President will deny 'new Cuba'

By New York Daily News

WASHINGTON — President Reagan unveiled a multimillion-dollar economic aid plan for the Caribbean Basin Wednesday. He vowed the United States would do "whatever is prudent and necessary" to block the rise of "new Cubas" in troubled Central America.

Against the backdrop of a worsening civil war in El Salvador, the president called for a one-way trade free zone in the region for the next two years, direct U.S. aid and new incentives for private investment. The plan, which includes a $350 million request for supplemental economic assistance, would raise the 1982 total of American aid to Central America to $225 million, almost double last year's figure.

In his address to the Organization of American States, Reagan also backed up his economic strategy with a warning to Cuba and the Soviet Union, announcing that he will ask Congress for an additional $80 million in military aid for the region. This would bring this year's total to $182 million.

Reagan raised the possibility of cooperative military action under the terms of the 1947 Rio treaty, but aides said that no Latin American nation had asked that the treaty be invoked and reiterated that there were "absolutely no plans" to send U.S. combat troops into the region to quell the violence.

"Nowhere in its sordid history have the promises of communism been redeemed," Reagan told about 500 Latin American diplomats and other officials crowded into the ornate Hall of the Americas here.

"Everywhere it has exploited and aggravated temporary economic suffering to seize power and then to institutionalize economic deprivation and restrict human rights."

"If we do not act promptly and decisively in defense of freedom, new Cubas will rise from the ruins of today's conflicts," he said soberly. "Let our friends and our adversaries understand that we will do whatever is prudent and necessary to ensure the peace and security of the Caribbean area."

RONALD REAGAN

Congressional leaders of both parties predicted the plan would face stiff resistance from lawmakers already buckling under Reagan budget cuts. The plan is expected to be delivered to Capitol Hill within two weeks.

Sen. Charles Percy, R-Ill., chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, called the proposal the most significant economic initiative since the Marshall Plan to rebuild Europe after World War II.

Nicaragua's new ambassador to the United States, Francisco Filallos Navarro, who gained near-immediate visibility in Washington when he received a stinging letter from President Reagan, rebuking his government, dismissed the Caribbean Basin initiative as "nothing new."

The overall program is supported by Canada, Mexico and Venezuela and is designed to protect what the president calls a "vital strategic and commercial artery for the U.S." Nearly half of America's trade, two-thirds of its imported oil and over half of its imported strategic materials pass through the Panama Canal or the Gulf of Mexico.

Revenue bonding

Industrial bill gains overwhelming support from state House

By BRUCE HAMMOND
Times-News writer

BOISE — Industrial revenue bonds received overwhelming support Wednesday in the House. The measure passed 61-9.

The plan, which includes a constitutional amendment and enabling legislation, would allow tax-exempt bonds to be issued to stimulate industrial development.

Both new and existing businesses would qualify for the bonding, except for most retail and energy-generating firms. A two-thirds affirmative vote in the Senate still is needed before the proposal would appear on the November ballot.

"This bill is written so you won't have competition with existing businesses," said Rep. Steve Antone, R-Rupert. "There won't be cases of the Kmart displacing hometown businesses, but it will help keep Idaho money within the state, rather than being invested outside."

Revenue bonding will encourage "select industries, not huge paper mills or huge anything," to move to Idaho communities, claimed another supporter, Rep. Michael Gwartzney, R-Boise.

How local lawmakers voted

Only three of the Magic Valley's 12 representatives opposed legislation allowing industrial revenue bonding. It passed the House, 60 to 6, and was forwarded to the Senate on Wednesday.

Opposing the measure were John Brooks, R-Gooding; Gordon Hollifield, R-Jerome; and Tom Silvers, R-Twin Falls.

"This is not a new path," he said. "And even though we're the last in the nation to embark on this trail, we have benefited from seeing what has gone on before."

But opponents criticized that logic, citing numerous reasons why industrial-revenue bonding will hurt the state's economy. But no opponent was surprised by the final vote, admitting the bill's supporters had conducted productive lobbying.

Tax-exempt financing drained the national treasury to the tune of $38 billion last year, resulting in a budget impossible to balance and subsequent inflation, said Rep. Rachel Gilbert, R-Boise.

"It comes down to the question of whether taxpayers should subsidize business, because that's what revenue bonds are: welfare to businesses, with taxpayers picking up the burden," he said.

Gilbert also noted that Treasury Secretary Donald Regan has requested curtailment of revenue bonding "and abolishment by 1984."

Revenue bonding is a relatively low priority for businesses that are considering moves to Idaho, and therefore, it is not a strong enticement.

Military aid draws loudest opposition to Reagan's plan

WASHINGTON — After crafting his Caribbean plan for maximum appeal at home and abroad, President Reagan faced a mixed reaction in Congress.

Leaders of both parties welcomed his emphasis Wednesday on area-wide economic development. Some predicted enactment of his new $350 million aid package. But most drew a sharp line between economic and military aid — especially military aid to El Salvador.

There were gaps in the reaction. Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., — one of the most sensitive to the domestic budget battle — made no immediate comment.

"It's going to be very tough to come up with the money, but it bluntly," said Sen. Larry Pressler, R-S.D. "My constituents are getting touchy about foreign aid."

Sen. Charles H. Percy, R-Ill., chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, predicted "strong bipartisan support" and promised early hearings. The president's approach, he said, sent a strong message to Caribbean nations that "the United States cares about their economic and social development and intends to play a constructive role."

Among the strongest positive reactions was that of House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass. He judged that Reagan was "on the right road" and that the program of aid and trade would be approved by the House.

But O'Neill was among those who argued against more military aid not to the beleaguered junta that the administration supports in El Salvador.

The administration had tried to anticipate the mixed reaction Reagan treated separately the themes of area-wide economic development and increased security assistance, the latter including denunciations of the governments of Cuba and Nicaragua.

It also left a bow to prospective reactions in Congress. Reagan obviously wanted to avoid offending Mexico and Canada, both of which contribute regional aid but are more tolerant than the United States of leftist expansion.

A U.S. diplomat suggested last night that the administration, with the Caribbean Basin plan, had created a fallback position in case its policy falls in El Salvador.

If El Salvador falls to extremists of left or right, he said, the United States would have in place a compelling system to isolate it and other unacceptable governments in the hemisphere.

Whether that argument can be made to Congress is doubtful, he acknowledged, for making it too soon could contribute to an extremist takeover in El Salvador.

But for the first time, he said, "we are developing an alternative policy that is sensible in the circumstances." Reagan's immediate problem, in any case, was with congressional reaction to the plan as he announced it. Responses ranged across party lines.

Soviet rocket may have fallen in Idaho

By United Press International and The Times-News

BURLEY — As law-enforcement authorities in the Magic Valley scrambled without success Wednesday to confirm reports that debris from a Soviet rocket had fallen in Idaho, other sightings of the object placed it as far away as southern Utah.

In Cassia County, Sheriff Ray Mitchell said his deputies responded to numerous reports Tuesday night of sightings and landings of the debris.

One report indicated the rocket had fallen in the area where Idaho, Utah and Nevada meet, near the tiny Idaho community of Almo. Other reports said the debris had fallen near Mount Harrison, outside of Albion.

Mitchell said residents did report spotting the bright object in the sky, and to some people, it may have appeared to have landed to the south — beyond the next hill.

"I've talked to our deputy down there, and he says it was south,

UPI
Soviet 'space junk' soared over the Northwest Tuesday night

Mitchell said. "For all we know, that could mean New Mexico."

Still other reports placed the rocket in the far eastern portion of the state, near Montpelier.

"It's like a three-ring circus around here," said Sharon Kutz, a Bear Lake County sheriff's deputy. "We've had lots of calls, and we've checked them all out, but as near as we can tell at this time, it's just completely unfounded."

"We've tried to follow up on all the leads," Kutz said. "We've talked to all the people who reported the sightings. Everybody is saying, 'It looked like it landed right down here,' but as near as we can tell, it was in the sky, not on the ground."

"You know, at night, distance and depth are so distorted it's hard to tell. It probably looked closer than it really was."

Deputies with the Minaloka, Jerome, Twin Falls and Blaine county sheriff's departments also received numerous calls about the object, but they could not confirm the landing of any debris.

Officials of the North American Air Defense Command, which lost track of the object over the Twin Falls area, said they believed the object broke up and disintegrated over the largely unpopulated Great Basin near where Idaho, Utah and Nevada join.

Carol Spackman, a teacher in a two-room schoolhouse in Park Valley, Utah, just south of the area, said that three of her students' families watched the burning object move south over the horizon.

And sightings of the object were reported to police agencies as far south as Salina, in central Utah.

No reports, however, were filed with the FAA Flight Service Center at Cedar City in southern Utah or with the National Park Service office at the Glen Canyon National Recreation Area, which straddles the Utah-Colorado line. No sightings were reported in Arizona.

Busing a marathon battle

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate, having defeated one of the most sweeping anti-busing measures it has ever considered, met into the early morning hours today as liberals waged a last-ditch fight against such legislation.

The senators voted 49-42 Wednesday night against the drastic amendment that would have prohibited any court, school board or other agency of federal and state governments from ordering busing for school desegregation purposes.

Senate Republican leader Howard Baker kept the Senate in a marathon session in an attempt to burn out attempts by liberals led by Sen. Lowell Weicker, D-Conn., to stop enactment of another less stringent anti-busing amendment attached to an authorization bill.

Pope marks Lenten season

ROME (UPI) — Pope John Paul II smudged the foreheads of cardinals and choir boys with ashes Wednesday to usher in the penitential season of Lent.

"From dust you came, to dust you will return," the pope repeated softly in Latin as he rubbed black ashes in the form of a cross on the foreheads of participants of a special mass in Rome's 5th century Santa Sabina Basilica.

The phrase, which recalls the passage from the book of Genesis where God created man from the dust of the Earth, calls on Christians to remember their mortality and to put aside earthly pleasures.

Martial law averts WW III?

WARSAW, Poland (UPI) — Polish military chief Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski accused the United States Wednesday of pressuring its allies into condemning martial law and said the measures may have prevented World War III.

In a two hour and five minute address to the first session of the Communist Party central committee under martial law, Jaruzelski also announced that 2,000 party officials had been purged since December and said continued resistance to the regime prevented a planned easing of restrictions.

"It will not be possible to lift restrictions to the extent we intended," Jaruzelski said. "Tensions, excesses and leaflet campaigns are not conducive to this."

Watt delays contempt move

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Interior Secretary James Watt averted a second contempt of Congress move from a House panel Wednesday by assuring irritated lawmakers his new congressional relations policy would not hinder their investigations.

Watt still faces a likely contempt citation from the House Energy Committee in an unrelated matter concerning a Canadian issue.

"We may have made some progress here. I certainly hope so," said Rep. Toby Moffett, D-Conn., chairman of the House environment, energy and natural resources subcommittee.

Watt said, "I think we can work it out, but I'm not giving you a blank check to have anybody you want anytime" from his department to respond to congressional questions.

Moslem hijackers surrender

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Twelve heavily armed Moslem extremists holding 105 hostages on a Kuwait Airways Boeing 707 surrendered peacefully early Thursday, ending a 10-hour drama marked by two gunbattles that left one person wounded.

It was the seventh hijacking by Lebanese Moslem Shites in a bid to find their missing leader, Imam Musa Sadr, who disappeared in 1979 on a trip to Libya.

Shortly after 1 a.m. (4 p.m. MST Wednesday), the gunmen allowed 105 hostages to the plane and take the 105 hostages off Beirut Airport officials said. The officials said the Lebanese army took the hijackers into custody.

The end of the hijack came little more than an hour after a shootout between the gunmen and Lebanese army soldiers.

Idaho flooding subsides

BOISE (UPI) — The danger of major flooding in Idaho has passed — at least through the weekend, National Weather Service officials in Boise said Wednesday.

"All of the rivers we were worried about are receding rapidly," said meteorologist Greg Flat Wednesday afternoon. "We are predicting dry weather through at least the weekend."

Meanwhile, Idaho National Guard engineers expected to finish by nightfall Wednesday their efforts to replace two knocked-out Washington County bridges — one by a rain-swollen creek, the other in an attempt to replace the first.

Lennon, Ono win Grammy

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — John Lennon and Yoko Ono's "Double Fantasy" was named album of the year and versatile rhythm master Quincy Jones picked up five awards including producer of the year in an emotional Grammys telecast Wednesday night.

Miss Ono was crying and clutching her heart as she walked on stage with her son, Sean, to a standing ovation.

"I think John is with us here today," she said. "Thank you very much."

"We may have made some progress here. I certainly hope so," said Rep. Toby Moffett, D-Conn., chairman of the House environment, energy and natural resources subcommittee.

Watt said, "I think we can work it out, but I'm not giving you a blank check to have anybody you want anytime" from his department to respond to congressional questions.

In December 1980, "Bette Davis Eyes," written by Jackie DeShannon and Donna Weiss and sung by Kim Carnes, beat out "Starting Over" for the top Grammy as record of the year and also was named song of the year.

Miss DeShannon, a pop star in the 1960s, told reporters she had recorded the song on an album eight years ago.

"Perhaps the song was ahead of its time," she added, "but the latest production couldn't have been better."

Double winners included country singer Dolly Parton, ageless vocalist Lena Horne, composer Mike Post, jazz singer Al Jarreau, the Manhattan Transfer and the rock group The Police.

Jones' five Grammys matched the accomplishments of Christopher Cross last year and the Bee Gees in 1978, but fell one short of the Grammy record of six set by Roger Miller in 1965.

Cross was nominated five times again this year for "Arthur's Theme," but did not win any. Another big non-winner was Lionel Richie, who was nominated for six awards for "Endless Love."

Miss Parton won for "9 to 5," for best country song and best country female performance, but lost out for song of the year.

The Manhattan Transfer won for best jazz group performance for "Until I Met You" and best pop vocal performance for "Boy From New York City."

The Police won Grammys for best rock group performance for "Don't Stand So Close to Me" and best rock instrumental performance for the song "Behind My Camel."

Watt says $9,000 bill in error

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Almost $9,000 of government money was misused last year when Interior Secretary James Watt and his wife excluded the public from a national historic mansion to entertain guests there, the U.S. comptroller general said Wednesday.

A General Accounting Office report estimated that $8,842.20 was improperly diverted from Interior Department appropriations and from the Cooperating Association Fund of the National Park Service for two private, catered functions at the Custis-Lee Mansion overlooking the nation's capital.

A Watt spokesman said the report was "in error."

The mansion, once owned by Martha Washington's family and later by Robert E. Lee's family, is a large, antebellum structure on the hill above Arlington National Cemetery. It has been designated a national historic site and is a popular tourist attraction.

Rep. Edward Markey, D-Mass., chairman of a House Interior oversight subcommittee, scheduled a hearing Friday on the report, and said: "Since GAO indicated Secretary Watt broke the law, I expect him to come to the hearing with checkbook in hand, ready to reimburse the federal Treasury."

But Watt already has refused to appear and labeled the hearing a "publicity stunt," according to House staff sources. They also said Watt forbids his staff members to be interviewed by subcommittee investigators.

Watt's spokesman Douglas Baldwin said: "We carefully researched the propriety and procedures for those events. We are confident everything was done properly and legally. If the GAO came to any other conclusion, then the GAO was in error."

Bond

ment, said Rep. Tom Silvers, R-Twin Falls.

Instead, Silvers said, other resources that are limited in Idaho, including inadequate electrical power, transportation, labor and schools, may continue to keep businesses away.

Industrial revenue bonds also may be impossible to sell if the only security that is the building and land of the proposed facility, he said.

As an example, Silvers cited the Idaho Housing Agency, which asked the state to deduct the sales-tax fund as security against bonds for low-income housing projects.

"What if these groups can't sell these bonds without more collateral?" he asked. "I've heard a lot of talk that the state pension funds could be tapped. Are they going to come back to us in a couple years asking for backing for these bonds?"

Industrial revenue bonds also divide people into rich and poor classes, claimed Rep. Gordon Hollifield, R-Terome. That happens because the low-interest bonds are attractive only to high-income people seeking the tax-exempt earnings.

"The bonds offer high net yields to the wealthy because of the tax break. That's why they buy them," he said. "But low- to moderate-wage earners only receive the 10 to 15 percent face yield of the bonds because of their lower tax brackets."

"This means these people pick up the tab for the tax breaks to the rich, either in the form of tax increases or through inflation," Hollifield said.

But Antone said the additional corporate, wage and sales taxes from the new businesses attracted by revenue bonds will far exceed any loss in state revenue from the tax exemption offered bond purchasers.

"The money will circulate, and the economy will be helped in this time of recession," he said.

Gwartney challenged arguments that revenue bonding increases the national deficit and causes more inflation.

"Spending causes the deficit," he said. "If we want to cure the national deficit, we have to curb our spending."

"Of the $400 billion raised last year through financial transactions, only $40 billion of that came from tax-exempt means, and only $1 billion was through industrial-revenue bonding."

Gwartney also said the proposed legislation specifically prohibits any pledge of public funds as collateral for the bonds.

"If a business financed this way should fail, only the people who purchased the bonds would be left holding the bag."

Public TV bill to House

BOISE (UPI) — An attempt to reconsider a bill aimed to wipe out appropriations for local programming at two of Idaho's three public television stations was defeated Wednesday.

JOHN PEAVEY closing opportunities

The Senate would have reconsidered the bill — and its opponents would have had another chance to amend or kill it — if Sen. Edith Miller Klein, R-Boise, had not reversed her vote. She changed from "aye" to "no" and the motion failed 17-18.

The bill, which would give a $125,000 supplemental appropriation to the state-supported public broadcasting network, but require the downgrading of two stations to "satellite" status, now goes to the House.

Senators passed the bill 22-12 Tuesday, but Sen. John Peavey, D-Carey, served notice he might bring it for reconsideration, and the bill was held at the Senate president's desk.

several minutes of debate, the motion was defeated.

"There's a world of opportunity (through public television) we're closing if we don't reconsider this vote," Peavey said.

Sen. C.E. "Cuck" Blyeu, D-Pocatello, said attaching mandates of major state policy to supplemental appropriations was a "bad precedent" for lawmakers to set.

The bill's main sponsor, Sen. Dean Van Engelen, R-Boise, said one major local-programming station should be retained and its programs should be fed to the two other stations, which would essentially be reduced to mechanical relay outposts.

Van Engelen said the stations at Moscow and Pocatello originate very little local programming. He said the measure would have little impact on the stations' total programming and would save the state a lot of money in the long run.

'Rebellious' 60 mph bill dies

House turns thumbs down on Tibbitts' plan

BOISE (UPI) — The House voted down a proposal Wednesday that would have raised the speed limit on Idaho's four-lane highways to 60 miles per hour.

Rep. Wayne Tibbitts, R-Rigby, urged the House to "get a little rebellious" against the federal government and do away with the 55 mph standard on the state's major highways.

But representatives defeated the measure on a 28-41 vote after Rep. Marguerite McLaughlin, D-Orofino, said changing the law would force the U.S. Transportation Department to withhold construction funding from the state. She said the state could lose up to $60 million in one year.

"We either do (what the federal government says) or we get the ax," Tibbitts complained. "We should show a little courage and show our rights that have been denied, and return them to us."

Tibbitts said 55 mph is "too slow for us, especially in the West."

"This would be a little piece of liberty for each of us, and more of us would be driving legally," Tibbitts said.

Tibbitts said he was told by one lawmaker in his area that officers don't normally write speeding tickets for people who drive at less than 60 mph. He also said 60 mph is a "safe" speed and does not result in excess fuel consumption.

"All you have to do is get out there and set your cruise control and relax," he said. "Sixty miles per hour is a comfortable speed."

