

Public TV compromise reached

BOISE (UPI) — House and Senate conferees Thursday reached a compromise that apparently will preserve Idaho's three-station public television system.

But at the same time, the compromise will centralize state control over the network.

The conference committee voted 5-1 for a motion by Sen. Mark Ricks, R-Redburg, to break a House-Senate deadlock and express legislative intent that the state Education Board reorganize the system under a central manager.

The manager would be directly responsible to the board, but all three stations in Boise, Moscow and Pocatello would retain facilities for local program production.

Ricks' legislative intent clause replaces a provision that was amended out of a public television supplemental funding bill earlier this month. The deleted clause called for two of the stations to be downgraded to satellites. One station would have retained local-production capability.

Sen. David Little, R-Emmett, conference committee chairman, said a new bill would be processed to reflect the committee's decision. The $125,000 supplemental appropriation originally recommended by the Legislature's budget committee would remain in the new measure.

Both the House and Senate still must approve the compromise bill, but Little said he expected no problems in getting the legislation approved.

While supporters of the three-station network regarded the conference committee's decision as a victory, doubts remained about the future of the three-city system.

The House approved a $680,000 fiscal year 1983 general fund budget for public broadcasting Thursday afternoon; but some members said the amount would be insufficient to keep the three stations running — especially KJUU in Moscow and KISU in Pocatello.

Operations of Boise's KAIT have not been disrupted nearly as much as the other stations because it gets significant financial support from the populous southwest Idaho area, said Rep. Patricia McDermott, D-Pocatello. She said the funding bill "ignores the viewers in northern Idaho and ignores the viewers in southeast Idaho" because the Moscow and Pocatello stations can't get enough money from their communities to offset state funding cuts.

Rep. Harold Reid, D-Craigmont, said, however the appropriation will allow the stations to match federal funds. He also said he thought the reaffirmation of the three-station concept by the conference committee would spur an increase in private contributions to the stations.

In the conference committee, Ricks said he was confident the Education Board would be able to gain control of the stations while allowing them to produce their own programs.

'Local option' fails

By BRUCE HAMMOND
Times-News writer

BOISE — An attempt to revive a local-option tax bill, which was killed in a Senate committee Wednesday, failed on the Senate floor Thursday afternoon.

The Senate Local Government and Taxation Committee voted to permanently hold the bill in committee and then adjourned for the rest of the session since the committee chairman, Sen. Dane Watkins, R-Idaho Falls, had been excused from the Senate for the rest of the week.

"But there wasn't time for enough testimony," argued Sen. John Peavey, D-Carey, a dissenting committee member. "There were still people there to testify who could have spoken to the impact of Reaganomics at the local level and the need for this legislation. We should have had a full-blown hearing, but at the least we should now bring the bill onto the Senate floor for discussion."

"The measure, HB57, would have allowed either county or city governments to levy their own 1 percent sales tax or property tax. Such action would have been possible only if it was supported by two-thirds of the voters in a special election.

The bill passed the House March 8, 39-31, but the Senate motion to override the local government committee and introduce the bill failed, 12-21.

The only Magic Valley senators asking for the bill's introduction were Peavey and Sen. Laird Nor, R-Kimberly.

"The statement by the good senator from District 21 (Peavey) that there was not enough discussion is exactly why we should allow the bill to remain in committee and not bring it to the floor," said Sen. Dean Van Engelen, R-Burley.

Opponents to local option taxes argued that they created unbalanced economic conditions between communities with the taxes and those without.

"I think the committee could have supported a more broad-based tax, but this local option tax creates too many regional problems," said Sen. Veart Crytal, R-Idaho Falls.

Probe findings detailed

Sales practices cost Blaine County governments thousands of dollars

By RON ZELLAR
Times-News writer

HAILEY — Flanked by a table full of alleged bribery loot, Blaine County Prosecutor Keith Roark detailed sales practices Thursday he said cost local units of government thousands of dollars.

The items included a microwave oven, tools, kitchen knives, a set of tumblers, a seven-speed blender and a toaster oven.

Roark said a three-month investigation conducted by his office turned up six or more companies that routinely offered gifts as inducements to purchases from governmental department heads.

Two men who work for one of the companies were arrested earlier this week in Denver, Colo., and San Diego, Calif. Roark said the pair offered bribes to an investigator from his office posing as a purchasing agent, and Ketchum Police Chief Cal Nevland.

KEITH ROARK
... heads probe

Many of the items displayed, he said, were mailed directly to the homes of city and county employees who agreed to order supplies ranging from legal pads to sewer solvent.

In addition to overt bribery,

Roark said the probe also turned up sales practices that — while not illegal — cost taxpayers thousands of dollars in price premiums and deprived local merchants of the right to compete for the sale.

"No longer the cow towns they once were," Roark urged the adoption of purchasing practices to ensure that governmental entities get the best possible price for supplies and equipment.

In a meeting last week with Blaine County employees and county commissioners, the prosecutor recommended policies to prohibit placing orders in response to telephone solicitation, require a second price quote on any purchase over $100 and prohibit acceptance of all gifts except tokens used in advertising promotions.

Prompted by the arrest of a Ketchum city official last December on bribery charges, Roark said investigators reviewed thousands of records in the Blaine County Courthouse and in the city offices of Halley, Ketchum, Sun Valley and Bellevue.

Records at Bellevue and Sun Valley were clean, he said, while receipts at the other three offices indicated each "had been preyed upon in one way or another."

The investigation found no misdeeds by elected officials, he said. All of those who accepted gifts or otherwise exercised poor judgment were department heads or department purchasers.

Roark said he decided not to prosecute other local persons who accepted gifts because in two instances he found it necessary to grant immunity to the individuals to obtain information, and in other cases the three-year statute of limitations had run out.

He declined comment on whether the use of an investigator posing as a purchasing agent might provide grounds for a defense of entrapment, but said a veteran criminal lawyer was consulted before making the decision.

City officials in Halley and Ketchum said they anticipated no additional firings or reprimands resulting from Roark's findings. But both indicated they would pursue policy changes based on the information.

Jim Jaquet, Ketchum city administrator, admitted the findings were an embarrassment to the city, which holds a reputation for one of the region's most progressive governments.

Council plans a special work session next week to develop purchasing guidelines for the city's employees, Jaquet said.

Roark said he intends to assemble information learned in the investigation into packets for city and county governments throughout the state, and will turn over other particulars to the state Attorney General's Office and the Office of the U.S. Attorney in Boise.

Prosecutor cites examples of sales techniques uncovered in Blaine probe

Goods of questionable value are sold by telephone, using gifts as an inducement to order. The gifts, ranging in value from $5 to $250, are sent to the purchasers' home.

In 1978, the Ketchum Street Department ordered 22 gallons of "Fuel Saver" and 32 gallons of "Stop Stick," a lubrication additive, from Thoroughbred Chemical Corp. of Murray Hill Station, N.Y. The items totaled $1,412.

Blaine County Prosecutor Keith Roark said the purchase was accompanied by the gift of a home appliance to the person authorizing the order, in response to a telephone solicitation. The city had not dealt with the company before, and had no need for the products.

"The city of Halley, in April 1979, purchased 35 gallons of 'Heavy Duty Cleaner-Degreaser' for $304 from Equitable Chemical Corp. of Roslyn, N.Y.

Roark said the order was shipped from Gardena, Calif., and there are indications the company doesn't exist, except as "a bank of telephones somewhere."

Items needed by local governments are purchased from a particular supplier after gifts are offered. Purchasers often ordered large quantities, without comparing prices.

One office in Blaine County, staffed by three or four persons, placed an order from a telephone solicitor for 1,152 pens. Roark said, paying a premium of 80 percent over the price for which the pens might have been purchased locally.

Roark declined to name the company, but said it employed the two persons arrested earlier this week on Blaine County warrants for bribery.

Gary Marshall of San Diego, Calif., and Steve Nation of Denver, Colo., were charged Tuesday with bribing a Blaine County investigator, Gary Starkey, who posed as a purchasing agent. Marshall was also charged with attempting to bribe Ketchum Police Chief Cal Nevland.

Starkey and an investigator from the state Attorney General's Office were in California on Thursday attempting to seize records of the company involved, Roark said.

Items ordered regularly by local governments are offered in volume, or at added convenience to purchasers. Claims of superior quality don't check out, and the items are overpriced.

Officials at the Ketchum solid-waste treatment plant last month ordered 480 pounds of gear lubricant from Texas Refinery Corp. of Fort Worth, Texas, at a price of $1.57 a pound, for a total of $802.

A comparable product, also premium grade, could have been obtained in Halley for 49 cents a pound, or a total of $238. Of four local price quotes, the highest was $266.

A tool and parts supplier, DYNA Systems, offers to stock special cabinets on location, charging only for the items used and reordering only with the permission of the shop foreman.

An audit of the items purchased revealed prices for drill bits, lock washers and hex screws that were 85 to 350 percent higher than necessary.

House defeats proposal to fine open meeting violations

By BRUCE HAMMOND
Times-News writer

BOISE — Calling it big-city legislation, House members defeated a bill Thursday which would have fined violators of Idaho's open meetings law.

Several legislators also attacked the measure, claiming it was not desired by the public, but only by the press.

"This is an issue you can't speak on" against without getting your hide scratched off by the press," said Rep. Mack Nelbaur, R-Paul, "but in all conscience, I can't support it."

"We already have trouble getting people to run for office in small towns and counties," he continued. "If they're threatened with a $100 fine if they overlook some rule, how are we going to get people to run for these small-town offices?"

The measure would have allowed judges to fine public officials up to $100 for purposely conducting non-exempted business behind closed doors. Closed executive sessions are allowed for issues such as personnel problems or student discipline.

The bill — SB364 — passed the Senate Feb. 25, 23-10, but was killed in the House Thursday, 25-43.

Idaho's present open meetings law is unenforceable because there is no civil penalty for violation, claimed Rep. Christopher Hooper, R-Boise.

"This bill does not add any more conditions to the law. It merely takes us out of a hypocritical situation where we say closed meetings are wrong, but you can go ahead and get away with them," Hooper said.

Citing Boise's Urban Renewal Agency as an alleged example, Rep. Rachel Gilbert, R-Boise, said the group held too many closed-door sessions to negotiate property sales.

"They sold 'down town' property, which they bought for $20 a foot, for 80 cents a foot," Gilbert claimed. "Damn right I can see why they wanted to work behind closed doors."

But the fling bill only addresses problems in large communities, said Rep. Morgan Munger, R-Ola.

"Maybe we ought to be considering a bill directed at Boise or Ada County," Munger said. "Sure this bill attends to some problems in big cities, but R hurts small towns at the same time."

"Small-town city councils, which serve only part time, can't always advertise meetings or meet at scheduled times, argued Rep. William Lytle, R-Finehurst.

"In my town last election, we had a write-in for mayor and had to talk two women who could spare a little time to serve on the council," Lytle said. "If these people have to face possible fines for not doing things totally by the law, then we're really going to have some problems getting them to fill offices."

Only three Magic Valley representatives supported the bill: Reps. Tom Stiver, R-Twin Falls; John Brooks, R-Gooding; and Lawrence Knigge, R-Filer.

House agrees to raise salaries for state judges

By BRUCE HAMMOND
Times-News writer

BOISE — The House approved salary hikes for Supreme Court and district court judges Thursday, but voted thumbs down on enhancing the judicial pension plan.

Two other judge salary bills failed earlier this month — one in the Senate and the other in the House — before a more conservative plan was proposed.

"This is a basic salary bill. There are no cutlets in here," said sponsor Rep. Tom Silvers, R-Twin Falls, referring to earlier criticism. "It amounts to a modest, 10 percent increase over the last two years."

Supreme and district court judges received no raises from the Legislature last session.

It passed by the Senate, the latest plan — HB712 — increases Supreme Court judge annual wages from $43,000 to $47,300 and district judge salaries from $41,000 to $45,300.

"We have had a number of bills in front of us on this before, but keep in mind that the judges haven't had any increase for two years," said Rep. Gary Montgomery, R-Boise. "We've given our other state employees good increases during this same period, and to ignore the judges this year would be patently unfair."

With little other debate, the measure passed the House, 51-18.

But more controversial was a separate plan — HB689 — to enhance the judges' retirement plan. It failed in the House, 25-42.

Silvers said Idaho cannot attract experienced lawyers, 40 to 45 years old, to the judiciary because of low wages, but perhaps more so because of inadequate retirement benefits.

The present plan increases benefits as 20 and 25 years of service are attained. Silvers argued that to expect a lawyer to become a judge late in his career is folly unless retirement compensation is provided.

"There is a feeling among the judiciary that this increased retirement plan will provide incentive for experienced attorneys to leave private practice to join the judiciary — and that's what we want," Silvers said.

"Right now the average age for our district judges is 39, and that means we have a lot of young lawyers working only a couple years before becoming magistrates and then district judges," he continued. "We need that experienced 45-year-old who will work for us 15 to 18 years, but there's no incentive for him."

Silvers argued by placing the bulk of the retirement plan into the first 10 years of service, Idaho could attract more lawyers to the bench. But his arguments fell mostly on deaf ears.

"This retirement plan is better than probably 90 percent of the retirement plans used by Idaho law firms," said Rep. Michael Gwartney, R-Boise. "This one change would shift the cost to the judicial branch for wages and benefits from 41 percent to 53 percent."

Legislature lets county commissioners set own salaries

BOISE — The Legislature has agreed to give up one of its roles and let county commissioners set their own salaries.

The controversial measure, introduced in the Senate, received House approval Thursday, 39-31.

"I do believe commissioners should set salaries for prosecutors (a second provision of SB1320) since they work for the county," said Rep. Roy Brackett, R-Twin Falls.

Public officials should get to set his own salary. That's just asking for trouble.

It also was argued that county commissioners should not be given a power that even the nation's president doesn't hold.

"Having the Legislature approve commissioners' salaries is all part of our system of checks and balances," said Rep. Linden Bateman, R-Idaho Falls. "If we remove this review, we'll see these salaries going up, and they aren't going to come down."

But many legislators noted that they merely are "rubber stamping" salary recommendations made by county commissioners.

"In reality, we appropriate what the commissioners request," said Rep. Morgan Manger, R-Ola. "It's a local issue and should be done at the local level."

There will be more control of commissioner salaries at the local level than when set by the Legislature, claimed Rep. Ralph Lacy, R-Pocatello.

"What we have now is a very old-fashioned system and infers distrust of county officials," said Lacy. "It's true that county budget hearings are often poorly attended, but that is the only way the public will have any voice," he continued. "It sets salaries at the convenience of the public, because that's in the local courthouses and not at the statehouse in Boise."

Abortion review bill stays in committee

BOISE — A Senate bill that would require doctors seeking abortions to review information about abortion, the development of fetuses and adoption procedures was denied advancement to the House floor Thursday.

