Herb Deuel, owner of Banbury Hot Springs resort, is among the many opponents of the trout farm proposal. He would like to see the area stay as it is.

Banbury Springs: 3 years of fish farm controversy with no quick solution expected

By RON ZELLAR
Times-News writer

BUHL — Three years and four months have elapsed since a Buhl fish farmer and two area Boy Scout leaders stirred up a bees'-nest by proposing to develop a fish farm at Banbury Springs.

The buzzing continues, although resolution of the conflict could be months or even years away.

A map sits in one corner of the Boy Scouts' Snake River Council office off Filer Avenue in Twin Falls. It depicts the improvements that could be made at the Scouts' Camp Roach at Banbury Springs with the estimated $25,000-a-year income from the fish development.

A thick folder, stuffed with legal documents, two versions of the water application and letters opposing it can be found at the state Department of Water Resources regional office in Twin Falls.

Among the documents is a petition against the proposed development, bearing the names of 387 Magic Valley residents, among them Boy Scouts and Scout leaders, as well as letters from students of high-school science classes that have used the area for study.

No public hearing has been held on the case, although nearly a dozen separate entities formally have protested the application.

A hearing scheduled for last August was postponed until November, then delayed again when the applicants amended their plan to join forces with the Idaho Power Co. — originally one of the protesters — and the lawyers for two of the remaining opponents requested additional time.

Loren Holmes, the regional administrator of the DWR, estimates that the hearing will be held in April, barring additional delays.

Meanwhile, trout developer Ken Ellis — against whom much of the criticism has been leveled — petitioned a federal court in Boise last week for a form of bankruptcy that would allow him to pay off a $9 million debt to creditors of his three fish-related companies.

That might have ended the case. State law gives five specific grounds for denying an application, including "not sufficient financial resources with which to complete the work involved." But with Idaho Power joining the applicants, a new source of money is potentially available.

Paul Juaregui, an attorney for Idaho Power, said Friday that he is waiting for a contract written by Ellis's attorney to arrive in the mail, and he could not comment on the utility's involvement until he knows more about what Ellis is proposing.

Ellis says he signed a contract last week that would turn over his application to Idaho Power if the company agrees with the document's language. He declined to be more specific.

"Our proposal was that Idaho Power build the facility anyway," Ellis says. "I would never have gotten involved in the site at all if the Boy Scouts hadn't asked me to."

DC10 skids into bay

BOSTON (UPI) — A World Airways DC-10 jet with at least 200 people aboard skidded off a runway and tipped nose-first into Boston Harbor as it tried to land in heavy fog and freezing rain at Logan International Airport Saturday night.

No serious injuries were reported, but at least 23 people were taken to hospitals. No definite cause for the accident was immediately determined, officials said.

The plane, Flight 30 from Los Angeles with a stopover at Newark, N.J., tried to land about 7:45 p.m. EST, skidded on runway 15 as it touched down, ran off the pavement, hit the rocks and tipped nose-first into the icy harbor. It submerged almost to the wings.

One passenger said the plane broke even when it tipped over and struck the water and the huge rocks that line the shore.

"It was just like a normal landing," said the unidentified woman passenger after she was brought into an airport terminal.

"Then we ran off the end of the runway into the water, and the plane broke apart. I was in the seventh row, and the wave came in and washed over us. We could see land. Everybody was pretty calm. I got out over the wing," she said, fighting back tears.

Massachusetts Port Authority spokesman Pat Mascariello said the left wing of the plane was damaged, but he could not confirm the plane had broken apart. He said there were 196 passengers and 12 crew members aboard.

Officials deal with disputes

BOISE (UPI) — Two Senate controversies were resolved easily in the Idaho Legislature this week — but House members pumped life into a pair of potentially chaotic matters.

Senators had been preparing for another round in their battle over how much their secretaries should be paid, but an anticipated floor fight was scrubbed when the minority Democrats agreed to give in.

A $3-per-day discrepancy between the parties in secretarial pay stemmed from a lack of communication and wouldn't be repeated they said.

Also last week, Senate President Pro Tem Reed Budge, R-Soda Springs, dropped his objections to the appointments by Gov. Jim Evans of Democrat Larry Mills and Republican Robert Saxvik to the Northwest Power Council. Budge and several other GOP senators battled the Democrats last year over how Idaho should be represented on the council.

He said Saxvik and Mills showed during their confirmation hearing that they were worthy of the appointments and could defend Idaho's rights on the regional panel. The appointments were confirmed unanimously by the Senate later in the week.

Imously by the Senate later in the week.

Rep. John Brooks, R-Gooding, infused the young session with an emotional issue, deciding to introduce a right-to-work bill. He said he hadn't planned to pursue the topic again this year, but events surrounding the troubled Bunker Hill Co. caused him to change his mind.

Also in the House, a reapportionment bill was drafted and introduced. But the three-member committee which submitted the plan — over the objections of its lone Democrat, Rep. James Stotchiff of Sandpoint — got poor reviews from the minority Democrats in both houses.

Stotchiff predicted Evans would veto the measure because it is little different than the one the governor marked with red ink last summer because of alleged gerrymandering in some of the state's 35 legislative districts.

One part of the Legislature which conducted its business with little controversy was the Joint Finance-Appropriations Committee. It passed budget requests from several state agencies — including the Health and Welfare Department.

Department Director Thomas "Les" Purce asked the panel to allocate $199 million to his agency for fiscal year 1983. It would be a 19.9 percent hike general funding.

Purce and other officials warned that a further decline in real spending power for Health and Welfare would severely damage some of the agency's programs. Purce also urged lawmakers to reinstate funding for the Air Quality Bureau, which was abolished last year.

State Tax Commissioner Larry Looney told the committee $894,000 is needed for 30 more auditors for the commission. He said it would allow the agency to tap tax cheaters for an estimated $3.7 million for the state's next fiscal year.

But committee members were skeptical of that request, saying money has been appropriated for the same purpose in previous years, but the funds always seem to get spent on something else.

Watt credits 'wild accusations' for spurring passage of his bills

BOISE (UPI) — James Watt Saturday thanked his liberal critics for their "wild accusations" about his administration Saturday.

The Interior Secretary claimed the statements helped to get his proposals through Congress without the slightest snag.

Watt, who was in Boise for the annual state Republican banquet, was met by about 100 protesters, carrying placards bearing such slogans as "We don't inherit the world from our ancestors, we borrow it from our children."

One child carried a sign reading, "What's left for us?"

But a caravan of farmers and ranchers were waiting on their other side of the Red Lion Inn-Riverside, where the festivities were being held, to greet Watt after the news conference.

A truck carrying a load of hay and several state legislators and bearing a sign reading "Buckaroos for Watt" headed up the party while a nearby car equipped with a loudspeaker system wailed country and western music.

When Watt's opponents learned he had exited the building to meet with his supporters, they moved around the complex shouting, "Dump Watt" and "We're right, Watt's wrong."

But the group was halted by Idaho State Police and Garden City squad cars. During the news conference,

JAMES WATT
at Boise fund raisers

Watt touted Idaho's senators and representatives as "the finest congressional delegation in Washington."

Watt said he had a "good working relationship" with Sen. James McClure and called Sen. Steve Symms "a tremendous addition" to the Senate.

He described Rep. Larry Craig as a "phenomenal leader" and said Rep. George Hansen belonged in a "class unto himself."

Watt said his first year as head of the Department of Interior had been "phenomenally successful," thanks, in part, to his critics.

"Some of the wild accusations really hurt," he said. But those "exaggerated accusations" forced Congress to see what Jim Watt is really doing.

He said his critics' claims caused Congress to apply some "common sense" when reviewing his proposals, and thus, the lawmakers approved all of his proposals intact.

Watt said when he took office he found "the department to be in bad need of good management." He said the national parks had been allowed to deteriorate "in such a shameful way" and that the country's wildlife refuges "had been ignored."

He claimed a half billion dollars of taxpayers' money had been lost due to mismanagement of the department.

However, he did not blame the department's state on former Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus, saying the former Idaho governor "did the very best job that he could."

Referring to his Christian beliefs, Watt said the Scriptures had taught him "to be stewards of the land that we can pass on to life itself in a better condition than it was when we take over."

Storms bury Twin Cities

By United Press International

A blizzard pummeled the Great Lakes region for a second day Saturday, buried Minneapolis-St. Paul under 3 feet of snow and dealt an icy blow to New England where a jetliner skidded off a runway in a freezing rain at Boston.

The DC-10 World Airways Newark-to-Boston jetliner ended up partly in Boston Harbor after trying to land. Officials said 190 passengers were on board, but no serious injuries were reported.

A blinding sheet of snow and wind silenced Minneapolis-St. Paul under 3-foot depths and stacked 20-foot drifts on Michigan highways.

At least 13 deaths were blamed on the latest storm, bringing the weather death toll to at least 383 since the first of the year when winter history was written and rewritten.

High wind warnings were posted for the Colorado Rockies where warm chinook winds were clocked at 90 mph.

Travel was almost impossible in some Midwestern states.

"We can't find the roads," lamented Wisconsin state Trooper Tom Wrynski in Wausau, Wis., as 60 mph winds massed the snow into mountainous drifts across the upper Midwest. Iowa windchills plummeted to 70 below zero.

As the mighty blizzard lingered, new storms spread over the Eastern Seaboard with snow and freezing rain that caused dozens of traffic accidents in Virginia and North Carolina, and knocked out power to thousands in Pennsylvania. Nearly a foot of snow was forecast for New England.

Winter storm warnings were issued Saturday in Connecticut, Massachusetts, New York, New Hampshire and Vermont.

Midwest driver solves problem of windshield ice build-up

Vermont Highway dispatcher Richard Foster said driving remained hazardous even in southern parts of the state where snow gave way to rain and freezing rain.

"It's not going to be good wheeling until late tomorrow," Foster said Saturday.

Winds clocked at more than 50 mph whipped snow and created poor visibility in New York. Snow changed to freezing rain in western New York early Saturday — glazing highways and knocking out power.

Up to 8 inches of snow was reported in northwestern Connecticut before it turned to freezing rain and utility companies braced for potential power outages by placing repair crews on alert.

Snow changed to freezing rain in the Washington, D.C., area and froze switches of subway tracks — disrupting service for several hours. About 4 inches of snow blanketed the city.

GOP chairman blames Evans

BOISE (UPI) — Idaho Republican Chairman Dennis Olsen blamed Gov. John Evans Saturday for the failure of an attempt by an Idaho investment consortium to buy the troubled Bunker Hill Co.

Olsen charged that the involvement of United Steelworkers of America officials caused the purchase efforts to collapse last week — and he said Evans could have helped the deal go through if he had put pressure on the union leaders to stay out of the way.

The GOP leader said the refusal of union officials Monday to certify the membership's vote to approve the proposed purchase also has led party executives to reverse gears and support efforts to pass a right-to-work law.

A right-to-work bill introduced last year did not receive the blessing of the GOP Central Committee. Consequently, several Republican senators teamed with Democrats to kill it.

Avalanches cleared from Utah resorts

ALTA, Utah (UPI) — More than 3,000 guests stranded at two mountain ski resorts by a dozen thundering avalanches finally received the all-clear Saturday to return home.

The narrow, two-lane road had been virtually closed since late Thursday when a major snow storm moved through northern Utah. Highway crews finally broke through the slides about 3 p.m. Saturday.

Before the road crews were given the okay to continue plowing Saturday, teams of ski patrolmen and mountaineers fired explosives at the slopes above the highway, causing three more moderate slides. The avalanches had buried the winding 10-mile road to Snowbird and Alta ski resorts with more than 12 feet of snow in places.

A number of guests who "very much needed to get out" were flown by helicopter to Salt Lake City, said Snowbird spokesman Packy Longfellow.

Friday's slides blocked the highway, struck a house and buried a dormitory. At first the U.S. Forest Service banned snowplows in some sections of the canyon because of high avalanche danger. But, there were no injuries.

Snowbird reported 24 new inches of snow Friday morning. In the next 12 hours, another storm dropped 30 inches of powder on the resort, making a total of 54 inches.

During the road closure Saturday, some stranded skiers enjoyed themselves in a deep powder heaven because Snowbird was able to operate five of its seven lifts.

One giant slide Friday smashed into an employee dormitory as the workers ate breakfast. Another avalanche tumbled down the resort's House Slide, smashing into the home of Snowbird developer Ted Johnson.

Thornberg told to stick with BBB in column

BOISE (UPI) — Boise Better Business Bureau Executive Director Thornberg has been told by his board of directors to confine his newspaper columns to topics that deal with activities of the organization.

Board Chairman Michael Reuling said Friday the BBB was continuing to probe charges by Commerce Journal publisher Christopher O'Kelly that Thornberg plagiarized about 15 political-opinion columns printed under Thornberg's name in the newspaper.

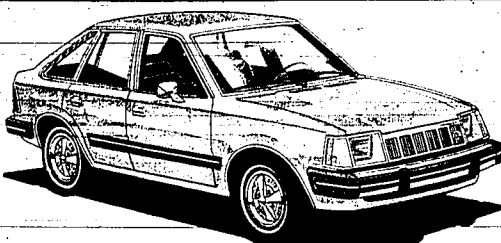

The board's action against Thornberg followed complaints to individual board members from O'Kelly after the publisher found that several of Thornberg's columns were word-for-word reprints of The Birch Book, written for the John Birch Society by John McManis, Belmont, Mass.

Thornberg, who is a member of the John Birch Society, said he saw nothing wrong with reprinting the columns because he had permission from the author.

Which of tax code plans is necessary?

Idaho lawmakers should pass some form of legislation this session to make the state conform to the federal tax code.

Just how that will be accomplished will be a priority for the House Revenue and Taxation Committee this week when it takes up at least two bills on the subject, one from Rep. Morgan Munger, R-Ola, and one expected to come from Gov. John Evans.

Evans' proposal simply asks for the adoption of the federal tax guidelines that Congress adopted last year under the Economic Recovery Act. Conformity would make it easier for Idahoans to file their tax returns and reduce the red tape for the state.

Munger's plan goes further. It calls for conformity but also juggles some of the higher-income tax brackets to actually increase rates. He says this is needed to offset the loss of state revenue that will result from the federal tax cuts.

Not knowing the exact details of Munger's plan makes it difficult to decide, at this point, whether it merits serious consideration. But we hope it isn't discarded on its face just because of the scare words "tax hike."

Idaho can scarcely afford to lose more revenues. While conforming to the federal tax code makes sense, it might also make sense to recoup lost revenues through Munger's bill.

A healthy debate by House Revenue and Taxation Committee members might give the answer.

Thornberg should quit

The Boise Better Business Bureau should replace Ken Thornberg, its executive director.

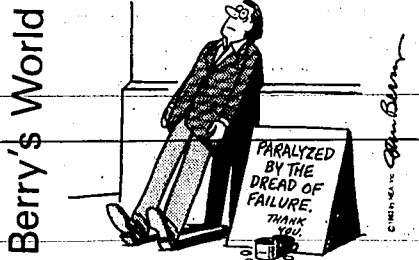

By his own admission, Thornberg published numerous political opinions authored by the John Birch Society under his regular column in a Boise newspaper. Thornberg never attributed the Birch connection and readers therefore assumed it was his or the Better Business Bureau's position.

Although the BBB has now ordered Thornberg to stick to organization-related matters, the damage has been done.

Thornberg has discredited his very livelihood, that being to promote honesty in business and fairness toward consumers. Now that the column plagiarism has come to light, he has given the Better Business Bureau a black eye and has become an embarrassment to his profession.

At one time The Times-News published Thornberg's column, but halted it nearly two years ago, primarily because it was centered about Boise and not Twin Falls. We had not known about his John Birch Society connections until the revelations about his column last week.

Plagiarism by any official in a position of responsibility, particularly by one who ostensibly is looking out for the public's interest, should not be tolerated. If Thornberg has any scruples at all, he'll offer his resignation to the BBB.

Hero Lenny Skutnik: A spark from out of the ashes

© Universal Press Syndicate

SCRABBLE, Va. — We are snowbound tonight. Here in the Blue Ridge Mountains, our gravel road is blocked to Woodville on the east and to Five Forks on the west. Outside, the falling snow prompts apprehension; inside, a fire on the kitchen hearth prompts reflection. Let me reflect on a man named Lenny Skutnik.

Two days ago, it is said to have been one of 200 million persons, almost no one had heard of Martin Leonard Skutnik III. He is 28. Reporters have identified him as a former meatpacker, house painter, furniture plant worker, hamburger cook, and strip-and-wax man — whatever that is — at Ralph's supermarket in Simi Valley, Calif. More recently he has been working in Washington, D.C., as a general office worker in the Congressional Budget Office.

By way of further biography, Skutnik is married to a pretty dark-haired woman by the name of Linda. They have two sons — Michael, aged 8, and Glen, 6 months.

They live in a rented town house in a middle-class suburb south of the city. Their idea of a big night on the town is to take the kids to a pizza parlor. Skutnik's name could be Legion, for he is many.

A little after 4 o'clock on Wednesday, Jan. 13, Air Florida's Flight 90 crashed on takeoff into Washington's 14th Street Bridge and fell into the Potomac River. By sheer chance, Skutnik happened to be on hand. He stood with other spectators on the riverbank. He saw a woman survivor struggling in the icy water. To make a long and moving story short, Skutnik plunged into the river and rescued her. He had never taken a life-saving course in his life.

Helping hands pulled the two of them out of the water. Skutnik was not done. Half-frozen, he gave his coat to another survivor, Joseph Stiley, suffering from two broken legs. Then an ambulance took Lenny Skutnik to a hospital for treatment. He was true to character. "How much is this going to cost me?" he asked.

This is perhaps not the time to expatiate on the nature of news. In the same week that the press reported the heroism of Lenny Skutnik, we reported, as we must, upon crime, corruption and drug abuse. We reported on educational failures and civic mismanagement. So long as good is the norm and evil is the novelty, this must remain the nature of news.

Yet the story of Lenny Skutnik, who risked his life to save a stranger, tells us something beyond the event itself. He is part of the good news that by definition isn't news at all. Looking at the softly flaming fire on the hearth, I am minded to try a metaphor.

From mid-October to mid-March, here in the mountains, we keep the kitchen fire going most of the time. At night the fire is banked. To look at the fireplace in the morning, you would say the fire was dead. Nothing is visible but a heap of gray ashes. No spark can be seen.