Mrs. McLaughlin said setting the speed limit above the federal 55 mph standard would mean the state could not certify it is enforcing the speed limit on its highways. That would give the government no other option but to comply with the federal law and deny the state any road construction funds, she said.

Rep. Michael Strasser, R-Nampa, contended the government would not withhold the funding because of President Reagan's New Federalism. He said the state should take the initiative and set its own standards "and not let a bunch of clowns and bureaucrats do it for us."

But Rep. Martin Trillhaase, R-Idaho Falls, who last year backed legislation to raise Idaho's speed limit to 70 mph, said it was too risky to fight the federal government on the issue — especially for only a 5 mph change.

"We will lose construction funds if we alter it," Trillhaase said. "I wonder if it's really worth fighting about. Most people aren't driving 55 anyway."

Inverted rate bill held for hearing

BOISE (UPI) — A bill to outlaw the inverted rate schedule for residential electric service was put in a holding pattern Wednesday.

The House State Affairs Committee decided it wanted to hear more testimony on the issue.

The committee voted Tuesday to send the bill to the House floor with a "do pass" recommendation, but members decided Wednesday to schedule another hearing Friday to hear from Washington Water Power Co. and Idaho Power Co. officials.

Rep. Walter Little, R-New Plymouth, said the bill would continue "in its way to the House's final reading calendar," but he said the committee could ask that the floor vote be delayed if the measure reached that point before Friday.

The bill's sponsor, Rep. Gary Montgomery, R-Boise, was one of several committee members who asked the committee chairman, Rep. George Danielson, R-Cambridge, to schedule further hearings.

But Montgomery said Wednesday that didn't mean he wanted to pull back the bill. He said he only wanted to hear more testimony and may consider amending the measure if necessary.

The bill would ban the inverted rate schedule for residential electric service throughout the state. Idaho Power Co. has protested the schedule, which was imposed upon the utility last year by the Idaho Public Utilities Commission. But the bill also would apply to Washington Water Power Co., which requested inverted rates be applied to its northern Idaho service area.

"My first conviction is that I am still opposed to inverted rates, at least as it applies to the area I represent," Montgomery said. "But in the last two or three days I have become concerned that at least we ought to ask Washington Water Power to at least explain to us why they asked for inverted rates before we finally act on this bill."

Montgomery and several other supporters of the bill have said the inverted rate schedule discriminates against owners of all-electric homes, whose bills went up when the schedule took effect.

Cities hit by WPPSS seek help

BOISE (UPI) — A legislative committee demanded Wednesday that federal and regional agencies help save five city-owned Idaho utilities from the projected financial impact of the termination of two nuclear plants in Washington state.

The House Revenue and Taxation Committee voted unanimously to introduce a memorial charging that the cities were "coerced" by the Bonneville Power Administration to sign agreements several years ago to help sponsor the two partially constructed plants.

Washington Public Power Supply System plants No. 4 and 5 have been "marked for demolition because of cost overruns and financing problems."

The memorial said the BPA used "grossly inaccurate" power-use projection figures in convincing the municipalities that they needed to join the projects to ensure adequate power supplies through the rest of the century.

Rep. Steve Antone, R-Rupert, chairman of the committee, sponsored the memorial, which received backing from the Association of Idaho Cities.

"The intent of the memorial is to ask the federal agencies involved to sit down post-haste with these (city-owned) utilities and try to come up with a solution to their problems," said Martin Peterson, executive director of the cities' group.

Peterson told the committee the liability facing the five cities — Rupert, Heyburn, Burley, Rupert and Idaho Falls — from the impending termination of the plants at Satsop and Hanford "could be as high as $50 million or greater."

The five cities own about 5.5 percent of the two plants — the construction of which already has cost several billion dollars, Peterson said.

The memorial calls upon President Reagan, the U.S. Energy Department, the BPA and the Northwest Power Planning Council to investigate the causes of the projects' troubles and the problems facing Idaho cities and electric cooperatives with a stake in the plants, and to come up with a solution.

"These cities probably would not have become involved if it had not been for the projected power load figures supplied by the BPA," Peterson said.

He said BPA told the cities power demand would climb 7 percent a year, but in reality it has increased about 1.5 percent annually.

Evans signs state tax bill

BOISE (UPI) — Gov. John Evans signed into law Wednesday a bill conforming the state tax code with recent changes made in the federal tax code.

The State Revenue and Tax Commission had requested state taxpayers to hold off filing their returns until the law was signed.

The conformity law will cost the state an estimated $3 million this year and $9 million next year in lost revenues, the governor said. But Evans added the tax cuts adopted to conform Idaho tax rules to the Reagan administration's Economic Recovery Act of 1981 should also stimulate the state's economy, offsetting most or perhaps all of the loss.

"We're anticipating a much smaller reduction in revenues, perhaps not any loss at all," Evans said.

The changes in state tax law includes matching new federal accelerated depreciation schedules, exempting interest from all-savers certificates, and other adjustments.

Merger proposal sails through House

BOISE (UPI) — A bill to transfer part of the Idaho Law Enforcement Department to the Transportation Department sailed through the House 60-8 Wednesday.

The 88-page measure, now on its way to the Senate, was approved by the House after Rep. John Sessions, R-Driggs, described its main features in a three-page written speech. There was no other debate.

Most primarily transportation-related programs now under supervision of the Law Enforcement Department would be shifted to the Transportation Department, including the ports-of-entry program and the Motor Vehicles Division.

The Idaho State Police and the state's criminal investigation programs would remain in the Law Enforcement Department.

Biennial session bill postponed

BOISE — A vote in the House on a proposed constitutional amendment to return the Legislature to biennial sessions has been postponed until Monday.

The plan to abolish mandatory yearly sessions had been scheduled for vote Wednesday.

"We had several absentees this afternoon, and when you're seeking a two-thirds margin, you want to get all the votes you can," said Rep. Vard Chabrun, R-Albion, the co-sponsor of the measure.

In order to be placed on the ballot, a constitutional amendment must pass by a two-thirds majority of the full House and Senate — 47 votes in the House and 24 in the Senate — regardless of how many legislators are present at the time of voting.

Biennial sessions not the way to go

Rep. Vard Chaburn's proposal to have the Legislature meet every other year sounds like a good idea on the surface.

But in reality, it would create more problems than lawmakers think they have now. Furthermore, it would tend to concentrate power in the hands of a few individuals, something nobody in Idaho could stomach.

Chaburn's proposal would require two constitutional amendments, one changing the Legislature to biennial sessions, the other increasing legislators' terms from two to four years. The State Board of Examiners and the Joint Finance and Appropriations Committee would gain responsibility and power under his plan.

The Albion Republican complains that the state spends $1 billion every year to bring lawmakers to Boise. He says further that because of this annual access, state agency requests for funds have increased.

But those reasons, while they make good arguments, are not compelling reasons to change Idaho's legislative system.

There are many imperfections in the system. But lawmakers could become more efficient if they did a better job of policing themselves and their procedures. There are too many bills introduced every session, many of them frivolous, some of them inane and some that are downright stupid.

Take the bill defeated Wednesday in the House to raise the speed limit from 55 to 60 mph. How many times has this issue been raised? How much time has been wasted debating it and voting on it? Emotion, not common sense, is the standard applied to too many issues.

If the states are to assume more power and responsibility under President Ronald Reagan's New Federalism, they're going to find it tougher — not easier — to legislate, to budget, to mandate, to regulate.

Critics are fond of joking that nobody's safe when the Legislature is in session. But we say: Better that they are there, in full public view, so we can watch what goes on.

He paid debt, right?

Justice for all?

Take the case of Jimmy Lee Smith, the guy who gunned down a policeman in the celebrated "Onion Field" case in California in 1963. He was convicted not once, but twice of the murder and sentenced to death. But when that state's death penalty was declared unconstitutional in 1972, Smith was sentenced to life in prison.

Tuesday, Smith, after 20 years behind bars — and despite a prosecutor's plea that the man remains dangerous — walked out of Soledad Prison a free man. He won parole.

Perhaps the reformers among us would say that 20 years behind bars is penalty enough. They might even support parole for Smith's accomplice in the murder — after all, fair is fair.

If that balances the ledger, then the reformers have a pretty wretched view of the value of a human life.

GOP needs a rising black star

© Los Angeles Times Syndicate

The hardest thing for the Reagan administration to find is a "qualified" black person to appoint to an important position in the government. By "qualified," we mean somebody who is against busing, job-training programs, welfare, food stamps, government-subsidized housing, as well as equal-opportunity litigation.

But when the administration finds a black who's willing to buy the whole conservative package, he's welcomed into the government with open arms.

I don't want to brag, but I know one, and all it goes well he could become a rising star in the Republican Party. His name is Thomas Jefferson III, and I ran into him in Brooks Brothers where he was being fitted for a suit.

"How goes the civil rights battle?" I asked. "I'm not into civil rights any more," Thomas told me. "Here's my new business." He handed me a card.

It read, "Thomas Jefferson III, Chairman, Black Citizens for the B-1 Bomber." "That's a heavy title," I said. "What do you do?" "Anything they ask me to." "Who do you mean by they?" "The Republican Party."

"I thought you were a Democrat." "I used to be until I decided there was no future in it. There are too many blacks in the Democratic Party, and there's no opportunity there. But if you're a black Republican you can write your own ticket. There are so few of us that when they find one, they can't do enough for you."

"Such as?" "Well I'm particularly in demand for Republican fund raisers. Not only don't I have to pay $1,000 for dinner, but they always sit me on the dais. When I was a Democrat, I was lucky to get a seat near the kitchen door. You know when they introduce the head table and the Master of Ceremonies asks everyone to hold their applause? Well when they introduce me the audience can't contain themselves, and they start clapping right away. I get standing ovations for just taking a bow."

"That must be a great ego trip." "You can't imagine how many people want to take me to lunch at the Metropolitan and University Clubs. I turn down nine invitations for every one I accept. All my host has to say is 'This is Thomas Jefferson III — he's black,' and you'd think I was Robert Redford. I even get to play golf at the best country clubs. When I was a Democrat I had to wait hours to tee off at a public course."

"I can see you in demand as a guest," I said. "But how do you make a living?" "Speaking at business meetings. You can't imagine how many corporations are desperate for a black speaker to fill out their program." "What do you tell them?" "The same old thing the white speakers do. I attack big government, welfare cheats, social programs, and regulations that are stilling business. The only difference is when a black person says it they like it twice as much. "When I was a Democrat, nobody asked me to speak. They were looking for a Jesse Jackson, or an Andy Young, or a Julian Bond or a Benjamin Hooks, and the Democrats always expected them to speak for nothing. But Republicans know if they want a black speaker they have to pay for him." "You're on to something, Tom," I said in admiration. "You found out, as a black, where the money is."

"I'm just killing time until I get the right government appointment. They're going to have to come to me soon because they've used up every black conservative they've got."

"I wonder why more blacks don't try to get on the Republican gravy train?" "I hope they don't. If too many blacks join the party, the novelty will wear off and the Republicans won't treat us any better than the Democrats."

Letters to the editor

In rebuttal to a rebuttal

Editor, Times-News: A letter of rebuttal on Feb. 19 by G.R. Moore of Jerome directed at a letter written by Gene Abercrombie of Gooding, published Feb. 8, has all the earmarks of being composed by one who is apparently misinformed and/or lacking in the pursuit of research concerning the field about which he is writing.

As I have known Mr. Abercrombie for several years, and being quite well acquainted with the workings of public employment as well, I feel adequately qualified (and even duty-bound) to register my support for his letter of chastisement against Rep. Stephenson and his misaligned statements against these employees.

The Idaho Public Employees Association is not in any sense of the word. Public employees have no strike benefits, they don't even have the power of collective bargaining rights! These employees are completely at the mercy of the state Legislature as far as salaries, benefits and job classification and determination are concerned. The employees association is the only medium of arbitration between public employees and the Legislature, and that coming only in the form of legislative lobbying.

Mr. Abercrombie is definitely not a steward, much less a union steward. He is an IPEA job representative for the classified employees at the School for the Deaf and Blind.

Mr. Moore's statement that Mr. Abercrombie was bragging because he paid taxes is really out of it! As I read the letter, he was merely attempting to point out that public employees pay taxes equal to a taxpayer of comparable income, regardless of all his gobbledygook about tax dividers. I'm sure the state employees know nothing about divided taxes per se; they pay through the nose on taxes, too. And they must be considered "primary taxpayers" (perhaps more so than anyone) as some of their tax withholdings undoubtedly are utilized to help pay their own salaries.

State employees may have some right to complain about their salary structures. Indeed, I have watched for several years now as the majority of city, county and federal employees have received cost-of-living increases in the 10 percent and up range, while our state employees have been held to an annual average increase of from 5 percent to 6.7 percent. It's obvious that they can't possibly begin to keep up with the cost-of-living inflation rate. And now, Rep. Stephenson feels that our public employees should "take their lumps, along with the rest of the taxpayers." This is absolutely ludicrous!

It would appear that Mr. Moore did not fully comprehend the letter written by Mr. Abercrombie, but merely related his own interpretation of its contents. A. LERNER Gooding

Symms is a disappointment

Editor, Times-News: I am disappointed with U.S. Sen. Steve Symms.

I was in hopes he would turn out to be a statesman like his predecessor. Instead, he has turned out to be only a second-rate politician who has little regard for truth, honesty or understanding. He did not look back into history to learn why unions were started in the first place at the turn of the century, 1920 and 1940, or the effect those years had on the people of Idaho.

Surely the state of Idaho deserves better representation than we are getting from Steve Symms.

In the article on the front page, Section B, of the Times-News, Feb. 10, he had the people of Idaho "got the shaft and I don't mean the mine shaft." He was right, the people got the shaft all right, but not from Gov. John Evans, but from the time they elected Steve Symms to the U.S. Senate.

It's too bad because in the days that lay ahead we will need someone with a lot more understanding and compassion to represent us. We don't need any more political expounding about things that he seems to know very little about.

Constitutional amendment talk heats up in Capitol

WASHINGTON — Constitutional pots are bubbling again on Capitol Hill. The balance-of-budget amendment will be served up in the Senate toward the end of March. Amendments dealing with abortion and school prayer are waiting in committee pantries. Talk is heard of a highly improbable constitutional convention.

All this is stimulating stuff — stimulating, that is, if one loves to drink at the fountains of constitutional debate. My own hope is that most of the current argument will go the way of bubbles of champagne.

S.J.R. 88, proposing an amendment to the Constitution "altering federal budget procedures," came out of the Senate Judiciary Committee last summer with only a single dissenting vote. Max Baucus of Montana thought the Constitution should not be amended simply to resolve problems that really require "only a modicum of discipline by the Congress." Arlen Specter of Pennsylvania went along with the crowd, but he made murmuring noises. He had "very serious reservations about the approach and substance of this proposal." Baucus and Specter are better cooks than their collegial chefs who compounded this indigestible stew. The pending resolution has an admirable purpose. After all, who could oppose the goal of a balanced federal budget? The principle of "pay as we go" has been a leading political principle for nearly 200 years. Nearly everyone gives at least lip service to it.

But ends are one thing and means quite another. This amendment is in trouble from its very first sentence: "Prior to each fiscal year, the Congress shall adopt a statement of receipts and outlays for that year in which total outlays are no greater than total receipts." The sentence is disarmingly simple.

Note what we are talking about. We are talking about a "statement." Statements of prospective receipts and outlays may be endlessly amended; indeed, up to the moment of adoption, such statements ought to be constantly amended, the better to adjust budgetary predictions to economic realities. The budget that Mr.

Reagan sent to the Hill three weeks ago attempts to fix revenues and expenditures through Sept. 30, 1983. This is guesswork. It is guesswork in the mold of the budget for which the March hare called the Mad Hatter's watch — the best butter and the best guesswork, but some crumbs get in.

The amendment attempts to remove some of the elements of guesswork. Receipts in this magical statement "shall not increase by a rate greater than the rate of increase in national income in the next calendar year ending before such fiscal year." What is this talisman of "national income"? It is a firm of statistical imagination, a popper index, crisp on the outside, hollow within.

Semantics to one side, the proposed amendment has even more serious flaws. The precious "statement" may be waived by a three-fifths vote of both houses. If the amendment were operative today, the Congress would be compelled to adopt such a waiver. There is no way under moon or sun that a balanced budget could be adopted for 1983 without ruinous taxation or intolerable reductions in outlays for defense and for social programs. The amendment would erect paper barricades, creating a false sense of fiscal responsibility.

Finally, the amendment contains no mechanisms for enforcement. "The Congress and the President shall ensure that outlays do not exceed the outlays set forth in such statement." Can anyone tell us how this process of ensuring it to be assured? By court order? By a heller-skitter rush to vote overnight tax increases whenever receipts lag behind outlays?

The pending amendment has impressive support. Nearly half the senators have lined up behind it. Such respected figures in the private sector as economist Milton Friedman have endorsed it. The National Tax-Limitation Committee has just launched a high-powered lobbying campaign in the amendment's behalf. These voices notwithstanding, Senator Baucus's quiet objection still makes greater sense. A cumbersome amendment, easily evaded, will not get us out of the pits of deficit spending. Only self-discipline will.

Court keeps lid on census records

By The Chicago Tribune

WASHINGTON — The U.S. Supreme Court rejected a major challenge Wednesday to the 1980 census, ruling 9-4 that cities cannot gain access to federal population records in order to check their accuracy.

The decision — a historic victory for the Census Bureau — averted a situation that could have thrown the congressional and state legislative redistricting process into confusion across the nation.

The justices unanimously concluded that the historic confidentiality of census records would be compromised by allowing local officials to review master lists of street address numbers and vacant dwelling units.

The ruling was a blow to cities trying to force upward revisions of their population counts, which are used both for legislative representation and apportionment of federal aid. In another case, the court unanimously affirmed the right of individuals posing as buyers or renters to sue after they are denied "truthful information" about housing because of their race.

In an opinion by Justice William Brennan, the court gave a broad reading to the 1968 Fair Housing Act, which makes it illegal to discriminate in the sale or rental of housing on the basis of race, religion, sex or national origin.

Specifically, the high court held in a Richmond, Va., case involving charges of racial "steering" by the owner of two apartment complexes:

"Testers" — people who pose as prospective renters or buyers to collect evidence of illegal steering are entitled to sue. Steering involves showing blacks housing only in black areas and whites housing only in white areas. A white tester who was told that an apartment was available to him when it had been barred to a black tester has no standing to sue on the basis of personal injury.

"Organizations that provide counseling and investigate housing discrimination are entitled to sue in racial steering cases. The high court also issued several other opinions Wednesday. Among these:

"The Supreme Court unanimously struck down New Hampshire's ban on the sale of electrical power generated within the state to out-of-state public utilities.

"The Supreme Court approved settlement of a 12-year-old sex discrimination case brought by more than 400 stewardesses in Chicago against TWA for being grounded after becoming mothers.

Atlanta suspect taunts prosecuting attorney

ATLANTA (UPI) — Accused killer Wayne Williams unmasked a surlly side to his personality on the witness stand Tuesday, calling the prosecutor a fool and telling him, "You haven't got no proof of anything."

The defense then rested its case. "All you got is a bunch of hearsay mess," Williams told prosecutor Jack Maillard during a remarkable outburst of taunts and insults that wound up his five hours of cross-examination.

The defense rested at 10:50 a.m. on the 34th day of testimony in Williams' trial for the murders of Nathaniel Cater, 27, and Jimmy Ray Payne, 21, two of 28 young blacks slain in Atlanta. Testimony linked him to 10 more victims killed in during a 22-month period.

