

Congress lines up for budget battle

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan sent his $757.6 billion 1983 budget plan to Congress Monday. As he did, he predicted Democrats will trot out "horror stories" to block passage of social program cuts and a new boost in defense spending.

But Republican leaders conceded Reagan's proposal is likely to undergo alterations because of opposition from both sides of the aisle based on the $91.5 billion deficit the president expects for the new spending year.

Senate GOP leader Howard Baker of Tennessee said the deficit "will be damaging to Republicans." And a new round of reductions in social programs and aid to the states also will be warily received by lawmakers preparing to face the voters this fall.

Even before the budget document officially reached Capitol Hill, Democrats and Republicans alike were mentioning possible changes to narrow the deficit, such as cutting back the proposed $215.9 billion for defense or raising federal excise taxes. Reagan had rejected both options.

The budget calls for spending 4.5 percent more in fiscal 1983 than this year's $725.3 billion. Of the $32 billion boost, $16 billion would go to the Pentagon.

The document also calls for $56 billion in "savings," including $26 billion in cuts, much of that coming from programs Congress slashed last year to the tune of $33 billion. Added revenue would come from tighter taxes on businesses and user fees.

Reagan's budget projects deficits of $98.6 billion this year and $91.5 billion next year. Byrd said this year's deficit will be closer to $109 billion and the fiscal 1983 red ink will be "in the area" of $130 billion to $150 billion.

The president signed the proposal in the Oval Office, with Baker and House Speaker Thomas O'Neill, D-Mass., looking on.

O'Neill told reporters later the Democrats are prepared to offer an alternate spending plan. Asked what Reagan told him at the signing ceremony, O'Neill replied, "Not a thing that I didn't already know."

When told of O'Neill's comment, Reagan quipped he was giving the House speaker lessons "as fast as I can."

In a statement, O'Neill called the spending plan "a Beverly Hills Budget" and charged it "is geared for the wealthy—of our country—and paid-for-by-the-average citizen."

Baker told reporters he believes Congress will approve the president's budget, "with some modifications," although he predicted, "The mix that finally develops will be a lot closer to what the president proposes than to what 'Tip' O'Neill proposes."

The Tennessee Republican said in a statement he would like to see some reductions, "preferably in military spending."

Two other Republican senators, Orrin Hatch of Utah and James McClure of Idaho, made similar comments. But Deputy Defense Secretary Frank Carlucci, during an appearance before the Senate Armed Services Committee, would not discuss possible cuts in military spending.

"I for one cannot believe that our country cannot afford a national defense that is adequate to its needs," he said. "What we have put together is a defense budget that we believe is a minimum budget."

Treasury Secretary Donald Regan and budget director David Stockman have said the large deficits forecast in the budget are no bigger, compared to the gross national product, than the deficits in 1974 or 1975.

Idaho to lose $30 million

BOISE (UPI) — State budget officials say President Reagan's proposed spending package for the next fiscal year could cost Idaho at least $30 million.

Moreover, it will probably affect every resident.

Larry Seale of the governor's budget office said the $757.6 billion federal spending proposal calls for a 10-percent reduction in aid to state and local governments. This would mean a $30 million cut for Idaho, he said, on top of the $40 million in reduced aid already imposed on the state this year.

Seale, who planned to attend a briefing at the White House Monday for state budget directors, also said Reagan's anticipated deficit of $91 billion could have a detrimental impact on efforts to bring down interest rates.

"If the federal government has to go into the financial market to finance the debt, I'm afraid any moderation this spring in interest rates will be temporary," he said. The budget director for Democratic Gov. John Evans said continued high interest rates will further jeopardize timber and housing industries in Idaho.

John Andreason of the Legislative Fiscal Office said Reagan's plan will be felt in all economic sectors in the state.

"It will have an affect on a virtually all Idaho citizens, because the cuts he's talking about are being in a lot of people programs," Andreason said. He said the proposal is intended to make people more "self-sufficient," but will mean that "fewer people will be eligible to receive less money."

Both men noted that, since congressional work on the budget will not be completed until later this year, it will place Idaho at a disadvantage in terms of preparing to cope with anticipated cuts and a shifting of many programs to the state level.

Seale and Andreason also predicted Congress will modify many of Reagan's proposals to reduce aid to local governments. They noted that Idaho's budget for the next fiscal year — a package totalling slightly less than $1 billion — presumes about $250 million in federal support.

Pay raise

Idaho House passes proposed 5% increase for state employees

By BRUCE HAMMOND
Times-News writer

BOISE — A proposed 5 percent pay increase for state employees passed the House on Monday by a 42-to-23 margin.

If similar action is taken by the Senate, the pay plan would be one of the few times the Legislature has agreed with the governor on how much the state should pay its employees. In December, Gov. John Evans requested a 5 percent wage hike, plus a 1.5 percent allocation for merit increases.

"I'd like to point out to the members of the House that this resolution would pay employees out of the general fund, as has been the tradition," said Rep. Gordon Hollifield, R-Jarvis, who chaired a special committee on employee compensation.

"The revenue projection that has been approved is about an 8.8 percent increase, so the money is there," he said. "At the same time, this raise we're talking about is only about half the rate of inflation."

The 5 percent hike Hollifield's committee endorsed would require $8.1 million in state funds for fiscal year 1983. If this amount is allocated, no state jobs would have to be eliminated to pay for the raises.

This contrasts with the 7 percent pay increase granted last year. With that move, the Legislature effectively forced the elimination of several hundred state jobs by not funding the salary schedule fully.

Hollifield said that while the 5 percent wage hike is designed to be applied across the board, some workers actually would have their wages frozen, while others would receive as high as 10 percent increases. He said this is because of a pay-grade reallocation called for in the resolution.

There was not unanimous support for the plan, not even from Hollifield's fellow Magic Valley legislators.

"If we employees around the payroll is going to go up here?" R-Twin Falls.

The state's pension increases without state money. "Perhaps resolution is force, or at least in order to accomplish the same end result," Stivers said.

Hollifield countered Stivers' argument, saying that most private businesses still are granting employees raises at least equal to the inflation rate, regardless of any layoffs that may also be occurring.

Other Magic Valley representatives voting against the pay plan were Noy Brackett, R-Twin Falls; Dan Kelly, R-Mountain Home; and Mack Nelbaur, R-Paul.

The Joint Finance and Appropriations Committee uses the Legislature's pay resolution as a guideline in drafting state budgets.

Merit increases under this year's proposal would be paid with the savings generated by work-force turnover, the resolution stipulates. Merit pay would be restricted to the first three months of the fiscal year, which begins July 1.

But Hollifield acknowledged his committee's plan will have "a tough time in the Senate."

Strong sentiment exists among Senate leaders for freezing state employees' wages in fiscal year 1983, he said. "It could go either way."

Policeman denies bias against gun ownership

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A policeman denied Monday that law enforcement officers are against private ownership of firearms.

He also told a Senate committee police attitudes have been "grossly misrepresented" by gun control advocates.

Lt. Kayne Robinson of Des Moines, Iowa, joined other law enforcement spokesmen in supporting amendments to end what they consider enforcement "abuses" under the 1968 Gun Control Act.

"We have been grossly misrepresented to create a false impression that police officers of the nation oppose private ownership of firearms," Robinson testified in a third and final Judiciary Committee hearing on the gun law changes.

Sen. Charles Grassley, R-Iowa, predicted the bill of Sen. James A. McClure, R-Idaho, and Rep. Harold Volkmer, D-Mo., has enough support in Congress to become law this year. It has 83 Senate and 169 House co-sponsors.

"We don't advocate that people go out and arm themselves," said Robinson, who heads the Des Moines police research and development division. "On the other hand, we don't tell them not to do that. It is their right."

"We police officers resent the implication that we are not sensitive to the civil rights of Americans, including Second Amendment rights," Robinson added.

Rupert mayor suggests cities sue BPA over shutdown plan

By STEVEN CHRISTENSEN
United Press International

BOISE — Public utilities facing billions of dollars in bills to terminate two nuclear power plants in Washington should consider filing a suit against the officials who allegedly allowed huge cost overruns to ruin the projects, Rupert Mayor Bill Whitton said Monday.

Whitton, a staunch opponent of the decision by the Washington Public Power Supply System board to terminate work on two plants at Hanford and Satsop, said Rupert and four other Idaho sponsors already have dedicated $50,000 to legal research on a possible suit.

He said an effort would be made this week to involve other public utilities in Oregon and Washington in the investigation. Some of those utilities, he said, already have started an inquiry into the legal ramifications of forcing the sponsors to pay for the termination costs.

Bond issue oversubscribed. Page A9.

There have been some accusations that the huge cost overruns and other factors that caused termination were the responsibility of WPPSS officials," he said. "We are looking at that as a possible avenue of litigation" to protect utilities against having to pay for shutting down the partially completed plants, Whitton said.

"We didn't anticipate any huge cost overruns, and relied on the (WPPSS) board that was named to run this project to have the expertise to see it through," the mayor said during a stopover in Boise on Monday.

"Now, we're being told large overruns and inefficiencies were allowed to occur. I don't see how individual utilities like ours can be held fully accountable. The people in charge of the project should be accountable."

Rupert has been asked to pay $300,000 as its share of a possible $6 billion in termination costs, Whitton said, but City Council is balky at the request. Last week, council urged the Bonneville Power Administration to acquire the plants and complete their construction.

A similar resolution was adopted Thursday by the Idaho Falls City Council, which refused to forward the $865,000 owed as that town's portion of termination.

Whitton also said the BPA might be a subject of the suit on the grounds the federal energy broker misled utilities into signing agreements to sponsor the two plants.

"We feel a lot of the responsibility falls on BPA," he said. "When we signed those agreements in 1976, BPA told us we might not have enough power by 1983 unless we became part of the project. We took their warnings to heart and signed because we didn't want to be caught short. Now, they say power from the plants isn't going to be needed after all."

The mayor, however, disputes projections that there will not be a demand for the electricity that would have been generated by plants Nos. 4 and 5.

"By all indications, we'll need at least 2,000 megawatts of power by the year 2000. To provide that would cost at least $20 billion. We could finish those two plants for much less than that."

The five Idaho cities that Whitton said agreed to set up the legal fund during a meeting last week are Rupert, Idaho Falls, Pocatello, Arden and Bonners Ferry.

The original cost estimates for five WPPSS plants at Hanford and Satsop, made in the mid 1970s, were between $4 billion and $6 billion. Since then, estimates to complete the projects have soared to more than $10 billion. Faced with the increases, the WPPSS board last month decided to terminate work on the fourth and fifth plants.

The WPPSS board is composed of representatives from the 17 charter utilities involved in the project. Over the years, those board members have included ranchers, farmers, car salesman and a muffler-shop owner.

Japan Air Lines DC-8 rests in Tokyo Bay as small boats rescue passengers

Airliner splashes in Tokyo Bay, kills 21 aboard

TOKYO (UPI) — A Japan Air Lines DC-8 with 174 people aboard plunged into the waters of Tokyo Bay today 100 yards short of a runway and broke in two, killing 21 people.

Police said 153 others survived, although 41 of them were seriously injured.

The DC-8, flight 333 from the southern Japanese city of Fukuoka, was carrying 166 passengers and a crew of eight when it crashed into the sea off the southern part of Tokyo's Haneda International Airport as it tried to land at about 8:45 a.m. today (4:45 p.m. MST Monday).

A spokesman for Japan Air Lines, the national flag carrier, said the passenger list showed there was only one foreigner on board, believed to be a South Korean.

An American Embassy spokesman said, "As far as we know there was no American on board the plane."

Four of the survivors were trapped for more than three hours in the cockpit, which snapped off from the fuselage on impact.

Inmate shoots black prisoners

PETROS, Tenn. (UPI) — A white inmate shot four black prisoners execution style at Brushy Mountain State Prison Monday night, killing two and wounding two others while forcing four guards held hostage to watch.

The hostages were released unharmed about 15 minutes after the shooting.

John Parish, spokesman for Gov. Lamar Alexander, said seven white inmates in Cellblock B, armed with knives and a pistol, were involved in a confrontation with blacks when the guards walked up, two at a time.

The injured prisoners were rushed to a hospital in nearby Oak Ridge where they were reported in stable condition several hours after the shooting. One inmate was shot once and the other was shot three times.

New snow sweeps eastward from Rockies across plains

By United Press International

A new storm system in the south central United States spread snow across the Rockies and central Plains Monday.

Bad weather was blamed for three train crossing accidents and the death of a 12-year-old snowmobiler.

Snow fell over the southern and central Rockies, parts of the central Plains and southern sections of Missouri and Illinois.

A mixture of rain, freezing rain and sleet was reported from west central Texas to northern Oklahoma and northwest Kansas.

The National Weather Service said the storm system would move rapidly northeast across the mid-Mississippi Valley into the northern part of the Ohio Valley.

A flash flood watch was issued for southeast Texas.

"Another car stuck in a snowy rut at the same crossing, was struck by a train. The driver escaped injury.

A thick fog covered the Texas Gulf coast with visibility dropping to three-quarters of a mile. However, major airports in the area remained open.

In Galveston, Texas, the weather service issued travelers' advisories and officials said the fog "could bring shipping to a standstill." However, NOAA meteorologist Julius Solaun said the fog should clear up by late Monday.

Light rain was reported in Galveston and Houston.

In Oklahoma, rain glazed roads and highways with ice as a cold front moved southeast across the state. Traffic was snarled in the northwestern two-thirds of Oklahoma.

Forecasters said the light rain would change to snow. Light snow already dusted the Panhandle and extreme northwestern portion of the state.

"A cold snap lingered over Oregon, with the mercury plunging to 20 below east of the Cascades and a chance of some light snow or rain showers by Monday night.

At 6 a.m., state police reported a 20 below reading on Interstate 84 at Meacham, halfway between Pendleton and La Grande in northeastern Oregon. The temperature had warmed to 16 below by 8 a.m., while Baker was shivering at a frigid 13 below by that hour.

Travelers' advisories were posted over north central Nevada where 2 to 4 inches of snow was on the ground, making roads slippery and hazardous.

Snow flurries were scattered over western Nebraska, while rain was widely scattered from north to south in the western half of the state.

In the Chicago suburb of Oak Lawn, Annie McCarthy, 12, was killed when the snowmobile she was learning to drive slammed into a tree.

Alan Middleton, 34, said he told the girl to slow down while they were headed down a small hill, but she accidentally pulled the throttle wide open instead of grabbing the brake.

Reagan plugs budget on Midwestern swing

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (UPI) — President Reagan, defending his new $75.6 billion budget in the snows of Minnesota, pledged Monday that his safety net for social programs "is still there."

Speaking at the start of a three-state Midwestern speaking tour originally planned to plug his "New Federalism" initiative, Reagan warned a Republican audience of "demagoguery" about his 1983 budget.

At a fund-raising event for Sen. David Durenberger, R-Minn., on the first stop of his two-day trip, Reagan warned, "In the days ahead you're going to be submerged with demagoguery" about the budget. "You're going to hear all kinds of horror stories about people being thrown out in the snow to freeze and to starve to death."

Reagan was applauded by the 2,000 people attending the rally when he said "New Federalism" will mean programs "will be run by people closest to the scene."

Reagan's appearance netted between $100,000 and $115,000 for Durenberger's reelection coffers. Two hundred people paid $500 a head to attend a private reception and 2,000 — paying $15 per person — turned out for the rally afterward.

Reagan flew to Des Moines, Iowa, Monday night. Today, he is scheduled to address a joint session of the Iowa legislature before flying to Indianapolis to speak to the Indiana legislature, and then back to Washington.

Idaho Legislature Briefs

Idaho labor head denounces attempt to repeal wage law

BOISE (UPI) — Idaho State AFL-CIO President James Kerns told a House committee Monday that a bill to repeal the Little Davis-Bacon Act is part of a drive to "destroy the Idaho labor movement."

Leading off the House State Affairs Committee's second hearing on the bill to wipe out the law — which requires the payment of prevailing union wages on state and local public works projects — Kerns said the proposal would be a devastating blow to union workers.

He said eliminating the law would force contractors to curb wages and benefits for members of a variety of craft unions. He also said it would reduce the quality of work in public construction projects.

"This is nothing more than an attempt to destroy the Idaho labor movement," Kerns said.

Kerns also said the Legislature would be breaking stride with the Reagan administration because he said the federal government has decided against trying to repeal the national Davis-Bacon Act.

He urged opponents of the state Davis-Bacon law to address their concerns to the U.S. Labor Department. He said the federal agency, which determines prevailing wage rates, "sometimes may make mistake, but does a thorough job."

The committee postponed a vote on the controversial proposal until today.

Harold P. Skamser of the Boise Chamber of Commerce announced support for the repeal bill, saying it would allow government agencies to cut costs and carve "a large chunk of fat" out of public works projects. He said it would increase government efficiency and give a break to taxpayers.

Ron Briscoe, saying he represented 9,000 workers under the Idaho State Building and Construction Trades Council, exhorted the committee to disregard "phony proposals" such as the Davis-Bacon repeal and the right-to-work bill, which has passed the Legislature and is en route to the governor's office.

Briscoe said the "real objective" of the repeal measure was not to fight inflation in government construction projects, but was to allow unscrupulous employers to undercut wages and benefits.

Twin Falls center bill reaches floor

BOISE — A bill to continue the Center for New Directions in Twin Falls as a permanent program moved to the Senate floor Monday with a recommendation for passage.

The plan would remove a provision, in the legislation that created the center, that would drop state funding for the displaced-homemaker program after June 30. The center, located at the College of Southern Idaho, is designed to help recently widowed or divorced women learn job-finding and -holding skills. A budget of $38,500 has been requested to continue the program during fiscal year 1983.

"This bill would still require the center to report to the Legislature each year as an assurance it was meeting the Legislature's intent," said the bill's sponsor, Sen. Norma Dobler, D-Lewiston. "Otherwise, funding could be cut."

Dobler's bill received unanimous support from the Senate Health, Education and Welfare Committee, despite some senators' initial dissent.

Questioning whether a request for a year's extended funding would not be more appropriate, Sen. John Barker, R-Boji, said, "Maybe we do not want this program to continue on down the road forever."

Indians lose bid for tribal recognition

BOISE (UPI) — A 205-member band of Delaware Indians was turned away from the Senate State Affairs Committee Monday with its request for the state to formally recognize the group as a tribal entity.

The committee killed the Delaware's proposal after representatives of Idaho's major Indian tribes expressed their opposition to the measure.

Senate President Pro Tem Reed Budge, R-Soda Springs, made the motion to reject the proposal. He said the matter should be debated among the Indians — and before a special Indian affairs legislative committee which was approved for creation by the State Affairs Committee earlier in the meeting.

Charlotte Simmons, Boise, spokeswoman for the Delaware of Idaho Inc. — a small group of Indians living in Ada, Gem and Payette counties — implored the committee to give the members recognition as a formal tribe.

Bureau can't spend fees, panel says

BOISE (UPI) — The state Vital Statistics Bureau was denied permission Monday to spend $78,800 generated from fee increases authorized by the Legislature last year.

