

Unemployment ties record

By New York Daily News

WASHINGTON — Unemployment rose to 9 percent of the work force in March, matching the highest level of the past four decades.

Joblessness among blacks hit an all-time high of 18 percent, the government reported Friday. Janet Norwood, commissioner of the Bureau of Labor Statistics, said the 0.2 of a percent increase in the overall jobless rate over the month left almost 10 million jobseekers out of work, the largest number since the Depression.

At the same time, Norwood said, a record-breaking 1.3 million others dropped out of the work force because of discouragement over employment prospects and 5.7 million are working short weeks. She blamed the recession.

The labor market continued to deteriorate in March, Norwood told the Congressional Joint Economic Committee, adding that unemployment likely would continue to rise for several months "if it behaves as it has in the past."

Jobless rate up in valley

By The Times-News and United Press International

TWIN FALLS — Two unseasonable factors helped push the seasonally adjusted unemployment rate in the Magic Valley up by 0.5 percent last month.

According to figures released Friday by the state Department of Employment, the unemployment rate for Twin Falls, Jerome and Gooding counties was 6.5 percent during March. This compares with a seasonally adjusted rate of 6 percent during February and a rate of 5.3 percent during March 1981.

The Idaho unemployment rate remained unchanged in March.

But the 7.7 percent state figure was well above the jobless figure for the same month a year ago, Scott B. McDonald, the Idaho Department of Employment director, said the state figure for March 1981 was 5.6 percent.

"The national recession continues to dramatically affect Idaho's employment situation," McDonald said.

"In Twin Falls, the specific problems were high interest rates and cold, wet weather," said Len McDonald, the Twin Falls labor market analyst for the department.

March is usually a time for farm and construction work to begin in earnest, Len McDonald said. But poor weather throughout the month kept farmers from progressing on their field work, and this delayed normal seasonal hiring, he said.

The weather and high interest rates also stopped the typical spring start of the construction season, he said.

Employment in the Magic Valley increased during the month, from less than 32,000 to more than 33,000 people. But the number of unemployed decreased by less than 300, to about 2,400 people. Spring is a time when people typically return to the labor force, but there were fewer jobs than usual for them, thus the increase in the unemployment rate, McDonald said.

"Things are starting to happen, but things are set back some" because of the weather and economic climate, he said.

Weakness in many small businesses also contributed to the unemployment rate increase in this area, he said.

For the state, March was the sixth consecutive month the unemployment rate in Idaho has been highest for that month in the more than 20 years for which records have been kept.

Reaction to figures fast and furious — A2

In unemployment figures, confidence that the jobs situation would improve soon turned around. Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan said that the rate would not hit 10 percent.

But congressional Democrats and the AFL-CIO called for new measures to speed growth to end the recession. "America's unemployed workers need more promises. They need jobs now," said Rudolph W. Dirliko, economist for the labor federation.

Norwood said the recession was hitting black workers especially hard, with their 18 percent jobless rate — up from a rate of 16 percent for the previous six months — and the fact that their unemployment rate for two-thirds of the 300,000 increase in discouraged workers during the recession began.

"Blacks are 10 percent of the population, but they constitute 20 percent of the unemployed and nearly 40 percent of the discouraged," she told the congressional committee. Unemployment among white workers was up 0.2 of a percent to 7.9 percent. The rates of Hispanics (12.7 percent) and teen-age workers (21.9 percent) were little changed.

Norwood said total employment actually edged up in March, but considerably less than is usually the case, and thus reflected a "decline of 220,000 payroll jobs on a seasonally adjusted basis. She said metals, machinery, electronics, textiles, apparel and food processing industries all had employment declines.

The 9 percent jobless rate equaled the rate of May 1975 as the deep 1973-75 recession was ending, and was the worst since 1941, when unemployment averaged 9.9 percent for the entire year. In actual numbers, the 8,854,000 persons without work was topped only by the Depression years, when unemployment hit a high of 12.8 million in 1933.

Norwood said the current recession has claimed 1.2 million jobs since July, considerably below the 2.1 million jobs lost in the 1973-75 recession. But she said key industries like steel, autos, textiles and leather never fully rebounded from that recession and in March had fewer jobs than at the bottom of the 1973-75 downturn.

JANET NORWOOD Reports bad news

Troops invade Falkland

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (UPI) — An invasion force of about 4,000 Argentine marines seized the potentially oil-rich British Falkland Islands Friday.

Seventy-eight British Royal Marine defenders were overwhelmed in a beachhead battle that left one Argentine officer dead and two others wounded.

Britain severed diplomatic relations and warned it would "sustain and defend the Falkland Islands to the best of our ability" — with force if necessary.

British reaction was outpoken. John Slikin, defense spokesman for the opposition Labor Party, denounced the Argentine government as "a tinpot fascist junta."

British Defense Secretary John Nott said British warships already were in the South Atlantic in search of possible "military operations" to reclaim the islands 450 miles east of the southern tip of South America.

He said another "substantial" naval task force including the aircraft carrier Invincible was being readied. Unconfirmed reports said Royal Air Force transport planes had taken off from England, separated from the Falkland Islands it has ruled for 149 years by 7,000 miles of sea.

A force which calls the islands the Malvinas and has claimed them for 166 years, announced the invasion, begun Thursday night, was a complete "success."

Navy sources said British Gov. Rex Hunt had surrendered and the islands were now firmly under Argentine control, with reinforcements arriving by C-130 transport planes at the airport in the island capital of Port Stanley.

Argentine Navy sources said the troops had consolidated their hold on the islands and had begun to reinforce their positions in anticipation of a British attack.

The military junta said Friday Argentina began an evacuation of all Royal Marines and British officials from the Falkland Islands at 4 p.m. MST.

A communique said the Argentine Air Force was flying the British off the island to deliver them to a British ambassador in an unspecified Latin American country.

In Montevideo, official sources said the officials would be handed over to the British embassy in Uruguay.

The Argentine junta said it would declare the islands a province today and interior ministry sources said Gen. Benjamin Menendez would become the military governor.

More than 600 screened Healthy crowd attends fair

TWIN FALLS — If numbers are any indication, the pursuit of good health ranks high in the priorities of Magic Valley residents.

For more people than expected, attended the area's first health fair, held Friday in the College of Southern Idaho gymnasium. By mid-evening, about 610 persons had been screened. The national average for health-fair attendance is 250 to 300, according to health-fair officials.

The unexpected turnout tested the patience of fair staffers and fair-goers alike. The fair began at 1 p.m., but by noon, people had lined up outside the gymnasium door. Many waited up to an hour for height and weight measurements, blood pressure testing and vision and glaucoma screening.

Those who had fasted for 12 hours to take a blood-chemistry test had another wait in store in the blood analysis line.

Health-fair staffers, although run ragged by the crowds, expressed pleasure that so many persons had shown up.

"I think it has been a success," said Karine Siplon, the director of CSI's nursing programs, in a brief pause between duties. She described the turnout as "overwhelming."

"I think it's a wonderful day," said Vera Tolman of Twin Falls, one of those who spent an afternoon at the fair. "I really think the area really needs something like this."

However, Tolman did note that the waiting was strenuous for many of the senior citizens who attended. "One woman waiting in line" remarked that, "Like the county fair, they should have days for different towns."

"Two more health fairs will be held today. Magic Valley Memorial Hospital will sponsor one from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the YFCA in Twin Falls, while St. Benedict's Hospital will sponsor the other. It will be held in the Jerome High School cafeteria from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Wants to testify for co-defendants

Boyce admits to eight Northwest bank robberies

By ANN D. KIRKWOOD United Press International

BOISE (UPI) — Convicted spy Christopher Boyce pleaded guilty Friday to robbing eight banks in three Western states Friday.

The move cleared the way for him to testify for the two co-defendants accused of helping plan the holdups.

Boyce pleaded guilty to all 10 federal robbery, firearms and conspiracy charges — against him after several hours of discussions that involved his attorneys, government prosecutors and U.S. District Judge Harold Ryan.

The pleas were entered after seven days of testimony in the trial of Boyce, Gloria Ann White and Calvin Robinson.

The trial of Mrs. White, 42, Newport, Ore., and Robinson, 40, Richmond, Calif., will continue Monday with Boyce scheduled to testify as a defense witness Thursday.

Boyce's sentencing was scheduled for April 30. He faces maximum penalties of 30 years in prison and a $50,000 fine.

Ryan accepted the guilty pleas by going through all 10 counts against the convicted spy, telling Boyce to say precisely what he was admitting.

Boyce pleaded guilty to conspiring with these brothers who accepted immunity from prosecution to testify against the three defendants, but he refused to plead guilty to any of the alleged overt acts pertaining to Mrs. White and Robinson.

"Mr. Boyce, tell me what you did, exactly," Ryan asked the defendant.

"I conspired with Brett Pratt, Joe Pratt and James Pratt to rob banks," Boyce responded.

He admitted to holding up the banks and Savings and Loans in eastern Washington, Idaho and western Montana while Brett Pratt drove the getaway car in five of the holdups.

James Pratt was the getaway driver in another robbery.

Boyce, who will remain incarcerated in Boise until his sentencing, also pleaded guilty to transporting two weapons across state lines for use in the robberies.

"He (Boyce) will not plead guilty of conspiracy as to any of the overt acts in the indictment that have to do with Gloria White and Calvin Robinson," Dougherty told Ryan in a court appearance earlier Friday afternoon.

Asked whether the pleas would open the door for Boyce to testify on behalf of Mrs. White, Boyce's attorney, William Dougherty, said, "That is a fair statement."

Prosecutors alleged Robinson helped Boyce flee California following his January 1980 jailbreak from the prison in Lompoc.

While then hid Boyce at the White summer cabin in Bonners Ferry, Idaho, and taught him how to rob banks.

Loot from the holdups was earmarked to help Boyce, convicted in 1977 of selling American satellite secrets to the Russian, flee to the Soviet Union, federal agents contended.

The former aerospace worker was recaptured in Port Angeles, Wash., last August.

Trial for the three defendants began March 24.

During seven days of testimony, two bank tellers identified Boyce as the man who held up their offices.

RLDS considers women

INDEPENDENCE, Mo. (UPI) — The World Council of the Organized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints said Friday it wanted to wait for prophetic guidance before deciding whether to ordain women...

An amendment to the matter called for the council to "wait upon prophetic guidance" before deciding. A later amendment asked that the church affirm "it will have no administrative barriers in regard to race, ethnic background, national origin or gender for whomever God chooses to call through the proper authorities and procedures" for the church's priesthood.

The matter will now be referred to the First Presidency — the president of the church and two counselors — which will make a report to the 1984 World Council. The current president, Wallace B. Smith, is considered a prophet and his word could be binding in the case.

Navy plane disappears

NORFOLK, Va. (UPI) — A Navy transport airplane with 11 persons aboard disappeared Friday over the Mediterranean Sea on a flight to the island of Crete, the Navy said.

A search was under way for the C-1A transport assigned to the aircraft carrier USS Dwight D. Eisenhower, said Lt. Cmdr. Tom Connor, a spokesman for the U.S. Atlantic Fleet.

Four crewman and seven passengers were aboard the aircraft. The current president, Wallace B. Smith, is considered a prophet and his word could be binding in the case.

Mormons trim mission service

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — The Mormon Church announced Friday it will trim its missionary service for young men by 10 percent.

Elder Gordon Hinkley, a counselor in the Mormon First Presidency, said the term of service for single male missionaries would be reduced immediately from two years to 18 months in a move to reduce the financial burden on their families.

Democrats strongly criticize Reagan for jobless figures

WASHINGTON (UPI) — News of a 9 percent unemployment rate sparked biting criticism of President Reagan Friday.

Democratic party chairman Charles Monto placed the blame "squarely in the Oval Office."

Manatt said the 9.5 million jobless Americans "are victims of the Reagan recession, a recession caused directly by his administration's tight money, high interest rates and high taxes."

"Responsibility for today's unemployment figures rests squarely in the Oval Office," he said. "This nation is deeply immersed in a growing economic depression and the administration is giving absolutely no leadership at all."

"Ronald Reagan must be made to realize that there is pervasive apprehension about the long-term implications of this recession and deepening recession."

From Democrats on Capitol Hill, reactor to the grim unemployment news was quick and stinging.

"More families are more desperate now with less hope for the future than at any time since the Great Depression," said Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass.

House Budget Committee Chairman James Jones, D-Ohio, said the report "is the clearest and strongest signal possible that President Reagan must agree to a bipartisan change in his economic program."

"There can be no more eloquent appeal for a fair, broad bipartisan solution to this economic crisis than the cry of the millions of American families now suffering the trauma of unemployment," Jones said.