The prosecution immediately began presenting rebuttal witnesses who:

"Destroyed testimony from every member of the Williams family that they purchased their 'wall-to-wall' carpet in 1968, not in 1971 as the state claimed. Fibers similar to those from the carpet, which was relatively rare in 1971, were found on all the victims and play an essential role in the state's largely circumstantial case against Williams.

"Testified they saw Williams slap his mother and pummel and choke his father when the elderly man refused to write a check for him.

"Testified that Williams' father told him his son reported he had, indeed, stopped on the Jackson Parkway Bridge the morning of May 22 "to get rid of some trash." The state claims he threw Cater's body off the bridge that morning; Williams insisted, sometimes angrily, during testimony that he did not even stop.

White House interested in Domenici's budget

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The White House signaled strong interest Wednesday in spending freeze legislation offered by leading Republican senator as an alternative to President Reagan's much-criticized 1983 budget.

At issue is the proposal of Senate Budget Committee Chairman Pete Domenici of New Mexico that his plan can be substituted in part or wholly for the president's embattled fiscal 1983 $757 billion budget with a $91.5 billion deficit.

Early Wednesday, White House spokesman Peter Rousell called the Domenici idea "a good faith effort to come up with a comprehensive alternative."

To underline the point, spokesman Larry Speakes said later that Domenici's plan was reviewed by the president's senior advisers. "It's too early to tell until we look closer at it" whether the proposal would be an acceptable compromise, Speakes suggested.

But he did nothing to dissuade reporters from believing the door to compromise has now, under an avalanche of criticism aimed at the White House, been opened wide.

Reagan planned to meet Senate Republican leader Howard Baker and House Republican leader Robert Michel on Thursday to get a better reading on the congressional reception of Domenici's plan. The statements by the White House spokesmen were the first positive response from the administration toward a substitute for Reagan's proposal, although Domenici's plan is similar to several offered by Democrats and less influential Republicans since the president's plan was submitted Feb. 8.

The others were flatly rejected by the administration.

Domenici proposed boosting defense spending at a slower rate than Reagan wants, freezing many areas of the budget at 1982 levels for three years and closing tax loopholes to raise $18 billion next year. Overall, he

January surplus helps slow this year's deficit

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The government posted a $9.3 billion surplus in January, helping to slow the rate of Social Security payments back into December, the Treasury Department said Wednesday.

The surplus was generated despite a $7.7 billion drop in corporate income taxes for the month and helped reduce the deficit so far this fiscal year to $28.9 billion, slightly less than for the same period last year.

Social Security payments for January were delivered at the end of December under regulations that require early checks whenever the usual payment day, the third of the month, falls on a holiday. This year Jan. 3 fell on a Monday, which was declared part of the New Year's holiday.

The early payments had caused the cumulative deficit in December to balloon to $48.2 billion, the largest three-month red-ink figure on record. But the surge was offset by the January drop in benefit payments, bringing the deficit for the first four months of the fiscal year slightly under the $40 billion that had piled up by January, 1981.

The monthly budget reflects shifting patterns of receipts and outlays and, early in the fiscal year, are at best a rough guide to deficit patterns. The administration projects an eventual 1982 fiscal year deficit of $36.6 billion and some analysts have said that estimate will prove to be too low.

Because of the early payment provision, Social Security trust fund payments jumped from $11 billion in November to $22 billion in December. In January, they shrank to just $23 million.

Total government outlays for January were $45.9 billion.

Weinberger goes to bat for full defense appropriations

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger said Wednesday he does not anticipate major cuts in next year's $258 billion military budget, but the chairman of a House panel pledged to push for a $15 billion reduction.

Earlier, the Pentagon chief said in response to a question the United States will not seek friendlier relations with moderate Arab countries at the expense of Israel.

Weinberger appeared before the House defense subcommittee chaired by Rep. Joseph Adabbo, D-N.Y., to defend his budget for fiscal 1983 as "reasonable and proper" because of the need to continue with the administration's plan to "rearm America" in the face of growing Soviet military capabilities.

"I do not anticipate major revisions" in the budget because of cutbacks in social programs, he told the committee during a daylong hearing. "We're never going to bring to you a budget that is lower than the previous year, unless there are drastic changes in the world."

Repeat Caesarean births not needed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Up to 90,000 women a year, 60 percent of the women who now have repeat Caesarean sections, could be candidates for normal birth, the American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists said Wednesday in a major policy change.

The Caesarean rate has risen dramatically in recent years, climbing from 5.5 percent of U.S. deliveries in 1970 to 16.5 percent in 1980. Now, 99 percent of women who have Caesareans once will have them on later births.

New guidelines, saying 50 percent to 60 percent of the repeat Caesareans may be unnecessary, will be sent the group's 23,000 members next month.

"If the profession takes us to heart, this could be a significant change," said Arthur Lebow, a spokesman for the college.

The change also could have implications for America's growing number of older mothers. The Caesarean rate rises steadily with age, reaching 20 percent after age 35.

Chrysler losses hit $475 million in '81

DETROIT (UPI) — Chrysler Corp. said Wednesday it lost $475.6 million in 1981, raising to $1.34 billion the auto industry's combined losses for the year.

Extensive rebates by General Motors and Ford Motor Co. afforded the top two automakers some improvement in mid-February car sales. Combined industry sales were down.

Chrysler's loss was well below its 1980 deficit of $1.7 billion as it struggled to avoid bankruptcy. The company lost $66.9 million in the fourth quarter of 1981, compared with more than $200 million for the same period in 1980.

While the industry's selling rate was the lowest in 21 years, its 1981 losses were far less than the $4.2 billion in 1980.

Overall, the five automakers reported car sales down 1.4 percent for the middle of February to 167,285 units from 169,814. The daily selling rate of 16,568 was the worst since the $488 daily sales in 1981.

If sales remain at that rate, one analyst said 6.3 million U.S.-made autos will be sold this year, 100,000 fewer than last year's 20-year low total. So far this year, car sales are down 12.6 percent.

Union members at four more United Auto Workers locals endorsed a historic contract with Ford trading wage and benefit concessions for job security. Locals will vote through Sunday.

The lower Chrysler losses were due to cost cutting, personnel reductions and lower unemployment and severance benefit outlays, analysts said. The automaker was the only U.S. firm to post a sales increase for 1981 with deliveries up 10.5 percent.

"Even though the entire American automobile industry is in a three-year depression caused by inflation, record high interest rates and a widespread lack of consumer confidence, we managed a substantial improvement over a year ago," Chrysler Chairman Lee Iacocca told shareholders.

While GM and Ford saw their February sales go up, money-back schemes offered by Chrysler, Volkswagen of America and American Motors Corp. failed to reap any benefits.

Schweiker's budget blasted for indifference to the poor

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Democrats on the House Ways and Means Committee scolded HHS secretary Richard Schweiker Wednesday the administration's indifference to the poor and for being "meanspirited" in its 1983 budget.

Reps. Harold E. Ford, D-Tenn., James Shannon, D-Mass., Tom Downey, D-N.Y., and Don Bailey, D-Pa., criticized Schweiker, head of the Department of Health and Human Services, and administration policies during a two-hour session on proposed welfare changes.

Schweiker told Ford the administration proposes a $3 billion cut in social services and Aid to Families with Dependent Children in a two-year period, but was unable to say how many families have been adversely affected.

Because the current fiscal year is less than half over, Schweiker said, "we don't have any idea what the impact is."

"What about the poor?" Downey said, his voice raised. "This is not a budget to provide for human need or hope... It was born out of meanspiritedness."

"There is no question we have a difference of philosophy," Schweiker said.

Kissinger released from hospital

BOSTON (UPI) — Former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, subdued but in good spirits, left Massachusetts General Hospital Wednesday, two weeks after undergoing a triple bypass operation to correct coronary artery disease.

Standing at a news conference at the hospital, Kissinger said he planned to spend five or six days in New York, leave for two weeks in Palm Springs, and then ease back into his normal schedule.

"I feel in fine shape and in great spirits," the 1973 Nobel Prize-winner said. "My second day here the nurses in intensive care voted unanimously to discharge me. But the doctors insisted... so I stayed an extra two weeks."

Kissinger, 58, underwent triple bypass heart surgery Feb. 10 to correct narrowing of two arteries to his heart and blockage of another. He said he was still feeling "a little pain" in the wound left by surgery and needs "a little more sleep than my normal four to five hours."

What's what

The young woman marries a much older man who has enough money to take good care of her and her children. She then marries a much younger man who finds her experience, wisdom and property quite attractive. She dies. Now he's an older man with plenty of money, hers and his. And he marries a much younger woman. The double-mating cycle goes on, old matched with young, young to old, old to young. It's reportedly a matrimonial pattern common to certain tribes in Africa and Asia. And certain love and war experts, not their own, insist it's the most rewarding marriage tradition of all.

There has only been one month—January—in that has never had a 100-degree-F day somewhere in the United States. But Jan. 17, 1936, got almost that hot—it was 98 degrees F.—in Laredo, Texas.

Johnny Carson intentionally wears mismatched cufflinks.

KILLER AUDUBON

Widespread is the notion that the great naturalist John Audubon only shot birds to get ideas for his famous paintings. He did that, true. But the historical footnotes indicate he frequently shot as many as 100 birds a day, far more than he ever painted. M. Audubon liked to kill birds.

If certain people are specially prone to mishaps, how do you explain the fact that one fifth of the population accounts for four-fifths of the serious accidents?

The big catalog companies built their businesses once with farm families. Now it's turned around. City folk are the main mail-order buyers. At last report, about 20 percent of all merchandise sold was handled by the catalog people.

BIRTH CONTROL

In Texas 50 years ago, you could be thrown in jail for giving out birth control information.

Fifty-four years is the lifespan of the average professional football player in the United States.

One of your eyelashes, if typical, will last 150 days.

Among circus people, it's a cheap trick to copy another clown's face.

A clock strikes the hour. A timepiece doesn't. But if it's a watch that strikes the hour, it's a repeater. Got that?

Horoscope

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Avoid an argument and don't walk or drive carelessly early in the day. Good aspects are in effect later and you can accomplish a great deal. Follow your lunches at this time.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Don't take the bait if a fox tries to get into a lot of trouble. You can express your skills now in a creative way.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) You have some clever ways of getting home conditions improved, so put them in operation without delay.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Discuss new ideas with trusted allies and gain their support and advice. Express your talents in a positive manner.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) A good time to seize an opportunity that will provide you with more abundance in the days ahead.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Go after personal aims in a most direct way for best results. Plan time to improve your health and appearance.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Study a new plan that has great possibilities, since you are thinking along expensive lines. Engage in your favorite hobby tonight.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Know what your personal goals are and go after them in a positive manner. Enjoy the company of good friends tonight.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Be sure to observe every rule and regulate about that applies to you today. Otherwise you could get into a lot of trouble.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Handle any pressing affairs early in the day so that you have more time for pleasant activities later. Be logical.

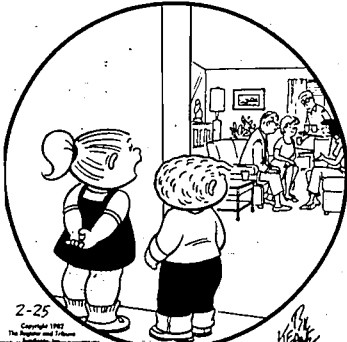

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Make sure you finish regular duties before seeking entertainment. Show more enthusiasm when handling duties.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Don't argue with a pompous individual in the morning and then later you can come to a fine understanding.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Handle an irksome duty early in the day and then you can engage in new interests that will perk up your spirit.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will be so dynamic that a firm restraint may have to be used, while showing affection at the same time. Be neglect to compliment when good work is done. Don't neglect ethical training. Sports are a must here.

- In 1919, Oregon became the first state to put a tax on gasoline — 1 per cent.
- In 1967, American warships began shelling Vietnam.
- In 1975, President Ford warned Cambodia soon fall to the communists unless Congress approved his request for $222 million in new aid.

'High' schools on the decline

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (UPI) — The use of marijuana and tobacco is declining among American high school seniors but overall use of stimulants has increased, a University of Michigan study released Wednesday shows.

The study also found an overall "moderation of illicit drug use" among the nation's teenagers.

The conclusions are contained in the seventh annual survey of high school seniors by three University of Michigan social psychologists for the National Institute on Drug Abuse.

Researchers Lloyd Johnston,

Jeffrey Bachman and Patrick O'Malley based their report on a representative sample of 17,000 seniors in about 130 public and private high schools across the nation.

Johnston said the survey indicates American young people are moving "in the direction of moderation; but the absolute numbers are still very high. By no means are all of the trends slumping downward, and the increase in stimulant use, in particular, is troubling."

The 1981 study found that 46.1 percent of the seniors said they had used marijuana or hashish in the past 12 months, down 2.7 percent from the year before and a 4.7 percent drop from 1979.

It marked the first time since the survey began in 1975 that marijuana use had declined.

Daily or near-daily use of marijuana — defined as use on 20 or more occasions in the prior 30 days — rose from 6 percent in 1975 to 11 percent in 1978, researchers said. Since 1978, however, the daily use figure has dropped by about one-third to 7 percent, they said.

Reagan writes God seeking contribution

By New York Daily News

COMMACK, N.Y. — Never let it be said that President Reagan doesn't know where to go for help when he needs it. He sent a letter to God.

The letter was delivered Tuesday in care of the Rev. Doyle Daugherty, pastor of the Church of God in this Long Island community. The three-page letter, containing a gold foil seal over the Republican Presidential Task Force letterhead and Reagan's signature, read:

"Dear Mr. God: As your President, I am calling upon you to make a most unusual sacrifice." The sacrifice requested was $120 in campaign contributions to keep Republican Senators in office.

"Right now we Republicans only have a slim 4-to-6 majority lead in the Senate. That's all!" wrote the president. "Believe me, I'm not asking everyone to join this club — only proud, flag waving Americans like you who I know are willing to sacrifice to keep our nation strong."

"I am thrilled that the president has such high regard for my work," said Daugherty. He said the letter seems to imply that the president intends "to give the devil his due, and put God on the presidential task force."

Dollar gas Truckers flock to station

CHANNELVIEW, Texas (UPI) — Sue Turner believes she runs the only service station in the country selling regular gasoline and diesel fuel for less than a dollar.

There have been lines at her truck stop east of Houston since she dropped the price of regular and diesel to 99.9 cents per gallon Monday afternoon.

"This morning, they're lined up all the way back to Market Street... roughly 30 trucks," Mrs. Turner said Wednesday. "We had lines all day yesterday and most of the night last night. It has absolutely gone wild."

Mrs. Turner said her neighboring competitor, selling diesel for $1.11, had no customers when she arrived at work.

She said her own diesel was selling for $1.09 the first of last week, then dropped to $1.07, then $1.05 and finally 99.9 cents Monday. Her regular had been selling for $1.179.

Mrs. Turner said the price-slashing was a company brainstorm last week, but added, "We are not losing money."

Getting fit

CSI class proves fitness not just kid stuff

By LORAYNE O. SMITH
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Physical fitness isn't just for the young.

Proof of this statement can be found every Tuesday and Thursday afternoon at the College of Southern Idaho gymnasium where several dozen "Over 60" residents gather for exercise and fun.

Depending upon their own physical ability, they variously stretch their arms, kick their legs, walk briskly, ride a stationary bicycle or perhaps just move their fingers in a chair.

Jan Mittleder, CSI associate professor of physical education who directs the popular free class, said she makes the twice weekly sessions "as non-threatening as possible." Students never need feel embarrassed if they aren't as agile as their neighbor.

"Everyone can go at her (or his) own pace," she said. About 50 persons, mostly women, signed up for the class. Average attendance has been about three dozen, despite bad weather.

Mittleder uses aerobic dancing or aerobic exercise to loosen tight muscles of her pupils and help tone their bodies. The word aerobic means "living in the presence of oxygen" and the term aerobic exercise refers to continuous type of movement using oxygen.

Examples include non-competitive sports such as jogging, swimming, weight lifting, cross-country skiing, skating or running in place, all of which cause the body to burn additional oxygen.

Probably the most popular of this type of exercise is aerobic dancing, which is exercising to music. This activity has swept the country the past few years, she said, and is particularly attractive to people who want exercise but do not like jogging or other forms of exercise.

Aerobic dancing can be strenuous with fast-paced music for young people but Mittleder uses a simpler level with slower, but still lively music for her "Over 60" class.

Pointing out that aerobic dancing can be "highly vigorous" and that seniors often don't do well in a program geared for 18-year-olds, Mittleder said she is very conservative in her approach because she doesn't know their individual backgrounds.

Age doesn't matter in the class, and there are several in the group in their 80s, some in the 70s with many younger, she said. Obviously her students are among the more mobile senior citizens, but exercises like finger movements are helpful even to persons confined to wheelchairs, she said.

Class members are shown how to monitor their own pulse for 10 seconds to make sure they don't overdo it. Mittleder makes sure their pulse rates are kept moderate.

Each class starts with students sitting in a chair, stretching and leaning forward, to music. Then they stand, lifting one leg at a time. With these balancing exercises, they can hold on to a chair if they wish.

The second portion of each class allows students to choose from a variety of activities. They can walk rapidly (at their own pace) around the gym balcony, lift light weights, peddle stationary bicycles or participate in a mild form of aerobic dancing where they stretch and bend to music.

Dear Abby

Suitor's rush a worry

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
© Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I have a dear friend (I'll call her Emily) living in Illinois. I live in California. Emily and I have been sisters for over 30 years. Her husband died two years ago and left her a lot of money and property. She's 81 and never had children.

About three months ago she called and told me she had rented a basement apartment to a 63-year-old man she hired as a handyman for that apartment building. (She owns several.) Then she called a few weeks later to tell me this man had been "courting" her.

Now he is pressuring her to get married. She said at first she told him he was crazy, but he refused to take no for an answer. They were going to get married in June, but now he wants to move it up to April.

Emily acts like a schoolgirl in love for the first time! She called and said, "Don't worry, I haven't lost my virtue." I told her it was her MONEY — not her virtue — I was worried about.

Last year when I was visiting her I checked out another man who wanted to marry her and found he was a liar and a phony. Emily is a sweet and generous person. I want her to be happy, but I'm so afraid some fast-talking slicker will win her heart and clean her out.

Abby, dear, am I wrong to interfere? What should I do?

— CONCERNED OUT WEST
DEAR CONCERNED: Wrong? No way! You have good reason to be concerned about your sweet and generous friend. Write or call and tell her to discuss her plans with her attorney. Her handyman may be a dandyman, but he, too, should be checked out.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a nice-looking guy, 6-2, 190 pounds, athletic build and have no trouble getting dates. My problem is every girl I take out wants to get serious. I'm 30, like my independence and have no intention of giving it up for a long time.

I don't want to lie or lead a girl on, but if I'm too truthful about how I feel — that's the end of the romance. So what does a guy do when all he wants is a few laughs and no commitments?

— HARVEY
DEAR HARVEY: Take a hyena to lunch.

DEAR ABBY: The letter from "Frenzied Frenzy" prompts this letter. I also fell in love with a man who respected me too much to go beyond a kiss until we were married. "Prefers" learned too late that her husband was gay. My story has a different ending.

When I married, I was a 23-year-old virgin. Nothing happened on our wedding night — or on any other night for a year after that. My husband finally admitted that he was unable to consummate our marriage because he had no sexual feelings whatsoever. He said he knew this when he married me but he didn't want to lose me. I cared for him, so I accepted this terrible disappointment.