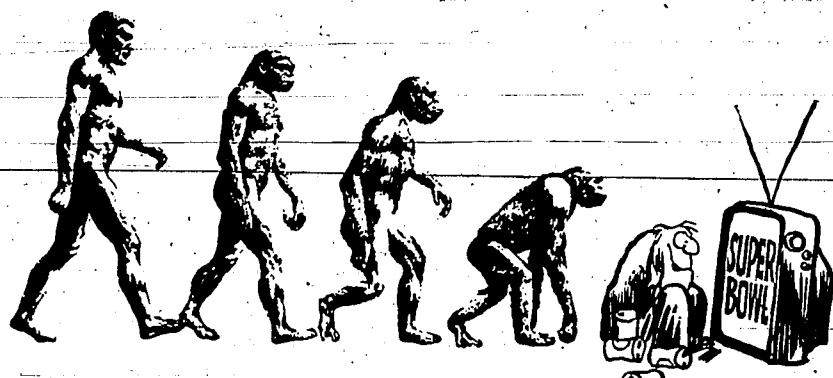

So it seems with the American republic. We are surfeited with bad news. We feed on a diet of unemployment, of ruinous interest rates, of poverty-stricken families, of young people who drop out of school and turn to crime on the streets. We daily are treated to news of greed and gluttony and the abuse of power. Reading the papers, we often are inclined to say: This fire is dead. Nothing but ashes remains.

But let me tell you how it really is. We brush aside those ashes of violence and indifference and apathy. Something more is there. We keep looking. And down at the bottom of the hearth, underneath all that, good red coals are glowing still. The embers are alive and warm and waiting. We look closely, and we see the cheerful face of Lenny Skutnik, 28, American.

The goodness is there. It has been there all along. It stays there through all the winters of our discontent, banked for the night against tales of folly and misfortune. The embers we identify as heroism, patriotism, kindness and self-sacrifice — these embers never die. They need only to be breathed upon, and coaxed and kindled, and they will flame through all the tomorrow mornings with fire that warms bystanders on the shore.

EVOLUTION OF MAN

Bruce Hammond

No justice for F&G proposal

It's not right when legislation falls simply because lawmakers don't understand it. It seems that even a bad proposal should have a chance to be heard before going down in flaming defeat.

But with a recent Idaho Fish and Game Department plan to crack down on trespassers, some committee members turned their thumbs down, thinking they were talking about outlawing "road hunting."

When a few of them read this column, they probably still won't know what I'm talking about. But that's how the system works sometimes. Part of it was the legislators' fault for not reading the legislation; the rest probably falls on the Fish and Game official who made an unclear presentation.

The bill was straightforward enough. Game officers want public roadways to extend out to property lines, not just to the road's shoulder, as the present law reads. This way, they could better enforce the rule that says hunters can not shoot from a road onto private property.

According to Fish and Game enforcement chief Dale Baird, farmers have been complaining heatedly about pheasant hunters stopping their cars and shooting at birds on their land.

For those that don't know — and this apparently includes a few on the House Resources and Conservation Committee — that is already against the law.

The reason is obvious. If the hunter is a good shot, it's over the fence and across private property — often the bounty.

What the proposed bill would have meant in practical terms was that sportsmen could no longer hunt in borrow pits. This is a popular and lawful activity right now, but it frequently serves as an effective excuse for those caught shooting onto posted property. Fish and Game officers believe that by outlawing all hunting along roads, they could curb trespassers.

If you want to debate this stand, there is the argument that senior citizens or the disabled should be able to hunt in borrow pits because they can't tramp across rough farm land. Rep. Linden Bateman, R-Idaho Falls, offered this opposition, but it was one of the few that actually applied to the proposed legislation.

Instead, several committee members insisted on arguing that the law was meant to prohibit shooting from roadways. Rep. Wayne Tibbitts, R-Rigby, said he could see the danger "of shooting across a highway," but he didn't want to prevent people "from road hunting."

Several other legislators agreed, noting that they themselves hunt from roads.

I repeat, shooting from highways already is illegal and not the subject of the proposal.

And also forgotten, it seems, were the farmers, who are tired of shotgun loads soaring over their heads or past their spooked cattle and sheep, which hurrying hunters sometimes fail to notice when they screech their car to a stop and chase after a pheasant.

As a person living in the heart of fantastic pheasant country, I personally see nothing wrong with using a car to track down birds so long as the car is parked off the roadway and the landowner doesn't mind your presence.

I also should add that most Magic Valley hunters follow these simple courtesies, and most farmers tolerate the hunters as long as they don't run around blasting everything that wiggles.

Maybe the Fish and Game's proposal infringed too much on personal freedoms, but that's not the point. Regardless of merit, it's irritating that the proposal wasn't considered by some of the committee members.

By failing to read the bill — or listen to anything other than their own thoughts — they denied the proposal a fair appearance.

That's the gist of it, and in turn, I've become slightly disillusioned by the process. I just hope more significant bills, dealing with appropriations or criminal justice, don't crumble in the same fashion.

Letters to the editor

Education: missing facts

Editor, Times-News:

The recent front page article regarding scholastic education standings reading the Twin Falls pupils were above the national average of 50 percent is interesting and you are to be commended for making it a front page item. We sorely need any good news about students' scholastic improvements.

The article is as important for what it does not say as for what it does state. To me, 50 percent is a failing grade in any language, however. If we have improved from last year, whatever our score was, that is what is important. That comparison is missing. The high sounding phrase "high quality education" is just rhetoric, and could be expected from a vice president in charge of miscellaneous.

The good teachers/management who have contributed to this hopefully increased score are to be commended, and admiration for all involved would truly mount if the remarks about the teachers' "sacrifices" have been omitted. We certainly have many (not all) underpaid teachers and it may be we have one overpaid or malassigned "coordinator of auxiliary services."

He knows something about rabbits

Editor, Times-News:

I have never written a letter to a newspaper before, but I feel I have something to say at this time concerning this rabbit problem.

When I was a kid, 15 years or so ago, I used to hunt rabbits around hayfields because that was the best place to find them. Even then, I noticed the fields were cut back 50 feet or more. At that time I thought, "I'll bet the farmer won't mind if I kill off a bunch of these rabbits," so I did with a little help from my friends.

Then, it was just young kid instinct; I don't hunt much anymore, but that was good old rabbit hunting.

Now, the problem is the farmer has to make a living off from his hay. The same hay the rabbits are eating. Personally, it is my opinion that man has dominated this earth from the time he first chomped down on a lizard loin and has since kept it up. Man is dominant over all creatures and that, whoever thinks otherwise, is pure, unadulterated fact. (Theology aside, please, we all know that story.)

If you have a mouse in your house, you want to get rid of it so you set a trap and catch it. You kill it! These farmers and ranchers have the right to protect their property from natural elements such as rabbits, because they have earned the right.

On Jan. 20 you guys put the farmer/rancher in perspective with the elements, i.e., G. Warchol. I appreciate that! I'm sick of the poor rabbit story, what about us humans who have to live with the conscience of knowing what we're doing?

Bernice Ross, you are absolutely right!

Treasures saved from FDR home

HYDE PARK, N.Y. (UPI) — Flames raged through the roof and upper floors of President Franklin D. Roosevelt's family mansion Saturday, but Park Service employees saved most of its priceless historical items.

The roof of the sprawling Georgian mansion overlooking the Hudson River 13 miles from New York City was completely destroyed and the attic and third floor were badly damaged.

Turning out in a snow storm, Park Service employees braved the flames to pull out paintings and other treasures. Officials said almost everything in the building was saved.

But some items — including paintings, china and furniture — were damaged by water and smoke.

Among the many exhibits at the museum is Roosevelt's 1936 Ford Phaeton, with its top down and its hand levers work the clutch and brake — his legs were paralyzed.

"We moved to a safe place with a good number of the artifacts," said Park Service employee Dixon

Freelan. "We are not sure yet of the water damage, but we feel they are going to be in pretty good shape."

Flames were shooting through the roof when firefighters arrived at the mansion, now a museum, which Roosevelt called the "Big House."

About 200 volunteer firefighters from 10 fire departments battled the blaze in zero-degree temperatures and snow which froze equipment. The fire was brought under control about 4 a.m.

Several firefighters suffered frostbite and two were treated for smoke inhalation.

Cause of the fire was under investigation, but fire officials said faulty electrical wiring was a "possibility."

Hyde Park Fire Chief Edward Ferris said the roof was completely destroyed and the attic and third floor of the structure were badly damaged.

He said an alarm system in the mansion alerted the fire department, allowing firemen to get to the scene quickly.

Celebration planned at FDR house

HYDE PARK, N.Y. (UPI) — Franklin Delano Roosevelt called it the "Big House" and there he spent many of his years, seeking rest and respite among the great trees and rolling hills beside the Hudson River.

Roosevelt was born in the house, which has 35 rooms and nine baths, and which was damaged by a fire Saturday.

Next Saturday, ceremonies will be held at the library and museum nearby to mark the 100th anniversary of his birth.

The library-museum is a magnificent evocation of Roosevelt, his wife, Eleanor, and the desperate times of depression and war that he graced.

The mansion was being readied to take part in the centenary of Roosevelt, who was born in 1882, when the fire struck.

The ceremonies will open with a formal laying of a graveside presidential wreath.

More wiretaps expected for federal drug investigations

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The nation's top federal drug enforcer says court-approved wiretaps probably will be used more often in drug investigations now that the FBI is working closely with the Drug Enforcement Administration.

Acting Drug Enforcement Administrator Francis Mullen Jr. said in the past the agency wanted to use court-approved electronic bugs in its investigations but often could not because it was "just a manpower killer."

Now, with the FBI given authority to investigate drug cases, Mullen said, there could be an increase in the use of wiretaps against drug traffickers.

"I believe it will occur," Mullen told United Press International in an exclusive interview.

This week, Attorney General William French Smith authorized a greater role for the FBI in fighting drug trafficking. The move was in line with the administration's goal of cracking down on narcotics.

"Those who are profiting, we are going to make it prohibitively expensive for them personally and financially," Mullen said.

Smith said a reorganization involving the Drug Enforcement Administration will allow the FBI to supplement the drug agency's resources.

In the past, the FBI has had the chief responsibility for enforcing other federal criminal laws, but did not have jurisdiction over drug violations.

President Reagan nominated Mullen last week to become the permanent administrator of the drug agency. A ranking career FBI official, he has been its acting head for the past six months.

Mullen said that since July, the FBI and the drug agency have been conducting 125 joint investigations, many using wiretaps.

Although there was not a significant increase in the number of electronic bugs, he said, "they have played a significant role in our current investigations."

"I am absolutely confident there will be better cases because of the use of wiretaps," Mullen said.

Mullen, who has a direct telephone on his desk to FBI Director William Webster, said the closer coordination will allow both agencies to best utilize their expertise.

For instance, he said, the FBI may have been investigating bank fraud and embezzlement that eventually could lead to drug trafficking.

"Maybe we'll be expanding investigations where in the past we might have looked narrowly at bank fraud," Mullen said.

Some 25 percent of the FBI's organized crime investigations involve some form of drug trafficking and 22 of the 125 cases currently under joint investigation involve some form of public corruption, he said.

Budget paradox

Congress' task: Cutting deficit without changing taxes

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Congress is faced with a key budget question this year: How will it reduce a record deficit without raising taxes or renege on a tax cut in an election year?

The answer is it probably can't and won't. Instead, reductions may be limited to closing some loopholes on past tax breaks.

In addition, there is some doubt that last year's coalition of Southern conservative Democrats called the "boll weevils" and the moderate Northern Republicans dubbed the "gypsy moths" will remain reliable sources of needed votes for administration budget victories.

The lawmakers, convening Monday after a five-week Christmas recess, plan to take their cue on the budget — at least initially — from President Reagan who will outline the second year of his economic package in his State of the Union address Tuesday.

But the substance of his speech is still anyone's guess.

Reports that he had reluctantly decided to seek an increase in federal excise taxes to help the deficit to about $90 billion apparently crumbled in the face of bitter opposition from the second group.

So the president took to his Camp David mountain retreat to sort out his decisions on proposed spending cuts and tax increases that will hold his budget deficit below the $100 billion mark.

Regardless of his decision, the Reagan's budget will contain the largest deficit in history, surpassing the $96.4 billion red ink figure posted in 1976.

Although inflation has subsided in recent months, most economists warn that interest rates could rebound to last year's record high levels in the face of the Federal Reserve Board's tight money policy and the administration's looming budget deficit forecasts.

In light of those deficits, many Congress members are expected to heed the warnings of some private economists that last year's record tax cut bill — with a $749 billion price tag over six years — should be scaled back.

Some suggest suspending the third stage of the personal tax cut — a 10 percent reduction scheduled for July 1, 1983, or postponing the indexing provision scheduled for 1984 that would prevent taxpayers from being bumped into higher tax brackets just because their income kept pace with inflation.

Others have recommended repealing the "leasing" provision of the tax cut legislation that permits unprofitable business to sell their unused investment tax credits to profitable firms. Critics call it an expensive boondoggle for big business.

However, any move to dismantle part of last year's tax cut bill will open the entire legislation to alterations, which the administration opposes.

The other question is who will make the first move. By law, all tax legislation must begin in the House. But the Democratic-controlled Ways and Means Committee is unlikely to launch any move that will help the administration lower the deficit.

Committee Republicans, outnumbered 23-12, are equally unlikely to garner enough votes to get a GOP-tax program out of committee.

It seems the Republican-controlled Senate will have to make the first move on the tax front, but only if it can find an appropriate House-passed revenue bill to use as a vehicle, sending it back to the House for action.

Haig ignores Kissinger

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Henry Kissinger's criticism of the administration's foreign policy so angered Secretary of State Alexander Haig that he decided, against Kissinger's advice, to meet with Soviet Foreign Secretary Andrei Gromyko, well-informed sources report.

The sources said the administration came to a decision early in January to defer strategic arms negotiations with the Soviets because of the Polish crisis.

At one point, they said, Haig seriously weighed the option of canceling next week's scheduled meeting with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko altogether but made up his mind to go ahead with it after reading an article by Kissinger.

In his two-part article in The New York Times, the former secretary of state sharply criticized the administration, suggesting it lacks a coherent policy toward the world in general and the Soviet Union in particular.

Kissinger proposed a moratorium on high-level contacts with the Soviet Union.

It was almost possible to see Haig's jaw harden as he made up his mind to defy his one-time mentor and go ahead with the Gromyko meeting Tuesday in Geneva, the sources said.

The decision was given to Soviet Ambassador Anatoly Dobrynin Wednesday, the officials said.

Prosecutors may widen scope of Atlanta trial

ATLANTA (UPI) — With the murder trial of Wayne Williams a month old, the prosecution wants to tell the jury that he killed about a dozen of the 26 young blacks abducted and slain in Atlanta — not merely the two for which he is on trial.

The trial of the chubby, black would-be talent scout for the murders of Jimmy Ray Payne and Nathaniel Cater enters its fifth week awaiting a crucial ruling from Judge Clarence Cooper.

Cooper, a young black judge from whom rulings appear to come slowly and painfully, must decide whether the prosecution, in order to try to establish a pattern, can give the jury evidence that Williams was involved in 10 more of the killings.

There was some surprise that Cooper was not prepared to make a ruling immediately after hearing arguments — since the prosecution filed a motion six months ago.

There would be no legal question of Williams' guilt in the 10 cases in which he is not charged, but the implications are obvious.

Prosecutors, under a gag order laid out months ago by Cooper, refused to discuss why they did not charge Williams with some of the other 10 killings to begin with — especially since they appear to have as much or more evidence in those murders as they do in the killings of Cater and Payne.

In fact, in his arguments against the motion, defense attorney Al Bister remarked, "Why they ever picked those two cases to indict on I'll never know, but mine is not to question why."

PICTURES AND WALL ORNAMENTS give a room the touches of color and visual intrigue that help it to "come alive". The finest furniture will have an incomplete look if the walls are all bare. Wall decor is like the jewelry that turns a woman's simplest dress into a striking outfit.

Besides providing a dramatic or restful place for the eye to fall, paintings can be useful decoratively. You can use the colors in a painting to tie your room colors together, for example. However, it's not a good idea to choose a painting for this purpose alone. You should select it because you like it. Keep your decor personally yours — not artificial.

You may want to group several smaller paintings for wall interest, or create a wall display for hobby items. Artifacts brought back from a special vacation, pieces of sculpture, antiques — all can give your room eye appeal. Today's trend is toward more ornamentation — so be bold!

From eye-catching wall decor to striking accessories and famous names in quality furnishings for every room, our selection offers solutions to your decorating needs. Let us help you beautify your home in keeping with your good taste... and your budget.

Clues in Air Florida mystery fall into place

WASHINGTON (UPI) — It may be months before investigators determine the chain of events that caused Air Florida Flight 90 to crash into the Potomac River, but a few pieces of the puzzle are beginning to fit together.

Testimony of witnesses and findings of the investigative teams studying weather and runway conditions paint a picture of a jet in trouble from the moment it began its takeoff roll, until its plunge into the icy Potomac River approximately 12 seconds after it rotated or lifted off the runway in a snowstorm.

"Palm 90," as Air Florida was known in communications with the control tower, was due to leave National Airport at 2:15 p.m. Jan. 13 for Tampa, Fla. Snowstorm was backing up operations at National, and the airport shut down for about an hour to clear the main runway.

Palm 90 was being de-iced with a solution of 25 percent ethylene glycol and 75 percent water when the crew learned the runway was closed. The de-icing procedure was stopped after one wing was completed.

When the runway re-opened, the jet went through a second, complete de-icing, with a stronger 60-40 solution of water and glycol. This may have been completed around 3:15 p.m., although investigators have said it may have been as long as 49 minutes from the jet's last de-icing treatment and its fatal takeoff.

De-icing is important. Ice can significantly change the aerodynamic characteristics of the wing, disrupting the airflow and reducing lift produced by the movement of air over the wing's surfaces. A loss of lift, in turn, can cause a stall, and the presence of ice can significantly raise the stalling speed.

The thunderous shaking of the twin-jet described by some of the five survivors just before the plane, crashed is one indication of a stall.