The Joint Finance-Appropriations Committee voted 14-5 against the agency's request to spend the funds for expanded record-keeping chores for the remainder of fiscal year 1982.

Sen. Mike Mitchell, D-Lewiston, said he made the motion partly so confusion about what the money would be used for could be cleared up by the time the committee considers the agency's fiscal year 1983 budget proposal later in the session.

Before passing Mitchell's motion, the committee downed 14-5 a motion by Sen. C.E. "Chief" Blyeu, D-Pocatello, to approve the agency's full supplemental request.

The committee didn't get a chance to vote on the original motion, by Sen. Dean Van Engelen, R-Burley, to allow the spending authority but at the same time reduce the program's general funding by $38,000.

Fullmer facing 2nd operation

BOISE (UPI) — State Rep. Cameron Fullmer, hospitalized in Utah, is scheduled to undergo a second operation Tuesday in the wake of a "mini" stroke he suffered nine days ago, Rep. Lyman Winchester of Kuna said Monday.

Winchester, Fullmer, R-Post Falls, was attending a relative's funeral at Pleasant Grove, Utah, when the stroke occurred.

Fullmer has not named a temporary replacement because there have not been many critical floor votes in the House during his absence, Winchester said.

Committee kills fire fee measure

BOISE (UPI) — A bill requiring the payment of fire-protection fees effectively was killed Monday when the House Revenue and Taxation Committee voted 8-7 against sending the measure to the House floor.

The proposal would require property owners, including the owners of churches and fraternal organizations, to pay fees for fire protection by local fire agencies.

Nampa Fire Chief Bill Wallis, architect of the bill, said after the vote that the issue will resurface in the Legislature despite the proposal's defeat for the second year in a row.

Wallis and other backers of the bill said it was needed to "prevent deterioration in fire protection services. Opponents said the bill was a circumvention of the intent of the 1 percent property tax limitation law.

Coming to grips with drunk drivers

Question: Who kills 26,000 persons every year and injures another 750,000?

Answer: It could be your friend, neighbor or even a member of your family. But more often than not, it's a total stranger.

They're called drunk drivers.

The problem has grown to such proportions that the White House itself is getting into the act. Soon now, President Ronald Reagan is expected to name a "blue-ribbon" commission to recommend a strategy for dealing with drunk drivers, to start reducing the mayhem they cause.

That's all well and good. We just hope they don't take too long doing it, or that all they end up with is an expensive "study" from which nothing of substance will come.

The drunk-driving problem has been termed a national disgrace. No part of the nation is immune from the problem. We've seen it happen time and time again when drunk drivers claim the lives of innocent citizens of the Magic Valley.

No amount of retribution can bring back a life lost to a drunk driver.

The real disgrace is that someone who is found guilty of drunk driving may have his driving privilege revoked for a time but eventually gets back behind the wheel again and repeats the act. Even drunk drivers who kill someone can eventually end up driving again — and killing again.

There isn't any one answer to the problem. But a combination of programs could and should be used to address it.

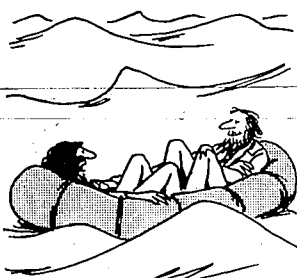

One, more has to be done to make those who drink and drive more aware of the possible consequences of their actions. A public-awareness campaign that goes beyond public-service announcements is needed.

Two, more emphasis must be placed on alcoholism rehabilitation.

Third, stiffer penalties must be enacted at the state and local levels. A combination of heavier fines, jail sentences and license suspension and revocation is needed. What would be the impact, say, if a citizen knew he would lose his driving license for life if convicted of drunk driving for a second time?

Some would argue that losing a driver's license for life is too severe and would create too much of a personal hardship. Try using that line of reasoning on someone who has lost a family member or good friend to a drunk driver.

Questions Fund for Animals

Editor, Times-News:
I would like to give my views concerning Cleveland Amory and his so-called "Fund for Animals."

As you may or may not be aware, Amory has the Rexburg area farmers in court over their recent rabbit drives. One of Amory's assistants has testified that the drive participants were in a "hynoptic state . . . a riot mentality."

I have observed "Fund for Animals" over the last half dozen years and find their methods quite predictable. First, Fund for Animals will provide no solutions to wildlife problems such as the Rexburg rabbit infestation. Secondly, Fund for Animals will not provide any "funds." What Fund for Animals will do is make use of our court system for their own publicity. The Rexburg area hearing before Judge Willard Burton is a classic example.

"Fund for Animals" has been invited to help in various conservation projects in several states, but to my knowledge they have never contributed one dime. Funding for wildlife in the United States has always been in large by sportsmen. It would be interesting to invite "Fund for Animals" to help feed the Soldier Mountain elk.

Lastly, I would like to state that I've never met a farmer with a "riot mentality" or even in a "hynoptic state." I have nothing but respect for the farmer and the many obstacles both natural and political that they face. It is not my livelihood or Cleveland Amory's livelihood that is being threatened by rabbits. Therefore, I can pass no judgment, but trust the area farmer to handle the rabbit infestation the best way possible.

One thing that is for sure, when the publicity of the rabbit drives dies down, "Fund for Animals" will be long gone.

Reagan's policies not new

Editor, Times-News:
This letter comes from one who supported Ronald Reagan for president in 1980 and who voted for him in the election. Since his election, however, I have been shocked by some of the solutions while he is advocating to solve the problems of our country. I began searching through history to see if these solutions had ever been tried before, and if they were, did they work, and I came up with some startling information.

William Manchester, one of the foremost historians in the United States wrote a book called The Glory and the Dream, which is a narrative history of the United States from 1932 to 1972. This work is a compilation of the sources furnished by other historians, so the charge of "personal opinion" will not wash.

Supply-Side Economics: This is the theory that if corporate and personal income taxes are cut, the resultant increase in business and personal expenditures will actually increase the government's revenue and balance the budget.

On page 25 of Mr. Manchester's book, he says that in 1932, the worst year of the depression, Herbert Hoover did just the same thing, and thereby increased the problems which the government had by decreasing its revenue when it needed more desperately.

New Federalism: This has been hailed by various Magic Valley legislators as a master stroke. It is the turning over to state and local governments the running of such programs as welfare, which are now run by the federal government.

On page 40 of The Glory and the Dream is a statement of the amounts which are available from various cities during 1932. They are for a family of four: Philadelphia, $5.50 per week; New York $2.39; Detroit 60 cents. Given our dollar today being only worth about one-eighth the amount of the Depression dollar, that means if the need arose today, one would have to keep a family of four on $4 per week for heat, lights, food, etc., in New York and $4.80 per week in Detroit. New (?) Federalism didn't work then, and most certainly wouldn't work now.

Self-help: (At least that's what I call it.) This is the idea that help for the needy should come from churches and private charities rather than the federal government.

On page 20 of Mr. Manchester's book we find that this was almost a litany of them President Hoover, and on page 38 we find that it didn't work because the Depression had dried up the sources of contributions to these charities while more than doubling the demands on them. By 1932, only 6 percent of the people who were in need were being helped by private charity, leaving over 30 million to be helped by local and state governments, which governments did not even have the funds to operate in the black (Manchester, 1974, pg. 38).

No one will be happier than I if President Reagan's policies for the economy work, but they are not new. They have been tried before and failed. Perhaps a Hoover by any other name is still a Hoover, and, although I speak only of economic policies, not of anything else, there is no Franklin D. Roosevelt on the horizon to bail us out this time.

Taxation strangling all

Editor, Times-News:
Since Nov. 10, 1981, I have had a letter in my files which was written by Don Gardner and carried by the Times-News. I have pondered a lot on this letter and agree fully with its contents.

He goes back as far as 1927 when men were determined to earn their own keep, before the nation was trained to feed at ease while most of them ate off the backs of others: income tax didn't steal a man's wages then, food stamps and welfare were unbared. People helped each other as a neighborly duty and privilege and every one felt better about it.

The year 1927 was the year I went on my first construction job. I had no transportation so I walked a round trip totaling 14 miles a day and followed a mule team 10 hours a day operating a scraper. I made 35 cents an hour which gave me a $3.50-a-day wage and I was glad to get it.

That was when a man would work at whatever job was available rather than become a bum, a dependent on the man who would work. We were taught to be self-reliant and have regard for others from childhood.
When the governor fought a war, financed by the sale of war bonds and income tax was not the strangler it is today. Bureaucrats were not in evil control then to the extent they are today.

My father sold hogs we had planned to butcher in order to buy war bonds, worked in the harvest or when a war worker he could get in order to be able to purchase more bonds and this was not from pressure or demand.

It allowed people to act from their own will without the governor saying, "You must."
Of course, the situation is a bit different now as attitudes have changed due to the welfare and food stamp programs along with dozens of other vote-buying handouts.

A change can be made but people who have been spoiled by eating what another supplied will have to be re-educated, pass on out of the picture or become too lazy to go to polls and re-elect the destroyers.

Back when people were ready to work, to sacrifice and hold on to their freedom we were a stronger nation and could bounce back after a war or any other catastrophe.

Now so much of a person's wages are confiscated through taxation in order to do anything in the way of financing, while a man's wage is referred to as income because the Constitution has not been allowed to speak for itself.

West would be biggest loser in massive land selloff

BOISE — The effort to fleece the American people out of their heritage of public lands continues, aided and abetted by a number of Idaho legislators and other office holders. Legislation has been introduced in Congress calling for an inventory of the public lands, and a massive selloff, with proceeds going to help pay off the national debt. Sponsors are Republican Sen. Charles Percy of Illinois, Senate Resolution 231, and Republican Rep. Larry Winn of Kansas, HR 265.

The idea of using the proceeds to reduce the national debt makes nice bait for this scheme. If successful, it would be one of the greatest robberies in the history of the nation.

Our public lands, more than 600 million acres, belong to all of the people of the United States. Americans have access to these lands, and are free to use them for camping, fishing, hunting, exploring — a wide range of uses. The lands are also used for commercial purposes.

Of course, the biggest losers with a massive selloff would be the people of the West, who are closest to the public lands, and get the greatest use of them. It is some of the commercial interests who use the public lands who are promoting selloff schemes, not the general public.

The "sagebrush rebellion" has been used as the public relations vehicle to sell the public and Congress on the public land ripoff, either with transfer of land to the states, which would put it in position to be disposed of by state Legislatures, or by direct selloff.

Now, increasingly, the "state's rights" mask is being put aside. We are seeing more public advocacy by the "rebels" for massive disposal of the public lands. An effort is underway to enlist the support of President Reagan and Percy and Winn have introduced their land disposal bills.

A White House staff economist told the Public Lands Council meeting in Reno, Nev. last Sept. 28 that the public lands in the west should be sold to the private ownership.

Steve Hanke said he does not favor selling the land by open bidding. Instead, the land should be transferred "to present users by a capitalization of the present value of annual fees paid by such users over a period of time."

When Hanke says "present users," he means only commercial users of the public lands, holders of grazing or mineral leases, or timber buyers. He doesn't mean the millions of Americans who use the public lands for recreation.

Hanke said all of his colleagues on the Council of Economic Advisors agree with his views and he feels one of the best supporters will be President Reagan.

What Hanke said was a scheme for a massive giveaway of one of the greatest public resources owned by the people of the United States. Consider what some of those annual fees are. Most public land leased for oil or gas exploration is leased at $1 per acre per year. Congress rejected the request of former Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus to make more of the land available by competitive bidding, rather than the $1 an acre giveaway.

If the Economic Advisers wanted to increase revenue to the Treasury, one good way would be to support competitive leasing for oil and gas. Don't hold your breath waiting for that to happen.

Some of Idaho's legislators participated in a Dec. 8, 1981 meeting in Santa Fe of the Western Conference of the Council of State Governments. The council adopted a resolution saying "there should be immediate disposal into state and private ownership of those federal lands for which there is not justifiable public purpose."

The Council also said that "the mineral estate" in these lands should be transferred with surface title to the lands. Considering the potential value of oil and gas and other minerals on public lands, why should these rights be given away? That resolution might be considered a clue as to the source of some of the push for the land ripoff.

Some of the land-grab promoters have organized a big meeting in San Francisco on Feb. 5. It is sponsored by the American Land Alliance, a newly-formed land-grab outfit with tax-exempt status. Among the speakers are the manager of the Land Department of Chevron USA and Idaho "rebel" Vernon Ravenscroft.

This Alliance is a new "national educational clearinghouse" on land-use issues. That sounds like a bigger and better-financed version of existing land-grab groups.

If you'd like to retain ownership of your public lands, it would be wise to start writing members of Congress, President Reagan and even state legislators. The land grab is well-organized, well-financed and has friends in high places.

Conformity in state, federal taxes wins House approval

BOISE — A plan to conform state tax codes to recent changes in the federal tax code passed the House on Monday by an easy margin.

The primary opposition to the plan, which will make state income tax schedules identical to federal ones for filing purposes, centered on the estimated $9.1 million the state will lose because of the changes.

ended to compensate for this anticipated loss if Idaho conforms to the Economic Recovery Tax Act of 1981, which was passed by Congress in December. This act would raise the state tax brackets, but it is being held in the House Revenue and Taxation Committee.

A majority of representatives, however, supported straight adoption of the Internal Revenue Service code — by a 38 to 8 margin. Opponents to increasing high-income tax brackets argued that Idahoans can afford any kind of a tax increase.

All Magic Valley House members favored the bill, which has been sent to the Senate for consideration.

Supporters of the measure argued that the tax cuts offered Idahoans by adoption of the federal code would result in increased spending and investment. They said this increased economic activity will increase tax revenue, despite the reduced tax rates of the federal code.

"We don't know what the impact of this bill will be," R-Boise Rep. Christopher Hooper, R-Blaine, "It could put more money into the economy, so that in the end, there will be no loss to the state."

Proposal to boost Idaho sales tax stumbles in Senate committee

BOISE (UPI) — Handling the politically hot potato back to its sponsors, a Senate committee voted Monday not to consider a pair of measures wiping out local property-tax-funding-of-public schools and increasing the state sales tax to cover the difference.

The Senate Local Government and Taxation Committee on a voice vote unanimously moved "to direct the backers of the tax shift to the House, where the state Constitution says revenue measures must receive their first hearing."

The sponsors of the shift, Don Chance of the Idaho Property Owners Association and Cal Williams, past president of the organization, had hoped the Senate committee would get the ball rolling on the bill since Speaker of the House Ralph Olmstead had indicated he opposed the tax change.

"The speaker already said this bill won't last ten seconds on the floor of the House," Chance said after the defeat. "But we're not going to be discouraged by that."

"The particular individuals sponsoring this concept are well enough acquainted with legislative procedure that they should have expected this," Olmstead said when told of the vote. "This is not a popular concept in the House. There's traditionally been strong support for retaining funding of public schools at the local level."

The Twin Falls Republican added each house of the Legislature has its own special powers. The Senate confirms gubernatorial nominees for state offices and the House sits in judgment — first on revenue-raising bills.

Chance said his bills would reduce local property taxes by 45 percent — an estimated $96 million — while raising the state sales tax from 3 to 5 percent. Chance estimated the increased sales tax could raise as much as $108 million for public schools, minus about $8.3 million to raise the grocery sales tax credit to lessen the load on lower income consumers, a move he favors.

Change and Williams both scored the present property tax structure as inequitable, and the use of the sales tax began in 1967 for reasons other than supporting public education "a deception."

The bills' sponsors said they will take their cause before the House Revenue and Taxation Committee before the end of the week.

House rejects change in vital statistics law

BOISE (UPI) — A bill to modify the 33-year-old section of state law governing Idaho's vital statistics program was killed 40-24 by the House Monday after an opponent blasted it as a "register-the-Mormons" plan.

Rep. Lyman Winchester, R-Kuna, contended the measure would require all those who achieve a priesthood status in any church to register with the county recorder.

"This is a register-the-Mormons bill, so I can't support it," Winchester said.

He said almost most male members of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints attain priesthood standing, the bill would amount to a program to register members of the church.

Sponsor Rep. Christopher Hooper, R-Boise, castigated opponents of the bill for not reading and researching it thoroughly before denouncing it on the House floor.

He said the registration requirement mentioned by Winchester applied only to those who perform marriages and that only a grammatical change was being made in that requirement.

Hooper termed the 21-page proposal an "innocuous, necessary bill" that would modernize vital statistics statutes that have not been updated since 1949.

Rep. James Golder, R-Boise, admitted he had only "skimmed" the bill, but he assailed it in the detailed 10-minute debate, saying he was "terrified" by the measure.

Although Hooper said the bill affected only the keeping of records by the Vital Statistics Bureau, Golder said its provisions would "justly genocide" by redefining birth, death and abortion.

He also lambasted a provision that would allow birth certificates to be amended for anyone requesting such a change — including persons who undergo sex-change operations.

The bill also would take power away from the Legislature and give it to bureau officials, Golder said.

"The ramifications of this bill are tremendous," he said. "It amazes me. It has the most sweeping changes of any bill I've seen in all the time I've been here."

Hooper criticized Golder and Winchester for attacking the bill without completely reviewing it. He said the opponents were seeing "ghosts" in the measure.

House committee OK's switch of departmental responsibility

BOISE (UPI) — House Transportation Committee members agreed unanimously Monday to introduce a bill mandating a major transfer of state programs from the Law Enforcement Department to the Transportation Department.

John Rooney, Idaho law enforcement director, said the shift of about $5.8 million worth of programs to the Transportation Department would help cure the Law Enforcement Department's revenue problems and improve efficiency in both agencies.

The committee reviewed the 95-page bill for almost two hours and heard testimony from state officials who would be affected. There was no dissent and the measure was sent to the printer without debate.

Transportation Director Darrell Manning said he viewed the proposed transfer as "positive" for the state and its people, although he said it would cause a major allowing for better communication on very vital issues, such as revenue forecasting and the protection of the highway system," Manning said.

Rooney said if the Law Enforcement Department was forced to remain dependent on dedicated funds, it would have to return to the Legislature again and again with requests for additional state general funds.

Rooney's agency has suffered for the past few years from declining revenue, due primarily to a drop in new car sales and registrations. It has created severe funding problems for the Motor Vehicle Division and other programs, he said.

School warned

SANDPOINT (UPI) — Half of Bonner County's schools were cited for various deficiencies and one was placed on the "warned" list by the state Department of Education following a recent accreditation study.

Idaho Hill School was warned by the state for several problems, including classroom overcrowding and the placement of a classroom next to a boiler in the basement.

What's what

Maybe you didn't know that boxer Sugar Ray Leonard actually was christened Ray Charles in honor of the blind musician so much admired by Leonard's mother-Getha.

Q. Why don't the shopping malls provide large lounges with overstuffed chairs where the bored husbands of lady shoppers can relax in comfort while waiting for their wives?
A. Probably because the street people-doorway sleepers will have no place to go-would fill them up in no time.

The human figure seems smaller at rest than in motion, peculiarly. That's why the designers of wax figures and clothing mannequins make them just a little bit bigger than life-size. To compensate for the immobility.

