department analysts said.

The 1979 to 1980 change was slightly negative, down 0.2 percent because of last year's recession.

The administration had been assuming a 2.6 percent increase for 1981 after inflation, but was much more optimistic about next year.

The optimism persists, but more moderate in tone. Dederick said he still is forecasting an upturn in the economy for spring.

Department officials have said in the past that the final quarter's drop could run as large as 7 percent if December's production figures are as weak as they seem so far.

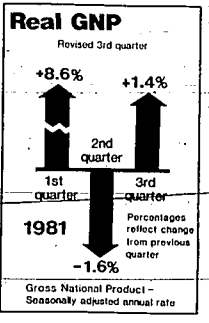

The quarterly GNP usually is revised twice to account for additional information.

The third quarter GNP was revised even further upward for two reasons, Dederick said — stronger exports of goods and services than first measured and a greater accumulation of unsold goods.

The revision upward for overall production brought the value of GNP to $2,965 billion and raised the value of corporate profits from current production by 3.2 percent instead of the originally reported decrease of 0.2 percent.

But the inflation factor indicated by the GNP figures, which the government dubbed the "implicit price deflator," climbed to 9.9 percent for the first quarter, up from the original 9.5 percent. The figure reflects price increases throughout the economy, not just for consumers.

The total value of the nation's goods and services in the third quarter would amount to $32,864.62 billion of production a year for every man, woman and child in the nation.

Finance firm head draws fine, prison

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — Federal Judge David C. Phillips Friday sentenced S. Hal Haycock, the president of defunct Grove Finance Co., to a maximum of 23 years in prison and fined him $30,000 on his guilty plea to fraud charges.

Haycock had pleaded guilty Oct. 23 to four counts involving securities fraud, interstate transportation of money obtained by fraud, bankruptcy fraud, and filing a false federal tax return.

The Pleasant Grove, Utah, man had originally been charged in a 37-count federal grand jury indictment last August after his investment firm went broke, leaving behind up to $18 million in debts.

Haycock eventually agreed to plead guilty to the four felony counts.

Winder ordered Haycock to serve consecutive prison terms totaling 23 years on the remaining four counts. But the judge said Haycock will return to his court following psychological and medical studies for a possible reduction of the sentence and fine.

Federal Prosecutor Stuart Walz alleges more than 1,000 investors lost "between $11 million and $18 million" from 1976 through August, 1981, when the company filed bankruptcy. But Smith claims Haycock had overstated Grove Finance's assets.

The federal tax fraud charge is for the year 1979, when Haycock reported income of only $30,000. Walz claims Haycock's personal income for that year "was in fact $2.2 million."

Blue-chips help stocks score advance

NEW YORK (UPI) — Breaking the shackles of year-end tax-selling, the stock market registered a modest gain Friday.

It did it with the help of blue-chip advances and improved volume.

Some analysts said the advance Friday showed some investors were looking ahead toward an economic recovery in the first half of next year and that Wall Street may be on its way to a belated year-end rally.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which added 1.81 points Thursday, was ahead 5.23 points to 875.76. The closely watched average lost 10.75 points for the week, however.

The New York Stock Exchange index rose 0.50 to 71.87 and the price of an average share increased 22 cents, Standard & Poor's 500-stock index jumped 0.88 to 124. Advances topped declines 920-598 among the 1,958 issues traded.

Big Board volume totaled 50,940,000 shares, up from 47,230,000 traded Thursday, an indication investors were coming off the sidelines.

Analysts were encouraged by the gain and volume pickup following two weeks of tax selling, which has been more pronounced this year because tax rates will be lower next year under Regan administration legislation.

After the NYSE closed, the Federal Reserve reported the nation's money supply rose $600 million, down substantially from the $4 billion surge reported last week.

Still, the recent money supply increase and predictions of large federal budget deficits have caused the three-month slide in interest rates to ease. Some short-term rates have nudged higher recently.

Composite volume of NYSE issues traded on all U.S. exchanges and over the counter at 4 p.m. EST totaled 57,337,300 shares compared with 53,047,100 traded Friday.

The American Stock Exchange index rose 2.32 to 321.19 and the price of a share added 11 cents. Advances topped declines 355-228 among the 815 issues traded. Volume totaled 5,650,000 shares compared with 4,940,000 Thursday.