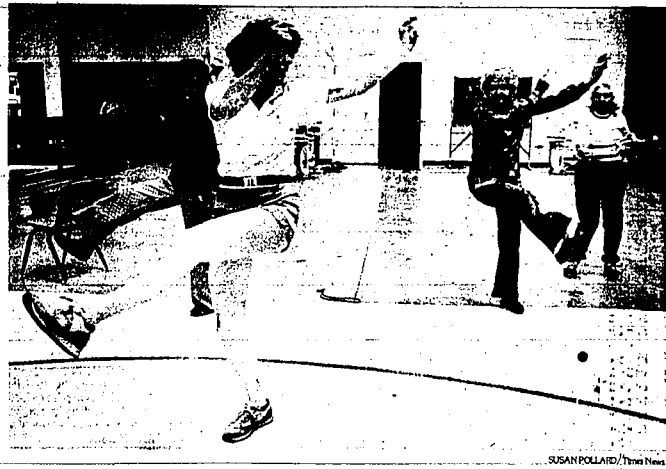

Then Pearl Harbor came and changed my life. My husband, a college graduate, went into the service and overseas. Before he left, he said, "When I come home, I want to find you the way I left you — a virgin."

Well, he didn't. I went to work in a defense plant and met a man I couldn't resist. The inevitable happened and we fell madly in love. (He couldn't believe he had actually met a 26-year-old married virgin!) Within six months I was pregnant, so I wrote my husband a "Dear John" letter telling him the whole truth.

He divorced me on the grounds of adultery and I married my lover, who by that time was the father of our baby girl. We have four other children after that, and they're all grown with children of their own.

I'm 64 now and my husband is 73. We've had our ups and downs, but I have no regrets. My life probably reads like a soap opera, so if you print this, sign me —

Class

The teacher, who readily admits to her fondness for seniors, ends the hour session with emphasis on some form of fitness information. One day they talk about how to loosen a tight back. When she learned several had high-blood pressure, she distributed Blue Cross material on that subject.

The tall, attractive young teacher's love for older people is reciprocal. They bring her cookies and other gifts and enthusiastically tell their friends about the benefits of the class. "It's a mutual love affair," Mittleider said.

And when it comes to expanding fitness programs and other classes for retired people, Mittleider says "the sky is the limit." Any CSI class can be attended free by seniors and some of her pupils now are branching out to enroll in other courses.

Mittleider has taught yoga for seniors for several years and her "Over 60 and Getting Fit" class began last year as an outgrowth of her yoga group.

Like all good things, Mittleider wants other seniors to share the benefits she can see her students gain from the class. So she is applying for a grant to enable her to teach representatives of senior citizen centers in the Magic Valley how to conduct classes similar to her "Over 60" group. Her original request to the Northwest Area Foundation for funding was one of 39 out of 275 proposals to receive positive response, and a request for a formal grant.

If approved, the grant would provide funds for leaders from the centers to attend training at CSI so they could start similar aerobic exercise groups in their own towns.

Dr. Lamb

Causes of fainting varied

By LAWRENCE LAMB, M.D.
News-Paper Enterprise Association

DEAR DR. LAMB — My daughter age 16, has fainted five times in her life at various intervals.

However, each time she has a seizure wherein she makes a gagging sound, stiffens up and rolls her eyes back. It's frightening to see. She has been in a hospital, had a spinal tap and various tests, including a brain scan. It was told there is nothing wrong, just part of her makeup.

I'm hoping that you can send me some information on this.

DEAR READER — Fainting is extremely common. And it occurs more often in males than in females, despite the common misconception that it is more likely to faint. It is far more common in youth than in physiologically mature adults. Most people have fainted at least once in their lives.

The symptoms that occur depend on the depth of the faint. And that in turn depends on how long the brain is not getting enough blood. In severe cases the faint may result in a convulsion. The muscular movement helps to improve blood flow to the brain and abort the faint.

In such cases, a good medical examination, as you have had done, is a wise step. The stiffening seen with some faints is also just an indication of the depth of the faint.

Some people think such signs mean epilepsy. That is not necessarily true but it is one of the rare causes for unexplained fainting.

There are many causes for fainting, such as a recent illness like the flu, or from an unpleasant psychological input such as seeing blood. I recall that many pilots who accidented a gory training film of aircraft wrecks fainted while watching the film.

But most fainting occurs standing up. The immediate remedy is to let the person lie flat, enhancing the flow of blood to the head.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I have been told that there have been cases of teen-age girls becoming pregnant by engaging in "heavy petting" but not having intercourse. The girl remains a virgin but is also pregnant. I'd like to know if this is possible or if I heard wrong. If it is possible, what are the chances of it happening?

DEAR READER — What do you mean by "heavy petting"? You won't get pregnant from kissing no matter how you do it — unless it leads to other things.

The only way a pregnancy occurs is if a sperm cell (it only takes one) passes up the female tract and meets a waiting ovum in the tube.

Now, that can happen without intercourse. If "heavy petting" includes sexual activity that may result in sperm cells being deposited near the vaginal opening.

Yes, it has happened, but it usually means some form of sexual activity, whether or not full penetration has occurred. Whether a girl is still a virgin or not after such "heavy petting" depends upon your definition of a virgin.

When widow marries, benefits lost

HEARTLINE: I am 66 years old. I applied for Social Security and Medicare on my deceased husband's record. He had paid into Social Security for 34 years.

The Social Security office told me that I am not entitled to either, because I haven't enough quarters of my own and I remarried at age 53.

My present husband is 55. Is this true? If so, who gets the money that we paid in for 34 years? I feel that the money is mine, not the governments. L.L.

ANSWER: Unfortunately, it is true. If a woman is widowed before the age of 60, and if she is not eligible for disabled widow's benefits before the age 60, then she loses all rights to her deceased husband's benefits if she remarries before age 60. Because you remarried at age 53, and since you do not have enough quarters under social security to draw your own benefits, then you will have to wait until your present husband retires to become eligible for wife's benefits, or until he is deceased to become eligible for widow's benefits. The same hold true for Medicare coverage.

As to who get the money your first husband paid in to social security, it remains in the Social Security General Fund, and will be used to pay others certain types of benefits unless there is a legitimate claim on the benefit.

HEARTLINE: I glanced through a copy of your "Almanac for Older Americans" in our local library. I would like to have a copy for myself, but could find no address in the book. I asked the librarian where she got it, but she could not find the address for ordering or the price either. Please give this information in your column. H.R.

ANSWER: You can order a copy of "Heartline's Almanac for Older Americans" by sending $3.95 (49 for orders of two or more) to Heartline's Almanac, 114 East Dayton St., West Alexandria, Ohio 45381. Please allow 6-8 weeks for delivery.

Hints to help care for persons with dementia

By ENA NAUNTON
Knight-Ridder Newspapers

Here are some suggestions from "The 36-Hour Day":

"Sometimes it is the little things that seem to be the last straw in living with a person with a dementing illness. Many families find the confused people ask the same question over and over, and this is extremely irritating. In part, this may be a symptom of fear and insecurity. ... Sometimes, instead of answering the question again, it is helpful to reassure the person that everything is fine and that you will take care of things."

"Among the childlike things done by people with dementia is playing with food. Dr. Peter Rabins and his co-author Nancy Mace advise relatives to limit the choices, letting the sick person concentrate on only one food at a time.

"Serve only his salad. Then only his meat. Don't put salt, ketchup, etc. where he can reach it and mix it inappropriately into his food. Season his food for him."

"If you spoonfeed a person, put only a small amount of food on the spoon at a time and wait until the person swallows before giving him the next bite. You may have to remind him verbally to swallow."

"Drooling can be one of the distressing accompaniments to the illness. Limiting milk and citrus juice avoids the possibility of excess mucus production, the authors say. Fruit nectar or cranberry juice are suggested alternatives."

"Sometimes formerly fastidious people suddenly abandon knives and forks for fingers. "It is usually easier to adjust than to fight circumstances," the authors advise. A plastic tablecloth, big-handled utensils (offer only one, say a fork or a spoon), and a big, plastic smock, of the kind barbers use, with the bottom turned up to catch crumbs, can help with the housekeeping.

"Financial problems caused by senile dementia can be enmeshed. Rabins and Mace cite one area where injustice may be done because of common misunderstandings about dementia.

"Individuals who are forced to retire early because of a dementing illness should be entitled to the same retirement and disability benefits as a person with any other disabling disease," they write. "In some cases, disability benefits have been denied on the erroneous grounds that 'senility' is not a disease and the impaired person has been forced to resign or take an early retirement. ... If this happens you may want to obtain legal counsel."

The Social Security Administration's disability division may require that a person be transferred to a less demanding job, Rabins said. But the person who has dementia may not be able to learn a new job, even a simple one, he said. Again, legal counsel should be sought if benefits are denied.

Another important point to bear in mind is the making of a will — yours — to provide for the care of the impaired relative.

Another form of help can come from support groups for Alzheimer's and related diseases.

Check your county Mental Health Associations for names of such groups in your area.

Senility often spells disaster

By ENA NAUNTON
Knight-Ridder Newspapers

"When senility becomes more than just forgetfulness and the brain begins to deteriorate, the situation can be disastrous not only for the afflicted person but for the whole family.

Anger, distress, bewilderment, a feeling of being totally unable to cope can descend upon relatives as they watch the mental deterioration of a beloved member of the family. Conspiring the sick person to a nursing home may be considered, along with its attendant enormous costs and connotations of guilt.

Medical science offers little comfort for the sufferer from senile dementia and his or her family. Usually there is head-shaking and a "nothing can be done" attitude.

But Dr. Peter Rabins, a 34-year-old psychiatrist at Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine in Baltimore, believes much can be done.

"Senility" is a dirty word. But there's no such thing as "senile" because the word merely means "old," said Rabins.

But "senile dementia" is still a general medical term for a group of illnesses that rob a once-independent adult of the ability to think, perform or control the normal functions of a grown person's life.

"It's not just a medical condition; it's a disease that has a major impact on the emotions. The person is often aware of falling. It is something that people fear," Rabins said.

A thorough medical workup is essential, he said. "Five or six people a year come to me because they are worried that they are becoming demented," he said. "And I can assure them, as best

...there's no such thing as 'senile'... the word merely means 'old.' — psychiatrist we can with testing, that they are not."

Cure of the illness, though, is rare. Perhaps 5 percent to 10 percent of people seen by doctors because of extreme forgetfulness or apparently "senile" behavior could have deep depression or an infection that a thorough medical workup would detect.

But in most cases, senile dementia, which afflicts 30 percent of elderly people, is incurable. Fifty percent of such people have Alzheimer's Disease — an illness once called "pre-senile" because it was thought to occur only in people younger than 65. But when scientists studied autopsies of much older people, they found the changes in the brain were the same, meaning Alzheimer's is more widespread than had been previously suspected.

A smaller group of confused elderly people — perhaps 25 percent of the total — have brain changes resulting from "multi-infarcts" — better known as "little strokes." Several less common illnesses also could make an old person confused, which is why a careful medical examination is necessary to rule out something that might be cured.

"Although 'hardening of the arteries' has long been a common grab-bag diagnosis for confusion in the elderly, it probably has nothing to do with it, said Rabins. This also could explain why the search for prevention or cure — which has included megadoses of vitamins and pressurized oxygen to try to open up hardened arteries — has been fruitless.

Multi-infarcts destroy small areas of the brain; Alzheimer's causes microscopic changes in brain structure, probably from enzyme deficiencies, which researchers are trying to pinpoint and hope some day to synthesize and replace — as L-Dopa increases production of the brain chemical dopamine, thereby relieving Parkinson's disease.

While waiting for science to unlock the mysteries of why these chemical changes occur, sick people and their families — "often the daughter or daughter-in-law," said Rabins — are left to cope with a distressing, incurable illness.

Rabins, who heads a Johns Hopkins clinic funded by a wealthy philanthropist who saw senile dementia in his own family, is co-author of a book that is straight, nuts-and-bolts advice on coping. His book, "The 36-Hour Day," is a family guide to caring for people with Alzheimer's disease, related dementing illnesses and memory loss in later life. Johns Hopkins University Press is publishing it this week at $14.95 in hard cover and $8.95 paperback.

Just as dementia is not inevitable simply because of growing old, so it is important for people to realize the dementing diseases that do affect some older people are true sicknesses.

Because that realization is growing, more young medical professionals, like Rabins, are devoting their careers to coping with an illness that may become more common as the number of America's elderly increases. Increasing interest in finding ways to relieve symptoms and perhaps discover a cure for such diseases as Alzheimer's should lead to a higher caliber of care in nursing homes — and a reduction of guilt for relatives who finally realize that their ill relatives truly need skilled care.

Medicare doesn't cover all expenses

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Health Insurance Association of America warns older Americans counting on Medicare that it does not cover all expenses and only pays a portion of the services it does cover.

The Association notes that the gaps in Medicare can be covered by private insurance "medigap" policies, and offers these words of advice in buying such policies:

—Look for insurance that effectively supplements Medicare Part B, the part that pays a portion of your doctor, surgical and out-of-hospital costs, because that's the part that needs the most added coverage.

—Beware of buying more insurance than you need, and above all, make sure the policy does not duplicate Medicare benefits.

—Know what your maximum benefits would be; all policies have some kind of limit on benefits.

Doctors cautioned about multi drug use for elders

By PATRICIA MCCORMACK
UPI Health Editor

NEW YORK (UPI) — Some older people take and possess so many drugs they are mini-pharmacies, and a specialist says that most doctors must use extra caution when prescribing tranquilizers and other mind-affecting drugs for the elderly.

"Elderly patients often take several medications simultaneously, which can lead to altered drug effect," Dr. Carl Salzman, of Boston, tells fellow doctors in the report in Hospital & Community Psychiatry, a journal of the American Psychiatric Association.

"As the physical health and independent status of an older person declines, the number of drugs taken usually increases. This combination of falling health, aging body, and multiple drug prescriptions may contribute to alterations in drug effect.

"Practicing clinicians must be aware of these alterations and adjust their prescriptions of psychotropic drugs accordingly," said Salzman, director of psychopharmacology at the Massachusetts Mental Health Center in Boston.

According to one study, an average list of medications taken by elderly medical or surgical patients in a general hospital includes: flurazepam, diazepam, propoxyphene, antibiotics, aspirin, milk of magnesia, stool softeners and vitamins.

Outside the hospital, the elderly may take over-the-counter medications in combination with psychotropic or medical drugs without consulting a physician.

"These non-prescription drugs," Salzman said, "may be sedating" (sleep medications, antihistamines, gastric elixirs that contain alcohol) or may cause or aggravate anticholinergic toxicity (antihistamines, sleep medications.)

Salzman told doctors:

"It is extremely important to determine what medications, including over-the-counter preparations an older patient is taking before prescribing a psychotropic drug."

He made these other points about tranquilizers and other psychotropic drugs:

• They will usually take longer to work in an older patient, will stay longer in the body, and will often produce a greater effect per milligram dosage than it would in a younger person.

• Delayed onset of action can be caused by slower absorption and distribution of the drug.

• A prolonged effect may result from delayed or decreased (or both) drug metabolism by the liver and excretion by the kidneys.

• Enhanced response may occur because of decreases in activity of central nervous system neurotransmitters and altered sensitivity at the drug's site of action.

Salzman suggested the following to fellow clinicians prescribing psychotropic drugs for elderly patients:

1. Keep in mind psychotropic drugs usually have a prolonged and heightened effect on the aging body.

2. Determine all of medications an older patient is taking before prescribing a psychotropic drug. This includes self-prescribed drugs (borrowed or old pills), medications from other physicians, and over-the-counter preparations.

3. Conduct a careful, complete assessment of the patient's physical health before drug treatment begins.

His final caveat:

Any older patient who is receiving a psychotropic drug and who appears restless, agitated, confused, forgetful or depressed may have psychotropic drug toxicity. Drug dosages should be reduced or the drug should be discontinued before another drug is added to the regimen.

Benefits dropped for felons

By JUDY BERGE
© Knight-Ridder Newspapers

You said people convicted of felonies couldn't collect benefits. Yet I read an article that said prisoners were getting $80 million a year in disability benefits in 1980 — E.R.

A. In October 1980, legislation was passed prohibiting payment of Social Security benefits to anyone imprisoned for a felony conviction. Last month, the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services reported that, in accordance with the new legislation, the disability benefits of 4,000 people imprisoned for a felony conviction have been suspended.

Department Secretary Richard Schweiker said the Social Security Administration is taking action to close the loophole that permits payment of survivor benefits to children who murder their parents.

Two minors who killed a parent were eligible for survivors benefits because their cases were tried in California's juvenile court system. The fact that their cases were tried in a juvenile court meant their crimes were not "criminal" in nature and, therefore, they could be paid survivors benefits.

Elderly face large cutbacks in many areas

By NANCY J. SCHWERZLER
© Baltimore Sun

WASHINGTON — The elderly face substantial cutbacks in special housing, nutrition, welfare and jobs programs under President Reagan's Fiscal 1983 budget, contrary to the administration's portrayal of increased expenditures on behalf of the aged.

Cutbacks in three special nutrition programs for the elderly total $47.1 million. About 60,000 aged persons are expected to be removed from the Supplemental Security Income (SSI) welfare rolls. And the administration plans to eliminate a part-time jobs program that provides work to about 54,000 low-income elderly persons.

Health care costs for the elderly also would rise under budget proposals for Medicare. And the children of aged persons confined to nursing homes could be required to pay part of the costs of their parents' care.

Despite these cutbacks and policy shifts contained in the President's new budget, expenditures on behalf of the elderly are rising. But the increase is primarily due to benefits paid automatically by the Social Security trust funds.

The administration cited $209.6 billion in federal spending to benefit the elderly in its new budget, and last week in Minneapolis President Reagan said, "outlays for the elderly for 1983 will be double what they were as recently as 1979."

About 70 percent of the fiscal 1983 expenditures will go for monthly retirement checks from Social Security. During the period cited by the President, retirement spending rose by more than 60 percent.

"The fact of the matter is that there are cutbacks in programs for the elderly — drastic cutbacks — and it is simply not true to say there aren't," said William R. Hutton, executive director of the National Council of Senior Citizens. "The administration is tearing into programs that are barely minimal now," said Dr. Matthew Tayback, the director of Maryland's Office on Aging.

Some job programs, for the elderly, however, would not be cut by the administration's budget proposal. Nancy Reagan's pet project, the Foster Grandparents program, will receive the same amount — $48.4 million — in the new budget as it did in the current year. The program provides part-time jobs for about 18,000 low-income elderly persons who work with handicapped or retarded children.

Another program that pays aged persons to help others who need health care assistance in their homes will also receive the same amount of money — $12 million — as the current budget. About 4,000 persons are employed under this program.

Among the most popular programs for the elderly — among politicians and senior citizens alike — are nutrition efforts such as the "Meals on Wheels" program that delivers food to the homebound elderly, and lunch programs offered at community centers. The Reagan budget proposal would reduce funds for the programs, even while food costs are rising, according to agency officials.

"Meals on Wheels" funds would be cut from $37.4 million in the current budget year to $48.1 million in fiscal 1983. The program offering meals at community centers would be reduced from $26.7 million in the current budget year to $28.1 million in the proposed budget.

In addition, a nutrition program for the elderly operated by the Department of Agriculture and providing commodities and financial aid for senior citizens meals would be transferred from that agency to the Department of Health and Human Services, and its funds would be cut back from $33.2 million in the current year to $24 million in the new budget.

Tayback said the nutrition programs could be forced to reduce the number of meals served by 10 percent to 15 percent because of the reduction in actual dollars as well as inflation in food costs.

The nutrition programs were created by Congress because studies have found elderly persons living alone are often unable to prepare meals for themselves, skip meals or do not have a nutritionally sound diet.

The low-income elderly will face cutbacks not only in programs designed especially for older persons but in general welfare programs as well.

Many elderly persons receiving food stamps could be affected by cost-saving policy changes — such as counting as income the aid to pay fuel bills and raising deductions for other income, such as social security checks.