PILL FOR DRINKERS

Dr. Zalman Amit of Concordia University in Montreal is reported to claim he has developed a pill that prevents a liquor drinker from getting giddy. Fifty regular drinkers took his pill-called H-102-and thereafter cut back on their drinking by an average of 60 percent. What the pill does, it's said, is take the pleasure and relief out of the drink. Some think it will be used to treat alcoholics. How strange a new use for a pill to take the pleasure out of drinking. If the alcoholic craves the relief, all he has to do is not take the pill.

SUBGUM

Q. In Chinese cookery, what does "subgum" mean?
A. Mixed-vegetables.

Inasmuch as President Andrew Johnson had once been a tailor, it's not surprising that while in office he designed and sewed some of his own clothes.

Now our Language man is collecting clever titles for country-western songs starting with "You're the Best Break This Old Heart Ever Had." Any others?

Q. Do chickens outnumber people worldwide?
A. They do. And the total chicken count is growing faster than the people count, too.

"Where have you been?" These were reported to be the most dangerous four words in matrimony. Client asks, What are the most dangerous three words? "Let's have another" may deserve that distinction. The most dangerous two words? "Charge it," possibly. Or "Shut up!" Or "Get up!" Research goes on to find the most dangerous one word. Stand by.

Idaho's congressmen fail 'senior' test

By ANN D. KIRKWOOD
United Press International

BOISE — Idaho's congressional delegation didn't back the state's elderly on one critical vote cast during the recent National Council of Senior Citizens' conference.

In its yearly scoring of the country's lawmakers, the advocacy group for the aging said Idaho's four Republican congressmen voted "wrong" on all of the 10 key House bills and as many in the Senate that were selected by the organization.

"During his campaign, Ronald Reagan often raised the following question: 'Are you better off today than you were a year ago?'" After the first year of the Reagan administration, the answer for the elderly is "no," the group's newsletter said.

The council said the reason for the decline in the well-being of the nation's elderly is that "Congress gave the administration a blank check. And the check bounced."

But Idaho's congressmen weren't alone in receiving low reviews from the council. A total of 24 senators and 71 House members received the zero tally for votes cast during 1981.

"The performance of the first session of the 97th Congress on issues affecting the elderly was exceedingly dismal," said the group's director, William R. Hutton. "The safety net is being cut in pieces, and Congress is providing the scissors."

The group said measures selected for the tally were those of critical importance to the elderly.

The votes often involved those cast on amendments or procedural questions, council officials said, because they believed those issues have the most impact "determine whether or not a bill will be referred to an unfavorable committee or even whether it will be considered at all."

Idaho Reps. Larry Craig and George Hansen took scores of "0," the group said; for votes that cut spending for programs for the elderly, required food stamp recipients to pay for a portion of their stamps, barred Medicare and Medicaid reimbursement for certain drugs and ordered spending reductions in entitlement programs.

In the Senate, Idaho's James McClure and Steve Symms also came in with the lowest scores for a series of votes on the administration's proposed reductions in Social Security benefits and a measure that would have allowed for more food stamp benefits when food-price inflation or unemployment significantly exceeded projected rates.

The group also selected a consumer issue for the tallying — the vote on financing the Alaska gas pipeline, which "is expected to force fuel prices beyond the reach of many low-income elderly persons."

In releasing report, the council charged that those most affected by the budget reductions proposed by the administration and approved by Congress were "those most in need: the poor, the ill, the elderly, the unemployed."

The council is a nationwide organization of nearly 4,000 senior citizen clubs with a combined membership of four million older men and women.

Computers showcased at agricultural exhibit

CALDWELL (UPI) — The fourth annual Western Idaho Ag Expo had a new type of farming implement on display Saturday: Computers.

"If he (the farmer) can do it on paper, he can do it with computers," said Ray Born, of Boise's On-Line Computer Center.

Across from Born's booth at the expo officials say drew 18,000 people Saturday, Kenneth Stavast of Countryside Data also showed off what computers can do for farmers.

"Most farmers ask, 'How is it going to take care of me?'" Stavast said. "We sit them down and show them how a computer works and tell them what it can do for them."

Born and Stavast said computers can help farmers with everything from keeping vaccination records to predicting crop yields and balancing the books.

After spending as much as 14 hours working in the field, a farmer doesn't want to spend another four to six hours working on the books, Born said.

A computer can not only be programmed to handle bookwork quickly, Born added, but with the right programs can make the farm more efficient.

But "agriculture has been overlooked in the development of software," said Stavast, national marketing director for Countryside Data, which concentrates on selling software programs.

A lot of people purchased computers several years ago and have them sitting in their garages because they're programmed with a business package that doesn't cover farm use."

Winfred Jones, a seed dealer with the Caldwell-based Jo Se Company, said he and Stavast developed food-crop computerized farm management program that is first of its kind in the nation. The pair have also been working on other computer programs for farmers.

Jones explained, "Last year at the show, people saw computers and asked, 'Boy if it can do this, why can't it do that?'" So we said, "Why not?" We've been into it hot and heavy ever since."

On Line's computers range in cost from $3,500 to $30,000, said Born, with programs and another $1,500 to $2,000. Stavast said Countryside Data's programs cost $750 or more.

State support for arts is low

BOISE (UPI) — Idaho's support of the arts during the last fiscal year ranked an "embarrassing" 53rd out of 56 states and federal jurisdictions, the executive director of the Idaho Commission on the Arts said Monday.

A recent survey by the National Assembly of State Arts Agencies of the 50 states and six federal jurisdictions like Guam and Washington, D.C., puts the Gem State third from the bottom, says Arts Commission director Joan Lolmough.

"The talent is here, the resources are available," Lolmough said. "But on the negative side we don't have the money to keep the very fine artists we have in the state."

Alaska topped the list, spending

$11.74 per person in fiscal year 1982. In comparison, Idaho spent 11.4 cents per person.

The survey also pointed out 44 states and federal jurisdictions increased public support for the arts in fiscal 1982, three spent the same as the year before and nine states — including Idaho — decreased their support.

The $107,000 given by the Legislature last fiscal year to the Arts Commission matches about $400,000 of federal and school funding, Lolmough said. The money goes to support arts organizations in the state, art programs at public schools, a few individual artists and the administration of the commission.

Despite lowered rating

WPPSS bond issue 'over-subscribed'

NEW YORK (UPI) — The $500-million Washington Public Power Supply System issue was priced Monday at 99 1/4 with a 15 percent coupon and dealers said the issue was "heavily over-subscribed" despite a downgrading by a major rating agency.

Moody's Investors Service Monday lowered its rating on the WPPSS bonds, including the new $500 million in bonds on its 1-, 2- and 3 nuclear projects, from its highest Triple-A rating to Double-A, which a Moody's spokesman said is "a very high investment grade quality."

Moody's said the net billing agreements with the Bonneville Power Administration, a federal agency set up during in the 1930s under the New Deal, continue to provide firm assurance of support for the bonds.

However, it said there were several factors that diminish the credit of the system, including decreasing projected growth in regional power demand, the depressed regional economy, the historical record of construction delays and rising costs, and the fact that the system will be forced to absorb the costs of the 4 and 5 nuclear projects, which the system has terminated.

A spokesman for Salomon Brothers, which is the lead underwriter for the $500 million issue, said it was "heavily oversubscribed on initial orders and the size of the deal could be increased, although we haven't decided that for sure."

The last WPPSS issue to come to market in October was increased from an initial offering of $450 million to $750 million because of a similar enthusiastic reception.

Standard & Poor's Friday gave the WPPSS bonds, including the $500 million issue being sold this week, its highest rating of Triple-A.

The outstanding WPPSS issue, which closed just over par (100 or the face value of a $1,000 bond) Friday, fell to 99 bid just after the Moody's announcement but came back to close at 99 1/4.

Watt names two Utahans, Sagebrush backer to council

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Interior Secretary James Watt has named two Utahans to an expanded National Public Lands Advisory Council — including a man who was one of the founders of the Sagebrush Rebellion.

Watt named Calvin Black of Blanding and John E. Butcher of Logan to serve on the council that will advise the Bureau of Land Management on policies relating to 328 million acres of public land. The council was expanded from 17 to 21 members.

Black, a Republican San Juan County Commissioner, was one of the early leaders of the Sagebrush Rebellion, a move to give state control of millions of acres of federally administered land in the west.

Butcher will serve three years on the council.

The council will advise national BLM director Robert F. Burford. It will meet three times a year to discuss multiple-use land management and, especially, those issues affecting energy and mineral development and overall rangeland management, said Burford.

Other members include cattlemen, law professors, oil and gas operators, zoo officials, farmers and mining experts.

But investigators still checking

No crime assumed in fetus find

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The backyard storage of more than 500 embryos and fetuses found in a reposed medical container might violate health codes, but a preliminary investigation indicates no crime was committed, officials said Monday.

"There is no evidence of foul play," said assistant coroner Richard Wilson, "but there could be violations of the health code covering the disposal of medical waste."

The embryos and fetuses — some weighing up to 4 pounds — were found last week by workers unloading the huge metal shipping container reposed from the backyard of the owner of a defunct pathological laboratory.

Officials said the embryos and fetuses were preserved in formaldehyde in white plastic containers, packed in cardboard boxes and stored in the large container. Also in the container were medical records and specimen slides.

"We have 31 of the largest fetuses here at the coroner's office," Wilson said, "but we're not going to get to look at them until tomorrow. These could all be from natural abortions."

The remaining embryos and fetuses, still inside the container at a storage yard, were under 24-hour guard until health officials and the coroner's office determined their origin.

Al Albergate, a spokesman for the district attorney's office, said there have been no requests for criminal charges in the bizarre case.

"We are supplying medical advice to the Health Department but they haven't asked for any criminal charges," he said.

Officials said the police department was not involved in the investigation.

Health Department spokesman Tony Tripi said officials would determine whether "the embryos and fetuses were improperly disposed of. Regulations require that they be disposed of within a few days of an abortion in a manner prescribed by law."

Medical records found in the container indicated that some of the embryos and fetuses had been aborted as long as 1979. Each jar was tagged with the name of the mother and other information.

California's abortion law does not place any limit on the stage of pregnancy at which an abortion may be performed, but allows them to be done only by licensed physicians.

The embryos and fetuses were discovered Thursday night after the owner of the container reposed it from Mel Weisberg, former owner of the Medical Analytic Lab in Santa Monica.

Tripi said officials had not yet contacted Weisberg.

Heart disease and stroke will cause half of all deaths this year.

Give the gift of love.

Panhandlers favor secession, according to newspaper poll

SCOTTSDALE, Neb. (UPI) — A survey by the Scottsbluff Star-Herald showed 85.2 percent of the respondents favored a proposal to annex Nebraska's 11 Panhandle counties to Wyoming.

Wyoming Rep. Doug Chamberlain has resurrected the secession issue, saying he wants the Wyoming Legislature to consider annexing the Panhandle.

The Star-Herald said 1,709 of 2,004 people who returned questionnaires answered "yes" to the question: Are you in favor of the 11 counties of the Panhandle leaving Nebraska and becoming part of Wyoming?

Only 266 respondents said they wanted to remain part of Nebraska, and 29 indicated they were undecided.

The newspaper said its survey, conducted over a five-day period, netted the largest response ever for Star-Herald poll. The 2,004 responses represented 2 percent of the Panhandle's reported 86,000 population.

Star-Herald Editor Daryl M. Hall wrote that respondents who favored annexation repeatedly mentioned lower taxes and closer distances to the state capital at Cheyenne and the University of Wyoming at Laramie.

Also listed were the state fair at Douglas and similarities of climate, terrain, time zone, sparseness of population, economics (especially agriculture), development potential between the Panhandle and Wyoming, and cultural and social ties with Wyoming.

Many respondents also said being part of Wyoming would give the Panhandle greater governmental representation, improved roads and a better school system, along with enhanced political clout and recognition of the region's contributions.

Respondents complained about the distance to the capital, the state fair and the University of Nebraska in Lincoln — 400 to 500 miles away; the label "outstate" by "uncaring" eastern Nebraskans; and the lack of recognition and political consideration by the heavier-populated Omaha-Lincoln area and the eastern half of the state.

The Star-Herald said many respondents mentioned paying taxes to support Nebraska government and not getting sufficient services in return.

Respondents who favored remaining in Nebraska focused on heritage and a desire to remain part of the state of their birth.

A clear majority of questionnaire respondents also said they would be interested in voting on the proposed annexation.

Pentagon defends budget

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan's huge 1983 military budget — nearly $215 billion — is the minimum needed to meet the Soviet threat and the nation can afford it despite the sagging economy, the Pentagon's No. 2 man told Congress Monday.

"The danger from a prolonged arms buildup by the Soviet Union outweighs any danger of record deficits to the U.S. economy," Deputy Secretary of Defense Frank Carlucci told the Senate Armed Services Committee.

"The Soviet Union shows no signs of slackening off. They are spending some 50 to 60 percent more than we are," Carlucci said.

"Unless we are able to protect our security," he added, "we are not a viable nation."

Carlucci said the military expansion will aid the economic recovery.

"I, for one, cannot believe that our country cannot afford a national defense that is adequate to its needs," Carlucci said. "What we have put together is a defense budget that we believe is a minimum budget."

The fiscal 1983 budget Reagan sent to Congress Monday calls for an 18.1 percent increase in defense spending to $215.9 billion — the largest peacetime dollar amount in history. The increase, when discounted for inflation, amounts to 10.5 percent.

According to budget documents, the military share of spending would rise from 25.2 percent this year to 28.5 percent in 1983. The budget foresees a deficit of $91.5 billion, and critics have cited the generous portion allotted the Pentagon as one cause of the red ink.

"I believe that a strong economy is necessary to support an adequate defense budget, but I think an adequate defense budget is absolutely essential if our economy is going to survive," Carlucci said.

"I do not believe the president's program is any threat to the economy. We view it as one that will help restore economic growth to this country," he said.

Sen. Carl Levin, D-Mich., strongly disagreed, saying the "huge increase in the defense budget is a declaration of economic war on America."

Sen. Dan Quayle, R-Ind., urged the Pentagon to be prepared to cooperate with Congress, suggesting reductions are available.

FRANK CARLUCCI
...we need the money

"Outside the Armed Services Committee there is just not the support" for the defense budget as proposed, he said.

Levin warned the huge request "gives defense a bad name and will end up eroding public support for it."

Levin said he could not support the plan "and I believe you will be surprised at how many of my colleagues won't either."

Reagan was questioned about money for the military during a meeting with congressional chiefs Monday morning, House Democratic leader Jim Wright of Texas said.

"The president did not respond in a yielding way or a conciliatory way," Wright told reporters. "The basic response was we need to keep the heat on Russia."

Proposed public land sales already stirring opposition

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The budget President Reagan sent Congress Monday calls for accelerated sales of federal lands — including forests, pastures and properties that until now had been donated — to generate $4 billion by 1984.

The proposal, certain to trigger controversy among environmentalists and non-profit groups who have been getting donated properties, makes formal recent Reagan proposals that more surplus government lands be sold.

It would free portions of 500 million acres of timberland and grazing land administered by the government.

Exempted from screening for possible sale were national parks, monuments and "historic sites."

Officials estimated sale of public lands would net $2 billion in fiscal 1984.

Another $2 billion would accrue from Reagan's new emphasis on selling excess properties now held by federal agencies — a plan aides say he suggested shortly after taking office.

"We're looking at ways we can improve our management of federal lands," said one member of the Office of Management and Budget staff involved in drafting the proposal.

The plan hinges on three elements:

- Ending the decades-old policy of donating surplus federal property to states, cities, colleges and non-profit groups.
- Selling property, officials said, the government would reap $180 million in 1983.
- Requiring federal agencies to pay full cost for property declared excess by other federal agencies, rather than obtaining it for half price or free.

Making it high priority for all federal agencies to declare unused properties as excess for sale in most cases at public auction.

move budget officials estimate would generate $1 billion in 1983 and $2 billion in 1984.

Pet projects spared as Pork barrel survives

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Despite proposed deep cuts in social and other programs, the administration's proposed budget for fiscal 1983 Monday showed President Reagan has little stomach for a crackdown on the federal "pork barrel."

Unlike Jimmy Carter, who ran into deep trouble with a "hit list" of water projects, Reagan appears content to let members of Congress keep their pet projects — especially in an election year.

"Still, that certainly does not mean that the cost squeeze is ended," Watt said in announcing the department's overall budget request of $6 billion — nearly $300 million more than it got for 1981.

The biggest single construction request by the Army Engineers was for $186 million to continue work on the 242-mile Tennessee-Tombigbee Waterway in Alabama and Mississippi.

Reagan asked Congress for more than $1.4 billion to let the dam-building Army Corps of Engineers continue work on more than 170 flood control, hydropower and navigation projects during the year beginning Oct. 1.

The construction fund request was nearly $200 million under what Congress appropriated in fiscal 1982.

The controversial project survived a determined effort to kill it last year when the Senate voted 48-46 against taking away $189 million for continued construction.

Close behind Tenn-Tom was the Interior Department's multibillion-dollar Arizona Project, for which Reagan is seeking $181 million.

The huge project will carry Colorado River water to the Phoenix and Tucson areas and provide benefits for California, Nevada, New Mexico and Utah as well.

But the overall impact on the construction of water resource projects would be small, since much of the cutback in Corps construction would be made up by an increase in construction by the Bureau of Reclamation.

For the interior Department agency, which builds projects in the 17 western states, the construction budget was up $118 million to $667 million.

The budget figures are, of course, only a fraction of the total cost of projects that often take years to build.

It has been estimated projects under construction by the Corps will ultimately cost at least $25 billion, while those being built by the Bureau of Reclamation will cost another $14 billion.

Only five other states would fare better under the Army Engineers budget requests than Oregon — home state of Sen. Mark Hatfield, GOP chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee.

Also not forgotten was Senate Democratic leader Robert Byrd of West Virginia, who would get $16.2 million to continue construction of a dam at Stonewall Jackson Lake — for which Byrd got $17 million added to last year's budget.

While Reagan's proposed budget does not call for major "new starts," it leaves the door slightly ajar by providing a "contingency" reserve that may be used to start new projects if states agree to share the costs.

Interior Secretary James Watt said "relatively modest increases" in his department's budget were made possible by "deep budget cutting" in fiscal 1981 and 1982.

The Bureau of Reclamation's construction budget included $79.6 to continue work on the Bonneville unit of the Central Utah Project — which has powerful supporters in Utah's two GOP senators, Orrin Hatch and Jake Garn.

The Corps requests for planning, construction, operation and maintenance of Oregon water projects totaled $110.7 million, compared with $215.6 million for Alabama, $125.7 million for Georgia, $202.7 million for Illinois, $141.5 million for Louisiana and $182.3 million for Texas.

Judge issues 3 citations for contempt

Tuesday, February 9, 1982 Times-News, Twin Falls, Idaho A-11

ATLANTA (UPI) — A defense pathologist who insisted there was no medical evidence to show Wayne Williams' two alleged victims were murdered said Monday he had performed just one autopsy in a criminal case in the past 14 years.

Dr. Dan Stowens, a pediatric pathologist from Utica, N.Y., made the admission under a grueling cross-examination by prosecutor Jack Mallard.