Capt. Larry Wheaton, 35, pushed off from the gate at 3:22 p.m. and began taxiing the Boeing 737 to the runway. There, he waited for more than half an hour before being given tower clearance to take off at 3:59 p.m.

At least two of the five survivors said the plane seemed to take a long time to pick up speed; once off the runway, it started vibrating fiercely.

Three witnesses said the plane lifted off about 5,200 feet down the 6,869-foot runway. The normal point should have been closer to 3,900 feet. Any farther down, the jet could no longer abort without going into the river.

As it gathered speed, a watching Braniff pilot commented on the amount of ice on the plane's wings.

After liftoff, tower radar apparently picked up "Palm 90" three times: once at about 75 feet above the runway, once at approximately 350 feet, and once at approximately 450 feet as it was in a gradual left bank and nearing a railroad bridge, the first of several spans on the Potomac. The jet cleared the railroad bridge but then clipped a bridge clogged with commuter traffic and plunged, nose still up, into the river.

Two witnesses reported seeing the plane's nose at a steep 30 degrees after takeoff. National Transportation Safety Board member Francis McAdams said an angle of 15 degrees would have been the maximum appropriate in icing conditions.

One investigator believes either the pilot did not apply the proper amount of engine power on takeoff, "or he was heavier than he thought he was." The estimated weight of the aircraft was 102,867 pounds. The steep rate of climb could have been an effort to compensate for the long takeoff.

McAdams said one recovered wing indicated the settings on the plane's flaps — control surfaces to aid lift-off — were proper for the weather conditions.

Earlier, two pilots reported braking on runway was poor; a weather information recording tape for pilots called braking action fair. The runway had one-fourth to one-half inch of packed snow at the time of takeoff, but the center line lights were clear and that area appeared clear. Several pilots awaiting takeoff along with "Palm 90" observed no ice buildup on the doomed jet's wings. However, two other pilots besides the Braniff pilot reported seeing some ice buildup.

Reagan blunders at news conference

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan's stumbling into a thicket of errors at his news conference is keeping his spokesmen at their damage control stations.

Reagan uttered the nationally televised appearance last Tuesday to roll out examples to support his sanctions against Poland, the unemployment rate and his pet call for voluntarism.

But all three of those statements slipped off the tracks. Asked what effect the Polish-linked economic sanctions he imposed against the Soviet Union were having, Reagan concluded his answer by saying he had a "lengthy communication" from Pope John Paul II and that the pontiff approves of what we've done so far. He believes that it has been beneficial.

The next day the Vatican said the letter was a general, non-political communication not intended to express approval for any action. David Gergen, the White House communications director, told reporters Thursday the 3 1/4-page letter was in the same category as confidential letters between "heads of state" and would discuss it no further. Reagan's second flub came on a question about government programs that assist poor people from federal to state jurisdiction. The president dipped back to a speech he made in New York a week ago for an example of a program in Pima County, Ariz., that provided elderly citizens with warm food.

"They were spending some $57,000 and only $3,000 of that was going for food, the $50,000 was going for advertising and they were waiting for it with volunteers. They are spending $6,000 in food, feeding twice as many people, and it only costs $6,000, not $57,000."

Reporters checked the story and found the workers were volunteers only because a federal grant had administrative help. They are waiting for their paychecks from a new grant. The stories also showed the number of people being fed had increased because other government-sponsored centers in the area had been shut. Gergen said there was "a good faith effort" by the White House to check out the information before it went to Reagan. He said the data originally came to the Office of Management and Budget in October from one of the program's officials.

The third strike came from Reagan cited statistics to back a statement that "there are a million more people working" now than a year ago, despite the rising unemployment figures. He laid out average percentages for the unemployment rate that turned out to be incorrect.

The next day he rolled back on the statistics at a speech for government bureaucrats and substituted a new set of figures, saying there were 148,000 more persons now employed than a year ago.

Within an hour, deputy press secretary Larry Speakes gave a final clarification on it, giving new averages, explaining the "apples and oranges" involved and coming back, through different arithmetic, to the million-plus figure Reagan originally had given.

Statistician becomes own jobless statistic

DES MOINES, Iowa (UPI) — Economist Steve Rosenow has spent the past three years charting unemployment figures for the state of Iowa. Next month he will become one of his own statistics.

Rosenow is one of 273 state Job Service employees who will lose their jobs because of federal and state budget cuts.

"There's a tendency for people like me, who deal with figures to get carried away with dealing with only numbers," said Rosenow, who is married and the father of two. "This definitely adds a human aspect to those numbers."

Next week, he will put the finishing touches on the state's unemployment figures for December, clean out his desk and join the growing ranks of millions of Americans looking for work.

"It's not like I didn't see it coming," said the 30-year-old Iowa State University graduate who joined Job Service in 1977. "We knew there would be some layoffs for several weeks."

"I figured I would probably end up getting laid-off," he said.

But the future is brighter for Rosenow and other Job Service workers than for many of Iowa's unemployed.

Arms sale study says Reagan too permissive

NEW YORK (UPI) — An independent study of global arms sales says the Reagan administration's weapons transfer policy is too "permissive," injecting a new level of lethal technology in Latin America and fueling an arms race in Asia.

The criticism appears in "The Global Politics of Arms Sales," published by the Princeton University Press and released by the Council on Foreign Relations, a non-partisan think tank.

Alarmed by arms proliferation in the world's most volatile regions, author Andrew J. Pierre, a State Department official for two years in the 1960s and now a Senior Fellow of the council, urged the adoption of an international code to regulate arms transfers to avoid further destabilization.

Adjusted for inflation, the value of arms transfers soared from $9 billion in 1970 to more than $20 billion in 1980, said Pierre, with 81 percent of exported weaponry going to the Third World, which experienced 114 of the 120 conflicts recorded between 1965 and 1979.

The Middle East took the lion's share, followed by Asia.

Four countries exported 87.5 percent of the weapons sent to developing nations in the 1970s, with the United States providing 45 percent, followed by the Soviet Union (27.5 percent), France (10 percent) and Britain (5 percent).

Arms sale is the issue on which the Carter and Reagan administrations differ the most, said Pierre, who spent four years researching the book.

President Carter's policy may have been overly restrictive and restrictions born of human rights concerns were applied inconsistently, he said. But "in the Reagan administration it ran the risk of becoming overly permissive."

Pierre noted the Reagan administration moved quickly to lift several existing bans on arms sales and engineer new sales to countries in the Middle East, Asia and Latin America.

Arguing Venezuela has no real security problem, Pierre said the offer of F-16 fighter-bombers to that country marked the first proposed sale of such sophisticated aircraft to Latin America, "crossing a threshold that had been carefully observed up to then."

School water heater studied

OKLAHOMA CITY (UPI) — The pieces of a water heater, creased and ruptured in an explosion that killed five students and a teacher at Star Elementary School, Saturday were spread across the floor of the state fire marshal's office.

Long after the last victim had been taken from the Spencer, Okla., school Tuesday, the water heater lay 30 yards from its original site in the school's kitchen.

The heater had landed north of the kitchen, although the force of the blast had broken through a wall to the south, raining down bricks and glass on children and teachers in the cafeteria.

Investigators, several hours after the blast, removed the water heater and two valves that were supposed to control steam pressure in the tank. From their base in the fire marshal's office, the officials were trying to determine why steam was allowed to build up to such a high level.

News of the noon hour explosion spread rapidly Tuesday and parents rushed to the school, only to be told they had to go to a community center a few miles away to find out the locations of their children.

Some learned at the center their children had died.

Lawyers offer crime-prevention tips

Sunday, January 24, 1982 Times-News, Twin Falls, Idaho A-7

CHICAGO (UPI) — A crime task force of the American Bar Association offered a potpourri of crime-prevention proposals Saturday that both support and oppose the Reagan administration's position on solving U.S. crime problems.

The ABA panel is recommending that the nation's largest lawyers group back the use of controversial "preventive detention" programs aimed at keeping violent criminal defendants in jail while they await trial.

Preventive detention — blasted by civil liberties groups as a violation of a suspect's constitutional right to be presumed innocent until proven guilty — also is supported by the Reagan administration.

But the ABA Task Force on Crime strongly differs with the administration's proposals for launching a massive prison construction program and for abandoning the "exclusionary rule" — an important legal standard that generally forbids courts to accept evidence that has been illegally seized by police.

The panel was created by the ABA in the wake of Chief Justice Warren Burger's much-discussed speech to the group last year, in which he called for a major overhaul of the criminal justice system in order to stem the rising tide of crime and violence.

The task force report was set for discussion Saturday by delegates to the ABA mid-year convention.

"The task force does not present these as a solution to crime; instead, they should be considered as a means of controlling crime," the panel cautioned at the start of its 66-pages of recommendations to the 280,000-member organization. The ABA has not yet approved the report.

Discussing preventive detention, the committee stressed it should be employed "only after a hearing at which clear and convincing evidence is used to prove the need for the detention."

And it should only be considered for suspects who have "been convicted of a crime of violence within the preceding 10 years and no condition or combination of conditions will reasonably assure the safety of the community," it stated.

The exclusionary rule — a little understood but important standard of American criminal justice — provided by the ABA panel with a point of major departure from the Reagan administration's ideas about crime.

Law enforcement officials have long been highly critical of the rule for allowing some criminals to escape convictions on technicalities. Supreme Court Justice William Rehnquist also has frequently spoken out against it.

Pope's Britain trip helps relations

LONDON (UPI) — Diplomatic relations between London and the Vatican have been upgraded and Pope John Paul II will visit Britain in May, heralding possible closer ties between the Roman Catholic and Anglican churches.

"Somewhere in the British subconscious the pope is still a bogeyman, an ancient symbol of dark and menacing fears," the religious affairs correspondent of The Times wrote recently.

But there have been few signs so far of hostility to the pontiff's visit, except from the extreme Protestant fringe in Scotland and Northern Ireland, where the welcome planned for John Paul is viewed as a betrayal of the old hardline position of "no popery."

Many members of the Church of England, including Archbishop Robert Runcie of Canterbury, have joined with the pope in expressing the desire that the visit will speed the eventual union of the Roman Catholic Church and the worldwide Anglican communion, which includes the Episcopal Church in the United States.

The pope plans an "ecumenical pilgrimage" to Canterbury, the Anglicans' prime archdiocese. He will meet Queen Elizabeth II, the supreme governor of the Church of England whose predecessor, King Henry VIII, created the state church independent of the pope in the 16th century.

In political terms, that breach was completely healed last week when the British government and the Vatican announced a decision to raise diplomatic relations to the level of ambassador.

Runcie said the decision had no direct bearing on spiritual relations between the churches, but he hoped the move would increase the chance of ecumenical progress at the visit.

"If the pope does make an ecumenical gesture, I think most Anglicans will be enthusiastic, and it will have an important effect on our future relations," said the Rev. Christopher Hill, Runcie's foreign policy adviser.

Runcie and the pope met in Accra, Ghana, in May 1980 and apparently succeeded in overcoming some of the suspicion and confusion caused in the Vatican when the previous Archbishop of Canterbury, Donald Coggan, appealed for immediate intercommunion without waiting for unity between the two churches.

French sign 25-year Soviet pipeline deal

PARIS (UPI) — The French government signed a 25-year agreement with the Soviet Union Saturday to buy natural gas from the planned Soviet-European pipeline.

The contract, under which France will buy 8 billion cubic meters of Siberian gas a year beginning in 1984, was the first important agreement concluded between Moscow and the West since the Polish crisis began in December.

In West Germany, meanwhile, conservative leader Franz Josef Strauss urged the government to reconsider its participation in the controversial pipeline project.

"This deal must be re-examined urgently in the framework of measures against the military dictatorship in Poland and its instigators in Moscow," Strauss said in an interview with the Bild am Sonntag newspaper.

The Soviet Union and West Germany, signed an $15 billion agreement in 1975 providing for Western construction of the 2,800-mile pipeline to deliver natural gas from Siberia to Western Europe. It was the biggest East-West trade deal in history.

West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt's government has said repeatedly it will carry out the pipeline agreement despite American pressure for sanctions against the Soviets.

Schmidt, speaking at a Social Democratic Party meeting in Hamburg Friday night, called for "a firm speech and moderation in judgment" in dealing with Poland to avoid an East-West confrontation.

Demonstrators flock to Geneva for peace march

GENEVA, Switzerland (UPI) — About 4,000 members of church, labor and left-wing groups from western Europe held a "peace march" Saturday in Geneva, where U.S. Secretary of State Alexander Haig meets Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko next week.

The demonstrators carried banners criticizing both superpowers and demanding such things as a Soviet withdrawal from Afghanistan, the end of U.S. backing for the ruling junta in El Salvador and the dismantling of all military alliances.

Many protesters expressed sympathy with the Solidarity labor union in Poland. Pro-Solidarity signs fluttered alongside demands for the removal of all nuclear weapons from Europe East and West.

The turnout was a fraction of the 20,000 to 30,000 hoped for by a Swiss peace committee set up by church, trade union and left-wing political groups.

Dear Abby

40-year-old man has first night jitters

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
© Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Some time ago, a 19-year-old college boy, signed "Never Been Kissed," was embarrassed because of his lack of experience with the opposite sex. He was a virgin and getting close to a sexual relationship with his girlfriend and didn't know how to handle it. You advised him to act as though he knew what he was doing, follow his natural instincts and bluff his way through.

Would you give the same advice to a man more than twice his age with the same problem? I am 40, normal and healthy in all respects, reasonably attractive and I am still a virgin. How do you suggest I handle a social situation with a woman in my age bracket who is sexually experienced and probably assumes that I am too?

This is no joke, Abby. Believe me, I wish it were.

NEVER BEEN KISSED OR ANYTHING ELSE

DEAR NEVER: I wouldn't advise a 40-year-old male virgin to bluff his way with a sexually sophisticated woman.

If you are "healthy, normal and reasonably attractive" and desirous of a sexual relationship, I am wondering why you are still totally inexperienced. If you don't know either, you should see a competent sex therapist.

DEAR ABBY: Ever since reading the letter from "Longtime Pastor" regarding his refusal to allow an "obviously pregnant bride" to have "I'm Having His Baby" sung at her wedding, I have been on a slow simmer. He states, "I think it makes a mockery of the sacred vows when people say 'I do' after they have already done it."

I would like to ask the "Longtime Pastor" why he allowed an "obviously pregnant bride" to have anything but a very private, family-only wedding ceremony, sans soloist, fanfare, etc.

I believe that anything else makes a mockery of the sacred vows and that it is the responsibility of not-so-open-minded pastors to maintain sacred standards for the sacred ceremonies they perform in their churches.

Thanks, Abby, I feel better. Sign me.

LUTHERAN MOTHER OF FOUR DAUGHTERS

DEAR MOTHER: A pregnant bride is also entitled to a church wedding with a "soloist, fanfare, etc." If that's what she wants. It is not the pastor's function to judge her. That's the Lord's job.

DEAR ABBY: When my nephew graduated from high school last June, I sent him a check for $100. Not too shabby for an uncle on a fixed and somewhat limited income. I have yet to receive an acknowledgment of my gift. The lad is now away at college. I saw the father of this nephew recently, and I asked if his son ever received my graduation gift. The father said, "Yes, didn't you hear from him?" I told him I had not, whereupon he just shrugged his shoulders and replied, "Well, you know how kids are!"

Abby, I'm not sure I know "how kids are." Maybe you can tell me.

UNENLIGHTENED UNCLE

DEAR UNCLE: Some kids are well-mannered, appreciative and prompt with their thank-yous. Others are ill-mannered, unappreciative, lazy and procrastinating. Your nephew obviously belongs to the latter group.

Stuttering cure claimed for children

RICHARDSON, Texas (UPI) — Stuttering is an age-old problem that could be eliminated in children with preventive therapy, says a scientist at the University of Texas at Dallas.

Dr. Frances Freeman, of UTD's Callier Center for Communication Disorders, said stuttering has been studied for centuries, but only recently has been found to be curable in children. Under a grant from the university, she is trying to identify the causes of stuttering and eliminate it. "It's easiest to treat stuttersers as children," Dr. Freeman said. "As an adult, a complete recovery is less likely."

PUC looks at special power rates

By RON ZELLAR
Times-News writer

BOISE — The Idaho Public Utilities Commission, in reviewing an Idaho Power Co. rate request, will consider offering special rates to irrigators and homeowners who use electricity during off-peak hours.

The PUC has scheduled hearings this Monday through Wednesday, Jan. 25-27, on Idaho Power's request for a temporary 11-percent rate hike and a subsequent increase in revenues averaging 28 percent.

In conjunction with the hearings, the commission has announced it will consider "load management" for irrigators and homeowners.

Load management is a system that seeks to hold down the cost of providing electricity by spreading customer demand more evenly around the clock, thereby restricting new plant construction.

Utah Power and Light Co. has adopted such a system for irrigators in eastern Idaho and residential customers in Utah.

Under the UP&L arrangement, irrigators in the company's Idaho service area who agree to turn off their pumps for one 12-hour period a week pay about 14 percent less than the base rate.

Those who agree to allow UP&L to choose the shutdown hours, based on peak electricity demand, pay approximately 28 percent less.

Brian Holt, UP&L director of customer service and planning, said the system saves the utility an average of 60 megawatts during the irrigation season. (Idaho Power will receive 125 megawatts from the Valmy, Nev., power plant. It is building in cooperation with Sierra Pacific Power Co.)

Holt said 55 percent of the irrigators in UP&L's Idaho service area have opted for Schedule C, which allows the company to interrupt service by radio control for up to 12 hours a week.

Most of the remaining customers are members of canal districts, who must pump irrigation water when it is available, he said.

A separate load-management system for Utah homeowners allows the utility to interrupt power to hot water heaters for up to seven hours a day, Holt said.

In the Idaho Power system, the PUC will consider load management for space heating and cooling, in addition to irrigation and water heating, a commission spokeswoman said.

Dana Howard said the commission's decision to consider load management at this time stems partly from the National Energy Act passed by Congress in 1978. One section of the act, called the Public Utilities Regulatory Policies Act (PURPA), called for states to at least consider programs aimed at conservation and development of renewable resources.

The commission eliminated declining block rates from the Idaho Power system last fall after a series of PURPA hearings. Declining block rates encouraged energy use by making electricity cheaper in large quantities.