A study by the Congressional Budget Office last week estimated that 26 percent of the elderly or disabled now receiving food stamps would be declared ineligible under the proposals. Aides to Sen. Patrick J. Leahy (D-Vt.), a member of the Senate nutrition subcommittee, calculated that an elderly couple whose sole income is $5,000 a year in social security benefits would lose 57 percent of their food stamps, from $336 to $114 a year. If the couple received fuel assistance, its food stamps would also be reduced by up to $5.25 for each $10 in energy aid, which Sen. Leahy would impose a "heat or eat" decision on the elderly.

Those who live in senior citizen apartment buildings subsidized by the federal government would have to pay higher rent and their food stamps would be counted as income. Rent increases for these buildings would rise up to 20 percent, because the administration is seeking to lift an existing 10 percent ceiling on annual rent increases under certain housing programs.

Elderly people who receive monthly checks under the Supplemental Social Security Income (SSI) program also will be affected. A number of administrative changes are estimated to trim the number of aged persons on the SSI rolls from 1,448,000 to 1,388,000. For those who remain on SSI, however, the average federal monthly payment to the elderly will rise, from $119.33 in the current budget year to $133.48 in the new budget. (Some states offer additional payments to SSI recipients.)

The price of health care could also increase for the elderly under the Reagan administration's budget plan, both through cutbacks in the Medicare program and higher premiums for private health insurance to pay the bills that Medicare does not. Even though federal Medicare expenditures will rise in the new budget, individuals may have to pay more. The administration is proposing cutbacks in fees paid to hospitals and doctors, which could mean higher out-of-pocket expenses for the elderly or higher insurance premiums.

The Medicaid official believes the administration will have a difficult time convincing Congress to accept cutbacks in programs for the elderly.

Anniversaries

MR. AND MRS. MERRILL PUCKETT

TWIN FALLS — Merrill and Minnie Puckett will be honored on their 50th wedding anniversary at an open house from 5 to 9 p.m. Friday at the home of their daughter and son-in-law, Carol and Gordon Annis, 144 Earl Drive, Twin Falls. All friends and relatives are invited.

Nuclear foes keeping watch

MERCURY, Nev. (UPI) — Ash Wednesday — start of the 40 days of Lent — also marked the beginning of an anti-nuclear Lenten prayer vigil at the gates of the Nevada Test Site, the center of U.S. nuclear weapons testing.

Organizers said people such as Daniel Ellsberg, the former State Department official who released the Pentagon Papers, would join in the protest as Easter Sunday neared. Sister Corrine, minister of General-Sisters of St. Francis in Rome is expected to arrive next month.

Nye County sheriff's deputies prepared for the demonstrators with additional parking spaces, portable toilets, a generator for extra lighting, drinking water and a "No Trespassing" sign across the entrance of the 1,800 square mile test site located 65 miles northwest of Las Vegas.

"They have a right to demonstrate," said Nye County Sheriff's Lt. Jam "Marlino" head of off-site security at the nuclear test facility. "All we are going to do is keep them from trespassing on government property. Everything will be fine as long as it is peaceful.

The Nevada Test Site is a classified area where United States scientists have tested more than 500 nuclear weapons during the past three decades, including the neutron bomb and MX missile warheads.

Dick Clark, a coordinator of the demonstration named "The Lenten Desert Experience," said the protest would begin at 9:30 a.m. at the test site gates with the reading of "a significant statement from prominent religious figures in Rome." He said every day for the next 40 days test site workers would be greeted by demonstrators when they passed through the Nevada Test Site gates in the early morning hours.

The anti-nuclear protest was organized by the Las Vegas Franciscan Center, a facility for the Franciscan Order which is partially supported by the Reno-Las Vegas Diocese Catholic Services Appeal.

Clark said a mass was planned Wednesday in the parking lot at which time the names of alleged victims of nuclear bomb testing would be read. As the names are read demonstrators will beat a sword on an anvil — symbolic of the Bible verse which says "They will beat their swords into plowshares."

The list of victim names ultimately will be burned and protestors will mark their foreheads with the ashes in observance of Ash Wednesday, said organizers.

Sister Rosemary Lynch called it a "non-violent direct action."

"We are not expressing hostility to the test site workers, we want the test site closed to non-military uses." She said protestors hoped to show the need for worldwide nuclear disarmament and a comprehensive test ban treaty between the United States and Russia.

Simplot's 3-year fight with OSHA concludes

BOISE (UPI) — A three-year legal dispute between the J.R. Simplot Co. and the Occupational Safety and Health Administration has ended with the U.S. Supreme Court's refusal to hear the case.

The high court's decision, rendered Monday without comment, lets stand lower court rulings, which have refused to suppress evidence of safety violations gathered by OSHA inspectors.

The dispute began on Sept. 6, 1978, when men from OSHA spent several hours checking a Simplot feedlot west of Caldwell based on an employee's complaint about safety.

The inspectors went across Idaho Highway 18, however, and — for 13 days — scoured the nearby Simplot potato processing plant for safety and health violations.

After that inspection, Simplot was cited for 76 rule violations, with fines totaling $3,330, for both the feedlot and potato plant.

Simplot claimed OSHA should have obtained a warrant to check the employee's complaint about a leaking fuel service truck and unapproved electrical fixtures at the feedlot.

The company went to U.S. District Court at Boise, charging that OSHA abused the warrant it obtained for all "pertinent" facilities on Idaho Highway 19. Simplot argued the evidence gathered in the potato plant should be suppressed because it violated the constitutional protection against unreasonable searches.

Judge Ray McNichols, who signed the warrant, rejected Simplot's contentions — and Simplot appealed.

Of the 76 alleged violations, all but about 25 were resolved, administratively, with Simplot conceding some and OSHA or an administrative law judge dropping others, said Steve Beebe, Simplot's lawyer.

About $2,000 in fines were paid, and violations were corrected.

Sister drove suspects east

OMAHA (UPI) — The sister of one of two suspects wanted in the theft of more than $1 million in rare coins, foreign currency and stock certificates from two Salt Lake City banks — scoured the nearby Simplot potato processing plant for safety and health violations.

An affidavit filed in U.S. District Court for a search warrant also disclosed FBI agents found an ammunition clip, three rounds of 9-millimeter ammunition, an automatic weapon and a Hungarian money wrapper hidden in a false stereo speaker of the van once it reached Lincoln.

The sister of Carmen J. Falzone, 38, Irving, Texas, said she drove Falzone and Kelly Lee Labners, 22, Lincoln, to Lincoln Jan. 30-31. No money was found in the van that FBI agents recovered Feb. 9 in Lincoln, the court document said.

The affidavit said Ms. Labners called Salt Lake City coin collector Norman J. Schultz Jan. 20 and told him she had inherited rare coins from her father and asked him to look at a list and appraise them.

Ms. Labners also asked Schultz if he would sell her rare coins.

Project at Lucky Peak OK'd

BOISE — The Lucky Peak hydroelectric project won approval Tuesday after a year and a half of negotiations between five irrigation districts and Idaho Power, say officials.

The federal project license for the proposed 87.5-megawatt facility was owned by the New York, Wilder, Big Bend, Boise-Kuna and Nampa-Meridian irrigation districts.

The districts agreed through their representative, the Boise Project Board of Control, to transfer the project to the utility for a fee of $5 million a year until 2030, the utility's assumption of the project's liability, financing and construction costs.

The Federal Energy Regulatory Commission must now approve the deal, as does Idaho's Public Utilities Commission if Idaho Power is to recoup the estimated $96 to $116 million cost of the project from ratepayers.

The federal license stipulates construction on the project at Lucky Peak Dam must begin by June.

Board manager Boyce Van Curran said construction crews would first drill to determine the best site for a tunnel through the dam connecting to the four-turbine hydroelectric plant.

Board members said they would use the license fees to repair and maintain irrigation facilities and to hold down irrigation assessments.

Idaho Power Vice President Logan Lanham said the powerplant could begin generating electricity by 1986, and said the transfer to the utility from the five districts will make it easier to obtain the necessary financing for the project than previously suggested deals.

Women say volcano area not posted

SEATTLE (UPI) — Three women who lost relatives in the May 18, 1980, eruption of Mount St. Helens say the government is to blame for not providing adequate safeguards.

The three women held a news conference Tuesday to air their complaints against the "myth" that those who did were foolish for venturing so close to an active volcano.

Barbara Karr of Kent, who lost her husband, Dave, and two sons, Andrew, 11, and Michael, 9, said she called the U.S. Geological Survey to check on conditions before their trip.

"I was referred to the Forest Service, so I called them," Mrs. Karr said. "I was told they should stay at high altitudes and avoid river and stream valleys to be safe."

"There was no mention of the possibility of a lateral explosion, which took place, which would kill them on a high altitude."

She said no warning signs were visible on the logging road taken by her husband and children on the day of the blast.

Spy Boyce receives 3 years for escape

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Convicted spy Christopher Boyce has been sentenced to another three years in prison for an escape inspired by the motion picture "Escape From Alcatraz" — which had earlier been shown to inmates.

Details of what authorities called a carefully planned prison escape were disclosed in government documents presented Tuesday during sentencing proceedings.

Boyce was serving a 40-year term for espionage and sale of national security secrets to the Soviets when he escaped from the federal prison in Lompoc in January, 1980. He was captured 19 months later at Port Angeles, Wash.

Despite the government's attempt to get the maximum five-year prison term on the escape charge, U.S. District Court Judge Lawrence T. Lydick imposed the three-year term.

Boyce, the 28-year-old son of a former FBI agent, repudiated with a terse "No" when asked by the judge if he had anything to say in his defense before sentencing.

Boyce and two others have also been indicted on eight counts of armed robbery involving bank hold-ups in Idaho, Montana and Washington during Boyce's 19-months as a fugitive.

Watt's wild area act under attack

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — Environmentalists who were already skeptical of Interior Secretary James Watt's new wilderness bill said the act might well be called "The Wilderness Destruction Act of 1982."

Michael D. Scott, southwest regional representative for the Wilderness Society, called the bill "a travesty — an absolute travesty."

Scott said the bill would indeed — as Watt said Sunday — stop development in designated wilderness areas until the year 2000.

However, after that time he said there would be virtually no protection for the wilderness, and the only way mineral development could be stopped is by a specific act of Congress. The current wilderness act ends mineral leasing at the end of this year.

"The Bill we've seen is titled the Wilderness Inventory and Protection Act of 1982. It might well be called the Wilderness Destruction Act of 1982," he said.

Interior officials say the bill obtained by the Wilderness Society is only an early version of the measure they intend to submit to Congress.

Scott said the bill he obtained was apparently sent from the Interior Department to key Capitol Hill officials either Friday or Monday.

William Turnage, executive director of the Wilderness Society, said Watt was "misrepresenting the intentions of the American people and arrogantly misleading Congress" when he said Sunday the new bill would protect the nation's primitive areas.

Rep. John Seiberling, D-Ohio, chairman of the House subcommittee on public lands and national parks, said Tuesday that the draft is "deficient and unacceptable in every major respect."

"I've learned by now to look for fishhooks in Mr. Watt's glittering proposals," the chairman said. "This particular one appears to be an attempt by the secretary to portray himself as pro-wilderness when he's actually developing legislation to gut the nation's wilderness system."

"He's asking us to sacrifice wilderness protection after the year 2000 in exchange for no mineral development in the next year and a half — hardly a fair trade," Seiberling said.

One provision of the leaked bill would set deadlines for Congress to act on proposed wilderness on Forest Service by 1985, and on Bureau of Land Management wilderness proposals by 1987. If no action is taken by those deadlines, the lands would be dropped from wilderness consideration.

"Once the deadlines have passed, there's a specific problem against either of the agencies looking at those lands again for wilderness unless given approval by Congress," Scott said.

The Forest Service in 1979 recommended that eight million acres of land be considered for wilderness designation. Congress has not yet acted on recommendations for land in California, Oregon, Washington, Wyoming, Montana, Arizona, Idaho or Nevada.

Some 23 million acres of BLM are under study as wilderness areas. Those studies aren't expected to be completed until about 1985.

If something interferes with a decision, the wilderness could be lost, Scott said. "We all know how long it takes for something to happen in Congress," Scott said.

Home of lab owner yields more fetuses

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Another 200 to 400 human fetuses and embryos have been found at the home of a medical lab owner.

Officials say as many as 2,000 may have been stored on the property.

Earlier this month, a cache of what authorities called "at least 500" fetuses and embryos was found inside a huge metal shipping container that had been stored at Malvin Weisberg's suburban Woodland Hills home.

Weisberg, owner of the now-defunct Medical Analytic Laboratories Inc., has been meeting with representatives of the district attorney's office in an effort by prosecutors to determine whether any laws have been violated.

Weisberg has been cooperating with authorities and he voluntarily reported the additional fetuses, county officials said.

Officials say as many as 2,000 fetuses and embryos may have kept at Weisberg's home.

The Santa Monica-based laboratory was closed last March, but Weisberg was keeping most of the fetuses and embryos in the cargo container he bought from the Martin Container Co. in Wilmington.

Spokane River crests, begins falling

SPOKANE (UPI) — The Spokane River crested at 27.9 feet about 10 p.m. Tuesday night.

By Wednesday morning, the river, fed by swollen tributaries in north Idaho via Coeur d'Alene Lake, had receded to 27.7 feet. Flood stage is 27 feet.

Area officials reported some minor flooding at the lowest points along the river, but no homes were in danger and little damage was reported.

Meanwhile, the National Weather Service reported Lake Coeur d'Alene measured at 94.58 feet early Wednesday morning. Flood stage for the lake is 94 feet.

2 Wyoming miners die under rock

HANNA, Wyo. (UPI) — Two miners were killed Friday when an unintentional rock fall in the underground coal mine six miles west of Hanna.

An Energy Development Company spokesman said Steven Olivas, 28, of Rock River, Wyo., and Cordell Rentry, 23, of Hanna were crushed Friday when an unintentional rock fall occurred in the bolted overlying rock strata while a continuous mining machine was withdrawing from the immediate area.

The Carbon County coroner said Bruce Parker, 26, of Rawlins, Wyo., was in stable condition in the Carbon County Memorial Hospital after surgery for several fractures.

Both the coroner and the office of the Wyoming State Mine Inspector were investigating the accident, which produced Wyoming's first mining fatalities of the year.

U.S. budget cuts menace lead in space

CHENEY, Wash. (UPI)—The co-producer of the public television series "Cosmos" says if the United States continues to curtail its space exploration program, it could become the "Portugal of the 21st century."

B. Gentry Lee said the U.S. is abandoning its role as pioneering leader in space exploration and its going to coast dearly in the long run.

Lee is project engineer for the Galileo Mission to Jupiter, and was co-producer with Carl Sagan of the widely-acclaimed television series, "Cosmos."

"President Reagan's attitude is that space exploration for other than military purposes is a waste of time and money," Lee told an audience at Eastern Washington University Tuesday.

"That is frighteningly similar to the attitude Portugal's Prince Henry had toward exploration of the New World."

He warned that unless there is a drastic change in the Reagan administration's attitude toward the space program, Galileo is likely to be the last of the National Aeronautic and Space Administration's knowledge-gathering missions.

"Americans are not happy with the decline of the space program. Public opinion polls show broad support for space exploration."

He predicted Japan would be the likely successor to the U.S. as the leader in space exploration for peaceful purposes.

"The Japanese government understands the importance such a program holds for scientific development, as well as for development of a positive world image," said Lee.

"The Japanese have already said they plan to be the world leader in space exploration by 1990," the scientist said.

Lee added it may already be too late for the United States to retain its position as world leader.

WORST WINTER SINCE '49 FROZEN SALE

1982 can now be definitely designated as the worst year since 1949 for high drifts, deep snow, frostbitten fingers and ears, frozen water pipes and fuel lines and bad roads, but long after the memories of the bitter cold and drifted snow of '82 have faded from the mind; Swensen's are sure you'll have fond memories and sweet reminiscences of the low prices in their cold freezers during Swensen's 1982 frozen food sale this week.

Buhl mulls middle-school concept to solve overcrowding

By GLEN WARCHOL
Times-News writer

BUHL — Like most school districts in the Magic Valley, Buhl is contending with increasing enrollment, which has overcrowded the district's grade school.

To meet the problem, Buhl could build four additional classrooms at Poppewell Elementary School, which is well over its 800-student capacity. That option would cost $300,000 to $400,000, and according to Superintendent Bob Pratt, the district would have difficulty "floating" a bond for the project.

Instead, the Buhl school board gave the administration approval Monday night to develop a detailed proposal and cost estimates to change the structure of the school district from a junior-high system to a middle-school concept.

Basically, the concept would shift one grade level to the next higher building, beginning with the sixth grade at Poppewell.

Under a middle-school system, Poppewell Elementary would have kindergarten through fifth-grade classes, the middle school would handle grades six through eight and the high school would handle grades nine through 12.

Pratt said the additional classrooms freed by removing the sixth grade from Poppewell would solve the overcrowding problem, and the addition of the ninth grade to the high school will work well, since that building is about 100 students under capacity.

The cost of the conversion — $20,000 to $25,000 for an additional lab and classroom — would be minimal, he said, considering the cost of expanding the elementary school. State financial aid is a possibility for some areas of the conversion and would reduce the cost even more, Pratt said.

The shifting of grades would reap additional benefits for the district, according to superintendent. Those benefits include:

- The ninth grade would be reunited with the senior high, as it had been in past years, which will give more cohesiveness for the academic and extracurricular programs of those grades.

- Ninth-graders would no longer have to travel to the high school for courses that only are offered there.
- Grouping grades six through eight in the middle school would offer better age compatibility and would mean a reduction of the discipline problems associated with the junior high.
- In the middle school, the sixth grade would have better accessibility to the music, physical-education, chorus and band programs.

The change would relieve the district's overcrowding problem for at least the next five years, and probably 10 to 12 years, Pratt said.

Ketchum comp plan meetings scheduled

KETCHUM — City officials are calling on the public to take part in the first total review of Ketchum's comprehensive plan since its adoption in 1977.

Sixteen public meetings are planned over the next six weeks. They will cover, in order:

- Economic development, population and housing.
- Impact areas, growth management and land use.
- Public services, facilities and utilities, and transportation and recreation.
- Natural resources, hazardous areas and special areas or sites.
- Implementation of community development plans.

The first public meeting was held Wednesday night. Subsequent meetings, all to be held beginning at 7 p.m. at the Old City Hall off Main Street, are scheduled for: March 4, 8, 9, 11, 16, 17, 18, 22, 23, 24, 29, 30, 31, and April 6 and 8.

The highly compressed schedule of meetings follows a mandate from Ketchum City Council earlier this month that the city's planning and zoning commissions table all further regular work to concentrate on the comprehensive plan update. A final recommendation is due to council by the end of April.

The review, designed to plot growth in the community for the next several years, is needed before council can address several priority concerns in the city, including adequate zoning for "time-share" residences and methods of handling growth with limited sewage-system capabilities.

Although the city is preparing a bond issue for wastewater treatment plant improvements, those improvements are designed only to handle moderate growth for approximately five years, roughly the life of the updated comprehensive plan.

Jerome man enters race for clerk post

JEROME — Dick Goetsch of Jerome has announced his candidacy as a Republican for the office of county clerk-auditor.

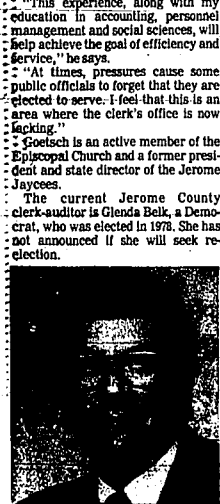

A 14-year resident of Jerome, Goetsch says his experience over the past 20 years includes "management and supervisory responsibilities, with primary emphasis on finance, accounting, budgeting and data processing."