Immediately following his testimony, Stowens was cited for contempt of court for violating a judge's gag order imposed on lawyers and witnesses in the case.

Williams' parents, Homer and Faye Williams, also were issued contempt of court citations for speaking about the case during a radio talk show over the weekend.

Stowens admitted while on the witness stand that he had granted an interview to an Atlanta newspaper last December, more than three months after Superior Court Judge Clarence Cooper issued the gag order.

Mallard told Stowens officials in Utica had informed him the pathologist had personally handled just one murder case since 1968.

"It is true that you haven't performed a single criminal autopsy except one case in Utica since 1968?" Mallard asked.

"It's probably very true that only one of them turned out to be an indictable criminal case," Stowens said.

Stowens tried to convince the jury there was no need for him to personally perform the "manual" work of autopsies.

"I'm 63-years-old and I've been a pathologist for 40 years," he said. "I've paid my dues."

Williams, 23, is accused of killing Nathaniel Cater and Jimmy Ray Payne, two of the 28 young black victims testified she was still looking for his son and refused to believe he was dead.

Lola Evans testified that a body she viewed in late July of 1979 did not look like her son Alfred. Prosecutor says Alfred Evans was the second young black victim to die in the string of slayings and linked him to Williams through fibers and dog hairs.

Stowens said in his study of the photographs and autopsy reports of the bodies of Cater and Payne, no cause of death nor any "criminal agency" could be determined in either case.

The final witness of the day was J.B. Wilhoit, a former task force investigator called to cast further doubt about the cause of Payne's death.

Wilhoit testified that a medical examiner told him there was nothing in the autopsy of Payne that would be inconsistent to a drowning.

Payne's body was found clad in swimming shorts in the Chattahoochee River April 22.

The mother of a youth identified as one of the 28 young black victims testified she was still looking for his son and refused to believe he was dead.

Lola Evans testified that a body she viewed in late July of 1979 did not look like her son Alfred. Prosecutor says Alfred Evans was the second young black victim to die in the string of slayings and linked him to Williams through fibers and dog hairs.

Dozier continues to answer questions

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Brig. Gen. James Dozier resumed debriefing sessions Monday with U.S. intelligence and other authorities on his 42-day ordeal as captive of Italian Red Brigade terrorists.

The general and his wife, Judith, were released from the Army's Walter Reed hospital over the weekend.

An Army spokesman said he could not disclose where the Doziers would go on vacation or what would be his next assignment. Dozier said he was willing to return to his old NATO post in Europe in northern Italy.

The couple will go on leave following Dozier's debriefing.

Heiress' maid says she lied

NEWPORT, R.I. (UPI) — The prosecution's star witness admitted Monday she lied to the grand jury that indicted Claus von Bulow for trying to kill his wife when she did not disclose the heiress wanted a divorce to marry another man.

Maria Schralhammer, who for 23 years was the personal maid to Martha "Sunny" von Bulow, admitted under cross-examination that she lied when she testified to the grand jury she did not know why the Pittsburgh utilities heiress wanted a divorce.

"I promised Mrs. von Bulow I wouldn't tell anyone, and I didn't want to betray her," said the 59-year-old German citizen.

The questioning by defense lawyer Herold Price Fehlinger was designed to portray the maid as prejudiced against von Bulow, 55, and overly loyal to his wife, 50, who is in the 13th month of the coma doctors say is irreversible.

JOHN HAY WHITNEY

Ex-envoy to Britain dies at 77

MANHASSET, N.Y. (UPI) — John Hay Whitney, former ambassador to Britain and the last publisher of the defunct New York Herald Tribune, died Monday after a long illness. He was 77.

A member of a prominent New England family, Whitney was an industrialist, philanthropist, motion picture pioneer, Republican Party activist and sportsman.

On his mother's side, he was grandson of John Hay, personal secretary to President Abraham Lincoln, American ambassador to Britain and secretary of state under Presidents William McKinley and Theodore Roosevelt. On his father's side, he was grandson of William C. Whitney, secretary of the Navy under President Grover Cleveland.

Whitney, a native of Ellsworth, Maine, died at North Shore Hospital. Funeral services will be held Friday at 11 a.m. at Christ's Episcopal Church in Manhasset.

President Dwight D. Eisenhower appointed Whitney ambassador to Great Britain in 1956, a reward for years of service to the Republican Party and to Eisenhower's election in 1952.

He proved a competent and hard-working ambassador, and did much to cement good will between the English-speaking peoples during his four-year tenure in the post.

During his ambassadorship, Whitney became publisher of the New York Herald Tribune and its subsidiary publications. He acted as editor-in-chief of the paper until 1966.

Miss Schralhammer is the state's key witness in its attempt to charge the Danish aristocrat on charges of twice trying to kill his wife with insulin injections over the 1979 and 1980 Christmas holidays.

The state claims von Bulow's motives were love of another woman and that the $1 million he would inherit upon his wife's death. The prosecution claims she caused her coma by overdilution in sweets, pills and alcohol.

Miss Schralhammer has been the only witness to link von Bulow with a bottle labeled "insulin" and a blood bag found in his closet and alleged to have contained an insulin-tipped needle and syringe.

The maid confided her suspicions to Mrs. von Bulow's grown son and daughter from a previous marriage and they collected evidence that aided the state in indicting von Bulow, a former top aid to billionaire J. Paul Getty.

"The fact of the matter is that when you were asked, under oath, before the grand jury if you knew the reason (she wanted a divorce), you said 'no. Isn't that right?' Fehlinger asked.

"I just wanted to protect my lady if she came out of the coma — and I hoped she would," Miss Schralhammer answered.

The maid also refused to answer a defense question about a face lift Mrs. von Bulow had in 1968.

"I'm not going to answer that question because I swore to Mrs. von Bulow not to tell anybody, not even the children," the prim, maid said in her German accent.

Dear Abby

Smelly solution was right at hand

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
© Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: In a recent column you had a letter from someone who smelled bad and had gone in vain from doctor to doctor in order to determine the cause of the mysterious odor.

The following is a true anecdote that I used on my CBS radio program, "Speaking of Health":

Dr. Marlon Sulzberger, a San Francisco dermatologist who has been world-famous for over 50 years, tells a story that dates back to his early medical practice in New York City.

A once-prosperous tailor came to Dr. Sulzberger desperately seeking help. It seems the man's wife — and most of his loyal customers — had left him because he suddenly started to smell so bad! He had gone to doctor after doctor who agreed he smelled terrible, but no one could tell him why.

Dr. Sulzberger used his head, followed his nose and started to sniff out the reason — literally. First he smelled the poor man's head, and it smelled OK. Then he smelled his face, his chest, his legs — all smelled all right. When he got to the patient's hand, he discovered the culprit!

It seems the man was wearing an intricately carved ring whose nooks and crannies contained a foul-smelling gunk, most probably a malodorous mixture of bacteria and fungi. The doctor removed the ring, instantly freeing the patient from his offensive affliction. As in any happy ending, the tailor's wife returned and so did his flourishing business. Oh, yes, the grateful patient insisted that Dr. Sulzberger keep the ring.

— DR. STEVEN ANDREW DAVIS, SAN FRANCISCO, CALIF.

DEAR DR. DAVIS: Belated congratulations to Dr. Sulzberger, a distinguished best smeller.

DEAR ABBY: Now that you've scared almost every mother in the world against feeding her children peanut butter, I think a little more should be said on the subject.

Many years ago I read the same warning in Prevention magazine. It stated that peanut butter, when eaten alone, could collect in the throat, obstruct the air passages and cause choking. But when it's combined with jelly and eaten with crackers or bread, it's easy to swallow and causes no problems.

I hope you think this explanation is important enough to print.

— PEANUT BUTTER MUTTER
DEAR MUTTER: It is. I'll spread it around.

TWIN FALLS — The annual door-to-door appeal for the Primary Children's Medical Center started Monday and will be conducted throughout the area through Feb. 20.

Volunteers in many Western states will make collections in thousands of towns as well as Magic Valley for the Salt Lake City hospital. Donors are asked to give a penny, nickel or dollar for the combined heights of all family members.

The Pennies appeal provides a substantial portion of the funding necessary for the hospital to continue providing charity service to all children needing medical help in the Intermountain West.

The Primary Children's Medical Center is the only full-service pediatric tertiary care medical center between Denver and the West Coast and serves a geographical area equal to one-seventh of the continental United States.

Persons not contacted may send checks directly to Primary Children's Medical Center, 320 12th Ave., Salt Lake City, Utah, 84103.

Not all heel spurs painful - Here's real winter fashion

By LAWRENCE LAMB, M.D.
News Editor, Enterprise Association

DEAR DR. LAMB — Recently I have been having soreness of my right heel. Right on the bottom. When I walk it pains me. Some friends of mine claim they have the same condition, that there is a splinter pressing against my skin when I walk and there is no cure for this.

My shoe fits perfectly and I can't understand why my right foot has this problem and not the left. Do you know of any way to cure this condition? Can the bone splinter be removed? Is there a material I can buy to soften the impact on my heel?

DEAR READER — Your friends are suggesting you have a heel spur. Even if you do they are common. It may have nothing to do with your pain.

There are many people with a bony spur on the bottom of their heel who have no pain and never have had any pain. There are other people with painful heels who have never had a spur.

The spur itself usually forms because there is something wrong

Think for a minute of the arch of your foot. There are muscles and tendons stretched from the ball of your foot across the arch to attach to your heel. When these structures are pulled upon they pull on the attachment to the heel bone. In time this mechanical aggravation tears off some bone and in the rebuilding process a bony spur is formed.

Sometimes there is inflammation, usually on a mechanical basis, where muscles and tendons insert. In other instances the normal heel fat pad degenerates and you subject your heel bone to repeated injury because the normal fat cushion is lost.

The point is that you correct the underlying problem rather than worry about the bony spur. This is done by putting a firm pad on the inner surface of the foot to lift the foot to the outside. This gets the weight bearing off the muscles stretched across the arch.

Or taping the heel to tilt it may help. In some cases a strip of tape around the heel just below the bone and another underneath and just in front of the heel helps to make the fat pad bulge and helps to cushion your heel.

I am sending you The Health Letter number 11-10, Common Foot Problems: What to Do About Them, which discusses heel spurs in more detail. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 851, Radin City Station, New York, NY 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB — My wife insists on eating late and she eats her largest meal of the day around 9 p.m. By the time she finishes it is nearly 10 p.m. and as soon as she can get things cleaned up she is ready for bed.

I tell her this is not good. We should eat early and not eat much before going to bed. She claims it will not affect your digestion but I know better. Would you please comment?

DEAR READER — Your food will be digested just as well whether you are awake or asleep. You will get the same nutrient value from it.

But as people get older they often find that they sleep better and more comfortably if they do as you recommend. Why? A large number of people have a hiatal hernia, a hernia of part of the stomach through an enlarged hole in the diaphragm. The associated leakage of a full stomach's contents into the lower esophagus often causes night time indigestion.

As a native Midwesterner, I am always amused by the ads for winter styles that appear in slick magazines.

I saw one the other day that pictured a young woman with 35 pounds of hair in flight. Her coat flapped open to reveal a matching skirt that reached mid-calf and accentuated her crushed velvet boots. Her cute leather driving gloves dangled from her pockets. She was smiling. The headline over the picture read, "MEET WINTER HEAD-ON! THINK CRUISE!"

There was no doubt in my mind the entire ad agency shot this after a five-martini lunch.

Let's talk winter. To begin with, no one in his right mind smiles in the winter. If God had wanted us to smile when the chill factor reaches 45 below, He would have given us lips long enough to cover our gums.

As for "THINK CRUISE," the only reason the people on the Love Boat are able to sustain themselves during the Alaska trip is because of their overactive sex lives.

The winter styles in the Midwest, to my knowledge, have never been photographed. Hairs that freeze in your nose and drip are not a pretty sight. Imagine, if you will, that the temperature is nine degrees below zero. The car has gone into deep sleep and will not awaken until spring. The milk freezes between the time the milkman takes it from the truck and puts it in your hands.

The windows are covered with frost. The dog, who has kidneys the size of lentils, refuses to go out and pretends he is dead. And for the first time in 15 years everyone stays in the kitchen at the end of the meal.

Let's talk winter fashions. For Bedtime: The layered look. Pajama bottoms from the Goodwill bag, topped by a long-sleeved flannel gown and cardigan sweater without buttons. Purple and gold knee socks with hot-water-bottle soles.

Costume for Taking-Garbage to Garbage Cans: White boots with Muppets pictured on side, army fatigue jacket from hall closet, afghan worn casually over head and face and two mismatched socks from washer worn on hands.

For Those Special At-Home Evenings by the Fire: Thermal underwear, topped by jeans, turtleneck sweater and windbreaker, set off by fleece-lined balls of fur on the feet and a dog on the lap. All of this is topped off by a ski mask and a body sack zipped to the chin.

Now we're talking winter!

Survey supports work value

By JEANNE LEMSE
UPI Family Editor

NEW YORK — Middle income families may complain about the need for two incomes in today's tight economy — but they still believe hard work and sacrifice lead to success.

Sixty-two percent of the more than 32,250 people questioned in a new survey said they sometimes subscribe to that belief and 84 percent said they do most times.

The figures are from a readership survey announced Monday by Better Homes and Gardens magazine on the impact of work on middle-income American families.

The study also indicates 54 percent of working wives like their outside jobs very much. Only 7 percent said they did not like their jobs.

Even so, 57 percent of the working men and women said they sometimes envy the life of a homemaker.

"What I really need is a wife," some women said.

Only about 25 percent of the women said they were full-time homemakers. Eighty-seven percent are married and 79 percent have children. Fifty-two percent of the working wives have full-time jobs and 16 percent work part-time.

Their income, education level and incidence of home ownership are considerably higher than the national medians — 84 percent, for example, own their own homes.

The median income for those surveyed is $31,250. Fourteen percent have a combined income of $50,000 or more.

Eighty-eight percent of the questionnaires were completed by the woman of the house, 20 percent by the man and about 10 percent by the man and woman together.

One working mother complained one paycheck no longer is enough, but her income has put the family in a higher tax bracket — "so it almost isn't worth it."

More than 4,000 people attached personal letters to the questionnaires, said managing editor Kate Keating.

"Work is a refuge when home problems exasperate, and home is a neat place to go when none of my bosses understand what a unique and wonderful person I am," one working wife wrote. "It is good to have both!"

"I find having two full-time jobs — one at the office, one as a housewife — is unrewarding, frustrating, guilt-producing and leaves me with a feeling of being 'trapped,'" wrote another.

Interim alcoholic bed plan gets green light

By STEPHANIE SCHOROW
Times-News writer

GOODING — A controversial plan to temporarily house recovering alcoholics at Gooding County Memorial Hospital was approved Monday.

Following discussion of a study on the hospital's bed capacity, the Gooding County Commission voted unanimously to allow the hospital board to negotiate the terms of an interim plan and submit it to commissioners for approval.

Commission Chairman Rick Brallsford said the study, which was completed by John Collins of the Idaho Health Systems Agency, indicated the hospital has the capacity to relinquish 10 to 12 beds to the Walker Center for Alcoholism and Drug Abuse and still serve the community.

By adding five beds to the 25 already licensed by the hospital and by installing two to four more beds in a solarium, the commissioners said the hospital would risk turning away patients only four to seven days out of the year.

Retired Dr. M.V. Klingler, a hospital board member, still was not convinced. After hearing Collins' presentation, Klingler said that increasing the number of double-occupancy rooms, which the plan may entail, will restrict the hospital's ability to separate patients for reasons of health and convenience.

"We can't put the people where it's best for them to be," he said.

Dr. A.W. Loescher, contacted Monday afternoon, said the study seemed to use a simple "head count" and did not account for patients who would not be housed together. Saying he was disappointed by the decision, he maintained that the interim plan would "definitely reduce the quality of care" and lead to patients seeking care elsewhere.

However, Loescher reiterated what he said at a public hearing in December: that the doctors would try to work with the interim plan "the best we could."

The controversy emerged when Walker Center proposed that a portion of one hospital wing be used to house Walker patients while a new alcoholism facility is built.

Various county and hospital officials, facing a low number of patients and financial problems at the county-owned facility, favored the plan. But three of the area's four doctors voiced strenuous opposition.

Monday's decision left several questions unanswered, including: Where will beds for detoxification be located? Where will the hospital's offices, now in the solarium, be moved to? And when will Walker Center patients move in — and move out?

Brallsford said the hospital board, hospital administrator Ed Myers and Walker Center officials will work out details of the plan.

Hearing to consider cutback in weed control spray work

By MARTY TRILLHAASE
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The county may be getting out of the weed-spraying business, depending upon the reception given the proposal at a public hearing Wednesday.

Twin Falls County officials are considering cutbacks in their weed bureau, and they plan to present the proposal at a 7:30 p.m. hearing in the county judicial building.

The weed bureau sells and applies herbicides for a fee. It also enforces the state law requiring the eradication of noxious weeds.

Wednesday's hearing also will serve to gather public input on which weeds in the county are noxious, according to Ann Cover, the chairman of the County Commission.

Under the proposed cutback, the weed bureau would retain its authority to enforce the law and would, as a last resort, spray weeds as an enforcement measure. But the practice of spraying weeds on request would be eliminated, said Cover, who commented that farmers can use commercial sprayers.

Nearly $140,000 is budgeted for the weed bureau in the 1981-1982 budget. By eliminating the spraying-on-demand function, an estimated $25,000 in seasonal labor costs could be eliminated, according to Wallace Savage, the weed bureau supervisor.

In addition, Savage estimates the cutback could save $15,000 in the cost of maintaining the spraying equipment.

The proposal stems from fiscal constraints imposed on the county by the One Percent Initiative, as well as the decision by other counties, including Gooding County, to scale back weed-control operations.

"It would get us out of competition with private enterprise," Commissioner Marvin Hempleman said. "It would be a tax savings, so we could use those monies elsewhere."

None of the weed bureau's three full-time employees would forfeit their jobs as a result of the proposal, officials say. And the four field men who work for a nine-month period each year would be retained at least through the 1982 season.

Commission says it has no authority

Jerome County won't alter herd area

By LAURY MASHER
Times-News writer

JEROME — The designation of herd districts in Jerome County won't change.

County commissioners decided after a public hearing Monday morning that they don't have the authority to rezone the districts.

"We haven't got the expertise to know how to handle this," Commissioner Mel Grindstraft told a group of about 30 farmers and ranchers who attended the hearing.

County Prosecutor Bill Dallinger said the law requires that 50 percent of the landowners in a district present the commission with a petition requesting a change before commissioners can proceed with legislation.

Since the specified percentage of landowners didn't present a petition, the commissioners had no legal alternative but to deny the herd-district designation change.

"Our hands are tied," Commissioner Russell Howell said.

The Jerome Highway District had asked the commissioners to change the designation of a northeast and south section of the county from a herd district to open range, so that it could end its liability for drivers that hit stray cows crossing the roads.

The present herd district, which will be maintained, begins at the boundary line of Jerome and Gooding counties adjacent to the Snake River and runs 15 miles north, 14 miles east and straight south to the Snake River. It then follows the river back to the boundary line that splits the two counties.