Howard said a final decision on Idaho Power's rate request could take six months, making it unlikely that load-management provisions could be implemented for the 1982 irrigating season.

Amtrak

Budget-conscious Congress problem at start of 2nd decade

Amtrak, the federal government's effort to keep passengers riding trains, is 10 years old. In the last decade the agency has solved some of the problems it inherited from the railroads, learned to live with others and encountered some new ones. This report, the first of two, looks at Amtrak, the way it was the way it is and the way Amtrak officials hope it will be in the future.

By DAVID YOUNG
Chicago Tribune

WARSAW, Ind. — Amtrak's west-bound Capitol Limited switched to the eastbound mainline track and sped at 79 mph past two slow-moving freight trains in an effort to make up time.

It had left Fort Wayne 15 minutes late on its run from Washington to Chicago, and Amtrak officials were determined that it would reach Chicago's Union Station on time.

In the past, Amtrak trains that used the former Pennsylvania Railroad's double-tracked mainline across Indiana would be lucky to arrive on schedule half the time. Crews repairing badly deteriorated tracks and slow freight, which the railroad refused to move out of the way, caused many of the delays. Dilapidated equipment caused the rest.

These days, however, when slow freight clog the westbound mainline, Amtrak simply moves its passenger trains onto the eastbound tracks and runs around them.

"One of our unsung achievements is the way our relationship with the railroads has improved, and that has enabled us to get a lot of time on our schedules," boasted M.L. Clark Tyler, Amtrak's group vice president of passenger services and communications.

"All the railroad presidents (now) realize Amtrak is here to stay and are cooperative," added Alan S. Boyd, Amtrak president and former head of the Illinois Central-Gulf Railroad.

Amtrak's biggest problem, as it begins its second decade, no longer is the railroads, but a budget-conscious Congress and a White House intent on curbing the spiraling deficits that characterized Amtrak's first 10 years. A cutoff of federal subsidies, Boyd conceded, could force Amtrak to shut down.

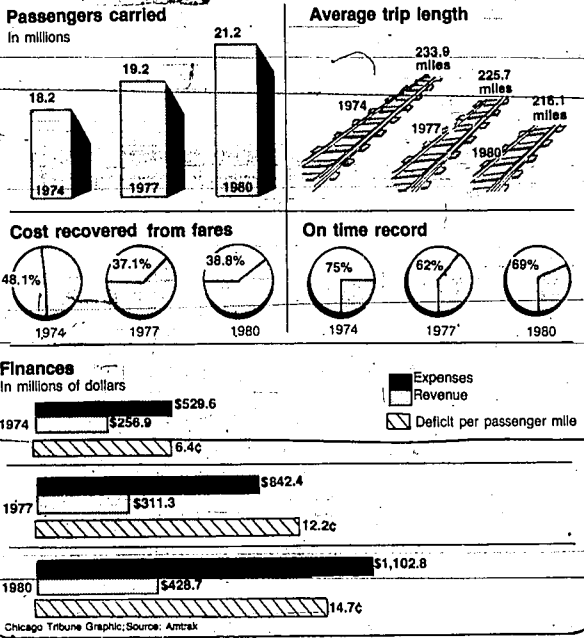

"We'd strip everything to the core (train service between Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington), and operate that until we went broke," Boyd said.

Although some railroads took pride in operating Amtrak trains at high speed and on time even in the early days, the agency since its inception was plagued by the refusal of other roads to move their freight traffic out of the way. The result was that some Amtrak trains operated at average speeds of less than 40 mph.

Amtrak's trains still operate far slower than the highly publicized European and Japanese express trains, but at least they now run on schedule most of the time.

Amtrak's fiscal records

The agency's critics point out that many of the passenger train delays in past years were due to faulty equipment and poor maintenance on the part of Amtrak employees, but that also has improved.

When Amtrak came into existence in May 1971, it took over from the railroads a fleet of 1,275 passenger cars with an average age of 22 years. Many of the railroads had skimped on maintenance over the years to cut deficits on their money-losing passenger operations, and many of the cars Amtrak bought were in poor condition.

Since then the agency has purchased nearly 500 new Amfleet cars built by the Budd Company of Philadelphia and 284 new bi-level Superliner cars from Chicago's Pullman Inc. It is now taking delivery on another 160 new Amfleet II cars from Budd. Over the years the best of the old cars it inherited from the railroads were shipped to Amtrak's suburban Indianapolis shop and rebuilt.

The agency also replaced most of its locomotive fleet with new equipment. Today, the average age of Amtrak cars is down to 14 years, and the average age of locomotives has been halved to 7.4 years.

"Amtrak is better equipped today

BLM hearing on grazing in February

TWIN FALLS — A Bureau of Land Management proposal would allow increased livestock grazing on about 230,000 acres of public range in Twin Falls County.

A public hearing on the proposal is scheduled for 7 p.m. on Thursday, Feb. 25, at Twin Falls City Hall. Persons wishing to testify at the hearing must register with the district BLM office in Burley by Feb. 23.

The BLM's draft environmental impact statement for Twin Falls proposes allowing about 5 percent more grazing than the average of the last six years on range land in Twin Falls County. About 62 ranchers are affected by the proposal.

The bulk of the range land is located along the western edge of the county, south of Burley.

Despite the average increase in grazing allowed, some of those ranchers would be forced to reduce grazing. Of the more than 70 allotments that the range land in the study is divided into, 22 would have grazing reduced below levels of the past six years.

Some previous BLM grazing environmental-impact statements have been controversial because they called for large average cuts in grazing.

According to this report, the study's findings "exemptify the conflicting demands being placed on public lands throughout the West and the fact that concessions are necessary to achieve parity between resource needs and resource use."

To raise the productivity of the range land over the long run, the BLM proposal calls for range improvement projects, such as seeding, fencing and spring development. The total cost of the recommended improvements would be more than $500,000.

Written comments on the study can be submitted to the BLM for consideration in preparation of a final environmental-impact statement and grazing management plan. Comments must be sent by March 26 to Nick Cozasko, BLM Burley District manager, or Mike Haase, the leader of the team that prepared the proposal.

'81 ends in black for First Federal

By STEVE LIPSON
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — First Federal Savings and Loan Association's profit for 1981 was so small that Jim Dadds, the company's president, was too embarrassed to reveal it.

"Just call it break-even, even. That's what it really was," he said.

But making a profit during 1981, in what was the worst year since the Great Depression for the savings and loan industry, was something to be proud of, Dadds said.

He reported on the profit and other developments during the past year at the annual stockholders meeting last week of the Twin Falls-based association.

By making a profit, "small as it was," First Federal ranked in the top 10 percent of all savings and loans for 1981 financial performance, Dadds said.

"We're doing quite well on a relative basis," he said. "Some of the things we're doing must be right."

The association is conservatively managed, Dadds said. It did not offer the NOW checking accounts, which savings and loans were allowed to offer at the beginning of 1981. It is not offering consumer loans, another area that was opened to the savings industry by federal regulators during 1981.

On NOW accounts, Dadds said he believed the decision not to offer the accounts was right.

"There is a place for those institutions created to promote thrift," he said. "Looking at our savings growth, and the bottom line, I don't think we've been hurt."

The association is in the "enviable position" that it can begin offering NOW accounts if competitive forces make it necessary.

While generally conservative, the association last year began offering a program to help make mortgage loans to people already covered by a First Federal mortgage. The program made funds available to such buyers at a rate of less than 14 percent.

First Federal has $140 million in home loans currently on its books. It has more than $150 million in savings deposited at its branches in Twin Falls, Burley, Ketchum and Pocatello.

The association has enough reserves that it could lose $1 million a year for 10 years and still have enough to be on the bottom line by federal regulators, Dadds said. But last year, the association was faced with difficult choices, pitting growth against profits, he said.

One of those choices was that First Federal will not pay the highest legal rate on 30-month savings certificates. That rate is currently about 14 percent. First Federal will pay no more than 12 percent.

Agents broaden view of office at home deductions

© Universal Press Syndicate
(Sixth of 10 parts)

The tax rules on deducting an office at home are tough on taxpayers.

But last year, the Tax Court — and even the Internal Revenue Service — took a more liberal view on some of the requirements.

One of the tough rules to meet for an office-at-home deduction has been that a "portion of the dwelling unit" must be used "exclusively" for business. The IRS has treated this as meaning that an entire room had to be used solely for business, or at least a portion of a room physically separated from the rest of the room. For this reason, it barred an office-at-home deduction by a college professor who prepared his lectures and did other related work in his bedroom; which had a desk, chair, file cabinets and bookshelves, but also a dresser and bed in another area of the room. The IRS claimed that the room had a split use; therefore it failed to qualify for an office-at-home deduction.

But a 1981 Tax Court case pointed out that the "portion of" the building didn't necessarily mean a separate room. The professor had shown that a separate part was used exclusively and on a regular basis as his office. Therefore, it qualified for an office-at-home deduction.

This can be good tax news for many of you who use part of a room in your home for an office.

Another requirement is that the office at home must be the principal place of business of the taxpayer. Here again, the IRS had taken the tough view that an individual can have only one principal place of business, even though he carries on two separate businesses from two different offices.

Thus, if an individual had one principal place of business in an office in the city, while he had a different secondary business that he ran from an office-at-home, the office at home couldn't qualify, even though it was the principal place of business for the secondary business.

But in 1981, the IRS relented. It agreed that an office at home that is the principal place of any trade or business, even a secondary one, qualifies as a principal place of business.

The individual taxpayer could deduct the cost of his office at home to run his sideline business. The ruling is logical and favorable to taxpayers.

If a residence or a vacation home is rented out, the expenses allocable to the rental period can be deducted with certain limitations. But if the rental is to a member of the family, the IRS holds that the owner is still viewed as using the dwelling unit for his non-deductible personal use — even though he is paid a fair rental charge by the relative.

Because of the complaints raised about the IRS' tough attitude, Congress in 1981 changed the law to have such rentals viewed as deductible "outside" rentals. This change is retroactive to all post-'76 years not barred by the statute of limitations.

So if your deductions were disallowed by the IRS under the previous rule — or you didn't take them because of the unfavorable attitude of the revenue service — check now whether you can obtain a refund based on the change in the law.

If you (regardless of age) sold your principal residence at a profit after July 20, 1981, you can defer tax on the profit if you buy another principal residence within two years (instead of only 18 months) at least at a price equal to your selling price.

Even if you sold it before July 21, 1981, if your old 18-month replacement period expires on or after July 20, 1981, you get an extra six months to buy a replacement home.

Appraisers focus on water, power

TWIN FALLS — The winter convention of the Idaho Society of Farm Managers and Rural Appraisers will address a range of subjects from water and power resources to control of one's "noxious girth."

Land appraisers and farm managers from throughout the state will meet at the Holiday Inn in Twin Falls this Friday and Saturday, Jan. 29 and 30, for the annual session.

Greg Russell, co-chairman of the program, said local and state experts have been invited to address delegates on a variety of topics. The public is invited to attend any or all sessions, and the committee expects between 50 and 75 society members to participate.

C. L. "Butch" Otter, president of Simplot International in Boise, will be the banquet speaker Friday night. His topic will be the economic impact of food processing throughout the world.

"Most of our speakers are talking about economic matters and things other than land appraisals," Russell said. "We already know about land appraisals, but there are a lot of interesting, related fields we hope to cover in the convention program."

The two-day convention will begin at 8:30 a.m. Friday with registration. Friday morning speakers will include William Hayes of the Internal Revenue Service in Boise, who will discuss special-use valuation, and Dorrell C. Larsen, an extension irrigator from the University of Idaho, who will discuss sprinkler irrigation comparisons.

Jan Mitteldeier, associate professor of physical education at the College of Southern Idaho, will follow the noon luncheon with an appropriate talk on how to control "noxious girth."

Speakers Friday afternoon will include Steve Garabedian, a hydrologist with the U.S. Geological Survey in Boise, who will discuss the water resources of the Snake River Plain, and Lee Odenwald, president of Idaho Frozen Foods in Twin Falls, who will explain how the Idaho potato industry relates to other production areas.

New officers will be elected in a general business meeting at 3:30 p.m. Jack Rasmussen of Twin Falls is the current president of the organization. Saturday sessions will include a talk by attorney John C. Hohnhorst of Twin Falls about information for appraisers who testify in court as expert witnesses and a report on potential hydro-power sites and cogeneration by Bill Block, a Twin Falls engineer.

Gas prices up 9% during '81

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Spurred by federal decontrol of crude oil, gasoline prices rose by an average of 11.4 cents a gallon — 9 percent — in 1981, the American Automobile Association said Friday.

The national average price of a gallon of regular leaded and unleaded gas, both at full-service and self-service pumps, was $1.36 in December, the AAA said. This compared with $1.246 the previous year.

The AAA said its survey showed prices rose sharply early in the year — largely because of decontrol — and reached a record average of almost $1.40 in May.

Thereafter, AAA said, prices dropped fractionally each month for a total decrease from the high of 3.5 cents a gallon at year's end.

Broken down, regular gas rose 12.6 cents a gallon and unleaded 13 cents a gallon at full-service pumps.

YOUR SPINE and YOUR HEALTH

By Dr. Ludwig C. Landwehr

Shoe style to many is more important than good footcare and feet are forced into shoes that do not fit — purely because of fashion or vanity.

If the shoes are too tight they prevent movement between the carpal bones, contract muscles of the foot, cut off on adequate blood supply.

Other foot problems that in turn may be responsible for bodily imbalance are:

Whether your feet show overt symptoms or not, they are deserving of proper care. Soles or heels that are worn down too much and throw your feet out of balance can cause more severe problems in your supporting bones and muscular structure. Not seldom pelvic or spinal distortion are a result of improper shoes, or can be reduced by a corrective support for the feet.

If you're studying your back problem, it's necessary your doctor or chiropractic will advise you as to what type of shoe and or support is best for you.

Severity of recession driven home by business statistics during week

By LeROY POPE
United Press International

NEW YORK — The severity of the current recession was brought home to Americans this week by disclosure that the Gross National Product tumbled at an annual rate of 3.2 percent in the final quarter of 1981.

At the same time, there was good news in the final quarter. The government reported that the consumer price index, regarded as the most reliable inflation barometer, rose only 0.4 percent in December and that inflation for all of 1981 was 8.9 percent — the lowest level since 1977. Government officials predicted a further subsidence of inflation this year.

The GNP decline was the second in the last three quarters and it was the steepest drop since the 9.9 percent fall in the second quarter of 1980. The Commerce Department said that, despite the final quarter drop, the GNP for all of 1981 was up 1.9 percent after adjustment for inflation.

The department said the GNP continued to fall this month but apparently not at as big a rate as before New Year's Day. Treasury Secretary Donald Regan said the final quarter drop showed plainly that "we are in a deeper recession than most forecasters predicted" and that this means the already high 8.9 percent unemployment rate will continue to rise for the present.

A breakdown of the early wage negotiations between the United Auto Workers and General Motors and Ford designed to trade concessions by the union for price reductions on cars underlined Regan's prediction of more unemployment. General Motors threatened to shut down some plants unless it got quick concessions.

When the talks broke down there were ominous indications that things could drag along until July. Automotive trade circles said that could keep many people from buying new cars, that people would wait to see if the final wage talks really bring prices down. GM was reported wanting to cut prices by between $1,000 and $1,200 a car. Fortune magazine said Detroit is actually under the necessity of finding ways to overcome a Japanese cost advantage of almost $2,000 a car.

Japan, meanwhile, reported a record $13.4 billion trade surplus with the United States for 1981, nearly twice as high as in 1980.

The real shocker was that a Japanese government advisory council predicted that by the year 2000, Japan's GNP will be 20 percent higher than that of the United States.

Chrysler Corp., which is trying to sell its defense unit, which brings in $60 million a year to the auto company, said it had at least three bids for the business.

There was other somber business news. The government said U.S. factories operated at only 75 percent of capacity in December and factory output fell 2.1 percent on the month. Housing starts were disclosed to have hit a 25-year low for all of 1981 in spite of a 13.3 percent rise in December.

TWIN FALLS — Idaho Computer Service of Twin Falls and Hewlett-Packard Corp. have been awarded a contract for a computer installation by Elmore County officials.

Idaho Computer Service will provide the necessary software and support to meet data processing requirements of Elmore County. Dave Degner of Idaho Computer said the

'You really feel like you're going somewhere'

Long train journeys social events

By JON MARGOLIS
Chicago Tribune

ABOARD THE SOUTHERN CRESCENT — Like many people here, age, 19-year-old Kim Sidoli had never ridden on a train before.

"Only because it was cheaper than the plane did she take the long ride from New York to New Orleans the other day."

"I'd do it again, though," she said, slipping soda in the club car as the woods of Alabama slipped past outside the window. "It's more fun than the plane. You get to talk to all different kinds of people, and you really feel like you're going somewhere."

Long train trips obviously are not for everyone. They are for people who are not in a hurry, and who would rather savor the sensation of travel than simply go from one place to another.

The advantages and disadvantages of train travel were both evident on a recent trip on the Crescent from Washington to New Orleans. The overwhelming disadvantage, of course, is time.

A trip that takes almost five hours by air (non-stop flights are available) takes 25 hours by rail to cover 1,153 miles.

Offsetting that, for the thrifty, is the price: The plane ticket costs $211. A coach seat on the train is only $133.

But there is a terrible temptation to wipe out that advantage by getting a roommate or bedroom. This brings the ticket cost to $214 but makes far more palatable the time disadvantage. Being able to lie down and sleep makes the trip much more comfortable.

In this sense, adding up costs and benefits in a rational manner is irrelevant. The appeal of the train is emotional, perhaps even spiritual, not rational.

The Crescent leaves Washington just after dark, affording a view of the lighted Capitol dome as the train crosses the Potomac River. It gets to New Orleans the next day, coming into town over the mysterious darkness of Lake Pontchartrain.

In between, the rider can fall asleep while looking at the flickering lights of little Carolina towns, wake up amidst the Georgia pine woods and eat lunch while an Alabama swamp slides by.

"To the train buff even the length of the trip holds appeal. It lets you know how far you're going and it allows more time for socializing. Passengers on trains are far more sociable than those on planes because train travelers regard the trip in part as a social event, an end in itself rather than just a passage from one point to another."

Most train travelers have only one complaint, and Miss Sidoli shared it. She said, "It's cooked in microwaves. It's like airplane food."

A thousand miles away on another train, the Lake Shore Limited near Toledo, a young man had a similar complaint when handed a card by an Amtrak waiter. The card asked him to rate the food. He wrote curtly: "Down with microwave cooking. Bring back the chefs."

That is the train riders' ultimate insult. To the train buff, the airplane symbolizes all that is wrong with modern life.

Money fund yields post awaited rise

NEW YORK (UPI) — Assets of money funds rose $1.4 billion in the week ended Jan. 20, and average yields rose for the first time in 22 weeks.

Average seven-day yields on money market funds rose to 11.95 percent from 11.77 percent and 30-day yields rose to 11.86 percent from 11.64 percent, according to Donoghue's Money Fund Report, Holliston, Mass.

William E. Donoghue, publisher, said "Money fund yields lag current market rates and the lag period now is up, enabling the funds to pass on higher money market rates to investors."

The average maturity of fund portfolios was unchanged at 32 days, signaling fund managers "are in a holding pattern to await developments on interest rates," Donoghue said.

Donoghue also reported that the average yield on all funds on a compounded basis for all of 1981 was 10.82 percent. "There was only one week in 1981 when the yield on six-month money market certificates exceeded this return," he said.

The Washington-based Investment Company Institute said the $1.4 billion increase brings total assets of 162 funds to a record $188.1 billion.

The ICI said assets of general purpose and broker-dealer funds, both of which cater to individual investors, increased $718 million and $78 million respectively. Institutional funds were down $225 million.

There are now 10.4 million shareholder accounts in money market funds, the ICI said. Assets of 146 funds reporting to Donoghue also rose $1.4 billion to $187.6 billion.

Optimism for quarter across West

LOS ANGELES — Western business men are optimistic about the first quarter of 1982, according to the Prudential Insurance Co.

A quarterly survey shows 52 percent of members of a panel representing eight states expecting an upturn in dollar volume compared to the fourth quarter of 1981. The rest of the panel is divided between 15 percent seeing no change and 33 percent anticipating a downturn.

Fifty-nine percent look for a gain over the first quarter of 1981, while 11 percent expect no change and over 30 percent anticipate a decline.

In Idaho and Utah, 55 percent expect an upturn in quarter-to-quarter comparisons and the same percentage anticipate a gain over the first quarter a year ago.

The construction industry is the most optimistic classification, with 71 percent expecting gains over the first quarter of 1981.

USSR increases production of oil

© Daily Telegraph, London

MOSCOW — The Soviet Union increased its oil production by 1 percent last year but fell just short of its target figure, Moscow Radio reported Monday.

Oil output in 1981 was 609 million tons, as compared with the planned production goal of 610 million tons.

New fields opened in western Siberia were credited for the 1 percent increase over 1980, when 603 million tons were produced.

Soviet oil production, which grew by some 70 percent in the 1970s, is now targeted to increase by no more than 1 percent a year at best over the next five years. The costs and difficulties involved in extracting oil from Siberia chiefly explain the slow-down in growth.

Amtrak

than ever before to provide service," said Thomas J. Lampher, a veteran railroad and former head of the Bureau of Northern Railroad.

The improved equipment has meant fewer breakdowns and delays, fewer complaints by passengers and improved morale on the part of employees — a reverse domino effect.

"Our employees don't have to run and hide anymore, the way they did when the complaints rolled in," Tyler said.

"The two most frequent complaints we used to have were on time (performance) and air-conditioning. These problems have been solved."

Amtrak also has improved service by publishing national timetables, installing a computerized reservation system, rehabilitating stations and improving training of its employees.

Amtrak still has its share of problems, however, including:

• Recent budget cuts in Congress have forced it to completely revamp its dining car services, replacing the traditional meals cooked on the train with airline-style meals prepared in advance and reheated on board trains in microwave ovens.

• Grossly inadequate parking at most of its stations.

• Aging, dilapidated stations, especially in big cities. Amtrak doesn't have the money to rehabilitate them, and when it does become necessary to replace them, new stations invariably are built in the suburbs to keep construction costs down.

"Our stations should be downtown; that's the advantage we have over the airlines," Tyler said.

• Too few passenger cars to meet the demand.

"If I had 300 to 400 more cars last summer, I could have sold them all," William S. Norman, Amtrak marketing vice president, said.

• Insufficient money and equipment to develop major rail markets outside of the Boston-New York-Philadelphia-Baltimore-Washington corridor.

"You can't provide adequate service with one train a day, although that is better than none," Boyd said.

Amtrak officials believe they need a minimum of at least three daily trains on any route to provide service and be competitive with the airlines, bus lines and persons who drive.

Transportation officials believe Amtrak loses a substantial number of riders on routes on which there is only one daily train.

The service to Omaha, the largest city on the route between Chicago and Denver, probably is the best example. The westbound San Francisco Zephyr arrives in Omaha at 3:01 a.m., and the eastbound train at 4:11 a.m.

"Our schedules are built for the end points (terminals), not the cities that are midway," Norman said. "Cities we serve between midnight and 6 a.m. generally have half the ridership of cities with daytime schedules."

"The problem with one train a day," said Christopher Knapp, an official with the Association of American Railroads and formerly of Amtrak, "is that if a guy just misses the train you have to tell him the next unit will be along in 24 hours. Then you watch him get in his car and drive to the airport."

If Rep. Edward Madigan, R-Ill., had his way, Amtrak would stop running long distance trains and concentrate solely on running frequent service in corridors of 500 miles or less between the big cities.

"I've been involved in keeping it (Amtrak) alive and adequately funded because I think there is a need for rail passenger service," Madigan said. "Amtrak has its place, but it shouldn't be running trains between Chicago and the West Coast, or even the East Coast for that matter."

The average length of a trip for Amtrak passengers in 1980 was only 216 miles, down from the 233.9-mile average trip in 1974. (The average trip length for airline passengers is more than 700 miles.)

"We talk about long haul trains, but only a small minority travel from end to end," Boyd said.

The rule of thumb on Amtrak's long distance trains is that the bulk of the ridership is within 200 miles of the big cities. The Chicago-to-Seattle Empire Builder is an example.

The train starts with a relatively high ridership between Chicago, Milwaukee and Minneapolis. Few people ride it across the Great Plains and Montana, but ridership picks up again between Spokane and Seattle.

There are many people in Washington and elsewhere who believe Amtrak's strongest asset may be its current management.

"Amtrak has suffered over the years more from bad leadership than from the opposition it had," Madigan said. "Alan Boyd is the best chief executive Amtrak has had. The people before him were just not equipped for the job."

Boyd, who has been Amtrak's president since 1978, learned the basics of railroading on Chicago's ICG after serving as the nation's first transportation secretary in the 1960s. The respect he commands was evident in September when the Reagan administration, intent on cutting Amtrak's costs, quietly dropped its plans to oust him. The administration, which had packed the Amtrak board with five appointees from the Department of Transportation, voted to renew Boyd's contract for another year.

Next: Amtrak's future.

Bank of Hawaii said it will offer 25 cents plus a dollar for each 100 pennies turned in. Liberty Bank's offer is more modest — $1.10 for every 100 pennies.

The bonus program was prompted by a penny shortage in the islands.

Big timber wants review of opinion

PORTLAND (UPI) — Three Northwest wood-products firms will ask the U.S. Supreme Court to review an unfavorable opinion in a plywood antitrust suit.

At the same time, two of the companies announced sharply lower earnings in 1981 as a result of the slump in the nation's housing industry.

Georgia-Pacific Corp. said its sales increased to $4.4 billion in 1981 from $4 billion the previous year, but that earnings fell 34 percent, from $243 million, or $2.33 per share, to $160 million, or $1.51 per share.

Fourth-quarter sales declined by 7 percent in 1981 for Portland-based G-P but earnings for the quarter were off 66 percent, from $64 million to $22 million.

Willamette Industries Inc., also based in Portland, registered a 55 percent drop in earnings for the year, from $63.3 million, or $4.16 per share, to $23.6 million, or $1.88 per share.

Willamette's fourth-quarter downturn was even more dramatic — an 81 percent earnings drop from the same period a year earlier.

"The fourth quarter was characterized by much the same conditions as we encountered in the previous quarter," Robert E. Flowerice, chairman and chief executive officer of Georgia-Pacific, explained.

"High interest rates continued to depress residential construction and the general economic recession had increasing impact on our paper and chemical businesses," Flowerice said.

Flowerice's comments were echoed by William Swindells Jr., Willamette's president and chief executive officer, who reported the lower earnings prior to a meeting with industry analysts in New York.

Swindells said the continued depression in the home building industry and lower than expected volumes of corrugated container sales accounted for continuing disappointing fourth-quarter results.

The two firms and Weyerhaeuser Co. of Tacoma, Wash., said they will petition the Supreme Court for review of an unfavorable opinion by the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in a civil class-action antitrust suit involving the sale and distribution of softwood plywood.

The appeals court ruling, issued last September, affirmed a Louisiana district court judgment that followed a 1978 jury verdict against the three firms. The appeals court held there was sufficient evidence of price-fixing for a reasonable jury to find the firms guilty of violating federal law.

The class action suit claimed a conspiracy by the companies in connection with the calculation of freight charges on plywood shipments cost them billions of dollars. Shortly after the ruling, a lawyer for the 70,000 plaintiffs said damages in the case could eventually reach $4 billion.

However, the firms said in separate statements Wednesday that an earlier estimate of up to $2 billion in potential liability "is significantly excessive and that the ultimate liability, if any, will be substantially lower."

Weyerhaeuser spokesman Tom Ambrose said there is a good chance the Supreme Court will agree to the firms' request for an appeal, due to conflicting opinions in the 5th and 9th circuit appeals courts.

The companies said their 1981 financial statements will be qualified, subject to the outcome of the antitrust suit.

This 5-spot peculiar enough to catch eye

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — Bank tellers try to think of the money they handle as slips of paper.

Fortunately, Keith Andresson noticed something peculiar about one crisp $5 bill as he balanced returns from a 24-hour teller machine.

"Both the seals and the serial number on the bill were printed on the back and not on the front," Andresson said Thursday. "If the money had been completely used overnight, a customer would have gotten it. I just happened to be lucky and noticed it."

The 27-year-old teller told his supervisor, who said he could keep the "funny money" by exchanging it for a normal $5 bill.

Opinions vary on the worth of the oddball flyer.

"I told him the bill could be worth up to $150," said one coin dealer. "It's a nice-looking note — brand new and crisp."

Another dealer was less enthusiastic, saying it would go for $15 at the most.

Phil Broomas, cash manager at the Portland branch of the Federal Reserve Bank of San Francisco, explained that printing of paper currency is a four-step process.

"I've heard of these things happening before," he said. "The bills are printed in sheets of 32, and one of the sheets could have been flipped."

Which means that, among the $4.5 million worth of $5-bills in circulation as of last September, there should be at least 31 others in the same condition.

"People should check their wallets," a coin dealer said.

Telephone official explains divestiture

Little impact on local rates expected

SEATTLE (UPI) — The divestiture of Pacific Northwest Bell and 21 other Bell telephone companies by AT&T should have no effect on local telephone rates, PNB president Andy Smith said.

In a news conference, Smith emphasized repeatedly that while local phone rates are sure to go up, the divestiture of the 22 Bell operating companies won't be the cause.

The divestiture was ordered in a Jan. 8 consent decree between AT&T and the U.S. Justice Department in which the federal government agreed to drop its seven-year-old antitrust case against the company.

PNB officials said considerable news and editorial coverage has mistakenly reported that the antitrust settlement will dramatically increase home telephone rates.

"The decree, in and of itself, will not force local basic telephone rates to go up," said Smith.

The antitrust settlement will allow AT&T to maintain control of its long distance telephone operations while giving up the local services handled by the Bell companies.

Since long distance phone rates subsidize local rates, which are provided to homes and businesses at less than cost, it has been assumed that those local rates now will have to go up.

Not true, Smith said.

To help offset the subsidy from long distance rates, PNB and the other 21 Bell companies will be able to charge an "access fee" to AT&T and any other long distance companies wanting to connect with the local phone system, said Smith.

The divestiture was not something sought by the Bell System, said Smith. He explained that AT&T and the 22 Bell companies were caught in a "limbo" of operating both as a monopoly and a competitive business, he said.

Local telephone rates to homes and businesses have been driven up by inflation and competition and those factors in all probability will continue to force rates up, said Smith.

Wyoming men sue bank in Montana

BUTTE, Mont. (UPI) — Two Jackson, Wyo., men filed a $75 million damage suit in U.S. District Court Thursday alleging breach of contract by a Bozeman bank.

Lewis Robinson and Robert Russell charge that First National Bank of Bozeman and bank president Harry

W. Newlon violated an Oct. 31, 1980, agreement. Failure of the bank to support is end of the agreement cost the plaintiffs millions of dollars in a land development project on Hebgen Lake and near West Yellowstone, Robinson and Russell claim.

The petition asks for a jury trial.

Seeking riders, Trailways cuts fares

DALLAS (UPI) — Trailways Inc. this week began offering reduced bus fares — some slashed as much as 40 percent — in an effort to combat the effects of recession and reduced airline fares.

The Dallas-based bus company, and Phoenix-based Greyhound Corp., both have initiated lower fares to boost ridership.

Trailways also began offering to meet or beat any low fares offered by a rival bus firm or airline, said company spokeswoman Tricia Barnett.

"The new fares already have produced no increase in ticket sales," Ms. Barnett said.

Greyhound has initiated a two-for-one fare that allows two people to travel for the price of one ticket. The package requires the traveler to cross state lines and spend at least $38 in fares. Also being offered is a $1 fare for return trips from selected cities.

Persian Gulf oil producers turn to pipelines

By TERRY ATLAS
© Chicago Tribune

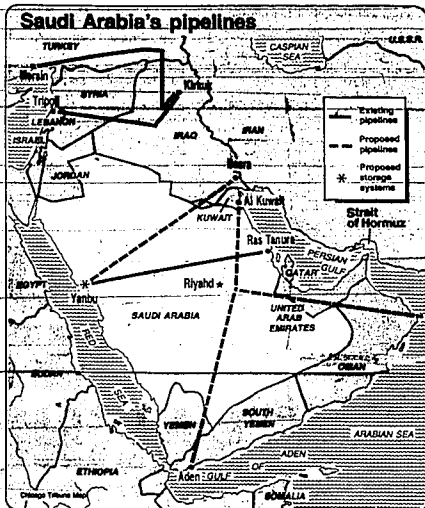

Persian Gulf oil producers are spending billions of dollars to reduce their dependence on oil shipments passing through the strategically-vulnerable Strait of Hormuz, transportation route for a third of the non-communist world's oil supplies.

A persistent fear among energy planners in the West has been the possible interruption of oil tanker traffic through the narrow strait, which the late Shah of Iran frequently referred as the West's "jugular vein." President Jimmy Carter vowed to use force, if necessary, to ensure that the strait remain open and tanker movements unimpeded.

It is impossible to overstate the effect that a shutdown of the strait, whether through political or military action, would have on the West. "If our supply of Persian Gulf oil were cut off for six months, we would have a depression in the U.S. that would make the depression of the '30s look like prosperity," says John C. W. former U.S. ambassador to Saudi Arabia.

It turns out that such concern is shared by Persian Gulf producers, who have an enormous financial stake in the West's economic stability and in the steady flow of revenues from the sale of their oil. The Iran-Iraq war appears to have added an urgency to the search for alternatives to shipping virtually all their oil through the Persian Gulf ports.

The only real alternative, though, is to build pipelines to carry oil to the Red Sea and the Indian Ocean. The first segment of a new Saudi pipeline to the Red Sea port of Yanbu began pumping in mid-1981, and two other major pipeline projects are being considered by the region's producing states. Alfred Munk, manager of foreign affairs for Standard Oil Co. (Indiana), calls these projects "political insurance pipelines," built for strategic benefits rather than economic reasons. The costs of building and operating new pipelines to move oil are considerably higher than using tankers, but pipelines could blunt the threat posed by a blockade of the strait.

"These are efforts by the Persian Gulf producing countries to reduce their dependence on tanker movements through the Strait of Hormuz," Munk says.

Tankers traveling through the Strait of Hormuz, which connects the Persian Gulf with the Indian Ocean, carry 12 million to 14 million barrels of oil daily to consumer countries, or about half the exports by OPEC. The passage, shaped like an upside down U, is bounded on the south by Oman and on the north by Iran.

For the most part the passage is wide enough to accommodate the 12-mile territorial limits of each country, but at one point the strait is less than 24 miles wide, and tankers must travel through one country's waters. The shipping channel, in Omani waters, is about four miles wide.

Terrorists might be tempted to sink a tanker in the passage to draw attention to their cause, for instance. This wouldn't physically block the strait, but such an act would probably cause insurers such as Lloyd's of London to raise insurance rates to prohibitive levels for tankers traveling into the Persian Gulf. Insurance for tankers plying the strait could be canceled entirely.

Iran, for one, threatened to block the strait in its war with Iraq. Analysts say Iran could enforce a blockade of the strait by mining the passage or patrolling it with aircraft, effectively cutting off most oil exports by Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, Iraq and the United Arab Emirates. Carter warned in his 1980 State of the Union address that the Soviet Union's move into Afghanistan brought the Soviet Red Army within 300 miles of the strait and posed "a great threat to the free movement of Middle East oil."

Saudi Arabia, the Persian Gulf's largest oil producer, has moved with little fanfare to reduce its dependence on tanker shipments through the Strait of Hormuz. Last summer, the Saudis inaugurated their newest pipeline, which carries oil from wells in the eastern part of the country to the new industrial city of Yanbu on the western coast. The pipeline, which cost $1.8 billion, has a capacity of 1.5 million barrels a day and was designed to allow capacity to be doubled.

Oil loaded aboard tankers at the Yanbu port then moves up the Red Sea through the Suez Canal. Alternatively, it is loaded off tankers in Egypt into the Saudi-financed and operated Sumra pipeline, which carries the oil to other tankers waiting in the Mediterranean.

Increased oil shipments through the Red Sea would augment the strategic importance of Egypt as the key transshipment point, but the assassination of Egyptian President Anwar Sadat dramatically demonstrated the political instability in that country as well as the new risks of that route.