"This experience, along with my education in accounting, personnel management and social sciences, will help achieve the goal of efficiency and service," he says.

"At times, pressures cause some public officials to forget that they are elected to serve. I feel that this is an area where the clerk's office is now lacking."

Goetsch is an active member of the Episcopal Church and a former president and state director of the Jerome Jaycees.

The current Jerome County clerk-auditor is Glenda Belk, a Democrat, who was elected in 1978. She has not announced if she will seek reelection.

Hagerman artist invents the tools he needs to work

By TERRELL WILLIAMS
Times-News correspondent

HAGERMAN — Crayons aren't just for children anymore.

A Hagerman artist will soon be marketing his latest invention, a hot, colored-wax art kit.

"My latest sideline, of all things, is crayolas," says George Dotson, opening a display of his colorful scenes, sketched in wax. "Actually, it's a new kind of an art form that I hope to introduce. I've dreamed up this tool for working wax. It's similar to a soldering tool but not as hot."

The art-with-wax idea is not his own, he says, but the special tools and kit are his concept.

Dotson is now in the process of assembling his "Art 'N Wax" kits, each of which will include two dozen glossy-finished cards with envelopes and a warming plate, designed by Dotson, to lay the cards on for the first coats of melted background colors.

The drawing tool, a supply of crayons, an acrylic finish to preserve each picture and illustrated instructions complete the kit, which will sell for $29.85.

A few of his friends who are trying out the kit have given the inventor enthusiastic encouragement, so he intends to market the package in March.

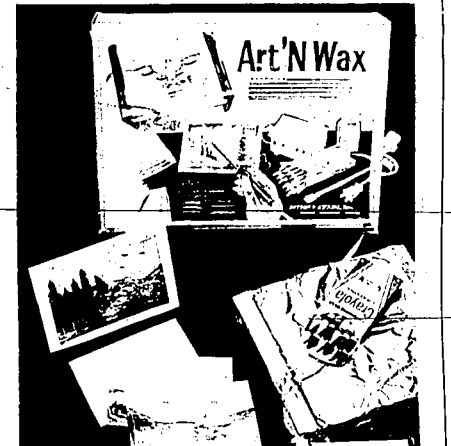

"Kind of far out, huh?" says Dotson, 62, as he completes a demonstration card. "I've tried oil painting, and it was a disaster. I just didn't go for it."

Over the years, Dotson has tried many things and successfully has produced and marketed some clever inventions.

One area of expertise is working with stones and precious metals.

During his 25 years as a professional jeweler, Dotson was always trying to figure out easier, faster or more precise ways to do his work.

Assessor says homeowners' exemption needed

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

JEROME — Idaho homeowners should urge their legislators to push for property-tax exemption legislation, according to Jerome County Assessor William Kersey.

He said that unless the Legislature enacts such legislation or continues the present exemption schedule, taxpayers may have a rude awakening this December.

Kersey said that if the current partial property-tax exemption is not continued, every owner of residential property in the state could be in trouble.

"I would personally like to see all classifications of property taxed on a basis of 100 percent of market value and budgets held at a reasonable level," he said.

However, Kersey said without the homeowners' exemptions, a Jerome County resident with a $30,000 market-value house would pay about $73 more in property taxes each year. A $45,000 to $50,000 home would cost up to $122 more a year.

He said under the full market-value assessment on residential property, homeowners would be paying an excessive share of county taxes unless some equalizing measure is offered.

He said the latest proposal he has heard would grant a $15,000 or 30 percent exemption, whichever is smaller, to homeowners.

"We make exemptions to farmers, business owners and industrial property owners, but the homeowner has been getting tax increases pretty consistently lately," he said.

Despite the One Percent Initiative, legislation to allow assessment of residential property at full market value has meant the homeowner has not realized much benefit, he said.

Kersey said if limitations are not imposed, taxing agencies will go to a minimum level.

For example, he said when the Jerome Recreation District was formed, it was allowed a maximum 3-mill levy. The homeowners' whose property was assessed on a basis of $10,000 under the old system, prior to the One-Percent Initiative, is now at a full market value of probably $30,000.

"You can see what a 3-mill levy would do to the property owner, just on that small district alone, and we have school districts, highway districts and other agencies, all in need of more money," he said.

Jerome police ask citizens to help with crime prevention

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

JEROME — Two members of the Jerome Police Department have been assigned to a crime-prevention detail and are organizing a Neighborhood Watch program for the city.

Police Chief Darryl Cameron says officers Dennis Rinehart and Mark Lockwood attended special training programs and are available to work with neighborhood groups interested in the crime-prevention program.

The two officers are meeting with service organizations, senior citizens and other individuals to promote crime prevention in residential areas. A meeting has been held with the Optimist Club, and others are being arranged.

"We haven't had a lot of residential burglaries, compared to Twin Falls and some other Magic Valley towns, but want to be sure we don't have," Cameron says.

Rinehart says the Jerome program is patterned after the Boise Neighborhood Watch program in most respects.

"We are also hoping to designate one home in each neighborhood as a 'block home,' where nearby residents can go for help in an emergency," Rinehart says. "If a child is lost or someone alone is being harassed or threatened, they could call on the block-home residents at any hour of the day or night for assistance."

Rinehart said the Jerome department also is offering security inspections of homes and will make recommendations for better burglar-proof measures.

"One of the first things we want to do is get people to use the locks they already have on their doors. Many people are leaving their homes unlocked, especially during daytime. It only takes a burglar a few minutes to go in and leave the homeowner with a big loss," Rinehart says.

Other goals of the program include Operation Identification, the marking of valuable possessions with an identification number and the listing of appliances, guns, skis, jewelry and other valuables.

"But don't leave the list in the house, or a burglar can use it to quickly locate the best merchandise," Rinehart says.

The crime-prevention officers also want to train individuals in observing and giving accurate descriptions of prowlers, burglars or other suspicious individuals they may see in residential areas.

"We consider a prowler is a prospective burglar or perpetrator of some other crime," Rinehart says.

He and Lockwood have scheduled a meeting at the Jerome Senior Citizens Center on March 31 to bring as many senior citizens into the program as possible. He said senior citizens have brought excellent results in Neighborhood Watch programs around the state.

Any resident in Jerome interested in having a Neighborhood Watch program in his or her part of town should contact the crime-prevention officers. The officers will offer information on getting neighbors together, and then they will schedule a meeting in the neighborhood to explain the program and help with the organization.

Rinehart says there is no target date for citywide organization, but rather, the project is a continuing program. Once organizations are established, they must be kept active and updated on prevention measures, and new members must be brought in as neighborhoods change.

County supports land swap

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

JEROME — Land-exchange proposals between the Bureau of Land Management and the U.S. Forest Service drew support Monday from the Jerome County commissioners.

As part of a plan to inform elected officials about the proposal, representatives of the two agencies met with the commissioners to explain the proposal and answer questions.

Ed Waldapfel, the public information officer for the Sawtooth National Forest, said there is no Forest Service land in Jerome County, but a land exchange would involve many Jerome County residents who utilize present Forest Service lands for various purposes.

"Our primary goals are to reduce government costs and improve services to the public," Waldapfel said. "If we find the proposal meets these goals, we will go ahead. If it does not, the plan will be dropped."

Commissioner Russell Howell Jr. said he was concerned about revenue from the federal payment-in-lieu-of-taxes program, not only for Jerome County but for some smaller counties that depend largely on that money for survival.

Waldapfel assured the commissioners there would be no change in the PILT funds as a result of a land exchange. The federal lands would remain under either Forest Service or BLM jurisdiction, and there would be no difference in PILT money because of a change in agency control.

He also said that any current use or permit on the federal lands would remain unchanged until the normal time for renewal or review. However, there would be some changes, since the two agencies have different regulations on land use, Waldapfel said.

Jack Durham, of the BLM's Shoshone District, said there are now many areas in the local district where BLM personnel must drive through Forest Service land to reach their own ranges, and the same holds true with Forest Service personnel. He said by consolidating scattered areas under one agency, it stands to reason money would be saved.

He said the proposal is in keeping with the Reagan administration's effort to cut government costs.

Waldapfel asked the commissioners if they favored a large-scale exchange of land, or if they would rather see small, isolated parcels of land under one agency turned over to the other to smooth boundaries and eliminate the small parcels.

Commission Chairman Mel Grindstaff said the exchange concept sounded reasonable, but he felt if the exchange is made, it should follow a larger scope throughout the state.

Commissioners Howell and Henry Schutte supported the chairman's recommendations.

George Dotson works on an original wax-art creation

Inventor

To do more intricate stone inlays, Dotson bought a $10,000 halftone tool-and-dye making machine and began experimenting to adapt it to cut stones.

After five years, Dotson's determination and patience began to pay off when he completed his first inlay, a colorful Jasper and agate cockatoo set in black jade.

When asked how he did the inlay, Dotson laughs and says, "How do you fly a jet plane? It's a bit complicated to explain."

Basically, he says, the machine vibrates 28,000 times per second, driving a pre-shaped abrasive about halfway into the jade to cut out an intricate hole. Then, a tiny vibrating "cookie-cutter" attachment cuts a "plug" from the colored agate to fit into the jade's hole, with less than one 10,000th of an inch clearance.

"You couldn't see the lines," Dotson says of his first completed inlay. "People thought they were just painted on, so I went back to a coarser abrasive so people would believe it was pieces of stone."

"Without bragging, I'm the only guy in the country that's ever done this successfully," he says. "It's quite a process to learn. I've never finished developing it."

Dotson describes himself as a shy person whose spacious shop — kept tidy and warm — is his second home. "I'm always branching into something I don't know anything about, instead of what I already know," he says.

Modern manufacturing equipment, such as a 60-ton pressure hydraulic press, two large punch presses, a metal lathe and a variety of drills, saws, grinders, welders and scales, help Dotson produce his inventions.

The "cab master" tool has been one of his most successful creations. "I've sold thousands of these," Dotson says, showing how the handy twist tool grips a stone cabochon — an uncut stone for jewelry — to grind and polish, eliminating the slow, conventional method of waxing a stick to the back of the stone.

Another big seller is Dotson's "ring gripper," a tool which is twisted to expand inside a ring to hold it firmly for buffing and polishing. The gripper is advertised in stonework supply catalogs nationwide.

Moving smoothly on ball-bearings, the "precision slab trimmer" is a Dotson invention that inscribes a line across a sheet of stone, so that it can be fractured like glass.

"It saves having to do all that trim sawing, where the oil comes up your arms and all over your eyeglasses," Dotson says.

Colorful ring display clips, stone display stands and "gem bobs" to pin small stones in hair or hats are some other Dotson inventions on the market.

"You have to be your own taskmaster," the artist says of his work as an inventor. "You can't goof around and still make a living at it."

Many would-be inventors, Dotson says, are frustrated because their ideas are good, but they are not able to produce and market their own products.

"I get my own projects off the ground," Dotson says. He does not have to depend on others since he can do most of his own manufacturing, and he has connections to sell his finished products without hiring the proverbial middleman.

His wife, Virginia, says she is glad she saved a few of her husband's finest stone inlay pieces, since he has now moved on to a myriad of other projects. Saving the inlays was difficult because they sold so fast.

But, she says, her husband has never been known to devote himself to something he already can do. "George is always looking for a challenge."

Hailey council sets design goals for water, hydro work

HAILEY — Meeting in special session Monday, Hailey City Council decided to proceed with studies to construct a hydroelectric facility at the city's Indian Springs water storage site.

Council accepted a proposal for a small generating unit that could make use of the existing water supply. The city also had been considering a larger facility that would have required a small dam to be constructed.

The project, an adjunct to a proposal to expand the capacity of the city's water supply and system, is in the early stages of planning at present. Council is considering asking the voters to approve a bond issue of approximately $400,000 to pay for construction of the facility, but designs and a financial consultant have not been determined, nor has the exact amount of the bond issue been set.

The city hopes to use the facility to generate power that could be sold to public utilities, generating revenue for the city.

Mayor Wordell Rainey said a decision on the financial consultant could be made at the next regular council meeting on March 8. Rainey also said council agreed to proceed with plans to install a million-gallon storage tank as part of the water system project. Rainey said council determined the cost of the tank was not significantly higher than an alternate proposal for a 500,000-gallon tank.

Floyd Silva demonstrates one of the commemorative train whistles that Shoshone's centennial committee will sell

Train whistles sound Shoshone centennial call

Activities shaping up for July event

By JANENE BUCKWAY
Times-News correspondent

SHOSHONE — Old-time train whistles are signaling the start of Shoshone's centennial celebration.

Floyd Silva, a member of the centennial committee, has obtained approximately 100 wooden whistles that recreate the sound of early train whistles.

The whistles are about seven inches long and an inch square. One side is imprinted with the picture of an old train, while the other reads "Shoshone Centennial 1882-1982."

The whistles, which sell for $10, are a fitting symbol and souvenir for a town whose Chamber of Commerce says, "We have the widest main street in the United States," because of the four sets of railroad tracks running through the middle of town.

The town of Shoshone officially was surveyed and organized in October 1882, and it owes much of its existence to the railroad. Shoshone became an "end-of-track" site in February 1883, while crews constructed a line to Halley.

Shoshone always has been on the main line between Ogden, Utah, and Seattle, and it still serves as a passenger stop for Amtrak.

The 100 years of Shoshone's history will be celebrated this year with a full slate of activities scheduled for July.

Preliminary events include the sale of commemorative T-shirts by the high school Spanish club and a slogan contest sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce.

According to chamber President Charles Haszler, the chamber will accept centennial slogans through March 1. The winning slogan will be used during the celebration and printed on bumper stickers.

The person submitting the winning slogan will receive a $20 prize. Gary Fulkerson, the chairman of the centennial committee, says the celebration will begin July 21 with the Old-time Fiddlers Jamboree. And a historical pageant is planned for the weekend of July 18.

The pageant is being prepared by Luella Kinsey, and it will depict the history and development of the town, including the infamous and colorful times when the railroad and sheep-raising made the community a boom town.

"The part of 'Whispering Ted,' Shoshone's famous brothel madam, has already been cast," Fulkerson said. "We had a volunteer for that part."

The week ending July 21 will feature a flea market in the town park. "We will sell space for a modest fee, just to cover costs," Fulkerson said. "We would like antiques, arts and crafts, and the like. People just need to get in touch with the chamber."

Also planned is a buffalo barbecue, which will be prepared by a local restaurant.

The month-long celebration will end with the Lincoln County Fair and Rodeo.

In the Valley

Weed-control meeting is today

GOODING — Problems with weeds will be the focus of a special meeting at the Lincoln Inn in Gooding today.

The Gooding County weed-control seminar will begin at 9:30 a.m., with a variety of classes on herbicides and weed control scheduled throughout the day. At 2 p.m., the annual county weed-control meeting will begin.

Experts from the University of Idaho, the county extension office, officials of various Gooding County governments concerned with weed control and representatives of several herbicide manufacturers will take part in the event.

Classes for GED begin in Gooding

GOODING — A class for individuals who did not receive a high-school diploma but feel the need for its equivalent — the general educational development certificate — will be held in Gooding County each Monday.

To qualify for the class, participants must be 18 or their high-school class must have graduated. Participants also must have finished the eighth grade.

The class will meet from 7 to 9 p.m. every Monday in the Gooding High School library. The first session begins March 15. There is no charge for the classes, which are designed to assist participants in passing the six tests necessary to obtain GED certification.

"The cost for all six tests, however, is $24. That fee will be collected the first night of the class.

The program is sponsored by the College of Southern Idaho and the Gooding School District, through the state Department of Education and a federal grant.

For additional information, call 733-8554, extension 361.

Police chief is back at work

GOODING — Bill Bunn, the police chief of Gooding, has returned to his duties on a limited basis.

Bunn was hospitalized in January with an apparent heart problem.

"He's doing well and the prognosis is good," Mayor Gene Heller said Wednesday.

According to Heller, Bunn is in his office an hour or two a day, and is spending the rest of his time recuperating at home.

Fish hatchery provides funds

HAGERMAN — Gooding County has received $3,944 in federal revenue-sharing money to offset the costs of providing services to the Hagerman National Fish Hatchery.

Fund beneficiaries include the Hagerman School District and a county highway district.

"The payment is similar to the 'payments in lieu of taxes' most counties in the Magic Valley receive annually for federal lands exempt from property taxes, a hatchery of-ficial said.

Gooding chamber elects officers

GOODING — Five directors, the president and other top officers were elected recently by the Gooding Chamber of Commerce.

Mel Magnoli, the manager of Gooding's Volvo store, is the chamber's new president. Jim Kirkland, the manager of the local Idaho Power Co. office, was named first vice president, Pam Yore was elected second vice president and Dale Ricks, the manager of the Gooding branch of the First Interstate Bank of Idaho, is the group's new treasurer.

Directors elected were Marvin Brown, Chic Crane, Jim Kirkland, Doris Oakley and Pam Yore.

Gooding Mayor Gene Heller's appointment as secretary-manager for the chamber was reaffirmed.

Hagerman taps chamber officers

HAGERMAN — Officers for the Hagerman Valley Chamber of Commerce were elected recently.

Burt Holmes of the Rock Lodge Motel was chosen as president, Larry Crutchfield of Strickland Real Estate was elected vice president, Ann Barsuglia of The Enterprise newspaper was named secretary and Mike Buhler of Idaho State Bank was chosen as treasurer. Don Higginson, area park manager, was elected as member-at-large.

A fishing derby, sponsored by the chamber, is planned for the first week in March. Bill McLeod was chosen as chairman of the derby committee.

The group also discussed detailed plans for a tourist brochure of the Hagerman Valley and the surrounding area.

Gooding hospital hears proposal for physical therapy department

By STEPHANIE SCHOROW
Times-News writer

GOODING — A proposal to establish a physical therapy department at Gooding County Memorial Hospital was presented to hospital board members at their meeting last week.

Saying the service was needed in the area and could bring revenue to the financially troubled hospital, two physical therapists from Twin Falls outlined three proposals for the board's consideration.

Gary Garrison and Dean Mayes of the Magic Valley Rehabilitation and Physical Therapy Clinic, 552 Shoup Ave. W., said that judging from their Gooding-area referrals, a new department would attract about 15 patients per week. Since patients are generally seen two to three times a week, 30 to 45 weekly "treatments" would be given.

Income to the hospital could run from $7,800 to $17,000 a year, depending on the kind of contract developed and the number of patients, they said. Garrison said that the possibility of creating a physical therapy department in the hospital's solarium was first discussed four years ago.

Dr. A. W. Leecher has been promoting the physical therapy proposal as an alternative to the hospital's plan to temporarily house recovering alcoholics.

Under one of the clinic's proposals, equipment, manpower and administration would be provided by the clinic, while space and billing would be done by the hospital. About 90 percent of the income would go to the clinic, 20 percent to the hospital. The hospital would get an estimated $7,800 to $11,700 a year, while the clinic would receive $31,200 to $46,800 a year.

The clinic estimated that about $10,742 in physical therapy equipment would be needed for a department.

The board took no action on the proposals. Members said they would review the issue at a later meeting.

In other business, the board voted to switch to another emergency-room contract. Its present contract expires June 30.

The board will drop its contract with Spectrum Emergency Care of Colorado Springs, Colo., for weekend coverage of the emergency room and sign one with Eaton-Young Inc. of Boise.

The Eaton-Young firm will hire Dr. Vale Chapman, now serving as an emergency physician with Spectrum, according to Ed Myers, the hospital administrator.