Stray cows on roadways haven't been a problem for the highway district, but a recent legal dispute between the county and a farmer brought the liability question to the district's attention.

"Up until now, we've been running on luck," highway Commissioner Hep Wilson said. "The highway district has got to be protected. I hate to be a stinker and cause all of this, but your tax dollars are involved."

Through recent legal deliberations on the matter, some landowners just discovered that the northeast section of the herd district, which the highway district proposed to change, was not designated as open range.

Ranchers are required to keep their animals behind fences in a herd district, but they aren't in an open range.

"People in the northeast section have been operating on open-range policies, which means that farmers must fence ranchers' animals off their property, according to rancher Tom Prescott.

"It's something that should have

Judgment request denied in shared canal suit

By STEVE LIPSON
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — After a thrust and parry, the fight between the Twin Falls Canal Co. and the company hoping to share its canals is no closer to resolution.

The thrust was a motion by Canyon View Irrigation Co. that sought a partial summary judgment against the canal company. The motion, which asked the court to declare Canyon View a co-owner of a portion of the canal company system, was argued two months ago in Fifth District Court in Twin Falls.

The party came Monday, when Judge Theron Ward denied the motion.

Since 1973, Canyon View has sought to enlarge the canal company's High Line Canal to carry water to Canyon View lands west of Salmon Falls Creek. Canal company shareholders have fought the proposal since 1973.

But in a 1980 decision, the Idaho Supreme Court said the canal company cannot block Canyon View's efforts. As long as Canyon View is willing to pay for all necessary improvements in the canal system, plus any increases in operating costs caused by its project, it can "condemn a right of way" in the canal system, the Supreme Court ruled.

The motion for partial summary judgment asked the district court to grant part of what the Supreme Court decision said Canyon View was entitled to. It asked the court to award a token $1 payment to the canal company as compensation for losing exclusive control over its canal system. The motion also asked the court to declare Canyon View a co-owner of a portion of the canal system.

The canal company asked the court to reject the motion and follow the normal procedures for a condemnation case.

In his decision, Ward called the motion for partial summary judgment "inappropriate."

He further said, "I cannot accept the payment of $1 as the key which unlocks the door of defendant's (Twin Falls Canal Co.) rights to exclusive use of its system."

TWIN FALLS — A windfall and a shortfall have contributed to an up-and-down sort of year for the United Way of Twin Falls.

With that in mind, several yo-yos were presented, along with the customary plaques and certificates, at the United Way's annual awards banquet and meeting Monday at the Turf Club.

The "ups," United Way officers told their board of directors, included an unprecedented bequest to the organization. On the opposite end of the scale, the United Way is $15,000 short of this year's $160,000 fundraising goal.

The annual countywide camaign to raise money for various Magic Valley service agencies ends Feb. 28.

Lee Wagner, a United Way officer, told directors that the late Clyde Hinton of Twin Falls, who died in 1980, has given the organization $42,212, which presently has a cash value of $45,180 as the result of interest payments. Since Hinton did not earmark the money, a United Way committee will study possible uses, Wagner said, but for now, interest on the inheritance, but not the principal, will be allocated to United Way beneficiaries.

Why Hinton made the bequest is uncertain.

"The best explanation we have is that, sometime in years past, he

Councilman says enforcement too strict

City decides citizens must be informed of building code appeal right

By SUSAN GALLAGHER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Policemen aren't the only public servants who have to inform people of their rights.

Twin Falls City Council has decided that people who erect new buildings or alter existing ones will be advised of their right to appeal the enforcement of the Uniform Building Code.

Council reached that decision Monday at the urging of one of its members, Emery Petersen, who said he believes the city's enforcement of the building code is too strict. Many persons who are dissatisfied with the costly standards mandated by the code are unaware the city has an appeals board that will weigh cases on an individual basis, Petersen said.

The code is a national set of standards that cities have the option of enforcing.

"The decision to have city building officials inform builders of their rights was the only action that resulted from a lengthy discussion about consultants' findings concerning a $250,000 construction project planned for City Hall.

Speaking at a council work session Monday afternoon, Petersen said the findings reflect his belief that the city's building-code enforcement is too strict.

Council has budgeted $250,000 to improve City Hall, which is about 30 years old. Consultants Robert Urrau and Scott McClure recently summarized the steps necessary to bring the building into compliance with the building code, to increase energy efficiency and to correct problems with the heating and cooling systems.

Among the unnecessary improvements are those calling for a sprinkler system in the building and an additional exit in council chambers, said Petersen, who labeled the sprinkler system "a colossal waste of money."

Whether those measures are required by the Uniform Building Code, he said, depends on how one interprets the code.

Petersen said he's a proponent of safety, but he doesn't want safety measures carried to a ridiculous extreme.

"I think you can carry these things to the point where maybe we all ought to wear asbestos suits so we don't burn up," he said.

Urrau said that he did not consider all possible interpretations of the code when assessing City Hall's needs. Rather, the architect said, he applied the standards that he customarily encounters when working with building officials.

Petersen said that according to his interpretation, it is not necessary to bring the entire building into compliance with the code.

However, the city's attorney, Susan Swanberg, said that she believes large-scale compliance with the code is called for, based on the relatively large magnitude of the improvement project.

According to fire Chief Bobby Bopp, the standards cited in the consultants' summary are in line with those that city building officials normally enforce.

"I think we're going to take it on the chin if it appears we're going soft on City Hall, because it's our own home territory," Mayor Chris Walkington said. Petersen replied that he does not want the city to receive special consideration, but he thinks it's time to study the overall enforcement of the building code.

Bopp advised council members to weigh several factors if they ultimately decide to change the city's code enforcement.

"Usually, lax codes come back to haunt" in the form of fires, higher insurance rates or complications in obtaining mortgages, the chief said.

United Way banquet wraps up campaign

TWIN FALLS — Recipients of awards at the annual United Way meeting and awards banquet Monday included 10 companies and public agencies recognized for contributions of $3,000 or more. They were:

- First Federal Savings and Loan Association, $100,000
- Idaho Power Co., $3,123
- Twin Falls School District, $4,710
- Mountain Bell Co., $3,700
- The College of Southern Idaho, $3,657
- Sears, $4,300
- Idaho First National Bank, $4,462
- Moore Business Forms, $4,854
- Idaho Frozen Foods, $3,180

Twin Falls Bank and Trust received special recognition for its $17,600 contribution, the largest of the campaign.

Other award recipients included

Kmart and The Bon, which achieved substantial gains in annual contributions by employees. Bickel School received an award for its leadership among schools that contributed, and Fred Florence and Barbara MacNeil both were recognized for outstanding service in the United Way's annual fund-raising campaign.

Also Monday, the United Way's officers for the coming year were elected. They are: Bob Blake, president; Fred Florence, vice president and campaign chairman; Barbara MacNeil, associate campaign chairman; Alan Horner, vice president for agency relations; Doug Pellow, secretary; Curtis Anderson, treasurer; and Lee Wagner, public relations.

At-large officers are Richard F. Biedl, Jack Miller, Dorothy Geist and Ivan B. Skinner.

In handing out awards Monday, United Way director Sandy Thomas said it had been an 'up and down year'

Lila Fleming, and her successor, Sandy Thomas.

Bob Blake, the new president, said he is confident that this year's $160,000 fund-raising goal will be met, and he believes current solicitations in the Buhl area will produce the necessary dollars.

In other business Monday, the United Way of Twin Falls was renamed the United Way of Magic Valley. The change is intended to reflect the organization's valley-wide significance.

United Way

was helped by a United Way agency," Wagner said.

Overall, the officers said, the United Way's financial picture in 1981 was reasonably good. All commitments to member agencies were met, and the United Way earned good rates of interest through a revised investment plan, they said. The 12 member agencies received a total of $117,100 in 1981, and the United Way had $9,133 remaining at the end of the year.

Member agencies are: The Salvation Army; Camp Fire; the American Red Cross; the Boy Scouts of America; the Girl Scouts; United Cerebral Palsy; the Arthritis Foundation; the Mental Health Association; Ageless Senior Citizens; the Senior Citizens Federation; the Magic Valley YFCA and the Magic Valley Alcoholics Recovery Centers.

In one respect, 1981 "was somewhat of a budget-buster" for the United Way, Duane Schrank, the outgoing treasurer, told board members. Administrative expenditures were $20,600, he said; while the year's budget was $17,900.

He said the extra outlay resulted from unanticipated expenses related to the 1982 fund-raising campaign, attorneys' fees associated with the Hinton bequest and an additional $500 in salaries. The $500 expenditure resulted from overlapping work done by the former executive director,

Judge lets woman avoid prison time

TWIN FALLS — A Twin Falls woman, convicted by a 12-member jury last year of issuing a bad check, has been spared from prison.

In Fifth District Court on Monday, Judge Daniel Meehl ordered 29-year-old Mary Jean Hebrner placed on a two-year probation.

Convicted in October of issuing a fraudulent $100 check to Smith's Food King, 1913 Addison Ave. E., Hebrner faced a maximum three-year sentence.

Speaking to the court, she said, "What I've done, I don't plan to do again." Hebrner also said she plans to make restitution.

Prosecutor Harry DeHaan, who handled the case during the two-day trial, made no recommendation on the sentence.

In other court cases Monday:

• Meehl agreed to follow the decision of a Bannock County judge in ordering Thomas Ray Henderson, 22, of Buhl, to spend 120 days at the North Idaho Correctional Institute at Cottonwood.

Henderson, convicted in Bannock County of robbery, was sentenced to 10 years in prison, but when the possibility of probation was given the sentencing judge retained jurisdiction for 120 days.

The defendant appeared before Meehl on Monday for sentencing on a 1980 forgery conviction.

Under the terms of Meehl's decision, Henderson was sentenced to a 10-year prison sentence, to run concurrently with the Bannock County sentence. Meehl then retained jurisdiction for 120 days. Provided he is successful at NICI, Henderson probably will be placed on probation at the end of the four-month period.

• Meehl also ordered 15-year-old Charles Harmon Jr. of Twin Falls to spend 120 days at the Cottonwood facility.

Harmon was convicted of two first-degree burglary charges in connection with two burglaries committed at Costello's restaurant, 511 Second Ave. W., in November and December.

Noting the defendant's prior record of no criminal convictions, defense lawyer Mike Powers requested that Meehl place the defendant on probation.

• Michael R. Jones, 18, of Wendell, pleaded guilty to first-degree burglary in connection with the Dec. 24 burglary of a vehicle in Buhl. The charge carries a maximum 15-year sentence. A presentence investigation was ordered.

Burglars steal telephones

TWIN FALLS — Burglars visited the Mountain-Bell building in Twin Falls over the weekend and left with six telephones, valued at $742.

Twin Falls police said the items were taken between 8:30 a.m. Sunday and 8 a.m. Monday. Entry was gained through a window in a restroom.

Nothing was reported missing other than the special six-digit phone numbers.

Daniel Newman, 1770 Osterloh Ave., told police that someone broke into his car Sunday night and took four sets of stereo speakers and other sound equipment. The loss was estimated at $180.

Herd districts

been a matter of public record," Dalling said.

The recent discovery about herd-district designations, which were established in 1909, also has prompted disputes between farmers and ranchers.

If an animal crosses onto private property in a herd district, the person who owns the animal is responsible for any damage it causes.

However, in an area that is designated open range, farmers are responsible for any injury that occurs while the animal is on their property and legally, they must take precautions to keep the animals off their land.

"We found out that we are open to liability," Prescott said. "There is a whole area in which herd law applies, and we've been operating as if it were an open range. Some of us have been here since 1953."

The ranchers wanted the commissioners to change the herd-district designation, while the farmers wanted it maintained.

After hearing both sides, the commissioners recommended that the two groups get together and try to work out a solution acceptable to both.

After the hearing, about 20 farmers and ranchers met in a separate room at the Courthouse and formed a committee that will try to solve the problem.

"There is no reason we can't all get along," one farmer said. "If we all get at each other's throats, we are all going to lose."

The group appointed Dick Marshall to be the committee chairman.

Marshall suggested choosing two representatives from each group to be on the committee, which will include Wilson.

Prescott said the committee also will ask for representation from the Bureau of Land Management because it administers the lands.

Committee representatives will be R.J. Skeem, Gerwin Woodland, Lewis Onida and Prescott.

"We have three factors here, and we need to work out something that will be suitable to all three," Marshall said.

Committee members offered suggestions that included having ranchers sign legal agreements so that they can't sue a farmer if a rancher's animal crosses onto the farmer's property.

Wilson said he would consult a Boise attorney about the highway district's liability before making any formal suggestions. But he said proposing a 25 mph speed limit sign on roads in the area might help solve the problem.

"When the law was enacted in 1920, I don't think anybody could go that fast," Wilson said.

The committee did not set a date for its next meeting, but Prescott said he is confident that it can solve the problem.

"I'm really proud of the way everybody is trying to get together to work the problem out," he said. "When reasonable people work together, they can come up with the right answer."

Statistics keyed vote at hospital

GOODING — The study that led to Monday's decision on the Walker Center-Gooding County Memorial Hospital controversy posed mathematical alternatives rather than recommendations.

An Idaho Health Systems Agency official, John Collins, based his findings on population figures, hospital data and projections derived from statistical formulas.

The eight-page study stated that although 81 percent of Gooding hospital's admissions are from that county, 43 percent of Gooding residents seek care at other hospitals.

It also said the hospital, which is licensed for 25 beds, easily could increase its capacity to 30 beds and with some inconvenience, increase it to 32.

Collins noted that the number of patients at the hospital on an average daily basis had gone from 10.19 persons in 1979 to 8.65 in 1980 and 8.18 in 1981. The number of patient days per thousand population in the county decreased steadily from 1971 to 1980 and then increased slightly in 1981, the report said.

Using these trends and other factors, Collins projected hospital-use figures for 1982 and 1983 — considered the key to the controversy.

His study said that the number of patients in 1982 would range from an average of 7.52 to 9.19 persons per day, while in 1983, the daily average would be between 7.61 to 9.30 persons.

Reusing these figures up and using a standard deviation, Collins projected the hospital would need an average of 10 beds daily.

If the hospital had 14 beds available, he concluded that all 14 would be needed only 16 percent of the time. That is, the hospital would risk turning people away 53 days out of the year, giving it a "confidence" factor of 84 percent.

If the hospital had 18 beds, it would risk turning people away seven days of the year. With 20 beds, the hospital would be inadequate four days of the year. If it had 22 beds, it would be inadequate one day every two years.

When Dr. Charles Smick, who recently moved to Wendell, builds up his practice, Collins said the need would increase by one bed in 1982 and two beds in 1983.

On Monday, the commissioners reasoned that if the hospital installed two beds in the solarium and added five more licensed beds, it would have 32 beds. With 10 to 12 taken up by Walker patients, at least 20 beds would remain, giving it a 99 percent "confidence" factor, according to Collins' formula.

The study said that if the commissioners approved the interim plan, "it may be well to establish a bed allotment system," in which 70 percent of the beds would be reserved for elective patients and 30 percent reserved for emergencies.

Hospital

Walker Center director Carl Bergstrom said he was pleased with the decision but not surprised. He said the apprehensions expressed about housing alcoholics at hospitals were "fairly common" and will prove unfounded.

Because of the financial benefits, "it's a step in the right direction for both programs," Bergstrom said. When asked about the remaining logistical problems, he said, "We never figured this was going to be an ideal situation."

Bergstrom said that St. Benedict's Hospital of Ogden, Utah, which owns Walker Center, will now set a timetable for building a permanent facility next to the hospital.

The interim plan may bring $70,000 to $100,000 to the hospital from added patient revenues and service charges, according to estimates. Bergstrom said St. Benedict officials have said they would pay for remodeling costs.

Collins was asked whether the interim plan would require a state certificate of need. He said that after discussion with other state officials, he felt the plan "would not necessarily require a certificate," but he could not give a definite answer.

Tony Kuntz remained in the county jail Monday in lieu of $6,750 in bail.

He was arrested last week and charged with two felonies for allegedly driving a vehicle through the front doors and a containing wall of the Mennonite Church west of Buhl.

Eagles almost set new mark in 117-84 rout

5 Eagles in double figures

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — It easily could have been a record night. In fact, the stage may have been set for an all-timer.

But in the end, Coach Dave Campbell gave his big guns a lot of bench time and CSI contented itself with a 117-84 decision over Utah Tech Monday.

"It didn't seem like they came up here to play," said Campbell afterward. "Did it to you?"

Probably the more logical question of the night, however, was posed by Utah Tech Coach Vince Miner who, with the score reading 61-26, turned to Campbell on the sideline and asked, "Should we call the second half off?"

"There wasn't a lot to the game proper, but a few hints of things that happened on the periphery:

- Rick Tunstall had a big night in scoring (18), assists and rebounds and five of his teammates joined him in double figures.

- The other statistics of the game showed CSI took a 14-lead in the first five minutes and went ahead 38-19 with nine minutes to play. At 5:21 of the first half, CSI reached a 30-point lead on Ken Moore's field goal. CSI called it off offensively in the final five minutes, CSI getting just six points in the final 3:34 to lead 67-33 at intermission.

- The first five returned to start the second half and moved to a 40-point lead at 78-37 with two minutes and 10 seconds gone. That five then left for the night.

- During that time, CSI, for the first time in competition, worked on the low pass underneath. The 90-40 spread came when Scott one-handed a perfect job above the rim from Charles Williams.

- With 10:42 left, CSI was up 92-52 when Utah Tech went into a delay. After several passes, Campbell called out "take off." His Eagles looked at him and be motioned them downcourt with his thumb. With five-on-none on the offense end, Utah Tech could not score.

"The Eagles hit 100 at 100-60 on a Dave Piper jumper with 8:18 left in the game. The school record of 122 was easily within reach. But then, despite some outside sharpshooting by Moore, CSI's scoring touch Jeff. With the sparse crowd and the bench-riders begging for points, those on the floor couldn't respond although they surely got enough shots.

"We didn't need the record," Campbell said. The previous was almost needed as the 122 just let CSI outlast the BYU frosh 122-116. "But we didn't miss the record because we didn't get the shots or the free throws (19-34)," he pointed out.

Campbell's question concerning Utah Tech's intensity, came during some mental verbalizing.

"You have to remember that this team had Ricks down by 14 at halftime and just lost to Ricks by three up there last Thursday. We thought this was going to be a tough game. It didn't seem to me that they came up here to play. But then, we played awful well in the first five minutes tonight. We might have taken it right out of them."

CSI finishes up its week Wednesday by invading Western Wyoming of Rock Springs. The Eagles play their second-to-last regular season home game next Monday against Ricks.

Golden Eagle Gerald Kennedy rises to the occasion for short jumper over Utah Tech's Jeff Emery

No. 1 Virginia ascends in ratings

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Virginia Cavaliers, sporting the nation's best record among major colleges, catapulted ahead of three teams Monday to claim the No. 1 ranking in United Press International's weekly Board of Coaches ratings.

Virginia, 22-1, took over the top spot from Missouri, which suffered its first loss of the season, a 67-51 decision to Nebraska, after 19 victories. North Carolina, despite a 74-58 loss to Virginia last week, remained in the No. 2 position.