Representatives voted 40-29 to keep the bill in the House Health and Welfare Committee, where it was ordered held earlier this week on a 6-5 vote.

Rep. Gary Paxman, R-Idaho Falls, sparked the effort to put the bill on the floor for a full House debate and vote. But after nearly an hour of emotional debate, the House went along with Health and Welfare Committee Chairman Elaine Kearnes, R-Idaho Falls, with her motion to excuse the panel from releasing the bill.

Paxman and other backers of the bill said it would help deter some women from having abortions.

Several representatives said, however, passage of the bill was inviting lawsuits over the constitutionality of the bill. Other opponents of the bill said it would be a severe burden for doctors.

Rep. Christopher Hooper, R-Boise, said the bill was copied from a Utah law that has been challenged. Hooper and Mrs. Kearnes said the committee exhaustively reviewed the bill and decided that it may be flawed and could cause more problems than it would reduce abortions.

Rep. Robert Scates, R-Post Falls, told the House it would be a "huge mistake" to resurrect the bill.

"People would be suing doctors right and left, and they would get away with it because of (requirements on doctors) would be in the law," Scates said.

He said it would be impossible for doctors to fully comply with the measure and "it wouldn't cure this situation."

Domestic violence surcharge wins approval from Senate

BOISE (UPI) — A House bill that would impose a $15 marriage-license surcharge to pay for state grants for domestic-violence shelters received approval from the Senate Thursday.

The measure, endorsed 25-9 by senators, now goes to the desk of Gov. John Evans.

"This is not a cure bill; it does not cure domestic violence," said the legislation's sponsor, Sen. Mike Mitchell, D-Lewiston. "It's a care bill."

A seven-member state council to be appointed by the governor would be created under the bill. The panel would coordinate distribution of the surcharge revenue to shelter center for beaten wives and abused children.

Sens. James Risch, R-Boise, and Wilson Steen, R-Glenns Ferry, battled in vain to kill the proposal.

Risch objected the imposition of the fee on marriage licenses and said the state would have little power to stop the growth of the program.

"The state already has sufficient health and welfare programs to provide assistance to domestic-violence victims," Steen said.

"Why penalize young married people instead of someone who has had problems in their married life," said Steen, who said a divorce fee would be a more appropriate means of raising money for the program.

Sen. Edith Miller Klein, R-Boise, said social stresses are increasing and the state must be quick to respond. She said the criminal justice system is not able to deal effectively with wife beaters, so the state should at least give comfort to victims.

House caved in on open meetings law

Lacking courage and conviction, and with some members stumbling over their own piety, the Idaho House Thursday defeated a move to strengthen the State's Open Meetings Law.

The bill went down in a sea of flaming rhetoric, vote of 25-43. It's a pity because those who voted missed the point. Instead, some chose to parade up to the podium to lead character assassinations against the news media.

Because of this gutless call by the majority in the House, public officials all over Idaho can continue with their "executive sessions" that stretch, and in some cases violate, the existing statute.

Saner heads have often prevailed in the Senate and here is the prime example. Senate Bill 1000, the Open Meetings Law bill by a 23-10 vote. Magic Valley citizens have only Reps. Tom Stivers, R-Twin Falls, John Brooks, R-Gooding and Lawrence Knigge, R-Filer, to thank. They voted for the bill. The rest of the local House contingent turned thumbs down.

Debate against the bill in the House ranged from the absurd reasoning of Rep. Morgan Munger, R-Ola, to the tunnel vision comments of Rep. Mack Neibaur, R-Paul. Munger believes the current law is too strict while Neibaur believes the revised version would have made it unduly tough on local officials.

Nonsense! Don't these people read the Idaho Supreme Court rulings? The high court last year found that the Hailey City Council did hold secret deliberations on a public issue. But the court refused to invalidate the council's ultimate decision in the case.

The intent of Attorney General David Leroy's bill was both to clarify the open meetings statute and put some teeth into it so aggrieved citizens would have more effective recourse. What good is it going to do if a court finds a body in violation but allows the decision to stand?

Leroy's bill was a reasonable solution: Any action taken in violation of the law would be automatically invalid and any elected official who voted to illegally close a meeting would be subject to a $100 fine.

It is the duty of elected officials to know the provisions of the Open Meetings Law and to ensure the public's business is conducted in public. The proposed revisions would have made the law easier to understand and it would have aided public officials, not hindered them.

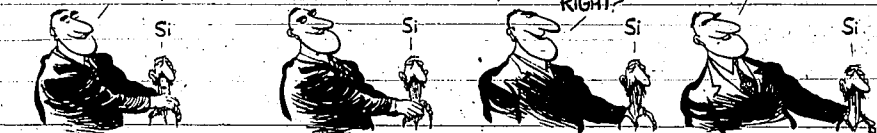

Perhaps it is not surprising that the House rejected the bill. It may have been deliberately held up so that members, in their rush toward adjournment, could dispose of it at the last minute. If that was the case, they did their constituents a grave injustice.

New ethic on the born, unborn

© The Boston Globe

BOSTON — From time to time, Rep. Barney Frank tosses it off like a one-liner. "This administration," he says, "believes that life begins at conception and ends at birth." It's a good quip from the Massachusetts Democrat and an accurate enough description of public policy among the Reaganites. But if you need any proof of this quip-in-action, you couldn't have asked for a more dramatic example than the events of the past week.

On one day, we saw the Senate Judiciary Committee riding over the Supreme Court in its haste to protect the unborn. The Hatch Amendment, approved by the committee, would let Congress and the states prohibit or restrict abortion as they saw fit.

Then, on the very next day, we learned just how reluctant this government is to protect the born. A subcommittee hearing chaired by Rep. Albert Gore (D-Tenn.) revealed that defective infant formula had gotten onto the marketplace and into babies because the administration had delayed implementing a law passed to prevent this problem. Back to back, these two tales illustrated starkly the new ethic. They show how eager some Reaganites are to regulate the liberties of adults, in favor of the unborn. And how reticent to regulate the liberty of a business, in favor of the born. Infant formulas are not an evil. They have had a decent health track record since the 1930s. But the mistakes have devastated their small victims. Today, for example, there are a number of 29 and 30-year-old Americans who suffer from cerebral palsy or retardation because the infant formula produced by Wyeth Laboratories in 1962 lacked vitamin B-6.

In 1978, thousands more infants suffered anything from nausea to problems in growth and speech and motor development because of a lack of chlorite in the formulas. It was this outbreak that led to the passage of a law in 1980 regulating infant formulas and making sure they were tested properly before landing on the market.

At the 1980 hearings, Richard Schweiker, then a senator from Pennsylvania, came down hard on the FDA, insisting that the law go in effect immediately. He said passionately, "There has to be some shortcut procedure when children's lives are at stake... I just do not want to see this tragic situation repeated again, because of some procedural requirements."

In January, a factory worker in a Wyeth laboratory made a mistake. He added a container of vitamin B-1 instead of vitamin B-6 to a huge batch of formula. In an eerie replay of the 1952 disaster, 50,000 to 90,000 cans of Nursoy infant formula were on the market for a month with no vitamin B-6, before the company recall. Much larger quantities of the formula SMA with less than the required amount of B-6 were still being sold until three hours after the Gore hearings. The formula would never have been fed to one baby if the regulations for testing had gone into effect as expected. Just May, but the FDA action was held up by the Reagan mandate that every rule "now must undergo a 'cost-benefit analysis.'"

In his role on the Reagan team, Schweiker apparently felt the urgency of deregulation more than the urgency of infants. In his posture as new right, anti-abortion, "pro-family" leader, he apparently felt the plight of companies more intensely than the plight of newborns. Typically, one of the letters written to him in support of the companies' position came from the Hatch Amendment's own Orrin.

As this all came out during the subcommittee hearings, Rep. Gore asked, "What dollars-and-cents values do you place on the avoidance of serious brain damage in infants? The cost-effective analysis is just a sham. It's little more than a rhetorical device to allow companies to escape what most people would assume are their obligations."

It will now be at least six months before any regulations go into effect. But those of us who put the events of those two days together learned something right now: Deregulation was shown up as a sham, a rhetorical device.

This is a "team" that jumps at the chance to regulate people and shudders at the notion of regulating profit. Their "pro-family" poise simply ends in the delivery room.

Letters to the editor

Don't throw freedom away

Editor, Times-News:

The 1975 true-life story of the quest for freedom from Communist tyranny is dramatically portrayed in Walt Disney's film, "Night Crossing." Two East (Communist) Germany families risked their lives not once, but twice, to escape dictatorial oppression by means of a hot-air balloon.

Their success has become a significant tribute to the growing resistance to Communist oppression in Europe. A protest campaign in Germany has generated such controversy that the film appears to be rivaling the Berlin Film Festival where officials refused to accept "Night Crossing" in the competition.

It is unfortunate that politicians and traitors in our own country compromise the principles of freedom in our republic to appease, feed and keep alive the fraud and failure called Communism.

May we recapture the flame of liberty alive in this country so that the millions of slaves behind the Communist fences have a hope of one day being free like the Strelzyk and Weizel families who escaped in September of 1978.

Freedom is a priceless possession, but it is not free as it must be won and maintained generation after generation by constant vigilance against the forces that would take away our freedom. Let us not throw away our freedom for the mockery of a dictatorial system like Communism. Certainly America is not perfect, but it has given more freedom to more people than any other nation. The main problems that we have today are the result of perversion of our Constitution. By returning to its great principles we will once again be a truly great country.

Give scientists more time

Editor, Times-News:

In response to a letter by Richard Graf, I would like to make a few comments:

First, why are 25 percent of the nuclear plants shut down? The answer is plain and simple. There are a great number of so-called "againers" who are against any form of development of electrical energy, whether it be water power, coal fired, gas (fired or for that matter any form. I'm surprised that he came up with only 25 percent.

We will never be totally free from this group of people — "againers." They just take great pride in being against anything, good, bad or otherwise.

As for me, I'll give our scientists all the time they need to solve this nuclear waste problem and I'm sure they will if we will just get off their backs.

Second, how come certain areas in our United States aren't virtual "powder kegs"? Wyoming and Utah are major producers of nuclear energy. And as for these "terrible low energy" tailing ponds — where did they come from in the first place? From underground in Wyoming and Utah is a logical answer. Certainly not from the moon which is the only place man has been except the earth as far as we know today. As I remember, the only thing the "moon walkers" brought back to earth was less than 30 pounds of rock and to my knowledge there was not any nuclear energy in them.

Now let's just give our scientists a little more time. I have enough faith in them that they will find a way.

Freeze on nuclear arsenals would be irresponsible

© The Washington Post Co.

WASHINGTON — Note with regret, but not amazement, that those who are advocating a mutual U.S.-Soviet "freeze" of nuclear arsenals are not like Albert Einstein, who said: "Everything should be made as simple as possible, but not simpler." Simplicity makes the freeze proposal politically attractive, and irresponsible.

In the 1970s, while the Soviets raced ahead, America unilaterally practiced a semi-freeze. It deployed multiple warheads (MIRVs) on some existing missiles, but deployed not a single new ICBM. America deployed not a single new submarine-launched ballistic missile (SLBM) in the 1970s.

Applied to intermediate-range missiles in Europe, the freeze proposal is the Soviet negotiating position: Accept the Soviet's 275 SS-20s and permit no comparable U.S. missiles. Furthermore, if their general superiority in offensive systems were secured by a freeze, the Soviets could further refine their destabilizing counter-force capabilities.

For example, a freeze would prohibit new SLBMs but not new attack submarines that hunt SLBM submarines. These could eventually give the Soviet a destabilizing capability for destroying the U.S. sea-based deterrent. A freeze would kill the B-1 bomber, but would not inhibit the air defenses by which the Soviets degrade the effectiveness of America's B-52s. To try to preserve even a shadow of this leg of the strategic triad, America would have to spend heavily. The B-52's "escape time" (the time it takes to get out of range of nuclear effects from incoming missiles) is inferior to the B-1's and inadequate to the threat of Soviet SS-20s off the U.S. coast. Therefore, B-52s would have to be rebuilt for better escape capability and would have to be more dispersed (B-52s can use fewer airfields than B-1s, so airfield modernizations would be necessary) at prohibitive cost.

The budgetary impact of a freeze would be modest. Strategic programs — weapons, command, control, communications — account for just 15 percent of the defense budget. The freeze would prevent some procurements, but would make other spending more effective by reducing the freeze's destabilizing effects.

(The freeze proposal makes it timely to note that some aspects of existing arms-control agreements are destabilizing. The ban on missile defenses (ABMs) is one example. Another is the ban on new silos. This prevents, for example, deploying any of our permitted number of ICBMs on the south sides of mesas. Given the inherent limits on ballistic missile trajectories, such basing would make America's land-based deterrent more survivable, and the world safer.)

The proposed freeze would extend to "testing, production and further deployment of nuclear warhead, missiles, and other delivery systems." But proponents can not explain how they will provide for verification of, say, a freeze prohibiting improved yields of warheads, or improved throw weights, or even new missiles. How, for example, will they verify whether new Soviet cruise missiles are nuclear armed? Such verification is beyond the capability of our national technical means, and the Soviets will not permit the necessary on-site inspection.

The freeze proposal illustrates the dangerous asymmetry inherent in U.S.-Soviet arms negotiations. Such seductively simple panaceas pander to the widespread desire to believe that there can be an easy, cheap escape from the dangers posed by modern physics and the modern Soviet state. In the only superpower where public opinion matters, the freeze proposal will undermine support for modernization of strategic weapons. The argument will be: Any new U.S. program will "provoke" the Soviets to reject a freeze.

But, the Soviets are serious about arms limitations only when America's ongoing programs compel Soviet seriousness. The Soviets rejected the idea of limits on defensive systems — until the Nixon administration won congressional approval for ABMs. Then the Soviets reversed themselves. However, the fact that congressional support for the ABM was so fragile (a one-vote margin in the Senate) encouraged the Nixon administration to accept a destabilizing result in SALT I: a temporary (five-year) and ineffective restraint on offensive systems, but a ban in perpetuity on ABMs.

Proponents of a freeze nevertheless see a first step toward President Reagan's more ambitious goal of reductions in force levels. But were the Soviets to agree to a freeze, it would remove the only incentive — ongoing U.S. programs — for the Soviets to negotiate reductions.

The freeze proposal is popular with many who who supported, and served in, the previous administration. That administration wasted four precious years killing and retarding U.S. strategic programs, and — not coincidentally — negotiating arms-control agreements so imbalanced and porous that a Democratic-controlled Senate would not ratify them. The freeze proposal is another example of posturing and wasted motion that the world can ill afford.

Americans earn more, spend more, save less.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The personal income of Americans climbed last month by one-half a percent, but less money went into savings, the government reported Thursday.