The Saudis also have quietly been working on plans to build the world's largest oil storage facilities near Yanbu, according to James Tanner, editor of Petroleum Information International, an industry newsletter.

The reserve may eventually hold as much as 1.5 billion barrels of oil, six times as much as is in the U.S. strategic petroleum reserve. The plan, which would mean pumping oil from wells in the eastern provinces into underground storage near the west coast, highlights Saudi concern about the vulnerability of its oil production and export facilities, especially in light of the Iran-Iraq war.

Some Western observers question, however, whether new storage and export facilities on the Saudi west coast are really any safer than those on the gulf, and some Saudi officials reportedly worry that the possible $2 billion cost of such a project may outweigh its benefits.

Separately, Saudi Arabia has given Iraq permission to build a pipeline from Iraqi oil fields around Basrah to an area on the Red Sea about 100 miles north of Yanbu. Iraq, vitally concerned about the security of exports because of its war with Iran, had asked to build the pipeline to Yanbu, but the Saudis insisted that they build a new port to the north for their oil exports.

Analysts say the new pipeline across the Saudi desert might eventually carry as much as 2 million to 3 million barrels of oil a day, or much of Iraq's prewar export level. The pipeline would be paid for entirely by Iraq, presumably from increased oil exports, once fighting with Iran ends.

There has also been discussion among the region's leaders of a "Pan-Arab" pipeline from Kuwait and Iraq at the northern end of the gulf through Saudi Arabia to a port on the Indian Ocean in Oman or South Yemen. Such a pipeline would allow oil to bypass the Strait of Hormuz before being loaded aboard tankers for shipment to the United States, Europe and Japan.

Iraq's interest in a pipeline through Saudi Arabia is seen by analysts as an indication of improving relations with its Arab neighbors and a backing away from the Soviet Union, which hasn't aided Iraq in its war with Iran.

Iraq has pipelines that can carry some of its oil production to Mediterranean ports in Syria, Lebanon and Turkey. However, during its war with Iran, flows through the pipelines have been repeatedly disrupted by sabotage of pumping stations, demonstrating the pipelines' vulnerability.

Recently, Kurdish rebels reportedly blew up part of the pipeline through Turkey, cutting Iraqi exports by two-thirds to 300,000 barrels a day.

Remington battles Schick takeover

BRIDGEPORT, Conn. (UPI) — Remington Products Inc., the largest U.S. manufacturer of electric shavers, has filed an antitrust suit over the purchase of Schick Inc. by Norelco, both razor giants.

Victor Kiam, the man who appears on television ads saying he likes Remingtons so much, "I bought the company," argues the merger illegally threatened the future of his firm.

"What we're suing for is antitrust and monopoly because they (Norelco) have 60 percent of the market," Kiam said. "A few years ago Schick had 21 percent and it ran down, but the name is still there."

"This is a matter of survival," Kiam said, "and we intend to fight with every tool at our disposal against this foreign giant who is making this illegal attempt to dominate and monopolize the electric shaver industry."

Norelco is a division of North American Philips Corp., a company controlled by the Dutch firm of N.V. Philips Gloeilampenfabrieken.

Kiam's suit, filed Jan. 18 in U.S. District Court, claims the merger with Schick violates sections of the Sherman Act and the Clayton Act.

Kiam said Remington controlled about 35 percent of the American sales market, and appeared to be gaining.

"All of a sudden they see their market eroding," he said. "I think this was a desperation move in order to continue their dominance of the American market. I've been fighting what amounts to a Goliath. I'm a David."

Kiam bought Remington in 1979, when it was a money-losing division of Sperry Corp. He said the firm has made about $14 million since the sale, but is faced with serious problems created by the merger.

"I knew Schick was for sale, but my lawyers told me there was no way Norelco could buy them," Kiam said. "When I heard, I fell off my chair. We were interested, but I couldn't afford to pay a lot for it. The fact is the No. 1 company stepped in and outbid."

Remington, which also makes air purifiers, was about to introduce two new products before the merger was announced. One, a home barber kit, will be put in a few test markets and the other has been put on the shelf.

"I just can't afford to spend money on new products now," he said.

Remington has reinvested all the money it made, improved productivity and started an aggressive ad campaign to increase its share of the electric shaver market. It employs about 750 people in Bridgeport, where all its shavers are produced.

How to tell an I.R.A. expert from an I.R.A. not-so-expert.

Open an Individual Retirement Account at Equitable Savings

Retirement tax laws have recently changed. And suddenly, just about every financial institution in the country is crowding about its particular retirement account.

It seems, in fact, that the world has become instantly filled with retirement experts. All giving instant-expert advice.

Which can cause problems. Because most of us simply can't afford to risk our retirement security on advice given by amateurs posing as financial wizards.

Well we can set things straight. We're Equitable Savings, the only financial group in the Northwest that can honestly call itself the retirement authority.

How 65,000 accounts have gained from our experience.

We've been in the retirement planning business since 1890.

True. And since 1974, we've developed retirement programs used by financial institutions throughout the country.

Furthermore, we have the largest, most experienced staff of professional retirement counselors in the Northwest.

No wonder people have deposited over $125 million in more than 65,000 Equitable retirement accounts.

How much will you earn?

Competitive rates are crucial to any plan. And—you guessed it—we can match or beat anyone's.

Equitable Savings is People. And How.

Take a look. Right now through January 31, we'll pay you 13.45%.

To get an idea of what you'd have at retirement, suppose you begin your Equitable I.R.A. at the age of 30, and you put in $2,000 a year at, say, only 12% interest. By age 65, you'd have $1,161,137* All tax-free until withdrawn.

Not bad, huh?

Invest $2,000 a year in our I.R.A. at 12%, and here's what you'd have when you retire.

White House order reduces news access

By SONIA HILLGREN
United Press International

WASHINGTON — News reporters for the flow of information to the public will be impeded by the Agriculture Department's zealous response to a White House effort to cut down on leaks.

Reporters are concerned that government officials will use a new memorandum as an excuse to decline to talk about policies that affect the lives of the American public. Historically, the Agriculture Department has been one of the most open in government.

John Ochs, press secretary to Agriculture Secretary John Block, said, "This is no shape or form should be a gag rule."

On Jan. 9, Ochs issued a memorandum, saying that when top Agriculture Department officials or their subordinates receive requests for news interviews, they should consult with Ochs before they agree to an interview.

The interviews, Ochs said, cover television appearances and interviews for newspapers and magazines.

In the memorandum, Ochs said, "We would like to ensure that there is one point of coordination—the White House—for all spokesmen of the administration who make major

Troubles to persist in farming

By RICHARD ORR
Chicago Tribune

The outlook for American agriculture in 1982 is strongly influenced by huge 1981 world-crop and livestock production, which came at a time of relatively weak demand.

Here are some projections for the year by the United States Department of Agriculture:

- Farm production expenses may moderate to a 6 to 9 percent gain, the smallest increase since 1975.
- Cash receipts are expected to be up only 4 to 6 percent, a smaller gain than even the expected modest jump in production expenses. This could add to the cash flow squeeze on many farmers.

- If this squeeze continues, many farmers will need to reschedule debt and defer capital expenditures for the third successive year.
- David A. Lins, an economist on the staffs of the USDA and the University of Illinois College of Agriculture, says that, despite financial pressures in 1981, most farmers were able to meet their debt obligations.
- "While many lenders indicate no significant increase in loan collection problems, there is almost unanimous concern over what might happen if farm incomes do not improve soon," Lins said. "Lenders believe that unless incomes improve soon, the problems of delinquency and default will increase significantly."

Lins offers these 1982 outlooks:

- Ample credit should be available to qualified farm borrowers, as it was in 1981.
- If the Federal Reserve maintains moderate growth rate in the money supply, a gradual easing in interest rates should continue. In 1981 interest rates reached record highs, with bank farm loans hitting 19 to 20 percent last August.
- If the 1982 overall inflation rate ranges from 8 to 10 percent, a continued reduction in the real wealth position of the farm sector is anticipated.
- "If this forecast materializes, it will be the first time in the last 40 years that the real wealth of the farm sector has declined for three consecutive years," Lins said.

Here are some projections on farm production expenses by R.B. Stewart, University of Illinois extension economist in farm management:

- Fuel and energy. Although stocks were reduced in 1981, supplies of diesel oil, gasoline and LP gas should be plentiful for the 1982 farming season. Fuel prices in 1982 should rise less than the 9 percent increase of last year.
- Fertilizer. Prices last November were about 6 percent higher than a year earlier. Declining energy costs and fertilizer use may increase fertilizer costs 8 percent, at most, in 1982.
- Agricultural chemicals. Last November costs of pesticides and other agricultural chemicals were about 9 percent higher than a year ago. Pesticide use may lower 1982 input plantings are lower. Prices of chemicals should reflect inflation rates with price increases of about 8 percent in 1982.
- Farm machinery. Prices increased about 12 percent in the 12 months ended last November. The annual output of tractors decreased about 5 percent in 1981 from 1980.

Analysis

media appearances."

The purpose, Ochs said, is "to provide a smooth, steady and consistent flow of information to the public about the Reagan administration."

It also asked officials for their cooperation in granting interviews with the news media at Ochs' request.

The existence of the memorandum came to light when Steve Golechmidt of Food Chemical News was told about it by an Agriculture Department official.

Kathy Patterson of the Kansas City Star expressed concern about access for reporters after she encountered a low-level economist who was reluctant to talk.

In an interview, Ochs said the purpose of his policy was to improve coordination of news to prevent officials from espousing conflicting policies.

He said access by reporters would improve, in fact, because he would make special attempts to get officials to talk to the media.

He insisted officials would not use the policy as an excuse to avoid reporters.

But when asked, Ochs said he would not put out a clarifying memorandum to tell officials they are free to answer routine requests and give information without prior clearance.

"The folks are just going to talk like they always do," Ochs said. "Our intent really is to serve you (reporters) better. You may perceive it differently."

Ochs' memorandum was issued right after the White House cracked down on leaks and Defense Department officials decided to have officials talk to the media.

At the White House last week, deputy press secretary Larry Speakes said the White House wanted to coordinate administration television appearances to avoid duplication but not newspaper and magazine interviews.

Speakes also said there was confusion between classified information and coordination of major television appearances.

Ochs and his deputy Dave Lane said no one at the White House has told them personally the policy goes too far. A meeting of administration press officials, including Ochs, was held this past Monday.

The administration's policy on coordination and plugging leaks came up at President Reagan's news conference on Tuesday.

The new restrictions, Reagan said, are simply a way to prevent unauthorized people from releasing information about foreign policy and national security matters.

The president denied the new details would restrict the flow of information, or that they would have a "chilling effect" on freedom of the press.

"It's simply a case so that we now know what is going on," he said. "If we (at the White House) have something that we think would be additional to what they're going to talk about (with the press), then we can see they get that."

This would not inhibit the administration's determination to maintain "open government," he said.

White House communications director David Gergen said there "appeared in some departments to be a misunderstanding or overreaction" to the new rules on government employees talking to the press.

"All we want is simply prenotification at the White House" on things that would be of particular interest or from which major news would develop," he said.

Gergen said he was encouraged department press officers to be aggressive in talking to the press. "The administration open."

Gergen said if the rules "have a chilling effect on leaks, that is what we want. If it is having a chilling effect on talking to the press, that is not what we want."

Drug prevents cattle disease

PULLMAN, Wash. (UPI) — Two Washington State University scientists say they have pinpointed the most effective use of a drug which prevents a severe respiratory disease in cattle.

Dr. Roger Breeze and Dr. James Carlson have found that the drug monensin is only effective against bovine pulmonary edema when it is given to cattle before symptoms occur.

A major advancement in the prevention of the problem occurred in 1978 when WSU scientists found the disease was inhibited with use of the drug.

The cause of the disease was traced to the amino acid found in the lush grass of irrigated pastures.

"When cattle eat this substance, it is transformed by a bacteria into a poison," Breeze explained. "This poison is absorbed by the blood and transported to the lungs, causing them to fill with fluid."

He predicted practical methods for administering the drug will be available soon.

The incidence of the disease is highest in areas where grazing pastures are irrigated and is usually seen in the fall when cattle are moved from an over-grazed pasture to a green pasture.

The scientists found that when monensin is given at the time of pasture change, it prevents the bacteria from changing the amino acid into a poison, thus preventing the disease.

Currently, the scientists are looking at various methods of administering the drug.

Farm Bureau head seeks acreage cut

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The president of the nation's largest farm organization, bemoaning "greatly reduced net farm income," called for more action to get the economy moving, including reduced acreage for major crops.

Robert Delano, a Warsaw, Va., grain farmer who heads the American Farm Bureau Federation, also said embargoes are ineffective except in times of war and he believes President Reagan is "very reluctant to reimpose any food embargo against the Soviet Union."

Farm prices have fallen under the weight of record crops, sluggish demand and uncertainty about grain sales to the Kremlin. There have been no new sales since Reagan imposed some sanctions in response to the military crackdown in Poland.

Delano said he did not believe postponement of negotiations on a new grain agreement and other sanctions, represented a "de facto" embargo, as some other farm leaders and agricultural experts have said.

"Market channels are open and they (Russians) do have the opportunity to buy another 12 million tons of U.S. grain in addition to nearly 11 million tons already purchased," he said.

Delano had this "urgent message" for Congress, the White House and federal departments:

"Farm and ranch families of this country are currently experiencing an extremely difficult time of low farm prices and high costs leading to greatly reduced net farm income," he said.

Enactment of the administration's economic program was "in the right direction," but more needs to be done, Delano said.

He said the Farm Bureau supports a 15 percent reduction in acreage of wheat, feed grains, cotton and rice "to help balance supplies of these commodities with demand."

Agriculture Secretary John Block earlier announced an intention to have a 15 percent wheat acreage

South Texas wild horses' new pasture

McQUEENEY, Texas (UPI) — More than 50 wild horses, pushed out of the West by the herd's own population explosion, are awaiting new owners and greener pastures in south Texas.

Fifty-three horses rounded up in Nevada and Oregon and shipped by truck arrived Thursday at a ranch near San Antonio, Texas, where they are scheduled to be "adopted" as part of the federal government's equine giveaway program.

John Gurnett of the U.S. Bureau of Land Management in Santa Fe, N.M., said the horses were caught up in a population explosion that prompted a 1971 federal law permitting the herds to be "thinned out."

"These wild horses in the Western United States primarily trace their beginnings back to the Depression about 40 years ago," Gurnett said. "Back in the 1930s, a bunch of ranchers and farmers went broke and many of them turned their livestock loose and left."

"They increased over the years and for a period of time they were rounded up and slaughtered. Then in 1971, Congress passed a law that allows us to shoot the horses, which is not particularly palatable to a majority of citizens, or to round them up and give them away to people who want one or more of these critters."

The threat of mass slaughter apparently touched a sympathetic nerve in some people.

"I applied because of the romance of the whole thing — having a wild horse that someone else might not have, a dying breed," Steve McKenzie, a banker and part-time rancher from Rockdale, said Thursday.

New vaccine may control disease which cripples lambs

CALDWELL (UPI) — A new vaccine for protecting sheep against abortions also may aid in controlling a crippling disease in lambs, said a veterinary scientist with the University of Idaho.

Dr. Donald Waldhalm of the schools Caldwell research center recently applied for a patent on the method of producing the vaccine, which is effective against the bacterial organism Chlamydia psittaci.

Abortions caused by this bacterium claim about 5 percent of the state's lamb crop each year, he said.

Another strain of Chlamydia psittaci causes polyarthritis, a crippling disease that hits both range and feedlot lambs and has been rated the third most serious disease in sheep by the National Wool Growers Association.

Lambs with the disease are in so much pain from inflamed joints that they will not get up to eat, Waldhalm said. They lose weight in pens, and on the range, they lag behind the rest of the band, becoming easy prey for coyotes.

The disease lasts for several weeks, during which time the lambs are more susceptible to other ailments, such as pneumonia. The animals generally recover, he said, but their weight gain is set back.

The vaccine, developed by Waldhalm and Dr. Richard F. Hall, was tested on two groups of 25 male lambs at the Caldwell center.

Many of Conrad Cuellar's rural customers live down country roads that are hard to reach in the harsh January weather.

Cuellar has been a milkman for 6 years.

On his rural route, Cuellar runs into a lot of dogs, many of them not this friendly. Milk, cheese, sour cream and cottage cheese is delivered to a customer.

A vanishing breed

By SUSAN GALLAGHER

of THE TIMES-NEWS

TWIN FALLS — A slice of the moon and the headlights on his truck illuminated Conrad Cuellar's path as he carried three cartons of milk to a Hansen farmhouse.

While the occupants clapped off a night's sleep, the milkman's workday was well in progress, and predictably, it promised to be cold. As darkness prepared to make way for dawn on one of the Magic Valley's severest January days, the refrigerator on Cuellar's milk truck was warmer than the cab.

It could be said that for a milkman who's trying to pit his job against an uncompromising winter, happiness would be dry pavement and a day without subfreezing temperatures fortified by gusting winds.

But from a four-seasons viewpoint, Cuellar says, happiness consists of a rewarding family life and a job that at least flirts with adjectives like "ideal," even if it never actually captures them. Conrad Cuellar is a happy man.

"No job is perfect," Cuellar says as he steers his milk truck along snow-banked country roads east of Twin Falls. "But being a milkman comes close."

A sense of independence and opportunities to meet people have been his biggest rewards since he began working six years ago for Associated Dairies, the distributor of Triangle-Young's and Home Dairies products.

Cuellar, formerly an Idaho Power Co. pole climber, is part of a dying breed. According to the Milk Industry Foundation in Washington, D.C., home deliveries accounted for just 3 percent of the country's milk sales in 1980, compared to 17 percent in 1970 and 26 percent in 1963.

David Beren, a spokesman for the foundation, says the reasons for the steady decline include the rising cost of gas and the use of paper cartons instead of reusable glass bottles. Previously, Beren says, one of the benefits of home delivery was the fact that it eliminated the inconvenience of returning empties to the store.

But in Twin Falls, officials of Associated Dairies say their home delivery business is up, particularly on the heels of a recent decrease in milk prices. Part of the increase is due to Cuellar and his fellow milkmen, who hustle new accounts to increase their commission income.