DePaul, 20-1, also held its spot at No. 3 while Missouri, rated No. 1 for the last two weeks, falling to No. 4. Iowa, 17-2, remained in the No. 5 position.

The Cavaliers, who also beat Virginia Tech last week, received 37 first-place votes and 625 points from the 42 coaches — six from each of seven geographical sections of the country — that comprise UPI's coaching board. North Carolina, 18-2 and the only team to defeat Virginia this season, totaled 549 points and three first-place votes. DePaul and Missouri received one first-place vote each.

Rounding out the Top 10, Oregon State, 16-3, moved up a notch to No. 6 followed by No. 7 Tulsa, No. 8 Minnesota, No. 9 Kentucky and No. 10 Arkansas.

"It's very flattering but by the same token this is not the end of the season and that's when you want to be the number one team in the country," said Virginia Coach Terry Holland, whose team meets Atlantic Coast Conference opponents North Carolina State and Clemson this week on the road.

"I probably would vote my number one if we played a tough schedule and played very well against that schedule."

In the second 10, Alabama dropped one spot into the No. 11 rating, followed by No. 12 Idaho, No. 13 West Virginia, No. 14 Kansas State and No. 15 San Francisco.

Also, Fresno State dipped three places to No. 16 followed by No. 17 Georgetown, No. 18 Memphis State, No. 19 Wake Forest and No. 20 Wyoming.

Both Memphis State, 15-3, and Wyoming, 17-5, cracked the Top 20 for the first time this season.

Foster ready to break old ties—Dodger Lopes already has

Cincinnati slugger expected to join Mets

NEW YORK (UPI) — Slugging outfielder George Foster is expected to become a member of the New York Mets by midweek for a tidy package that will earn him about $8 million over the next five years.

Mets' General Manager Frank Cashen and Foster's business agent, Tom Reich, are scheduled to meet today at Shea Stadium, presumably to close out the deal for the 33-year-old Cincinnati Reds player.

A press conference is expected to be called today or Wednesday to announce Foster's signing and officially list the players New York will acquire.

quish to Cincinnati in exchange for the slugger, who has hit 188 homers over the last six years and drove in 671 runs during that period.

"The Mets acquired the right to negotiate with Foster last week in a 'trade in principle' with Cincinnati. It was learned the Mets would send catcher Alex Trevino and pitchers Jim Kern and Greg Harris to the Reds upon completion of the agreement with Foster.

A Mets spokesman denied Monday reports that papers already had been signed to bring Foster to Shea Stadium.

GEORGE FOSTER bound to get rich

2nd sacker's trade breaks up LA infield

OAKLAND, Calif. (UPI) — Second baseman Dave Lopes, who played the last nine seasons with the same Los Angeles Dodger infield, was acquired Monday by the Oakland A's in a trade for a Class A minor-leaguer.

"I wanted to play for Bill Martin," Lopes said of the A's manager at a news conference. "I still feel there are things I can learn in baseball from Billy."

Lopes, 35, said Martin was "a winner" and he has won "everywhere he has been."

He said Martin's strategy was aggressiveness and "that's the way I like to play."

One consideration in his decision, he said, was that Oakland "wanted me. I wanted to go to a team where I was wanted."

Lopes said another consideration was his desire to play behind the Oakland's strong pitching staff.

The trade breaks up the starting Dodger infield combination of Lopes, shortstop Bill Russell, third baseman Ron Cey and first baseman Steve Garvey. The four had played together regularly since 1973, a major league record for an infield.

In exchange for Lopes, the Dodgers received minor leaguer Lance Hudson, a 19-year-old switch hitting shortstop and second baseman. Hudson hit just .225 with one homer and had 14 stolen bases in 64 games for Oakland's San Jose farm team in the Class A California League last season.

Lopes slumped miserably in last year's strike-shortened season when the Dodgers captured the World Series. His batting average fell to .206 with just 17 RBIs. He also stole 20 bases in 58 games.

The trade allows the Dodgers to move highly touted second baseman Steve Sax into the starting lineup. Sax was later voted the Texas League's Most Valuable Player.

Magic Valley may see northern Idaho showdown

Junior Lisa Vallem is averaging 19 a game

One doesn't want to be the bearer of bad news, but Magic Valley girls basketball fans had better prepare themselves for a all-northern Idaho A-3 championship game Saturday.

"When it comes to predictions, I've been wrong before and may be wrong this time. But it looks as if Prairie and Kendrick, both from the panhandle, just might make the title game in the CSI gym."

Prairie, as you may recall, won the title last year when Donna Von Bargen and company ended Homedale's 37-game winning streak with a 53-48 win in the O'Leary Junior High gym. Kendrick lost to Homedale in the semifinals, but gained the third place trophy with a convincing 71-50 win over West Side.

Little has changed in the Second District since last year. Prairie was runner-up to Kendrick in the district and has four of five starters back. Kendrick returns all five. That experience alone makes each team a potential favorite since having a taste of state tournament pressure is a critical factor.

A few more details on each:

"The Prairie Pirates have a 16-6 record, not the best but far from being the worst."

Von Bargen suffered a knee injury in mid-November and didn't return to the team until the first of the year. But, according to Kendrick Coach Brian Pendleton, she's as good as ever. Von Bargen scored 16 points in last year's title game while guard Anette Wren had 15. Rhonda Ternah leads the well-balanced Pirates with eight points a game this year.

Prairie won't run much, preferring to play a deliberate style with its ability (a 5-10, 5-10, 5-11 front line) to hit the boards. The Pirates have also excelled at defense this season, holding 12 regular season foes to 30 points or less.

The Pirates have been very successful in state tournaments. In the state field for the seventh time this year, Prairie won the '77, '78 and '81 titles and was runner-up in 1980.

Revenge may also be on the Pirates' side. They defeated Kendrick in the second round of the district and then suffered back-to-back losses to Kendrick in the championship round. The result sends Prairie to come to state as a district runner-up and given the chance, they'd love to reverse the order at state.

"With all starters back, Kendrick has put together a 22-3 record. The losses have come to defending A-2 champion Moscow (by four points), a five-point setback at Lapwai (one of the hardest places in Idaho to win) and a two-point overtime loss to Prairie in district play."

Lisa Vallem, a 5-8 junior guard, is Kendrick's leader. She is averaging just under 20 points a game, is a 49 percent field goal and 70 percent free throw shooter, averages nearly five steals and four assists and probably runs the fast break better than any girl (and some boys) in Idaho.

Vallem suffered a hip injury during last spring's track season. "She tore a growth plate in her hip and couldn't walk or do anything for six weeks," Pendleton said. "She hurt it again in a game early in the season, but it's gone away and we're trying to forget about it."

Kendrick's inside game is led by twin sisters Jean and Jane Glenn. Both are rugged rebounders and just juniors. "Jane has become so aggressive that she gets into foul trouble now," Pendleton said. "Last year she was very timid."

Teresa Howerton is Vallem's running mate at guard. She leads the team in assists with more than five a game and is also an effective outside shooter.

Bronwyn Mantuff plays the wing opposite Howerton and Pendleton said the 5-11 senior has been playing the best basketball of her career during the district playoffs.

As a team, Kendrick averaged 58 points a game while allowing 32 during the regular season.

Kendrick and Prairie also have the advantage of playing their seven district games on the Lewis and Clark State College floor. A college floor is 10 feet longer and a bit wider than high school floors. A high school team that isn't used to the difference will be in trouble against a running team this week.

The only kink in projecting a Prairie-Kendrick final is the opening round. Prairie must get past undefeated Fruitland while Kendrick runs up against Fourth District champion Valley. Fruitland will be a tough foe for the Pirates while Valley, at 20-3, has the potential to upset Kendrick but must play better than it did in the district tournament.

The pick here is Kendrick. The Tigers are in an easier bracket since Parma and Teton, two teams with losing records, are in the lower bracket along with Kendrick and Valley.

The Tigers came to Twin Falls last year with a very young team and a first-year coach and only lost to Homedale.

"Last year we came down to have some fun," Pendleton said. "This year we're coming down to have fun, but we also have a definite goal in mind."

Eagle women even record, bomb Utah Tech, 73-37

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — College of Southern Idaho's women balanced their season at 8-8 Monday night by ripping Utah Tech 73-37.

But don't define that 8-8 record with even success, although this was a non-conference game, the Golden Eagles still are the team to watch in regional play.

Coach Lloyd Hardesty's women, headed by an early second half outside blitz by Tammy Jarolimke, blazed for 51 second-half points against the Wolverines after a tight first half.

It was CSI's seventh straight victory, a streak that didn't surprise Hardesty.

"I knew when we started playing ball and once got into the junior college schedule and the playing people of our own caliber that this team was going to be all right. We lost those seven against four-year schools. Utah State beat us 15 down there and that's like a victory for us," Hardesty said.

"The only thing I worried about (during the losing streak) was that the girls might get discouraged and not mentally be ready to play when we did start playing against the junior college teams we have to beat," he said.

Sill, CSI's winning streak goes on the line tonight and tomorrow when the Eagles return to four-year competition. They will meet Idaho State in the Mindome at 7:30 p.m. today and travel to Boise Wednesday evening.

"Those are tough games for us because they have more experience and usually are taller. But they're good games for us to tune up with, even if we lose," Hardesty said. "Our goal still remains to get a berth in the regional tournament."

The excellent shooting CSI had been showing of late wasn't apparent against Utah Tech most of the first half.

Hardesty switched his usual lineup with an eye toward playing more freshmen.

"We've got two rough ones in the next two days and I wanted everyone to play," he said.

CSI, which trailed most of the first 12 minutes, didn't take the lead for good until Cass Herbst and Melissa Barter collected field goals with six minutes left in the half. Julie Harrington's fast-break bucket pushed it to 18-12 and it remained there with CSI holding a 22-15 intermission advantage.

Utah Tech got the first points of the second half — and before Jarolimke and Barter opened up a little more daylight. Then with the score at 28-21, CSI made its move. Jarolimke sandwiched two jumpers around a close-in shot by Karen Harr. Utah Tech replied with a two-point by Brenda Frankenburg, who wound up with 25, but Jarolimke then called two more jumpers and Jill Dixon scored on a fast break. With 12:05 left, CSI had a 40-23 lead and simply coasted in from there.

Twin Falls hosts Bonneville

TWIN FALLS — Consider it just a long intermission.

For the second time in four days, the homebased Twin Falls Bruins will be playing the Bonneville Bees. The game begins at 8 p.m. today at the Bruin gymnasium and is a make-up for one originally snouted out Jan. 15.

The Bruins outlasted the Bees 66-41 in Idaho Falls Saturday night after jumping off to a 19-point halftime lead.

Coach John Astorquia says he doubts his Bruins will have the luxury of a double digit lead virtually throughout the final three quarters this time around.

He said the goal for Twin Falls in this game was to be better control than Bonneville's rebounding.

It will be an all-Idaho Falls week for Twin Falls as the Bruins will travel to Idaho Falls — looking for a sweep in that city — Friday night and return home Saturday to entertain the SKYLINE GRIZZLIES.

Jumper at :07 wins it for Idaho Falls

RUPERT — Barry Smith's jump shot with seven seconds to go gave Idaho Falls a narrow 56-55 victory over Minico Monday night.

The Spartans, 9-5, held a 55-54 lead and the ball with 31 seconds left. But a turnover gave possession back to Idaho Falls, and moments later Smith sank his winning 20-footer.

Minico was dealt a severe blow when forward Darel Tracy led the game midway in the second quarter with a hyperextended knee. At the time the Spartans owned a 10-point advantage.

A relatively paltry eight-point output in the third quarter also weakened Minico's attack.

"We just couldn't get things going," assistant Coach Terry Johnson said of the third-period slump. "We had some turnovers and some problems. We just missed a lot of shots and we went kind of sour."

The Spartans shot a creditable 43 percent from the floor, but couldn't match Idaho Falls' 56 percent figure.

"I think the difference was they came down and put the shots in when they had to," Johnson said. "In the end we turned the ball over a couple of times and that hurt us."

The Spartans get another chance at the Tigers Wednesday night on the road.

In the junior varsity preliminary, Jerry Johnson hit the first of two free throws with one second remaining to give Minico a 45-44 triumph.

Indoor champ opens meet with victory

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (UPI) — Defending champion Gene Mayer easily won his first match against unseeded Jeff Borowiak, 6-4, 6-2, Monday night in the U.S. National Indoor Tennis Championships while the world number 1 player, John McEnroe, sat out the first round.

McEnroe, seeded No. 1 in the tournament, is scheduled to play Tim Wilkison today. The young, outspoken king of tennis lost Sunday to the world's second-ranked player, Ivan Lendl, in the Canadian Challenge in Toronto. Lendl elected to skip the Memphis tournament.

Eliot Teltscher is seeded No. 2 and Mayer is No. 3.

No. 7 seed Roscoe Tanner outplayed Mike Cahill 6-4, 7-5, in another first-round match in the $205,000 tournament at the Memphis Racquet Club. Tanner lost to Mayer in the finals last year.

Sandy Mayer, brother of Gene Mayer and seeded fifth, defeated Andy Andrews in a three-set match, 3-6, 6-5, 4.

Seeded Yannick Noah dropped another Frenchman, Thierry Tulasne, 6-1, 6-2, and Tony Giammalva beat Jimmy Arias 6-3, 6-3, earlier in the day.

No. 8 seed Johan Kriek defeated Pat Dupre 6-4, 6-3, and John Alexander, ranked fifth in the world, upset No. 9 and 18th-ranked Brian Gottfried 6-3, 7-6.

Harold Solomon beat Pascal Portes 7-5, 7-6, while Hank Pfister beat Peter Fleming 7-6, 6-4. Ferdi Taygan beat Ben Testerman 7-5, 6-4, 6-3, and Chip Hooper won his match against Ramon Krishnam 6-1, 7-5.

McEnroe, the so-called "super brat" since history will not repeat itself, hopes it was in his first match of the 1981 Indoor that McEnroe got knocked out of the tournament.

At least part of the blame for losing last year was a case of jet lag. McEnroe got into Memphis one day after flying back to the West Coast from Australia. In comparison, his trip to Memphis from Toronto was a short hop.

"Toronto's a hell of a lot closer to Memphis than Australia," McEnroe said. "I should be in a lot better shape this time."

McEnroe added he also should be in a lot better control of his famous temper. There have been few flare-ups or arguments in the last two tournaments and the 22-year-old left-hander hopes to stay in control of his emotions in Memphis.

Bears beat Cal

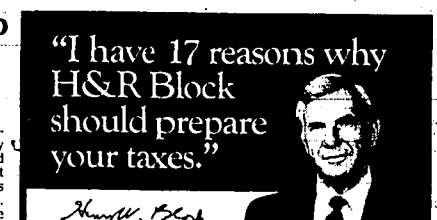

CORVALLIS, Ore. (UPI) — Sixth-ranked Oregon State fought off a second half rally by California to tie a 57-50 victory Monday night and a tie for first place with Washington in the Pac-10 conference.

Oregon State, now 17-3 for the season and 10-1 in the conference, built up a 32-20 halftime lead but California, behind center Marc McNamara, got within four points at 50-48 with 2:50 left in the game.

But Oregon State, playing a slowdown game, got five points from guard Lester Conner in the closing minutes to pull away.

McNamara led all scorers with 23 points and added 17 rebounds for the Bears, now 0-10 for the season and 4-7 in the Pac-10.

Conner led Oregon State with 20 points and also had 7 rebounds and 6 assists, while Danny Evans contributed 16 points.

'Goons' must go, star Gretzky says

EDMONTON, Alberta (UPI) — Wayne Gretzky hopes his remarkable season has done more to further the image of hockey as an art form than the Jimmy Manks and Paul Holmgrens have done to keep alive its image as a brawl barely under control.

The NHL heads into its annual All-Star game tonight in Landover, Md., taking a needed break from the best and worst of seasons. Gretzky has performed as the epitome of the sport while other players exchanged sucker punches and attacked referees. The NHL's inconsistent methods for dealing with violence drew a fire.

But Gretzky believes the current outbreaks of violence are the last hurrah of the goon player and he draws a distinction between fights which are a built-in aspect of the pressure in the sport, and brawls which are perpetrated mainly for the money. "The brawlers have lost their popularity and are being quickly removed from the game. It's a good trend. But you're still going to see fights," said the 21-year-old Edmonton Oiler, whose latest quest for the record book is Phil Esposito's 76 goals in one season.

"I don't see anything wrong with a one on one fight. But the game doesn't need goons. It never has. There's nothing wrong with hard body checking and the occasional fight, but when it descends to mass brawls, stick swinging and goon tactics, then I don't go for that."

Gretzky may be the league's most qualified spokesman on the subject of violence. He is not only the NHL's foremost point producer — 69 goals at the break — but also one of its most law abiding citizens, having taken but one major penalty in three years.

"And it was pretty mild," said Gretzky. "I tried to hit a player, but missed. I felt quite foolish when it was over. I'm not cut out to be a fighter."

The Oiler center gives the NHL high marks for its attempts to eradicate violence, but believes the league has not dealt uniformly with many incidents. He cites the mere six-game suspension Philadelphia's Paul Holmgren received for hitting an official and the 10-game suspension Jimmy Mann of the Winnipeg Jets was handed for breaking the jaw of the Pittsburgh Penguins' Paul Gardner.

"My biggest complaint is the league's inconsistency in dealing with these matters," Gretzky said. "Some of the penalties have been too harsh and some have been too easy."

McMahon drops out of BYU

PROVO, Utah (UPI) — Jim McMahon, the sensational quarterback who set 35 NCAA records and led Brigham Young University to the Western Athletic Conference football championship, has dropped out of school.

But Cougar Coach LaVell Edwards said he expects McMahon, a senior, to resume his studies and complete his degree in communications once the All-America player gets the NFL draft behind him.

"There's no doubt in my mind that he will finish," Edwards said. "It's not unusual for a guy who's going to be highly drafted to leave and finish it after a year."

Edwards said McMahon has been too busy with all-star games, awards presentations and the pre-draft process to devote time to studies.

PCAA placed in Division I-A

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — The NCAA Classification Committee announced Monday that the Pacific Coast Athletic Association has been placed in Division I-A.

An NCAA spokeswoman said the decision to put the seven-team conference into the top class stemmed from the committee classifying Pacific and Utah State as Division I-A.

The spokeswoman said since Fresno State and Nevada-Las Vegas had already been classified I-A, the PCAA was assured of having more than half of its membership in Division I-A.

In an earlier classification announcement, Cal State-Fullerton, Long Beach State and San Jose State had been placed in Division I-AA. The new ruling moves those schools into Division I-A.

Big Sky honors Hashley

BOISE (UPI) — Doug Hashley's so-so season may be over. Hashley had been averaging 12 points and 11 rebounds per game for Montana State through January. But he's off to a good start in February.

The 6-foot-7 forward broke loose for 47 points and 28 rebounds in Montana State's two wins last weekend. And, Monday the Big Sky Conference named Hashley as its player of the week for his outstanding performance.