Sen. Donald Riegle, D-Mich., reacted by saying budget director David Stockman feeds unemployment is part of the cure for the economy. "He's wrong," Riegle said. "We must lower interest rates, revive the economy and get our people back to work now."

Rep. Warren Mitchell, D-Md., who chaired a Joint Economic Committee hearing on the new figures, said Reagan is the culprit.

Mitchell said he wanted to ask Reagan, "Can't you show some sense of compassion for those whose lives are being wrecked?"

Mayor Helen Bossalis of Lincoln, Neb., president of the U.S. Conference of Mayors and General, said travelers for months have asked the federal government for help in creating jobs.

"The time for action has surely come," she said, calling upon the administration and the Congress to act immediately to stimulate economic and job development in cities.

United states careful to avoid choosing sides in island dispute

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United States started pushing diplomatic levers Friday to persuade Argentina to withdraw its invading forces from the British-ruled Falkland Islands.

The dispute between Britain and Argentina over the remote South Atlantic islands which have been part of the British Empire since 1814 puts the United States in the difficult position of trying to quell a potentially violent clash between two countries friendly to Washington.

And it comes at a time when the United States is seeking to cultivate strategic allies in both Europe and Latin America.

The British government has strongly supported U.S. policy toward the Soviet Union, and Argentina is a key country in the administration's hopes for an anti-communist consensus of hemisphere nations ready to resist subversion from Cuba or the Soviet Union.

administration and control of the islands.

The State Department said it is not known whether Argentina used any U.S.-supplied weapons in the invasion. Use of American weapons could jeopardize resumption of U.S. military supplies to Buenos Aires.

The Carter administration cut off arms sales to Argentina because of alleged human rights violations but the Reagan administration is moving to reverse that policy.

President Reagan spoke to President Leopoldo Galtieri of Argentina for 50 minutes by telephone Thursday night. His toll reporters Friday the U.S. position is "just to be helpful if we can in this dispute."

"I wish it had not gone forward," Reagan said. "I did talk with the president of Argentina trying to persuade him not to go forward with this."

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said Reagan also was in touch with British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher and urged both leaders to show "restraint."

It appears from Argentine accounts the Argentine troops were on their way to the islands possibly already there, when Reagan and Alieri began talking at 8:21 p.m. MST Thursday.

While the United States recognizes the British administration over the contested islands, statements by State Department officials did not deal with the larger question of the ownership or sovereignty over them.

Both Argentina and Britain, in a dispute going back to 1833, claim the islands, which have about 1,000 sheep for every one of the approximately 1,500 English-speaking residents.

The ownership dispute became less theoretical and more explosive with a geological report indicating the offshore area near the chain of islands has commercial quantities of oil.

The delicacy of the U.S. position in the dispute was illustrated when the State Department briefing officer, Alan Romberg, refused to attach a name to them, simply calling them "the islands."

The British name Falkland Islands is not accepted by the Argentines who call them Las Islas Malvinas.

"I'm not going to let you draw conclusions from what names I use," Romberg said. But a few minutes later, he slipped and described them as the Falkland Islands.

According to the State Department, at least 15 American citizens live on the islands. There were no reports of any injury to them, the State Department said.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said President Reagan was in touch with Argentine President Leopoldo Galtieri and British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher and had urged them both to show "restraint."

The Navy press chief Hugo de Piro said one naval officer was killed and two soldiers wounded seriously by the islands' 7th garrison of 78 British Royal Marines, who resisted briefly. Navy sources said the British were pushed back on the beach as an

Insanity as defense no longer legal

BOISE (UPI) — Gov. John Evans reluctantly signed into law Friday a landmark bill that prohibits the use of insanity as a defense for criminal suspects.

The law establishes Idaho as the only state to bar suspects from seeking a verdict based on their mental state and is a sharp departure from the way U.S. courts have prosecuted mentally disturbed people since the 1840s.

Evans said he has misgivings about the controversial bill — which was approved last month by the Idaho Legislature — but was deferring to the legal judgment of State Attorney General David Leroy, whose office drafted the measure.

Marilyn Dorman, co-director of the Idaho Mental Health Association, predicted later Friday that the law will be challenged in court on the grounds it could violate the constitutional rights of mentally ill people who commit criminal acts.

Three states abolished the insanity defense five decades ago, but the actions were declared unconstitutional. Leroy said Idaho's new law, which applies to criminal complaints filed after July 1, 1982, was written to withstand constitutional challenges.

The bill prohibits the trial of a person who is incapable of understanding the court proceedings or of assisting in his defense. In those cases, the judges would order mental treatment. The suspect could be institutionalized indefinitely unless his mental condition changed. In such case, he could be required to face trial.

Defense lawyers could submit psychiatric evidence during trial, but jurors would decide only whether the suspect committed the crime.

After conviction, evidence of mental illness could be used in determining the length and type of sentence. The sentencing judge could order mental treatment. If he later determined the convict was no longer mentally ill, he could order the convict to prison.

Acquitted by reason of insanity was allowed in England and the United States under the M'Naughton rule, formulated in 1843 by Britain's Queen's Bench. The rule said a person could be convicted only if he could comprehend the nature or quality of his criminal actions.

The concept of the M'Naughton rule was revised under the so-called A.L.I. test in the 1960s. The A.L.I. test allowed acquittal of those who are incapable of conforming their conduct to the requirements of the law or appreciating the wrongfulness of their actions. It also permitted the conviction of sociopaths — who repeatedly commit crimes but have a personality disorder and are not defined as insane.

The attorney general cited abuses of the insanity defense as the chief reason for changing the law. He said psychiatric testimony has confused jurors and resulted in unjust acquittals.

Abortion bill becomes law

BOISE (UPI) — Legislation denying abortions to unmarried girls until their parents are notified has been signed into law by Gov. John Evans, officials in the chief executive's office said Friday.

Under the law, doctors will be required to notify the parents or guardian of an unmarried woman under 18 years old before performing an abortion requested by the girl.

The measure is the least controversial of two abortion bills debated in the Idaho Legislature this year.

The other bill — which would have required women seeking abortions to review information about abortion procedures, the development of fetuses and adoption procedures — died in the House Health and Welfare Committee last month.

Sponsors of the bill approved by the governor late Thursday said it will promote communication between pregnant girls and their parents and will generally improve family unity.

The bill's opponents said it is an unwarranted government intrusion into private family matters and could present a hardship to doctors.

Evans remains undecided on bill to ban inverted rates

BOISE (UPI) — Gov. John Evans still hasn't made up his mind yet on action he will take regarding a bill which would place a two-year moratorium on the imposition of inverted rate structures on Idaho utilities, a gubernatorial spokesman says.

Jean Terra, governor's news secretary, said Thursday she didn't expect Evans to make a final decision on the bill until Monday. The measure, adopted during the 1982 Legislature, would keep the Idaho Public Utilities Commission from imposing inverted rates on any of the utilities it regulates until further study is done on the rate structures.

Under inverted rates, consumers pay more per unit of power as their consumption increases. PUC commissioners, claiming the system encourages energy conservation, have already ordered inverted rates for Idaho Power Co. residential customers.

Terra added, however, that Evans vetoed five minor bills Tuesday. They included measures which would have:

- Demanded that all existing state parks be maintained before the state moves ahead with construction of new facilities.

- Allowed lawmakers to review and possibly overturn any regulations which have been in effect for more than a year at state agencies.

- Forced voters to pre-register if they want to cast ballots on school override or bond elections.

- Reduced bond requirements for mining on state-owned property.

the 11th. But the thermometer dropped to 21 degrees, the lowest during the 31-day period, on the next day.

March wetter than normal

By United Press International

Not only did Idahonians have to tolerate a much harsher winter than usual this year, but the National Weather Service says residents confronted a wetter and cloudier March than normal.

Weather Service analysts said 1.39 inches of rain and snow fell across the state last month, compared to the average precipitation of one inch. Only five days during March were sunny, while 22 were cloudy and four were partly cloudy.

March's average temperature of 41.3 degrees, however, was 0.2 degrees above normal.

The highest statewide temperature during the month was 61 degrees on

Stallings to challenge Hansen in 2nd District

BOISE (UPI) — Although other Democrats have failed at piercing the armor of Rep. George Hansen's hold on his Second District seat, a Ricks College professor said Friday he thinks he can beat the Republican because of the administration's poor showing thus far.

"For years, Mr. Hansen has run against the establishment," said Richard Stallings, chairman of the history department at Ricks in Rexburg. "Now he has one of his own in one of the highest offices in the land and I don't see any production."

"It's the first time really that Mr. Hansen's ideas have had a chance and I don't see any difference. In fact, things are getting worse."

The Rexburg Democrat announced his candidacy for the post Friday at stops in Boise, Twin Falls, Idaho Falls and Pocatello.

Democrat Diane Bilyeu, failed to beat the incumbent because of the Reagan landslide and because most of the state's campaign money was contributed to the Symms-Church race, Stallings said.

He said Mrs. Bilyeu had a campaign fund of only about $30,000 and still managed to garner 42 percent of the vote.

Stallings said he probably would gain more votes because reapportionment placed a larger portion of the Boise area in the Second Congressional District. Since Boise is known for its more moderate voting attitude, Stallings believes he will gather more votes in that area than Hansen, who is viewed as a conservative.

In addition, Stallings said he expected to do well in Bannock County and better in the upper Eastern Idaho counties than past candidates because he is known in that area.

An avalanche swept tons of snow and this tree against a ski patrol hut near Squaw Valley, Calif. At least six people died

Tornadoes rip through mid-America

By United Press International

Violent winds and tornadoes blasted through the nation's midsection Friday, ripping a roof off an Oklahoma school while class was in session, killing at least 11 people in Texas, Arkansas and Missouri.

The violent spring storms rolled out of the Rockies and across the Plains, drawing warm air from the Gulf of Mexico and touching off more than 60 tornadoes, hailstorms and violent windstorms. Scores were injured.

The National Weather Service warned conditions were ripe for more destructive twisters throughout large portions of the upper Midwest.

A monster spring storm that dwarfed many of its winter forerunners by burying high Sierra peaks under 15 feet of snow and killed as many as 15 people roared into the Colorado Rockies with 140 mph winds.

Northern California, which bore the brunt of the huge storm, girded for an encore after 2 feet of snow fell in mountain areas during the night. A new storm system off the central Pacific coast spawned a wave of rain in low areas and snow in the mountains.

A tornado 200 yards wide blasted a 1-mile swath through downtown Paris, Texas. At least seven people were killed — one by a heart attack attributed to the storm — and more than 100 injured.

Officials called for ambulances, doctors, and police from outside the town to help cope with the wounded and asked for National Guard assistance.

"It's just terrible destruction," said a local radio reporter, who said rescue efforts were hampered by heavy rains. "It stayed on the ground for several miles and it moved directly across the city. It was on the ground for a good 30 minutes."

More than a half dozen tornadoes swept through Arkansas, killing three people. Twisters hurled winds up to 75 mph through southern and eastern Oklahoma, overturning mobile homes, blowing out windows and disrupting electric power throughout the state.

An extension of the California snow and monsoon storm slammed into the northern and central Rockies with 140 mph winds, overturning vehicles, kicking up dust storms and clogging Colorado mountain passes with heavy snow.

Two feet of snow fell in the High Sierra during the night, massing the total accumulation to 15 feet since Sunday. Six people died in 15 giant avalanches that crashed down on the Alpine Meadows ski resort Wednesday. Two people were missing and presumed dead.

Fearing new avalanches, experts used probes to judge whether snow would hold to steep slopes above the resort before rescue teams renewed their search for victims.

A seventh snow victim was a 13-year-old boy who died after falling in a snowdrift in Tahoe City, Calif. An eighth confirmed victim was a Salt Lake City, Utah, man who died of a heart attack after his car stalled in heavy snow.

Elderly reassured of old-age benefits

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Former vice President Walter Mondale Friday urged an end to Social Security "scare rhetoric."

And commissioner John Svahn said Americans should not worry their checks will stop because of the system's financial woes.

Their comments followed by a day release of the Social Security trustees' annual report showing the system is running out of money faster than projected. If the report is done, the report said, the old-age fund will not have enough money to pay benefits by July 1983.

"I think there is a good recognition on the part of the Congress and the administration that we have to solve both the short- and long-term problems soon," said Svahn, the Social Security commissioner, on the CBS Morning News. "And I'm confident that we will get a fix this year."

Svahn said Social Security's future is sound.

"There is no new news in this," he said. "What we're talking about is something that has been reported before. People shouldn't worry about their benefits being reduced or being cut."

Mondale, calling Social Security the "most important fundamental program for social justice in America," cited the trustees' "good news" that the system will run a surplus between 1990 and 2020.

"This is a short-term, modest temporary problem that can be handled, and all this scare rhetoric about the future," he told the National Council on the Aging's annual meeting.

Reminding the audience of the Reagan administration's suggested benefit cuts last spring, Mondale said, "These who propose drastic reductions are not trying to improve Social Security. They're trying to dismantle it."

Cutting benefits would "put millions below the poverty line," he said. "I don't know of anyone who gets rich on Social Security."

"We must strengthen Social Security," Mondale said. "Social Security rests on the principle that older Americans deserve a secure retirement."

He proposed no specific solutions, but noted the trust funds lose $5 billion every time unemployment rises by 1 percent. He called the Reagan economic program a "disaster."

Rep. J.J. Pickle, D-Texas, chairman of the House Social Security subcommittee, said the doom-and-gloom predictions are not new.

"Congress will act," Pickle said. "The drawbridge is going up. We will have to act before the next trustees report, in the spring of 1983."

Sen. Robert D. R-Kan., chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, said, "Congress must simply face facts: swift and responsible action is needed if we are to solve the huge problems facing Social Security."

House panel approves most of Reagan's defense request

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A House committee approved most of President Reagan's weapons program Friday.

It turned back attempts to eliminate money for new carriers and the B-1 bomber but cutting funds for interim MX missile deployment.

The House Armed Services Committee completed its action, voting 39-2 to approve a $180 billion authorization. The Senate panel voted 161 Thursday to approve a $180.2 billion program. Reagan had requested $184.3 billion.

All of the dissenters were Democrats — Reps. Patrick Schroeder of Colorado, Ronald Dellums of California and Dennis Hertzell of Michigan and Sen. Carl Levin of Michigan.

The authorization bills represent the largest component of the $258 billion defense program requested by Reagan for fiscal year 1983. They are scheduled to reach the House and Senate floor later this month.

The largest cuts were made in the $1.5 billion the administration requested for the MX, America's new and more accurate 10-warhead intercontinental ballistic missile.

The committees did not oppose the MX as such, but rather Reagan's interim plan to deploy 40 out of a total of 100 missiles in existing and potentially vulnerable Titan II and Minuteman silos. They want the Pentagon to move ahead as soon as possible with a permanent and survivable MX basing system.

The Senate panel cut $2.1 billion requested for research and development and for the deployment of the first nine MX, in 1981-82, in "superhardened" existing silos.

Congress in no hurry to solve budget disputes

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The members of Congress who complain about the ailing economy and the need for quick action to reduce deficits and interest rates are back home for at least a one-week vacation. The budget language is in Washington.

Very little substantive action has taken place since President Reagan submitted his $757.6 billion budget proposal for fiscal 1983 nearly two months ago.

Virtually everyone in Congress agrees the Reagan budget is dead, because of its deficits of nearly $100 billion that tend to fuel inflation and lead to high interest rates. But so one seems in a hurry to do anything about it.

The Senate Republican leadership contends it would make no sense to pass an alternative budget plan until the House Democratic leadership and triad, can compromise.

House Democrats and White House chief of staff James Baker are talking privately about the budget, and they recently brought Senate Republicans into the negotiations.

Some sources close to Senate Republican leaders say progress has been made in those talks and a consensus on an alternative budget could develop by Easter — but they have been citing progress in the talks since they began a week ago.

House Democratic leadership aides are not so optimistic.

"It's too early to say," one of those aides said when asked if there has been progress. Another noted Reagan himself is the only one who can agree to a compromise and he "still sees it as a partisan issue."

The Democrats want Reagan to agree to eliminate the 10 percent income tax cut scheduled for July 1983 and to reduce the growth of defense spending.

Senate Republicans want Reagan and the Democrats to agree to reductions in the cost-of-living adjustments for entitlement programs such as Social Security, Medicare, Medicaid and food stamps.

No one wants to be first to come out in favor of reducing Social Security benefits, and Reagan is adamant about not repealing the individual income tax cuts.

Judge denies von Bulow's request to drop jury's verdict

NEWPORT, R.I. (UPI) — A judge denied a new trial Friday for Claus von Bulow, convicted of twice trying to kill his business wife for money and a mistress.

But von Bulow was permitted to remain free on $500,000 bail until his May 7 sentencing.

Superior Court Judge Thomas Needham upped by five fold von Bulow's bail which had been set upon his conviction March 16 on two counts of assault with intent to murder Martha "Sunny" von Bulow, 50, who lapsed into an irreversible coma after the second murder attempt. The Danish-born financier faces a maximum of 40 years in prison.

"I do not find the jury's verdict against the evidence... I will deny the defendant's motion for a new trial," ruled Needham, who said he found all 50 state witnesses credible and the testimony of the defense's dozen witnesses lacking credibility.

A small knot of speculators, some with signs reading "Free Claus," clustered around the courthouse entrance when von Bulow arrived for the hearing in the jam-packed courtroom where the sensational 47-day trial had been held.

Von Bulow, 55, tanned and appearing relaxed, presented the court five certificates of deposit for $10,000 each — meeting the required 10 percent of the bail.

Another paratrooper dies from injuries during jump

FORT IRWIN, Calif. (UPI) — Another paratrooper who jumped during a treacherous desert winds during a massive military airdrop has died of head injuries, raising the death toll to five, officials said Friday.

First Lt. Gregory Lynn Watson, 26, of Fort Irwin, Ark., died Thursday at Loma Linda University Medical Center, an Army official reported.

Four other paratroopers from the operation died at Fort Bragg, N.C., died Tuesday in the Gallant Eagle 82 airdrop and scores were injured, including two soldiers in critical condition at Loma Linda with head injuries.

The airdrop marked the start of the six-day field exercise of Gallant Eagle 82. The month-long operation is a readiness test of the Rapid Deployment Force and involves 45,000 military personnel, including 2,300 paratroopers of the 82nd Airborne Division.

The field maneuver continued Friday with the 82nd Airborne troops meeting the 40th Infantry from the California National Guard in a mock battle.

More communities added to 'hard times' list

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A special government "hard-times" list carries the names of 1,151 counties and cities suffering high unemployment, giving employers preference for bidding on federal contracts.

Six new areas, ranging from a small Mississippi county near the Tennessee and Alabama borders, to a rural community in northern Connecticut, were added this week by the Labor Department.

Now, more than one in four of the 4,100 eligible localities are on the list. The newcomers are: Pomfret, Conn.; Tishomingo County, Miss.; Edgecombe and Vance Counties, N.C.; Greenwood County, S.C.; and Weakley County, Tenn. All have individual characteristics, but share a common problem: persistent and high unemployment of at least 7.5 percent.

Ninety-three areas have been added to the principal list of 1,058 issued in June, 1981 which was based on an average unemployment rate of 7.9 percent for 1979 and 1980. A new, revised list will be issued in June.

The General Services Administration sets aside government contracts on which only employers from these labor surplus areas are eligible to be bidders. A GSA spokesman said the contracts amounted to $1.3 billion in fiscal year 1981.

In Vance County, N.C., in mountains along the Tennessee border, the unemployment rate is 17.1 percent; partly because a rug yarn manufacturer which once employed 400 workers closed down.

But James Acuff, manager of the state Employment Security Commission office responsible for the area, said there is more to blame for the county's economic plight — the poor condition of U.S. 19-E, the main road from Asheville, and the fact the county has no railroad nor public transportation.

In Edgecombe County, in the heart of rich rice-cured tobacco area, the rate is 12.8 percent, with several plants working a "week on, week off" schedule of four-day weeks.

"The employer would rather pay them short-time, than dump them and lose the skilled labor force," said John Thomas, head of the employment office at Rocky Mount.

Pomfret, Conn. is a rural town of 2,775 in the northeast portion of the state with only 115 persons out of work. But the community has a labor force of only 1,162, and was added to the list with a 9.6 percent unemployment rate.

"Pomfret is just a sleepy little town in northern Connecticut," said selectman Raymond Heath, adding jobs there depend largely on Pratt & Whitney Aircraft firm in East Hartford, and the Electric Boat shipyard in Groton.

Unemployment stands at 10.4 percent in South Carolina's Greenwood County, where the textile industry is a major employer.

Pollution policies revamped

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The government Friday revamped industrial air pollution policies to let companies balance clean air with dirty.

The government said the trade-off system could save industry $1 billion by the end of this year.

The move expands a flexibility policy begun in the Carter administration, allowing its use for the first time in urban areas where federal air quality standards are not being met.

But Anne Gorsuch, head of the Environmental Protection Agency, said the change is environmentally sound, will actually speed the clean-up process and will not make the air dirtier. She called it "a real milestone in terms of the Clean Air Act."

The Natural Resources Defense Council, however, said the new policy drops important safeguards and could allow some industries "to do less than they have to do."

David Doninger, a lawyer for the group, said it is hard to see how an area that has not achieved clean air standards, and does not know how it will, can declare any reductions in air pollution to a surplus.

"It's like the Army selling off boots for surplus before it knows how many soldiers it needs," he said. "You can't declare something a surplus before you know what the minimum is that you have to do."

The original policy, started in 1979, allows some pollution sources in a plant to be in violation of clean air regulations provided others are not.

The net result — the air under an imaginary "bubble" — covering the whole plant — is what counts.

The new EPA policy will allow "bubbles" to air in across entire cities or even parts of states. It also allows quicker approval by the states without duplicative federal review.

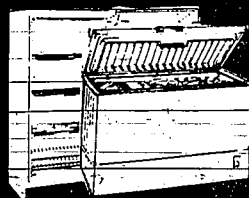

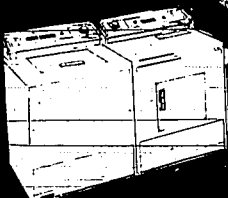

The agency cited as one example of a previously approved bubble General Electric's Louisville, Ky., appliance plant that once faced the choice of shutting down its existing production line or refitting it with a $1.5-million incinerator that would have been junked when the old line was replaced.

"Instead, GE leased several hundred tons per year of emission reductions that had previously been banked by International Harvester," the agency said, "and used them in a bubble which surpassed state control requirements. GE paid $60,000 for the leased credits, saving $1.5 million in capital."

Prosecution claims Moon skipped taxes

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Rev. Sun Myung Moon, an 1981 tax fraud defendant, deposited $1.6 million in a New York bank and once acquired $50,000 worth of stock free of charge, it was testified at his trial Friday.

The prosecution contends the Korean evangelist did not declare the stock on his income tax returns. He also is charged with failing to declare $112,000 he got in interest from the $1.6 million bank account.

Lewis Burgess, 31, a member of Moon's Unification Church and a student at Columbia University, testified about the stock acquisition under subpoena at the second day of Moon's tax fraud trial in U.S. District Court in Manhattan.

Burgess testified that Moon's acquisition of the stock gave him control of Tong Il Enterprises in New York, a tea importer, and allowed him to purchase tea from a company he founded and controlled in Korea.

The acquisition of the 500 shares, selling at $100 each, was made in June 1973, Burgess said, seven months after Moon arrived in this country from Korea. Two months later, the witness continued, Moon, 61, transferred his shares into a holding company called One Up Enterprises.

Burgess, now a vice president of Tong Il Enterprises, said although he received payments for the stock from others in the Unification Church, he received "no money from Moon." The defense is expected to contend the stock represented church assets and was not taxable.

Lonely men worldwide advertise in the newspapers of Manila for mail-order brides and get them. More than 3,000 women of the Philippines answered such ads in 1981 and flew off to meet their husbands-to-be for the first time. What's so desirable about the Filipinas? "They expect their men to be men with faults, not perfect flunkies," says one Canadian bridegroom. "They're more understanding. They accept the hard facts of life, and smile."

LOVE AND WAR

Our Love and War man is snuffing over a recent study of widows and widowers. It shows the death of the husband does not seem to affect the longevity of his widow. But the death of the wife shortens the longevity of the widower considerably—unless he remarries. Clearly, the widower ought to remarry with all deliberate speed, if he wishes to stay healthy. By United Press International Today is Saturday, April 3, the 93rd day of 1982 with 272 to follow. The moon is moving toward its full phase. The morning stars are Mercury, Venus, Jupiter and Saturn. The evening star is Mars. Those born on this date are under the sign of Aries. Movie stars Doris Day and Marion Brando were born on this date in 1924. On this date in history: In 1880, the Pony Express postal service began with riders leaving St. Joseph, Mo., and Sacramento, Calif., at the same time. In 1982, the federal government ordered New Orleans to integrate the first six grades of public schools. In 1975, President Ford said the rest of the world should not regard losses in South Vietnam as signs American commitments would not be fulfilled elsewhere. In 1979, Jane Byrne swept into office as mayor of Chicago — the city's first woman mayor. A thought for the day: Russian novelist Ivan Turgenev said, "I agree with no man's opinion. I have none of my own."

Resolution bans tall people

By United Press International SHORT ITEM Kansas state Rep. Sandy Duncan rose to his feet Tuesday to inch up April Fools' day to win points for short folks. He proposed to repeal all people taller than 5 feet 4 inches as of July 1. The resolution, which passed despite a loud "no" vote, also honored famous short people — Pablo Picasso, James Madison, Olga Korbut, Mickey Rooney, Marquis de Sade, Henri Marie Raymond de Toulouse-Lautrec, St. Francis of Assisi, Engelbert Dollfus and Dolly Parton. mansion opens to the public for the first time on June 7, Joe Foster said there. The Memphis construction superintendent bought the first tickets said Monday for the first four Graeland. Only the downstairs portion of the mansion, including Preley's trophy room where his gold records, costumes and mementoes are kept, will be open. Tickets cost $5 for adults, $3 for children. "I've always admired Elvis because of his humility and his generosity," Foster said. "He just wasn't like other Hollywood stars."

TO K.C., WITH LOVE Virgil Thomson, music critic and dean of American composers, says he loves Paris because it reminds him of Kansas City, his hometown. Thomson, who donated his manuscripts, letters and scores to the University of Missouri-Kansas City, explained: "Paris, like Kansas City, has good food, religion and vice — all the things that make life in a city worth living." Thomson, who lived in Paris in the 1930s and now lives in New York, says his roots "are in the Midwest."

MASON-DIXON When astronomers Charles Mason and Jeremiah Dixon mapped their survey line in about 1783, little did they dream that just a piece of it would someday sell at auction for $396,000 — more than the $313,000 bid for a copy of the Declaration of Independence. The original map of the "Mason-Dixon" line was bought Thursday at Christie's by publisher Malcolm Forbes. Forbes' map is only two-thirds of the original. The other piece is in the Princeton University Library.

Ballpoints flooding tiny town

OZARK—Mo. (UPI) — This tiny southwest Missouri community is up to its ears in ballpoint pens and in the market for a new city clerk. Betty Tennis was asked to resign after the town council found out she bought 87 gross — or 12,252 — ballpoint pens, enough to give each resident five pens and still have plenty left over. "We could have purchased a new police car for what we spend on ink pens," said Howard Jones, mayor of the town of 2,400, concerning the $7,000 tab for the pens. "Boxes of Bic and Permatemp pens had been arriving at the City Hall at the rate of 10 gross a month since last April, City Attorney Jim Eilff said. Mrs. Tennis resigned Tuesday from the appointed office she had held since January 1981, he said. "Her story is that she was called by a salesman who said something to the effect that 'I can give you a good deal on some ballpoint pens.' The mayor said 'go ahead and order some pens' — at least the first batch of six gross," Eilff said. He added he was unable to confirm the go-ahead with former Mayor Leon Fesperman. She followed procedure on the first batch but erred in the next paying for all the pens that arrived after it, Eilff said. Although Mrs. Tennis said she purchased all the pens from the same salesman, the invoices all have different salesman's numbers, Eilff said. He said the first batch of six pens — Ross International of Los Angeles — refuses to speak to him. "She stored the pens in the City Hall until last Thursday when the city treasurer was preparing a financial statement with one of the council clerks," Eilff said. "When the treasurer said 'where would I put all these pens?' the councilman asked 'What pens?'" he said. "The pens are everywhere," Eilff said. "You could open a drawer or a filing cabinet and in the back there said 'He said the first batch of six pens. Some are in the attic. Once we started looking for the pens — well, you don't normally ruff through the office looking for pens."

Tiny islands, big fight

By United Press International

Questions and answers about the dispute over the Falkland Islands.

Where are the Falkland Islands? The 4,700-square-mile archipelago of nearly 200 islands is 400 miles northeast of the southern tip of South America, giving it a climate similar to Scotland. Most of the area is in two islands, East and West Falkland.

What is the history of the dispute? Argentina has maintained since its independence in 1816 that it inherited a Spanish claim to the islands. But Britain discovered the islands in 1592, established a temporary colony in 1765 and has had a permanent colony since 1833. Both are adamant about their sovereignty.

Are the islands valuable? The 1,000 inhabitants raise 600,000 sheep. But beneath the waters of the cool, rocky islands there are "red-hot" oil prospects. Argentina has found oil off its coast but further exploration has apparently been delayed by the territorial dispute.

Do residents want? The residents all speak English and are of British descent, and their natural ties are with Britain rather than Spanish-speaking Argentina. It is assumed they would want to remain a British colony.

Who would have the military advantage? Britain has a far larger navy, including such advanced ships as the nuclear attack submarine, dispatched last week. But Britain is about 8,000 miles away, while the islands are only 450 miles from Argentina. It could take three weeks for British ships to reach the area.

Have there been other clashes? The last one was in February 1976 when an Argentine destroyer fired over the bow of a British ship in the disputed waters. A month earlier both countries recalled their ambassadors, and ties were only re-established in 1980.

Oil key in Falkland dispute

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Falkland Islands may have large potential oil reserves, but no drilling has taken place because of the territorial dispute that escalated into the Argentine military invasion of the British crown colony.

The geophysics of the Falkland Islands are very, very promising, said Tom Stewart-Gordon, international editor of World Oil in Houston.

Dr. Lawrence Goldmount, an energy consultant to the U.S. Defense Department, predicted the offshore area between Argentina and the Falkland Islands could become another North Sea-type oil field with production of 2 million barrels a day within the next decade.

Rightists reject Duarte for government

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (UPI) — Maj. Roberto D'ambuisson Friday pledged his coalition of extreme rightist parties would carry out land reforms in El Salvador, but rejected a role for junta President Jose Napoleon Duarte in a new government.

D'ambuisson's statements came as Christian Democrats mobilized participants for a mass rally supporting Duarte, whose party lost control of a 60-seat constituent assembly to five rightist parties despite winning a plurality in elections Sunday.

"At no time will we take a step backward concerning reforms, from the moment the new government starts — we will carry out agrarian reforms," said D'ambuisson, 39, a retired major and ex-chief of national guard intelligence said.

"We have to make what has been done more productive," he said. "We have to consolidate the program."

D'ambuisson reiterated that the five rightist parties who together won 36 seats in the assembly would not allow Christian Democrats in the new government if they insist on a role for Duarte.

"We will share the country's destiny with the Christian Democrats but we do not accept Duarte as the head of government," D'ambuisson said, adding he would serve as a provisional president if called upon.

The United States has made it clear it will halt military and economic aid if D'ambuisson scraps Duarte's land reform, banking and human rights policies.

The Christian Democrats cannot form a government because in the elections they captured just 24 seats in the 60-seat assembly that has the power to form a new government, write a constitution, and call presidential elections next year. D'ambuisson's National Republican Alliance known as Arena can form a 33-seat majority with the National Conciliation Party, which was ousted from power in an October 1979 coup that installed the military-civilian junta now led by Duarte.

The Christian Democrats argue they should be included in the new government because they won more votes than any other single party — 40.2 percent compared with Arena's 29.3 percent and the National Conciliation's 19 percent.

The remainder of the 1,398,505 votes cast were split among three minor rightist parties. About 10 percent of the ballots were deliberately mutilated — or left blank — the Salvadoran Electoral Commission said.

Meanwhile, some 800 U.S.-trained counterinsurgency troops went on a sweep for guerrillas southeast of Usulután, a provincial capital 68 miles southeast of San Salvador hit hard this week in a heavy rebel assault.

Residents in El Espino, about 20 miles southeast of Usulután, said the Pacific coast town was under "constant bombardment" by military artillery. Army sources say the area beach is used for secret arms shipments to rebels.

Judicial authorities Friday found the bodies of three women and eight men, all shot at point blank range through the head, dumped near Nejapa, 13 miles north of the capital, apparently after being slain in another location.

The Defense Ministry blamed leftist guerrillas for the slayings, though execution-style killings are most often attributed to right-wing death squads.

PLO vows military support for Arab uprising

DAMASCUS, Syria (UPI) — The Palestine Liberation Organization vowed to back an Arab uprising in Israel-occupied territories and threatened cross-border attacks, news reports said Friday.

The PLO decision to step up military actions inside Israel came amid spreading clashes between Arab and Israeli troops in the West Bank, Gaza and Israel, a paper following the firing of a Palestinian mortar.

In the Golan Heights, Israeli soldiers shot and wounded four Druze Arabs in the first reported outbreak of violence in the territory annexed by Israel from Syria in December. Six Israelis were injured by rockets.

The Kuwaiti news agency said the PLO central council at a meeting in Damascus Thursday had agreed to use all available means to support a civil uprising in the occupied territories, including cross border attacks.

"If the Israeli enemy insists on its dismissal of the mayors of the West Bank, then there are other measures which could be taken including a general civil uprising in all the towns and cities of the occupied lands," the Kuwaiti news agency quoted an council member as saying.

The news agency quoted unidentified central council members who said the PLO would allocate "large sums of money to support the uprising of the sons of our occupied lands and compensate those who have been hurt."

An official council statement said the PLO will "provide all the means of support to our people in the occupied territories and will shoulder responsibility for the consequences of boycotting the occupation, the civilian rule, and the continuation of the general strike."

Palestinian guerrillas deployed close to Lebanon's southern frontier with Israel, but are banned access to the Syrian and Jordanian frontiers with the Jewish state.

The PLO agreed not to use the Lebanese border under the terms of a cease-fire with Israel last July.

The PLO central council is a 60-member-polemymaking body.

The council called on the Arab states to "move from a simple phase of condemnation of U.S. policies to a phase of tangible economic and political measures to counter these policies."

Nicaragua warns El Salvador of intervention

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (UPI) — Nicaragua warned Friday that the strong showing by the right in the Salvadoran elections could provoke U.S.-armed intervention in Nicaragua.

Officials blasted Honduras for voicing support for U.S. military action.

"The United States feels cornered and extremists in the Reagan administration could come up with reversible reactions," said Sergio Ramirez, a member of the ruling leftist Sandinista junta.

He said the apparent rightist victory in El Salvador "wasn't in the U.S. State Department's plans" and the military coup in Guatemala was another setback for the United States.

Nicaragua also reacted strongly to statements by Honduran armed forces chief Col. Gustavo Alvarez, who said Thursday his nation would not oppose U.S. armed intervention in the area and voiced concern over Nicaragua's arms buildup.

Alvarez said Honduras was "small and weak" and worried about Soviet and Cuban interference in the region. Ramirez, speaking to a group of business leaders, warned that Alvarez's statements were "very serious," but said, "Col. Alvarez is not the president of Honduras" and called on Honduran President Roberto Suenza Curocho to state his government's position.

Nicaragua's pro-Sandinista newspaper Nuevo Diario said in an editorial that Alvarez's statement showed clear evidence of an escalation of interference and arming by the Reagan government.

"It is clear that our northern neighbor — (Honduras), where the armed forces have the real power, the country is offering to be the official bridge to repeat the case of the Dominican Republic," the newspaper said, referring to the landing of U.S. Marines in Santo Domingo in 1965 to back the government in a civil war.

Ramirez said the State Department last year revoked the U.S. visa of Salvadoran rightist Roberto D'ambuisson, the runner-up in El Salvador's March 29 elections, because he threatened the life of an American diplomat.

A State Department official said Thursday that D'ambuisson would be permitted to enter the United States for talks with policymakers.

Volcano kills 100 in Mexico

VILLAHERMOSA, Mexico (UPI) — Red Cross officials said Friday as many as 100 people were killed in three successive eruptions of Mexico's Chichu volcano that left six villages buried under 3 feet of fiery volcanic ash.

"There could be up to 100 deaths in all, but no one knows now because there are so many bodies buried under the ashes," said Red Cross doctor Antonio Martell, in Villahermosa, Tabasco, 330 miles southeast of Mexico City.

The 7,300-foot volcano erupted for a third time in a week Thursday evening, showering a 3,500-square-mile area with searing ashes. Six villages on the slopes of the volcano have been buried under 3 feet of ash.

Witnesses said the earth began to shake Thursday night and the crater spurt more puffs of red-hot ashes, short-circuiting power lines near the now deserted Chapultenango near the slopes of the volcano, 400 miles southwest of Mexico City.

"People tell us there are still many many dead," said Red Cross official Rosa Guadalupe Ramon Acosta, who traveled with a Red Cross team late Thursday to Chapultenango.

The director of the Tabasco Federation of Small Landowners-Estateh Elias Echem estimated losses to the cocoa and banana harvests in Tabasco's Hulmasquillo county alone run to over $7.5 million.

A spokesman for the government's agriculture and livestock insurance group said they expect to pay millions of dollars in crop damages, but the company will need a month to estimate total losses.

International Day

Foreign students give residents a 'taste' of their homelands

By GLEN WARCHOL
 Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — What does Saudi Arabia taste like? At the College of Southern Idaho's International Day lunch Friday, it tasted like kabsa, a rice pilaf fragrantly seasoned with chicken, cinnamon, cumin and other more exotic spices brought with the Saudi students from the city of Riyadh.

Magic Valley residents had the opportunity Friday to taste not only the foods, but sample 17 varieties of culture that are represented by foreign students at CSI. Students from Kuwait, Japan, South Africa, Iran and a dozen other countries enlisted the help of the Junior Club, the Soroptimist Club, the Altusa Club and several local businesses to present the international gathering. Visitors wandered from table to table in the common area of the multi-use building, sampling the foods of the countries and talking to the vendors.

"It's really good — especially this eggplant from Iran," said Janice Kroeger, a lifetime resident of the Magic Valley, who took advantage of the lunch not only to sample the Iranian concoction of potatoes, eggplant and turmeric, but to discuss the Koran vs. the Bible and to learn something about Saudi Arabian hospitality. "I enjoyed talking about the different customs."

In the small commons area, the national boundaries blurred as students helped one another serve the unexpectedly large turnout of curious Americans.

"I don't know what it is," said a student lading out a greenish stew from Micronesia. "I'm a Palestinian."

But Micronesian John Olph, who was wearing a grass skirt, T-shirt and a baseball hat for the occasion, came to his rescue.

"It's chicken, potatoes, curry powder. Chicken stew," he said. "In Japanese, you call it kare. You mix it up, cook it awhile, then you get hungry — eat it!"

Many of the Americans in the crowd were high school students

Resembling a bazaar merchant, Abdulrahman Hamdan talks about his country, Saudi Arabia getting their Twin Falls horizons expanded by rubbing elbows with the miniature United Nations. "I learned that even though this food looks different, it tastes good," said Chad Miller, a student from a French language class at Robert Stuart Junior High School. Adnan Ghanim, a Palestinian whose parents fled to Kuwait after the 1967 war with Israel, felt the International Day was more than just an opportunity to delight Idahoan palates with Palestinian kofta, a spicy meat loaf-type dish. The lunch and the presentations that followed were an opportunity for the Palestinians at CSI to destroy the stereotype of their people, as terrorists and airline hijackers. Stereotypes created by a pro-Israeli press, he said. "It's our only chance to get to the people," he said. "All they remember is Munich. But everyday, our people are suffering from Israeli bombs."

Raft River steam site up for sale

By RON ZELLAR
 Times-News writer

MALTA — For sale or lease: Industrial complex to convert hot water to electricity. Like new condition. Economical to operate at $3.5 million a year.

The U.S. Department of Energy began soliciting proposals this week to cooperatively manage its $40 million Raft River geothermal energy project near Malta.

Funding to operate the pilot plant is on the ropes in Congress for the second year, and the DOE is offering the project to private utilities, university research consortiums or anyone else with the cash and a use for the facility.

Richard Blackledge, a DOE spokesman in Idaho Falls, conceded that Uncle Sam may have difficulty unloading the project, even at bargain basement prices.

The Raft River plant was designed to test, on a production scale, the possibility of generating electricity with medium-temperature geothermal hot water.

Operating like a refrigerator in reverse, the plant extracts energy from the water by using the heat to vaporize a second fluid, isobutane, which drives a turbine generator.

Tests conducted to date indicate the plant will produce power at 50 cents a kilowatt-hour — roughly 15 times the rate Idaho Power Co. charges its residential customers.

Monitoring devices and the project's labor-intensive, research design added costs that would not be necessary if a similar plant were built by private industry, Russell Lease, the project coordinator, said in an interview last year.

Hot water for the plant is drawn from four geothermal wells and then reinjects into the aquifer through two other wells, thereby not affecting the valley's water supply. The Raft River Valley was declared a "critical ground-water area" several years ago when farm wells began dropping.

The facilities being offered by the government include the power-generating system, structures, a cooling tower and waste-water treatment plant, electrical controls and switching hardware.

An office and control building houses the control room, a water chemistry laboratory and administrative office space.

The maintenance building provides space for servicing equipment and has a drive-through high bay with a 15-ton overhead crane.

Blackledge said the department would prefer a proposal that would operate the plant for a minimum of one to three years — for gathering research data before closing it down. Operating costs are estimated at $3.5 million a year.

"We don't know who might be interested. That's why we published the notice," he said.

The purchaser would be responsible for sealing the wells and removing facilities under terms of a 1973 federal land withdrawal from the Bureau of Land Management, he said.

President Reagan proposed shutting down the project last year without completion of final modifications and testing. However, Sen. James McClure, in his position as chairman of the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee, was instrumental in securing an additional $8 million for the facility.

After initial testing in November, the plant was shut down to analyze data and to make modifications.

Recently, it was restarted to gather additional information before project funding runs out in September.

Confusion over reading of rights frees grand theft suspect

By MARTY TRILLHAASE
 Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Grand theft charges against a Twin Falls man were dropped at a preliminary hearing stage Friday when prosecutors were unable to show whether Police had informed the defendant of his constitutional rights before questioning him.

Apparently, the police interview was the only evidence placing the defendant, 24-year-old Karl Herbst, at the scene of the alleged theft.

Herbst was charged with the Dec. 28, 1981, theft of 380 pounds of scrap copper from the Idaho Power Co. service center yard, 273 Blue-Lakes Blvd. N.

He was named as a suspect in the case following a security guard's report that a pickup truck was seen leaving the scene on the night of the theft.

Testifying at the preliminary hearing in Fifth District Magistrate Court, the guard, Dan Lammers, said he later located what he believed was the same pickup truck.

A check of the pickup's registration showed Herbst was the owner, and the defendant was brought to the Twin Falls police station for questioning.

But Lammers admitted on the witness stand that he could not identify the driver of the pickup. According to an affidavit filed with the court at the time the felony charge was filed, the only evidence placing Herbst at the scene was his own statement to police. The affidavit notes that Herbst denied any involvement in the theft, however.

But the details of the police interview were ruled inadmissible as evidence when defense lawyer Mike Powers noted that no record existed that Herbst was advised of his constitutional rights.

Under the U.S. Constitution, a defendant cannot be compelled to incriminate himself.

While admitting that police Lt. Detective Garry Corder could not remember whether Herbst was notified of his rights during the interview, deputy prosecutor Dennis Voorhees argued that police had not been obligated to inform the defendant of his rights. Herbst voluntarily had submitted to police requests for questioning, and he was free to go at any time, Voorhees said.

Powers countered that Herbst was not, in fact, told that he was free to go. In essence, Herbst believed he was being detained for questioning, Powers said.

Powers said that at the time of the questioning, Herbst was the prime suspect in the case. As such, he was entitled to know the consequences of any statement he might give to police, his lawyer said.

Judge Melvin Edwards concurred. Saying that "a critical avenue" of the prosecution's case had been cut off by the decision, Voorhees moved to dismiss the charge against Herbst.

But Voorhees said that if he can obtain evidence that Herbst was informed of his rights, he would refile the charge.

Health fairs

Health screening test results prompt sudden resolutions from reporter who took part

By STEPHANIE SCHOROW
 Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Like many others in this age of anxiety, I'm concerned about my health.

So along with hundreds of Magic Valley residents, I went to the area's first health fair to learn if I was fit as a thoroughbred or marked for the dustbin of history.

During the afternoon, I was pinched and poked and prodded and pricked. My heart, my eyes, my ears — and my patience — were tested.

I found I'm not heading for an early grave, but that I should make several changes in my lifestyle to be on healthier grounds.

The first test of the fair was the long line. I arrived a little after 1 p.m. and waited more than an hour to get my registration material. It wasn't until nearly 3 p.m. that I made it to my first test.

The registration material was easy to fill out:

"Do you exercise regularly?"

"Only jogging to the drinking fountain."

"Do you diet regularly or frequently?"

"Sure. Every day before lunch and after dinner."

"Are you under stress much of the time at home or work?"

"Yes, especially when standing in line covering health fairs."

The first screening was height and weight. A pleasant-voiced nurse first told me I had a small frame, (nice surprise) then made me gulp when she read off my weight. (Surely, I must be wearing heavy clothes today.)

After another wait in another line, my blood pressure was checked: 120 over 40. Very normal. (Maybe this job isn't getting to me after all.)

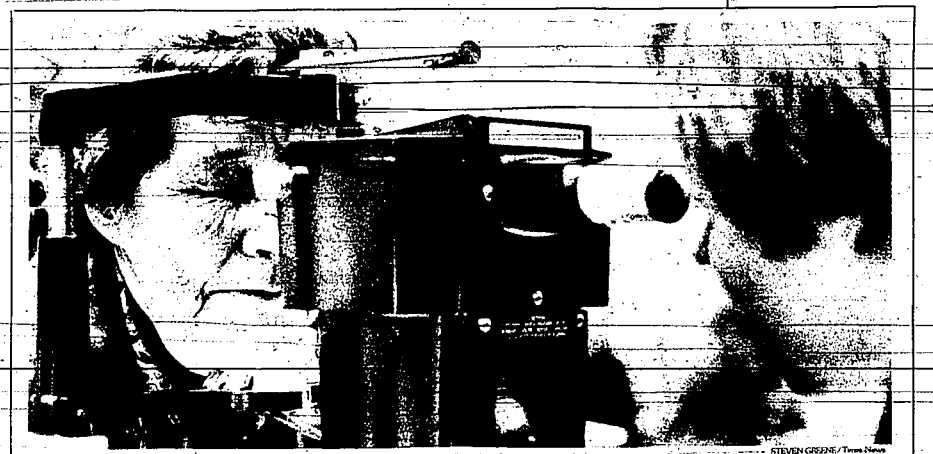

I next filled out a self-assessment test on various habits. It asked me about my eating and drinking habits, stress-control levels and exercise program. Out of a possible 10, I scored a dismal 4 on exercise. Since I don't smoke, I did get a perfect 10 on smoking — probably the only 10 out of 10 I've had in my life.

Donald Siplon, a health educator, went over my test results, gave me some suggestions and referred me to other health booths where I could get more information.

He stressed maintaining an exercise program and a balanced diet. "There's nothing wrong with junk food, if you don't eat too much of it."

I moved on to the physical fitness booth, where two nursing students used a skin caliper to measure body fat content.

I also had a brief dental exam with Dr. Kent Allen, who brandished a tongue depressor instead of a drill,

Chloe Fausett winces as air is blown at her eye during a glaucoma test by Dr. Jay Hartwell at the health fair Friday and seemed as genuinely interested in my teeth as I was.

Finding my stress level rising with the long lines, I left and returned later to finish the tests. I found that the lines had thinned, a welcome relief for latecomers. And I was surprised to find staffers still smiling at 7 p.m.

One of the more unusual tests, I thought, was the glaucoma screening.

A small puff of air is blown into the eye to test the pressure inside; high pressure may indicate glaucoma. It's a bit startling but not painful.

By the end of the fair, I had found my eyesight was normal and my hearing was fine. And a drop of my blood sank like a stone in a solution of copper sulfate, indicating I was not anemic.

But the best part of the fair was having the blood-chemical test. It's not that I enjoy needles, but there's nothing like finishing your tests and breaking a 18-hour-plus-fast-with-a cup of McDonald's orange drink.

With a record of my mostly positive results clutched in one hand, I drank to my health with the other.

Alumni have offered bribes say prep cagers

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Five blue-chip high school recruits playing in Friday night's Dapper Dan Roundball Classic say they have been offered bribes to accept scholarship offers from various colleges, the newspaper sponsoring the game reports.

The Pittsburgh Post-Gazette told in a copyrighted story of how colleges entice recruits with payoff offers similar to those alleged by Notre Dame Coach Digger Phelps, who said during the National Collegiate Athletic Association tournament that he had reported several violators.

The players declined to tell the Post-Gazette the names of the schools which made the offers outlawed by the NCAA.

The players who made the claims are Richard Reifford, a 6-foot-6 forward from Riviera Beach, Fla.; 6-9 Lloyd Moore, of nearby Clairton, Pa.; Andre Banks, 6-4, from Chicago; Keith Wesson, 6-10, of Niles, Ohio; and Greg Willey, 6-3, of Oak Hill Academy in Virginia.