To advance: Toot horn, loudly

It's common sense that it's who you impress as well as how well you perform on the job that earns you a raise and promotion.

Any successful manager will tell you promotions do not come easily, they have to be worked for — particularly in this climate.

Common sense? Of course. Common practice? No.

Do you recognize yourself in the following questions? Are you continually scabbling that others less worthy than you are getting all the raises and promotions? Do you do a good job at the work set out for you and are you passed over again and again when an advancement opens up? Are you shy, actually "shy," about boasting of what you've accomplished?

If you recognize yourself in honest answers to these questions, you have nobody to blame but yourself for your lack of progress and promotion in your corporation.

One day, the bank's chairman called on the vice president of personnel, asking him to complete an assignment. At the same time, the vice president shared with the chairman a project he and the president thought important. The chairman did not disagree, but emphasized his own project.

Six months later, the vice president came back to the chairman with a glowing report of what he had accomplished on the project he and the president thought important. But the chairman was interested only in the progress made on "his" assignment, which the vice president hadn't even tackled. The vice president expected to be praised for his accomplishment because he felt he had tackled the important project. Instead, he was criticized for failing to do what his superior felt was the No. 1 assignment.

As the example shows, you must meet your superior's needs if you are to be recognized and praised for doing a good job. In short, the superior must be convinced of an accomplishment. How, then, to advance up the corporate ladder?

KNOW WHAT IS EXPECTED. Know your superior's expectations and to make sure, as you can't keep asking what you should be doing, but you can say: "I have three projects to do and I would like your advice on which you feel is the most important."

BLOW YOUR OWN HORN. Make sure your boss knows you meet his expectations. Whenever you have excellent results to report, a prudent "update memo" may be in order. When you attend a meeting with your peers and boss, be prepared to speak up to demonstrate your insight.

DO THE RIGHT JOB. Knowing what your superior wants is No. 1, and then meeting his expectations is No. 2. It's essential if you are to be placed for promotion. At a present time, review with your boss your accomplishments and any stumbling blocks that may have hampered your progress. A one-to-one meeting is best.

GM reduces benefits in cost-slashing drive

DETROIT (UPI) — General Motors Corp. is cutting its "many different challenges," Friday slashed vacation, cost of living allowances and other benefits for 138,000 salaried employees in the United States.

GM chief spokesman Cliff Merriott said the cuts affect the full range of salaried workers "from somebody in the mailroom to the chairman."

The move comes on the heels of the start of an estimated 13,000 layoffs of white collar employees worldwide.

Merriott said no dollar figure can be placed on the savings to GM but one New York analyst said it could be as high as $500 million. The benefit cuts are the first felt by salaried workers in decades.

Chief among the slashes is a temporary 50 percent cut in vacation time. Currently, workers with 20 years experience receive four weeks annually, those with more experience five weeks and top level "bonus" employees six weeks.

On-a-permanent basis, GM eliminated 50 percent of its "mental time off" or paid personal holidays. Regular salaried workers had received nine of these a year, while bonus employees were compensated with an extra week of vacation on top of their regular time.

Cost of living allowances were slashed 25 percent. The cost of living allowance was 1.84 percent of base pay, down from 2.38 percent.

By Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag

We don't think very much about West's one-spade overcall. Still, West does not have seven high-card points and a five-card suit and such overcalls are made time and time again. South analyzes the spade lead as fourth best. Use of the rule of 11 shows that East will hold two higher spades. South plays the nine from dummy and if South is a pessimist he will be delighted when East produces the queen. Why will he be delighted? Because he will have a perfect safety play to guarantee his contract. He will simply duck that queen. East will return the seven. West will take his ace and clear the suit, but South will be in full command. He will lead a diamond. If West plays low, South will finesse, but it turns out that West discards. East gets a trick with his king, but South winds up with his contract and an overtrick. Note that if South had gone after everything that wasn't nailed down he would have won that first spade. Then when East got in with the diamond king he would have led back the seven to give West four spade tricks and South would be to complain about bad luck. Not that he should blame bad luck, because bad play would have been the cause of his loss. (NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.)