Hashley started the week with 29 points and 12 rebounds in Montana State's 80-67 win over Idaho State last Friday night. The all-league senior hit all 13 of his shots from the field in equalling a Big Sky record set in 1967 by Gonzaga's Gary Lechman.

The MSU forward then scored 18 points and pulled down 16 rebounds Saturday night in the Bobcats' 69-55 win over Weber State.

Super Bowl sets record

NEW YORK (UPI) — Super Bowl XVI drew the largest audience in the history of television, with 110,230,000 viewers, according to A.C.

Nielsen research, it was announced Monday by CBS-TV.

The game, in which San Francisco defeated Cincinnati 26-21 on Jan. 24, drew over 8 million more viewers than Super Bowl XII, the previous holder of the largest audience for a television show.

Super Bowls XII, XIII, XIV, XV and XVI hold five of the first six spots in total audience, according to Nielsen research.

Malone gets NBA award

NEW YORK (UPI) — Houston center Moses Malone, who averaged an amazing 48.3 points per game last week in leading the Rockets to three victories, was named Monday the NBA Player of the Week for the period ending Feb. 7.

Malone, who scored a career-high 53 points against San Diego last Tuesday, 45 against Phoenix on Friday and 47 against Kansas City on Sunday, also managed to average 18.7 rebounds per game over that span.

Promoter files grievance

NEW YORK (UPI) — The promoter for unbeaten junior middleweight Tony Ayala Monday filed a grievance with the World Boxing Association charging that newly crowned champion Davey Moore is violating WBA rules in setting up his first title defense.

Moore, who won the title in only his ninth pro bout last week with a sixth-round TKO of champion Tadashi Mihara in Japan, plans to make his first title defense against sixth-ranked Charlie Weir of South Africa in Johannesburg on April 24.

New prexy for Pacers

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — Indiana Pacers owner Sam Nassi announced Monday minority partner Frank Mariani is replacing him as president of the NBA club.

The NBA in New York promptly announced it has approved no such transfer of managerial control between the two Los Angeles area businessmen. It said it is investigating reports Mariani has business ties with Los Angeles Lakers owner Jerry Buss to be sure no conflict of interest exists.

Mariani, a real estate man, is one of the general partners of the Indiana limited partnership which owns the Pacers.

"Any proposed transfer of ownership or managerial control of the Indiana Pacers from Sam Nassi to Frank Mariani has not been approved by commissioner (Larry) O'Brien or the NBA board of governors," NBA general counsel Russell G. Granik said.

Commissioner O'Brien has directed the league office staff to conduct an immediate investigation into the matter and report to him as soon as possible this week.

Alex Sachare, NBA director of information, said league officials understood Mariani has connections with Buss and want to be sure there will be no conflict of interest.

Nassi, Beverly Hills, Calif., bought the Pacers in June 1979 but put them up for sale last year, expressing disappointment they were not earning more money.

He said Monday he will continue to hold ownership of the Pacers, but feels he cannot give them enough attention now because of demands from his other business interests.

The Pacers are in third place in the NBA central division. Last season they were 44-38 and competed in the NBA playoffs for the first time.

LSU names temporary athletic boss

BATON ROUGE, La. (UPI) — An assistant to ousted athletic director Paul Dietzel was named as his temporary replacement Monday, inheriting a department with a $1 million deficit and an image tarnished by allegations of financial mismanagement.

Larry Jones, 48, an assistant athletic director since 1979 who played football for LSU from 1951 to 1954, was given the top job until a permanent replacement for Dietzel could be found.

The LSU board of supervisors last Friday removed Dietzel as athletic director during an investigation into financial policies that led to a deficit projected to reach $12.2 million over the next seven years.

The panel reassigned Dietzel as special assistant to the president for the development of projects and programs at LSU. He will hold that job at least through June 1983, when his $66,000 a year contract expires.

"I will try to get stability back in the department," Jones said. "No drastic actions are planned now. I'll take it day by day. We need a settling period."

"What has happened is behind us now and now is the time to go ahead and get the job done. It's tough when a good friend is hurt and Dietzel is a good friend of mine."

Jones was named to the post by LSU Chancellor Dr. James Wharton, who had harshly criticized Dietzel and led the investigation of the athletic department's finances.

"Based on discussions with coaches Dale Brown and Jerry Stovall and the senior level administrators of the athletic department, I have decided to appoint Larry Jones as the acting director," Wharton said. "He has the support of those responsible for the administration of our athletic department and our coaches."

DuPont records 23% gain in 1981

WILMINGTON, Del. (UPI) — DuPont Co. said Monday it had a 23 percent gain in net income in 1981 from operations, or $5.51 a share from $4.49 in 1980.

Sales climbed to $22.8 billion from $13.7 billion in 1980, partly on the inclusion of sales of Conoco, Inc., for five months.

Actually DuPont reported earnings for the year of $7.50 a share based on the inclusion of an extraordinary gain of $1.74 a share due to an accounting change on investment tax credits from the deferral method to the flow-through method.

Net income, including assets of the accounting change, was $1.401 billion, up from $706 million in 1980.

Fourth quarter profit was $328 million or $1.35 a share on sales of $8.44 billion against $215 million or $1.36 a share a year earlier on sales of $3.52 billion.

Kaiser Steel loses $437 million

PONTIACA, Calif. (UPI) — Kaiser Steel Corp., facing intense foreign and domestic competition, Monday reported a net 1981 loss of $437.4 million, and the company's chairman predicted a continuing cash drain.

Total revenues for 1981 were $1.1 billion, compared with $927 million in 1980.

Kaiser reported an unusual after tax charge of $529 million for the scheduled phase-out of primary steel-making facilities by mid 1983 and the shutdown of unprofitable steel finishing and fabricating facilities.

Included in the shutdown costs were $112 million for terminating employees.

In 1980, the company reported net earnings of $191.4 million or $27.16 per share, including after tax gains of $158.1 million or $22.55 per share.

In the last quarter of 1981, Kaiser reported a net loss of $513.7 million. In the comparable quarter of 1980 Kaiser had net earnings of $73.8 million.

Busch beer sales up 15% in 1981

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Anheuser-Busch Inc. Monday reported 1981 sales were up more than 15 percent compared to the previous record year of 1980.

August A. Busch III, the company's president and chairman of the board, said gross sales for 1981 were $4.4 billion, an increase of 15.4 percent from $3.8 billion in 1980.

Net income for 1981 was $217.4 million, an increase of 26.6 percent compared with $171.8 million in income in 1980, Busch said. Primary earnings per share of common stock for 1981 were $4.79, compared with $3.80 in 1980.

The company said fully diluted earnings per share for 1981 were $4.61.

Net income for the fourth quarter was $43.8 million, an increase of 25.1 percent compared with $35.1 million in the fourth quarter of 1980.

Primary earnings per share of common stock were 97 cents, compared with 78 cents for the fourth quarter of 1980. Fully diluted earnings per share were 94 cents.

The company reported record beer volume sales for 1981 of 54.5 million barrels, an increase of 8.6 percent over 1980 beer sales volume of 50.2 million barrels.

Celanese up 10% despite falloff

NEW YORK (UPI) — Celanese Corp. earned $9.01 a share last year, up 10 percent from the $8.20 a share earned in 1980, in spite of a downturn in the final quarter. Actual net was up 18 percent at $14 million on sales of $3.8 billion from $122 million in 1980 on sales of $3.3 billion. The sales gain was 12 percent.

But fourth quarter profit fell 17 percent to $2.18 a share on sales of $884 million from $2.64 a share a year earlier on sales of $913 million. Actual net slipped 10 percent to $35 million from $39 million. The sales gain for the quarter was 3 percent.

Accounting changes that excluded subordinated debentures from being regarded as common stock equivalents increased income per share for the year by 36 cents but this was partly offset by a 14 cents a share reduction due to a new method of accounting for Mexican investment tax incentives.

Subaru buys Ford-made windshields

DETROIT (UPI) — Ford Motor Co. said Monday its Glass Division has reached agreement with Fuji Industries of Ota City, Japan, to supply windshields for Subaru cars exported to the United States.

The windshields, made of laminated safety glass, will be produced at Ford's Dearborn, Mich., glass plant and shipped to Japan for installation in cars destined for export to the United States.

Ford's Glass Division makes virtually all of the automotive glass used in Ford cars and trucks in North America. It has other manufacturing plants in Nashville, Tenn., and Tulsa, Okla., and a glass fabricating plant at Niagara Falls, Ontario.

FOREST CITY, Iowa (UPI) — Winnabego Industries will unveil a new van at the National Automobile Dealers Association show in Atlanta, Ga., Feb. 20-23, the company said Monday.

The front-wheel drive van, called the Centauri, is powered by a Renault two-liter diesel engine and is rated at 24 miles per gallon. The multipurpose vehicle is nearly 20 feet long, has an interior height of six feet and seats seven people.

Brighter days ahead for nation's handicapped

© Universal Press Syndicate

While the Reagan administration's budget-cutters are slashing funds to design and install equipment to help the handicapped, private industry and the handicapped themselves are making surprisingly impressive progress on their own.

And this has little (if anything) to do with 1981's International Year of the Disabled Person, generally dismissed in this country as a dismal failure, despite official statements of optimism.

In fact, so far at least, the handicapped seem to be more than holding their positions in the face of the general upsurge in joblessness. Surveys again are underlining that qualified handicapped workers have a lower rate of unemployment than their physically able counterparts, higher dedication to performance and a higher quality output.

From the corporate side, there are hundreds of positive examples of what U.S. corporations are doing for the qualified handicapped. As a sampling:

- IBM has for many years modified and redesigned equipment to accommodate the handicapped.
- Sears Roebuck's handicapped roster includes repair technicians, attorneys and retail managers.
- AT&T has developed a program to train managers of disabled people (which will survive its breakup).
- Xerox is training disabled people in computer-related jobs where at present there is a shortage of physically able, qualified workers.

- The Travelers Insurance Companies installed a variety of sophisticated equipment that includes writing machines to enable a disabled person to write out his/her program in Braille and video screens to advise the hard-of-hearing that the telephone is ringing.

In the words of Edward H. Budd, president of The Travelers, which has some 100 disabled persons on the payroll, "We have to have qualified people to do business, and to overlook qualified people because they are handicapped would not serve any purpose."

From the side of the handicapped, this nation's blind population of around 470,000 offers the most outstanding examples of people working, earning wages based on their productivity, paying taxes — and generally smashing our stereotyped images of the blind into sawdust.

- There are workshops for the blind across the nation, where men and women operate complex machines, such as drill presses and electronic solars; run switchboards; assemble writing instruments; make brushes on high-speed equipment; conduct complicated sewing operations and package the widest variety of products.
- Blind people hold executive jobs in corporations, practice law, teach in universities, run non-profit organiza-

- Generally acknowledged as the best operated shops in the country are the workshops associated with the National Industries for the Blind. They received their biggest push back in 1938 when the Javits-Wagner-O'Day Act laid them, in effect, flat — that they could become subcontractors for the federal government if they met stringent requirements for quality, on-time delivery and other specifications.
- In the 44 years since then, the 100 workshops associated with NIB have built their sales to U.S. agencies and departments to more than $100 million, including sales to military stores of over $10 million this year. In addition, their volume in commercial consumer products is running around $50 million a year.

How do blind people get jobs in these workshops (where 5,500 now work)? Most are referred by state agencies for the blind and receive vocational evaluation either from their agencies or at the workshops. Professional counselors determine what skills the blind or disabled person has. The counselors offer guidance, provide training, otherwise equip them.

None of this tells the full story, though, of what earning their own way does for handicapped persons. It's not just that the earned income means increased buying power. It's also that nothing beats a job for giving a person a sense of self-respect. In 1982 particularly.

Dow plunges 17 points

Investors worry over size of Reagan's budget deficit

NEW YORK (UPI) — Stock prices plunged to their lowest point this year Monday as the bond market weakened and investors worried what President Reagan's proposed $91.5 billion budget deficit would do to interest rates. Trading was moderately active.

The Dow Jones industrial average, a 4-point winner Friday, dove 17.60 points to 833.43, its lowest point since it hit 832.95 on Oct. 29, 1981. The closely watched blue chip indicator, behind 8 points in early trading, shaved two points off the loss around noon before hurtling lower again. The Dow lost 20.07 points overall last week.

The New York Stock Exchange index fell 1.47 to 66.32 and the price of an average share decreased 62 cents. Declines topped advances 1,323-278 among the 1,902 issues traded at 4 p.m. EST.

The Board volume totaled 48,500,000 shares, compared with 53,350,000 traded Friday.

Analysts said trader concern over high interest rates was intensified following the weekend release of President Reagan's $797.6 billion budget blueprint for fiscal 1983.

"The budget deficit is spooking both the bond and stock markets," Newton Zinder, senior vice president at E.F. Hutton & Co., said.

Dreyfus Corp. Vice President Monte Gordon said the size of the proposed deficit "reinforces the market's uneasiness about interest rates. It tends to indicate the Federal Reserve's restrictive monetary policy won't change. The Fed will have little room to ease."

The Reagan budget is providing for a massive military buildup and further deep cuts in social programs — not heated criticism on Capitol Hill. Analysts and lawmakers expect it to undergo major rewriting in Congress. They also consider Reagan's deficit projection too low.

"It will be at least $100 billion," House Budget

Committee Chairman James Jones, D-Okla., predicted, explaining interest rates are unlikely to drop as quickly as the administration expects and thus will add between $10 and $15 billion to the deficit.

Reagan defended his budget Monday, saying it will not hurt the needy and is essential to restore the nation to economic health. The Federal Reserve Friday reported the nation's money supply dropped $1.4 billion in the latest week following a January surge which drove both long- and short-term interest rates higher. Banks boosted their prime lending rates for the first time in more than two months. Chase Manhattan Bank Monday joined other major banks by hiking its prime to the prevailing 16 1/2 percent rate.

Composite volume of NYSE issues listed on all U.S. exchanges and over the counter at 4 p.m. totaled $4,911,300 shares compared with $9,924,900 traded Friday.

The American Stock Exchange index dove 8.26 to 277.25 and the price of a share dropped 37 cents. Declines topped advances 496-117 among the 800 issues traded at 4 p.m. Volume at that time totaled 4,500,000 shares compared with 4,723,165 Friday.

The National Association of Securities Dealers' NASDAQ index of over-the-counter stocks lost 3.58 to 184.63.

On the trading floor, MGIC Investment was the most active NYSE-listed issue, down 1/4 to 50 1/4.

Pennzoil was the second most active issue, down 1/4 to 45 1/4. The company declined to comment on the activity in its stock, which spurred more than 4 points earlier in the day.

Oil issues generally led Monday's decline amid continued price weakness and oversupply of crude. Exxon, third on the active list, dropped 1/2 to 28 1/2. Mobil skidded 1/2 to 21 1/4 in trading.

Ford, UAW talks enter second week

DETROIT (UPI) — Early contract talks between Ford Motor Co. and the United Auto Workers entered their second week Monday with no breakthrough in sight.

Union leaders said they were willing for company responses to several union contract proposals.

UAW President Douglas Fraser said the union wanted to hear what Ford thought of its offers before outlining any major details. "We're waiting for a couple of company responses," he said.

Subcommittees met to discuss specifics of the new contract containing concessions the union hopes will save jobs and Ford hopes will cut labor costs.

A group of workers from an Ohio plant that General Motors plans to close arrived in Detroit to petition union leaders to reopen negotiations with the No. 1 automaker.

About 700 members of UAW Local 1045, which represents workers at a

Chrysler offers rebates

DETROIT (UPI) — Chrysler Corp. has announced a rebate program offering customers $300 to $2,000 off the price of selected models purchased in the month of February.

The program offers $500 rebates on 1981 and 1982 Plymouth Horizon and Dodge Omni models — except 1982 Miser models already being sold to call prices.

Rebates of $2,000 are being offered on 1981 or 1982 Imperial and Plymouth Trail Duster and Dodge Ramcharger models. The rebate applies to eligible vehicles delivered after Feb. 8, including January sold orders and sold orders delivered after Feb. 28.

Plymouth's 1982 '03 and Dodge '024 and many other models are eligible for the $300 rebate.

Fisher Body plant in the Cleveland suburb of Euclid, said a new round of talks with GM was their only hope of keeping the plant open.

GM announced Thursday it would close the facility within the next year, throwing about 1,175 hourly and salaried employees out of work. An additional 300 hourly workers have been laid off indefinitely from the plant.

Local UAW President Andrew Kocerka said he hoped to get more details on the shutdown.

"All we know is what the announcement said," Kocerka said. "But I keep telling the workers to keep coming to work because we owe it to the customers. It's not easy. The workers are down. Morale is pretty bad. Everybody is asking, why us?"

Fraser said recognizing talks at GM was unlikely unless other workers join in the plea.

"I think there would have to be an overwhelming request for us to call another GM Council meeting," Fraser said during a lunch break at Ford.

The GM Council, a group of 300 local labor leaders, would have to formally authorize a reopening of talks.

"I'm not going to think about that now," Fraser said. "We want to concentrate our efforts here at Ford. We want to get an agreement here."

Fraser said the union workers at Euclid were "resented oppositionists" and had pushed other locals into coming out against concessions.

Opposition from rank-and-file members was one of the reasons talks broke down at GM last month.

2 more major banks hike prime to 16.5%

NEW YORK (UPI) — Two more major banks boosted their prime rate to the 16 1/2 percent level Monday as Congress began considering President Reagan's proposed deficit-ridden budget package which many economists fear could push interest rates even higher.

Chase Manhattan Bank, the nation's third largest commercial bank, increased its prime rate a quarter point from 15 1/4 percent. Marine Midland, the 13th largest, immediately followed. Chase and Marine Midland were about the last of the major banks to move to the 16 1/2 percent level.

One week ago most major banks followed the lead of No. 2-ranked Citibank in raising the prime rate to 16 1/2 percent from 15 1/4 percent. Chase and Marine Midland at that time moved only to the 16 1/4 percent level.

The latest moves came following Friday's money supply report by the Federal Reserve that analysts suggested still left money growth too high to allow relief from high interest rates. The basic measure of the money supply known as M1 fell $1.3 billion in the week ended Jan. 27, but Wall Street analysts were disappointed, noting the drop was not enough to offset the bulge in the money supply that occurred in the first three weeks of January.

Reagan administration officials have contended the rise in interest rates is only a "temporary phenomenon."

But many economists, including the non-partisan Congressional Budget Office, fear that budget deficits exceeding $100 billion a year accompanied by the tight credit policy of the Federal Reserve will drive interest rates up and abort any significant economic recovery.

The president's fiscal 1983 budget, formally presented to Congress on Monday, forecasts a deficit of $91.5 billion following a record $38.6 billion deficit forecast for the current 1982 fiscal year ending Sept. 30. Private economic forecasts project much larger deficits.

Sugar scare 'a hoax,' industry to fight back

TARPON SPRINGS, Fla. (UPI) — The president of the Sugar Association Monday charged that the food industry "has been victimized by a vicious and contrived hoax regarding the safety of sugar over the past decade."