Myers said Eaton-Young offered to provide additional medical services, as well as emergency coverage, for the state at a fee Spectrum charged. The basic fee is $28.50 an hour, or about $35,000 a year, Myers said.

Donation program may help city park fight funding limits

By SUSAN GALLAGHER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Park maintenance and municipal youth programs in Twin Falls may be funded partially by donations this year. Mayor Chris Talkington says about $3,500 has been pledged for an experimental program, and more contributions are expected. Under the tentative program, to be presented to council for consideration next month, the city would contract with Magic Valley Rehabilitation Services for park maintenance workers,

Talkington said. Civic contributions also would help support youth recreation programs, according to mayor, who said some of the money could be used to pay umpires for Little League baseball. Organizations and firms that have pledged money include the American Legion and the Southern Idaho Distributing Co., he said. The beverage distributor also has offered to supply about $1,000 worth of garbage cans for park use. Talkington said the plan has been a pet project of his. He emphasized that it is experimental. "I don't know how many jobs were talking about, but it's not many," Talkington said of the contract with MVRC. The agency trains handicapped persons and helps them find jobs. In terms of the level of service for park users and youths, Talkington said the city "will be doing well if we can hold the status quo." If funds permit, the city could consider hiring an off-duty policeman for park patrol duty, he said. Privately funded maintenance and patrols, provided in conjunction with the city's regular services, were discussed last summer as a way to control unruly behavior and litter at Harmon Park, where residents of the area complained repeatedly about conditions around the park.

Literary magazine will fold

High school creative writing class faces financial problems

Inscapes offers outlet for young writers

By GLEN WARCHOL
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — "As I say a word, you have to go with it," Dolores Dudley instructs her class. "Bounce off the words." Actually the word "instructs" is a poor choice for what happens in her class. Dudley works with the Twin Falls High School "Inscapes" class, the creative writing class that gives painful birth every spring to the school's literary magazine. The magazine's title is an allusion to landscapes of the mind. Today, Dudley is guiding the class through a creative experiment — flow-of-consciousness writing. Every half-minute or so — like literary batting practice — she pitches a word at the class. "Hoses" and "edges" are the first words, both curves. As the words flash by, the students must weave them into a tapestry of ideas, a growing mosaic of their own. "Don't think; just write," Dudley commands. Despite her lack of formal classroom procedures and discipline in such things as seating and speaking in turn, the room is silent. You can hear the pencils and pens scraping against paper. The silence of concentration is so complete the Times-News photographer's motor-driven camera sounds like a spring-powered freight train as he takes a picture. "force... light... shapes," Dudley fires off the words like fastballs, pausing a few seconds between each. As they field the chosen words, some of the students laugh to themselves, but most are hunched over in concentration. Their creations stumble forward. "Does it hang together at all?" Dudley asks, half rhetorically. "Does it feel like a dream?" Ironically, Inscapes itself will soon enter the nether world of dreams and memories at the high school. The magazine — and the creative writing class that produces it — will end this year. The 100-odd pages of student verse, prose and graphics have become too expensive for the class to print, according to Dudley, who has sponsored it for 12 of its 14 years of existence. "We aren't financed by the school," she says. "We are totally self-sufficient. We do everything but the printing." The magazine has been supported by its $2.50 cover price — $3 this year — and four pages of advertising sold to area merchants. Unfortunately, Dudley says, advertising has become scarce in the past two years, with businesses tightening their belts. Financial support requires more and more legwork for the students. Dudley is reluctant to allow the ad hustling to overshadow the creative writing aspects of the class. "Last year, they just weren't taking out ads at all," she says. "I just can't justify kids going out into the community to get ads." This is not the first year of hard times for Inscapes, Dudley says, but the kindness of printers and the support of understanding patrons always has managed to get the ink on the paper, except in 1980 when no issue was published. Four years ago, Dudley had the 250 copies of the magazine printed for about $200. This year it will cost approximately $700 — a reasonable price, she says, considering it's a discount offered by the assistant publisher of the North Side News, Buzz Langdon. Without that aid, printing costs would be just under $1,000, she says. Inscapes, however, is more than paper and ink to the classes that have published it. The magazine gives the writers something concrete to show for their year's effort and creative growth. "It's different from other classes because they have an actual finished product in their hands," Dudley says. More importantly, Inscapes is possibly the only avenue of expression for the young writers' thoughts and creations, something that excites them and their instructor. "They'll put down their innermost thoughts," Dudley says. "If they do something they like, they'll want you to see it, even if it's a graphic description of their last date." Dudley describes the literary magazine's end with words usually reserved for the demise of living things. "I tried to let it die two years ago, but it came back like a phoenix," she says. "I thought I owed it to the kids." But after struggling the past two years to keep the magazine on its feet, Dudley is ready to let it stay down for the full count of 10 at the end of this year. For a dedicated writing teacher, however, it's not an easy thing to do. "I hate to see the class die."

Senate OKs displaced homemaker $$

BOISE (UPI) — The Senate approved a bill Wednesday, 21 to 14, to set up a special state account for the Twin Falls-based displaced homemakers program and impose a new $20 divorce filing fee to provide revenue for the fund. The fee would be "peanuts" compared to attorneys' fees in divorces, and the 2-year-old Center for New Directions program "is the best bargain in the state," said Sen.

Norma Dohler, D-Moscow, the bill's sponsor. If the measure is approved by the House, the state Vocational Education Department would administer the program, which now is confined to the Twin Falls pilot program at the College of Southern Idaho. Sen. John Barker, R-Buhl, said it has been unfair not to spread the program to other sectors of the state. He said establishment of the dedicated fund would help pay for the program's expansion. The only lawmaker to debate against the bill, Sen. James Risch, R-Boise, said an extra divorce fee "is not an appropriate way to fund this program." He said the program "should stand on its own two feet... and should be funded out of the general fund." Risch also said it appeared to him the sponsors of the bill wanted to set up the fund because they feared lawmakers will slash the program's existing general-fund base. He also said the measure would deprive the Legislature of regular control over the program. One hour later in the House, representatives approved, 53 to 13, a Senate bill that removes a "sunset" clause from the law and allows the displaced homemakers program to continue. When the 1980 Legislature created the program, it attached a clause that, if not removed, would end the program June 30.

Hydro plant application nears

By Associated Press

MALTA — The Raft River Electric Cooperative is planning to hand deliver its application for a license to build a controversial 44-megawatt hydroelectric facility on the Snake River. Bud Tracy, the administrative coordinator for the Malta-based cooperative, said the application will be delivered Friday to the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission in Washington, D.C., three days ahead of its March 1 deadline. The application will have some changes that Tracy hopes will calm the objections that have been raised. Idaho fishermen and environmentalists oppose the $97 million Eagle Rock proposal. They say the dam would destroy the last free-flowing stretch of the Snake River between American Falls and Burley, a distance of some 70 miles. The eight-mile stretch of water in contention is home to some of the largest trout in the world, according to conservationists and fish managers, who say trout as large as 20 pounds are not unusual.

'Horning' in on judge gets man time in jail

By MARTY TRILLHAASE
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A Twin Falls man, who honked when the judge said "stop," was arraigned Wednesday on a felony charge in Fifth District Magistrate Court. Jacob Alan Ware, 626 King Circle, was released on his own recognition following his court appearance. According to sheriff's deputies, Ware's problems began last Wednesday when he parked his car in the driveway faces the courthouse and the county judicial building. At that point, the defendant allegedly began honking his car horn. In a statement filed with the court, Deputy Jim Webb said he approached the car and found Ware inside with the doors locked. Ware reportedly demanded to see his wife, Judy, who is a clerk in the sheriff's office, as well as Sheriff Jim Munn. Webb said he returned to the office to notify his superiors. When he returned to the scene, he said magistrate Judge Michael Redman, whose office faces the corridor, had approached the defendant.

The deputy reported that Ware refused Redman's order to stop honking. At that point, Redman ordered the man arrested. "Force was necessary in removing Mr. Ware from the vehicle and restraining Mr. Ware," according to Webb's statement. Ware was then charged with disturbing the peace, a misdemeanor, and placed in a holding cell at the county jail. In a separate statement filed with the court, Webb said he approached the cell sometime later and saw that the defendant had ripped a mattress and a blanket with his bare hands.

"When this officer entered the cell, Mr. Ware had piled up newspapers and had a blue lighter in his hand, attempting to set fire to the newspapers," the deputy's statement said. Ware was then charged with causing damage to jail property, which is a felony under Idaho law and carries a penalty of up to five years in prison and up to a $10,000 fine. Tuesday, Ware pleaded innocent to the misdemeanor charge, which carries a penalty of six months in jail, and he demanded a jury trial. Wednesday, he requested a preliminary hearing on the felony charge.

Youth arrested for theft, fires

TWIN FALLS

A 14-year-old youth was arrested Tuesday in Twin Falls in connection with the theft of $200 from an elderly couple and for allegedly starting fires in their home. Twin Falls police received a report from Pearl Toupin of Murtaugh, who said someone had entered the home of her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. G.B. Landreth of 517 Jefferson St. in Twin Falls, and took $200 in cash from a hiding place. The incident allegedly occurred either Feb. 14 or 15. Toupin said there also were two fires started in the home of the Landreths, who are in their late 80s or early 90s.

The couple told officers the 14-year-old, who lives in their neighborhood, frequently came into their home. Police also were investigating two other thefts Wednesday. Mike Pulsipher said someone took the front wheels and tires from his car between Feb. 16 and Tuesday. The vehicle was parked at his home, 460 Second Ave. N., at the time. Pulsipher estimated his loss at $260. Randy Cummings of 223 Third Ave. N. told police someone took a pistol, valued at $160, from his car on either Feb. 16 or 17. He did not discover the theft until Tuesday.

Buhl mobile home hearing draws warnings

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

BUHL — There were no protests, but a number of Buhl residents questioned the wisdom of a special-use permit for a proposed 22-unit mobile home park during public hearings Wednesday night. Duane French of Buhl is seeking the permit to build a park in two phases at the southern edge of the community. French and his engineer, Douglas Howard of Edwards, Howard and Martens Engineers in Twin Falls, said they are seeking annexation of the property and a special-use permit to allow for the park development. A representative of the Buhl Cooperative Supply Inc. said his firm owns the old Moon Glo Theater property adjacent to the proposed park. And his firm has plans for a fertilizer plant and possibly a farm store. "I'm not objecting, but I want it understood that we may want to go ahead with our plans in the future, and wouldn't want to have to give them up because of protests from mobile-home owners," he said. Gary Whitwell, representing Rangan's Inc., which also is located nearby, said his firm uses adjacent land for parking trucks, and the area is "pretty noisy at times, especially at night." Whitwell said he was concerned about protests if the park's occupants found it hard to sleep at night.

Other concerns expressed by those attending the hearing included a lack of water pressure in that part of the city and the current building moratorium caused by the limited capacity of the city's sewage treatment plant. Howard said improvements planned for the immediate future at the treatment plant would allow for more than double the number of homes the park would bring into Buhl when both phases of the project are complete. He said each phase will be developed in sections, as demand for mobile-home spaces dictates. Full development could be five to 10 years away, Howard said. Police Chief David Hartway submitted several recommendations for traffic and security measures if the park is developed. He suggested two roads for access into the park, instead of one, called for adequate lighting, numbering on mobile homes, stop signs installed by the developer at all exits, lighting for a recreational vehicle parking area and solid fencing around the park. Judy Felton, the chairman of the Planning and Zoning Commission, told residents who did not submit verbal testimony that they may submit written comments during the next two weeks. She said the commission will make a decision within 30 days and submit its recommendation to Buhl City Council, which will make the final decision.

Two charged with shoplifting

TWIN FALLS

Police have charged a New Mexico man and a Utah woman with an elaborate shoplifting scheme involving the attempted theft of more than $150 of camera film. Delbert Dean Luddy, 38, of Regina, N.M., and Jennifer Zeta Thompson, 29, of Salt Lake City, have been charged with grand theft. They were arraigned Wednesday in Fifth District Magistrate Court. Under Idaho law, grand theft, a felony, involves the taking of items valued at more than $150. Each defendant posted bond, set at $1,500. According to statements filed with the court, the defendants allegedly attempted to take the film from Albertson's Food Center, 1221 Addison Ave. E.

Tainted fish recall ordered

TWIN FALLS — The U.S. Food and Drug Administration is attempting to recall canned salmon packed in an Alaskan plant in 1980 and 1981 because it may be tainted with botulism.

The South Central District Health Department has been notified of the problem, but officials here say they have not been asked to take any action.

The FDA issued a warning about the salmon after a Belgium man died of botulism poisoning, apparently from eating the Alaskan salmon.

The recall involves salmon in 7½-ounce cans, bearing the product code K-13. Various brands are involved. Distributors are Whitley-Fidalgoo Seafood and Ocean Beauty Seafoods, both of Seattle.

Safety Stores in Arizona have asked customers to return the cans of salmon.

However, Dave Kendrick, the manager of the Safety Store off Main Street in Twin Falls, said no K-13 cans were stocked there. Andy Anderson, the manager of the Safety Store off Fuller Avenue, said his staff simply pulled off all cans of Trophy Chum Salmon on Friday, when they were informed of the problem.

The cans have a two-line product code stamped on one end, and the K-13 designation is on the top line. The cans were stocked there. Andy Anderson, the manager of the Safety Store off Fuller Avenue, said his staff simply pulled off all cans of Trophy Chum Salmon on Friday, when they were informed of the problem.

County delays weed control cuts

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls County commissioners are delaying their tentative decision to scale down the county's weed bureau in order to give the public more time to respond to the proposal.

Only a handful of people attended a public hearing earlier this month on a plan to take the bureau out of the weed-spraying business. In the past, the agency has sold and applied herbicides for a fee.

Commission Chairman Ann Cover attributed the low attendance to poor weather. "The night we had the public hearing was a such a terrible night, the people just didn't get out. But we're always open for comments, phone calls and personal visits."

So far, none of the persons who have contacted the commissioners has opposed the plan, she said.

No deadline for finalizing the decision has been set, she said.

If the proposal is approved, the weed bureau would retain authority to enforce the state's noxious weed law. But farmers will have to rely on commercial sprayers for the other services.

Nearly $140,000 is budgeted for the weed bureau under the current county budget. By eliminating the spraying, an estimated $25,000 in seasonal labor costs and another $15,000 in maintenance expenses would be saved, according to county officials.

Gooding sheriff to get new radios

GOODING — The Gooding County Sheriff's Office will have a new radio system soon.

A contract for the system was awarded Monday by the Gooding County commission to Motorola, which submitted a low bid of $44,000. The other bid, $46,000, was from General Electric.

Commission Chairman Rick Braliff said the contract includes mobile units for the police cars and translator stations.

Options added by the commission to the package are a new console for the dispatcher's radio, sirens for the patrol vehicles and a portable unit for the department's four-wheel drive vehicle. According to Braliff, the total cost will be $49,720.

This gives us the capability to have direct radio communication with other Magic Valley law-enforcement agencies," he said.

Installation should be complete in 120 days.

In other business Monday, the commission passed a resolution supporting a bill pending before the Legislature to add another judge in the Fifth District.

Braliff said the bill would base an additional judge in either Jerome or Gooding. "We are very much in favor of this bill."

Deputies wait for chance to be 'midwife'

BLAINE COUNTY sheriff's deputies say it's sort of a family affair, and they are nervously awaiting the arrival of a set of triplets.

Wayne Ickes, who is working on bridge construction in Blaine County, and his wife, who lives at their home in Caldwell, have been told to prepare for the arrival of triplets in the near future.

The sheriff's office has agreed to be the contact between the prospective parents. If Ickes is needed at home, his wife will call the sheriff's office, and a deputy will be dispatched to the bridge project.

"That probably puts us somewhere in the 'midwife' category," said Deputy William Patrick.

Man held for molesting girl

TWIN FALLS — A 56-year-old Twin Falls man, charged with sexually molesting a 9-year-old girl, remained in the county jail in lieu of $10,000 bond Wednesday.

George Merkle, 1088 Park Meadows Drive, was arraigned in Fifth District

Magistrate Court on a charge of lewd conduct with a minor under the age of 16. According to charges, Merkle allegedly molested the youngster Saturday at his home.

The public defender has been appointed to represent Merkle.

Lincoln hires new weed boss

SHOSHONE — Lincoln County has a new weed-control supervisor.

Edwin G. Porter, 38, of North Shoshone, was hired by the Lincoln County commission at its meeting Monday.

Porter will work with the commission and Extension agent Ivan Hopkins to help area farmers control noxious weeds. He begins his job March 1.

Weed-control information meetings are planned for March at which area farmers can meet with Porter and Hopkins to discuss control measures and problem areas.

In other action Monday, the commission accepted the resignation of deputy county recorder Beverly Koonce, who cited health reasons for leaving.

Clerk Linda Stevenson said applications are being taken and a new deputy recorder will be hired at the commissioners' March 8 meeting.

Hailey's Councilman House to resign

HAILEY — Councilman Bill House will resign from Hailey City Council because his employer, Mountain Bell, is transferring him.

House has served as manager of the Hailey telephone exchange, a position being terminated by the phone company. He will be moving to a similar position in the Mountain Bell system, although the specific location is now unknown.

Although unsure of when he will be leaving the area, House has indicated he will resign soon, in order to give his replacement adequate time to become familiar with the issues facing the city.

Mayor Wordell Rainey will appoint a successor. He says that anyone interested in the position should contact him.

Rainey said he would not begin a search for House's replacement until after he receives a formal resignation, possibly by the next regular council meeting March 8. Any action prior to that time, he said, would be premature.

A-1 coaches decline role of favorite

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Everyone says they're in it but nobody wants to be the favorite for the A-1 Fourth District Boys Basketball Tournament that opens tonight.

Twin Falls High's Bruins are at home to the Burley Bobcats at 8 p.m. with the winner going to Rupert to play the two-time champion Minico Spartans Saturday night. The tourney resumes with loser bracket play Tuesday with the affair winding up either March 4 or 5.

There are definite graduations in the three-team field that none of the three coaches accord much credence. Minico is 4-0 against Twin Falls and Burley while Twin Falls topped Burley twice.

"I think it's a tossup," says Minico Coach Craig Dexter.

"I think we have a shot at them but we're going to have to control their offensive boards and fast breaks. Both of them are very similar," says Coach Gary Swan of Burley.

"I think we can win it but if you're talking favorites, just call up Las Vegas and ask them to establish a line. They've beaten both of us and

Bruins host Burley at 8 as district playoffs start they're home. You know who it would be then," says Twin Falls Coach John Astorquia.

Here's the way things line up now. The tournament injury bugaboo is back, this time visiting Minico which lost forward Darel Tracy to a knee operation two weeks ago. For the past two years, it was Twin Falls which dropped its leading scorer either in the first or second weekend of the tournament proper.

Dexter says "too much has been said about that. We've been over that burdle. We've won five or six in a row since he's been gone. The other guys have played better and the guys who have replaced him have done the job."

"The one thing that really hurts is Darel also was the person we defensively called on to cover the other team's offensive threat."

Although Tracy was deemed a good rebounder, Dexter notes "we've only been out-rebounded once since Darel's been gone but the bottom line there is we've been out-rebounded for the season by a total of 12. We've been able to hold our own."

"The season records don't come into play. People just know when Minico and Burley play anyone can win. As far as Twin Falls goes, we don't think we have any confidence or other edge. The last win was controversial (a late shot ruled by the time to have come after the buzzer) and they might have gotten an edge off that. And we haven't played either team since Darel got hurt," Dexter said.

Tempo will be the key or Burley, as far as Swan is concerned.