Despite the discouraging national statistics, Cuellar says his firsthand observations foretell a bright future.

"People are getting busier all the time," he says. "I ask them, 'What's one of the things you need most often when you stop at the store? Milk.' If you can avoid some of those shopping trips, you're going to save time, cut down on gas and you're also going to cut down on impulse buying."

"Business is good," he says, "but it's something you have to work at. You can't just sit back and hope to maintain it."

And in seeking new accounts, it doesn't pay to be shy or overly practical — Associated Dairies' home delivery roster includes a number of dairy farmers who want processed milk instead of the raw beverage that's available a few yards from home.

Dairymen probably are among the few people who start work earlier than Cuellar. Assigned both city and rural routes, he's on the job at 6:30 a.m., though on the day of his long rural route, he starts work an hour earlier.

CSI study will provide useful energy data to homeowners

By GLEN WARCHOL
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — It's been a frigid winter, and more than ever, energy has taken a large slice out of every homeowner's income pie.

Everyone wants to save money on heating and other energy costs, but where do you begin?

Even the most fanatical conservationists are sobered by the high cost of home insulation and other energy-saving devices, which in many cases can take up to 35 years to pay for themselves.

A new College of Southern Idaho project will provide Twin Falls-area homeowners with one of the hardest-to-find components of an energy conservation strategy: average energy-use figures and costs for comparable homes and families.

The validity of the figures will be enhanced because they will be based on statistics from 400 homes within a 20-mile radius of CSI. John Rasco, the energy coordinator for CSI's buildings, is heading the effort.

"We are trying to devise a way," he says, "to get something that is unavailable to homeowners: a meaningful representation of utility usage, and one in which the local user can compare his own consumption and costs."

At present, homeowners can look only to averages supplied by the utility companies. These, Rasco says, cover too large an area of the state to be accurate.

As the CSI energy-use data is gathered, it will be presented monthly in The Times-News. Then, homeowners can compare their energy usage against area averages for homes and families of the same size.

"It makes it easy for the layman to get his hands on really pertinent information," says Rasco, describing the cooperative effort with The Times-News.

The "control" group will be CSI employees, who will find a questionnaire and a chart in with their paychecks at the end of January.

The employees will indicate on the chart whether their homes are all-electric or electric and gas, how many square feet of space, how many occupants, their energy use in kilowatt hours and therms, and the cost of the energy.

The data will be collected after each month's billing, and the averages will be calculated and printed in The Times-News.

"The reader's home should be within 15 percent of the valley average," Rasco says, "or he should get an energy audit."

Energy audits, provided by utility companies and contractors who do energy-conservation work, often will reveal places in a home where energy is being wasted.

"He may find that he needs storm windows or a change in his lifestyle," Rasco says. "Or, it might be that his wife did some canning that month — that runs up the bill on an electric stove — or maybe the in-laws came over and stayed for two weeks."

Rasco emphasizes that how the information is used will depend on the homeowner, whether he be "frugal or patriotic."

"It's up to him to decide what he is going to do. At least, he has something meaningful to compare his cost to."

"It will clearly display any disparity in energy use," Rasco says. "It'll be like waving a red flag in front of them once a month."

Photos, film shown in Jackpot

JACKPOT — Two educational programs, funded by the Nevada Humanities Committee, will be presented at Cactus Pete's Convention Center in Jackpot.

A program titled "New Pictures of Old Flamingo" is scheduled for today at 8 p.m.

The program features recent color photographs of Mercury,

Mars and Jupiter. A University of Nevada lecturer will discuss the photographs, which were taken by cameras mounted on spacecraft.

A film, "A Cowhand's Song: Crisis on the Range," will be shown March 23.

Both programs are sponsored by the Elko County Public Library.

Jerome police begin 'open-door' campaign

JEROME — The Jerome Police Department now has a full-time receptionist, as well as a new officer.

Patty Ward, who previously worked as a dispatcher for the Jerome Sheriff's Department, has been hired to work as receptionist and records clerk for the Police Department.

Police Chief Darryl Cameron said two vacancies occurred in his department, and he decided to fill one with a receptionist instead of a 10th police officer.

He received authorization to hire a receptionist from City Council last week.

"One of the things we've been criticized for is not having someone available to greet the public," Cameron said. "If someone comes to see us and an officer isn't available, he finds a closed door."

Ward will replace an officer who previously spent most of his time in the office doing paperwork, the chief said.

"We've had a vacancy here ever since I became chief in October," Cameron said. "We've had a lot of work to do, but to one to do it. I'm sure we can find plenty to do to keep her busy."

Cameron also has hired a Twin Falls police officer, Don Hughes, to replace Jeff Brizeo, who recently resigned. The hiring also was approved by City Council last week.

"He's worked in Twin Falls for a little over seven years," Cameron said. "He was a sergeant for four years. I worked with him, and I know he's a good officer."

Milkman

Quitting time has been unpredictable lately, given the formidable necessity of punching snowdrifts and creeping along icy roads in a top-heavy truck.

Ed McCullough, Associated Dairies retail sales supervisor in Twin Falls, says that for the first time in his 21 years with the company, weather has made it impossible to reach some of the rural customers. In some instances, the loss amounts to more than simply forgoing a carton of milk.

"A milkman isn't just a milkman all the time," says Cuellar, who serves his customers a maximum of twice a week. "Your customers become your friends. If someone's wife or husband or brother has died recently, you can't just rush in and hand them their milk and rush out. Sometimes, you feel like part of the family."

The sense of sharing works both ways. Cuellar is the recipient of surplus garden produce, Christmas baked goods, hot coffee on cold days, an occasional lunch and inquiries about the well-being of his wife and children.

And, as though he's one of the family, Cuellar can recite the dietary preferences held by many of the people he serves. He has a pretty good recollection of what they order from one week to the next, and besides, some people want their dairy products placed in the refrigerator, not on the back step. Those metal, insulated milk boxes that used to occupy so many porches have gone the way of glass bottles.

Also gone is the notion that a milkman delivers only milk and butter. Among other things, Cuellar's store on wheels features juices, eggs, frozen potatoes and ice cream.

"I check the eggs before I deliver them, but I don't have time to look at the bottoms," he says. "If the tops aren't cracked, I assume they're all right. If they're not, I hear about it."

"Hearing about it" is part of a day's work, and a milkman can't be the sort who's annoyed easily, says McCullough. Cuellar's supervisor.

"When you're looking for someone to deliver your products, you have to look for the type who can really go out and meet the public," McCullough says. "You want a bubbly personality, somebody who won't mind knocking on a door and asking for business, and someone who can ask for money without making people mad. Not everyone can do that, and we screen 25 to 30 people before we hire."

Conrad Cuellar says that six years ago, he was one of the lucky ones whose name got in the "in" basket. He's never regretted being chosen as a milkman.

SUPER BOWL XVI

Pontiac Silverdome • January 24, 1982

PONTIAC, Mich. (UPI) — The San Francisco 49ers and the Cincinnati Bengals met in the Super Bowl XVI for the NFL championship.

Each is looking to complete the most remarkable turnaround in Super Bowl history: moving from a losing record last season to conference titles this year.

San Francisco, 6-10 in 1980, won the NFC West title with a 13-3 record and then defeated the New York Giants and Dallas in the playoffs to capture the NFC championship.

Cincinnati, 6-10 last year, won the AFC Central with a 12-4 record and took the AFC championship by defeating Buffalo and San Diego in the playoffs.

Their records were the best in the NFL this season. The game, starting at 2 p.m. MST and televised nationally by CBS, matches not only the leading teams but also the top quarterbacks.

Cincinnati's Ken Anderson, an 11-year veteran, led the NFL in passing this season, had the lowest interception percentage in the league and was the top rushing quarterback in the NFL, averaging seven yards a carry.

San Francisco's Joe Montana was the NFL's top-rated passer and his daring style helped the 49ers become one of the most exciting teams in the NFL.

The weather will not be a factor in the outcome of this first Super Bowl game in the North. The Silverdome, a fully enclosed stadium, is fully enclosed.

Both clubs have wide open offenses. San Francisco Coach Bill Walsh is considered one of the game's leading offensive innovators and he was Anderson's first coach when he served as an assistant with Cincinnati. Forrest Gregg's Bengals ranked second only to San Diego in total offense.

Both coaches predict a close, high-scoring game.

"As long as the game is in doubt, you'll see a wide open football game," said Walsh. "I don't believe in going conservative just because it's a championship game. In a game like this, you have to put your best foot forward. You go with your style. It's no time to experiment or get desperate. You simply go out and try to do the things you do best."

"I just can't see a tight defensive struggle when you have two quarterbacks like Ken Anderson and Joe Montana playing. I expect a lot of scoring. I don't think either team will run away with it. The defenses have been too consistent this year. I think the winner will need four touchdowns."

"A lot of things can change the complexion of a game," said Gregg. "In any event, I just don't think 21 points will win this game. I think it will take 28 or better to win it."

Both coaches also have spent the week trying to downplay the impact of the Super Bowl.

"I just don't feel that great an impact," said Walsh. "It's not that great a spectacle. A C.C.U.R. DeMille type thing. Being in a championship game is not going to affect my thinking or my team's."

"The only thing we try to do," said Gregg, "is prepare like we do every week. We try to stay on a regular schedule. The only real difference is the amount of press here but that's just about an hour a day. I think a key will be keeping our guys on a regular schedule."

The big names of recent years — Terry Bradshaw, Lynn Swann, Franco Harris, Roger Staubach, Tony Dorsett, Ron Jaworski — won't be appearing but the game is shaping up as one of the most competitive in recent years. San Francisco is a slight favorite.

Joining Anderson in the Cincinnati backfield are 250-pound fullback Pete Johnson and Charles Alexander, a disappointment during the regular season but a ball of fire in the playoffs.

The Bengal receivers are speedster Isaac Curtis, star rookie Cris Collinsworth and Dan Ross, who probably ranks just behind San Diego star Kellen Winslow among AFC light ends.

The star of the Bengal offensive line is mammoth tackle Anthony Munoz, a 6-4, 275-pounder who has been named All-Pro in both his NFL seasons. In passing situations, Munoz will duel 230-pound Fred Dean, the 49er end who was named Defensive Player of the Year this season, in one of the most interesting matchups in the Super Bowl.

San Francisco's running is handled by Rickey Patton, who has been injured in recent weeks, Earl Cooper and Lesell Pitts, a former NFL player who is very rangy.

Dwight Clark, the first NFL receiver in a dozen years to catch 80 passes for two consecutive seasons.

Late mistakes cost Bruins against Rams

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Quickness, deadly accuracy and competitiveness combined Saturday night to keep the Highland Rams atop the Gem State Conference standings.

The Rams, taking advantage of three critical Twin Falls mistakes midway through the final quarter, hit eight of nine from the field goals to collect a 57-46 victory.

The score was tied at 46 when the Bruins came up with the fatal faux pas. On consecutive possession it went offensive foul, missed free throw and bad pass. Highland turned those into two field goals and a pair of free throws and then burrily pushed toward the field margin as the Bruins went the final three minutes without a point.

It was Twin Falls' second loss in 10 outings, leaving them at 3-2 in the league. It was Highland fourth win and eighth overall against three defeats.

Highland's quickness finally won Twin Falls down inside. With three men in the 6-3 to 6-4 area, the Rams were contained through the first 28 minutes. But when Twin Falls tried from the extra effort of keeping up, Highland simply moved it inside and Ken Montgomery and Don Holston blitzed from 12 feet on.

"The three mistakes were the visible things that finally killed us," said Twin Falls Coach John Astorquia. "But we did nothing the last two days but work on our offense against an aggressive man defense with a lot of picking. And we didn't do any of it in the game. I tended up I was glad when they went to the zone."

"There in the second half the points were got were specials (special plays) for (Steve) Meyerhoeffer and he picked up the points," Astorquia said. "The other area that killed us was transition. They beat us back downcourt all night and we had a couple of guys who never made an effort, not one, to get back with them," the coach said.

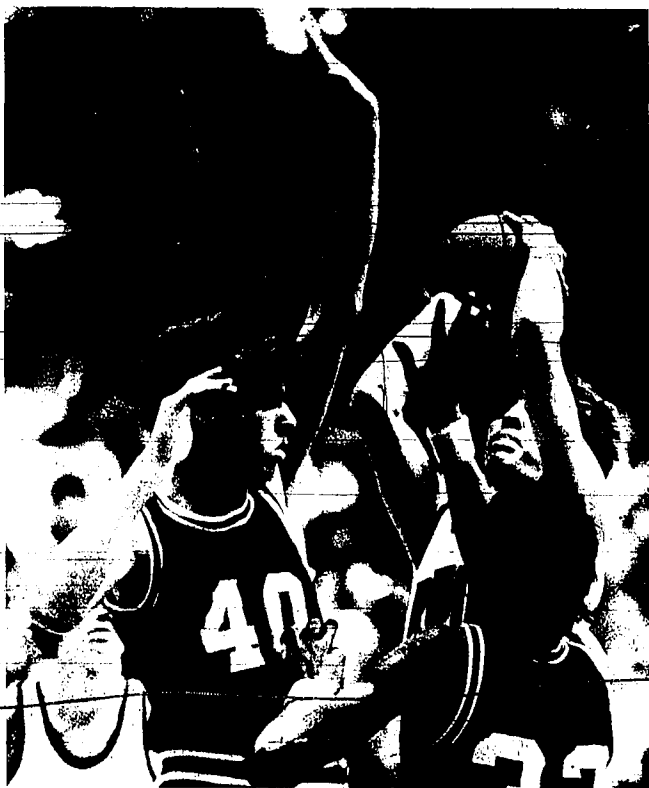

In the early going it appeared Highland's inside game was going to blow the Bruins away. The Rams had leads of six points three times and it could have been more except for several close-in misses, particularly on follow shots.

But 6-6 Bowen Call picked that up in the second period and Meyerhoeffer started to make his presence felt.

He was most felt inside where the 6-4 senior guard had two times against the tall timber and joined with Andy Toolson and Joe Shelby in getting the Bruins back to within two at intermission. Highland managed just six points in the second quarter.

Steve Galley hit a little burst in the early third period as Twin Falls twice fashioned ties and then moved ahead 50-46 on a Meyerhoeffer fast break. Lance Sellers added another and Meyerhoeffer hit to free throws. That was the crest, however, 34-28, as Twin Falls then made two straight turnovers which Highland converted into easy buckets.

Idaho loses by 2

MISSOULA, Mont. — The streak is over. ~~Idaho has never lost a game~~ and the recipe went sour.

Montana used a tip-in at the buzzer by Doug Selvig to knock University of Idaho from the undefeated ranks 53-51 and back into the thick of the Big Sky Conference championship chase.

Selvig's tip-in wound up a frantic second-half comeback effort by the Vandals that let them fashion several ties but never got into the lead.

The defeat cost Idaho a chance to pile up a comfortable Big Sky lead as Idaho State was tanking runner-up Nevada-Reno in Boise. Idaho now is 5-1 in the league while Montana climbs to 4-2. Reno also is one game off the pace.

Idaho's woes began early in the game when Kelvin Smith again got into foul trouble and had to spend most of the first half on the bench. But the big difference came in the early moments of the second half when Montana stole the Vandals' recipe.

Usually it is Idaho that can get a quick spurt as the second half begins but this time Montana, down by two, hit the first eight points for a 37-31 lead.

Idaho scrambled back into a tie at 36-32 and "let our foot" at 37. But between time the Grizzlies always had the lead.

Idaho's last bucket game on an inside shot with 39 seconds left for a 51-51 deadlock. Montana then wore the clock down to 15 seconds and took a timeout. After that the Grizzlies almost waited too long. Mark Glass finally let up with a long jumper that bounced away but Caler followed it home.

Idaho, which never has won two games on a Montana tour since the Big Sky Conference was formed, appeared to have shaken loose for its succession of cold-shooting openings.

Kenny Owens picked up five quick points and Hopson added a tip to make it 7-2. Three times Idaho had the ball after that but couldn't score, and Montana started back.

The Grizzlies didn't catch up for a while, however, as a couple of steals and fast breaks kept the Vandals ahead by two to four points. But Tryg Larsen's field goal tied it at 8:07 for the first time and Montana immediately went ahead as Doug Selvig and Derrick Pope followed with four points.

CSI-Ricks duel called off; they'll meet Feb. 15

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The College of Southern Idaho-Ricks game that was scheduled for Feb. 15, reports CSI Coach Dave Campbell.

Although the weather moderated and road conditions eased through the day, the decision to postpone the game came early.

"I talked with (Ricks Coach Gary) Gardner early this morning and he said they would try to make it and the final decision would be ours. Then I heard from the officials. Art Mendini said he couldn't get out of Salt Lake City because of blizzard conditions and they would either have to cancel or try to make it through Mountain Home but he doubted he could. I guess the Interstate, between Boise and Mountain Home was closed and he was talking about 12 inches of snow," Campbell said.

Campbell noted the Feb. 15 largely came at his behest because "it is about the only weekend date we have available. Ricks is always one of our bigger games and the way the weather has hit our gates and budgets, we felt we needed a weekend game," he said.

Eastern Idaho evidently was further hit by weather than Magic Valley as only the Twin Falls-Skyline game was played there Friday night. Pocatello-Bonneville and Blackfoot-Highland games were postponed.

The postponement changes the CSI schedule somewhat in that the Eagles will play their first.

Campbell said this could possibly be an advantage, particularly if his Eagles won.

"But we still feel that we have to win both games from Ricks to have a chance of getting the regional so when we play doesn't matter that much," he said.

CSI takes a rare January road trip Monday night, visiting Utah Tech at Provo.

"We don't know anything about them. Last fall we heard they had picked up some good height and some return missionaries for maturity.

Everyone thought they were going to be a powerful team. They've lost some games but I'm sure they're capable," Campbell said.

The Golden Eagles return to Twin Falls Friday and Saturday nights to join with Montana State and Montana junior varsities and Treasure Valley in a pair of doubleheaders. The junior colleges will trade opponents on the two nights.

Following that, CSI will have five games left on the road — three of them regional affairs — and five on the home court.

Wins women's slalom in 1:36.53

Cooper gains 1st World Cup triumph

BERCHTESGADEN, West Germany (UPI) — Sun Valley's Christina Cooper won her first-ever World Cup victory Saturday, taking the last women's slalom before next week's World Championships in Austria.

Cooper clocked a total time of 1 minute 36.53 seconds, to edge out France's Perrine Peleten who was second in 1:36.78. Liechtenstein's Ursula Konzett, winner of Friday's slalom at Lengries, was third with 1:37.11.

Favorite Erka Hess of Switzerland, the women's overall World Cup leader who has won four slaloms this season, dropped out in the second 59-gate course on the Jenner plate, missing a gate. She had placed third in the first run.

But Hess retained her lead in the overall Cup standings ahead of West Germany's Irene Epple, who did not compete Saturday. Cooper moved up to third place overall.

"The beginning of the season I set myself the goal of winning a race before the World Cham-ionships at Schladming," Cooper said. "I left it pretty light, but it's a help for my confidence. I skied really aggressively today and finally got it all together," added the 22-year-old. "I didn't make any mistakes and a lot of other people did."

Besides Hess, American Tamara McKinney also was upset on the second of the 57-meter long runs with a drop of 180 meters. McKinney led after the first 56-gate run with a time to 49.75 seconds, the only skier to finish in under 50 seconds.

"Tamara was really unlucky — she couldn't correct the mistakes in the upper part of the course, and then she just skied out and missed a gate," Cooper said.

McKinney, who was fourth at Lengries Friday, was skidding with a broken hand strapped to her pole, but she said she was not hampered by her injury.

"It doesn't bother me, except that the start is difficult, but I've had the plaster on for a month now and I'm used to it," she said.

Hess, who finished third Friday after a string of four consecutive slalom wins, said she missed the gate through trying to get up speed over a bump.

"I had my good intermediate time showed the third at Lengries was just a slight setback, and I'm going to Schladming with a much better feeling now that I know I've been beaten a couple of times," the Swiss said.

Another surprise result Saturday, with good snow conditions after an overnight snowfall, was the fourth placing of 20-year-old Petra Wenzel, who clocked 1:37.60 ahead of Italy's Daniela Zini with 1:37.65.

"Things are beginning to go right for me — I'm starting to reproduce my training times in races," said Wenzel, younger sister of Hanni and Andreas, who started with number 43.

The 18-year-old Polish twins, Małgorzata and Dorota Ziaka, finished 7th and 8th, their best ever World Cup result, with Dorota just 1-100th of a second ahead of her sister.

Nelson maintains Phoenix Open lead with 70

LARRY NELSON
... holds 1-shot lead

PHOENIX, Ariz. (UPI) — PGA Champion Larry Nelson struggled to a 1-under-par 70 Saturday, but it was good enough to keep him in front of the field after two rounds of the rain-delayed $300,000 Phoenix Open.

Nelson, who failed to make the cut in the first two tournaments of the new season, had a 63 in the opening round Thursday so his 36-hole score was 9-under-par 133.

Only a shot behind him were Fred Couples, who shot a 65 Saturday, and Morris Hatafsky, who had a 67.

Two shots off the lead were U.S. Open Champion David Graham, Lanny Wadkins, Tom Purtzer and Ron Nielsen while John Cook, Bob Eastwood and Craig Stadler, who won the Tucson Open two weeks ago, were three shots back.

Nelson changed his putting stroke coming to this tournament, and it helped him to the 63 in the first round. However, he was forced to stand by Friday while the first round was completed, and by the time he teed off Saturday he had been idle 48 hours.

"I don't know how much that affected me," Nelson said. "Obviously I didn't make as many putts as I did in the first round, but I wasn't that close on a lot of holes."

Nelson started out with birdies on the first two holes at the Phoenix Country Club Course, a tight, tree-lined layout that can be tricky. But then he bogeyed the 5th hole, the 13th and the 18th while picking up birdies on 7 and 16 to complete the 70.

"It was a struggle from the third hole on," Nelson said. "In the first round all my putts seemed to be uphill ones while today they were all downhill on fast greens."

Hatafsky, who scored his first career victory last year in the Hall of Fame Classic, also bogeyed the 18th hole, which has a long lake paralleling the fairway and green on the right side. But he had four birdies for his second straight 67 and said he was pleased with the way he is playing.

"I usually don't play this well on the West Coast," Hatafsky said, "so I'm kind of happy about the way I'm playing here."

Couples joined the TPA tour last year and has yet to win a tournament although he came close in 1981 in the Hartford and Pensacola opens. His 65 was made up of six birdies, including a couple of putts from 25 and 20 feet.

"The best thing about my round," Couples said, "is that I didn't make any mistakes. In the past I've hurt myself a lot with double bogeys at the wrong time."

Idaho pair place high at national west rodeo

DENVER (UPI) — Colorado cowboy Dale Haskins pocketed $1,787 Saturday for winning the second go-round of saddle bronc riding at the 78th annual National Western Stock Show Rodeo.

Haskins, of Maybell, won top money with a 75-point ride. Shawn Davis of Filer, Idaho, newly elected president of the Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association, and Tom Miller, Faith, N.D., tied for second with 73 points and collected $1,308 each.

Five cowboys — Idahoans Kevin Small (Dubois) and Tom Hughes (Fort Hall), along with Nevada Jorgenson, Baldwin, N.D.; Rick Smith, Laramie, Wyo.; and Cody Lambert, El Paso, Texas — tied for fourth and took home $396 apiece.

Joe Alexander, five-time world champion bareback rider from Marysville, Calif., marked 73 points on Blue Yonder Saturday afternoon to move into the third go-round lead.

Brad Mattox, Wichita, Kan., remained in the average lead with 224 points on three rides.

First go-rounds in calf roping and steer wrestling also ended at Saturday's matinee.

Dave Brock, Alze, Texas, won the go-round in steer wrestling, the richest event at the National Western, and collected $4,508 for his time of 4.0 seconds. Second went to Casey McPeak, Valentine, Neb., who took home $3,920 for a time of 4.3, and Doug Janke, Kellyville, Okla., earned $3,332 for his 4.5-second performance.

In the first go-round of calf roping, 1980 world champion steer wrestler Butch Myers, Welda, Kan., had the best time of 8.1 seconds and collected $3,775. Jerry Jetton, 1979 Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association rookie of the year from Stephenville, Texas, banked $3,283 for second and Dave Cannon Jr., Echo, Ore., received $2,791 for his third-place time of 8.9.

Pats nix offer for top pick

PONTIAC, Mich. (UPI) — The New England Patriots, who own the No. 1 pick in next spring's NFL draft, have turned down a $2.5 million offer for the choice.

The offer reportedly came from Washington Redskins owner Jack Kent Cooke.

New England owner William Sullivan revealed the offer Friday, but did not specify the amount nor the bidder. Earlier this month, Cooke had offered the Baltimore Colts the same amount when it looked as if they would have the No. 1 pick.

Baltimore and New England both finished with 2-14 records, but the Patriots earned the No. 1 choice due to an easier schedule. New England will draft Texas' defensive lineman Kenneth Sims, if the Longhorns' star has fully recovered from his broken ankle.

"The financial offer was substantial," Sullivan said. "I said I wasn't interested because you can't put a stack of dollar bills in your lineup and hope to win."

Ron Meyer, the Patriots' new head coach, said he was pleased the offer was rejected.

"When I learned the offer was flat-out rejected, it was a great feeling. It shows me how much this team is committed to winning. If I'd had any doubts that I'd made the right decision to come to New England, and I didn't flinch out about the rejection would have enflamed them," Meyer said.

Cavaliers' owner judges off-court talent well —now he has to learn to judge it on court

By DAVE VAN DYCK
© Chicago Sun-Times

CHICAGO — Cleveland Cavaliers' owner Ted Stepien was parading around Chicago Stadium Friday night with his girlfriend. Pretty girl.

"Looks like he's a better judge of talent off the court than on it," someone said.

Steplen, of course, signed three free agents at nearly $2 million a season. Their talent has helped the Cavs go from fifth worst in the NBA last season to worst this season. Even worse than the Dallas Mavericks.

But, said Steplen, "We're going full out next year in the free-agent market again."

What Steplen did to the salary structure in the league prompted one owner to call him crazy. "You can use the word, just don't use my name," he said. "And other owners feel the same way." Apparently, Commissioner Larry O'Brien felt that way as well. He stopped all deals the Cavaliers made last season until the league could approve them.

"The league should be happy, happy that I'm doing my job," he said. "It's my money."

The other owners probably will have Steplen to kick around again next season. About the rumors that his team might be up for sale next season, Steplen said, "I've been 34 years in this business (advertising). I don't owe anybody a dime. We have the 25th largest advertising agency (Nationwide) in the world. It's worth $50 million and we own 82 percent of the club."

"Everybody is always zeroing in on me. I think they should be concerned about places like Philadelphia, which could only draw 7,000 for a playoff game last year. I know if we had a playoff team, we would draw."

The Cavaliers are far from being a playoff team. No one knows how good they really are, although Steplen has his ideas. And he isn't happy with the job new coach Chuck Daly is doing.

"We just had a little dispute," Steplen said of a face-to-face meeting early last week. "Before I hired him, he knew our talent. I hired him to take the talent and win more than the other guy (Don Delaney, now back in the Cleveland front office)."

NBA notebook

...his 7-Up ads aren't seen much

I'm sold on my talent. Apparently, he wasn't as sold as I am."

Daly left as an assistant in Philadelphia with his eyes open. He knew the reputation of Steplen and he knew the track record of coaches in Cleveland. "Between the injuries and the trades and all the other chaos, it makes this job a little challenging," Daly said. "Now he has a moratorium on trades. I guess he is satisfied with the team. That's it. He's the boss."

And the boss promises again that next year will be different, once he gets out his checkbook for free agents.

"We learned a little bit about the free agent market last year. It was new to everyone. Like the NFL, we decided to take the best player available in the draft. But since we had no draft choices (all are traded until 1987), we went after the best draft choices available."

"I wasn't discouraged by the free agent market. Now I'm able to see the holes. We'll probably have to go after a forward and a guard."

Maybe his judgment of basketball talent next year will match his judgment of talent off the court.

SHORT SHOTS: Earvin Johnson's commercials for 7-Up have vanished from the air, mostly as a result of the Magic Man making Paul Westhead vanish as coach.

Thanks, Isiah Thomas: Detroit attendance in the Silverdome is up 108 percent after 18 games with an average of 9,877. Road attendance for the Pistons is up 34.8 percent.

Slain's big buddy, Mark Aguirre of Dallas, has had the car removed from his broken foot and has begun rehabilitation on a stationary bike.

"Bucks" Bob Lanier... constant pain from his knees, "I want to win a championship as much as anything I've done in life. But I don't want to be carried into it. I want to be a productive part of a championship team. Of this championship team, The Milwaukee Bucks."

Detroit rookie Kelly Tripucka on the hardships of playing an 82-game schedule: "People don't understand. It's not a matter of not trying. Sometimes you just can't do it. Fans and a lot of other people think you should play great every night and you just can't."

The NBA trading deadline is Feb. 15. Look for some deals next weekend at the All-Star game in East Rutherford, N.J.

World Free has nicknamed his Golden State team the "Unknown Riders" because no one knows who they are. Says Free, "Heck, I'm on the team and sometimes I can't even remember their names."

On a recent "Salute to Israel" night, 76ers gave away bacon and eggs at McDonald's.

Magic's a 'Good Guy'

NEW YORK (UPI) — Earvin "Magic" Johnson of the Los Angeles Lakers, who donates considerable time and money to working with retarded children and the National Sickle Cell Foundation, has been voted a "Good Guy Award."

Johnson, former Michigan State star, will receive the "Good Guy Award" Jan. 28, during halftime of a game between the Lakers and Phoenix Suns in the Forum in Los Angeles. The award plus a $500 check to the Sickle Cell Foundation will be presented Johnson by David Kett, director of the sponsoring organization. The award is sponsored by the Gordon's Gin Company.

Johnson's work with retarded children in the Special Olympics and his efforts for the Sickle Cell Foundation, of which Willie Stargell of the Pittsburgh Pirates is founder-president, takes place both during and before and after the National Basketball Association season.

Chamberlain wants to rejoin 76ers

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Wilt Chamberlain is certain he could make a successful NBA comeback at age 45 and says if he ever makes such a decision, he would consider playing for only one team — the Philadelphia 76ers.

"There's no doubt in my mind, if I wanted to come back I could come back," Chamberlain, the NBA's all-time leading scorer, and a former Sixer, said in a copyright interview published Saturday in the Philadelphia Inquirer.

"I led the league in blocked shots and rebounding when I quit, so I wasn't exactly a dog then. I quit on top. I led the league in three offensive categories that year."

Sixers owner Harold Katz said this week that he would like to sign Chamberlain, who retired from the Los Angeles Lakers after the 1972-73 season. Katz has touted Chamberlain as the man to fill the gap left by the absence of Darryl Dawkins.

Mancini stops Valdez in 10; lightweight title shot next

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (UPI) — Ray Mancini stopped Julio Valdez early in the 10th round of a scheduled 12-round bout Saturday to retain his North American Boxing Federation lightweight championship and earn himself a shot at the World Boxing Association title.

The 20-year-old Ohioan began the route by stunning Valdez with a left hook that dislodged the challenger's mouthpiece, then seconds later sent Valdez reeling with a straight right hand to the jaw. As Valdez spun around, Mancini then lunged around Valdez' right shoulder and landed another hard right, which floored the 29-year-old New Yorker.

Referee Rudy Battle ended the bout at 6:59 of the 10th round.

The victory, which raised Mancini's record to 22-1 and dropped Valdez to 18-10-1, assured Mancini of a WBA title fight with the winner of next Saturday's match between champion Arturo Frias and Ernesto Espinoza.

Robert Arum, president of Top Rank, Inc., said the bout is tentatively scheduled for April 17, but the site has not been determined.

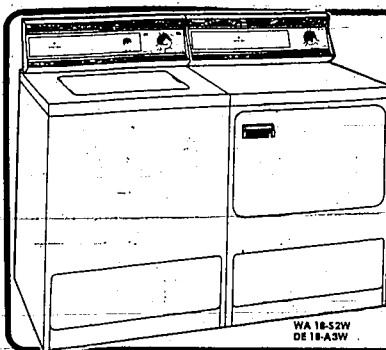

"Every hotel-casino in Las Vegas and Atlantic City is going to want that title bout, and they're going to have to show how much they want it," Arum said.

Mancini, who had some difficulty reaching Valdez in the early rounds, said Saturday's bout had prepared him for his second title shot. Mancini lost a bid for the World Boxing Council title in October to champion Alexis Arguello. But he said Saturday that he felt more prepared for his second chance.

"Some people said after the Arguello fight that I didn't have any late-round power," he explained. "But I think today they found out that I've got plenty of power in the late rounds."

Mancini admitted that Valdez' constant motion and effective counter-punching had been a problem.

"He's a headache. I'll tell you right now," Mancini said. "He took some tremendous shot throughout the fight, but he kept coming. He stood there and he was taking them, but you can't take too many before it catches up with you."

Wyoming tips BYU 27-25 in record low-scoring duel

PROVO, Utah (UPI) — Greg Thesenvitz rebounded with one second left gave Wyoming a 27-25 win at Brigham Young Saturday in a record low-scoring basketball game.

Wyoming's 27 points were the fewest by a WAC team in a win. The 25 points by both teams was also a conference record for low-scoring, and BYU's output of just 25 was another league mark. The old WAC records were set in 1979 when the Cougars edged Texas Tech 27-25 in a 30-minute game.

Dwight McCendon led Wyoming, now 6-0 in the WAC, with 10 points. Bill Garrett added eight for the Cowboys, including six in the second half. Garrett's first basket in the second half had given Wyoming an 18-12 lead — its biggest margin.

Fred Roberts had a game-high 14 points for BYU. And Roberts' basket, with just 22 seconds remaining had tied the score at 24-24.

Wyoming then called time out and went for the final basket to win the game. Mike Jackson's jump shot from the right side of the key rimmed out, but Thesenvitz tipped the ball in for the Cowboy victory. The rebound shot was the only field goal attempt by Thesenvitz in the game.

The Cowboys appeared headed for the win after Garrett's shot jumper gave Wyoming a 25-21 lead with four minutes to go. But BYU scored after a steal by Cougar guard Mike Maxwell and after an offensive foul by McCendon to tie the game for the third time, at 25-25.

"Our strategy in the final seconds was to get the ball to Mike (Jackson) or to Bill (Garrett) for an outside shot," said Wyoming coach Jim Brandenburg. "And, if one of them missed, we hoped to have just enough time for one or two rebound shots. It worked perfectly. Greg's tip went through the basket just as the buzzer sounded."

Penn 58, Penn State 44

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Avery Rawlings scored 12 points and Paul Little added 11 Saturday to lead Pennsylvania to a 58-44 victory over Penn State and snap the Quakers' nine-game losing streak.

Little scored eight points in the second half to help the Quakers, 4-9, break open a close game. Penn took the lead for good, 33-31, on a basket by Little with 1:10 left to play. George Noon later scored five straight points in an 8-2 surge that gave Penn a 45-37 lead with 5:38 remaining, and a run of six straight points later increased the margin to 51-40 with 2:26 left.

Ohio St. 59, Northwestern 57

COLUMBUS, Ohio (UPI) — Granville Walters hit a 10-foot jumper as time expired in the second overtime Saturday, giving Ohio State a 59-57 Big Ten victory over Northwestern.

Walters' shot hit the rim, bounced into the air and dropped through the net as time ran out, giving Ohio State its 15th win in 18 games and upping the Buckeyes' Big Ten record to 10-5.

Northwestern, led by Jim Stack with 21 points and Gaddis Rabell with 11, trailed 30-30 at the half and was down 32-22 early in the second half before Stack sparked a Wildcat comeback.

Northwestern finally tied the game 49-49 on two free throws with 1:37 left. The Wildcats had a final shot at the buzzer, but 42-footer from the corner by Stack, his first miss of the second half, bounced off the rim.

DePaul 79, Birmingham 68

CHICAGO (UPI) — Terry Cummings scored 24 points and freshman Kenny Patterson added a season-high 18 points to lead fourth-ranked DePaul to a 79-68 victory Saturday over the University of Alabama-Birmingham.

Cummings scored 16 points in the second half as the Blue Demons slowly pulled away from UAB.