J.R. O'Connell told the International Sweetener Colloquium, a meeting sponsored by the Sugar Users Group, that "sugar is safe, and it's time for the industry to answer its critics firmly and accurately."

"We have been the symbolic whipping boy in an ongoing widespread nutritional scandal," O'Connell charged.

O'Connell noted that when the Federation of American Societies for Experimental Biology completed its four year study for the U.S. Food and Drug Administration in 1976, declaring sugar safe, only two scientists in the entire country dissented from the conclusion.

O'Connell said that "criticizing sugar can be a profitable business to food and diet promoters and certain self-appointed consumerists."

These groups disregard the scientific community in their quest for exposure, he said.

In the early days of the sugar hoax, the industry was too cautious and allowed itself to go on for too long without counter-attacking. The industry has come a long way in establishing its credibility, O'Connell said.

By building its scientific information base and establishing its dedication to moderation, it was able to satisfy the scientific community, including the government officials, of its motives.

The sugar industry has the knowledge, O'Connell said, and the industry must counter-punch, and speak out.

Aid debate likely to last decade

By R.C. LONGWORTH
Chicago Tribune

One of the men was named McNamara. Robert Strange McNamara, former industrialist, former defense secretary, former president of the World Bank, still controversial because he led the Pentagon during the Vietnam war, was once really a fervent advocate for aid to the world's poor.

The other man was named McNamara. Richard Timothy McNamara, former California businessman, the current deputy treasury secretary, a spokesman for the Reagan administration's view that private enterprise, not aid, holds the solution to much of the world's poverty.

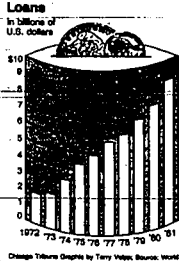

McNamara and McNamara squared off recently at a seminar sponsored by The Brookings Institution in Washington. Their arguments set the tone for a debate over aid and the World Bank that is likely to last through this decade.

Both men agreed that the need for help remains strong, especially among the poorest of the poor nations, what McNamara calls the "Fourth World" — those nations, with a population of more than a billion, where per capita income is less than $70 per year.

The difference lay in how to do the job. McNamara called for increased official aid and a better use of World Bank facilities. "Throughout much, if not all, of the decade, official flows from governments and multilateral institutions must supplement private flows to a greater extent than in the 1970s if the legitimate needs of the developing countries are to be met."

McNamara, on the other hand, said private enterprise and aid to help poor nations than government aid. The best bet, he said, lies in public-private cooperation and especially, in the revival of the U.S. economy as a hungry market for Third World goods: "The greatest contribution the United States can make to developing countries is to have sustained non-inflationary growth in its own economy."

McNamara's argument started from the premise that oil prices will stay high and force the Third World nations, which had trouble supporting themselves in the best of times, to go even more deeply in debt to pay for imports of oil and other necessary goods.

The only way around this, he said, is for these nations to make "a sharp reduction in their imports of oil or other goods." But that would halt their economic growth in its tracks. It would also mean that they would stop importing goods from the West. The United States, for one, sends 40 percent of its exports to the Third World.

That, in turn, would be a severe blow to the West, he said.

"If the world economy is to avoid these penalties," McNamara said, "it is essential that the current account deficits of the oil-importing developing countries be financed at levels — averaging at least $70 billion to $80 billion per year for the next 5 to 10 years — which will permit maintenance of reasonable rates of economic and social advance."

But, he added, this should be seen as money to buy time for the Third World leaders to reshape their economies so they can stand on their own — to increase food production and energy output and to improve efficiency. Much of the needed loan money came from private banks during the 1970s, but McNamara said he doubted this would continue. If only because the amounts are so big and the banks' exposure so great.

For that reason, the World Bank expects private market lending to Third World nations to grow by only 8 percent a year in the decade, compared to 31 percent a year in the 1970s.

That, McNamara said, means more government aid — either bilateral foreign aid or multilateral aid through such agencies as the World Bank.

But there's a hitch, he said. The Western countries are having hard times of their own and are much less willing to give. How can this be solved?

First, McNamara said, the World Bank's available funds should be focused even more on the very poorest countries, through the bank's "soft-loan window," the International Development Association (IDA), which gives interest-free loans to nations that need them.

Second, he said, some nations that have been getting IDA funds are rich enough now that they no longer need them and should become eligible for straightforward interest-bearing World Bank loans.

Third, the bank's ability to borrow should be expanded by the Western nations that support it. At the moment, those nations give no money to the bank. Instead, the promise to make good any loans that default and the bank, backed by this promise, borrows the money on world markets.

So far, McNamara said, the bank in its 35 years has had no defaults. Given this record, he said, the bank should be allowed to expand its borrowing capacity, either through higher commitments or by increasing its 1-to-1 debt-equity rate 2-to-1.

Bankers can't save Laker Air

LONDON (UPI) — Bankers failed Monday to rescue Laker Airways from collapse.

The failure dashed the hopes of an intensely loyal staff and thousands of travelers who crossed the Atlantic that "the people's airline" could be saved.

Financiers had just one day left to raise some $65 million but after 72 hours of non-stop negotiations were forced to admit failure.

Despite "prompt offers of substantial new equity," the bankers scrambling to rescue the airline that pioneered cheap trans-Atlantic fares said they "have regretfully concluded that a recapitalization of Laker Airways is impossible in the time available."

Their chances were slim all along. They had to overcome in three days a financial headache that had frustrated for one year top London financiers attempting to cure it.

But the failure was not from lack of public support.

A victim of competition from the big airlines, the British pound's slump and overcommitted borrowing, Laker collapsed Friday under debts of more than $376 million.

The collapse triggered an unprecedented public response. An estimated $1.85 million was collected in spontaneous public fund-raising.

Almost the entire Laker staff, from airport cleaners to pilots in flying uniform, marched on 10 Downing Street with a petition urging Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher to intervene to save the airline just hours before the bankers' announcement.

Loyal staffers and supporters rallied to try "to save the people's airline," run by the ebullient Sir Freddie Laker, a one-time air mechanic who took on intransigent governments and state airlines in the battle for cheap fares.

One by handed over 30 cents in pocket money. A pop group promised a fund-raising concert at Wembley stadium and pilots said they would keep on flying at welfare payment salaries.

U.S. calls for joint oil effort

CARACAS, Venezuela (UPI) — The United States Monday called for "a new partnership" between rich and poor countries for the development of vast untapped resources of so-called non-conventional oils around the world.

The U.S. Secretary of Energy James B. Edwards made the proposal at the Second International Conference on Heavy Crudes and Tar Sands, which opened Monday and is being attended by some 650 oil experts from 60 industrialized and developing nations.

Edwards urged a "cooperative use of World Bank facilities" and said he was aiming at providing "our expertise to help the developing nations use their own resources for their own and the world's benefit," said Edwards in a speech at the conference.

The new spirit of partnership should move beyond the traditional era in world energy politics," he said.

Edwards also said that his proposal was "not a grand exercise in political rhetoric, and it is not a call for instant action. I want to be careful not to overstate what can be achieved."

"I am looking towards a partnership that will bear fruit and friendship in the future, a partnership of many small but important actions, a partnership founded on mutual respect and a common recognition that no nation on earth can truly achieve energy security unless that partnership is achieved," he added.

Although Edwards did not provide details regarding the form of such a partnership, he indicated that countries involved in that arrangement would pool their experience and technology to develop non-conventional oils.

Federal officers accept bids for Spokane bank merger

SPOKANE (UPI) — Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation officials in Washington, D.C., Monday accepted bids from institutions interested in merging with financially-troubled Fidelity Mutual Savings Bank.

Just how many institutions are interested in merging with Fidelity, the state's second-largest savings bank, was not known.

The selection process is expected to take about a week, according to a spokesman close to the situation who asked not to be named.

He said the FDIC accepted bids to merge with Fidelity Mutual until noon and then would study the interested parties and announce its selection sometime in the future.

The FDIC recently ordered Fidelity to merge with a profitable partner because its reserves had fallen from the standard five per cent of assets to 3.41 per cent.

News of the order became public late last week. Fidelity, with 21 branches in the state, has assets of $702.9 million, including $539.65 million in deposits. But its reserves — its net worth and past profits that are used to help it weather hard times — stand at $24 million.

Income is tied to long-term, low interest home mortgages, making the near-term picture appear to be bleak for Fidelity, which must itself stay in business by borrowing at current prime rates.

State and federal regulators normally consider a "problem" bank to be one with less than five per cent in reserves.

Fidelity Mutual lost $4.7 million in 1980 and $10 million last year.

Bank and federal officials agree the merger is not expected to affect the bank's depositors or borrowers, and operations of Fidelity corporate officials continued on a normal basis Monday.

Each account at Fidelity is insured up to $100,000 by the FDIC, which will consider the cost to the taxpayers in selecting a bid.

Salvador rebels bomb buses

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (UPI) — Leftist guerrillas bombed 16 buses Monday in the worst incursion into the capital in several months and kept up a string of nationwide hit-and-run attacks designed to undermine next month's elections.

A Defense Ministry spokesman said the armed forces were preparing "an operation at a nationwide level to keep the country from becoming engulfed in a crisis," but declined to give details.

The steps of a provincial capital and dozens of other rebel operations in the past week forced the military to take up defensive positions around the Central American nation.

Half the 1,000-man Atlacatl battalion, trained by U.S. Green Berets to ferret out guerrillas, moved into the northeastern city of San Francisco Gotera during the weekend to protect it from rebel attacks.

The other half of the battalion fought Sunday to break a weeklong siege of Usulután, 65 miles east of the capital and El Salvador's fourth largest city.

About 250 army commandos spent the day clearing rebel positions along the road to San Rafael while the others stayed behind to defend the city of 60,000 people against rebel counterattacks, witnesses said.

Roving bands of rebels detonated bundles of dynamite and firebombed 10 buses owned by San Salvador Association of Transport Cooperatives, valued altogether at $300,000, and six buses owned by private companies, an association spokesman said.

The Salvadoran army stepped up patrols around the capital to stop the rampage, which officials called the guerrillas' most serious incursion into the heart of the capital in several months.

Hit and run raids left three soldiers wounded in the town of Aguilares, 18 miles north of San Salvador, and destroyed a back-up electricity substation in San Rafael Cedros, 25 miles to the west, local sources said.

The source said two rebels died in the San Rafael attack and military officials said four others were killed when troops raided a rebel camp three miles from the western city of Santa Ana, El Salvador's second largest city.

Judicial authorities in San Salvador reported 24 political non-combat slayings in the past 24 hours. An estimated 30,000 people have died in three years of political violence lasting El Salvador.

The nation's U.S.-backed ruling junta hopes the March 28 election for a constitutional assembly that will set up rules for 1983 presidential balloting will put the Central American nation on the road to peace.

The leftist guerrillas and their political allies have announced they will boycott the elections and have vowed to disrupt them with violence.

Haig set to rebuke repression

MADRID, Spain (UPI) — Secretary of State Alexander Haig said Monday he expected no real problems in delivering harsh criticism of Warsaw and Moscow for the military repression in Poland at the Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe.

Haig is to speak Tuesday and Moscow and Warsaw have both warned they will not tolerate the United States and its allies to turn the 35-nation conference into a forum for criticism of martial law in Poland.

Haig said he expected everything to "go like clockwork," although he said there could be surprises.

Haig planned to meet West German Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher to discuss strategy for the West before Tuesday's session. Genscher has cautioned against suggestions by some in the American delegation to hold a conference and a week to protest the Polish crackdown and Moscow's backstage role in the affair.

Aides to Haig said privately they do not know if the Polish delegate — who by coincidence will be chairman at the reopening of the conference — will try to filibuster to delay Haig's remarks.

"We won't permit a filibuster," the aides said. "We have other business and other meetings."

But if Haig is set back he will have a ready audience for his remarks — he has scheduled a news conference for Tuesday afternoon.

Haig also met with Spanish Foreign Minister Jose Pedro Perez Llorca and Prime Minister Leopoldo Calvo Sotelo.

In visiting Perez Llorca at the foreign ministry, the 17th century "Palacio de Santa Cruz" in the Old City, Haig remarked that "a few surprises are in order if not inevitable."

Later, when visiting Calvo Sotelo at the elegant 18th century Moncloa palace, Haig was asked what he meant. "Life is full of surprises," he joked. "We expect everything to go like clockwork."

But his aides said they did not know how the presentation would go. It is possible that Poland's representative in the chairman seat, Deputy Foreign Minister Jozef Wlejski, would flourish the order of speakers to delay Haig.

In his meetings with the Spanish officials, Haig stressed that the United States will push for NATO's swift ratification of Spain's entry into the alliance.

32 die in Tokyo hotel fire; sprinkler system incomplete

TOKYO (UPI) — A sprinkler system had not yet been installed on the top floors of a 500-room hotel where a pre-dawn fire killed at least 32 people and injured dozens of others, including two Americans, fire officials said Monday.

The fire, which began at 3:39 a.m., raged unchecked for eight hours through the two upper floors of the 10-story New Japan Hotel in a fashionable downtown area of nightclubs, offices and hotels. It was the worst hotel fire in the city of Tokyo since World War II.

Most of the 350 hotel guests were asleep when an employee discovered the blaze. Three victims trapped in their burning rooms jumped to their deaths, police said. At least 29 other people died in their rooms or in hospitals and first aid stations.

Police confirmed a total of 32 people were killed and 28 others were injured, many of them seriously. An undisclosed number of guests in the 500-room hotel remained unaccounted for.

The fire was Japan's second worst hotel disaster since World War II. In November 1980, a fire at the Kawaji Resort Hotel in Tochigi prefecture north of Tokyo killed 45 people.

Among those confirmed dead were nine Taiwanese and six Koreans, including a former cabinet minister. The survivors included two Americans, Sharon Paff, wife of a U.S. Air Force officer stationed in Okinawa, reportedly jumped from her ninth floor room and landed on a fourth floor terrace. Hospital officials said she is in stable condition with fractures of both arms and legs and her pelvis.

Malcolm Kravitz, 33, of San Francisco, was treated for smoke inhalation and is in "no danger," hospital officials said.

Police said an "investigation is under way" to determine the cause of the fire, which gutted the ninth and tenth floors soon after it was discovered.

A Tokyo fire department official said the hotel, which was built in 1960, was not equipped with fire sprinklers as required by law.

"The fire department twice pressed the hotel management last year to install the sprinkler system," he said. About six months ago officials ordered them to comply within one year.

A hotel spokesman said installation of the sprinkler system, which could have contained the fire, was "ongoing." At the time of the fire, the top two floors, which were destroyed in the blaze, were without sprinklers, the fire official said.

Susumu Fukunaga, a hotel employee working the overnight shift, discovered the blaze when he heard a man cry "Help! Help!" from inside a room on the ninth floor.

Fukunaga opened the door with a pass-key but the chain-lock was attached from inside the room, which was filled with smoke and flames.

The guest inside, registered as Stephen Dickier of Britain, was among those unaccounted for, a British Embassy spokesman said.

The South Korean Embassy said Kim Tai Dong, a former communications minister and later health and social affairs minister under the late President Park Chung-hee, was among the dead.

World in brief

New goals set for Poland

WARSAW, Poland (UPI) — The martial law government published a detailed program Monday setting goals for Poland's economic and political recovery, but officials warned that shortages and production cutbacks were unavoidable for the time being.

The government program, which outlined about two dozen tasks for various ministers over the next few months, emphasized increased economic cooperation with the East bloc and more self-sufficiency in industry and agriculture.

A government announcement said the program is designed to "regain Poland's economic sovereignty, limit production's excessive dependence on imports and re-orient industry to make broader use of Polish resources."

But officials speaking at a meeting of provincial governors and mayors in Warsaw predicted more shortages and production cutbacks, Warsaw Radio said.

Minister of Domestic Trade and Services Zenon Komender said industrial output would drop 10 percent during the first quarter of 1982, compared with the same period last year.

Komender said supplies of meat and meat products during the first quarter would amount to 388,000 tons, only enough to cover the present ration system.

At the same meeting, Deputy Interior Minister Boguslaw Stachura said riots Jan. 30 in Gdansk were "provoked by subversion circles from the West and their supporters."

But he said the country was otherwise completely calm.

U.S. recovers live missile

SCHRAMBERG, West Germany (UPI) — American explosives experts recovered a live Sidewinder missile Monday from the floor of a Black Forest barn and safely dismantled the warhead, a U.S. Air Force spokesman said.

Arms experts recovered the sophisticated air-to-air missile, which dropped accidentally from a U.S. F15 aircraft last week, from rocky soil beneath a 12-foot pile of hay and dismantled the warhead which contained 8 pounds of TNT, said Capt. Victor Andrijauskas.

Military personnel worked all day Sunday to remove the missile from a 14-foot hole beneath a 16-foot barn overlooking Schramberg, 60 miles southwest of Stuttgart, after a 7-day search.

"We have dismantled the warhead and determined it never armed itself and there was no danger of an explosion," said Andrijauskas.

Explosives experts from the U.S. air base at Spangdahlen packed the 10-foot missile and moved it to Bitburg air base.

China accelerates purge

PEKING (UPI) — Vice Chairman Deng Xiaoping's monthlong disappearance does not mean he has fallen from power and his purge of officials is being pursued, Chinese and Western officials said Monday.

A Western diplomat said Deng's crackdown against his ideological enemies and corrupt or inefficient officials is "accelerating."

Deng last appeared in public Jan. 12 in Peking and although there still has been no official announcement of his exact whereabouts or the reason for the long absence, Chinese officials

Costa Rica asks for help

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (UPI) — Luis Alberto Monge, elected president in a landslide victory, led a vigil Monday at the San Jose cathedral to pray for an end to economic woes gnawing at Central America's showcase democracy.

"We do not ask for arms or military aid, but urgent financial aid from democratic countries to cope with the most urgent problems," Monge said in an interview published in the Paris newspaper Le Monde a day after elections.

The paper quoted a 65-year-old liberal democrat as calling for financial aid "to achieve an economic recovery so as to prevent our country from being swept into the whirlpool of violence."

To be sworn in on May 8, the president-elect said he feared outgoing President Rodrigo Carazo may "let things slide during the interim."

In the interview, Monge said he would build up "a strong popular pressure might do everything so that things shall not reach such an extreme juncture, because we are respectful of democratic rules."

Governor Evans, Please Don't Sell Out Idaho's Future.

Governor Evans, the Right to Work bill — H.B. 523 — will be coming to your desk any day. Responding to the will of the overwhelming majority of Idahoans, the Legislature passed the freedom of choice bill.

Now it's up to you.

The facts are clear. Right to Work would help Idaho's sinking economy, while granting freedom of choice to all Idaho workers.

Let the workers decide for themselves whether or not a union is in their best interest. Why should an out-of-state union boss be able to dictate terms of employment — or even if there is a job — in Idaho?

It is common knowledge that you accepted $4,500 from the Steelworkers Union for your campaign. And, you publicly took a bag with $6,000 cash from a union boss recently.

Please, don't let their "campaign contributions" influence your decision on such an important issue.

Don't put Idaho's economic future on the auction block.

Show the cynical union elite that the Governor of Idaho is not for sale.

Please Governor, sign the Right to Work bill into law:
