Guru Reagan unveils tuition credit beats town

beats town

ANTELOPE, Ore. (UPI) — Residents of the tiny town of Antelope voted Thursday to dissolve the 61-year-old community in an effort to keep it from being taken over by the followers of an Indian Guru.

The vote was 55-42 against disincorporation. But of the 61 ballots cast, 70 were challenged, opening the way for a court action to decide if certain voters, many of them red-robed followers of the guru, were eligible to cast ballots.

Ray Phelps, Oregon director of elections, said, "It's the most number of challenges I've ever heard of in my nine years. You can go a whole election without a challenge."

Although the town had only 92 registered voters Thursday morning, Oregon law allows residents to register after polls open.

Antelope City Attorney Keith Mobley said he expected the election to be challenged, a move which would send the matter before a Wasco County Circuit Court judge who would decide whether certain voters had a right to cast ballots.

Followers of guru Ghanwan Shree Rajneesh earlier said they would give up their rights as voting citizens of the town only if longtime residents met certain conditions.

Ma Prem Sheela, co-manager of the nearby ranch where guru Rajneesh, 50, set up headquarters last year, called an Election Day news conference to outline those conditions.

With her plebeils-stricken leg propped on pillows, she said the 280 followers and commercial zone of the 64,000-acre Big Muddy Ranch, 17 miles south of Antelope, which was purchased by the followers and originally planned as a separate city.

They also sought permission to set up their new city on the ranch, to be called Rajneeshpuram, and a guarantee that the properties they have acquired in Antelope would be bought from them, she said.

Even if Antelope is dissolved, the guru followers will win out in the long run, she said.

"If this city goes, we will have our Rajneeshpuram," she said. "Either way, we are the winners. We are not going to stop our work because there is not a town."

"I'm not going to leave Oregon, because I love Oregon more than native Oregonians do," Ms. Sheela added.

Rajneesh and his followers' hopes of forming a city on the ranch were blocked by legal challenges, and longtime Antelope residents fear they were trying to gain enough voting strength in the town to take over.

A bottle ban in Harmon Park might ensure that one's bare feet will only come in contact with tickling blades of grass.

Bottle ban

Park-area residents want glass outlawed to solve hazards

By SUSAN GALLAGHER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Banning bottles in Harmon Park could curb the glass-smashing revelry of rowdy park visitors, claim two residents of the area.

Don Christian and Steve Lutes, who own homes off Harmon Park Avenue, say broken glass is a major hazard both at the park and at nearby residential property, and a bottle ban could be at least a partial solution.

"There's a limit to what you can and should have to put up with," says Lutes, who joined Christian at a City Council meeting last year to complain about general conditions at the park. Problems included drunkenness, littering, breakage of glass, late-night noise, fast driving and public urination, they told council members.

"You could run barefoot through that park when I was a kid, but I dare you to do that now," because broken glass is such a hazard, Christian said at the meeting last August.

The city responded by adopting a curfew that gave police officers authority to order people to leave the park at night.

"The curfew has been a big help," Christian says. "The police have been patrolling real well since last fall, and I think you have to hand it to (police Chief) Tim Qualls for that."

"When we've had problems, we've called the police," Lutes says. "They come when they can, but with the rest of the city to patrol, you can't expect them to come all the time."

Lutes and Christian say that last year, they waited until late in the summer to approach City Council about undesirable conditions at the park, but this year, they're acting early to foster a more tolerable summer in the neighborhood. The two plan to present their ideas at a City Council meeting Monday night, and they're encouraging their neighbors to attend.

A bottle ban is their first priority. Of interest, but of less importance, is the installation of speed-control bumps in the park area, Christian and Lutes say.

Idaho cities that have banned glass containers in parks include Boise, which passed such an ordinance in March 1981. Offenders can be punished with a maximum fine of $300 or 30 days in jail.

"I wouldn't say the number of arraignments for this is overwhelming, but occasionally we see one in court," says Fred Kozak of the city's legal department. "The police patrol the parks, and if they see someone with a glass container, they can write a ticket."

Jack Cooper, the director of the Boise Parks Department, says the parks have less broken glass, but no apparent reduction in drunkenness in the parks, since adoption of the bottle ban.

The bottle ban's effect goes hand-in-hand with the recent expansion of police patrols in the parks, Cooper says. On any given day during the warm-weather months, six officers traveling on foot, in cars and on motorcycles patrol Boise's Greenbelt and three major parks.

Boise has more officers assigned to parks than the city of Twin Falls typically has on street patrols. Since four officers usually are on patrol, the enforcement of a bottle ban in Twin Falls parks probably would be hit-and-miss at best, says City Manager Tom Courtney.

But, Lutes says, "When the officers do drive by, at least they'll have a law to enforce."