Drops in farm income and higher taxes combined with the effects of the recession to hold down the growth of paychecks in February, the Commerce Department said.

Personal spending continued at a fairly strong pace at the expense of the savings rate.

The government's monthly measure of the nation's payrolls grew despite the fact that there were fewer workers than the month before. Those who remained on the job got paid more per hour and worked more hours a week, and unemployment benefits for those off the job also were counted.

Farm income went down in February by $2.9 billion, more than the $2.2 billion drop in January. All other categories of income increased.

The broadest category of income, after an $800 million increase in Social Security tax withholding, went up by $12.1 billion to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $2,569 trillion, the department said.

"Considering we had somewhat of a rebound in the economy from the weather problems in January... the increase in the personal income is slightly disappointing," said Robert Ormer, chief economist of the Commerce Department.

Although it was the biggest increase since November, it was measured in current dollars not adjusted for inflation because February's inflation rate will not be known until next Tuesday's Consumer Price Index.

February's half percent increase compares with a 0.2 percent rise in January, no change at all in December and an average growth through last year of about 0.9 percent a month.

The narrower category of disposable personal income also went up 0.5 percent after income taxes and government fees, the same as January, before inflation is taken into account.

The personal taxes and fees took a giant jump in February, swinging from a decline of $3.7 billion in January to an increase of $2.2 billion in February.

The savings rate appeared to decline to 4.9 percent of disposable income. The three-month average that is the official figure is published with a month's delay. It was set at 5.3 percent for January and 5.7 percent in December.

The savings rate's most recent peak was 6.1 percent in October and November, temporarily buttressing the administration's view that even the first phase of the tax reduction would encourage savings.

St. Helens eruption expected Saturday

VANCOUVER, Wash. (UPI) — A rising, steaming lava dome grew at a faster rate Thursday inside the crater of Mount St. Helens, prompting scientists to predict a dome-building eruption within two days.

The federal Emergency Management Agency in Vancouver said 35 to 40 shallow earthquakes per day continued to rattle under the mountain. The seismic level of the quakes remains moderate.

"Basically what we're doing is just waiting," said Christina Boyko of the University of Washington Geophysics Department. "We still think an eruption is likely by Saturday, maybe Saturday morning."

Clear skies afforded a look at a steam plume which rises 1,000 feet above the growing lava dome, a mound of hardened lava that may become the new summit for the peak.

A field crew of U.S. Geological Survey scientists returned to the floor of the crater today for more tests on the mountain.

Mike Wright of the U.S. Forest Service in Vancouver said the crowds are testing deformation or subtle shifts in the mountain's shape.

"They have targets set up in there (in the crater) and they'll shoot these targets with a laser and as that ground moves, they can pick up on it," Wright said.

The USGS and the university issued an eruption alert last week predicting that the volcano would erupt within three weeks. When seismic activity increased last weekend, the scientists amended the alert, saying they expect an eruption within 1-5 days.

All indications point to another mild dome-building eruption, rather than an explosive blast like those that rocked the volcano six times in 1980.

The big blow came on May 18, 1980, when an explosive blast tore 1,300 feet off the top of the mountain, killing 60 people. Five more explosive eruptions followed, the last one in October 1980.

Since then the volcano has been in a dome-building phase, by which scientists say the peak will eventually rebuild itself.

Spy identification bill passes

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate Thursday approved and sent on its way to almost certain enactment an unprecedented press restriction making it illegal to print the names of American spies, even when they are public knowledge.

On a vote of 50-5, the Senate sent the administration-backed bill to conference with the House, which approved a similar version last year 354-16.

One of the bill's sponsors, Sen. Joseph Biden, D-Del., predicted it would be declared unconstitutional in the courts because of a House-passed provision adopted by the Senate

The critical language in that amendment would make an author's "reason to believe" that disclosures would harm U.S. intelligence a criterion for prosecution. Opponents wanted a stricter standard of having to prove "intent" to "impair or impede" the CIA and sister agencies.

The bill is part of an administration package to bolster the CIA's effectiveness and was aimed at newsletters such as Courtesy and Covert Action Information Bulletin, which sponsors of the bill said are "in the business of naming names" of agents.

Congress moving slowly on budget compromise

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Despite calls for immediate action, Congress moved slowly and seemingly in opposite directions Thursday in trying to reach a bipartisan alternative to President Reagan's embattled 1983 budget proposal.

Senate GOP leader Howard Baker said the Senate could pass a budget resolution now, but he would prefer that the House make the first move since it would be more difficult for the Democratic-dominated House to develop a consensus.

But House Speaker Thomas O'Neill said Wednesday the Democrats probably would wait for Senate Republicans to make the first move toward a comprehensive, deficit-reducing alternative budget plan.

The confused stalemate became more obvious during a brief conversation Thursday morning between O'Neill and House GOP leader Bob Michel of Illinois, who is trying to resume deadlocked budget negotiations in the House.

Dow bounces back with 9.42-point gain

NEW YORK (UPI) — An oversold stock market staged a broad-based rally Thursday afternoon as traders drew encouragement from strengthening technology issues and began buying despite economic uncertainty. Trading was active.

The Dow Jones industrial average, pointing steadily higher to a 9 point lead around 3 p.m., faltered briefly before resuming its climb for a 9.42-point gain to 805.27. It was the Dow's biggest daily increase since Feb. 24 when it rose 17.70 points.

The closely watched blue chip indicator lost a total of 5.14 points in the previous two sessions after gaining 3.62 Monday. It dropped 9.99 points overall last week and has tumbled 67.72 points this year.

major selling developed after the Dow dipped below the 800 mark early this week. Investors also were responding to the recent strength in energy, oil and technology issues, which had been taking a battering.

A firm bond market also helped stock prices in early trading although bonds ended the day lower as the federal funds rate banks charged each other for overnight loans again moved up to the 15 percent area.

Concern persists over the recession, high interest rates and President Reagan's large budget deficits.

Big Board volume came to 54,270,000 shares compared to 48,900,000 traded Wednesday.

Analysts said the market apparently found a temporary bottom. They said traders took their cue when no major selling developed after the Dow dipped below the 800 mark early this week. Investors also were responding to the recent strength in energy, oil and technology issues, which had been taking a battering.

A firm bond market also helped stock prices in early trading although bonds ended the day lower as the federal funds rate banks charged each other for overnight loans again moved up to the 15 percent area.

Concern persists over the recession, high interest rates and President Reagan's large budget deficits.

Budget Director David Stockman Thursday told the National Association of Manufacturers he is confident the White House and Congress will be able to reach a compromise on the deficit. Speaking at the same meeting, Federal Reserve Board Chairman Paul Volcker said he sees an improved long-term economic outlook with lower inflation.

Congress makes an effort to cut the deficits.

Reagan again asked the business community for its support of his economic program.

The Union Steelmakers said they no longer anticipate a mid-year recovery from their current slump.

Reagan chides business

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan, saying he is "a little disappointed," chided business leaders Thursday for wavering in their support of his economic recovery program.

"What we need now is not last-minute bagging or displays of blatant self interest — we need the support that only America's businessmen can give us," Reagan said in a curt and staccato speech to the National Association of Manufacturers.

Some leaders of big business, traditionally among the strongest supporters of Republican policies, recently have said the administration should take whatever steps are needed to bring down interest rates and slash the size of the national budget deficit.

"Let me be honest with you... and tell you I've been a little disappointed lately with some in the business community who have forgotten that feeding dollars to government is like feeding a stray pup. It just follows you home and sits on your doorstep asking for more."

After reprimanding the friendly audience at the Sheraton Washington Hotel, Reagan added he is "mighty grateful" for past favors and asked them to continue your invaluable support.

The president called for the businessmen "to get on with the business of economic recovery, to look for imaginative ways to invest and grow and to provide jobs for the unemployed."

"This nation's serious economic problems, but we are moving forward with a program that will effectively address these problems," Reagan said. "It has brought about revolutionary changes of enormous benefit to both American and non-American businessmen."

Then he played the card they wanted to see. He told them to "tell the people back home that there is hope here again. Tell them that... there are great days ahead."

"We have confidence in the president's economic program and our members were very encouraged by his speech," said Alexander B. Troubridge, president of the NAM.

"The NAM continues to strongly support the president's economic recovery program. This basic shift in national policy toward private sector solutions will restore economic growth and reduce unemployment."

The president used the opportunity for an all-out defense of his tax and budget program.

Chester Rudnicki takes sledgehammer to patio to cut taxes

Smashing Homeowner has plan to cut tax bill

STERLING HEIGHTS, Mich. (UPI) — Chester Rudnicki trimmed $50 from his annual property tax bill with a sledgehammer.

He shattered his patio, which would cost $1,800 to replace, to strike back at a property tax system that has raised assessments despite stabilizing — and in some cases declining — home values.

He may also cement up his fireplace and jerk out the central air conditioning.

He sees his protest as something akin to the Boston Tea Party. "I'm not a rebel," Rudnicki said. "I volunteered to go to Vietnam when the protesters were burning flags. I'm not opposed to paying my fair share, but if it takes a Boston Tea Party, then they're going to get one.

Rudnicki, 42, is a native of Poland who has lived in the United States since he was 11. A $15-an-hour tool maker, he expects to be laid off this summer.

"If I was a woman, I suppose I'd be crying right now," he said. "When I built this patio, my hands were bleeding from all the cement work."

"But I can live without a patio," he said. "I can live without a fireplace. I can live without food and clothing for my wife and children."

City Assessor Eugene Belzhold said Rudnicki could lower his assessment by $50 eliminating the patio, another $50 for the fireplace and $35 for the air conditioner.

Shuttle landing site changed

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI) — Facing possible conditions in California, the space agency Thursday shifted the landing site for the space shuttle Columbia to New Mexico.

NASA tackled the "monumental task" of hauling necessary equipment there before Monday's scheduled launch.

Astronauts Jack Louma and Gordon Fullerton now are to bring the Columbia down from its third flight — a grueling seven-day, 115-orbit test mission — on the gypsum desert floor of the White Sands missile range in the New Mexico mountains on March 29.

Announcement of the change came just 5 1/2 hours after officials kicked off the countdown toward Columbia's takeoff from this spacecraft at 10 a.m. EST.

Edwards Air Force Base in California's Mojave Desert, which had been scheduled to welcome the shuttle back from space for the third time, was a sea of water and mud, and officials said Thursday there was no possibility it could be used — maybe even for four to six weeks.

Crews at Edwards immediately turned to America's oldest freight system to serve as a "shuttle express," loading a 23-car train with the heavy support equipment needed to process the winged spacecraft on its return.

The 1,000-mile, 32-hour rail trip to White Sands was to start early today. "This is a monumental task," said Fritz Weidick, the NASA official in charge of post-landing operations for the shuttle.

Also to be hauled by rail from

Edwards to White Sands, on a 15-car train to be loaded today, is other equipment needed to prepare Columbia for its trip back to Cape Canaveral atop a Boeing 747. And early July, as one put it, "I think we'll learn a heck of a lot" by landing on a strange field.

Mission officials were disappointed but philosophical about the shift, which is certain to delay Columbia's fourth flight scheduled in late June or early July. About 400 people will be diverted to meet the shuttle at White Sands.

Lewis Reinertson, a NASA public affairs official at Edwards, lamented, "We worked so hard to prepare for this landing that it's kind of a letdown not having the chance to do it. It's like preparing a party and nobody comes."

Weinberger: U.S. will take steps to block Soviet missiles in Cuba

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger said Thursday the United States will do whatever is necessary to prevent the installation of Soviet missiles in Cuba.

At the same time, he said a new round of negotiations with the Soviet Union on limiting strategic intercontinental nuclear weapons may open "sometimes this summer and sometimes the Soviets wish to do so."

The State Department said timing for opening the negotiations will depend on "the international climate of relations between the United States and the Soviet Union," including events in Poland and Central America.

"We have entered the final phase of intensive preparations for the Strategic Arms Reduction Talks. The preparations will be complete in a matter of weeks. We will proceed with the negotiations when the conditions permit," spokesman Dean Fischer said.

Fischer said the necessary conditions do not now exist. The continued martial law in Poland, he said, "is not satisfactory."

Weinberger's comments, in an NBC Today program interview, centered chiefly on the Soviet freeze on deployment of mobile SS-20 medium range missiles positioned in European Russia and targeted mostly against Western Europe.

In announcing the move Tuesday, Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev warned that if NATO proceeds with its plans to position 108 U.S. Pershing II and 464 cruise missiles in five Western European countries beginning in December 1983, the Soviets will put the United States "in an analogous position."

The threat has been interpreted unofficially to mean the Soviets might deploy missiles in Cuba. With Cuba only 90 miles from Florida, most of the United States would be within range of the SS-20s, which can travel 3,100 miles.

Dozier testifies

VERONA, Italy (UPI) — Brig. Gen. James L. Dozier, looking his Red Brigades kidnapers in the eye for the first time, testified at their trial Thursday that he resisted the policemen who saved him because he first thought they were members of a rival terrorist gang.

Dozier, who sat nearby motionless in his dress army uniform during 50 minutes on the witness stand, paused as he left the courtroom and gave the Red Brigades defendants in two steel-barred cages a hard and icy stare for about 10 seconds.

During the 42 days the terrorists held him captive, they kept their faces hidden with hoods. As Dozier fixed them with a frigid glare, they stopped chatting between themselves and fell silent.

Mrs. Judith Dozier testified for about 10 minutes after her husband.

The general confirmed depositions he made after his rescue from the terrorists' "peoples prison" on Jan. 28. He recounted how his "guard" pointed a pistol at him seconds before masked Italian police burst into the room where he was chained inside a tent.

"I asked them who they were and they said, 'We are the police.' But I was not sure because their faces also were covered," Dozier testified.

Man won't give up on new heart

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — The attorney for a dying Florida man who has been refused a transplant using a Utah artificial heart threatened Thursday to let University of Utah Medical Center officials "watch him die" on their front steps.

Ellis Rubin said in Salt Lake City that if the falls through negotiations or legal action to force the research hospital to waive its transplant guidelines, he will fly 37-year-old Dale Lott to Salt Lake City and sit him on the hospital's steps.

"Then they can watch him die," Rubin said.

"The university has a heart that could possibly prolong this man's life. They won't give him the heart, so he's going to come beg for it," he said.

But, in the same breath, Rubin said he was cheered by an announcement made by hospital officials Wednesday.

In a news conference called because of unfavorable publicity the Lott case has brought to the hospital, officials said they may change the way they pick implant candidates for the Jarvik-7 heart — which has kept calves alive for months but has never been tested on humans.

Hospital researchers have said a human patient might not live for more than a few hours with the experimental heart.

Dr. Chase Peterson, university vice president of health services said the rule allowing implants only on people whose hearts could not be restarted during open-heart surgery was made because the risk would be "absolutely zero" to a person who is essentially dead.

By contrast, he said, "Lott's heart is still working and, by his doctor's estimate, he will live for several more weeks or months."

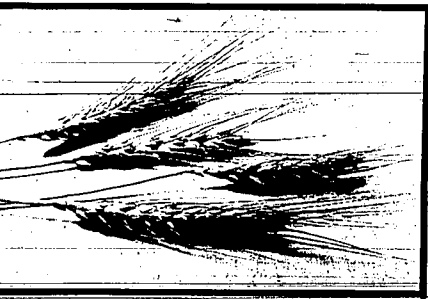

The Florida attorney arrived in Salt Lake City Wednesday night with a lawsuit in hand, but said he would try to negotiate with the medical center before pursuing legal action.

Lott, who has been told by doctors he has 30 days to live, suffers from degenerative heart disease, complicated by diabetes. Rubin said the diabetes was brought on by drugs the 18-year Navy veteran was taking to control an earlier heart condition.

Peterson said Lott's appeals to the news media and his threats to sue the university are an attempt "to circumvent a deliberate and thorough research process designed to protect human life."

Two hours to showtime

Jim Varley transforms

...into character Ling

TWIN FALLS — Two hours to showtime, and the tension is rising like an invisible mist.

In the make-shift "make-up" room of the Fine Arts Auditorium at the College of Southern Idaho, actors and actresses are changing themselves into characters.

Madame Ming (Liz Remer) watches her nails lengthen and turn ebony under manicurist Phyllis Thomas' care. Her companion Ching (Dell Timpson) is acquiring a jaundiced complexion.

Virtus (Terry Rowe), like a perfect Angel, hands out presents to various cast members. Under her painted face and darkened lashes, she confesses her nerves. "It's a sign of good luck if you're nervous. If not, it's a sign you got something to worry about."

A man dressed as a minister (Ron Cook) bursts into the room, wailing "Oh God, I'm not ready for this." His hair will soon be slicked back and his face acquire a few extra lines.

Director-choreographer Fred Scheibe watches the flurry of activity at the makeup table and occasionally lends a hand to adjust a sailor's cap or costail. He, too complains of nerves, and Ling (Jim Varley) demands to know why, since he won't ever be out on stage.

"You've got to remember I do every one of your parts in my head," Scheibe said.

It's now 1½ hours to showtime on opening night of the Magic Valley Dilettantes' "Anything Goes." Still, half out of costume, the cast prepares to face their first audience.

"I'm so glad there will be an audience," one actress sighs. "My jokes are so stale the cast doesn't laugh any more."

Youngster Ryan Gilbert, already decked out in socks and shorts, rouged cheeks and mascara is about to undergo the final insult — the hairdresser wants to put some "wave" in his hair. "I hate curls," he says, glowering under the heat of the hair iron. Ah, the sacrifices I make for the Theater, his expression seems to say.

Scheibe gives some last-minute instructions about the scenery and drapes to the crew. Ching is quaffing some coffee; soon Moonface, the errant minister, indulges in a cup.

Scheibe says he's playing his final part: "My role is to give them confidence to go on. I've screamed and yelled the last few weeks. Now they have to get out there and do their own thing."

A large cake is brought in with the inscription: "To the cast, orchestra, and crew. Here's to you, every damn one of you. Love Reno."

Forty-five minutes to showtime. Scheibe calls the actors together for the "cast call" and pep talk. Everyone joins hands and forms a big circle, while Scheibe gives his final instructions. "This is a valentine that is a valentine to be played directly to the audience," he says. "Sing to the audience. Give your smiles to the audience. Give your energy to the audience."

And then Scheibe goes round the circle, smacking all of his players on the cheek, from big to small, all 60-odd actresses, actors, stray make-up artists and crew, amid the whoops and laughter of his crew.

"It's your show now, not my show. It's your show," he says.

The hugging begins. At any slightest provocation, the players will squeeze or throw their arms around — each other — muttering "Break a leg," "Good luck," or anything to quell the jangling in their system.

Fifteen minutes to showtime. Bill Sweet, the chorus director, calls for a voice warm-up in the chorus room. Relieved to expend their energy, the singers throw their voices into the words:

"Blow that horn! GABRIEL!"
"Blow that horn! GABRIEL!"
"BLOW!"

Back in the make-up room, a sailor searches for some baby powder; he wants to cover a small make-up stain on his white suit.

"Okay, you guys. Five minutes, someone yells at the door."
"Oh, oh, oh," the universal cry goes out.

In an effort at a calm voice, Moonface tells Billy Crocker (Mike Winterholler) "You know what's wonderful about the first scene."

Bonnie Keim researched the life of Diamondfield Jack

Artist portrays saga of Diamondfield Jack

TWIN FALLS — The historic saga of Diamondfield Jack is portrayed by Twin Falls Artist Bonnie Keim in a current exhibit at the First Security Bank Addition Branch.

About four years ago, the artist began researching the life of Jack Davis, alias Diamondfield Jack, who was convicted and later pardoned for the murder of a sheepman. Diamondfield Jack lived in the colorful days of the conflict for grazing land between cattle and sheep interests in southern Idaho at the turn of the century.

Henson interviewed historians and several local residents who were eyewitnesses to his trial and obtained a photo from the Idaho State Historical Society of Davis while he was in the Idaho State Prison.

Henson began her first painting of him in January, 1981, finishing the last in the series a year later.

The first five paintings depict the major events leading to the arrest, conviction and imprisonment of Davis. The sixth painting is a panorama of the life of Diamondfield Jack after his release from prison at Boise until his death as a result of an auto accident in Las Vegas in 1949.

Davis was sentenced to hang June 21, 1901, then the date was delayed into July and the case evolved into what has been described as one of the strangest legal dramas of Western America.

What is most remembered about the Diamondfield Jack case is the dramatic ride of horsemen bringing word of his reappearance from hanging. The telegraph service ended in the town of Mindokta and two riders rode non-stop from there to Albion with notice from the governor to the sheriff to keep the alleged murderer from being hanged.

After seven years of litigation Davis was finally given a life sentence and spent about six years in prison before being pardoned in 1902 after two other men confessed to the killing.

The paintings will be on display at the Addison branch of the bank for the next six weeks.

Castle, Garcia highlight two benefit shows

TWIN FALLS — JoAnn Castle, well known club performer, will present her second annual benefit performance in Twin Falls March 27 at the CSI Fine Arts Auditorium. Two shows are scheduled at 2:30 and 7:30 p.m.

Proceeds will be used to help the Magic Valley Alcoholism Recovery Center which operates both a men's and women's center in Twin Falls with satellite offices in Hailey, Burley and Mountain Home.

Castle, who recently completed a five-city tour in the Midwest where she starred with Sonny James and the Bellamy Brothers, will be assisted in the local performance by four other performing artists. She recently recorded a new album, featuring six songs she composed herself.

Participating at the two variety shows at CSI in addition to Castle will be Hank Garcia, a comedian from the Los Angeles area who performed at Cactus Pete's at Jackpot last fall; Jimmy Bays, veteran actor who plays in a new original musical called "Market to Market"; Mary Lou Metzger, singer and dancer with the Lawrence Walk Show, with which Castle also formerly was associated, and Buddy Merrill, also formerly with the Walk show. He has 25 albums to his credit and handles producing for other artists, according to Penne Main, co-chairman of Twin Falls, chairman for the benefit performances.

Castle has her own backup group of musicians who will assist in the show.

Advance tickets are $4.50 and are available at the CSI bookstore, Music Center in Twin Falls and the North Side News in Jerome. They also are available at all MVARC locations. Tickets are $5.50 at the door.

Showtime

I'm supposed to be scared to death in it."

"Act One. Scene one," someone yells.

The cast starts lining up at the stage door. "What show are we doing someone jokes. "Shhh," someone giggles.

Waiting by the stage door in the final few seconds, one of the dancer gulps, realizing, "Oh, I forgot..."

She turns and dashes back into the make-up room. After a few seconds of frantic searching, she finds whatever she was looking for and scoots back into the lipe, which starts moving through the stage door.

"There's a few more squeezes and a few 'shhs'" as the deep boom of a ship's horn sounds.

It's Showtime.

The final performances of "Anything Goes" will be held tonight and Saturday at 8:15 p.m.

'Damn Yankees' presented at Gooding High School

GOODING — Gooding High School will present "Damn Yankees" March 26 and 27 at the high school auditorium.

Performances will begin at 8 p.m. Friday and at 2 and 8 p.m. Saturday.

Judy Garff is director of the play which is based on Douglass Wallop's book "The Year the Yankees Lost the Pennant." It tells the story of a middle-aged real estate salesman in Washington, D.C., who is an avid fan of his hometown ball team.

Principal characters are played by Scott York, Tom Baker, Rick Beck, Karyn Myers and Krista Ochs.

Advance tickets, which are $2.50 for adults and $1.50 for children under 12, are available at Jordan's Studio or at the high school. Tickets also will be available at the door for $3 for adults and $2 for children.

Dear Abby

They agree on double standard

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
© Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I liked your advice to the guy who never messed with "nice" girls but hoped to marry one, though he was no virgin himself. When I was a young man, a girl I liked a lot told me she wanted to remain a virgin, but she wanted her husband to be "experienced."

If all the girls are supposed to stay pure and all the men are supposed to be "experienced," where are the men supposed to get experience?

RUPERT

DEAR RUPERT: Probably from those girls who were "pure" until they met up with a guy who was looking for experience.

DEAR ABBY: This is in response to your reply to "A. in W. Va." At last! Someone actually says that because a girl isn't a virgin doesn't mean she should be branded with a scarlet letter forevermore! And even more astonishing, someone has also come right out and said that if a boy wants a virgin he should remain one himself. I couldn't agree more with you on both counts, as that has been my opinion for a good many years now.

All these jerks like "A. in W. Va." who believe in practicing the double standard of sexual "morality" should read your answer. You are 1,000 percent correct. It is about time — in fact, long since past time — that boys realized that if the girls they go to bed with are not "nice," just because the girls go to bed with them, then what are these boys? They are certainly no better. Keep sockin' it to 'em, Abby!

— DELIGHTED IN SAN FRANCISCO

DEAR ABBY: This is regarding the guy who never messed with "nice" girls but hoped to marry one.

I'm reminded of the conversation that took place between me and the father of a girl I wanted to marry. I was 20 and she was 17. Her father asked me if I had ever "been with" a woman. "No, sir," I lied.

"Well, you'd better go out and get some experience before you marry my daughter," he said. "I don't want no clumsy guy who doesn't know what he's doing practicing on MY little girl!"

DEAR ABBY: Your statement, "if a guy wants a virgin for a wife, he himself should remain one," was excellent!

I, for one, am tired of the double standard. No one is saying that it is easy, that it takes no control, that it takes no self-discipline. Self-control, rather than hindering, actually adds to one's enjoyment of the sex act. We are no different than animals if the sexual act is performed without commitment and trust.

It is beautiful when two people can enter into a marriage knowing that neither one has experienced this intimacy with someone else.

— A MENNONITE MINISTER
LANCASTER, PA.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 20-year-old male and I'm still a virgin. I just want to say that when I marry, it will be because I love the girl, and I won't judge her on whether she's a virgin or not. I think it's childish to judge a girl for what she's done in the past.

I've known virgin brides who ended up having affairs afterward. And I've known girls who have slept around, got married, and turned out to be faithful wives and caring mothers.

There's no such thing as a "bad" girl or a "nice" girl. They're just human like us guys. For every unwed mother there's an unwed father.

— A GENTLEMAN

DEAR GENTLEMAN: Lucky for you you didn't sign your name. The girls would be standing in line to date you.

Dr. Lamb

Risk factors in jogging outlined

By LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.
Newspaper Enterprise Association

DEAR DR. LAMB — I need your opinion about jogging.

My husband is 5 foot 9, weighs 180 pounds and is 27 years old. He plays basketball or basketball every week and works out with weights almost daily. He has mentioned having high blood pressure but it has not restricted him. He has not had a complete physical for at least three years.

His jogging is not a normal "put on your sneakers and jog a mile or so." He prances around with garbage bags under his jogging skirt to make him sweat more and make the run more beneficial.

Upon completion of his run (usually six miles) he's thoroughly soaked and even after showering and resting for a half hour he's still sweating. He insists he feels better but I wonder if he works shifts and eats mainly sandwiches, hamburgers, french fries and assorted fast-foods. He won't listen to me but maybe he will listen to you.

DEAR READER — Your husband's young age is in his favor, but I do believe anyone who does as much exercise as you describe should know what the risk factors are.

The risk factors are the best indicators of how much fatty-cholesterol deposits are in the arteries. If they are high, a person should take precautions not to overdo his exercise, at least until the risk factors are controlled.

High blood pressure is one of the most important of the three risk factors. Weight control, which is benefited by exercise, often helps here.

High cholesterol levels are important, and they should be lowered also by weight control and diet. The third important risk factor is cigarette smoking, which I hope your husband does not do.

I am sending you The Health Letter No. 13-2, How to Measure Your Risk of Heart Disease, which your husband should read. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N. Y. 10019.

Americans need all-season cereal

By ERMA BOMBECK
© Field Enterprises, Inc.

The recent column on cupboard-arms of half-empty cereal boxes drew a lot of mail.

I had no idea how much this country is in need of a Uni-Cereal... a cereal for all seasons and all ages. A cereal that tap dances in the bowl, builds a fire in your tummy on a cold morning, makes the strong boxes and teeth that doubles as a snack, crunches when you chew it, makes you regular and gives you premiums the entire family can enjoy.

There are no easy solutions to 30 or 40 boxes of half-empty cereal sitting around on the shelves growing stale.

There was a man from Utah who sneaked out at night and mixed all the old cereal together in one box. He had also tried it with all the old ice cream in assorted cartons, so it fooled no one.

There was a woman in New York who put the cereal in bowls with a note, "DON'T TOUCH — SAVING FOR BRIDGE CLUB" which worked for a couple of weeks.

But perhaps the most creative idea came from a mother in St. Louis who posted the following announcement on her refrigerator door:

ENTER MOM'S COLOSSAL CEREAL CONTEST PRIZES! PRIZES! PRIZES! Whoever finishes the most boxes of cereal wins. Special prizes for creative combinations of finished cereal.

RULES

1. Contest open to persons of all ages.
2. Cereal may be eaten with or without milk.
3. Cereal to be finished must be in previously opened boxes (violators will be punished.)
4. All cereal poured must be consumed.
5. Proof of consumption will be required (box bottoms or soiled statements from prominent household figures).
6. Cereal may be legally consumed 24 hours a day.

'Making Love': Hollywood's first homosexual soap opera

BY RICHARD FREEDMAN
Newhouse News Service

Right from the beginning, Hollywood has been churning out slick, mindless, but profitable homosexual soap operas. Now, amid a flourish of trumpets and much self-congratulation, it has come out of the closet with "Making Love," the first slick, mindless homosexual soap opera.

Straight or gay, the suds are the same.

We know we're in Soapland right from the opening credits, which unroll over the familiar strains of the all-purpose Mawkish Piano Concerto, last heard in the teeny-bopper soap opera "Endless Love."

Then we're introduced to young married Zack (Michael Ontkean) and Claire (Kate Jackson). He's just out of medical school and she's fairly lost in the pecking order of a West Coast television station, but for their first home they buy a Spanish hacienda only slightly smaller than the Escorial.

Some things — like how people really live — Hollywood will never learn.

In eight years of marriage, certain strains begin to appear. Zack, who loves the operettas of Gilbert and Sullivan and the poetry of Rupert Brooke, hates Claire's penchant for striped toothpaste — enough to send any man fleeing from home and hearth.

Claire, a public television type if ever there was one, hates the class commercialism of her job. "I'm not talking Shakespeare," she memorably pleads at a board meeting. "I'm just talking quality."

Along comes Bart (Harry Hamlin) as Zack's patient. (Rule 1 of all soap operas is that the men have names like Zack and Bart.) Bart is a free-wheeling writer, the author of a free-thin-looking novel called "Good Intentions," whose highly original philosophy is, "If it feels good, do it."

So before long, Zack and Bart are doing it.

Zack, who furtively frequents gay bars but diligently avoids eye contact, finds himself hopelessly in love with Bart after they lose some popcorn at each other. Unfortunately, Zack is a domestic type, while Bart is a born cruiser. You know what these creative writers are like.

Eventually Claire, who must be the most innocent television executive in history, gets the idea that her husband prefers Bart's popcorn to her striped toothpaste.

"All works out well in the end" though, Claire settles down to real family life with a nice lawyer who thinks she's "one great girl," and Zack finally leaves feckless Bart to settle down in a New York penthouse with a nice architect who has great taste in shirts.

So it comes as no surprise that Arthur Hiller, who directed this painful farago, was also the director of "Love Story" — the ultimate heterosexual soap opera — a dozen years ago.

What is particularly irritating about "Making Love" is that it comes on the heels of "Taxi zum Klo," a German film examining the same problem of promiscuity vs. marital stability in homosexual relationships.

Often sleazily pornographic, "Taxi zum Klo" is nevertheless a very funny, moving and human film. Unlike "Making Love," it cost practically nothing to make, and will attract few viewers outside the gay community.

But it's the real thing, while "Making Love" — which cost, and will probably earn, pots of money — tries to conceal its inner emptiness under tons of goo and gloss. In its terribly tasteful way it's as insulting to anyone's sensibilities as the notoriously sleazy "Cruising" was.

"Making Love." The suds fly as physician Michael Ontkean leaves Kate Jackson, his wife of eight years, to take up with Harry Hamlin, a promiscuous writer. The first mainstream Hollywood soap opera about homosexuality, and with any luck the last. Rated R. One and a half stars.

Full steam ahead with 'Grease' sequel

By VERNON SCOTT
UPI Hollywood Reporter

HOLLYWOOD — Producer Allan Carr, refusing to be intimidated by the perils inherent in motion picture sequels, is going full steam ahead with his sequel to "Grease," the most successful movie musical ever made.

"Grease," according to Carr, earned $300 million in gross receipts at the box office, making him independently wealthy for life.

Not any of the famed Fred Astaire, Gene Kelly or Ginger Rogers films or the spectacular musicals at MGM and RKO earned a fraction of what "Grease" has done at turnstiles around the world.

"Grease," which starred John Travolta and Olivia Newton-John, ranks fifth among all-time box-office films, behind "Star Wars," "The Empire Strikes Back," "Jaws" and "Raiders of the Lost Ark."

With this astonishing financial track record it was almost a foregone conclusion that there would be a "Grease 2."

"We thought we'd leave it alone and not tamper with a sequel to what has become sort of a classic of its kind," Carr said.

"After all, it sold more than 2 million cassettes and discs for home entertainment units and Paramount has given 'Grease-2' major releases since it was first released in the summer of 1978.

"Not all sequels fall to measure up to the originals. 'Rocky,' 'Star Wars' and 'Superman' have enjoyed successful sequels. Some sequels, like the old 'My Friend Irma Goes West,' improved on the originals.

"The 'Godfather' sequel brought people back to theaters and so did 'Jaws II.' Both of them were big financial hits.

Carr says he wanted Travolta and Newton-John, both of whom zoomed to superstardom following the film, can no longer pass for California high school students.

"Grease" aficionados will, however, be happy to find the old Rydell High School faculty and staff intact with Eve Arden as principal, Sid Caesar as coach and Dottie Godman as secretary. Added to the teaching staff will be Conle Stevens and Tab Hunter.

Back too are the T-Birds, the car-crazed, greasy-haired dudes, and the Pink Ladies, the sweated, sexy feminine clique, Rydell's leading social groups.

Carr conducted a major search for replacements for Travolta and Newton-John, even considering such established names as Debbi Boone and Sean Cassidy. Neither were signed.

The hero and heroine of "Grease 2" are Maxwell Caulfield, 30, Michael Carrington and Michelle Pfeiffer, 25, a pair of attractive youngsters who look pretty much like Los Angeles high school seniors.

"We found Maxwell in an off-Broadway play," Carr said. "He has the same magnetism as Travolta. We see him as having a mixture of the qualities of Marlon Brando and James Dean — with a slight English accent.

"We were really lucky to find Michelle. She just walked in and read for us after we'd sent out a call for young actresses. I think they are creating the same sort of magic that John and Olivia did."

Capsule movie reviews

From Times-News wire services

BODY HEAT: A tempestuous, '40s-style melodrama about the fateful union of a danger-seeking attorney (William Hurt) and a lusty young woman (Kathleen Turner) who is trapped in a bad marriage with a wealthy older man. Sometimes raunchy, but always well-acted. Rated R. 3 stars.

THE BORDER: Jack Nicholson stars in an often-effective drama about a border patrol officer who lashes out against the corruption in his department and against the gross materialism of his wife. Harvey Keitel and Valerie Perrine costar. Only a silly, upbeat ending spoils what is Nicholson's best, major role in years. Rated R. 3 stars.

CHARIOTS OF FIRE: The beautifully told but predictable story of two athletes who competed in the 100-meter dash for England in the 1924 Olympics. One man runs for the glory of God; the other, to punish his adversary. Rated PG. 3 stars.

LIVE ON THE SUNSET STRIP: Richard Pryor's back-from-the-scenes concert film is extremely funny but, at 82 minutes, is much too short. The best piece occurs at the one-hour mark when he finally tells us about his brush with death and his addiction to freebase cocaine. In those moments, Pryor stokes his rightful claim to being the funniest man in America. Rated R. 3 stars.

MAKING LOVE: A surprisingly decent attempt at a drama about the problems experienced by a young man (Michael Ontkean) who comes out of the closet after eight years of marriage and leaves his wife (Kate Jackson) for another man (Harry Hamlin). The characters are too goody-goody to be believed sometimes, but the acting carries the day. Rated R. 3 stars.

NIGHT-CROSSING: The detailed events of two East German families who escaped to the West in a homemade hot-air balloon in 1979 are compellingly narrated by director Delbert Mann in the first Walt Disney movie that doesn't look like a Walt Disney movie. Rated PG. 3 stars.

ON GOLDEN POND: The pairing of Henry Fonda and Katharine Hepburn created all the magic hoped for in this touching, delightfully good-humored film about an aging couple spending what may be their last summer together. Rated PG. 4 stars.

Streep too fair for dark hair; hubby keeps Sophia away

From The Times-News wires

Q. I thought Meryl Streep should have dyed her hair black for her role as Sarah in "The French Lieutenant's Woman." Why didn't she?

A. "It was so fair that dark hair makes me look like some old fish," sighs the 32-year-old blonde, "so I opted for auburn hair instead. Watching the film, I couldn't help wishing that I was more beautiful. There comes a point when you have to look the part, especially in movies. In Victorian literature, passion, an illicit feeling, was always represented by darkness. I know I'm good-looking enough to play any of the women I usually play... but for this character, with her intense beauty, it wasn't enough."

Q. Any truth to the rumor that cancer-stricken Carlo Ponti refuses to let his wife Sophia Loren visit him in the hospital?

A. Ponti, 67, who has prostate cancer and is receiving treatments in a hospital in Paris, reportedly is still able to allow Sophia to visit after he learned of her affair with a 54-year-old French physician, Dr. Etienne-Emile Beaulieu. Sophia is said to live in Paris with Beaulieu, only rarely going to Switzerland to see her children, the Countess and Eduardo, who live with their father.

Q. Has Doris Day ever explained her obsession with dogs?

A. The 58-year-old actress, who has often been in the news because of her many dogs, says polyanthly "All my life I have never felt lonely with a dog. I loved all my side. Dogs have taught me how to be serenely patient and they have taught me about love—fundamental love, such as Jesus taught." The home she shared with her last husband, her fourth, was decorated with photos he took of her and the dogs, some of them dressed in clothes and human accessories.

Q. Why did a tough city guy like James Capney decide to retire to a farm with horses and cows?

A. Growing up in the concrete of New York's East Side, young Capney dreamed of being a farmer. As a young man, he enrolled in the Farmington School of Agriculture, but was forced to drop out because of a lack of money. Needing a job, he went to the 81st Street Theater where he was hired to sing, dance and do female impersonations. Today, as a gentleman farmer, Capney says, "This is all I ever wanted to do. Can't tell you why. It was just that the country attracted me."

Q. Is it true that film star Bill Hurt is the son of Henry, Louis III?

A. Hurt's mother married the publishing magnate after her divorce from Hurt's real father, an event the actor remembers as "a social trauma" in his life. "My real dad was with the State Department," says Hurt. "Until I was 6, I was living in this paradise in the South Pacific. My brother and I were bad little boys on Guam. We used to sit in mud puddles during typhoons. We used to explore the Quonset huts that were out in the boondocks, left by the troops from World War II. Sometimes we'd get a little ambitious and we'd burn the huts down."

Q. How much do Hollywood stuntmen make?

A. Only about 100 of the 400 members of the Screen Actors Guild who claim to be stuntmen actually make a decent living risking their necks. That elite corps of daredevils averages between $50,000 and $80,000 each per year.

Q. Reading about all the wealthy ex-presidents has stirred my curiosity. Have any ex-presidents ever been in dire financial straits?

A. Only three — Thomas Jefferson, James Madison and James Monroe — honestly needed public assistance, and they did not get it. They retired and were expected to fend for themselves, like everybody else, and each died broke and in debt.

Q. Who was the first "Gidget"? If I'm not mistaken there were three who played the part, Sally Field, Sandra Dee and Karen Valentine.

A. There's been a gaggle of Gidgets in movies and TV, those you list and more. Only Field played the part more than once, in 32 episodes of the ABC-TV series, "Gidget," 1965-66. Sandra Dee was first to play the darling of the surfing set in the feature film, "Gidget," in 1959. (Gidget, according to the movie, is a girl who isn't tall but isn't a midget.) Deborah Walley starred in "Gidget Goes Hawaiian" in 1961. Cindy Carol in "Gidget Goes to Rome" in 1963. The last two Gidget movies were for TV: "Gidget Grows Up," with Valentine in 1969, and "Gidget Gets Married," with Monte Falls in 1971.

Q. I know Sally Field has two children, but everything I read about her makes no mention of the father. Shed some light on the subject.

A. The father of Peter, 12, and Eli, 9, is Field's first husband, writer-producer Steve Craig. Craig was Field's first date in high school. The marriage ended in 1973, old history, and Field doesn't dwell on it now.

Cowboy Jazz lives up to its album's name

By ANNE HURLEY
Knight-Ridder Newspapers

COWBOY JAZZ: "That's What We Like About the West" (Rounder) Precisely what the title says it is, this group is everything Asleep at the Wheel should be. Lighthearted Western swing, immaculately produced and lovingly performed. Three women share the vocal duty here, and the album's high points are their striking harmonies, giving old standards like "Cow-Cow Boogie" and "Hey Good Lookin'" a fresh sheen. The solos are somewhat less successful, but still highly listenable. Great cover art, too.

we're your fans, or at least we used to be, several albums back. Your biting wit and catchy, hooky tunes have just plain disappeared, and we're worried sick.

You're coasting, kid, and it's never shown as clearly as it does on your latest, limp album. And you look even worse for the inclusion of a song co-written by your talented pal, Steve Goodman, "It's Midnight and I'm Not Famous Yet!" is head and shoulders above any of your own tunes. Our patience is wearing thin. Jimmy, you haven't taken us anywhere like the Mini-Mart or even Margaritaville in years — and we just won't settle for "Somewhere Over China."

GEORGE CARLIN: "A Place for My Stuff" (Atlantic) — Carlin's comic strength has always lain in his mime-like mugging, every bit as much as in his controlled-substance material, so his albums are far less successful than his live performances. With that in mind, "A Place for My Stuff" is funny indeed. In fact, buy it. (I hate reviewers who give away comedians' good lines, so I'll stop before I do.)

BRUCE COCKBURN: "Inner City Front" (Millennium/RCA) — Thoughtful Christian rock that is neither strident nor preachy, but simply Cockburn's (pronounced Coburn) intelligent way of literally singing God's praises. But he's a realist and isn't without a touch of cynicism, especially when he addresses love and romance ("you pay your money and you take your chance"). Overall, "Inner City Front" isn't as strong as his first few albums, but Cockburn's still the only game in town as far as sensitive, articulate Christian popular music's concerned.

CLARENCE "GATEMOUTH" BROWN: "Alright Again!" (Rounder) — Gatemouth is the only living blues singer who can give B.B. King a run for his money, and an "Alright Again!" he proceeds to do just that.

His band, especially the horn section, is clear and hard: His vocals are piercing, self-assured, but not the least rasping as some of his former records have been. Especially effective is his cover of Chicago bluesman Albert Collins' "Frosty," which opens Side 1 not with frost, but with a sizzling intensity.

This album may be a little hard to find, but it's worth the hunt. This is Southern blues as good as it gets.

JIMMY BUFFETT: "Somewhere Over China" (MCA) — What is it, Jimmy — too much dope? Too many greenies? Too much royalty cash rolling in? C'mon, you can tell us —

BOW WOW WOW: "RCA Special Radio Series, Vol. XV (RCA) — If you loved this band's debut "See Jungle! Go Jungle! Play Your Gang Yeah! City All Over: Go Crazy!" here's your chance to find out more through interviews, commentary and concert snippets.

The lead singer, a self-described 15-year-old-Burmese-refugee, is energetic and actually fairly talented; the band is much less hype than the hoopla surrounding its first album would indicate. They're far more talented than their partners in hype, Adam and the Ants — and this RCA radio outtake record gives them an added dimension.

SOCIAL CHANGE

According to the "Chronicle of Higher Education," four out of five American colleges and universities now recognize student organizations that promote homosexual activities. If true, it's astonishingly swift, this social change, this loosening of the limits. Those who welcome it no doubt will say, Not swift enough. But even one generation or two seems rapid—in such a sensitive matter so profoundly vital.

Today is Friday, March 19, the 78th day of 1982 with 287 to follow.

The moon is moving toward its new phase.

The morning stars are Mercury, Venus, Mars, Jupiter and Saturn.

There is no evening star.

Those born on this date are under the sign of Pisces.

Famed Scottish explorer David Livingstone was born March 19, 1813.

On this date in history:

In 1906, the last word in modern hotel appointments was to be found at the new Hotel Traymore in Atlantic City, N.J., which advertised: "Twenty-five private baths; capacity 450."

In 1917, the United States Supreme Court ruled the Adamson Act was constitutional. It provided for an eight-hour work day on American railroads.

In 1920, the Versailles Treaty establishing the League of Nations was rejected by the U.S. Senate.

In 1942, all men in the United States between the ages of 45 and 64 — about 13 million — were ordered to register with the draft boards for non-military duty.

Paperbacks become computerized

Tiny bars and numbers a problem for publishers, book stores

By PEGGY CONSTANTINE
Chicago Sun-Times

UPC and ISBN are two different systems for automating and recording book sales with scanning machines hooked to cash registers. Neither will be universally used until publishers put one or the other code on book jackets and stores hook up scanners to cash registers.

At least since 1976, when mass-market publishers grudgingly accepted the Universal Product Code and hardcover and paperback publishers agreed to use the International Standard Book Number system.

As Sandra K. Paul, president of SKP Associates, a consulting firm automating the book industry, puts it: "It's a chicken-and-egg thing. Publishers say they will use the bars or numbers when all the stores have the scanning machines. Booksellers say they will install the scanners when publishers start using the numbers."

The UPC code is intended only for mass-market paperbacks sold in supermarkets and drugstores. The ISBN number is for book and retail stores.

On the back of the softcover edition of Martin Cruz Smith's "Gorky Park" (Ballantine, $2.95), you'll notice on the lower-left-hand corner vertical bars surrounded by numbers on a white box. That's UPC, and here's how Paul explained it:

"The bars allow for scanning. It's the same system used to scan soup and milk. It doesn't care whether the book is 'Gorky Park' or 'The Sun Also Rises.' All the machine wants to record is a 13-digit number for $2.95. Distributors and publishers, however, need to know titles to count how many sold, how many to order and how many are returned. So the number above the bar, 22834, is a computer symbol for 'Gorky Park.' There is very little advantage in UPC to readers, except the code makes the checkout procedure more honest for customers," Paul said. "Cashiers cannot over- or undercharge with a scanning number. It's also possible at the end of the day for the supermarket to report that 17 copies of 'Gorky Park' at $2.95 have sold. If distributors scan those receipts, they can hurry up and order more books that sell well."

The Universal Product Code, Paul explains, came into being in 1974 when a consumer protection act required manufacturers to list all ingredients on products. "Most stuff had to be relabeled and since everybody required computerized data, some people thought books should be computerized, too."

New American Library and Pocket Books were holdouts to UPC until this year. Anne Maitland, publicity director of Pocket Books, said the publisher had taken a wait-and-see attitude.

"The expense of putting the code on books is astronomical," Maitland said. "That bar also takes a square inch of cover space. Sometimes, with wraparound cover art, the code is on a woman's leg."

But grocery stores and big chains with scanning machines threatened not to sell books without the coding, Paul said.

Now look at the ISBN number on "Gorky Park." Though the numbers are on most books, that system is not yet widely used. ISBN is the alphanumeric system for bookstore selling. Mass-market books, because they are sold everywhere, must also carry ISBN numbers.

Here's how Paul explained the ISBN code on "Gorky Park's" jacket: "After the letters ISBN, you find 0. Zero stands for an English-language book. It could be printed in any English-speaking country. A 2 represents a Spanish-language book. The next three letters (945 on 'Gorky Park') are the publisher's number. The next set (22834) is the title. The final number (9) is a digit that allows the computer to do a mathematical check to make sure the other numbers are correct."

Kimberly students stage mock trial

By GLEN WARCHOL
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Some kids had their day in court Thursday.

In fact, the Gifted and Talented Student Program from Kimberly Elementary School ran the show at the Twin Falls County Courthouse.

The students, drawn from grades one through six, held a mock trial to decide a fictitious automobile accident case in which a girl suffered a broken leg, ending her ability to roller-skate.

The mock trial was the brainchild of Kent Taylor, a Twin Falls lawyer, who thinks kids should know enough about the American legal process not to be intimidated by it.

"Every kid should know more about the legal process than they do by the eighth grade,"

Taylor said. "We are all governed by the laws of society and you have to understand it."

Taylor said he was pleasantly surprised by the students' performance at the mock trial Thursday.

"It was rather surprised that kids that age could understand what I was trying to tell them," he said. "They really handled it all very well. When the lawyers made their closing arguments to the jury, they picked out all the points that supported their case. They articulated it very well."

The mock jury found for the plaintiff and awarded $50 medical expenses and $2,000 compensation for loss of the ability to roller-skate. A jury of adults probably would have agreed with the verdict, Taylor said.

Taylor would like to see mock trials as a regular part of elementary education.

"If they were to have this experience for three or four years," he said, "10 percent of them would want to be lawyers and judges."

Burglars take drugs, cash from doctors

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News correspondent

BURLEY — A "substantial" amount of drugs and money were stolen from the offices of 12 doctors in Burley and Rupert Wednesday night or early Thursday morning.

Idaho State police in the two communities issued conflicting statements as to whether or not the burglaries possibly were related.

Lynn Smith, a detective for the Burley Police Department, reported 10 out of 12 offices in the Cassia Memorial Medical Center in Burley were burglarized. An unidentified janitor discovered the break-in at 7 a.m. Thursday, Smith said.

The detective would not disclose the amount or type of drugs taken or how much cash was stolen, but said it was "substantial."

Some of the doctors had not deposited their receipts in the bank, Smith said. The money was stolen from cash boxes in various offices.

Smith declined to name the eight Burley doctors who had 10 office rooms were burglarized, saying he would release the names today. Smith also did not release specific details about how the suspects gained entrance to the medical premises.

There was very little vandalism to the offices but the exterior doors were damaged, Smith said. The offices burglarized were all in the same building complex, but they were located in three separate areas, Smith said.

Rupert police report four doctors had their offices burglarized in the Medical-Surgical Group Center, located behind Minidoka County Memorial Hospital. Police did not disclose the names of the doctors.

Rupert authorities reported $50 was taken from a doctor's desk and $250 worth of drugs were stolen. They would not comment on the type of drugs taken.

The burglars entered through two solid wood doors in the side of the building, police said. There was little interior damage except for disrupted files. The break-in was discovered at 8 a.m. Thursday by an unidentified receptionist, who summoned authorities.

Rupert police said they are following up on some leads, while Smith said Burley police have no suspects at this time. Smith said he saw "a definite" connection between the Rupert and Burley break-ins. Rupert police said they believed there was only a "possibility" of a tie-in between the two.

City will inventory damage to streets

TWIN FALLS — The city engineer and street superintendent will inventory Twin Falls' winter-related street damage next week.

City Engineer Gary Young says next week's inventory will be the first step in assessing the cost of filling potholes brought on by the Magic Valley's harsh winter weather.

"We're definitely going to have to spend more on patching than we ever have before, at least since I've been here," says Young, who has been on the city staff for seven years.

He says it's likely that the city will reduce its summer sealcoating of streets and divert the money to repairing potholes. In "major disaster areas," Young says, it probably will be most cost-effective to replace an entire section of roadway rather than simply fill holes.

"Rehabilitating the streets could involve the temporary employment of additional workers."

"I don't see how we can get by without it and still do the other work that we normally have in the summer," says Young, who figures that every street in Twin Falls probably suffered some weather-related damage this winter.

Review board denies shelter home appeal

BOISE — A state health review board has declined to hear an appeal of its decision to block the development of an intermediate care shelter home in Twin Falls County.

Gen State Homes Inc., which had applied for a certificate of need for a 12-bed facility for severely handicapped adults, has been informed that the board's decision was based on "insufficient cause" to review the application.

The Idaho Health Facilities Review Board had voted to block the project because Gen State Homes had allegedly not provided enough information on how the $260,978 project would be financed.

Gen State Homes, which runs four shelter care homes in the Boise area, appealed the decision to the board, Linda Pail of Moscow, for an appeal of the decision. Pail denied the appeal.

Martin Lindholm, a Gen State Homes administrator, said Thursday he will meet with his lawyer today to decide their next step.

The agency may turn to the court system to overturn the decision or file a new certificate of need application by May 1.

Three incumbents still undecided as filing deadline nears

TWIN FALLS — With the deadline for filing candidacy petitions nearing, three Twin Falls County officials whose posts will be up for grabs in the next election have yet to decide whether they will seek re-election.

Nomination petitions must be filed with the Twin Falls County Clerk's office between April 1 and 7.

Candidates approved by the voters during the May 25 primary election will advance as candidates for the general election in November.

The primary election may be crucial to the re-election plans of incumbent county office holders, since all county posts are currently in the hands of Republicans.

County commissioners Ann Cover and Meri Leonard said this week that they had not decided whether to seek re-election. Cover's Third District seat is a four-year term. Leonard's Second District post is a two-year term.

Also in some suspense is the fate of the county prosecutor's office, presently held by Harry DeHaan.

DeHaan, who was appointed last year to fill the two-year post vacated by Tom Gray, is pegging his plans to a bill now pending in the Legislature that would boost his salary from $25,000 to $30,000. The commissioners have recommended that increase to the Legislature, which has the final authority over salary levels for prosecutors and county commissioners.

Office holders who indicated they would seek re-election to four-year terms were: County Clerk Richard Pence; Treasurer Juanita Stettler; and County Assessor Dorothy Hamby, who was appointed last year to fill the vacancy that resulted after the resignation of Bill Clark.

Not facing election this year are Commissioner Marvin Hempleman who represents the Second District, and Sheriff Jim Munn, both of whom were elected to four-year terms in 1980.

Voters must be registered in order to cast ballots in the primary election. Citizens can register with the registrars until May 7 and with the county clerk's office between May 7 through May 14.

Twin Falls County registrars include:

- Twin Falls — Precinct 1, Mrs. George Wallace, 511 Third Ave. E., 733-2629; Precinct 2, Mrs. H.L. Wurst, 242 Third Ave. N., 733-2335; Precinct 3, Helen Lamb, 242 Eighth Ave. E., 733-7880; Precinct 4, Frank Miller Young, Fourth Ave. N., 733-3443; Precinct 5, Mrs. Dora Berlach, 202 Jefferson St., 733-4573; Precinct 6, Mrs. Day DeLain, 241 Buchanan St., 733-1232; Precinct 7, Mrs. Aubrey Braabner, 1723 Heyburn Ave. E., 733-4675; Precinct 8, Mrs. E.M. Region IV board told New Federalism idea certain to be changed

By MARTY TRILLHAASE
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — President Reagan's proposal to shift responsibility for some 40 programs to the states will certainly undergo change and compromise before Congress approves the plan, local officials were told on Thursday.

But just what form those changes will take is anyone's guess, and that uncertainty may cause some anxiety for local government officials, said Meri Leonard, Twin Falls County Commissioner.

Leonard, a member of the National Association of Counties board of directors, gave that assessment of the proposed New Federalism to the Region IV Development Association board of directors. Leonard traveled to Washington, D.C., last month as part of the NAOC legislative conference, which met with Reagan and members of his administration.

The national organization has endorsed the concept of New Federalism. But that endorsement is conditional upon assurances that final implementation will not bankrupt local governments.

"The National Association of Counties actually endorsed just the concept itself," Leonard said. "To work out the actual implementation, I'm sure it's going to take a Philadelphia lawyer."

Reagan has proposed that the federal government take over the responsibility of financing Medicaid, while the states would assume the costs for food-stamp and Aid to Families with Dependent Children programs.

The administration also is proposing that the states assume responsibility for 40 federal programs over the next decade and that a $20 billion trust fund be established to finance the trade.

That fund would be financed through federal excise taxes. During the transition period, those excise taxes would be gradually reduced as federal funding is cut, giving local officials the option of raising taxes to pay for the programs, Leonard said.

Among the questions raised at Thursday's meeting were whether the federal government would impose regulations on those programs and how much control local governments would have over program administration and funding.

Leonard conceded those questions will have to be resolved by Congress.

In other matters, Region IV board members:

- Appropriated nearly half of the association's $6,300 U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development grant to the city of Halley. Halley intends to use the funds to help pay for a professional planner, who would assist in the development of a new comprehensive plan and zoning ordinance.
- Sought an additional $26,675 through the federal Economic Development Administration. EDA officials in Seattle informed the board that additional funds to be used for economic planning may become available and advised board members to apply for the funds. If EDA officials are correct, Region IV would be able to receive those funds through June 30.

- Issued unfavorable recommendations on two funding requests by Boise State University for migrant education programs. BSU has requested $158,000 to assist an estimated 60 students obtain high school diplomas and another $106,000 to help 30 students obtain the equivalent of a first-year college education. Board members said they considered the proposed programs inefficient.

Californians held on pot charges

TWIN FALLS — Three Californians were being held in the county jail Thursday, charged with possession of marijuana with the intent to deliver.

Joseph K. Hinesley, 20, and James Ellis Little, 20, both of Olinhurst, Calif., and Dean Arnold Anderson, 18, of Linda, Calif., were arrested Thursday. Bond was set at $2,500 for each defendant.

They were arraigned in Fifth District Magistrate Court. The public defender's office has been appointed to represent the three defendants.

According to an affidavit filed with the court, Idaho State Police officers said the suspects were first spotted in an automobile traveling at a high rate of speed on U.S. 93.

After the vehicle stopped, officers said they noticed a weapon in the car and obtained permission to search. At that point, more than five ounces of marijuana were discovered, according to the affidavit.

$10,000 bond for robbery suspect

JEROME — Joseph Gwin, 19, who was arrested on armed robbery charges early Wednesday morning in Jerome County, remained in the county jail Thursday in lieu of $10,000 bond.

Magistrate Court officials in Jerome said Gwin requested a preliminary hearing when arraigned, but a date has not yet been set.

His is scheduled to be taken to Twin Falls County today, according to Jerome County Sheriff Elia Hall, to appear in court in connection with charges there.

Gwin was arrested by county officers after allegedly robbing the Mini-Mart on South Lincoln Street of an undetermined amount of money.

An employee became suspicious when he saw the subject approaching the store and turned in an alarm.

Spry Jamestown ousts CSI, 68-66

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

It marked the first time in seven years that CSI had failed to win at least one game in the National Junior College Basketball Tournament. Moving ahead 11-10 six minutes into the game, the Jayhawks immediately went to a spread. From that point on it was the slower Eagles trying to contain the penetration. They couldn't. Jamestown had a succession of close-in jump shots or layups and five times when the first shot rolled off, they laid it back in. The Jayhawks hit 28 of 39 field goal attempts. The fact they could manage just 12 of 27 free throws kept it very close.

Just as they played their offense within the keyhole, the Jayhawks defended only the paint. CSI's inability to shoot the perimeter shot, a plague for the total season, was glaring. The combination of the offensive and defensive plays also nullified CSI's height as they seldom could get the ball inside offensively. Defensively, CSI's big men were no match for the penetrating Jamestown water-skiippers. Coach Dave Campbell said Jamestown's slow-down "surprised us some. They wanted us to play man-to-man defense and they brought the off-wing to the foul-line extended where we couldn't provide help-side defense. It was an excellent game plan for them. But I felt we just couldn't get the break to get the lead back and the play our game. Except in the early minutes, we never had the lead and the ball. I don't want to single out any one kid, but our perimeter shooting was not what it should have been." Campbell said CSI's game plan was quite similar to Jamestown's. "We didn't want to play fast. But it comes down to a point where you have to execute and do it rapidly," he said. "We never did do that against their early press. Our plan was to try to score against the press but we held the ball up when we came across the 10-second line without trying to take advantage of any numerical superiority we had. We just weren't attacking." Early in the game CSI had its Rick Tunstall-to-George Scott inside combination working well. But after 6-1 and 8-3 leads, Jamestown came back on its press for that 11-10 lead and immediately went into its spread. Carl Jeter hit two quick buckets before Kenny Moore replied for CSI. Jamestown then bounced ahead 21-14 on a fast break and two consecutive steals. CSI closed that to 21-21, but Jamestown again used two steals and a bad in-bounds pass to move ahead 27-21. Over the last three-and-a-half minutes, CSI scrapped back to within a point, 33-31, at halftime. The Eagles last held a lead when freshman Charles Williams, playing his best game in several weeks, hit a short jumper. But again Jamestown replied with a six-point burst and CSI trailed until Gerald Kennedy tied it at 45 from the foul line. CSI's demise appeared imminent with just over five minutes left when

UAB stuns Cavs

Alabama-Birmingham, playing on its homecourt, stunned No. 3 Virginia 68-66 with clutch foul shooting down the stretch and No. 2 Louisville rolled over Minnesota 67-61 Thursday night in the semifinals of the NCAA Midwest Regional.

Alabama-Birmingham will meet Louisville Saturday with the winner going to the Final Four in New Orleans in New Orleans.

NCAA roundup

In the nightcap of the West regional, Georgetown defeated Fresno State 58-40.

Alabama-Birmingham, the Sun Belt Conference champion, sank 10-of-12 free throws in the final 87 seconds as the Cavaliers were forced to foul to try to gain possession.

Oliver Robinson scored 17 of his 23 points in the second half to pace the Blazers, 25-5, including two free throws with 11 seconds left to put Alabama-Birmingham on top 68-64.

Virginia's 7-foot-4 center, Ralph Gamble, who led the Cavaliers with 19 points, hit a dunk with five seconds left to cut the final margin to 2 points.

Alabama-Birmingham took the lead to stay at 55-52 with 7:18 left on a 3-point play by reserve center Donnie Spear. The Cavaliers, 30-4, never regained the edge. After Spear's 3-point play, a technical foul was called on Virginia coach Terry Holland and Holland sank both free throws for a 52-52 margin.

In the final 87 seconds, Robinson hit four free throws, Guard Jonas Nicholas added three, guard Leelan Easter had two and center Norman Atchum had one to offset three clutch baskets by Virginia guard Jeff Jones, who kept the Cavaliers within range.

Lester Conner shoots over Idaho's Kelvin Smith and Gordie Herbert, 20, Thursday night

Vandals fall to Conner-led OSU attack

By MARV CLEMONS
Times-News sports editor

PROVO, Utah — They call him Lester "The Mole" Conner for his defense abilities.

Thursday night Oregon State's Pacific-10 Conference Player of the Year did more than just steal the ball. He used all of his immense basketball skills to lead the Beavers past Idaho, 60-42, in the semi-finals of the NCAA West Regionals at Brigham Young's Marriott Center.

Conner, 6-4 guard, hit 10 of 14 shots, scored 24 points, led his team with 10 rebounds and teamed with fellow guard William Brew to shackle Idaho guards Ken Owens and Brian Kellerman.

He was the main man behind Idaho's exit from the NCAA tournament at such a lofty stage.

A third-team All-American selection by one national publication, Conner said he will remember OSU's 71-49 loss to the Vandals in the Far West Classic last December.

"We looked at the films of that game and said, 'Is that really us playing?'" he said. "All those mistakes, turnovers and missed shots. When we play to our capability, we can beat any team in the country, and where we play bad, we're very bad."

Little went bad for Conner and the Beavers during the last 30 minutes of Thursday's game.

Idaho gradually gained a 12-9 lead in the first nine minutes, but two fouls each on inside men Kelvin Smith and Phil Hopson, plus OSU's strong rebounding, put the Vandals in a one-shot situation all too often.

Conner's 16-footer from the corner with 10:27 left in the half gave OSU its first lead, 13-12. He followed with two more fielders, one on a drive and one from the corner, and a Brew popped in another OSU lead, 19-14.

Using a half-court spread offense, the Beavers kept the lead and went ahead 31-25 at the half when Danny Evans drained a jumper from the wing with just four seconds left.

Conner's rebounding (eight in the first half) was what gave them control of the game in the 1st half. Idaho skipper Don Monson said, "He and Brew did the best job we've seen of denying our guards what they wanted to do."

Monson noted Oregon State's 18 lead on the boards at halftime. "It really upset me," he said. "We stood around, I know the guys don't realize they're doing it, but that's what we did."

The Vandals also got caught standing when the second half started. Oregon State moved to a 35-25 advantage before Kellerman's corner jumper gave Idaho its first score after 4:15 of play.

Oregon State Coach Ralph Miller, who admits he'll go to the spread offense with a two-three-point lead, used the play the entire second half.

Idaho tried to stay with its 2-3 zone, but the Beavers simply spread the Vandals out too much. The result was a number of three-foot layups for 6-8 OSU center Charles Silton and a season-ending defeat for Idaho.

Monson, who guided the Vandals to the school's best season-long record at 27-3, was asked if he felt

Baseballers open conference season Tuesday

'Untested' Bruins still need to answer questions

By CHRIS HAFT
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — It's going to be a "delayed" education for Twin Falls' baseball team.

The Bruins would have played four games in two days in the Boise Valley tournament at Borah High, but the tournament was called off late Thursday night. After its first few games, it never will be played. Twin Falls will know better where improvement must come.

Twin Falls has several seniors on its team, but few have received varsity experience.

"We're kind of untested," Coach Bill Ingram said Thursday before the tournament cancellation was announced. "This weekend will tell us things we have to work on."

One area the Bruins may need to concentrate upon is pitching. Twin Falls has no returning starters among its hurlers, though this year's top two starters, Steve Kravitz and Brock Brodeen, are both seniors. Todd Wington, also a senior, should perform primarily as a reliever.

Reflecting how untried the Bruins' pitching staff is, Ingram would have had to use a sophomore, Kevin Manley, in this weekend's tournament. Ingram also implied that some "non-pitchers" may be the mound before long, partly for safety's sake.

"We'll have to throw kids that probably weren't going to pitch," the first-year coach said. "We haven't been in it long and we don't want to get any arms hurt."

The Bruins managed to survive two games last Tuesday without any hurt arms against Mountain Home. Twin Falls won the first game 14-2 and tied the second 5-5 in a darkness-shortened affair.

Though Mountain Home isn't a Gem State Conference-level team, the Bruins' hitting in the double-header encouraged Ingram, as Wington, Curt Thieman and Brent Semple each hit home runs. That trio of seniors, plus outfielder Mike Federico, will be counted on for much of the offensive production, Ingram said.

Federico, Wington and Brock Miller will fill the starting outfield

Miller should then move over to third base, where he will share playing time with David Slotten. Either Mike Black or Jose Salinas will play second base, while Shawn Humberger and Semple are secure at shortstop and first base, respectively. Shortstop will do most of the catching.

The Bruins open their conference season Tuesday with a home game against Skyline.

Arizona ready to hire Monson for head basketball job

HUTCHINSON, Kans. — The word Thursday afternoon let that only the tenure of University of Idaho in the current NCAA playoffs stands between the announcement that Vandal Coach Don Monson will be named to the University of Arizona head job.

"That became apparent when word filtered back that Arizona Athletic Director Dave Strack had told former CSI coach and currently head man at Fresno State Boyd Grant that the position had been filled. Although Monson's name wasn't actually mentioned, everyone assumed that it was the logical candidate.

In other coaching changes, a surprise landed in Hutchinson when a Charlotte, N.C., television station called CSI Coach Dave Campbell for his comments on the possibility of his becoming head coach at UNC-Charlotte.

"Campbell expressed surprise at the whole thing and immediately notified CSI officials, 'I have not talked to those people.'"

CSI Assistant to the President Jerry Meyerhofer confirmed he had received media inquiries concerning Campbell's availability. A brief history indicates there is bound to be some event if, as Campbell protests, there is no fire.

The short UNC-Charlotte basketball history started under the aegis of Bill Foster, who upon his resignation there helped place former assistant Vic Cubas in that position.

Campbell has served on Foster's staff previously, thus creating the Charlotte media speculation.

"I don't know how good a job it is, but I have a good one now," Campbell said. "They would have to offer me quite a bit because I like CSI and my position there very much. And my wife loves Twin Falls. I don't think she'd want to move back south."

And in the same rumors, Idaho State's current vacancy has a touch of Twin Falls and Magic Valley connections.

It is known that Phil Johnson, currently an assistant with the NBA's Chicago Bulls, and Bob Dye, currently the head coach at Cal State-Bakersfield, have turned down the position.

Johnson has roots in eastern Idaho, having played for Grace High School under current NBA Dallas Mavericks Coach Dick Motta in the late '50s and early '60s. Johnson first entered the NBA ranks as Motta's assistant and had a brief fling as a Kansas City King head coach. He reportedly will soon be rejoining Motta in Dallas.

Both those rejecting the job said the low salary was no inducement.

Meanwhile, former CSI Coach Mike Mitchell, currently associate coach at Oklahoma City University, and Keith Hughes, whose College of Sequoias team won the California State-JC Championship earlier this week, are considered top contenders.

Mitchell has received several glowing endorsements, including one by Colorado Athletic Director Eddie Crowder, who watched Mitchell in action when Mitchell was an assistant there for two years under Bill Blair.

"I would really like to have that job," Mitchell said while in Hutchinson for the JC tournament. "I think it is a place you can recruit to and I think the conference is establishing a pretty good reputation among basketball schools. I think the Big Sky conference is going to continue to progress and become quite well-known."

Hughes first came to Idaho as a clinician in Boyd Grant's CSI basketball camp. He was a Colorado high school coach at the time and every bit as dedicated to defense as Grant. He has also helped at the Wood River camp.

Hughes went to Fresno State as Grant's assistant in the fall of 1977 and took the College of Sequoias job two years ago. He took a 6-20 program and turned it into a state semi-finalist last year and the championship this season.

Helping Hughes' application is the fact he can bring three outstanding players with him, including Cleve Lewis, the 6-7 Skyline (Idaho Falls) prospect, who has won conference and tournament honors at College of Sequoias.

Early in the week the report here was that Indiana's Bobby Knight would slip into a fantastic financial situation at Arizona State. That rumor has not been repeated the past couple of days. But, of course, Grant's name has been linked to that one.

Pirates need 2 ingredients to take A-4 title

By MARCUS PRATER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Defense and confidence

The Hagerman Pirates are relying on these two physical and mental aspects to take them to an A-4 state championship.

The Pirates battle Greenleaf Friends Academy tonight at 8:30 at Boise State University in the semifinals of the Idaho State A-4 Basketball Tournament. Cascade and Mullin will meet in the preceding contest at 7:42. Coach Skip Pauls' Pirates, despite having a 6-10 regular season record, led through the district and regional tournaments for a berth in the final four. The two winners will meet Saturday for the championship.

"We feel confident. Not that we are overconfident, but we feel good about what we are doing," Pauls said.

However, Greenleaf will be the tallest team the Pirates have faced thus far. The Grizzlies' starting five is 6-7, 6-4, 6-7, 6-10 and 5-9. This has Pauls slightly worried.

"We'll have to play tough defense. Steve Davis (6-7) is a good player and a good jumper and we'll have to deny the ball to him," Pauls said. "Their 6-7 boy (Mike Vermeer) gets a lot of points, but mostly off garbage like the offense do most of the time. But they work it inside to when they can."

The Grizzlies collected an 11-8 regular season record, but, like Hagerman, won five straight to get the bid. Greenleaf defeated Cascade 61-59 in the regional championship March 13.

Greenleaf's Coach John Ehrlich also is counting on two aspects of the game to get the championship crown: height and a team effort.

"Overall, we're been playing as a team working the ball inside-outsides, wherever we can get the good shot," Ehrlich said. "Offensively we rely on taking it inside as much as we can and if we can't we take whatever the other team will give us."

Ehrlich is also concerned with the Hagerman trio of Brett Arriaga, Mike McFadden and Troy Brown.

"Arriaga can shoot from the wing while Brown and McFadden do a good job inside," Ehrlich said.

Pauls knows the job his inside people can do and the pressures of keeping Greenleaf's inside personal contained will rest with Brown, McFadden and 6-3 senior Brian Clifford.

try to get them to go over the back," Pauls said of the Grizzlies' Vermeer, Davis and 6-4 Jeff Dillon.

But are the Pirates for real? Pauls answers that question with a resounding "Yes."

"The kids finally matured and came together. We lost some games at the end of the season by between two and five points and we finally pulled together at the right time. We've had good practices all week and I think we are capable of going to the championship."

"We don't have any individual that takes control of the team. They are willing to work together and pass to the open man. It is an excellent situation to work under," Pauls said. Although Ehrlich has not seen Hagerman play this season, he sent scouts to the Pirates' 53-36 regional championship over Mackay.

"They are well-disciplined. They don't run much and they run the clock waiting for the good shot and, from what I gather, they have good rebounding ability and a good defense," he said.

Both coaches cited not seeing their opponents play this season as a key factor, but as far as tonight's contest goes it will be a matchup of a confident defensive unit and a tall squad that works well together.

