

New junta rules Guatemala

GUATEMALA CITY (UPI) — Dissident army officers claiming Guatemala's presidential election was rigged ousted President Romeo Lucas Garcia Tuesday in a coup backed by tanks, planes and hundreds of soldiers.

They immediately named a new five-man military junta, an army spokesman said.

Lucas Garcia, himself an army general, surrendered at the presidential palace, which was ringed by tanks and troops armed with submachine guns and bazookas, a rebel spokesman said.

The new candidate of his ruling party, Gen. Angel Anibal Guevara, narrowly won the March 7 balloting that his three civilian opponents claimed was rigged. Guevara was to take office July 1.

Two days after the election, the army and police used tear gas to disperse 1,000 protesters in the capital and briefly detained the Jung candidates.

The whereabouts of the president-elect, the president or his brother who headed the army, was not known. There were reports Guevara was vacationing in Miami at the time of the coup.

Though it was not clear how many members of the army took part in the seizure of the uprising and the seizure of the national palace, the congress, the election registry, radio stations and other facilities indicated the dissident forces represent a sizeable faction of the 18,000-man army.

Jaime Rabanalles, who remained as spokesman for the army under the new junta, said, "The army has firm control of the entire country."

A bulletin broadcast over a seized radio station said: "The corrupt government has been deposed. The armed forces acted in response to popular clamor and in response to the manipulation of the elections."

Rabanalles said the dissident officers staged the coup "to reintroduce all guarantees to the Guatemalan people and guarantee the free exercise of human rights."

He said Gen. Efraim Rios Montt was named as leader of the new five-man military junta. The other members were Col. Manuel Argueta, Lt. Col. Mario Enriquez, Capt. Carlos Rodolfo Munoz and Major Arturo Sanchez.

Rios Montt is considered a moderate. He lost the 1974 presidential election to another army general in a race that also was marred by fraud.

Firefights between dissidents and loyal army factions reportedly erupted in the first hours of the coup outside the military base in Quetzaltenango, the nation's second largest city 43 miles west of the capital, and in areas south of the capital. There were no reports on casualties.

In Washington, the State Department confirmed a coup was under way and said the embassy reported there was a military takeover of the capital.

Adjournment eludes state lawmakers

BOISE (UPI) — The Legislature grudgingly stopped short of final adjournment Tuesday evening as the Senate groped in vain for a last-minute solution to the year-long legislative reapportionment deadlock.

After the Senate spun its wheels for about an hour in making preparations to consider amendments to a House-passed reapportionment bill, the House gave up waiting and adjourned until this morning. After finally considering and defeating three Democrat-drafted reapportionment amendments, the Senate also halted business for the night.

Leaders of both legislative bodies tried throughout the day to bring the 1982 session to an end. But the House, carrying out the wishes of House Speaker Ralph Glumsted, R-Twin Falls, declined to wait any longer than 6 p.m.

In addition to reapportionment, two other issues of major interest remained unresolved and were expected to be addressed today: Repeal of penalties for drunken driving and increased salaries for state elected officials.

All other major business of the year has been taken care of, but leaders wanted to resolve those three issues before calling off the 1982 session.

The House early Tuesday afternoon gutted a Senate bill cracking down on drunken drivers, inserting during an amendment session the provisions of an anti-drunken-driving bill that passed the House earlier in the session, but died in a Senate committee.

House members urged senators to act on the amended bill before the end of the session so the Legislature would go on record this year as putting into effect some sort of law to attack drunken driving.

The lower chamber also amended a Senate bill that would give pay increases to Idaho's top six elected officials. House members reduced the proposed pay hikes, which originally averaged 38 percent, to less than 30 percent overall.

The Senate, therefore, must reconsider that issue before adjournment if the Legislature is to raise the pay rates before 1987. Because of constitutional restrictions, the top officials' salaries can be changed only every fourth year, prior to when the new slate of officials takes office.

After more than an hour of closed-door joint party leadership meetings and separate party caucuses, and a series of informal Senate hallway conferences involving leaders of both parties and both houses, the Senate brought up the reapportionment bill, which had been in limbo in the Senate State Affairs Committee for a week.

All 12 Democrats and eight rank-and-file Republicans teamed up as the Senate voted 20-15 to sidetrack the bill for amendment. But three amendments sponsored by Senate Minority Leader Ron Twigg, D-Boise, then were killed in votes controlled by the majority Republicans.

Gas miser? Cars and trucks have gotten smaller in recent years, but this is ridiculous. Actually, Jeff Rankin of Twin Falls was test driving a miniature gas-powered pickup which belongs to the Taylor Rental Center. It's similar to a go-cart.

Gasoline, new cars help tame inflation rate

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Inflation slowed dramatically in February to an annual rate of only 3 percent.

Consumer costs dipped further for gasoline, new cars and mortgages, the government reported Tuesday.

The combined inflation rate for January and February was the lowest for any two month period since the spring of 1976, the Labor Department said.

Several leading analysts predicted further improvement in March — perhaps to zero inflation.

In another encouraging report, the department said the real earnings of Americans went up 1.3 percent in February — the most of any month since the government began computing inflation-adjusted income in 1964.

The Consumer Price Index for February reported the best news yet in the series of shrinking inflation numbers that began in October. At a monthly rate, it went up a scant 0.2 percent after seasonal adjustment — even less than January's 0.3 percent monthly increase.

The department said the February rate repeated for an entire year would be 3 percent.

The world oil glut, which lowered gasoline prices by 2.3 percent during last month alone, and the slack market for new cars, which brought down their prices by 0.3 percent, were major influences.

But the recession, which has made it hard for retailers to mark up prices, also was a big factor. For example, in Detroit, with its high rate of auto industry unemployment, the inflation rate actually declined by 1.1 percent, the department said.

The White House welcomed the "good news" on inflation. But a spokesman said President Reagan is still mystified why interest rates have not followed the inflation rate down.

Deputy Press Secretary Larry Speakes said the president "hopes the money markets will see what we are trying to do . . . cut the budget and cut inflation."

The Consumer Price Index for February, before seasonal adjustment, was 283.4, a price level of $283.40 for the government's sample "market basket" of goods and services that cost $100 in 1967.

A leading specialist on the price indexes, Georgia State University economist Donald Ratajczak, correctly forecast the February figure and said the March figure could be zero — a temporary respite from increasing prices.

But he said "consumers are going to be confused" because the prices they see the most — at the gasoline station and the grocery store — are going in opposite directions.

Shuttle crew falling behind as problems plague craft

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI) — About three dozen insulating tiles were knocked off the space shuttle Columbia during launch.

But a mission specialist said Tuesday "we do not anticipate any problem" with completing the weeklong flight with a safe landing.

Astronauts Jack Louma and Gordon Fullerton spent a grueling first day-and-a-half in orbit, inspecting their winged space freight by eye and with a television camera and carrying out as many scientific chores as possible in the interim.

They were assured repeatedly that the missing tiles posed no threat when they slunk back into the atmosphere Monday and landed on a New Mexico desert.

But then they had to deal with balky doors on the ship's cargo bay during a test of how it dealt with a long period of extreme temperatures.

That problem cleared up, mission directors radioed to the obviously exhausted astronauts that they would be allowed to "sleep in" this morning.

"You call us, we won't call you," said ground communicator David Griggs.

"We'll . . . if we get to feeling better, we'll be ready to charge," said Louma, his voice heavy with fatigue.

A short time later, mission doctor Sam Pool said, "I think they are very tired. They have not slept a lot today. With a good night's rest, I think we'll be back on track. I think tomorrow will be a better day."

For the second time Tuesday, Louma complained of being in his radio earphones during his first sleep period when Columbia passed over Iran and China. The command pilot also reported he was bothered by space sickness shortly after blastoff Monday.

Mission managers suggested the static may have been caused by ground radar tracking the spaceship, and asked the astronauts to set up monitoring equipment to seek the source of the electronic noise.

Less than an hour before retiring for the night, Louma reported on behalf of Fullerton, "Gordo's got some good news on the door business, it all worked right."

"Super," said Griggs, "we're all glad to hear that down here."

Louma: "You're not any gladder than we are, brother."

The exchange came after the astronaut reported to Shuttle Control, through the astronaut's buddy behind on the exhaustive scientific and technological tests they were assigned on the 115-orbit, 34-million-mile mission.

But they did get to point Columbia's tail toward the sun for most of the day in the first of three tests of its reaction to steady exposure to temperatures ranging from 200 above to 200 degrees below zero Fahrenheit.

Louma and Fullerton first discovered some missing missile tiles outside their windshield during an

Begin retains power despite lack of support

JERUSALEM (UPI) — Prime Minister Menachem Begin failed to win a confidence vote in parliament Tuesday but survived on a tie.

He decided to remain in office despite a threat to resign, a government spokesman said.

The spokesman said Begin's Cabinet, meeting in late night emergency session, voted 12-6 to ask him to rescind his threat to quit and call new elections. The spokesman said Begin agreed.

The government crisis erupted after Begin's coalition tied a no-confidence motion in parliament over the government's policies toward the occupied West Bank and its handling of unrest there.

The 58-58 vote was on three motions brought by the opposition Labor Party and other parties.

Though a tie vote technically counts as a victory for the government, enabling it to continue in office, Begin told aides the day before he would regard a tie as a personal defeat and would resign if he did not win outright.

"With the participation of the representatives of the coalition, the government decided to reject the prime minister's proposal to report to the president to tender his resignation," Cabinet Secretary Arye Naor said after the emergency Cabinet session.

"The prime minister accepted the verdict and will not resign," he said.

It was the first of six confidence votes Begin has failed to win since re-election June 30th with a razor-thin one-vote majority for his Likud Bloc coalition in the Knesset.

The right-wing Tzohiva party and one deputy from the National Religious Party, a member of Begin's coalition, deprived him of a victory by voting with the main Labor opposition to protest Israel's withdrawal from the remainder of the Sinai April 25.

Had Begin resigned, becoming head of a caretaker government until new elections were held, it could have delayed the withdrawal, analysts said.

Labor and two smaller opposition parties raised the confidence tests over the Begin government's controversial, tough policies towards the occupied West Bank and the annexed Golan Heights.

Bad bill bites dust, thanks to Senate

Once again, the Idaho Senate deserves praise for killing bad legislation.

Tuesday, the senators voted down a bill that would have required legislative approval of any sale of private land to the federal government. The vote was convincing, 11-20.

This one was Sen. J. Wilson Steen's, R-Glenns Ferry, baby, and the House blindly fell in step by voting 54-15 in favor of it. Perhaps there are more Sagebrush Rebels in the House than on the other side of the aisle. But that would be no excuse for approving this monster.

Steen argued that such a law would allow the state to block continued federal attempts to purchase Idaho property. Never mind that in the process, the state would be trampling all over the rights of the owners of said land.

It's interesting to note the inconsistency of Steen's thinking. On one hand, he voted for a bill that would make land-use planning optional in Idaho. Lawmakers who supported that bill were saying local units of government may not have absolute rights to plan and zone property in their jurisdiction. But on the other hand, Steen was all for giving the state veto power over any and all land transactions to the feds.

Senate Minority Leader Ron Twillegar called it right when he described Steen's bill as "one of the two or three worst we've seen this year."

What's in a name?

Quick, now, how fast can you say Magic Valley Regional Medical Center?

Better get used to it because that's the new name for Magic Valley Memorial Hospital.

We have to admit the name sounds more impressive and does command more attention. It also will accurately redefine the hospital's sphere of influence in this area.

But the hospital is bound to run into considerable confusion from patients. To many, of course, it won't make any difference. They'll keep calling it Magic Valley Memorial Hospital come hell or high water.

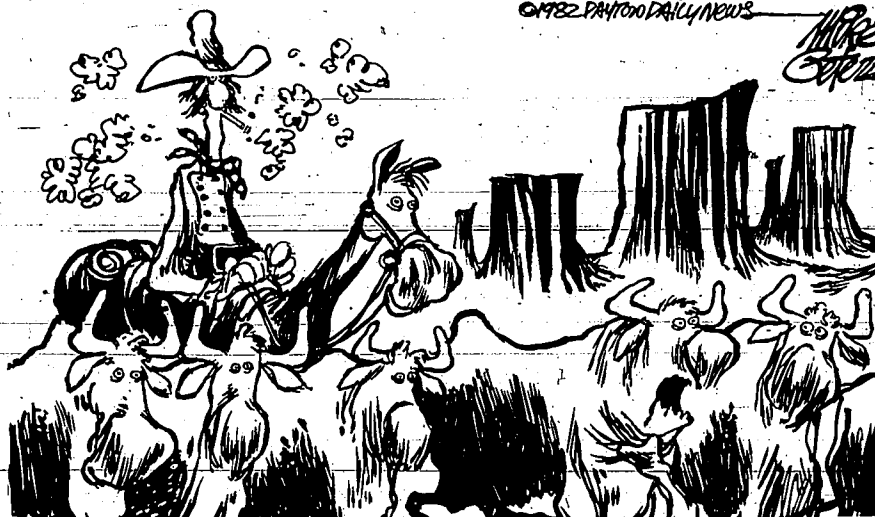

Actually, the new name won't be official until the hospital unveils its new wing sometime in June. That won't give any satisfaction to our headline writers, however.

Did you notice that in Tuesday's story announcing the name change, the name itself took up more than half the space for a medium-sized headline? No, we will not abbreviate it — who would know what a MVRMHC is?

What? Billion more for student loans?

By MILES BENSON
Newhouse News Service

WASHINGTON — Surprised congressmen are looking at a Reagan administration request for an extra $1 billion for student loans this year.

But it turns out President Reagan wants the additional funds not to beef up the program, but because the administration badly underestimated the cost of student loans.

Specifically, the White House's Office of Management and Budget and the Education Department underestimated interest rates, the number of eligible students who would apply for loans — and what has turned out to be a one-third increase in the default rate over the previous year. The word from the Education Department is this year will total $407 million out of $3.5 billion worth of loans that the government guarantees. Last year defaults amounted to only $234 million out of $7.8 million in loan guarantees.

Bureaucrats at the Education Department say defaults are the inevitable consequence of economic distress generally. Translation: A bum economy breeds bad debts.

The administration boasts it has launched an aggressive campaign to recover defaulted student loans. It looks like the bill collectors will have plenty of work.

The request for additional student loan funding is part of an urgent supplemental appropriation totaling more than $1.5 billion for such other activities as Environmental Protection Agency construction grants and the cost of fighting crime in southern Florida. Yet another supplemental appropriation for a variety of activities will be necessary in a couple of months.

All this might sound a little confusing — even absurd — to people who remember the great confrontation between Reagan and Congress shortly before Thanksgiving last year. Then, Reagan used his veto power for the first time against a massive appropriations bill, sent thousands of federal workers home and shut down entire agencies for one day.

That dispute was over $2 billion. Congress told Reagan he needed $2 billion more than he thought he did to run the government, and Reagan told the nation a spendthrift Congress was trying to force him to spend $2 billion extra and that he wouldn't have a dime of it. Reagan got his way, as he did so often in 1981. But now he finds he needs the money after all, and more.

The administration view is that this supplemental appropriation is needed for different things, and that if Reagan had accepted the extra $2 billion when Congress offered it to him he still would need a supplemental appropriation $600 million.

Meanwhile, the Senate Budget Committee has been dealing with the computers and figured out that Congress has drilled so many loopholes in the tax code over the years that $273 billion in revenue will leak away next year, $306 billion in 1984 and $348 billion in 1985.

This is money the Internal Revenue Service never will see because special arrangements in the tax laws let individuals and corporations claim 104 different types of exemptions and credits to reduce their tax liability.

Congress could scrap all these and balance the budget, but then people would have to do without tax credits for child care, deductions for medical expenses, oil depletion allowances and deductions for home mortgage interest, among other things.

Letters to the editor

Keep the captions on TV

Editor, Times-News:
To all broadcast stations:
We deaf people in Idaho and other states have to depend on decoders to get closed caption on the TV programs. And the decoders cost $250 or so. I paid for mine and get very little use out of it as there are not very many good caption programs on.

Now we have noticed NBC has dropped its captions on the programs because they say not enough deaf people are buying the decoding machines.

It is very unfair to us deaf persons who have paid out the money for a decoder and can use it only for a very few programs. Also, it is unfair as the news is only in caption after 11 or 11:30 p.m. on the stations we get through cable from Boise on ABC channel 4 and must stay up so late to get the news.

Also, some deaf people would be very happy to buy or have a decoder, but many cannot afford it and do not have the money. So I feel that the TV companies and NBC have been and are being unfair to the deaf and handicapped persons, and that the deaf should have a right to have the programs and news open-captioned or close-captioned.

Everyone should pitch in and complain to the NBC and other TV companies to help the deaf people.

Navy man done an injustice

Editor, Times-News:
I was so disturbed when I read the article in the paper about the Navy man, David Newman. When a family of eight brothers have enlisted in the Navy to serve our great country, I feel that we (Magic Valley) owe David and his family a debt of great gratitude.

I personally feel that David has been done an injustice that we should make known to our Congress and Senators. How can we expect our young people to enlist in the service and risk their lives for our freedom, sacrifice their private lives for a raw deal like David is getting? I admire David for the kind of man and father he is. We need more men like him. Magic Valley residents, let's get behind David and his children and write to our Congressmen and Senators and see if something can be done and give them their rightful pay for services that were faithfully rendered.

Thanks for 'small things'

Editor, Times-News:
We all have personal measuring sticks to determine the quality of life where we are. I offer one that most people might not consider: I own and continue to use the same metal trash cans I purchased in 1975, and they are in very good condition.

I applauded the city council and Parks & Sons for providing local residents with an excellent service. It is obvious to me that the employees of Parks & Sons take pride in what they do and as a result we all benefit. This morning was an excellent example:

I happened to look out as one of the large trucks was making a pickup — after emptying several cans into the back, one of the men got down the wet street to retrieve two small pieces of paper that had blown under the truck. When I went out, I found my empty trash cans sitting on top of the lids so they would not blow away.

I have, at times, put items out that probably did not meet the requirements, but I've never heard a complaint and nothing has ever been left behind. By comparison, when I lived in Cincinnati I recall paying the garbage pickup — the truck moved slowly down the street without stopping; the men at the back would grab cans, knock the lids off, cram the cans into the truck upside down, (often causing large dents in the cans) and then without turning around heave the cans backwards in the general direction of their original location. Some ended up in the street; some in the yard; some rolled down the street. Refuse was left all over the place.

A small thing, you say. Yes, indeed, but it is these "small things" that affect the quality of life. And I've never had a chance to say thanks. Parks & Sons is to be applauded for installing pride in their employees and maintaining high standards.

'Good news' and 'bad news' — why, it's relative, isn't it?

By OTIS PIKE
Newhouse News Service

WASHINGTON — I commute between a couple of places: Washington, D.C., and Riverhead, N.Y. One is bigger.

There is a lot going on in Washington, D.C., all faithfully reported in its only newspaper. Riverhead is not South Sacoosh, and there's a lot going on there, too, all faithfully reported in its only newspaper.

The Washington Post is one of the papers, the News-Review is the other. There are a couple of differences between them, including the fact that the Post comes out seven times as often.

The world which the News-Review sees and reports is a happy world. The world which the Washington Post sees and reports is a much more desolate world. The Post's lead story is much more often something terrible that has happened or is about to happen. On Monday, it was riots on the West Bank.

There was a little good news in Monday's Post.

Washington has two very good college basketball teams, and the space shuttle was proceeding nicely. There were some stories that were just news, like the negotiations between General Motors and the United Auto Workers, but the overall mood was gloomy.

On the last page of the first section, assuming the eye escapes the patty aid, the only story was headlined, "Malnutrition vs. the Budget." The entire top half of the first page of the third section was headlined "Life in the Line" and it was about people standing in the unemployment line. Bad news, bad news, mostly because the federal government is so mean and stingy.

The malnutrition story was about new proposed budget cuts might cause malnutrition in children. They hadn't, but they might. The unemployment line story was soggy with lines about "the aid hopes of a hundred lives on hold," and "In the bad times, which is to say, in these times..." One lady "looks as if she is pressing hard not to cry," another speaks "through gritted teeth." The latter lady says, "People gotta speak out," which is harder when the teeth are brittle. The Post views the horrible world about it, grills its teeth, and speaks out. President Reagan thinks the press is much too dothead. He says he reads the Post. He ought to read the News-Review, which is absolutely full of good news this week, mostly because our federal government is so generous and thoughtful.

Right where Riverhead's Main Street meets Peconic Avenue, there is an old building that once housed a movie theater. Good news — the federal government is laying out some money so a group of public-spirited citizens can buy the old building, refurbish the theater and show old movies.

The town is issuing industrial development bonds, rendered tax-exempt by our wealthy Uncle Sam, so that a fine old law firm can build a fine new office. The News-Review had a picture of the happy town fathers and the happy lawyers. Riverhead isn't the wealthiest town in the United States. Southampton, right across the Peconic River, is a lot richer. Rich or poor, however, people generate garbage, and the two towns have gotten together in planning a waste disposal plant. Good news — the federal government will pay most of the cost.

Even the News-Review must have some bad news. The federal government may not pay 85 percent of the cost the way the towns had hoped, but only 75 percent of the cost. If the federal government doesn't come up with the 75 percent, they just won't build the garbage plant, so the town officials, whether they spoke through gritted teeth isn't known. That isn't the sort of thing the News-Review would slip into the story anyway.

Figuratively, at least, they are grinning from ear to ear. If you can get the federal government to subsidize old movies and your garbage plant, why shouldn't the people and their newspaper be happy?

The federal government, of course, treats Washington best of all. Even the lady in the unemployment line talking to the Post through gritted teeth had two jobs. The Post does see the world through lemon-colored glasses.

Regional planning key to preserving state's migrating fish

BOISE (UPI) — Construction of hydroelectric dams in the Pacific Northwest is having a serious impact on Idaho's population of salmon and other migrating fish.

The situation only can be reversed by careful regional planning, the state director of Fish and Game said Tuesday.

Jerry Conley told the Northwest Power Planning Council that Idaho, unlike Oregon and Washington, has no ocean fisheries for anadromous — or sea-migrating — fish like salmon and steelhead.

It must rely instead on those fish returning from their ocean homes to spawn in lakes and streams, a trip hampered by dams which dot major waterways in the region, he said.

"Unfortunately, it is an all or nothing position," Conley said. "All of Idaho's anadromous fish are subjected to the impacts of eight dams in the Columbia and lower Snake rivers, both upon leaving the state as juveniles and again before they ever reach the state returning as adults."

As an example of the crisis facing Idaho's anadromous fish populations,

Conley said there were an estimated 272,000 steelhead and salmon — about 51 fish per mile — in the Snake River drainage at the time the McNary Dam was built near Umatilla, Ore.

Since that time, additional hydroelectric construction in the drainage has caused the population to plummet to just 37,000 fish — or nine per mile in remaining habitat, he said.

He asked the council, set up by the federal government to plan for coordinated energy development in Idaho, Washington, Oregon and western Montana, to preserve and enhance inland fisheries as directed by Congress.

He said measures are needed to get fish, particularly those which migrate, through reservoirs and over dams so that populations can rebuild throughout the region.

A critical element of this program, Conley said, is ensuring sufficient water flow in streams and rivers to maintain larger numbers of fish. When a decision was made to dam up Clark Fork River and fluctuate water levels in nearby Pend Oreille Lake in northern Idaho for power generation, "drastic" declines in fish populations resulted, he said.

Another witness, Idaho Water Resources Director Ken Dunn, told the council his agency has four principles related to the fisheries problem:

- Any water for fish flows will be provided only under authority of state water law and in compliance with the state water plan.
- Water for fish flows of the volume recommended by Conley can only be provided if additional major storage areas are constructed.
- Idaho cannot be expected to provide improvements in fish flows and upstream spawning habitat unless it receives a fair portion of the benefits from such improvement. Other recreational, environmental and economic uses of the waterways will not be sacrificed to benefit downstream interests.
- Comprehensive study and analysis, including significant public comment, must be undertaken before any program or project is adopted.

Boyce bank robbery case reaches trial today

BOISE (UPI) — More than 70 prospective jurors were summoned to Boise for the bank robbery trial of convicted spy Christopher Boyce.

Boyce and two alleged conspirators are accused of concealing the prison escape, in the rugged Idaho Panhandle.

U.S. District Judge Harold Ryan will empanel a 12-person jury, plus three alternates, to hear federal charges that Boyce — aided by Gloria White and Calvin Robinson — embarked on a five-month-long bank holdup spree in three western states to raise money to flee to the Soviet Union.

Ryan, concerned that pre-trial publicity might make it difficult to locate impartial jurors, has issued a gag order prohibiting court staff, attorneys, witnesses and investigators from speaking about the case to reporters.

Local lawmen refused to discuss specifics of the tight security ordered for Boyce's arrival in Idaho's capital. But Ada County Clerk Palmer said Boyce would be held in a "maximum security medical isolation cell" at the county jail.

He will be whisked to the downtown federal court building daily under heavy guard, ushered into the structure through a basement parking garage and kept in a small holding cell during recesses in the proceeding, officials have said.

U.S. Attorney Guy Hurlbutt calls Boyce "an extreme escape risk," remembering the spy's January, 1980, escape from a federal prison in Los Angeles, Calif., when Boyce climbed a 10-foot fence equipped with razor wire and sensing devices.

Hurlbutt has called more than 100 witnesses for the trial — which is expected to last three to six weeks — and attorneys for the alleged co-conspirators have also issued lengthy lists of character and alibi witnesses, including a North Idaho sheriff and chief of police.

Boyce, 29, is accused of disguising himself with pancake makeup and wigs to rob eight banks in Idaho, eastern Washington and western Montana during 19 months of freedom following the federal prison escape.

The former Catholic altar boy was serving a 40-year sentence for selling U.S. satellite secrets to the Soviet Union when he fled the prison and California, allegedly with the help of Robinson.

He has been convicted of that escape, and also faces charges stemming from different bank robberies in western Washington.

Mrs. White, 41, Newport, Ore., is charged with hiding the son of a former FBI agent in what prosecutors contend was a "safe house" for criminals she allegedly operated out of her Bonanza Ferry summer cabin in northern Idaho.

Robinson, a California resident who court documents say is the father of Mrs. White's youngest child, is accused of teaching the spy how to successfully rob banks, helping him escape from federal prison — and aiding him in his flight to Mrs. White's log cabin on the side of Katka Mountain.

New approach Unique labor relations in mine effort

KELLOGG (UPI) — A Polish-born Australian mining executive has used what he calls a "completely unique approach to labor relations" in hammering out an agreement with former Bunker Hill workers.

For one thing, Martin Baral has agreed to pay back all of a proposed 20 percent reduction in worker salaries and fringe benefits plus interest.

But Baral has not yet entered into any negotiations with Gulf Resources and Chemical Corp. to purchase Bunker Hill, and the Texas firm is proceeding with plans to demolish the century old operation.

Baral is trying to put together an international syndicate to buy the financially troubled Kellogg, Idaho, mining and smelting complex and save most of the 2,100 jobs lost by the closure.

As a first step, Baral and the United Steelworkers of America have succeeded in drafting an agreement that covers future contract negotiations should Baral eventually acquire the firm.

"This compromise allows the company to weather the storm of the United States' conditions, but the work force has not been deprived of self-respect and dignity," Baral said.

Woman launches protest against phone solicitation

BOISE (UPI) — A woman who has been waging a one-person campaign against telephone solicitors took her protest to the streets of Boise Monday, carrying a sign in front of Mountain Bell offices and the headquarters of a local soliciting firm.

Thelma Harms, 32, said she decided to step up her protest in hopes other people around the country might join her. She claims telephone solicitors disrupt family events during the evening by making most of their calls at that time.

"I had a lot of people drive by and yell out the window 'Go for it,'" she said. But officials at both the phone company and the soliciting firm were skeptical about the impact the protest would have on evening sales calls.

Mountain Bell spokesman Steve Gurbert said telephone solicitations were a lawful "free enterprise situation."

And a spokesman for Pacific Builders, a company which employs about six telephone solicitors, said Mrs. Harms' protests in front of that office will not affect future business methods.

Budget break

White House ready to talk to Demos

WASHINGTON (UPI) — There was a clear signal from the White House Tuesday that the administration is now ready to meet with key Democrats to break the stalemate over President Reagan's much-criticized budget.

Senate Republican leader Howard Baker of Tennessee said the meeting is needed to break the impasse in Congress over Reagan's $75.6 billion budget.

But House Speaker Thomas O'Neill indicated he is not optimistic the session will produce a bipartisan compromise, saying Reagan and his White House staff still seem to have the "feeling that compromise is retreat."

O'Neill said White House chief of staff James Baker called him Monday to request the meeting. He said no date was immediately set, but he indicated the get-together with Baker will be held soon.

Deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes, in confirming the Baker-O'Neill call, cautioned reporters not to interpret it as a change in the administration's position on the budget.

"The president wanted to assure the speaker that the lines of communication between the White House and the Hill — in particular, where Reagan will be kept open and that (James) Baker is available to listen to any proposal that they have."

The spokesman made his comments in New York, where Reagan was attending a dinner sponsored by the National Conference of Christians and Jews.

Speakes was unable to say why Baker made the phone call when he did — a call that prompted immediate speculation the White House was signaling a willingness to compromise on the budget.

Asked if Baker had acted on a request from Reagan, Speakes said, "More or less."

The White House has consistently rejected most budget alternatives presented by the Democrats as "piecemeal" approaches lacking the comprehensiveness of the president's $75.7 billion proposal.

And Speakes repeated that complaint again Tuesday. "We have noticed a conspicuous lack of detailed plans from the House Democrats," Speakes said.

O'Neill's almost off-handed announcement of the high-level meeting, in his usual pre-session news conference shortly after the Senate GOP leader blamed the budget impasse on the unwillingness of O'Neill and Reagan to "come to terms."

Reagan award protested

NEW YORK (UPI) — President Reagan went to New York Tuesday to accept a humanitarian award and stress his credentials as a man of compassion.

But he was confronted by 10,000 or more protesters in the biggest demonstration of the presidency.

Reagan, accepting a humanitarian award from the National Conference of Christians and Jews, acknowledged he is bothered by charges that he lacks compassion — one of a variety of complaints displayed on the banners and placards — of the orderly protesters.

In remarks at the presentation dinner, the president defended his federal spending cuts that have hit especially hard in the area of social programs for the disadvantaged.

Reagan was honored at the dinner with the Charles Evans Hughes Gold Medal in Courageous Leadership in Governmental, Civic and Humanitarian Affairs, an award presented annually since 1965.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said Reagan "has a comment" in a reported division within the conference — over whether he should be given the prize. "They honored him with the award and he's honored to accept it," he said.

A crowd estimated by police at about 10,000, protesting a variety of causes, created a traffic jam around the Hilton before police closed the front entrance.

"It could be more than 10,000," said the deputy police commissioner for public information, Alice Johnson, who called it the biggest anti-government gathering since one that greeted the 1860 Democratic Convention.

Police originally estimated there would be about 5,000 people, based on what protest organizers had told them.

The demonstration was organized by the Coalition to Roll Back Reaganism, which represents several dozen anti-Reagan groups. The coalition also has scheduled a massive demonstration in Washington Saturday.

Enterprise zone plan delivered to Congress

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan Tuesday sent Congress his "free market" plan to revitalize inner cities and create jobs by encouraging private investment in urban enterprise zones.

"Enterprise zones offer a bold new means of invigorating economically crippled communities and improving the life of some of our most disadvantaged citizens," Reagan said during a Rose Garden ceremony.

"Rather than bureaucratic controls and regulations — a method that has failed — we seek to focus the vigor and innovation of the market place on these enclaves of despair," he said.

The president said the idea is to create "a productive, free market environment in economically depressed areas by reducing taxes, regulations and other government burdens on economic activity."

His proposed Enterprise Zone Act of 1982 calls for no federal funding other than administrative expenses, but calls on the free market to take the place of government financing.

It provides for the housing secretary to designate up to 25 zones to qualify for incentives on the request of state and local governments. The criteria for eligibility would include the unemployment rate and poverty status.

"The president's proposal is a good one and its chances for success are excellent," Housing Secretary Samuel Pierce told reporters.

"This is not an end all, be all for the economy," he cautioned. "It is not a panacea" for economic "wastelands."

But Pierce said the program will "stimulate both private investment and local public initiative."

"This will not be a HUD-run program," he said. "States and local governments will help new businesses take root and grow."

Among the proposed tax breaks is a 50 percent income tax credit to employers for wages paid to zone employees who were considered disadvantaged individuals when hired.

"The incentives are substantial whether a new business calls for a staff of one worker or a factory employing thousands," Pierce said.

House committee passes emergency funding

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House Appropriations Committee narrowly rejected a plan to scrap the B-1 bomber Tuesday and approved $3 billion in emergency funds for other federal programs this year, including student loans.

The committee also unanimously agreed to extend funding for seven federal departments that are due to run out of money next week.

The departments of Labor, Health and Human Services, Education, State, Justice, Commerce and Treasury, as well as numerous smaller agencies, now are operating under a temporary funding bill that expires March 31.

The departments are funded under three separate appropriations bills, which because of controversial riders concerning sensitive issues like bus-ing, abortion and school prayer, have not won final approval.

Hoping to avoid a lengthy confrontation on the House floor that would leave the departments without money, the panel agreed to extend the temporary funding bill without change through the fiscal year, which ends Sept. 30.

Having dealt with the emergency funding measure — known as the "continuing resolution" — in a matter of minutes, the panel spent the next two hours haggling over supplemental spending requests.

By noon, the committee had approved $144 million in amendments to the supplemental spending bill that already added $4.6 billion to government spending for the current year.

Many of the amendments restored funds Congress hastily slashed when it approved a temporary funding bill in December.

A House vote on both bills is expected later this week.

Rep. Sid Yates, D-Ill., caused the biggest splash by suggesting the committee abolish funding for the B-1 bomber as "the first constructive step and to show the country" Congress is serious about controlling government spending.

Rep. Jack Edwards of Alabama, senior Republican on the defense appropriations subcommittee, led the opposition to the B-1 fund cut. He argued it was "neither the time nor the place" for such a crucial decision. The amendment failed 27-22.

The panel did agree to put $1.3 billion in the supplemental appropriations bill for student loans.

February federal deficit smaller than anticipated

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The federal deficit grew by $14.8 billion in February but it still has not caught up with the red ink generated by this time last year, the Treasury Department reported Tuesday.

The February shortfall brought the cumulative total deficit for the first five months of the fiscal year to $33.65 billion, $1.9 billion less than for the first five months of 1981.

So far this fiscal year, federal receipts have been $241.3 billion and outlays $297.5 billion, the department said.

The government's fiscal year begins Oct. 1.

Although top administration officials have indicated they are somewhat mystified by the monthly revenue flows, they are not counting on any ultimate reprieve from the record-high $86.6 billion deficit projected for the year by the administration — which some critics say has been understated by $30 billion or so.

Budget Director David Stockman already has indicated that higher-than-expected farm price support payments are among the factors pushing the projection still higher, although it will not be formally revised until later this year.

Voice of America chief named

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan Tuesday named a new chief for the Voice of America — John Hughes, a Pulitzer Prize-winning journalist who promised to keep the news carried by the government-financed network strictly objective.

The Welsh-born Hughes replaces James Conkling, 67, who announced suddenly late Monday that he was resigning after a troubled year in the job.

In stepping down, Conkling cited strong public criticism he has received from both the left and the right over his controversial efforts to make VOA a more effective weapon against communism.

Furriers devised a sort of skin stretcher they call a "fur pull." I'm told. Hope so, hope so. If true, they've finally come up with an answer to generations of poets who insist there's no rhyme for "purple."

BOMBED TEXAS

Q. Is it true the Japanese bombed Texas during World War II?

A. A couple of Japanese anti-personnel bombs fell on Texas, that's true. High altitude paper and silk balloons floated them over.

A. You've got one chance in 40, statistically.

Q. Has any U.S. president ever been granted a patent? A. Only one—Abraham Lincoln. In 1849. For a flotation device to lift steamboats over sandbars.

 Princess Diana will buy designer clothes, such as a $117 romper suit, for her royal baby at Please Mum, an exclusive and publicity shy boutique. Or will she? Please Mum is so exclusive the owners don't reveal the names of customers. But, somehow, word leaked to the British press Tuesday. "I have been asked whether we will supply the princess' baby, and I have denied it," said Please Mum director Philip Frankel. However, his brother, director Graham Frankel, told The Standard, "It's not the sort of thing we like to tell everybody. We don't want to appear to be using the royal family for advertising."

The princess also talked with Suzanne Long, 20, bass guitarist for the punk rock Reptiles. Miss Long said Diana admired her outfit - leather jerkin, studded boots, spiky hair and orange eyeshadow.

 Donny Osmond gave his regards to Broadway, but it wasn't mutual. His first try at the Great White Way - a revival of the George M. But during an interview before opening night, Osmond said, "No matter what happens, I've really enjoyed this. It's been great fun."

There was no confirmation that the young man was Kennedy, a junior at Brown, but he was identified by several student newspaper reporters. Aside from a possible Brooke-Kennedy connection, there was speculation that Brooke, a high school junior, planned to attend Brown. To date, she's been a tiger for Princeton.

Fiberglass bill

Patched-up pelican set for spring

SALISBURY, Md. (UPI) - Paul, a hapless pelican who lost a wing in a wire fence and his beak to a grumpy jaguar, Tuesday faced the spring courting season with a fiberglass bill that zoo officials hoped would not interfere with his sex life.
 Unlike his nine counterparts at the Salisbury Zoological Park, Paul won't sport a "horn" on his long yellow-orange beak during the mating period which lasts through the summer.
 "Don't worry about Paul," said George Spiedel Jr., the zoo's director. "He's not missing much. Our pelicans don't breed as yet, and sometimes in the summer their horns will disappear. Paul will fit right in with the flock again."

"Besides, Paul's been through too much to let a little thing like no bill horns bother him," he added.
 Paul's artificial beak was fashioned by veterinarians at the National Zoo in Washington, where the bird was taken after a jaguar took a bite out of his beak.
 Losing his beak was just the last in a series of mishaps to befall the American white pelican, who has been at the zoo on Maryland's Eastern Shore since 1975.
 "Paul's been through a heck of a lot," said Spiedel. "It started when Paul broke a wing. We think he caught it in a wire fence. It was so bad we had to amputate."
 Zoo officials seeking a quiet place for Paul to recuperate placed him in a vacant den in the jaguar complex, separated from the big cats by only a wire screen.

 "It seems that Paul started poking his beak where it shouldn't have been and a jaguar just took a bit out of it," Spiedel said.
 Although Paul's artificial beak may not be able to grow a flashy courting display, zoo officials said it serves him as well as a normal bill in every other way.
 "We wanted a functional bill that would allow him to feed and preen himself," said Donald L. Janssen, one of the veterinarians who helped to custom-make Paul's bill. "We didn't try to match the color."

Newest dance craze is old stuff

MILWAUKEE (UPI) - There's nothing new about dance crazes if you lived through the twist, the monkey and the boogaloo. But no self-respecting child of the 80s would be caught dead following such a pedestrian trend when he can do "The Bird."
 The latest mania was inspired by a record entitled "Dance Little Bird" written by an obscure Swiss-German carpenter nearly 25 years ago - the only song he wrote. It didn't become popular until 1981.
 Twenty-six different European groups have recorded the catchy tune with no lyrics and more than three million records have been sold. Singer Bob Kames has recorded it for distribution in the United States.

 "This song has done something to Europeans to lift them out of their depression. This is a happy, cheerful song," said Kames, who has a gold record himself in 1949.
 Kames said New York discos did the dance New Year's Eve and the Arthur Murray studio in Milwaukee is teaching the steps.
 The song is kind of a cross between a polka and avary sing-along, he said, with canary soloists twirling in the background. It's not to be confused with the "oo-ma-ma-mao-mao" bird tune of rock history.

 Since he released his version in February, he has sold 150,000 records, but six other American versions have been released and eight European stylings are moving into the market.
 The writer of the tune, Terry Randall, had the song recorded several times during the years, but not until last year did it catch on, Kames said. "Now, he (Randall) stands to make a ton of money. He gets 4 cents for each record sold."

Ruling allows for federal regulation of medical profession

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Federal regulators can keep a sharp eye on the medical profession and can forbid it from using anti-competitive practices to drive up people's doctor bills, an evenly split Supreme Court said Tuesday.

The justices lined up 4-4 on the case, an action that automatically affirms a lower court decision and enforces a Federal Trade Commission order banning the powerful American Medical Association from making rules that might limit competition.

The ruling for the first time subjects a non-profit professional association to regulation by the FTC, which usually polices more traditional profit-oriented businesses.

Justice Harry Blackmun, who had past ties to the medical profession, did not participate in the case, which helped lead to the tie vote. The result was a blow to the AMA and also to the American Dental Association, which now can come under similar government regulation. The FTC charged the medical group with using its ethical standards — notably against advertising and special fee arrangements — to insulate physicians from competition. The result, the agency said, was to give doctors "the highest incomes of any profession," while driving up consumers' medical bills.

Rising health care costs have been a major factor in inflation for more than a decade. In the consumer price index figures announced Tuesday, for example, medical costs for the 12 months through February were up 11.9 percent.

In three other opinions handed down Tuesday, the court: "Closed a legal loophole by ruling 8-1 that prosecutors do not need to prove when and where a check was forged to win a conviction for carrying it across state lines."

• Voted 6-2 to reverse a Federal appeals court ruling that would have given more than a million workers greater flexibility in filing claims for work-related injuries under the Longshoremen's and Harbor Workers' Compensation Act.

• Dimissed, 6-3, a case involving two men who claimed they should not have received a mandatory parole term because they were not informed it was part of a plea-bargained deal.

• The high court's decision in the medical case was announced in a single sentence without elaboration and the action lacks the long-range impact of a formal opinion. It left intact a 1979 cease-and-desist order prohibiting the AMA from using its voluntary ethical standards to restrict advertising and fee arrangements doctors may use.

• Dr. Joseph Boyle, chairman of the AMA board of trustees, said the doctors' group was disappointed the high court failed to rule conclusively on the dispute.

Deaf student seeks interpreter

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Computer technology enabled a deaf student to argue before the Supreme Court Tuesday that a 10-year-old deaf girl is entitled to a tax-paid sign language interpreter in her grade school classroom.

The case — holding implications for more than 4 million students nationwide — focuses on what public school districts must do under a 1975 federal law to provide a "free appropriate public education" for handicapped children.

Attorney Michael Chatoft, pleading the case of young Amy Rowley, became the first deaf lawyer to argue before the high court.

Chatoft, who lost his hearing while in law school, obtained special permission to use a computer set-up that transcribed the justices' questions and other lawyers' arguments into written words on a television-like video display screen.

Two federal courts have ruled that the Westchester County, N.Y., schools — where Amy is a fourth grader — should provide an interpreter for her.

The school board claims the court went too far in mandating the service, which would cost between $20,000 and $25,000 a year.

Chatoft, of Floral Park, N.Y., said that Amy is not asking for education served "on a silver platter."

"If she's going to compete in this world, she requires an education like all other children's," he said, maintaining she needs an interpreter to ensure that she understands everything that goes on in class.

But attorney Raymond Kuntz, arguing for the school board, urged the justices to overturn the lower court rulings because they impose too much of a burden on local schools.

He maintained the Education for All Handicapped Children Act, while ordering individualized programs for handicapped students, does not mandate education to ensure a child comprehends up to "full potential."

"The full potential standard is an impossible standard," Kuntz said. The high court is expected to rule in the case by July.

Death penalty case argued

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court confronted one of the few unsettled death penalty issues Tuesday, listening to arguments in a case over whether a man can be executed for murder when he did not pull the trigger.

The case specifically involves Earl Edmund, sentenced to die in Florida's electric chair for the robbery and slaying of an elderly couple in April 1975. But the outcome of the high court's deliberations has implications for other death row inmates convicted of "felony murder" in about 25 states.

In more than an hour of debate before the court, attorney James Liebman maintained that Edmund was merely the driver of the getaway car and was 200 yards from the farmhouse when Thomas Kersey, 88, and his wife, Eunice, 74, were shot.

Liebman claimed it violates the Constitution's ban against cruel and unusual punishment to execute criminals who had no intent to kill.

"When you're separating who lives and who dies, you must look at the culpability of the individual," he argued.

He compared Edmund to a racist sentenced to death in Georgia. In a landmark 1977 Supreme Court ruling, the rapist's death sentence was overturned as unconstitutional.

Edmund was given the death penalty even though the state Supreme Court found his only involvement in the murder was in the plot to rob the Kerseys. Two accomplices were convicted of shooting the couple.

He was convicted of felony murder, under which persons who participate in crimes such as robbery, assault or kidnapping are held responsible if a death occurs.

Taking a hard-line approach to crime, Florida Assistant Attorney General Lawrence Kaden argued that Edmund should die because his involvement in the robbery indicated his intent to do harm.

"If he creates a situation where violence could occur, he must suffer the consequences," Kaden said.

Senate wants power to veto agency rules

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate defied the administration and voted Tuesday to give Congress a government-wide veto-over-agency rulemaking.

The amendment — to a bill providing for the first restructuring of federal regulations since 1946 — was approved on a 69-25 vote after the Senate first turned back 78-28 a move to kill the language.

In doing so, it ignored written and personal entreaties from Vice President George Bush, who argued that no decision should be taken until after the Supreme Court rules on the constitutionality of the congressional veto.

The Senate is expected to complete action on the overall legislation before the end of the week, when the measure will be sent to the House. The amendment would permit Congress to kill a proposed agency rule if both the Senate and House pass resolutions of disapproval.

Congressional committees would have 45 days to review the rules and then another 30 days to reject them if the committee recommended a veto.

Sen. John Danforth, R-Mo., read to the Senate a letter from Bush in which the vice president strongly argued against action until after the Supreme Court makes its decision.

He also said Bush personally addressed a meeting of Senate Republicans during a lunch meeting and repeated the administration's opposition to the amendment.

U.S. looking for favorable start to arms talks

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (UPI) — The United States has nearly completed preparation for negotiating strategic arms reduction with the Soviet Union but will not launch the talks until circumstances are favorable, a senior U.S. official said Tuesday.

The START negotiations, as they are called, would run parallel with the talks on reducing the numbers of medium-range nuclear weapons in Europe that began Nov. 30 in Geneva.

"We are looking for a positive set of circumstances to begin the negotiations," said the official, who could not be identified under the ground rules of a briefing.

Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger conveyed this message to his 12 counterparts of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization at the opening of a two-day session of the Nuclear Planning group, said the official, a participant in the talks.

"Like the Colorado sunshine," he said, the atmosphere at the meeting "has been very bright. There is a high degree of agreement."

The Strategic Arms Reduction Talks, which Weinberger has said might begin "sometime this summer," would be a follow-up to the second round of Strategic Arms Limitation Talks (SALT II) that resulted in a Soviet American treaty. The Senate never ratified the agreement.

Weinberger told the European ministers Washington is "in the final stages" of preparing a negotiating plan for those talks (START), the official said.

He said the preparations will be completed and reviewed by the National Security Council and President Reagan "in the very near future."

He did not rule out the possibility that, with completion of the negotiations within "the next several weeks," Reagan might use his scheduled European summit in June as an opportunity to announce the start of negotiations.

Not unexpectedly, the official said the ministers agreed with the American rejection of the March 16 proposal by Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev to freeze the deployment of mobile SS-20 medium range missiles targeted against western Europe.

He said there was a "high degree of support" for the U.S. offer to reduce the numbers of medium range missiles in Europe to zero — the so-called zero option proposal.

"The most recent Brezhnev proposal seems to legitimize the current Soviet superiority in medium range missiles," he said.

Witness scared by volcano's lightning show

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — Freeland photographer Charles "Chuck" Curtis got a front-row seat to the Mount St. Helens explosive eruption Friday, and he admits he was scared by the lightning-streaked, ash-pewee blast.

Aside from a British pilot who saw the nighttime eruption from the air, the 21-year-old Portland resident was the only person known to have seen the eruption from less than one mile away.

An experienced outdoorsman, Curtis was camped in a restricted zone less than a mile from the 8,000-foot summit of the northern Washington volcano when it erupted, spewing a mushrooming volcanic ash cloud eight miles into the air.

He was on the south side, opposite from the photographer Charles "Chuck" Curtis got a front-row seat to the Mount St. Helens explosive eruption Friday, and he admits he was scared by the lightning-streaked, ash-pewee blast.

was totally dark. You couldn't see the silhouette. It started raining rock and pumice, rock the size of a quarter. The rumble was loud. The rock falling down was loud, too. It sounded identical to a rain-storm or a hail-storm."

When he heard the mountain rumbling, "I was scared. When I heard it wasn't a jet, I started thinking, 'Oh, god, what's going on. I said, 'Calm down, get your camera out.'"

But he said it was too dark to get a picture.

Asked the worst possible thought that flashed through his mind, he said, "I thought the ash might be hot. I thought it might be melting my tent. But the ash was cold when I picked it up. I was in the woods, so I thought I was pretty safe."

Curtis did not feel like he was being lionized. He said he stayed on the south side, rather than the north side, where more than 60 people had or are missing from the 1980 eruption.

An 8-foot-high cold avalanche, created by the Friday eruption poured out the hole in the north side of the mountain, causing flooding on the North Fork of the Toutle River, but no damage was reported on the south side.

Hilton fire penalty 8 life terms in prison

By MYRAM BORDERS
United Press International

LAS VEGAS, Nev. — A former room service busboy who and near tears as he stood for final sentencing, was told Tuesday he would spend the rest of his life in prison for killing eight people by torching the Las Vegas Hilton Hotel.

District Judge Abdelkar Guy sentenced Philip Bruce Cline to eight back-to-back life terms in prison without possibility of parole on an eight-count murder conviction. Cline also was sentenced to a 15-year concurrent prison term on a conviction of first degree arson.

Routinely a person sentenced to one life term without possibility of parole does not initially appear before the parole board for 20 years. Cline, facing eight consecutive sentences based on interviews by the governor or parole board, would make his initial appearance for parole after 160 years.

The sandy-haired defendant, wearing a short-sleeved shirt and cotton trousers, was red-eyed when he slowly walked back to the jury box to join other inmates waiting for their names to be called on a long court calendar.

His parents sat in the back row of the small, crowded court room.

Defense attorney Kevin Kelly's pleas for the court to grant Cline concurrent prison terms failed.

"There is no information before this court that says Philip Bruce Cline intentionally killed anybody — nothing," said Kelly.

"The truly grim statistics in this case speak eloquently for consecutive sentences, your honor," argued prosecuting attorney Mel Harmon who recounted that eight people died and more than 400 were injured when Cline set fire to some eighth floor drapes in the Las Vegas Hilton Hotel Feb. 10, 1981. "We urge the court to run all of the counts consecutively."

Judge Guy, who presided over Cline's 22-day trial, was mandated by law to follow the jury's recommendation that Cline be sentenced to life in prison without possibility of parole. However, it was up to the judge to decide whether the terms be served consecutively or concurrently.

"There can be little doubt Mr. Cline set the fire," said Guy. "In this jurisdiction, a short-time earler 84 people were killed in a fire. The defendant knew that."

"He knew the terrible ravages of fire. He knew how fast it could move. He should have known if he started a fire it could move rapidly," said Guy.

Guy referred to the catastrophic MGM Grand Hotel fire which destroyed the "strip" hotel-casino less than three months prior to the Hilton fire. Eighty-four people died in the MGM Grand Hotel blaze and another victim died several days later.

Kelly, who plans an appeal, said unless the governor commutes the sentence, Cline would never see the outside of prison the rest of his life.

"He is tore up right now. But I have no intention he be mentally accepting it," said Kelly. The day after Cline was convicted on Jan. 15 he tried to kill himself by taking an overdose of mood elevators and was hospitalized several days.

Kelly said the sentence of the court was a mandate of public opinion based on media coverage and did not reflect justice. Cline's father hurriedly left the courtroom after Guy imposed the sentence and told reporters his son did not receive a fair trial.

Prosecutors painted Cline during the trial as a man who set fire to the Las Vegas Hilton because he wanted to be a hero by saving the hotel guests. Prosecutors said he concocted a story about starting the fire accidentally with a marijuana cigarette while cuddling on a loveseat with a fellow homosexual.

Defense attorneys attempted to show that fire and building code violations in the 25-story, 2,700-room resort caused the fire to spread more rapidly.

The killer fire started in the drapes of an elevator lobby on the eighth floor but three other deliberately set fires broke out on different floors the same night over a period of several hours. Cline was removing room service trays from the upper floors of the hotel the night of the fires.

Bone marrow transplant set Friday for boy, 9

SEATTLE (UPI) — A 9-year-old Brazilian boy who suffers from leukemia, traveled to the Fred Hutchinson Cancer Research Center, where he will receive a bone marrow transplant Friday, donated by his 6-year-old sister.

Sandro, his father Joao B. Rosa, and his 6-year-old sister, Isamne, who will be the donor in the transplant, arrived from Curitiba in the state of Mato Grosso last week.

Marrow will be extracted from Isamne's hip bone and given to Sandro intravenously, much like a blood transfusion.

Sandro is isolated in a plastic tent, and doctors who don't speak his language are giving him large doses of drugs to keep his body free from rejecting the transplant. He will receive total body irradiation to eliminate any remaining leukemic cells before the transplant takes place.

Sandro's father, a retail sales manager of industrial and agricultural machinery in Curitiba, said his wife remained at home with their four other children. He will stay with his son for 100 days after the transplant.

Florida man still may gain new heart

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — Surgeon William DeVries will rewrite criteria for selecting human recipients of an artificial heart so a dying Florida man can be considered, University of Utah Medical Center officials said Tuesday.

However, center spokesman John Dwan said the proposed change in rules would not guarantee that Dale Lott, 37, Homestead, Fla., could get one of the polyurethane pumps known as the Jarvik-7 heart.

Dwan said Lott would simply be considered, along with all other patients suffering from degenerating heart muscles, assuming the university's Institutional Review Board and the federal Food and Drug Administration both approve the change.

"There is an urgency because of Mr. Lott and thousands of others who suffer a similar heart condition," said Dwan. "But there also is a need for the scientific process to be deliberate."

"Our challenge now is to be responsive to that urgency while at the same time protecting the process from becoming irresponsible," he added.

Dwan said DeVries, the only surgeon with FDA certification to implant the experimental heart in a human, consulted with Lott's physicians in Florida over the weekend. DeVries confirmed that the former fire dispatcher does not meet the current criteria to become a candidate for the artificial heart. Under guidelines approved last year by the FDA, the university is permitted only to implant the device in a patient whose heart fails to restart following open-heart surgery. Such a patient would be considered clinically dead and would therefore undergo no risk from receiving the air-driven blood pump.

Lott's disease, a progressive degeneration of the heart muscles, could not be corrected by open heart surgery so he could not become an artificial heart candidate under existing rules.

The Jarvik-7 heart has not been used in a human but has kept test animals alive for more than nine months after their natural hearts had been removed. Neither DeVries nor Dwan would not comment on whether Lott, who also suffers from diabetes and high blood pressure, would be a good candidate if the rules were changed. They would say only that he would be evaluated if the criteria is altered.

Dwan also denied rumors that the university received a phone call from President Reagan requesting that Lott be given the artificial heart. He said the rumor apparently grew out of a request earlier this month from the White House that the FDA review the case. The White House staff routinely passed on to the FDA a letter from Lott's friends asking for the review.

'Hit man' acts as his own attorney

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — Confessed Mafia hit man, Aldeana "Jimmy the Weasel" Frattanno defended himself in federal court Tuesday in a $1 million lawsuit brought by the widow of a slain mobster whose execution she says Frattanno set up.

Marie Bompensiero, widow of slain mobster-informant Frank "The Bomp" Bompensiero, brought the suit against the U.S. Justice Department on grounds it failed to warn her husband that his life was in danger after "Bomp" became an informant for the FBI.

Frattanno, who is a protected federal witness, was surrounded by five U.S. Marshall's officers as he moved in and out of the courtroom at a motions hearing Monday.

Frattanno pleaded guilty in 1978 to obstruction of justice in connection with the Bompensiero killing. He allegedly helped plot the telephone booth "clip," but was not prosecuted after he agreed to become a prosecution witness.

Indians join in talks

HELENA, Mont. (UPI) — The Turtle Mountain Chippewa tribe of North Dakota has become the fifth Indian tribe to enter into water rights negotiations with the Montana Reserved Water Rights Compact Commission.

The commission has never had any sign of interest from the Blackfoot tribe, which last week extended until Aug. 1 the deadline for filing water rights claims on reservation water under the tribe's own ordinance.

Cranston testing prospects

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Alan Cranston, saying people "usually urge me to run," will travel to Iowa and New Hampshire next month to test the political waters before deciding whether to seek the 1984 Democratic presidential nomination.

"I've gotten a good reception, people usually urge me to run," the California Democrat said Monday of his early exploratory efforts.

Cranston said that if he decides to run, support from his home state — which sends the largest delegation to the Democratic National Convention — would be "almost united."

Firm hands power plant to builder

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Pacific Gas & Electricity Co., owner of the $2.4 billion Diablo Canyon nuclear power plant, has turned over the beleaguered plant to a more experienced construction company.

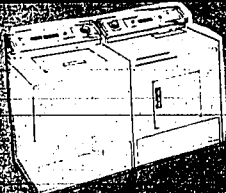

Bechtel has worldwide experience in the engineering and construction of nuclear power plants and under its supervision more than half of the nuclear plant units in this country have been brought on-line.

Not guilty plea to tax charges

GREAT FALLS, Mont. (UPI) — A woman who admitted in a recent trial that she had been running a house of prostitution in Butte, Mont., pleaded innocent Monday to four counts of income tax evasion.

COOK UP SOME MAGIC

...with the Younger Set

Once upon a time there was a man who made wishes and dreams from childhood fantasies come true. That man's name was Walt Disney. His magic kingdoms in Florida and California and his animation features such as "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs," "Alice in Wonderland," "Pinocchio," "Peter Pan," "Cinderella," and "Sleeping Beauty" have delighted audiences young and old for nearly fifty years.

This year Kraft joins Disney in the art of making dreams come true. In a beginning-of-the-year celebration, Kraft and Walt Disney World have created a "Cook Up Some Magic" jubilee in which prizes, including a trip to Walt Disney World for ten people will be offered.

Like the mischievous white rabbit who led Alice into Wonderland, parents can lead their children into the magical world of cooking. Given half a chance, boys and girls from toddlerhood on will make marvelous messes. Most youngsters can't wait to get their hands in the flour.

Teaching kids to cook not only provides the fun and satisfaction of putting things together, but also answers a very real need for working moms who need help in the kitchen. Children ranging from eight or nine (if already kitchen-hardy) to fourteen are at the ideal age to share some responsibility for dinner.

The key to raising your own chef do cuisine is to involve the younger set early, at three or four years of age, in simple tasks which meld with their relatively short attention spans.

To keep up the enthusiasm, try a variety of dishes that can be associated with familiar and favorite stories like the fanciful Alice in Wonderland tea party created here by Kraft.

The presentation of these treats is delightfully childlike. And the story can be woven into the cooking lesson and used as a diversion if you sense the young chef is becoming frustrated with a certain project.

No doubt Kraft's Heritage Shortcake and Sesame Cookies would have been included in the Wonderful tea party had the Mad Hatter and the March Hare known how these treats excited young children like Alice.

Leave the magic of the Heritage Shortcake to your young chef by guiding him or her in filling and topping the shortcake with the fruit and marshmallow creme mixture.

Meanwhile, the Sesame Cookies provide the opportunity for the novice to shape dough into balls, roll them in sesame seeds, and place them on the cookie sheet as Mom and Dad fills the cookie centers with preserves.

Cakes are what made Alice grow very, very tall in Wonderland. That can be the topic as you prepare the Angel Mallow frosting for the Cupcakes With Petite Daisies. Explain to your child the magic of watching the beaten egg whites form soft peaks. Frost the cupcakes together.

Lastly, to appease the Queen of Hearts, try the Finale Fruit Tarts. Once the shells and filling have been prepared, invite your young chef to assist in filling the tarts and garnish with strawberries and bananas.

The Moral of the Story for success with your growing chefs is: maintain flexibility. Specifically,

- Don't overwhelm them with long lists of rules.
- Know in advance that when youngsters help cook, total cleanliness is next to impossible and that the final clean-up chores may well be yours alone.
- Avoid the temptation to take over and do everything yourself.
- And, above all: Always enthusiastically eat what your young chefs help cook!!

Jerusalem artichokes aren't from Jerusalem, but they can be eaten raw like radishes

Willetta Warberg

Artichokes easy to fix

Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — What grows like a potato, resembles a potato but tastes somewhat like a water chestnut when eaten raw and a potato when cooked? It's a Jerusalem Artichoke and it's not from Jerusalem.

Complicated as that may sound, fixing a Jerusalem artichoke is quite easy. When it is dug from the ground before or after the winter, it should be brushed clean and hot washed. Store it in the vegetable crisper for up to a week.

When ready to eat the vegetable, wash and scrub it thoroughly. Peel it now as you would a potato. The Jerusalem artichoke can be eaten raw as you do radishes sprinkled with salt. It can be sliced into salads or stir-fry oriental dishes. It's just delicious cut into strips and served with a cocktail dip.

Before letting the raw Jerusalem artichoke stand for any length of time, it's best to soak it in "Fruit Fresh" or lemon juice and water mixture for a few minutes.

You can easily use the Jerusalem artichoke as a replacement for potato in many recipes.

PAN-ROASTED JERUSALEM ARTICHOKE

Peel as many large Jerusalem artichokes as you wish to serve with your roast. Parcook them for 5 minutes in salt, boiling water to cover. Be sure to put 1 teaspoon lemon juice into boiling water. During the last 25 minutes of meat roasting time, put artichokes around roast. In pan turn them often in pan juices. By the time your roast is done, the artichokes will be tender.

SCALLOPED JERUSALEM ARTICHOKE

- 2-3 cups peeled, sliced raw Jerusalem artichokes
- 1 small onion, peeled and finely chopped
- 1 cup grated cheddar cheese
- 2 tablespoons margarine or butter
- 2 tablespoons flour
- 1 1/2 cups milk
- salt and white pepper to taste
- dash Worcestershire sauce
- breadcrumbs

Preheat oven to 375°F. In 1-quart casserole, alternate in layers, the Jerusalem artichoke slices, chopped onion and shredded cheese. In saucepan, melt margarine or butter; stir in flour. When well-mixed, gradually stir in milk. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Add Worcestershire sauce. Pour milk mixture over layered artichokes. Sprinkle top with breadcrumbs. Bake about 30 minutes or until Jerusalem artichokes test tender when poked with a fork. Makes 4 servings.

JERUSALEM ARTICHOKE PAT-TIES

scrubbed and peeled Jerusalem Artichokes, cooked and drained (as you would potatoes) — margarine or butter for frying Mash or blender-chop boiled, drained Jerusalem artichokes until they are mashed enough to be able to form into patties. First season the mashed artichoke to taste with salt. Then form into patties and fry in margarine or butter until golden brown on both sides. Serve hot as you would hash-browned potatoes.

THIS WEEK'S BEST MARKET BUY: Heavy rains in California have made a "heat or treat" produce. Wait a few weeks for prices to drop. Watch for a good supply of Mexican tomatoes — large and small — to replace what's not coming from California. Staples have stabilized in prices and should remain where they are for a length of time. With Easter closing in, don't expect hams to get any cheaper.

Choose simple recipes for beginning cooks

GLENVIEW, Ill. — "Soup's on!" is a welcome call at most any lunch or supper, and soups and chowders provide a great starting place of teaching boys and girls to cook.

Children learn quickly when they're participating. Knowing this, you can make learning to cook a rewarding and enjoyable experience for your child. To keep interest high, choose easy-to-prepare recipes that yield quick results, such as those which follow.

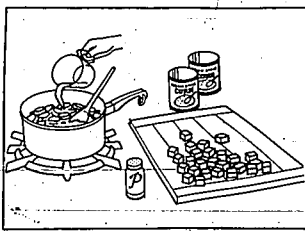

Take time to demonstrate correct use of kitchen equipment and to discuss safety rules with your beginner. Stress the "number one" rule of kitchen safety: Always ask permission when you want to cook.

Soups and chowders have always been an important part of our cooking heritage. Soup and a sandwich has become an American luncheon tradition. Whether they're hearty or light, hot or cold, clear or creamy, soups usually require slicing and chopping vegetables and other foods.

When children are doing the cooking, careful adult supervision is essential.

Help your child select a small sharp knife with a blade from 2 to 5 inches long, whichever size is easiest for small hands to hold securely. Be sure the knife is sharp. A sharp knife requires less pressure to cut through food, and is less likely to slip and cause an accident. Emphasize that food must be cut on a cutting board to keep knife blades sharp and to prevent scratching the counter or table top. Show your child how to cut slowly and carefully, keeping fingers out of the way.

Most recipes contain cooking terms which are a kind of "shorthand" used to guide the cook to perform certain steps. First-timers will need to learn this language. Help your child by demonstrating these basic cooking terms as they occur:
 Chop: to cut into pieces with a knife. When you "finely chop," the pieces will be very small; when you "coarsely chop," the pieces are larger. If the recipe just says "chop," cut the size pieces you prefer.

Cube: to cut into square pieces of uniform size, usually 1/2-inch or larger.

Boil: to cook over medium or high heat so that bubbles rise continually to the surface and break.

Simmer: to cook over low heat so the mixture is just below the boiling point. Small bubbles rising to the surface will be slow moving.

Boys and girls will enjoy making and eating Corn 'n Frank Chowder, a hearty soup that needs only the addition of crusty French bread or crackers and some fruit to make a complete meal.

Youngsters like cheese products, especially when the flavor is mild.

In addition to pleasing flavor, process cheese spread also contributes calcium and phosphorus, the minerals needed to help form strong bones and teeth. It also provides many other essential nutrients such as protein, vitamin A and some of the B-vitamins.

CORN 'N FRANK CHOWDER

You will need:

- 1 pound frankfurters
- 3/4 pound pasteurized process cheese spread
- 1/2 cup green pepper
- 1/2 cup onion
- 2 tablespoons margarine
- 2 cans (17-ounce) cream style corn
- 1 cup milk
- dash of pepper

Take out:

- cutting board
- small sharp knife
- wire cheese cutter (optional)
- glass and metal measuring cups
- 3-quart saucepan
- wooden spoon

1. On cutting board, cut frankfurters into 1/4 to 1/2-inch slices using small sharp knife.

2. Cube process cheese spread with wire cheese cutter or small sharp knife.

3. Chop green pepper and onion.

4. Measure 1/2 cup each of green pepper and onion.

5. Melt margarine in 3-quart saucepan over medium heat.

6. Add frankfurters, green pepper and onion.

7. Cook, stirring constantly with wooden spoon, until onion and green pepper are tender (onion will lose its very white color).

Laredo Soup is a hearty meal-in-a-bowl with real cookout flavor. Kraft barbecue sauce has a snappy seasoned tomato base that imparts this savory flavor into foods cooked indoor or out. Show beginner cooks how to measure barbecue sauce in a clear glass measuring cup, and how to use a rubber scraper for removing every delicious drop from the cup.

Youngsters will need assistance with browning and draining ground beef. Help by demonstrating how to break up the meat with a wooden spoon as it cooks. Stir the meat frequently to further separate chunks, browning it well and evenly.

Older children may be able to use a bulb baster to remove drippings from the saucepan, but small children will need a helping adult hand with draining the meat. Be sure to tell them that drippings must never be poured down the sink where they can solidify and clog the drain.

LAREDO SOUP

You will need:

- 1 medium onion
- 1/2 pound ground beef
- 1 can tomatoes (28-ounce) tomatoes, do not drain
- 1 can kidney (16-ounce) beans, do not drain
- 1/2 barbeque sauce, any flavor
- corn chips

Take out:

- cutting board
- small sharp knife
- 3-quart saucepan
- wooden spoon
- glass measuring cup
- spatula

1. On cutting board, cut onion into slices using small sharp knife.

2. In saucepan on range over medium heat, cook all meat with wooden spoon, until meat is lightly browned and crumbly. Drain off fat.

3. Add onion to skillet. Cook and stir until onion is tender (onion will lose its very white color).

4. Stir in tomatoes, kidney beans and barbeque sauce, bring to a boil.

5. Reduce heat and simmer, uncovered, 10 minutes, stirring occasionally. Spoon into bowls and serve with corn chips.

Family meals vanishing

Good nutrition critical in early life

By LINDA MATCHAN
 •Twin Falls Globe

Back when families ate three square meals together every day, parents had a good idea of what their children consumed.

These were the days when Dad brought home the bacon and Mom was there to cook it. Children ate their meals around the family table under the scrutiny of parents and often grandparents, too.

The phenomenon of the family sitting together three-times-a-day is vanishing along with the napkin ring and the muffin warmer, writes Judith Wurtman, a research scientist in Massachusetts Institute of Technology's nutrition department, in her book "Eating Your Way Through Life." As a result, many children today are growing up with parents who may eat breakfast alone and on their way out the door. If they eat it at all, they eat lunch at the day-care center or school cafeteria, and there is often a barker's arrangement with other kids. Supper is sometimes a haphazard arrangement that's gobbled together by a ballgame or put together by the kids while the parents work late at the office. And snacks, once doled out one cookie at a time after school, are now devoured before, after, even in place of a meal.

Making sure kids are eating in a way that's nutritionally sound is a vital issue for parents, an issue spotlighted now during National Nutrition Month. Wurtman writes that the nutritional quality of the diet during childhood and adolescence is critical because it not only influences the child's physical growth and development but also sets the stage for eating habits in adulthood.

"The eating habits and attitudes toward food that a youngster develops in early years will last a lifetime," says Jeannette Epstein, outpatient nutritionist at Children's Hospital Medical Center in Boston. "Eating is a learned skill."

What sorts of eating "skills" are today's kids developing?

Many are prone to bad eating habits, some specialists say, but not for the reason parents tend to think — that a diet based partly on junk food and "quick meals" will shortchange them on vital nutrients.

As Dr. William Dietz, director of the Weight Control Program at Children's Hospital, points out, "It doesn't hurt them if they don't have salad one night or a glass of milk, or even several nights in a row. Children consuming a balanced diet, over time, are unlikely to have nutrient deficiencies of any kind."

What should concern parents, authorities say, is what children are eating between and instead of meals.

"The major concern (among nutrition experts) is that the kind of snacks selected will promote obesity or dental caries," Dietz said. This is particularly worrisome because high-calorie sugary snacks and breakfast foods are advertised on television during the hours when children are likely to be watching and wanting them. And children now spend so much time watching television instead of working off calories by playing outdoors.

Obesity, which is becoming increasingly widespread in the United States, affects between 5 and 20 percent of the childhood population, according to dietitians.

While there's no clear-cut evidence so far to indicate whether the prevalence of snack foods leads to obesity — lack of exercise is known to be a primary factor — some nutritionists believe the abundance of high-calorie snacks contributes to the problem.

A market study conducted in 1979 or the Federal Trade Commission indicated that 90 percent of children between ages 8 and 14 had snacks every day after school, and less frequently at other times of the day. The snacks they chose most often were high-calorie sweets — cookies, candies, ice cream and cake.

However, it's not inevitable that children will develop unhealthy eating habits if given free rein at mealtime, nutritionists emphasize. Parents can do several things to prevent problems.

Rosanne Howard, director of nutrition training at the Children's Hospital Developmental Evaluation Clinic, says parents should be firm about the sort of foods they permit in the house.

"Kids gravitate toward sweet foods," she said. "And they may be looking for something to fill up the void in their time." If these sweet foods aren't there, they can't eat them, at least when they're at home.

Nutritionists suggest that parents stock their shelves with wholesome snack foods — fruits, cut-up raw vegetables, crackers, yogurt, popcorn that's unbuttered and lightly salted, and whole-wheat bread items.

This doesn't mean children should never be permitted to eat sweets. But, as Jane Brody stresses in "Jane Brody's Nutrition Book," "they'll be better off not thinking that every meal must end with cookies, cake, pudding or ice cream, or that every between-meal hunger pang must be subdued with a sweet."

So much for what children shouldn't be eating. But what sort of food should they be consuming to meet their nutritional requirements? Most nutritionists contacted con-

Kids chose these cookbooks to help with culinary skills

By SUZANNE HAMLIN
© New York Daily News

Kids tend to grow up eating, but not necessarily cooking, a discrepancy that most parents are eager to correct.

Some kids, of course, show a natural inclination toward the stove, and can settle in with a whisk like Rubinstein of the piano. But the majority need encouragement and help to begin a culinary career.

To this end, the cookbook market is flooded with books for kids. There are books for big ones, little ones and the large group in between. They come in every style imaginable: cute, somber, intellectual, arch. Where, oh, where is a legitimate manual for those yearning for learning?

For the last several months I have given my daughter Kate, 8, and son Nathaniel, 13, a selection of cookbooks for children. With groups of their friends, they have cooked their way, with varying degrees of success, through 12 books.

Out of this group, three very different cookbooks survived as winners. And together they make a good working library for culinary novices. The total investment is modest (about $21) for such a large eventual return—the acquisition of a lifelong skill and interest.

The first is The Natural Time for Culinary Homework. Parents are needed here, in varying degrees, as tutors and helpers, but the time spent coaching will come back multifold. As working parents know all too well, they have nothing to lose but their shopping carts.

BETTER HOMES AND GARDENS NEW JUNIOR COOK BOOK, Meredith Press, hardcover ($4.95)

What's good about this book is the format, a practically indestructible hardcover with large, clear type, lots of illustrations and big color photographs. What's bad are the recipes, a mishmash of generally mediocre food, laden with sugar, canned soups and packaged ingredients. There is a tendency to such fare as "Pineapple-Carrot Salad" and meat loaf frosted with instant mashed potatoes. However, between all the slices of American cheese, the book is very appealing to children because it is so absolutely clear. The recipes are numbered and in large print, are thorough and simple, and all the cooking equipment needed is listed to the side of each recipe. Children feel confident with this book and happy about it because the kids pictured in the book look like they are having a lot of fun. There is a nice, illustrated list of cooking equipment and terms in the front of the book, and there are enough unadorned recipes (hamburger, pancakes, some breads) to make the book worthwhile, particularly for smart kids who can later apply the principles to more advanced recipes.

CORNFLEAK CHICKEN

Makes 4 servings
2 cups cornflakes
1/2 cup butter or margarine
1/2 teaspoon salt

1/4 teaspoon pepper
8 chicken drumsticks
Put cornflakes into a plastic bag. Close the bag tightly. Use a rolling pin to crush the cornflakes. Pour the cornflake crumbs into a pie plate. Put butter or margarine into the skillet. Put skillet on burner. With adult help, turn the burner to low heat. When butter or margarine melts, turn off the burner. Move skillet off burner. Stir in salt and pepper until well mixed. Rise the drumsticks under cold water. Use paper towels to dry them. Put chicken pieces on a piece of waxed paper.

Brush chicken with melted butter on all sides. Roll each piece in cornflake crumbs until coated. Put drumsticks into a baking pan. Be sure pieces don't touch each other. If there is any butter left over, pour it over the chicken. Put baking pan into oven. With adult help, turn oven to 375 degrees. Bake until chicken is done. This will take about 50 minutes. Chicken is done when it is easy to poke with a fork. Turn off the oven. With adult help, use hot pads to remove chicken from the oven. Use tongs to put drumsticks on the serving plate.

THE WONDERFUL WIZARD OF OZ COOK BOOK, by Monica Bayley; Macmillan, hardcover ($7.95)

Delicious recipes are on every page of this small, bright yellow book, which is almost as beguiling as Toto himself. Whether or not the food really has anything to do with the original Oz characters is a moot point because the charm and content of this new book are a delight. The author really knows how to cook, and each recipe is a jewel of old-fashioned goodness (not a canned soup in the bunch), replete with an Oz connection: Such lovelies as Aunt Em's Chicken and Dumplings, Home Again Pot Roast, Cowardly Lion Quivering Gelatin and Yellow Brick Cornbread make this a recommended read-and-cook for adults as well as for older children. Some of the recipes aren't detailed enough for very young cooks, but they are fine for older ones. All kids, however, love eating from this book. Of all the cookbooks tested, the food from this one got the most applause. Each set of directions is clearly set out on one page and most have the added distinction of a W.W. Denslow illustration from the original Wizard of Oz by Frank Baum. The author made only one slip in this otherwise wonderful book: She did not indicate how many people are served by each recipe. We have added that information in the two recipes that follow.

MAGIC LEMON PUDDING

Serves 4 to 6
3/4 cup sugar
3 tablespoons flour
1 cup milk
3 egg yolks, beaten
Juice of 2 lemons and grated peel
3 egg whites, beaten stiff
-Mix in order given. Place in greased pudding dish. Set dish in pan of hot water. Bake at 325 for 45 minutes. The custard will settle on the bottom and the sponge cake will rise to the top. It's magic!

AUNT EM'S CABBAGE SALAD

Serves 4 to 6
1/4 cup vinegar
1 tablespoon sugar
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon pepper
1/2 teaspoon dry mustard
1 tablespoon butter

1 egg, beaten
2 tablespoons cream
3 cups finely shredded cabbage
Put vinegar, sugar, salt, pepper, mustard and butter into a saucepan and heat to the boiling point. Add a few tablespoons of hot mixture to beaten egg, then stir egg mixture into hot mixture and cook and stir until mixture thickens and boils. Remove from heat. Add cream and beat. Pour over cabbage and stir well. Chill. Serve cold.

Easy to fall into 'food trap'

By ELEANOR OSTMAN
© Knight-Ridder Newspapers

Two can eat as cheaply as one these days. If a restaurant menu and restaurant compares with the cost of toothsome dishes for two prepared at home.

Newlyweds, especially those who haven't had a refrigerator, soon learn that eating takes a big bite out of the money they'd like to spend on more interesting tangibles. It gets especially expensive in the following food traps catch the unwary:

- Get home late from work, too tired to cook, and go out to eat.
- Get home late from work, too tired to cook, and stop for deli foods enroute.

- Get home late from work, too tired to cook, and send out for a $8 pizza.
- Go to the grocery store without a list and buy steaks, chops and frozen entrees because they're easy and you don't remember the ingredients for casserole recipes.

- Indulge in expensive snack items that won't add up to a decent meal, getting a wallet wallop at the check-counter.

Surviving high eating costs takes value judgment. Think of cost per serving. A pound of rice, about 60 cents contains 14 servings, just pennies each. A frozen stuffed potato side-dish is going to give two servings at a greater cost than buying a bag of fresh potatoes that will make dinners for a week or more.

Porterhouse or T-bone steaks equal about one serving per pound, but ground meat, boneless roast or round steak offer three to four servings per pound at a more affordable price than the best steaks. Less tender cuts are often more flavorful than the choice portions, as long as they're cooked to tenderness.

Slow, moist cooking, as in pot roasts or stews, tenderizes — as does braising in wine, barbecue sauce, soup or salad dressing. Marinating in acidic liquids such as vinegar, wine or citrus juice will turn tough meat. Cutting into strips for stir-frying makes meat chewable, as does pounding as for Swiss steak.

Value for pound means considering leftovers money in the refrigerator. Prairieland Pot Roast, cooked in french dressing, with vegetables and gravy, makes a weekend feast. Leftover roast beef, the shreds that are too small for sandwiches, can be stuffed into the curried peppers recipe suggested below.

These are liberated times. If both partners are employed outside the home, early in the morning you'd better come to a "no cookie, no eat" understanding.

"First one home starts dinner" should be a habit established early in the marriage. That will be easier to understand if there are foods in the freezer for the first one home when you get home late, too tired to cook. Whenever you're making a hot dish or soup or baking anything, double the recipe and you've got another meal ready to go. Even though Stouffers would charge you.

If you don't have one, invest in a dinner-for-two cookbook. Those books often suggest an entire menu — helpful because putting-together a balanced meal is one of the hardest thinking tasks for young cooks. While in the cookbook section, find a casserole cookbook that will stretch your watch dollars.

— offers of free recipes. For example, a free pamphlet, Fugal Feasts with Rice, can be obtained by sending a stamped, self-addressed business envelope to Rice Company, P.O. Box 740121, Houston, Tex. 77274, requesting Fugal Feasts.

Dear Abby

Her dates drop her after refusal

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
© Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I am 27, single, attractive and no prude. After a second or third date with a guy (whom I know only casually), he wants me to go back to his apartment, assuring me that his intentions are honorable, but my instincts tell me otherwise.

When I politely refuse, he gets mad, then grudgingly takes me home. I never hear from him again.

On those rare occasions when I do go back to his apartment, as soon as the front door is closed, he starts making physical advances. When I refuse them, he gets angry and then takes me home, and I never hear from him again, either.

Surely there must be a way to continue dating a guy without ending up in the bedroom before it is mutually agreeable. But how? Sign me ...

DEAR NO: If a guy drops you because you won't go to bed with him, his message is clear — all he wants is a bed partner. You're better off without him. (That's how you separate the men from the boys.) There are still some good men around who prefer a woman who won't go to bed with a guy she hardly knows. Hang in there!

DEAR ABBY: My 13-year-old grandson is a nice-looking, intelligent, quiet boy. He does very well in school but is not particularly athletic. Last year he began to have trouble with his peers, becoming the butt of their teasing. He has become withdrawn and a loner. His apparent unhappiness has become upsetting to his parents, although they try not to show it. How should this problem be handled? Is there some literature on the subject that we can give him to read?

— CONCERNED GRANNY

DEAR CONCERNED: Reading is not the answer. Although his parents may mean well by not showing their concern over their son's withdrawn behavior, they aren't helping him by ignoring it. The boy needs to verbalize his feelings, not hide them.

If he can't (or won't) talk to his parents, he should be counseled by an understanding professional who is not emotionally involved.

DEAR ABBY: I had a boyfriend who said he liked me, but I guess he liked another girl better because he broke a date with me to be with this other girl, Abby. I tried everything to get him back. I wore black satin jeans, makeup and high heels, but it didn't work. What should I do?

— FIFTH-GRADE WORRIES

DEAR WORRIES: You're much too young to be "dating," but make a note of what DIDN'T work to get a boy to like you. And thank your lucky stars for the valuable lesson you learned early in life.

DEAR ABBY: I am the mother of an exceptionally beautiful son. Believe me, this is not just another mother talking. My problem: Whenever I take this boy into a supermarket or walk him down the street, strangers stop and tell me how beautiful he is.

Of course, I'm proud and pleased, but almost everyone who sees him says, "He's much too beautiful to be a boy. He should have been a girl!"

Abby, although he's not yet 2, remarks like these are not healthy for a boy to hear.

Most people mean well, but they need to be reminded that repeated remarks can influence the development of a small child. If you agree, I hope you'll use this in your column.

— NERVOUS IN NORTHRIDGE

DEAR NERVOUS: I do, and I shall.

Meat buying pointers given

By PHIL RANDALL
Copley News Service

Many brides return home from their honeymoon unprepared for the weekly task of food shopping.

Proud owners of shiny new appliances and gourmet cookbooks (these novice homemakers often find their limited food expertise of little help when faced with the thousands of food products available).

The meat counter, for example, is stocked with rows of different types and cuts all looking identical.

Which is the best buy? How do I cook this? What cuts are most nutritious? How much do I buy? These may be some of the questions the bride is asking.

If that's your dilemma, too, take the time to learn the fundamentals of meat selection and preparation now. Not only will your studies save time and money, but perhaps tears and ruined meals, as well.

Here are some important facts to remember: First, all cuts fall into two categories: those that are naturally tender and those that are not.

Tenderness depends on the amount of activity the muscle performed in the living animal, plus the amount of marbling (fat) within the lean muscle meat. Only 22 percent of beef is tender, so it's in great demand. That's why you find these cuts priced at a premium and in short supply.

Meat from the remaining 78 percent of the steer presents an economical alternative. Less tender by nature, these cuts require time-consuming "softening" methods, such as stewing or braising. However, when these cuts are prepared with a natural meat tenderizer they can be broiled or baked with dry heat in much less time with tender results.

Firm's brand manager system results in innovative offers

By MARTIN SLOANE
 & United Feature Syndicate

Procter and Gamble was founded by William Procter and James Gamble in 1837. Today it is the nation's largest manufacturer of supermarket products.

Among its best-known brands are Ivory Soap, Tide, Crisco, Crest and Pampers.

How does Procter and Gamble handle its promotional offers? During a recent visit to Cincinnati, I explored that question with Robert Wehling, the company's division manager for general advertising.

SHOPPER: Who creates your coupon and refund promotions?

WEHLING: The idea for a promotion can come from the executive that manages a particular brand or from the advertising agency that represents the brand or from our sales management people or from my general advertising group.

SHOPPER: How long does it take to

Supermarket Shopper

Plan a promotion?
WEHLING: A cents-off coupon in the newspaper food section may require as little as six months of planning.

Refund offers are different because they take many forms and the redemption results are not as predictable. We usually do a lot of testing with a new refund or premium offer. The higher the value, the more we test.

A high-value offer may take as long as two years to plan and test before we roll out with it nationally.

SHOPPER: How did you test an offer like the free children's playhouse that required 40 proofs of purchase?

WEHLING: One of the ways we tested that offer was to show a sample of the advertisement to a panel of consumers and ask how many of them would send for it.

SHOPPER: You had some problems with the Pringles sports bag offer.

WEHLING: The sports bag was a learning experience. We ran into problems because the demand for the bag was heavier than anticipated and we had only one source of supply. This situation caused us to re-examine our fulfillment procedures and we made some changes.

SHOPPER: I sent for the sports bag and after waiting several weeks began to worry whether my order had been received. Then I got your post card telling me that there would be a delay. We refunders really appreciate this kind of consideration.

How do you know that the fulfillment companies are sending out your refunds promptly?

WEHLING: We set up a group within our own office, and during the offering period we each send in several refund requests.

SHOPPER: When refunders first saw the mail-in offer for a Coast soap coupon worth 24 cents, we were a little surprised. At that time the cost of postage was 15 cents. Most refunders didn't feel this left us much incentive to send for the coupon.

WEHLING: The Coast 24-cent coupon offer was merely a test that was run in a limited area. It should be understood that we test refund offers at various values.

When we run a national promotion offering a $1 refund, we have probably tested the same offer at the 50-cent, 75-cent and $1.50 levels.

SHOPPER: You were the first with a free children's playhouse, which other companies are now imitating. And we know that you recently experimented with $25, $50 and $100 refund offers.

Why is Procter and Gamble the leading innovator in consumer promotions? A gigantic company with more than $11 billion in sales might be expected to have an executive corps of "yes men" who don't take many promotional chances.

WEHLING: The reason we are leaders in promotional innovation is our brand manager system. Each brand has a manager; it is his or her job to know more about that brand than anyone else in the company. The brand manager is responsible for the promotion, distribution and sales of that brand. Despite the size of our company, the world of the brand manager revolves around that brand. He or she must be innovative in order to be successful.

Salt shaker now out of style in U. S.

By ENA NAUNTON
Knight-Ridder Newspapers

Pass the potassium, please." Somehow, that request doesn't sound like dinner-table chitchat, but it is in line with a proposed major change in American food habits.

Already watching dietary fats and sugar intakes, Americans are being advised by medical groups and the Food and Drug Administration to pay closer attention to the salt content in food and to quit shaking salt on their food at the table.

With the average intake of sodium (salt) from all food sources amounting to 2 to 2½ teaspoons per person per day, Americans are risking high blood pressure that can lead to stroke or heart attack or kidney failure.

Although there is still some question whether dietary salt actually causes hypertension (high blood pressure), it unquestionably aggravates a condition that millions of people do not even realize they have. High blood pressure shows no symptoms until it has done its damage.

People who already know, from medical examination, that they have high blood pressure also know how difficult it is to live in a salt-addicted society while trying to restrict salt.

The FDA figures "practically all" of the 18,000 products in the nation's supermarkets contain sodium "to one degree or another."

The national taste buds are accustomed to salt. Snacks usually are salty; even sweet things, from cookies to chocolate, contain salt to enhance the flavor.

The alternative, salt-substitute manufacturers say, is potassium chloride.

Potassium chloride is the principal ingredient, sometimes constituting 97 percent, found in salt substitutes. Like sodium chloride, better known as salt, potassium chloride is a naturally occurring substance. Some potassium is essential to life. People who have high blood pressure and take diuretics to increase their elimination of sodium, usually need to take potassium.

replacement medicine or need to eat a diet rich in fruits, such as bananas, raisins and oranges, that are rich in potassium.

But for the public at large to try to replace all salt in the diet with potassium is virtually impossible, given the wide use of salt in food production, from freezing and canning to meat processing. It also could be hazardous, especially to older people or those who have undetected kidney disease.

Some salt-substitute manufacturers are beginning to publish recipes for using the high-potassium substitutes in place of salt for cooking. While this might be useful to people making a conscious effort to cut down on salt, the family cook should consider the health and age range of the family before going overboard in using salt substitutes. And the family that already liberally shakes salt on food after it is served would do better to drop that habit than to become heavy potassium-shaker users.

Young, healthy people who are not taking any medicine probably can use salt-substitutes without worry, said Dr. David Jaffe, a kidney disease specialist at the University of Miami School of Medicine. But anyone with heart or kidney disease should not use salt substitutes without checking with a doctor. Elderly people would be wise to get medical advice, too.

"As one gets older, kidney function normally goes down," said Jaffe. "This is not usually much of a problem, because body tissues get smaller and there is less of a load to the kidneys. But the elderly patient, trying to watch blood pressure by not using salt and having a lot of this potassium could be taking on a problem."

Potassium Excess affect the body's chemical balance, especially as it regulates heartbeat. Changes in heart rhythm can be extremely dangerous. Undiagnosed kidney disease could cause the kidneys to have a diminished ability to get rid of potassium overload, Jaffesaid.

Diet called factor in disease

ENGLEWOOD CLIFFS, N.J. — March is National Nutrition Month — an opportunity to provide the public with current information about nutrition and food selection for health.

Sponsored by the American Dietetic Association, Nutrition Month is also a time to examine and modify diets for healthful living.

Among many health-related diseases linked to diet, heart disease is perhaps the most studied. Some years ago, when it became evident that diet was one of the factors involved in coronary heart disease, a number of new studies were undertaken. And now, results are beginning to come in.

One study, known as the Seven Countries Study, reports on the 10-year experience of 12,768 men who have been eating the typical diet of their country: United States, Netherlands, Finland, Italy, Greece, Yugoslavia and Japan. The results showed large variations in the amounts of total fats and of saturated fats eaten.

Dr. Ancel Keys from the University of Minnesota and his colleagues found two noteworthy points: The death rate from coronary disease is closely related to the amount of calories in the diet from saturated fat, and the ratio of dietary saturated fats to unsaturated fats is extremely important.

(There was only one coronary death among 688 men on Crete, where both the levels of saturated fat and total fat are low, compared to 78 deaths among 817 in Finland, where a higher amount and ratio of saturated fats is consumed.)

While these results do not prove a cause and effect relationship between dietary fats, cholesterol and heart disease, they do suggest moderate dietary changes would be wise, especially if a person's serum cholesterol is elevated (about 220 milligrams), and there are other risk factors present, such as a family history of heart disease, smoking, hypertension or obesity.

Who's ready for yakburger?

PEKING (UPI) — Now the news everyone has been waiting to hear — China's yak exports are up. That's right, yaks.
 What's more, yak meat contains less fat and more protein than beef, according to the official Xinhua news agency.

Someone must be eating yak meat. China exported 1,400 of the long-haired animals to Hong Kong and Southeast Asia in the first 2 1/2 months of 1982, a 40 percent increase over the same period last year, the news agency said.
 Can yakburgers be far behind?

Pipe costs keep ditch dangerous

By SUSAN GALLAGHER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Several South Park residents believe the irrigation ditches alongside Ramage Street are hazardous and should be covered, but money is an obstacle.

Ventura Salinas, a spokesman for the Twin Falls neighborhood group, says a retired woman living in South Park was bruised badly recently when she fell into one of the ditches. Salinas contends someone could be hurt by falling against the rough edge of exposed, unconnected irrigation pipe.

And along with posing a safety hazard, he says, the ditches — 12 to 18 inches deep — are a place for debris to accumulate.

Neighborhood residents have asked the city to complete the pipe system, and then, the residents will cover the ditches with dirt.

But city officials say that as a matter of policy, the city cannot install the pipe. And without the pipe, the ditches cannot be covered.

The city and the residents interpret differently the terms spelled out several years ago when the city used a federal grant of about $430,000 for improvements on Ramage and Sidney streets.

City officials say that in making those improvements, which consisted principally of sidewalks and curbs; the city agreed to replace old pipe with new, but it did not agree to install pipe where none existed.

There were unconnected lengths of pipe before the federally funded improvements, officials say, and there are unconnected lengths now because the city adhered to its policy, and the residents have not chosen to finish the pipe system. Several years ago, the city divested itself of any administrative involvement with irrigation systems.

Salinas says he understood that construction work was to include improvement of the irrigation system, and ultimately, that would involve finishing the installation of pipe. The city's work included replacing old pipe with new, larger pipe, he says, and increasing the width of the ditches. Salinas says it doesn't make sense for the city to install lengths of new pipe that are of no use unless they're linked to form a complete system.

He also points out that Sidney Street has covered ditches, while Ramage does not. Apparently, he says, that is the result of the two projects being handled under separate contracts.

While two contracts were involved, Twin Falls officials say each project was administered in a manner consistent with city policy.

Residents of Ramage Street have not organized themselves as an irrigation district, and water rarely flows in the ditches, Salinas says. Residents have grown accustomed to using domestic water for lawn sprinkling, and as a last resort, he says they would be satisfied to simply fill the ditches, regardless of whether the pipe system is completed.

However, city officials say that can't be done because of possible legal complications if a resident eventually wants irrigation-system water.

It's ironic, Salinas says, that residents apparently must bear the burden of finishing the pipe system.

"People can't afford to pay for it," he says. "This is a low-income area. That's why they (the city) got the grant" for the sidewalks and other improvements.

Box Canyon bill on way to governor

By BRUCE HAMMOND
Times-News writer

BOISE — A controversial House bill designed to limit recreational use and scenic protection of Box Canyon Creek near Hagerman cleared the Legislature with bipartisan support Tuesday.

The measure only requires Gov. John Evans' signature before taking effect.

Troul farmer Earl Hardy, who owns nearly all the land surrounding the pristine aquifer spring, is seeking a trade with the state.

He wants the stream's protected status to be shortened so he can build a hydroelectric plant along the stream in the lower portion of the canyon. In exchange, the state would get control of the upper third of the canyon.

Box Canyon Creek is the nation's 11th largest spring, and the surrounding canyon has been recognized as existing in a uniquely untrampered condition.

"When I received a letter from Mr. Hardy yesterday (Monday) asking me to support House Bill 766, I decided to oppose it," said Senate Minority Leader Ron Twiggear, D-Boise. "Foremost in my mind is the fact that it is special-interest legislation being sought by only one man."

"But today, Mr. Hardy freely gave me a letter for introduction into the Senate Journal that goes far beyond the negotiations required in the bill," he continued. "He's agreed to relinquish control of the land above and surrounding the canyon as added insurance this area won't be degraded by future development nearby."

"He does own this property. He has the right to destroy it, he has the permit to destroy it," Twiggear said. "But I am now convinced that this man, who has done much right here in the Boise to restore buildings like the Egyptian Theater, has a genuine sensitivity to preserve things."

Groups from the Hagerman Valley and the Idaho Conservation League have continually opposed Hardy's 11-year fight to develop Box Canyon.

Hardy repeatedly has said that if negotiations for his proposed exchange are not started, he will develop trout ponds in the canyon in order to protect his water right.

The bill would direct state agencies to attempt some type of exchange, but it does not bind them to the proposal if it is determined not to be in the public interest.

Hardy holds a water-right permit that would allow him to build five fish ponds on the stream. The permit expires March 1, 1983.

At the root of the opposition, said Sen. Israel Merrill, D-Blackfoot, is the fact that the bill deletes reference to the state's ownership of the streambed. Conservation League members fear that could undermine the public-benefit intent in similar legislation protecting four other springs including Niagara Springs and Malad Gorge — plus several lakes.

But 30 of the 34 senators present for the vote followed Twiggear's lead.

"I, too, originally opposed this legislation," said Sen. John Barker, R-Boise. "But there is no question that Mr. Hardy can build a trout hatchery, and that he would develop the canyon rather than lose his water right."

"For years, I led Boy Scouts on hikes in that canyon," he said. "It does remain just as it did before settlers arrived; primarily because it's isolated and cattle haven't been allowed into it."

"I also feel that if we let him build this hydro-plant, it could help southern Idaho's power shortage in future years," Barker said.

The only Magic Valley senator opposing the bill was John Peavey, D-Carry. But Peavey qualified his vote by saying that while he personally believed it was "the proper move," he opposed it in accordance with his constituents' demands.

Remarks stun power planning council

DWR boss: Salmon secondary to irrigation development

By RON ZELLAR
Times-News writer

BOISE — Idaho will not forego irrigation development to supply salmon to Oregon and Washington, the state water resource director said Tuesday.

Speaking to the Northwest Power Planning Council, Kenneth Dunn said the state, on its own, has established minimum stream flows on the Snake River and developed the Salmou River and the main stem of the Clearwater River.

Any further measures to improve anadromous fish runs, Dunn said, would be subject to the state's water plan and would depend on actions taken elsewhere to assure that more of the fish return to Idaho.

"We have to know what efforts are being made downstream to allow fish to come up," he said.

Dunn was one of more than 30 speakers at a daylong hearing held by the council to review recommendations by the governor to carry out water policy in cooperation with the state's Water Resources Board, while the Department of Fish and Game manages wildlife habitat.

The use of Idaho's remaining 700,000 acre-feet of unclaimed reservoir storage capacity to aid the movement of salmon to the ocean, as suggested by fisheries managers, would be contrary to state policies on the development of new agricultural land, he said.

Within that total is 80,000 acre-feet in Ririe Reservoir, near Idaho Falls, a key element in plans to bring supplemental irrigation water to the Salmon Falls Division project in southern Twin Falls County.

Dunn urged the council to consider building a new storage reservoir on the Welsor River to obtain the water it wants for fish enhancement.

Evans expressed hope afterward that the Water Resources Board would see things differently, noting that Idaho has a stake in assuring adequate flows for returning salmon.

"I would guess there is an alternative plan available to this council that would concentrate the fishery in Washington and Oregon and forget about upstream flows," he warned.

Spokesmen for the Idaho Water Users Association and the Idaho Power Co. also criticized the wildlife recommendations. State senators of support came from fish fishermen, environmentalists and the mayor of Salmon.

Don Barclay, the Idaho Power vice president for planning and resources, said a recommendation to increase minimum stream flows below Hells Canyon Dam could cost the company's customers between $29 million and $40 million a year.

Furthermore, Barclay said the recommendation violated a 1980 agreement the utility signed with Fish and Game, stating that the department would be satisfied with mitigation terms and would not seek additional concessions.

Monty Richards, a Fish and Game spokesman, said the higher flow levels were included to illustrate what professionals thought were necessary, but they still must be considered on a case-by-case basis.

He urged the council to work with Fish and Game to seek "mutually acceptable flows" for fish in Hells Canyon.

Turnabout benches bill for extra district judge

By BRUCE HAMMOND
Times-News writer

BOISE — For a moment, it looked like the Magic Valley area was going to gain an additional district judge.

But the outcome took an abrupt turn Tuesday when Sen. Dean Van Engelen, R-Burley, dropped the roll call to explain his decision and then voted "no."

Several other senators immediately asked to change their votes from "yes" to "no," resulting in Lt. Gov. Phil Batt pounding his gavel and ordering the Senate secretary to call for a new vote.

"I find it tough, and with great hesitation, to speak out against this bill, since it addresses my home district," Van Engelen said. "I know a lot of people think it's not a good idea."

"But our population has not grown much. We did add a new judge just a short time ago, and I just don't see the need for this."

Sen. John Barker, R-Boise, who sponsored the measure in the Senate, noted that it passed the House, 60-9. In his opening speech, he cited increased case loads in the Fifth Judicial District and offered several letters that indicated there are problems with disqualified judges and backlogged criminal case calendars.

"The formal debate against the bill came from Sen. Roger Fairchild, R-Fruitland, who claimed the Third Judicial District in his area deserved more immediate attention than the Fifth District because of faster rising populations and case loads.

"I believe I easily had 15 or so votes on my side before Sen. Van Engelen stood up to explain his vote," Barker said. "I'm not faulting him, but it certainly put me in a bind."

However, the measure is not totally dead because both Barker and Senate

Override vote slated Thursday

HAILEY — Blaine County School District residents will go to the polls this Thursday, March 25, from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. in a special election to decide the fate of a $540,000 override levy.

All Blaine County residents 18 and older are eligible to vote. Registration is not required, although voters will have to sign an election oath to certify they are residents of the county.

Voting will take place at four locations: Carey School, Behrman Elementary School, Haley Elementary School and Heningway Elementary School in Ketchikan.

"A news story about the override election in Tuesday's Times-News did not report when the election would be held.

Agencies to stagger reviews

Area land swap plan faces delay

By RON ZELLAR
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The U.S. Forest Service and Bureau of Land Management have agreed to delay consideration of land transfers in southern Idaho between the two agencies.

Public input on the proposal generally has supported the land exchanges, which are designed to reduce the agencies' management costs, according to BLM and Forest Service officials.

But meeting last week in Boise, public land managers decided to first develop specific transfer proposals in northern Idaho, where the BLM administrators only scattered tracts.

The central portion of the state will be studied next. And federal land boundaries in the southern and southeastern portions of Idaho will not be reviewed until at least 1984, according to Paul Barker, the Sawtooth National Forest supervisor.

Most of the more than 130 individuals who submitted opinions to officials of the Shoshone and Burley BLM districts and the Sawtooth National Forest supported the concept, but they favored land transfers on a small scale over a number of years, Barker said.

Residents of Bannock and Oneida counties submitted a petition to BLM officials opposing any land transfers in their area.

The state Legislature, reacting to concerns expressed by cattle and sheep ranchers, passed a resolution urging the two agencies not to approve any exchanges until the public had adequate time for input.

How quickly the subsequent studies are completed will depend, in part, on the severity of budget cutbacks in the coming years, Barker said.

The second phase of the study, in central Idaho, includes the Fairfield and Ketchikan ranger districts.

South Hills Forest lands, as well as the Burley and Shoshone BLM districts, would be included in the third phase of the study.

Nick Cozanos, the Burley District BLM manager, whose district includes a portion of Oneida County, agreed to recon the decision to proceed first in northern Idaho and to limit the scope of the exchanges was representative of the comments received from the public during February and the first week in March.

Land exchanges between the two agencies also are being considered in other states, according to Barker.

Nevada is among the states studying new federal land boundaries, but so far, the proposals center on lands near the California border, and they do not include the Shoshone district in the northeastern corner of the state, he said.

Forest Service facing more cutbacks

By RON ZELLAR
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Sawtooth National Forest visitors probably will not notice many changes this summer, but federal funding cutbacks may trim a fourth of the forest's Twin Falls-based work force.

Forest supervisor Paul Barker says that budget planning, now under way, indicates an estimated 29 positions must be eliminated from the payroll by October 1984.

That number includes 18 of the 77 permanent positions at the forest supervisor's office off Addison Avenue East. The remaining cuts would be scattered among ranger districts and the Sawtooth National Recreation Area.

Congress is now at work on the U.S. Forest Service's fiscal 1983 budget. Barker says, and some of the cuts could come as early as this fall.

"You can be sure we are looking very carefully whenever someone transfers or retires to see if we have anyone else we can move over to fill that position."

The forest headquarters will bear the brunt of new cutbacks because the four ranger districts took the majority of the cuts during the past two years, Barker says.

One of the top assistant positions will be eliminated, he says, as will individuals involved in planning, wildlife management, public information, landscape architecture, real-estate evaluation, civil engineering and radio maintenance.

"We think we can keep everything going, but the people we have left are going to have to run a little bit," he says.

Only minor cuts were needed for the present fiscal year, Barker says. Included was a reduction in the number of seasonal employees to clean campgrounds and maintain trails.

Fire crews also will report to work later this summer, shortening the length of time available for training before the start of the fire season.

The forest's budget has dropped from $13.7 million to $9.9 million in the past two years, Barker says, but $7 million of the 1980 budget was devoted to the purchase of land and scenic elements for the Sawtooth National Recreation Area.

In terms of staff and equipment dollars, the budget remained nearly constant. But that required cuts to accurate salary increases, avoid inflation in the cost of supplies and equipment, Barker says.

Archbishop will lead celebration

TWIN FALLS — Archbishop Patrick Flores of San Antonio, Texas, will be the guest of honor at a statewide fiesta this Friday, March 26, at St. Edward's Roman Catholic Church in Twin Falls.

The event will mark the 450th anniversary of the appearance of Our Lady of Guadalupe in a poor peasant, Juan Diego, in Guadalupe, Mexico.

The celebration is being sponsored by the Northwest Region for Hispanic Affairs of the Catholic Church. Bishop Sylvester Treinen of the Diocese of Idaho and Father Perry Doodis, pastor of St. Edward's, will co-host the event.

The archbishop and bishop will be honored at a social hour at The Guadalupe Center, 630 Falls Ave. in Twin Falls, at 4:30 p.m. The public is invited to attend.

Flores will be the principal celebrant of a mass at 7:30 p.m. at St. Edward's Church, 161 Sixth Ave. E. The mass will be in Spanish and accompanied by six guitarists from

Twin Falls. Burley, and Rupert. Readings will be bilingual.

Following the mass, an open-house social hour will be held at the church, featuring a Mexican program presented by the University of Idaho folklore dancers.

According to the complaint: Cheri Garza was proceeding west on Castledorf Road, approximately a half-mile west of the Fairview intersection, when she passed another westbound vehicle. As she returned to the right lane, her car struck another vehicle's gravel pile in the center of the road.

The lawsuit claims that Garza was unable to see the pile because there were no warning markers nearby. The plaintiff also says the gravel pile was located in a slightly depressed area of the road, thereby making it difficult for westbound traffic to see it.

The lawsuit seeks $10,000 for past and future medical costs, $25,000 as compensation for Garza's pain and suffering, $40,000 for compensation for the woman's subsequent disability and $1,050 for the loss of her car.

Aid sought for man needing new kidney

TWIN FALLS — Financial assistance is being sought for Tony Gamet, a former Twin Falls resident who is expected to undergo a kidney transplant within two months.

Gamet, an Idaho Falls resident who celebrated his 21st birthday March 5, learned earlier this month that a transplant was necessary, according to his sister, Cherrell Jordan of Hansen.

Jordan has established a trust fund at First Security Bank in Twin Falls to help cover an array of expenses. She said the family has "virtually no money for the operation and related expenses, such as travel to and from the University of Utah Medical Center in Salt Lake City. Jordan said the amount of those expenses is unknown.

Gamet, who was born in Twin Falls and attended Twin Falls High School, has had to discontinue his studies at Idaho State University because of his health. Jordan said her brother has suffered diabetes for 15 years, but despite his health problems, he has participated in 20-mile walks-tours sponsored by the March of Dimes and was a top fund-raiser consistently.

Free health tests set for kids

TWIN FALLS — The Region Five Adult-Child Development Center will offer a free screening clinic for young children next Tuesday, March 30.

The screening is meant to identify children, ages 1 through 5, who may have developmental delays in physical development, language, speech, motor or self-help skills. Vision and hearing also will be tested where possible.

Officials of the center, located at 803 Harrison St. in Twin Falls, urge parents who suspect their children may be delayed in one or more of the tested areas, to participate in the screening. Treatment is usually more effective when problems are identified in the early stages.

The screening will be by appointment only. Parents should call 734-4000, extension 280, for an appointment.

Joint at breakfast, a year in jail by dinner

TWIN FALLS — A Twin Falls man, arrested early Tuesday for smoking marijuana in a restaurant, pleaded guilty to the offense later in the day and was ordered to serve one year in jail.

David Leon Lawrence, 36, Route 5, Twin Falls, was charged with possession of a controlled substance, marijuana, which is a misdemeanor under Idaho law and carries a maximum penalty of one year in jail.

Hearing the case in Fifth District Magistrate Court, Judge Melvin Edwards made note of Lawrence's prior criminal record as he issued the maximum sentence for the offense.

According to Twin Falls police,

Lawrence was smoking a hand-rolled cigarette at the Depot Grill, 545 Shoshone St. S., at about 1:30 a.m. An officer reported that the cigarette smelled like marijuana, and he asked the defendant what he was smoking.

The defendant replied that he was smoking tea leaves, police said.

County, road district sued over accident

TWIN FALLS — A Twin Falls couple is alleging that the county and the Buhl Highway District were responsible for a July 1981 automobile accident, and they are seeking more than $76,000 in damages.

In a lawsuit filed last week in Fifth District Court, Cheryl Lyman Garza and Epifanio Garza claim the accident was caused by an unmarked pile of gravel left on Castledorf Road.

According to the complaint: Cheri Garza was proceeding west on Castledorf Road, approximately a half-mile west of the Fairview intersection, when she passed another westbound vehicle. As she returned to the right lane, her car struck another vehicle's gravel pile in the center of the road.

The lawsuit claims that Garza was unable to see the pile because there were no warning markers nearby. The plaintiff also says the gravel pile was located in a slightly depressed area of the road, thereby making it difficult for westbound traffic to see it.

The lawsuit seeks $10,000 for past and future medical costs, $25,000 as compensation for Garza's pain and suffering, $40,000 for compensation for the woman's subsequent disability and $1,050 for the loss of her car.

Two arrested for burglary

GOODING — Two Gooding men were arrested and charged with first-degree burglary Monday in Gooding and related on their own recognizance. A preliminary hearing date is pending.

Narda Exton said the men were stopped after a sheriff's deputy saw them throwing items out of their car on a gravel pile in the center of the road.

The two men were arraigned Monday in Fifth District Magistrate Court in Gooding and related on their own recognizance. A preliminary hearing date is pending.

Judge

Minority Leader Ron Twiegler, D-Boise, voted against the measure the second time around as a way of having the bill reconsidered today.

Barker said he intends to offer detailed debate during reconsideration to try and turn around the 5-2 defeat dealt the bill Tuesday afternoon.

The Fifth Judicial District has five judges. The two administrators of the district, Judges Douglas Kramer of Halley and Phillip Becker of Gooding, held for a sixth judge, to be located in Jerome or Gooding. And in support, the Jerome County commissioners offered a letter saying they would budget for remodeling the Jerome district courtroom and chambers.

Under the proposal, an additional Fifth District court judge would not be appointed until July 1, 1983, in order to allow time for local authorities to solve budgeting and space problems.

Christmas Eve burglar gets probation

Donovan: Some Cowboys got big raises to prevent attendance

By LARRY DORMAN
Knight-Ridder Newspapers

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. — A Dallas Cowboy player charged Cowboy management Monday with issuing huge pay raises to six second- and third-year players to keep them from attending the National Football League Players Association convention.

By obtaining information from closed-door sessions at Tuesday's NFLPA convention, Knight-Ridder Newspapers has learned that Cowboy line-man Pat Donovan told an assembly of 527 NFL players that the Cowboys issued pay raises amounting to as much as 400 percent to players who were scheduled to attend the NFLPA convention to discuss the union demands of a percentage of the owners' gross revenues. Three of the six players subsequently canceled hotel and airline reservations.

Donovan began his remarks in a light vein. "Pat Donovan of America's Team," he said, prompting laughter and catcalls. "I've just finished negotiating with America's Management and America's Management is sharp, and right now what they're doing in Dallas is probably indicative of what you're going to face when you go back to your cities."

Donovan's tone was serious as he continued. "There were about six guys signed up to come to the convention — they had plane tickets and what not — who called during the week and canceled because our management gave them right at the base salary that's published in 'We Are The Game.'"

"They're second- and third-year players who weren't making anything, and some of them went from $40,000 to $160,000. That's a lot of money for these guys, and when I go back to try and talk to these guys about walking out, I need some ammunition."

Donovan, who did not name the players involved, said the Cowboys had a strategy of giving raises "to Superstar players, plus a few second and third year and guys who were backups last year" to assure them of enough leverage to run the system. "And tell the union to just go to hell," Donovan said.

The charges by Donovan were just part of a lively, screeching session as the union members discussed their positions on the new proposed collective bargaining agreement that calls for players to receive a percentage of owners' gross revenues, which grew markedly with Monday's signing of a new network television contract worth approximately $2.1 billion.

There were some heated exchanges, some criticism of NFLPA executive director Ed Garvey and some new revelations of breakthroughs in the negotiations of a percentage of the gross, a proposal management spokesman Jack Donlan has repeatedly dismissed as "out of the question."

There also was a proposal by San Francisco co-player rep Guy Benjamin to either freeze or roll back ticket prices as a show of good faith to the fans by the union.

Mostly there were renewed signs of unity among the players present for the convention. A straw vote on the percentage of the gross concept was taken and only seven players indicated disagreement.

In one of the few signs of discord during the closed session, Buffalo Bill guard Reggie McKenzie rose to bitterly deride Garvey. "In the last 12 years, the only thing that has not changed about the union is the absolute director," McKenzie said. Asked if he had expected to run Garvey out of office, McKenzie replied, "I had my fingers crossed."

Many questions in the session dealt with the union's ability to work out an agreement and avoid a strike. NFLPA President Gene Upshaw revealed for the first time that breakthroughs had been made.

"The good news is that we've already negotiated on percentage of the gross," Upshaw said. "The bad news is that we haven't gotten it yet... but we have been negotiating on it. We have them on our territory."

Responding to a player's statement that everything he had read indicated the owners' change on an percentage, Upshaw replied, "They say 'no' in the paper but they don't say 'no' at the table. They want you to believe that they're not even talking about it."

Eller briefs owners on revised drug, alcohol abuse program

PHOENIX (UPI) — National Football League owner Tuesday received a report from former All-Pro defensive end Carl Eller, a revised drug addict, on the league's reform five-point program for drug and alcohol abuse.

Eller, a former star with the Minnesota Vikings who ended his career in Seattle, last year kicked a cocaine habit that was costing him $100,000 a year. He's now working with the NFL as a consultant on drug abuse. The revised program, announced by Eller, commissioner Pete Rozelle and Charles Jackson, who oversees the NFL's drug program, includes:

1. A medical aide program, providing professional rehabilitation for players who suffer from drug abuse or alcoholism.

2. Immediate reporting to the league office of any incident involving the improper use of drugs or alcohol.

3. A requirement for each club to provide an initial and final inventory of all club prescriptions and physician dispensed medication, including invoices for all prescription drugs purchased during the season.

4. The requirement for each player to notify his club physician promptly of any prescription medication obtained from other than club sources.

5. The authority for the commissioner to take disciplinary action, including suspension against club persons who fail to comply with the program.

"I tried to get them to understand that this was an illness affecting a number of ballplayers. It's hard to say what percentage of players use drugs since we haven't taken any kind of survey. But I would imagine the figures are the same as for society in general."

Eller said his problems developed from his use of alcohol to his use of cocaine.

"The problem began for me with drinking in high school," he explained. "I started smoking grass after college and then got into cocaine as a pro. It was running me a couple of thousand a week, roughly $100,000 a year. I ended up in bankruptcy at the end of my career."

"I made a lot of money playing football and I played a lot of years but it's painful to look back. I did all that work for monetary gain, and I lost it all. It's just not there."

Rozelle also indicated that the drug abuse problem could affect the integrity of pro football.

"If there's a chance of a problem we ask that a player be examined and get an evaluation from a qualified clinician," Rozelle said. "If a player shows he has a problem, we give him the full opportunity to take advantage of help."

Eller said the element of society, with the cost of drugs like cocaine, a man can become financially straitened and it could cause problems with integrity. There's a need for more money to support the habit and the temptation is there. It makes a player very vulnerable.

Cooney plans to resume sparring in 2 weeks

NEW YORK (UPI) — Top-rated heavyweight contender GERRY COONEY, who is injured left shoulder, forced the postponement of his March 15 title fight with World Boxing Council champion Larry Holmes to June 11, said Tuesday that he will resume training in two weeks.

Cooney, 25-0 with 22 knockouts, has come under heavy criticism — mostly from Holmes — for losing to the almost three-month delay. The Huntington, N.Y. resident, however, said it didn't bother him.

"I know what my problem is, so it doesn't matter to me," said the soft-spoken Cooney. "I know I had a shoulder injury. I'm getting better. I don't care what the fan or anybody says. It doesn't matter."

"June 12 will be St. Patrick's Days," added the 6-foot-5 Irishman, who will weigh in for the bout to be held at Caesars Palace in Las Vegas, Nev.

Valenzuela joins LA
VERO BEACH, Fla. (UPI) — Fernando Valenzuela reported to the Los Angeles Dodgers spring training camp late Tuesday night, officially ending one of the most celebrated holdouts in baseball history.
Valenzuela flew from Los Angeles to Atlanta and then to West Palm Beach, Fla., 60 miles from the Dodgers' camp. He was mobbed by more than 250 people at the West Palm Airport and was then driven by a friend to Vero Beach.
He checked into his camp at 7:30 p.m. MST and went directly to his room, refusing to talk to more than 30 media representatives who had waited all day for his arrival.
He announced through a friend that he'd hold a news conference this morning and would then work out for the first time this year with his teammates.
Valenzuela and his agent demanded $250,000 from the Dodgers this year, while the Dodgers were firm in their offer of $100,000.
After a 22-day holdout, Valenzuela announced Monday he would report to camp but would not sign the contract.

SAN SICARIO, Italy (UPI) — Cindy Nelson of the United States won a Super Giant Slalom ski race Tuesday in a time of 1:30.97 on a fast, icy course.
The experimental race did not count towards the World Cup but opened the final meet of this winter's Cup season at San Siro and nearby Montgenevre, just over the border in France.
The West German Epplo sisters placed second and third with Irene — second in the women's World Cup standings — clocking 1:31.22 and Maria 1:31.74.
The super giant is a new discipline being tested before it is included in next season's World Cup competition. It is part traditional giant slalom, part downhill.
Christin Cooper of Sun Valley placed fourth in 1:31.90.

Some types of income may be tax free in '81

Distributed by United Press International

Not all investment income is taxable in 1981, notes Commerce Clearing House, national reporting authority on tax and business law.

For example, for the 1981 tax year, the first $200 of an individual's combined qualified dividend and interest income is excluded from gross income. On a joint return, it's $400 regardless of which spouse has legal title to the investment.

The exclusion will return to $100 of dividend income only in 1982, and $300 on a joint return.

In addition, an individual can take advantage of a one-in-a-lifetime exclusion of up to $1,000 ($2,000 on a joint return) of interest earned on a tax-exempt savings certificate.

To qualify, the one-year certificate must be issued after September 30, 1981, and before 1983 by a qualified savings institution.

These "All-Savers" certificates must be available in denominations of $500 and have an interest yield equal to 70 percent of the interest on one-year U.S. Treasury bills. A qualified savings institution includes any bank, savings and loan, or credit union regulated by state or federal law.

This tax break primarily benefits individuals but also available to an estate receiving the certificate at the death of the decedent.

Tax tips — 8

Editor's note: This is the eighth in a series of 13 articles designed to help persons filing income tax returns deal with changes in the federal income tax law effective for returns for 1981.

The series is prepared by Commerce Clearing House of Chicago, a leading reporting authority on tax and business law.

Although the exclusion is not available to a partnership, a partnership can obtain a certificate, with the interest excludable by the individual partners to the extent of their available exclusion.

A taxpayer may not take an interest deduction for a loan obtained to purchase an All-Savers certificate. In addition, no portion of interest earned on a certificate can be used on the $200-$400 dividends-interest exclusion even if the exclusion has been lost to the taxpayer.

If any portion of a certificate is redeemed early, the taxpayer may not exclude interest from the certificate in the year of redemption, and any interest excluded from gross income in an earlier year must be included in gross income for the current tax year.

Auction set by Treasury for notes

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Treasury Department Tuesday announced the auction of $3.25 billion in seven year notes to raise new cash and, as expected, the cancellation of its 20-year bond usually issued at this time.

The notes will mature April 15, 1989, in minimum denominations of $1,000, and will raise new cash for the Treasury.

The seven-year notes will be auctioned Wednesday, March 31.

The cancellation of the 20-year bond was expected because the Treasury Department has exhausted its statutory $70 billion authority to issue long bonds with a yield greater than 4.25 percent.

Although Congress is expected to eventually widen the authority as requested, until it does so the government can sell no more long bonds.

Your Spine & Health: TRACTOR-BACK

by Dr. Ludwig C. Landwehr

"Tractor Back" A relatively new, yet common ailment among our farmers, causing much discomfort, pain and many lost working hours. If today's farmer still would work with horses, he would have to sit on the seat of a tractor for 8 to 10 hours, yet because his tractor doesn't need the seat, the farmer works himself almost twice as long. The bouncing, jolting and concentration over such a long period of time will fatigue the muscular system to such an extent, that the whole skeletal framework finally sags, causing the "pressure" and "strain" resulting loss of proper body mechanics, with its: lower back pain, shoulder joints, neckaches and headaches.

A regular check with his doctor of chiropractic and therapy, yielding relief from pain and distress, as well as avoiding major chronic ailments in their later will, for every farmer, add to his own comfort and well being.

(One of a series of articles published in the public interest to explain and illustrate the practice of scientific chiropractic, written by Dr. Ludwig C. Landwehr, M.D., West Chiropractic Clinic, 717 Main Ave., W. Twin Falls, Tel. 733-0323.)

Control battle at end

BOISE (UPI) — Two Florida-based insurance companies competing to gain control of one of Idaho's largest insurance carriers have apparently settled their differences.

An agreement was announced Monday by officials from John Alden Life Insurance Co. and George Washington Life Insurance Co. The agreement will permit John Alden to assume control of Continental Life and Accident in return for compensation.

Under terms of the settlement, which will become final Friday, George Washington agreed to give up the fight to take control of Continental and to stop all legal action designed to stymie takeover attempts by John Alden.

The two firms had been in and out of federal court and the Idaho insurance director's office all winter in a hard-fought battle over control of Continental.

In return, officials said George Washington would receive $1.5 million in compensation from John Alden and $500,000 from Continental. George Washington had already paid about $8 million to purchase 33 percent of Continental's stock.

But John Alden officials announced Monday they had purchased 52 percent of the firm's stock for $7.80 per share. They agreed to pay that same price for any outstanding shares until April 7.

State Insurance Director Trent Woods welcomed the settlement, saying it would relieve the strain on Continental policyholders and would work to his agency to move on to other work.

Continental is the second largest insurance company based in Idaho, with assets of about $3 billion. About 40 percent of its 2,200 policyholders reside in the Gem State, officials said.

Franchises in banking latest offer

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — First Interstate Bancorporation has announced plans to franchise its banks — the nation's largest multistate banking system — in the first such program in the history of American banking.

Joseph J. Pinola, chairman and chief executive officer of Los Angeles-based First Interstate, said franchised banks would be granted the use of the First Interstate name, but retain local management and ownership.

"They would acquire state of the art products and services, enhance their market positions, have access to sophisticated technology without large capital outlays, and position themselves for growth and survival in the financial services industry," said Pinola.

The franchising concept has never before been applied in banking, even though franchising was responsible for 32 percent of last year's total retail sales.

Pinola said franchising represents one of First Interstate's efforts for adapting to rapid changes taking place in the financial services market, including and increasingly deregulated environment and the growth of competition from non-bank financial supermarkets.

"From an industry perspective, this franchising concept offers a major opportunity to preserve the nation's independent banking system," Pinola said. "Banks of all sizes will be able to provide levels of service and products heretofore offered by only the nation's largest banking entities."

Irate Maine spud farmers in protest

HOULTON, Maine (UPI) — Some 50 angry but peaceful northern Maine potato farmers picketed the Canadian border at the end of Interstate 95 Tuesday.

They were protesting what they said was unfair competition by their Canadian counterparts.

"There's no way we can compete with the Canadian government," said Carl DeWitt, a potato grower from New Limerick.

"We'd like to get some help from the government because our prices are going through the floor," said Clifford Audidert, a grower from Fort Kent.

"Right now the Canadians are flooding the market. They have a 25 percent advantage because of the difference in the exchange rate," he said.

Monday spokesmen for the farmers had promised that 100 farmers would show for the protest. They had also asked fishermen and lumbermen to join, but none did.

Unusual info tactics

There is a difference here. Today you are playing against a strange pair in a duplicate tournament. The only thing you know about them is that they aren't experts. Still, even a non-expert pair is likely to recognize that spades is the key suit in the event that you show the queen of clubs and queen of hearts.

In a similar situation, British expert Terence Reese suggested that you take an unusual method of getting information.

Terence led the first diamond-run-to-his-ace. Then, after some slight thought he led his jack of hearts.

West had a slight problem before playing the four spot. Now Terence came back to his hand with the queen of clubs and led the jack of spades.

This time West had another slight problem. Terence went up with dummy's ace and eventually finessed against East's queen.

It wasn't that West was unorthodox that the spades were very alert, but Terence decided that if West held the queen of spades he would not have acted the same way in spades as he had in hearts.

(NEWS-PAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.)

Today's hand is very similar to yesterday's. Again you are in seven no-trump with 38 high card points in the combined hands. Again you have to locate the queen of spades.

Lawyers sue deputies, DA over pilferage of documents

NEWPORT, Ore. (UPI) — Four attorneys said they are suing Lincoln County District Attorney Erik Wassman and five sheriff's deputies for $6 million in connection with the case of Gloria White, who is accused of harboring convicted spy Christopher Boyce.

Attorneys Eugene Richardson, J. S. Ouderirk, Jeffrey Hollen and Audrey Bach Burns said they are seeking $500,000 each in general damages and $1 million each in punitive damages in a U. S. District Court suit in Portland.

They said the suit alleges that Wassman, deputies Ed Krebs and Carl Dudley, and three unnamed deputies, conspired with a former legal secretary to steal confidential documents from the Newport law firm of Richardson, Ouderirk and Hollen.

They claim the defendants were involved in the illegal removal of file material on Mrs. White, whose trial on charges of bank robbery and of hiding Boyce is scheduled to begin today in Idaho.

The lawsuit stems from statements made by former legal secretary Janice Stroufe of Newport, who was hired by the law firm last fall. She said in an affidavit released earlier this month that deputies Krebs and Dudley induced her to take material on Mrs. White from her employers' file in return for lenient sentencing of her husband, James Stroufe, who is awaiting sentencing on theft and forgery charges.

Stroufe's 22-page affidavit described alleged espionage efforts by the two deputies which included searching the law firm's garbage.

The affidavit said, "Prior to the date I lost my job, Dec. 31, 1981, Deputy Krebs told my husband and I that information involving this law firm had been acquired from garbage containers at the firm. Deputy Krebs called this a 'midnight raid on the trash can.'"

The Newport woman described in the affidavit a list of requests that Krebs allegedly asked her to carry out.

"He made it clear," she said, "that he was interested in having me, as an employee with Richardson, Ouderirk and Hollen, provide information from within the office I was employed in, stating, 'Find out what you can.'"

Krebs allegedly asked her at a later meeting "to find out any interconnection between names he gave me and Mr. Ouderirk and if possible, something pertinent involving Mr. Ouderirk's personal life."

The alleged inquiries eventually led to the Gloria White case. She had been a client of Ouderirk's before she was arrested last year on the federal charges. Charles O. Porter, a Eugene attorney, was representing Mrs. White at the time of Krebs' alleged investigation into the Newport law firm.

Stroufe said Krebs "asked me if this law firm was associated in any way with Gloria White. I advised him that she was a client of the firm, and Krebs asked me to find out what I could about her association with the firm."

She said the next time she met Krebs, "I had acquired certain documents from the law firm of Richardson, Ouderirk and Hollen, which I advised him to be Federal Bureau of Investigation Reports and a letter.

Big dome in crater enlarging

VANCOUVER, Wash. (UPI) — Low level seismic activity from rockfalls on the lava dome at Mt. St. Helens gapping, horseshoe-shaped crater indicate the dome is still growing, scientists said Tuesday.

U.S. Geological Survey field crews, confident the volcano's latest explosive outburst was over, returned to the volcano to take more measurements of the dome, which eventually may develop into a new summit for the shattered mountain.

The dome still was dwarfed by the 1.5-mile-wide, 200-foot crater blasted out in the devastating May 18, 1980, eruption. The volcano blew an ash cloud eight miles into the sky Friday night and sent a torrent of mud and water down its slopes that briefly threatened to flood the valleys north of the mountain.

Scientists said they do not expect to have new measurements of the dome's size for several more days.

In earlier eruptions, lava dome growth continued for up to five days after the onset of activity.

Before last weekend's double blast, the dome was 1,200 feet wide, 2,000 feet long and 600 feet high.

No one was injured in the blast. Damage was limited to a few pieces of heavy construction equipment. More than 70 families ordered out as a precautionary measure returned to their homes in the Toutle River Valley after a few hours.

A second burst about six hours later was much smaller, sending an ash cloud to about 18,000 feet.

Trash power for Spokane under study

SPOKANE (UPI) — The City Council voted unanimously Monday night to award a Boise firm a $284,000 contract to study the feasibility of using garbage to generate electricity.

The Morrison-Knudsen Co. said it will complete the study in seven months.

Before voting, the council was told that the city's existing landfills are good for only seven to eight more years, and a waste-to-energy plant may be a viable alternative.

"It takes a long time to build a landfill and we don't know if that's the answer," said John Swanson, the city's utilities director.

The city won a $150,000 Washington Future Solid Waste grant to finance the study. The Washington Water Power Co. and Spokane County also have agreed to help fund the feasibility study.

Among other things, the study will determine the best sites for a waste-to-energy plant, and the best method of financing it.

Injuries fatal to Army tanker

FORT IRWIN, Calif. (UPI) — An Army private crushed between two tanks during the weekend has become the second soldier to die at the National Training Center since the huge Mojave Desert base was reactivated last fall, officials said Tuesday.

A base spokesman said Pvt. Kenneth Carrie, 19, of Cheyenne, Wyo., was pronounced dead Sunday at the base hospital following the accident, which is under investigation by the Army.

Robert Hughes, a civilian spokesman for the training center, said Carrie, assigned to the 1st Battalion, 31st Infantry Division, based at Fort Irwin, was guiding a tank into a parking place when an armored reconnaissance tank lurched from behind and pinned him between the two vehicles.

Fire burns man

KALISPELL, Mont. (UPI) — Officials say no one has been found for a small brush fire in a field southwest of Kalispell which critically burned an elderly man.

Oswald Braaten, 78, Kalispell, was injured in the blaze Monday and was flown to a burn center in Seattle for treatment.