The boys said the bribes were not made by coaches but by alumni and other people associated with the school.

"I've been offered cars and money, but it was done in very undercover ways," said Reifford, who plans to attend the University of Michigan. "I was recruited very heavily in both football and basketball, and the past year hasn't been easy."

Banks, who is headed to the University of Iowa, told the Post-Gazette one school offered him a "free ride" for his girl friend if he signed.

"What (Notre Dame Coach) Digger Phelps said last week about there being a lot of payoffs offered and made is true," Banks said. "It's been going on for years. The head coaches don't do it, most assistant coaches wouldn't get directly involved in it, but the alumni wind up doing it after an assistant coach tips them off about a particular kid."

Phelps said during the NCAA playoffs he had reported four schools to the NCAA for allegedly offering cash payments to players. He also did not name the schools. Wesson said the first illegal offer caught him off-guard. "I'd be lying if I said I didn't think about it, but I decided it would be wrong to accept it, so I turned it down," Wesson said. "Lots of schools are doing it. Usually it comes from people associated with the school, but not from the coaches."

"They can't afford to be directly involved. Some coaches might not even be aware of what's going on, so it seems to me that it would be unfair to name schools," Willey said. "That offered me things like money and cars were ones who have come off losing seasons or have programs that have been way down for years." Moore said he was "turned off" by schools making illegal offers.

"The way it came down to me was that I wouldn't have to worry about getting any money from Mom, or would I have to worry about the high cost of transportation. I think it's mostly alumni that try to make the deals, but I think that in just about every case, the coaches are aware of it. It's a subject I'm very uncomfortable with, but let me say that I'd eliminate any school that tried that kind of tactics."

Rozelle

NFL boss once considered taking over control of Oakland Raiders

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle said Friday he would have taken the Oakland Raiders away from owner Al Davis under the right of eminent domain and admitted he considered the move for a full season if Davis had persisted in keeping his team in Los Angeles.

Rozelle, testifying a second day in the retrial of the antitrust suit filed against the league by the Los Angeles Coliseum and Raiders, said he was "very, very surprised" when Davis began moving to Los Angeles in 1980 in defiance of the NFL constitution and a temporary restraining order.

The Raiders proposed move to Los Angeles was blocked by the NFL under its Rule 4.3 which requires approval from three-fourths of its owners for a franchise relocation.

Davis moved some secretarial personnel and equipment to Los Angeles, then sent Rozelle a letter stating, "We are now in Los Angeles and we are now the Los Angeles Raiders."

"At a meeting of team owners in Dallas on March 3 (1980) I asked Al Davis if he intended to move his team to Los Angeles and he said, 'Yes,'" Rozelle said. "I then asked him if he intended to seek league approval as required in our constitution and he said, 'No.'"

"That brought the whole matter to a head," Rozelle said under questioning by Coliseum attorney Richard Blechler. "I then asked the team owners to give me permission to use anything in my powers to stop the Raiders from moving."

Seven days after the meeting in Dallas the owners in a vote in San Francisco, Calif., — without Davis making a proposal — they voted 22-0 with five abstentions to allow the move.

"The NFL then obtained a temporary restraining order from an Oakland court banning the Raiders from moving for 20 days."

"It became a grave concern of ours when the Raiders opened a ticket office in Los Angeles and moved equipment and trucks to Los Angeles and started doing business," Rozelle said. "That's when we really took notice of the situation."

It was at that point the NFL joined the city of Oakland in a lawsuit to take the franchise away from Davis and his limited partner, Rozelle signed an affidavit in that action and Oakland officials filed the legal documents there on May 17, 1980.

Under often-heated questioning by Raiders' attorney Joseph Aloto, Rozelle admitted an NFL rule prevents a city from owning a franchise but said under the circumstances in Oakland it "would not be inconsistent with the NFL constitution."

Aloto read a transcript of last summer's trial, which ended in a hung jury, in which Rozelle said, "We preferred that action because the other option was asking that Mr. Davis go to jail for violating a court order. We did not want to have to do that."

Rozelle confirmed Friday that option was considered by himself and NFL attorneys at the time, but it and the plan to turn the team over to the city of Oakland was scrapped when Davis voluntarily moved his personnel back to Oakland and resumed business there.

Aloto also produced documents showing Rozelle had asked 14 of the biggest California banks not to loan Davis any money because of the pending antitrust action.

"You realize it's a serious business to cut off a man's bank financing, out of his life supply?" asked Aloto. "I realize it was serious business when the Raiders moved to Los Angeles against the league constitution and the court orders, just simply picking up and moving and selling tickets in Los Angeles and telling us they're going to stay in Los Angeles," Rozelle replied. "I realize that was very serious business."

Jerome high jumper Endli Schrader checks her clearance as she clears the bar at 5-2 to win the competition in Friday's quadrangular meet

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls and Jerome leveled another 1-2 blast against eastern Idaho teams during a cold quadrangular track meet Friday.

Twin Falls took both team titles while Jerome was a solid second. It was a long way back in team points in Skyline and Blackfoot.

Not many first places escaped the two Magic Valley teams and Twin Falls girls outlook improved immensely when junior Meale Miller debuted in the hurdles and won both events. She also claimed the long jump at 16-4 1/2 to become the day's only triple winner.

"As soon as she learns to get over the hurdle quickly instead of floating, she'll be in the low 15s immediately," predicted hurdle coach Jim Ferguson. Miller, who had no trouble with three sprints like 100 meters hurdles, clipped her first competitive flight in 15.9. "It's just technique refinement from now on," said Ferguson, obviously looking forward to district and state.

Two-time state sprint champion Sally Butts picked up the short dashes for the Bruins but she was pressed by Vicki Winder and Joni James in pulling out close victories.

"It was just too cold," Butts said of the tight wins, particularly in the 200 where James was bare inches behind. Butts placed second in the high jump.

With Butts back ostensibly to handle the sprints, Twin Falls coaches decided to do some experimenting with sprinter Dina Libert who was a triple winner in last week's meet.

"Dina simply doesn't like the 100," Coach Jerry Kleinkopf said of his senior star. "It bugs her so we probably won't put her back in that. Today we were looking to see what we could do with our relays. We don't have enough depth to make the relays competitive. After that I would say that Dina will stay in the 200 and 400 and probably the 400 and mile relays."

Despite the double victory, Kleinkopf wasn't pleased.

"The spring break seemed to hurt us more this week than when we ran during vacation last week. Most of our runner just didn't look good today," he said.

The Bruin girls' point total was trimmed somewhat when illness took Tammy Crow of the mile and half mile.

In the boys division, Don McMurrain won both hurdle events to pace the Bruins on the track and added places in the distance jumps. The other double winner was Jerome sophomore Gary Hulse who was largely unimpressed in taking the weights.

Jerome's Paul Schwager and Bruin senior Steve Galley had a pair of duels. Galley won the first, the open 400-meter dash, quite handily but when he came up on Schwager's shoulder in an effort to pull out the mile relay victory, the Jerome runner fought him off to win. Schwager also won the 200.

Jerome again completely dominated in everything above 800 meters. But Twin Falls mastered the sprints almost as completely to offset the Tigers' big distance last surge.

The meet was the Bruins' last home appearance until the Twin Falls Classic the first weekend in May. The Bruins will travel to Pocatello for a triangular meet Wednesday.

Monson: There is a possibility . . .

TWIN FALLS — How rare when north meets south. How rare indeed when north Idaho meets southern Idaho.

The guy who prompted all that Thursday night, University of Idaho Coach Don Monson, made special comment on that during the "Monson Appreciation Night."

"It's a breakthrough that southern Idaho would bring a northern Idaho guy down here and honor him. But it's more than that. It's a breakthrough for the Idaho Vandals," Monson said.

What Monson further didn't understand, that there were Northiders and Southiders and Mini-Cassians-Twin Fallsians rubbing elbows and having a great time together. For the night, at least, Monson was the panacea of the state.

"This is the first time we've ever had to fight like hell to keep a coach," said Dye in the Vandal Booster Jerry Meyerboffer. Eden booster Jim Shawyer, after Monson was handed a $5,000 check, said "This isn't to keep him here. If he decides he has to go, then he has to. This is just to show our appreciation for what he's done for the university and the state the past four years."

accept it as a Don Monson night.

"I can't stand up here and not feel my pride swell," Monson told about 250 who coughed up $25 apiece to be there. "Go get all you people so involved with Idaho, my old school, swells me with pride."

Monson couldn't help reflect on how dramatically his life has changed in the past six years. "He's been an assistant coach in the Big Ten twice taken his team to the NCAA tournament and had it all culminated when he was selected by the NCAA Division I basketball coaches as the Kodak national coach of the year."

"Six years ago I was coaching in high school," he said, shaking his head as if it all hadn't sunk in.

"Last weekend I was surprised to find myself just chit-chatting with a few of them (the nation's best known coaches), and then wind up standing in front of 1,500 of them and accepting that trophy."

Monson said he really didn't have much to do with it all. "I had a team that did incredible things. If you wanted, to sit down and pluck out things you'd want a basketball team to be this team is it," he praised his players.

"They won the sportsmanship trophy for the Far West. I am most appreciative of my players," Monson continued. "You cannot help getting involved with this bunch of kids. They are compassionate, totally unselfish with a great feeling for each other. Their interest was not only for the things that were possible for them but for the university."

"I couldn't say for more. What makes this thing so special is the type of kids I had this year."

There is a story concerning that Kodak coach of the year award. Monson's candidacy was presented by Michigan State's Jud Heathcote and Washington's Mary Harshman. There, of course, were other nominees and the discussion from the floor started.

Then Indiana Coach Bobby Knight stood up and said "Hell, anyone who wins 27 games at Idaho deserves it."

There was nearly unanimous.

"I didn't hear him say that," Monson confirmed, "but that's how I heard it."

"For the next two days all I got done was having my picture taken. In front of the Superdome, portraits, standing up, sitting down. They took more pictures in two days than I've had the rest of my life."

But in the end, the big question remained: Will Don Monson be at Idaho next year? There's talk of multi-year contracts, tenure, etc. But at age 49, the brass ring doesn't pass very often. He acknowledged that his name is linked with the opening at University of Wisconsin. "The media there has been mentioning his name considerably the past 10 days. Monson said, "I've had four calls from Wisconsin this week — all of them from the media and none from the school. I haven't talked to any Wisconsin school official."

"I like Idaho. I really don't want to leave Idaho. But from a financial standpoint — for the welfare and security of my family I have to look into these possibilities," said.

"I don't have any other job offers and I'm not one to say I want another job. I am not seriously, actively seeking another job. But next week something might come up. And then with an ambiguity that would make an international diplomat proud, Monson said "there is a possibility that I probably will be back next year."

'Beautiful' spring skiing more like work of winter

Whatever became of those beautiful spring skiing days that make late season skiing something special?

The snow, cold temperatures and wind this spring have made even a few skiers wonder if winter is going to end.

Skiers reported this week by area resorts sound more like January than April. Sun Valley reported 18 inches of new snow and Soldier Mountain had a foot of new powder at the lodge and 18 inches at the top of the mountain.

Claude Hinkle, Soldier manager, said his resort will operate Friday, Saturday and Sunday only for the rest of the season. The three-day operation will continue as long as the slopes can attract 200 or 300 skiers on weekend days. He said there is plenty of snow for a weekend season, but the key is profitable operation.

Hinkle said buses are running every Saturday and Sunday to Soldier Mountain and will run to the end of the season.

Pomerelle also received about a foot of snow at the lodge in a 48-hour period and about 70 feet at the top of the slopes.

With nine-and-a-half feet of snow at the lodge, Sandy Anderson, wife of resort owner Woody Anderson, said she was a little taken back one day this week when a woman called to ask about skiing conditions. The woman wanted to be sure there weren't any rocks showing through on the runs. Anderson said it has been so long since she has seen a rock she might not be able to identify one.

The Andersons already have cut back on operations at both Pomerelle and Magic Mountain.

Night skiing at Pomerelle ended last Saturday and lifts are now running from 10 a.m. until 4:30 p.m. daily. Bus service has also been discontinued to both resorts for the season.

Magic Mountain is operating weekends only and will continue as long as ski crowds make the operation worthwhile, said Woody Anderson, resort manager.

Anderson, resort manager.

The April 17 Spring Fling at Pomerelle, open to all interested skiers, will feature some new events this year. The Pomerelle ski instructors have challenged the Pomerelle Ski Patrol to a softball game on skis, and there will be a golf game for skier-golfers. The players will use orange colored balls and will follow the rules and regulations set up by the Burley Municipal Golf Course pro.

The usual gelade jumps, dual slalom, no-slip downhill and partner slalom events will be offered. Cash and merchandise prizes will be donated by Mini-Cassia area businesses and the ski resort.

Ski resort operators say this has been an excellent season for the local ski areas although the larger resorts report some drop in skier numbers. Most of the larger areas say the economy of the country is probably keeping ski tourists at home. Transportation to the resort, overnight accommodations and meals for a skiing family can make a winter skiing vacation costly indeed.

Anderson said Pomerelle had excellent snow last year although not the normal depths. Because of skippy conditions being talked about throughout the West, Anderson said, it was hard to convince some skeptical skiers they should come and try it out.

This year Soldier Mountain, lost several days of operation because of too much snow on the access roads. Heavy snow and winds also discouraged skiers during what should have been peak skier days.

He estimated he may have lost 3,000 to 4,000 skier days because of extreme weather conditions. Most resorts say they've not totaled up the season's skier days but they feel this was a good year because of the good snow. Had economic conditions been better, it would undoubtedly have been a record season for all.

It is difficult to compare 1982 skier numbers with those of last year. Sun Valley was the only major resort that could offer good conditions in last year's snow-short winter. As a result it hosted record crowds. This year all areas can boast excellent conditions and Sun Valley has had to share the bounty.

Magic Mountain operated only a few weeks last season and then closed because of lack of snow. This puts the 1981-82 winter figures in a much better light.

Hard winter kills fish at Wilson Lake

By STU MURRELL
Special to the Times-News

JEROME — Thousands of fish have died at Wilson Lake, this winter because of heavy ice and snow cover. Wilson Lake, located near Hazelton, is a regulating irrigation reservoir for the Northside Canal Company and is drawn down in the fall. It historically has sustained some fish kills each winter with the drawdown, but this winter caused a particularly large dieoff.

Many of the fish are non-game species, such as carp and suckers, but bullhead catfish and yellow perch are also involved.

Heavy snowfall on top of the ice blocks smothered what aquatic plants need to produce oxygen. In addition, decomposition of dead material reduces the oxygen supply. These two factors, combined with a large number of fish in a limited amount of water, cause fish to die of oxygen starvation.

According to Bob Bell, regional fishery manager, annual thinning of the bullhead and sucker population in Wilson Lake is not necessarily bad since catfish tend to overpopulate and become stunted. Wilson Lake has produced excellent catches in the past with the state record of two pounds, 11 ounces caught in 1977. Fishermen creel checks this spring have shown it is continuing to produce nice stringers of catfish over a pound.

Another body of water in Region 4 that sustains winter kills is Mormon Reservoir. Fishermen will commonly report dead perch around the margins when the ice first melts in the spring.

The Fish and Game Department and the Department of Health and Welfare check on any fish that are reported. We appreciate receiving this type of information quickly when a fish kill is observed by a sportsman. If the kill is man-caused, then the person responsible can be liable for the cost of the fish loss. Fishermen are, reporting good catches of rainbow trout and fall chinook salmon at Salmon Falls Creek Reservoir. However, they have indicated the salmon are infested with a small copepod (commonly called fish lice) on the gills. They attach themselves to the fish's gills and suck their blood. This is not an unusual situation, and the copepod eventually falls off once its life cycle is completed. They do not affect the eating quality of the fish and are eaten by trout and salmon during their free swimming stage.

Stu Murrell is the regional conservation educator for the Jerome office of the Idaho Fish and Game Department.

Denis Watson one up on Edwards

GREENSBORO, N.C. (UPI) — South African Denis Watson, in his second year on the tour, fired a seven-under-par 65 Friday to take a one-shot lead over Danny Edwards after the second round of the Greater Greensboro Open.

The 28-year-old South African had 11 one-putt greens on his way to the day's lowest round and stood at seven under 137 for 36 holes. Edwards, a first-round co-leader and a winner here in 1977, followed his first-round 66 with an even-par 72 Friday after a double bogey on his final hole.

Thompson with a 70. Edwards, who began the day tied with Fergus, had a chance to take the lead, going to 8 under on the second nine, before finishing with a double bogey on the 18th. On the 16th, his drive hit the trees and he was unable for a par by sinking an eight-foot putt.

Two strokes off the pace were Hal Sutton with a 69, D.A. Weirburg with a 68, Bobby Waddins with a 67, Doug Black with a 70, Keith Fergus with a 73, Jim Thorpe with a 68, Fuzzy Zoeller with a 68.

"I suppose it's the pollen. I took an allergy pill yesterday and I felt lunkier for the first 15 holes, and then I played well the last three holes when it wore off. I didn't lose one today."

"I didn't drive the ball quite as well as yesterday, and it cost me at 16 and 18," said Edwards, whose first-round victory came on this course. "I hit a lot of good putts, some of them just didn't go. I'm still alive."

Watson, who joined the tour last year and finished in the top 10 four times, had a round of seven birdies as

Stalking the leaders at four under for the tournament were J.C. Sneed with a 66, second-round 69, Woody Blackburn with a 70, Lanny Waddins with a 71, Mark McCumber with a 69, George Cadie with a 73 and Leonard Thorpe, who grew up in nearby Roxboro, said he had a little extra incentive in shooting one of his better rounds of the year.

Eagle census tops 1,000

BOISE — For the first time in four years, more than 1,000 eagles were counted in Idaho during census made over a two-week period in January.

Count totals from all parts of the state included 688 bald eagles, 337 golden eagles and 97 that could not be identified by species, according to Karen Steenhof, a biologist for the Bureau of Land Management in the Birds of Prey National Area.

The highest count came from northern Idaho, where 770 eagles were spotted. The highest concentrations occurred at lakes Pend Oreille and Coeur d'Alene, Steenhof said. Eastern Idaho reported 157 eagles. A majority of the sightings were near American Falls Reservoir.

The project helps to detect changes in population levels and identify important eagle habitats, according to Steenhof.

Stacy holds three-shot lead in LPGA's richest tourney

RANCHO MIRAGE, Calif. (UPI) — Hollis Stacy is the leader at the halfway point in the chase for the richest purse in women's golf.

temperatures scattered rain and 30 mph winds.

Stacy fired a seven-under-par 65 Friday for a two-round total of 138 and a three-stroke lead over Pat Bradley at the $310,000 LPGA tournament at the Mission Hills Country Club.

Temperatures climbed to 72 Friday with clear skies.

The tournament is sponsored by Dinah Shore and Nabisco. Stacy's round was one stroke off the tournament record of 64 shot in the final round last year by tournament winner Nancy Lopez-Melton, who was 10 shots behind Stacy, following Friday's round.

One stroke behind Stacy in third place was veteran Sandra Haynie, 38, a winner of 40 events in 21 years on the tour, who rejoined the tour last year after taking two seasons off with injuries. She matched Bradley's 3-under-par 69.

"Conditions were ideal today," said the 28-year-old Stacy, who fell out of a first-place tie in the opening round with a double bogey on the 18th hole while playing in 45-degree temperatures, scattered rain and 30 mph winds.

Wall's 67 good for tie with Goosie

TAMPA, Fla. (UPI) — Art Wall fired a five-under-par 67 Friday to move into a tie for the second-round lead with C. Goosie at the $125,000 Seniors Classic.

to his 67, the lowest round of the tournament. He birdied the first two holes, a 50-yard par 5 and a 365-yard par 3 and added two more birdies on the seventh and eighth.

One stroke behind Wall and Goosie was Bill Collins of Meyersdale, Pa., at 70-140. Trailing by two strokes was Paul Harvey of Cape Cod, Mass., at 72-140. Wall, 59, made eight birdies enroute Wall had what he called mental lapses on the fifth and ninth holes for bogeys and made the turn at two-under-par 34.

Martins end successful sled dog season

JEROME — Sled dog racer Terry Martin returned to the Magic Valley this week after completing his most successful season since entering the unlimited-class racing circuit three years ago.

Martin placed first or second in seven of the 10 class events he entered this season. The 41-year-old Jerome resident finished the year by taking the Northway race in Alaska in record time. In that March 26-27 event, Martin first took three minutes off the track record, then beat his own time by 14 additional seconds in a second run of his 10-dog team across the 16-mile course.

Trade deficit facing OPEC, forecasters say

WASHINGTON (UPI) — OPEC members may be facing a deficit this year.

"If so it is a situation reversing more than a decade of generating massive balance-of-payments surpluses," a major economic forecasting firm predicted Friday.

A report by Wharton Economic Forecasting Associates estimated that at the end of this calendar year, members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries will show a $1.8 billion balance-of-payments deficit, in contrast to surpluses of $56 billion last year and $102 billion in 1980.

The forecast is based on calculations of the total value of imported goods, services and financial transfers — known to economists as "current accounts" — minus exports. It is the broadest possible measure of a nation's international trade.

Wharton also predicted that the oil exporting nations will show only "a slight surplus of $2.4 billion in 1982 and $4.5 billion in 1984."

The economists attributed the situation to "the decline in the volume of oil exports and the recent oil price plunge."

The Philadelphia-based Wharton firm was founded and headed by Dr. Lawrence Klein, the 1980 Nobel Prize-winner for economics. The analysis of OPEC was prepared in Washington by the firm's Middle East Service, directed by economist Yanoan Zanoayan.

Noting OPEC members have not suffered a balance-of-payments deficit since 1970, Zanoayan described the three-year forecast of sharply reduced surpluses as "unique" in OPEC's recent history. He also said, the oil exporters have little control over the situation.

"This year, to increase their surplus by their own action would be almost impossible," Zanoayan said. "All they can do to avoid a drop in prices is to keep production and exports down. Demands the key right now, and they can't influence that."

The study noted, however, that despite the surplus reduction, individual oil exporters will not have to liquidate foreign assets because the "major asset-holding countries — primarily Saudi Arabia and Kuwait — are still expected to have current account surpluses."

Rather, OPEC members will be forced to curtail new investments — primarily in the United States, West Germany and Japan — where they have tended to place most of their assets, Zanoayan concluded.

But this is not likely to cause a shortage of investment capital, he said, because "the moderating OPEC surpluses mean there will be less of a trade deficit for oil importers. So these countries would be in less need of foreign capital."

Nevada well test shows oil

DENVER — Oil and water were recovered from tests of a Nevada Amoco well, a major step in the search for oil in the state.

Drillstem tests were conducted on the Amoco at Blackburn No. 3 wildcat well in Eureka County, Nev., located about 45 miles southeast of Elko.

Officials said that while test results from the 7,060-7,199 foot level were encouraging, further evaluation is required. The well remains classified as a light hole. Pending that evaluation, four offset locations have been permitted.

Amoco and Getty Oil Co. are co-owners of working interest in the well until payout. After that, those firms and North Central Oil Corp. will each hold a third interest in the well.

Amoco and Getty are currently drilling Big Pole Creek No. 1 well, four miles west of Blackburn No. 3.

Shutdown manager chosen

KELLOGG (UPI) — Bunker Hill Co. officials have appointed a new manager to oversee final shutdown of the Silver Valley lead-zinc-copper producing plant.

Officials said Harry Tierney would serve as manager to supervise final salvage and demolition, and accompanying legal and financial matters, associated with closure of the mine and smelter in Kellogg.

Tierney is expected to stay at the Bunker Hill site after the dismissal of other executives — including President Jack Kendrick and five of his vice presidents, they said.

Bunker Hill's parent company — Gulf Resources and Chemical Corp. of Houston — announced plans to shut down the mine and smelter last November. Since then nearly all of the operation's 2,100 employees have been laid off, and several major facilities have been closed or sold as salvage.

Another recession forecast

SPOKANE (UPI) — The Intermountain Logging Conference's keynote speaker had a surprising "good news-bad news" prophecy, including the belief that another recession will occur by the middle of the decade.

"The good news is that the recession or depression that our industry is in will end in 1983," William Hall, a former business school professor, said Thursday.

"The bad news is that real growth rates will remain slow until the next recession in 1986 or 1987."

Hall predicted housing starts will enjoy a 30 percent growth rate next year, but then slip to only modest gains of eight to 10 percent for the following two years.

"The decade of the '80s will be characterized by lower real growth rates, higher energy costs and intensified competition," he said.

Hall said slower growth and higher energy costs will result in pressure on profit margins and lower rates of reinvestment.

Bank splits common stock

VANCOUVER (UPI) — The Bank of British Columbia reported a two-for-one split of its common shares and completion of a rights offering that raised $12 million.

The bank said common shareholders will receive one additional common share for each share held as of March 15.

The common shares started trading on a split basis March 9 on the Vancouver, Alberta and Toronto stock exchanges.

The bank said also it has completed an offering to shareholders of 297,823 common shares at $41 each. The $12 million will be added to the bank's capital base, after expenses.

No benefits for GM hands

FREMONT, Calif. (UPI) — The majority of General Motors workers laid off at the Fremont Assembly plant which closed early this month are not eligible for "increased unemployment benefits" under the company's new contract, it was learned Friday.

The new pact with the United Auto Workers provides a guaranteed income until age 62 for any workers who have 10 years' seniority. However, the provision applies only to employees on the payroll as of March 1.

Truck production in high gear but cars stalled

DETROIT — Car production in the first quarter of 1982 dropped 31 percent from the same period last year, but the five U.S. firms recorded a steady increase in truck production, U.S. carmakers said they have built 1,670,230 autos so far this year, down from the 1,553,351 built in the first three months of 1981.

Truck production of 437,080 is up 5 percent from 416,585 vehicles built to date last year.

The automakers built 467,290 cars in March, down from 619,139 the same month in 1981. Truck production last month of 198,378 was up 27.8 percent from the 155,204 vehicles built in March 1981.

General Motors Corp. said its March car production dropped 22 percent over last year, but truck production for the nation's biggest automaker was up 17.8 percent.

So far this year, GM has built 684,370 cars — down 31 percent from 965,545 in the first three months of 1981. GM's truck production this year is up 1.4 percent.

Ford Motor Co. said it built 21.4 percent fewer cars in March versus the same month in 1981, but its truck production jumped 27.7 percent.

So far this year, Ford's car production of 211,861 is down 35 percent from the 325,273 autos built last year. Its truck production is up 10.4 percent, however.

Chrysler Corp. car production dropped 30.3 percent in March from a year ago but its truck production is up 67.8 percent.

The automaker so far this year has built 136,928 autos, down 38 percent from 192,270 to date in 1981. Truck production for Chrysler this year is up 67.6 percent.

American Motors Corp. March car production was down 46 percent from last year and its Jeep production down 10.2 percent. In 1982, AMC has produced 13,335 cars, down 40.5 percent from 22,423 in 1981. Its truck production is down 15 percent this year.

Volkswagen of America, Inc. saw its March car production plummet 62 percent but truck production skyrocketed 190 percent over last year. So far this year, VW has built 23,727 cars, down 50.5 percent from 1981. Its truck production is down 59.5 percent for 1982.

Wall Street advances again as traders turn optimistic

By MARIANNA OHE
United Press International

NEW YORK — Stock prices advanced for the second day in a row Friday.

The gain came as traders shrugged off economic uncertainty in the conviction that the overvalued market finally has hit bottom.

Trading was active.

The Dow Jones industrial average, maintaining its early lead throughout the session except for a brief hesitation at midday, gained 5.33 points to 338.57 — 11 jumped 20.55 for the week overall, the third straight weekly advance.

The closely-watched average of 30 blue chip stocks soared 10.47 points Thursday. It lost less than 2 points Wednesday after adding 6 in the previous two sessions, with the market closing mixed all three days.

The New York Stock Exchange index rose 0.73 to 66.62 and the price of an average share increased 31 cents. Standard & Poor's 500-stock index gained 1.33 to 116.12. Advances topped declines 1,037-468 among the 1,368 issues traded.

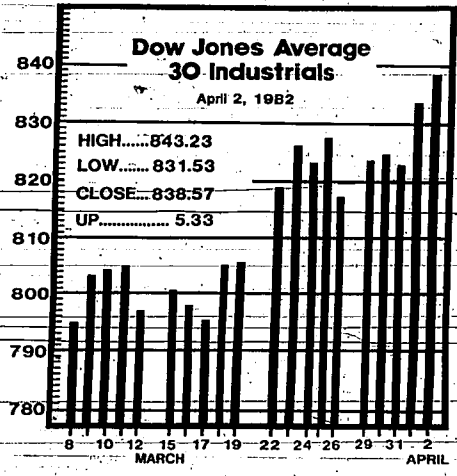

Big Board volume came to 59,800,000 shares compared with 57,100,000 traded Thursday.

Analysts said traders increasingly believe the market is ready to recapture some of the ground lost in its 10-month slide from the Dow 1,000 level. Some observers think a new floor will be established in the Dow 840 area.

Anticipation of the Federal Reserve's latest report on the nation's money supply, released shortly after the market's close, did not cause the usual slowdown in Friday afternoon trading. Analysts had been expecting a $1-$5 billion drop in the supply.

The Fed reported the basic measure of money known as M1 fell $3 billion in the week ended March 24.

The market has shrugged off the recent surge in interest rates as a seasonal aberration rather than a sign of Federal Reserve tightening of credit.

among the 775 issues traded. Composite volume came to 4,354,095 shares compared with 3,807,700 Thursday.

The National Association of OTC stocks rose 1.25 to 176.56.

On the trading floor, IBM was the most active NYSE-listed issue, up 1/4 to 61 1/2.

Other computer issues also were surging after a publisher's report pointed out the stocks' recent strength despite poor earnings estimates and quoted analysts as saying the recently battered technology sector may lead the market's bottoming out.

Datapoint jumped 1/4 to 25. Data General 1 1/4 to 34 1/2, Motorola 1 to 59, Tandy Corp. 1/4 to 31 1/4, Digital Equipment 1/2 to 78 1/2, Honeywell 1/4 to 69 1/4 and Sony 1/4 to 14 1/4 in trading that included a block of 100,000 shares at 14 1/4.

Santa Fe Industries was the second most active issue, up 1 to 15 1/4. American Express was third, unchanged at 48 1/4 in trading that included a block of 341,000 shares at 48 1/4.

Jos. Schlitz Brewing Co. fell 1/4 to 14 1/4. Schlitz is fighting a cash tender offer by Stroh Brewery Co. of Detroit.

Standard Oil (Indiana) surged 3/4 to 40. Standard Oil of Ohio 1 1/4 to 35 1/4, Atlantic Richfield 1/4 to 40 1/4, Exxon 7/8 to 28 1/4, Superior Oil 2 to 30 1/4 and Irving Oil (Canada) for the S&P.

Pfizer Inc., fourth on the active list, jumped 3/4 to 52 1/2.

On the Amex, Dome Petroleum was the most active issue, up 1/4 to 7 1/4. Wang Laboratories B was second, up 1/4 to 29 1/4. Pacific Gas & Electric Co. preferred E was third, down 1/4 to 14. American Express warrants rose 1/4 to 13.

No decision on Colorado fuel project

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The chairman of the U.S. Synthetic Fuels Corporation said Friday he is concerned about higher cost estimates, but no decision has been made about "pulling the plug" on the Colony synthetic project in Colorado.

"We're going to make a hard-nosed decision," Edwin Noble told the House fossil and synthetic fuels subcommittee. "We are not looking at it through any rose-colored glasses."

The corporation is reviewing the economic outlook of the project and the Tosco Corp.'s equity contributions, which have been given federal loan guarantees.

"We have not reached the point of pulling the plug," Noble said. "But even if we did, Exxon may decide to go ahead on its own."

Tosco has about a 40 percent interest in the multi-billion dollar project, Exxon the rest.

Dividend increases fewer during March

NEW YORK (UPI) — Standard & Poor's Corp. said Friday the number of companies reporting increased dividend payments during March declined 21 percent from the year-earlier levels.

According to The Outlook, a publication of the reporting service, March was the eighth consecutive month in which the number of companies declaring dividend payments fell from the year ago levels.

The reporting service said of the 2,374 dividends declared in March, the total number of favorable dividend actions, including increases, extra and resumptions fell 21 percent to 169 from 214 a year ago.

S&P said 141 companies increased their dividend payments last month, down from 177 in March 1981.

Extra dividends declined to 26 from 33 last year while resumed dividends fell to 12 from 14 in 1981.

The American Stock Exchange index gained 1.39 to 264.88 and the price of a share increased 7 cents. Advances topped declines 344-219 Thursday.

Composite volume of NYSE issues traded on all U.S. exchanges and over the counter totaled 69,977,000 shares compared with 67,153,270 traded the week ended March 24.

The American Stock Exchange index gained 1.39 to 264.88 and the price of a share increased 7 cents. Advances topped declines 344-219 Thursday.

Jury awards inventor $5 million

CHICAGO (UPI) — A federal court, jury Friday ordered Sears, Roebuck and Co. to pay a former sales clerk $5 million in damages for willfully infringing on the patent of an inventor of a "quick release" socket wrench.

The jury Tuesday found Sears guilty of willful patent infringement against Peter M. Roberts, 37, Red Bank, Tenn., who invented the push-button wrench in 1962, while working as an 18-year-old clerk at a Sears store in Gardner, Mass.

The jury heard two days of testimony before U.S. District Judge, Nicholas S. Squires, who has no immediate comment.

The Tuesday verdict followed a seven-day trial that determined Roberts' patent was valid and that Sears has willfully infringed on it since Jan. 20, 1977, when another federal court jury found Sears guilty of fraud, breach of a confidential relationship and misrepresentation in convincing him to give up his patent rights for $10,000.

Testimony indicated Sears executives told Roberts they didn't think the wrench would go over well even though they planned to produce 50,000 of the devices that week.

That first jury ordered Sears to pay Roberts $1 million.

Roberts invented the wrench in 1963 and claimed Sears misled him into signing away the rights. The wrench incorporated a push button that would permit the easy removal of sockets from the wrench with one hand. The jury rejected arguments by Sears that the giant retailer had altered the design sufficiently in the ensuing years to make it a completely different tool.

Truck production in high gear but cars stalled

By MICHELINE INTERNATIONAL
United Press International

DETROIT — Car production in the first quarter of 1982 dropped 31 percent from the same period last year, but the five U.S. firms recorded a steady increase in truck production, U.S. carmakers said they have built 1,670,230 autos so far this year, down from the 1,553,351 built in the first three months of 1981.

Truck production of 437,080 is up 5 percent from 416,585 vehicles built to date last year.

The automakers built 467,290 cars in March, down from 619,139 the same month in 1981. Truck production last month of 198,378 was up 27.8 percent from the 155,204 vehicles built in March 1981.

General Motors Corp. said its March car production dropped 22 percent over last year, but truck production for the nation's biggest automaker was up 17.8 percent.

So far this year, GM has built 684,370 cars — down 31 percent from 965,545 in the first three months of 1981. GM's truck production this year is up 1.4 percent.

Ford Motor Co. said it built 21.4 percent fewer cars in March versus the same month in 1981, but its truck production jumped 27.7 percent.

So far this year, Ford's car production of 211,861 is down 35 percent from the 325,273 autos built last year. Its truck production is up 10.4 percent, however.

Chrysler Corp. car production dropped 30.3 percent in March from a year ago but its truck production is up 67.8 percent.

The automaker so far this year has built 136,928 autos, down 38 percent from 192,270 to date in 1981. Truck production for Chrysler this year is up 67.6 percent.

American Motors Corp. March car production was down 46 percent from last year and its Jeep production down 10.2 percent. In 1982, AMC has produced 13,335 cars, down 40.5 percent from 22,423 in 1981. Its truck production is down 15 percent this year.

Volkswagen of America, Inc. saw its March car production plummet 62 percent but truck production skyrocketed 190 percent over last year. So far this year, VW has built 23,727 cars, down 50.5 percent from 1981. Its truck production is down 59.5 percent for 1982.

American farmers given option to extend loans on grain crops

WASHINGTON (UPI) — To avoid taking over large amounts of grain, the government is giving farmers an option to extend price support loans for an extra year on some 1980 and 1981 grains.

"This option is being offered because prices for these commodities are currently low," Sealey Ludwick, undersecretary of agriculture, said. It applies to loans for wheat, oats and barley from both 1980 and 1981; for corn and grain sorghum harvested in 1980 only; and for rye from 1981 only. After harvest, farmers can get government price support loans for their crops, with their crops as collateral.

Generally, when the loans are due, farmers repay the money with interest. But prices are so close to the price support loan rate that it would make sense for farmers to forefill their crops rather than repay the loans with interest.

The action prevents the government, which already holds grain acquired after the 1980 grain embargo that it has been unable to sell, from having to take over large additional quantities of grain.

Producers extending their 1980 crops for an additional year will be charged an interest rate of 12.25 percent through Dec. 31. The rate is subject to change in January.

Extended 1981 loans will continue to bear their existing interest rates. They vary according to cost of money to the government during the month loans are made.

In another announcement, the department reduced by 1 percent the interest rate for crop price support loans issued in April.

The new rate is 13.875 percent, down from a March rate of 14.875 percent. The rates reflect interest charged by the department's bank, the Commodity Credit Corp., by the Treasury.