Bradley, Oklahoma, Georgia win

By United Press International

NIT roundup

Donald Reese and Willie Scott blended into the Bradley's attack like chameleons.

Bradley combined the shooting of Reese and Scott with an effective full-court press for a 77-61 victory Thursday night over Tulane in the quarterfinals of the National Invitation Tournament.

Bradley, the Missouri Valley Conference champions, raised its record to 24-10 and advanced to Monday's semifinals at New York's Madison Square Garden against Oklahoma, winners over Dayton.

Georgia, which beat Virginia Tech Thursday night, will face Friday's Purdue-Texas A&M winner in the other semifinal.

The triumph was also Bradley's 40th in the 50th anniversary of the famed Robertson Memorial Fieldhouse.

1,007 series for Micholob

TWIN FALLS — The Micholob team rolled a 1,007 scratch team series Wednesday night in the Ladies Valley bowling league at Bowldrome.

The team members and their scores included Bernice Praegler (212), Paula Sherman (242), Lynn Gadsby (136), Maxine Kulhanek (209) and Keith Sherman (208).

It was one of the highest recorded scratch team scores ever recorded here. On the same evening, an Independent Meats men's team totaled 1,165 at Magic Bowl. Lanes owner Paul Miller had said that only three or four 1,100 scratch games had been rolled in the city's history.

Idaho

he should have gone to man defense earlier.

"That might have helped, along with fouling them more. But the spirit is an art, and Oregon State works it well. I felt we would get what we wanted down with what we were doing."

Conner said he and Brew approached the game as a personal challenge.

"Coach Miller says our defense starts with the guards and the last time we played Idaho their guards dominated us," he said. "This time Brew and I wanted to get the best of their guards. We wanted to show them that their win was a fluke. Just like they wanted to show us it wasn't a fluke."

Kellerman said Brew and Conner effectively cut off the pass back to the point and plugged the passing lanes.

"I don't think they did very much different from us," the senior guard said. "It was a matter of who jumped on who the quickest."

Kellerman helped the Vandals trim a 15-point deficit to 46-38, with 5:42 to play. In the next few minutes the Vandals had chances to get within eight, but seemed a bit slow to get at a trio of loose balls.

"If we could have gotten it (the ball) down to six, we would have deflected that close," Monson lamented. "We didn't shoot that well (16-of-38 for 42 percent, 12 percent below their season average) and that kept us from getting back."

With much written about Idaho's earlier win, both coaches said that mattered little, and Conner felt the Oregon State victories just before the Deadeye 200 match were also factors.

"We had just beaten two pretty good teams (BYU at Provo and Louisville in a game at Japan)," he noted. "We might have had our heads in the clouds and felt we were so great. Then Idaho came along and whipped us."

Monson made it a point to note Idaho's superior scoring team.

"I'm just glad they (the Beavers) knew who they were playing this time."

Monson drew a technical foul just 15-point deficit to 46-38, with 5:42 to play. In the next few minutes the wasn't called. "I didn't like the officiating," he said. "I felt the officiating was inconsistent. I'm upset by officials who get awestruck by the NCAA or TV or whatever. You should coach the same way you do all season, and you should referee the same way all season. If I say much more, I'll get in trouble."

Miller said he turned Conner loose. "Lester is not the force or anything like that," the third-winnings coach in NCAA history said. "He is very much a team player. He made some mistakes tonight."

Not quite enough, though, for some 1,000 Vandal fans on hand and Idaho as a whole.

Jamestown mounted its biggest margin at 61-53. But then for the only time of the afternoon, CSI came up with a spurt.

In 46 seconds Ron Beach hit two free throws. Scott followed in a missed free throw. Kennedy slam-dunked off a steal and Scott tied it again with a follow.

Immediately Tony Robinson drove the middle and missed a short jumper. But Jeter was there to tip it in and regain Jamestown's lead.

Over the closing two minutes Jeter hit four free throws and the crusher came with 54 seconds left when CSI threw away an in-bounds pass that resulted in a free throw by Sam Winley.

Beach hit a long shot to narrow the count to 68-66. CSI then had two shots afterward, including a desperation at the buzzer, but neither would fall.

The defeat came despite another solid performance by Scott, who scored 19 points on eight-of-10 field-goal tries. But the sophomore would take little consolation in that.

"I felt a little embarrassed," he said. "We came this high then lost two straight. We expected to do better. We played hard, I thought, and we played our best, but it wasn't enough."

Campbell said, "We are not embarrassed. We lost by one and two points, but we played against No. 1 and we fought hard against them."

We played two of the better teams in the tournament and played them tough."

Lancaster Gordon and Derek Smith scored on dunks to start a second-half surge that led Louisville over Minnesota in the opener.

Gordon finished with 23 points, including 14 in the second half, while Smith had 17 for the Cardinals, 22-9.

The Gophers' 52-45 fourth quarter led the 22-points of guard Trent Tucker and 7-3 center Randy Brewer, evening the score 48-48 with 9:22 left. Gordon and Smith then took over with Gordon hitting three field goals and

All-America guard Eric Floyd for 31 points Thursday night to lead the Hoyas over Fresno State.

Ewing scored 12 of his 15 points in the second half, grabbed 7 rebounds and blocked 2 shots in powering the No. 7 Hoyas.

The Hoyas, depending on inside play throughout, shot a blistering 63.6 percent set a tournament record. Oregon State, Georgetown's opponent in the West championship at Brigham Young University Saturday, held the previous record of 61.9 percent set in 1966 against Houston.

'Indians' Barker keeps 'perfect' touch

By United Press International

Len Barker, who pitched a perfect game last year, served notice that he hasn't lost the touch.

At Tucson, Ariz., Barker scattered three hits over six innings Thursday to spark the Cleveland Indians to a 2-0 decision over the Seattle Mariners.

Barker retired the first 13 batters he faced before surrendering a single with one out in the fifth. Barker then gave up a pair of singles in the sixth inning before retiring.

Larry Sorensen then threw two perfect innings at the Mariners and Dan Spillner saved the shutout in the ninth.

The Indians scored in the fourth inning when Miguel Dilone singled and stole second, then came home on a single by Mike Hargrove. Jerry Byrnski delivered the final Cleveland run with a triple in the fifth.

At Tampa, Fla., Ron Cey hit a two-run homer and Jorge Orta rapped out a pair of hits to drive home three runs, piling the Los Angeles Dodgers to a rout. Bob Welch, Ted Power and Terry Forster combined on a two-hitter.

Pittsburgh 6, Philadelphia 2
At Clearwater, Fla., Rick Rhoden, who had a two-run single, won his third game of the spring with a two-hitter over five innings in helping the Pirates beat the Phillies their fifth straight loss.

In other news, Milwaukee's game with California was rained out. Brewers Manager Buck Rodgers said he thought Larry Hsieh's injured shoulder was healed and that he would be the designated hitter for the Milwaukee Brewers "if the season were opening tomorrow." Hsieh, who leads the team in homers with four and RBI with six, said he wasn't sure he was "quite ready. If I were to grade myself so far at this stage, I would say I'm C-plus."

Outfielder doesn't mind predictions for greatness

Mariners' Moseby relishes heady reputation

DUNEDIN, Fla. (UPI) — Lloyd Moseby thinks of himself as a stylist — which helps explain why he wears his "potential superstar" label with such aplomb.

"People are going to pin these things on you," the Toronto Blue Jays' 21-year-old outfielder said between signing autographs before a spring training game. "I've had it since I was in rookie ball. I hit some home runs and had a good year."

Moseby, the Blue Jays' first-round pick and the second overall choice in the June 1976 free agent draft, made the Pioneer League All-Star team with a .304 average and 10 home runs for Medicine Hat.

The 6-foot-3, 200-pound native of Portland, Ark., now living in Oakland, Calif., followed that season with an even better one, hitting .332 with 18 homers and 64 RBI for Dunedin of the Florida State League. No wonder he acquired a reputation as a star of the future.

"I enjoy the role," he said. "I came from a background where there wasn't much of anything. I wasn't a poor guy, but I wasn't rich. It made me a stronger guy. When I had the opportunity to play baseball, I jumped at it."

Part of his reason was appreciation over the way his parents provided for him in his developing sports career. He remembered, and wanted to do something in return.

"They always got the equipment, whether it was the batting gloves or whatever. I was a stylist, you know. I had a lot of cleats."

Moseby's way of saying thanks was to buy a home — a tri-plex — that his mother, Bivole, now manages.

"It was a thrill for me to do that," said Moseby. "It tickled me."

Moseby gets a chance to say hello to his family while the team visits Oakland during the season.

Now the trip becomes doubly important because Adrienne, the woman he married Sept. 14 of last year, is from Oakland.

"I'm just great going back home," said Moseby. "It's just great going back home."

Of course, a pitching staff like Oakland's can take the luster off such a trip but Moseby is hoping to make a dent in those pitchers as well as all the others in the league.

He played 114 games in 1980 for Toronto, hitting .229 with 10 homers and 46 RBI. Last year he improved slightly to .233 with nine homers and 43 RBI in 144 games.

"He has a chance to be a superstar," said Moseby's new manager, Bobby Cox. "He's been super in the outfield and his arm has improved to the point where it's above average. He's super enthusiastic. He loves to play the game."

Singles domination ignites Bruins' victory

BURLEY — Playing in abominable weather conditions, Twin Falls swept the singles matches on route to a 7-5 victory over Burley in a tennis event Thursday afternoon.

"It was one of those deals where you just go out there and freeze and hope everybody can get the blood going. I mean it was just miserable," Twin Falls Coach Clovis Johnson said. The area experienced no precipitation during the match, but Johnson said that wind-chill bothered the players considerably.

Bruins Scott Guthrie, Mitch Green, Jeff Lambert, Tricia Swartling, Lori Grice and Kandise Crumbliss won every set in singles competition.

Angie Groeger and Kelly Hite's triumph for the Bruins in girls doubles helped preserve Twin Falls' victory.

Salt Lake stations picked up on cable

New TV, special hookup required

TWIN FALLS — Magic Valley Cablevision will add two Salt Lake City stations this week to the stations received by its subscribers.

The stations — CBS affiliate KSL and NBC affiliate KUTV — were removed last fall and replaced by Boise stations on the cable dial. Thousands of people signed petitions protesting the change.

Likewise, the Salt Lake City stations were disturbed about losing a portion of their potential audience. They agreed to pay the cost of sending their signal to Twin Falls via microwave if Cablevision would return the homes of its approximately 14,000 subscribers in Twin Falls, Jerome and Gooding counties.

"We really didn't think, originally, that the Salt Lake City stations would return," said Gene Rittinour, Cablevision's area manager. But demand persisted for their return even after people had time to adjust to the Boise stations, and several other services added at that time, he said.

Starting Saturday, KSL and KUTV will be seen on mid-band channels D and G, which are available on newer model televisions.

Viewers without "cable ready" sets who want Salt Lake City stations can rent adapters from Cablevision, which show the stations on channels 17 and 20, for $1.50 per month.

Rittinour cautioned that the controversy caused by the Salt Lake City stations' removal could arise again within a few years. The stations were removed to end duplication of programs, he said, which was the top complaint of subscribers.

With the return of KUTV, there will be three NBC affiliates on cable — (Boise-station) KTVB and Twin Falls station KMYT, which Cablevision is required by law to carry, are NBC affiliates.

The cable system's current capacity is 20 channels, Rittinour said, 15 of which are occupied. Meanwhile, the number of services available to cable systems grows daily, he said.

'Hill Street's' Veronica Hamel and Daniel Travanti

TV romance never quite complete

'Hill Street' tops with lovers

By RON MILLER
Knight-Ridder Newspapers

This is the time of year when love fills the air, along with the jumble of TV broadcasts, microwave signals and satellite relays.

That brings me to the subject of romance on television. Is there enough of it on the air? What forms does it take? And who's doing it best?

"I'll start with the premise that there's hardly enough TV seems to fear romantic relationships that go anywhere. I mean, Shirley Feeney was leading Carmine Ragusa along for years just because TV is afraid of what might happen if he ever left that special something.

For that matter, her roommate on "Laverne and Shirley," Laverne DeFazio, can't seem to fall in love with anybody who lasts more than an episode or two. When she tumbled for a handsome fireman and Cupid was ascending, the poor dude perished in a fire.

That's the typical fate of most romances in series television. You see, romances tie the hands of the writers much the way marriages do. It cuts down on the "mobility" of the character. And if viewers cool on the romance, what do you do with the character who has to be jettisoned?

That was the problem on "Lou Grant" this season. Billie Newman's romance with her ex-hallplayer boyfriend had reached the point of no return. They either had to get married or break up the way all Billie's other romances had.

The writers finally gave in and had Billie tie the knot. But her husband has been "on the road" ever since with only a token reference now and again. Some romance, huh?

But we do have some rare romances that have survived in series television despite the odds. Here are my current favorites:

• Furlito-Davenport — It isn't easy for the head cop at the precinct to carry on an affair with a defense attorney because, there's always that conflict of interest shadow hovering overhead. But the producers of "Hill Street Blues" realize the passion between Furlito (Daniel Travanti) and Davenport (Veronica Hamel) is the juiciest thing about this show, so no matter what conflicts arise, they're always back taking buds together in the same tub, week after week.

• Esterhaus-Gardner — It's truly unique that two great romances would surface in a single show, but maybe "Hill Street Blues" is onto something. Sgt. Esterhaus (Michael Conrad) hasn't been the same since the widow Grace (Barbara Babcock) vamped him out of an ill-advised marriage to a sweet young thing right in the middle of the wedding ceremony. Grace has worn Paul to a frazzle with her amatory demands, but it's clear he's more romantic than SWAT team chief Howard Hunter (James B. Sikking), or at least more durable.

• Mork-Mindy — Mork (Robin Williams) and Mindy (Pam Dawber) finally tied the knot this season, but that hasn't dimmed their ardor for each other. One might wonder what Mindy sees in Mork, but my guess is an awful lot goes on off-screen. Any guy who can drink water with his finger probably has a whole bag of wonderful tricks.

• Arcola-Cunningham — The romance between Chachi Arcola (Scott Baio) and Joanie Cunningham (Erin Moran) on "Happy Days" flourished when Joanie's big brother, Ritchie, left the series. It has worked wonders for both characters. Chachi now cleans under his nails regularly and Joanie has discarded her training bra.

• Murphy-Woodward — Any young thing in late NBC's "Father Murphy" might wonder why that priest is giving schoolmarx Mae Woodward (Katherine Cannon) such lustful looks from time to time. Well, the priest, it's really just a plain old inspector named John Michael Murphy (Merlin Olsen), who dresses up as a priest to fool the authorities and give Mae a forbidden thrill. When the show returns next season, word is out that Murphy will hang up his monk's robe and get down to serious romancing.