"I felt we were playing pretty well

Pirates win in five OTs

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

MURTAUGH — A phantom time-out resulted in a technical foul Wednesday night and gave Hagerman a five-overtime 48-44 victory over Murtaugh in the A-4 Fifth District A-4 Boys Basketball Tournament.

Trailing by a point and getting the ball back on a traveling call with four seconds left, Murtaugh called a time-out it didn't have, a violation carrying a technical foul shot. Pirate Mark Jones hit the free throw. It also returned possession to Hagerman at mid-court. Mike McPadden was fouled on the in-bounds pass and drilled both charities to establish the final margin.

Murtaugh led throughout the ballgame, but never by more than six points. A three-point play by Brett Arriaga tied it at 34 with 44 seconds left. Murtaugh had chances to win it at the end of regulation and in the first overtime, but missed a one-and-one free throw with five seconds left the first time and a little two-foot jumper at the end of the second.

A follow shot by Brady Nieder saved Hagerman with a second left in the third overtime and there was no scoring in the fourth overtime. Murtaugh getting the last shot again.

C-Final 57, Oakley 55

Castleford evidently set the pace for the night when it opened the second round by overwhelming Oakley 57-55 in the closing seconds.

Again, the eventual winner trailed most of the time, as the Wolves didn't take their first lead until 3:08 remained in the game on a pair of Rich Volk free throws.

After the lead changed hands three times, Volk sent Castleford ahead with two more charities with 21 seconds remaining. Oakley then turned the ball over, resulting in a closing free throw for Rob Owen.

Oakley's upset bid started slipping badly early in the fourth quarter, when Rex Tolman drew his fifth foul and went to the sidelines. The 5-11 senior had done the bulk of Oakley's scoring and rebounding, finishing with 22 points.

After Tolman left, Castleford, which controlled the boards adequately throughout, totally dominated the inside behind the 6-3 Volk and 6-3 Chris Tverdy.

away from Castleford in the second quarter. The Hornets took the lead at 6-4 and then got excellent medium-range jump shooting from Rick Adams and Kerry Morrison.

Two minutes into the second quarter Oakley opened up a 10-point lead and four minutes later stretched that to 33-19.

At that point it appeared Castleford was about to lose contact, but the top-seeded team steadied on field goals by Tracy Vulgamore and Volk. By halftime the Wolves had reduced the margin to 10.

The Hornets still had seven points to spare going into the fourth quarter when Rance Pugmire and Tverdy pulled the Wolves to within three. Tolman replied with a long jumper, but fouled out seconds later.

To that time, Oakley's other top gun, Mark Cranney, didn't have a field goal. He hit his first with 4:09 left in the game to give Oakley its last five-point lead at 51-46.

Pugmire chopped that to one in the next 47 seconds and Volk then established Castleford's first lead.

Stuart Johnson gets position, but misses a rebound

Eagles

Men visit Aggies tonight in warm-up for N. Idaho

LOGAN, Utah — College of Southern Idaho takes to the road for the final time in regular season at 5:15 p.m. today, returning a visit by the Utah State junior varsity.

The 17th-ranked Golden Eagles, who wind up their home season Saturday with a major confrontation against North Idaho, staged probably their best defensive effort of the season when they bounced the young Aggies last month.

"We don't expect to have it like that again," said Coach Dave Campbell of the rematch. "Although their varsity will be playing San Jose State in a conference game after ours I still suspect they'll bring some pretty good players off the varsity to play us. I think I can promise a tough game."

The other ingredient of the formula remains that Saturday night game with North Idaho.

"We're not going down to Utah State to lose but there's no way we can't be thinking past them a little bit. North Idaho is the pivotal game of our season right now. We've gotten over five hurdles but that's all wiped out if we stumble on this one," Campbell said.

That refers to the fact that although a NIC win would leave the teams tied in regional standings, the Cardinals would get the tournament under a regional-by-law.

North Idaho plays at Treasure Valley in Ontario, Ore., tonight before visiting Twin Falls.

Four hit double figures as women crush NNC

TWIN FALLS — Four Golden Eagles hit doubles figures Thursday evening as College of Southern Idaho downed Northwest Nazarene College 66-41 in women's basketball action.

Cass Herbst, a freshman from Twin Falls, paced the Eagles with 17 points as Lloyd Hardesty's squad gained revenge for a Dec. 7 loss to NNC at Nampa. Karen Harr notched 16 points while Jill Dixon had 14 and Tammy Jarroldine added 12.

The contest was close early, but the Eagles moved out to a 10-point lead midway in the first half and were up 46-31 at halftime.

"We shot exactly 50 percent in the first half and everybody on the team was running and hitting," Hardesty said.

CSJ, now 12-12 with two games left before the regional tournament, kept an 18- to 22-point lead through the second half.

Shelley Johnson paced NNC with 21 points and Peg Hoover added 19. No other NNC player scored more than four points.

"I think our (man-to-man) defense bothered them some," Hardesty said.

"We played the game without Jeanne Morgan who is out with the flu. We hope she'll be back Friday."

The Eagles host Snow College at 6 p.m. Friday and take on North Idaho at 8 p.m. Saturday to close out the regular season.

"The girls say they'll beat North Idaho this time," Hardesty said. "We lost to them by 11 up there last week after getting down 14."

CSJ defeated Snow by 17 points early in the season to snap an eight-game losing streak.

DeLeon keeps cruiser crown

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (UPI) — Carlos DeLeon retained his World Boxing Council cruiserweight title Wednesday night when doctors stopped his fight with Marvin Camel after the seventh round.

New Jersey Boxing Commission doctors ordered referee Juan Jose Guerra to end the scheduled 15-round fight at 1:29, when Ferrenburg hit six straight on two fells and finished with a game-high 27, Filer trailed only 16-15.

left hook in the third round, but Camel's cornermen managed to close the wound until a flurry of punches in the seventh reopened it.

DeLeon, 22, of San Juan, Puerto Rico, dominated the bout from the start. While the champion landed solid shots to the body and stinging jabs and hooks, Camel was unable to mount an effective offense and frequently resorted to fighting from the clinches.

Kimberly, Wendell concoct correct correct formulas for victory

By CHRIS HAFT
Times-News writer

WENDELL — Like tiny time pills that have a delayed yet definite effect, Kimberly and Wendell won Wednesday night by breaking open light battles after a quarter or so had elapsed.

Kimberly Coach Rich Thompson prescribed an altered second-half offense, enabling Frank Eastley to score 30 points and allowing the Bulldogs to advance another round in the A-3 Fourth District Boys Basketball Tournament with a 76-53 victory over Gooding.

Wendell proved that a balanced offensive attack is healthier than an imbalanced one, overpowering Pter 71-62 as three Trojans scored in double figures.

Kimberly 76, Gooding 53

Kimberly's dominance of the decisive third quarter was plain and simple — as plain as the red hair on Kevin Holcomb's head and as simple as an Eastley laylin.

Leading 43-32 midway through the period, Kimberly scored to a 56-32 advantage by scoring 13 consecutive points, six apiece from Eastley and Holcomb.

Thompson switched the Bulldogs from a three-spot offensive alignment to a two-spot setup, a change which helped Kimberly break away.

"I don't know what happened for sure, but it (the two-spot offense) freed Frank up and we were able to get the ball up there," Thompson said. "Gooding couldn't cover the outside and inside too."

Senator Coach Don Fowler recognized Kimberly's switch, but admitted that defending all the Bulldogs was too difficult a task.

"We noticed it, but we played behind Holcomb instead of getting behind Eastley, and that's when he went crazy," Fowler said.

Eastley went particularly insane in the third period, collecting 14 points on a variety of layups, short jumpers and follow shots. The 6-foot-1 senior benefited from his teammates' passing, a fact that was not lost on Thompson.

second quarter into a 33-24 halftime lead.

"The turning point was the last two minutes of the first half, when they went into a full-court press," said Fowler, whose Senators dipped to 9-13. "We didn't have trouble getting the ball upcourt, but we took shots without anybody to rebound."

Wendell 71, Filer 62

Like Kimberly's third-quarter surge, Wendell's victory can also be easily explained. All the Wildcats are of talent. All the Wildcats could respond with was Jay Reinke and Randy Tudor, and two against five isn't enough in basketball.

"They've got good kids, and they flat outstayed us," said Coach Al Carberg, whose Wildcats fell to 13-7. "They beat us on the boards and they beat us with quickness."

None of the Trojans, who improved to 12-4, proved tougher than Gary Ferrenburg. Ferrenburg again came off the bench to spark Wendell, scoring 24 points and teaming with Kelly Westendorf to help the Trojans control both boards.

"He's so tough because he goes after every single ball," Carberg said of Ferrenburg. "Every time the ball goes up at either end, he seems to think it's his — and it seems to wind up as his."

It was plain that the game would end up as Wendell's as early as the second quarter. Carried by Reinke, who scored 13 of Filer's first 15 points and finished with a game-high 27, Filer trailed only 16-15.

Then Wendell burst for eight straight points and a 24-15 lead on Westendorf's follow, consecutive bombs from Treat Davis and Steve Luttmner and Greg Roberts' turnaround jumper.

Filer managed to creep to within 28-23, but Ferrenburg ended the half by slanking four free throws, giving the Trojans a 32-23 edge at intermission.

Astro calls Richard's outing 'sad'

COCOA, Fla. (UPI) — Houston Astros pitcher J.R. Richard, who is continuing his comeback from a 1980 stroke, did not pitch as well in his first outing of spring training as he did in practice last summer but coaches are a long way from giving up on him.

A chubby Richard, 32, the 1980 National League All-Star starter, threw with neither velocity nor control Tuesday during batting practice and one Astro said, "It got to where I couldn't look anymore. To be truthful, it was sad."

Richard suffered a severe stroke in July, 1980, the same month he pitched in the All-Star game. Last summer he seemed to be overcoming a temporary paralysis, muscle and nerve damage on his left side as he pitched hard in batting practice.

Manager Bill Virdon said he would not begin making an evaluation of Richard's ability until he pitched in exhibition games next month.

Herzog feels Cardinals can challenge

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Whitey Herzog says the St. Louis Cardinals, built around speed and defense, have the type of team it will take to win the National League pennant.

"We're going to put a ballclub on the field where there aren't going to be any guys loafing," said Herzog, the Cardinals' manager and general manager. "I know they're going to give everything they have every day."

"I don't have to worry about somebody going out and giving me 50 percent."

The Cardinals begin assembling at their spring training headquarters in St. Petersburg, Fla., Wednesday.

Herzog, who reshaped the Cardinals last year with a series of major trades, polished off the job over the winter as he dealt outfielder Sixto Lezcano and pitchers Larry Sorensen and Silvio Martinez in addition to disgruntled shortstop Garry Templeton. The Cardinals acquired pitcher Steve Mura, center fielder Lonnie Smith and shortstop Ozzie Smith.

Reuschel gets extension from Yanks

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (UPI) — The New York Yankees came to terms with pitcher Rick Reuschel on a two-year extension to his contract Wednesday that will make him the right-hander a member of the team through the 1985 season.

No terms were announced, but it is believed an agreement was worked out in which Reuschel will be paid an estimated $1.2 million for the two-year extension.

"I hope I never have to talk about another contract in my life," said Reuschel, who in exchange for the new deal dropped his grievance claim.

Yankees owner George Steinbrenner said he agreed to the extension because "I think he can be a fine pitcher for the next three or four years and I want him in the right frame of mind. He can go out every fourth or fifth day and he can win 14 or 15 games. You can count on that."

Weaver pleased with pitchers' shape

MIAMI, Fla. (UPI) — The Baltimore Orioles completed the first phase of their spring training camp Wednesday with Manager Earl Weaver expressing general satisfaction with the condition of his pitching staff.

"All of the pitchers have thrown under simulated game conditions and we should be ready to have good batting practice when we get the full squad together tomorrow," said Weaver. "For the most part, the pitchers throw strikes, which is what we are primarily interested in."

Dennis Martinez, who fulfilled his potential last year with a 14-5 record, was the most impressive of the regular starters Wednesday. But it was rookie George Davis who earned the most praise from Weaver.

Age concerns golf's two Latin stars

CHICHI RODRIGUEZ
spends $15,000 to win $1,000

MIAMI (UPI) — Both of golf's Latin stars are thinking about their age these days, but neither Lee Trevino nor Chi Chi Rodriguez is entertaining any serious thought about quitting.

Both Trevino and Rodriguez are entered in the Doral Open, which begins today as the TPA tour switches coasts and begins a four-tournament Florida swing.

Although Trevino skipped the entire California portion of the tour this year and is making his first start at Doral, he is confident he can have another good year in 1982.

"At 42 years old, my game is not one of my big worries," he said.

He added that at his age he worries about the future and security, and then he cracked through about quitting.

"Rodriguez has been playing regularly but retirement is not in the picture yet."

"Figure if I can win the U.S. Open or another major title, I'll retire," said the 46-year-old Puerto Rican.

"I've played in six tournaments this year, made the cut twice. Made a thousand dollars and spent $15,000. But for me that's about par for the course for this time of year," said Rodriguez. "I usually don't start playing well until April."

"I haven't been playing well for the last six months, but this week I've been working with Chico (golf instructor Chico Martuz) and I feel good," he said. "I'm looking forward to playing this tournament and haven't felt that way in a long time."

"The last time I won a tournament was Tallahassee (in 1979). I was 19 under and broke the record by four. I had been working with Chico before the tournament."

The Open will again be played over the Doral's par 72, 7,065-yard Blue Monster course, featuring the famed water-lined, 437-yard 18th hole, still one of the toughest finishing holes on the tour.

The course has been made even tougher this year because the greenskeepers have allowed the rough to grow to four or five inches.

As Trevino notes, anybody who sprays the ball off the tee will be out of luck.

Neither of the two golfers involved in last weekend's playoff at the Los Angeles Open will be here.

Tom Watson, the winner, had been counted out for months. The first event in Florida frequently misses some of the top names because of the transition and the distance between Los Angeles and Florida.

Johnny Miller had been entered, but that turned out to be a mistake. The blond Californian had entered Doral thinking he was entering the Inverrary Golf Classic, scheduled in two weeks.

Rams' Hill pleads guilty to delinquency of a minor

FULLERTON, Calif. (UPI) — Los Angeles Rams wide receiver Drew Hill pleaded guilty Wednesday to one misdemeanor count of contributing to the delinquency of a minor, a 16-year-old girl who claimed the football star had raped her.

Three related misdemeanor charges of unlawful intercourse and assault and battery will be dropped when Hill appears for sentencing May 5, Municipal Court Judge Dave Bach said.

Bach said no plea bargain was arranged in exchange for the guilty plea by Hill, who faces a maximum sentence of one year in jail.

"I'm not a football fan and I've never heard of you before this case came up," the judge said.

He promised to be fair in the sentencing, saying, "I'll send you to jail if I feel it's appropriate," and promising to give Hill a lesser sentence if that seemed more fitting.

Hill, 25, was arrested Dec. 21 after the girl told police she was raped at a house occupied by several Rams players shortly after the team played its last game of the season.

Officers said the girl said she met Hill after the Sunday afternoon game at Anaheim Stadium and that he took her to the house. Several of Hill's teammates said they knew the girl — who has not been identified — as one who had tried to befriend several players, including Hill, at practice sessions.

Hill was released on his own recognizance after spending six hours in the Fullerton jail.

Prosecutor Lee Stanton said he decided not to file rape charges "because we cannot prove that an act of sexual intercourse took place."

Hill, a three-year NFL veteran, had a team-record 1,170 yards in kickoff returns in 1981. He led the nation's college players in kickoff returns in his senior year at Georgia Tech.

the last couple of weeks ... good defensively and holding good scoring teams down. Our problem has been we couldn't score, especially late in the games.

"As far as Twin Falls is concerned, we have to control their three good players, (Steve) Meyerhoeffer, (Steve) Galley and (Joe) Shelby. Right now Galley seems to be playing especially well and Shelby played very well tonight."

"We are going to have to score 50 points against Twin Falls even if we play great defense. They're going to score. You might be able to control Minico a little but Twin Falls just has too many guns. Those big kids, the Juniors, are picking up points for them inside. They are difficult for us to ditch up with."

Swan agreed that Minico probably has adequately replaced Tracy and had the advantage of the injury coming early enough before the tournament to let Minico make the adjustments it had to.

"It (the injury) cuts down on their depth and cuts out some of the things they can do. I think they'd feel it more in momentum because the five they put out there now have to suck it up and go. The injury means they can't get that pick up off the bench now — at least not quite as easily."

Offensively Swan said his Bobcats need "the third scorer. We feel we'll get points out of (Brad) Turner and (Tim) Knight consistently. If we can get a third one to come up with 10-12 points each game, I think we've got a real shot at them. The other night we did get that out of (Junior Randy) Austin."

Swan said he'd elevated sophomore Dan Egbert, 6-3, to the varsity for more depth and rebounding capability underneath.

Astorquia says his major concentration will be on the first game.

"I think we have to assume that Burley will walk the back court and play zone. I don't think they'll go into a stop offense but I expect it to be very deliberate. Our key will depend on our ability to keep the ball away from Knight inside and defend the perimeter shot by Austin and Turner. And we have to control the tempo."

"Against Minico the keys are (Randy) Homer and (Mike) Shockey. Those two have given us fits. We haven't controlled them. Other teams can stop them and get hurt by other players on the Minico team. But against us, Homer and Shockey have always been the big scorers and big play makers."

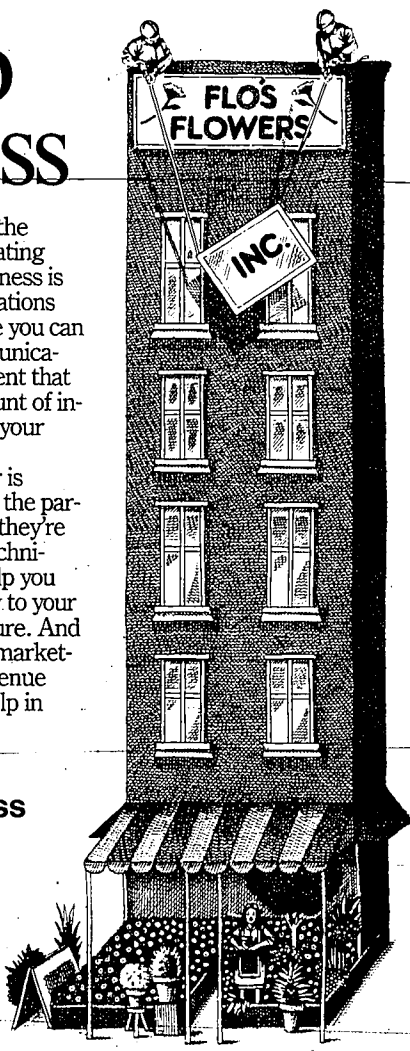

"We also have to make sure we can handle their full court pressure. They hurt us last time with it and most of the teams they've played since. It wasn't that they forced us into a lot of turnovers, they simply got us out of rhythm and we took the shots before we were ready."

Americans take over quieter and it became a matter of card play with the Americans picking up on many difficult hands.

Both South players argued at a very optimistic four hearts. We have shown bidding with a club opening, a heart overall, and these modern expert doubles for takeout, a sporting heart raise by North and a game club. John finessed the ace, and led a second spade.

John ruffed, cashed his ace of diamonds, ruffed a club. A duck by East would almost certainly have led to John's defeat, but East took his ace of diamonds and led a second spade.

John ruffed, cashed his ace of diamonds, ruffed a club. A duck by East would almost certainly have led to John's defeat, but East took his ace of diamonds and led a second spade.

East was in with the ace of diamonds, ruffed a club. A duck by East would almost certainly have led to John's defeat, but East took his ace of diamonds and led a second spade.

The Pakistani South didn't find John's play and went down one. (NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.)