Public schools quick to fight 'choice' option

CHICAGO (UPI) — President Reagan Thursday proposed tuition tax credits for families with students in private schools.

He said the government should give parents the "right to choose" where their children attend class.

In a speech to the National Catholic Educational Association, Reagan announced a tax-break plan that eventually would allow many families to subtract $500 per student from their federal tax bills each year to offset private or parochial school tuition.

Under the plan, full credit would be available to families with income up to $50,000.

"I have come to propose a tuition tax credit for the parents who bear the double burden of public and private school costs," Reagan said, repeating an argument used by those who say people have no choice in paying taxes for public schools.

Reagan, who promised action on the tax credits during his campaign, said, "Politicians in the past promised tax credits and broke those promises. But this administration is different: We're a bunch of radicals."

"We really intend to keep our promises and we intend to act on the will of the people," he said.

The Reagan plan, similar to legislation already before the Congress, is expected to cost the U.S. Treasury about $4.6 billion in total revenues by 1987, officials said.

His proposal, designed to be phased in over three years, would provide a maximum tax credit per child of $100 in 1983, $300 in 1984 and $500 in 1985.

Following his speech to the education group, Reagan traveled to Genoa, a heavily Republican suburb 35 miles west of Chicago, where he visited St. Peter's Catholic elementary school.

The president answered questions from an eighth grade civics class before flying home to Washington, aboard Air Force One.

Reagan's address to the Catholic group was marked by a protest involving about 50 of the 4,000 people in the audience. The protesters, who stood during president's address, were objecting to Reagan's nuclear weapons policies.

He interrupted his prepared remarks to respond that his policy is to make "war inescapable" and receive a standing ovation from the rest of the audience.

The tuition proposal immediately ran into opposition, notably from public school teachers and parents. Union chiefs who fear aid to private education will mean further sacrifices for public schools.

On Capitol Hill, Senate Finance Committee chairman Bob Dole, R-Kansas, whose committee would handle the tax credit, told reporters, "It's extremely unlikely it will come to the Senate floor in this election year."

He said the legislation would not be ready for introduction until June, and with Congress trying to pass a budget and go home by early fall to campaign, there would not be enough time to act on it.

Sen. Ernest Hollings, D-S.C., said the tuition tax credit proposal would turn out northern's education policy on its head, benefit the few at the expense of the many and "proliferate substantial segregation academies."

Starving infant dies

Court allowed parents to deny food to baby

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (UPI) — A week-old, Down's Syndrome baby whose parents obtained a court order barring doctors from feeding or treating him died Thursday night.

A spokesman for Bloomington Hospital said the infant died at 10:03 p.m. EST and added "no further information would be released about the case."

Lawyers for the baby, who doctors had refrained from feeding either intravenously or by mouth, had planned to appear before the U.S. Supreme Court today seeking an emergency order to keep the baby alive.

Numerous couples had offered to adopt the infant after word of a Wednesday ruling by the Indiana Supreme Court became public.

The infant had been denied food, water and medical aid since his birth at Bloomington Hospital by a decision of his parents that was upheld by the Indiana Supreme Court.

Dr. J.C. Wilkie, president of the National Right to Life Committee, after Thursday deplored the parents' decision not to feed the baby.

"This is direct killing," said Wilkie in a statement.

"Since when do we allow people to be killed just because they are handicapped?"

The baby could not eat normally because his esophagus was not properly formed and food could not reach his stomach.

The Indiana Supreme Court Wednesday, in a 3-1 ruling, decided not to order surgery or nourishment for the infant. The court's ruling upheld the judgment of two Monroe County judges and a child protection committee to withhold treatment from the boy.

Dr. Joe Christian, head of the medical genetics department at Indiana University-Purdue University at Indianapolis, had predicted the infant probably would die within a "few days."

Hundreds of residents called Right to Life offices in Bloomington and Indianapolis to express outrage.

"We have just been flooded with calls from people who are angry that this could happen," Mary Pat Marstall, president of Indiana Right to Life said earlier in the day.

Monroe County Prosecutor Barry Brown said it would have been a simple procedure to connect the child's esophagus to his stomach.

Haig returns to Buenos Aires; Argentines step up 'self defense'

By United Press International

U.S. Secretary of State Alexander Haig arrived in Buenos Aires Thursday to renew his peace shuttle.

Just hours earlier, Argentina sent a fleet toward the British blockade, vowing it would take "self-defense measures" to defend the Falkland Islands.

"The stakes are so high that they demand the ultimate effort of all participants in this discussion," Haig said on his arrival at the international airport in Buenos Aires.

Haig was received by Foreign Minister Nicanor Costa Mendez.

As I said in Washington yesterday, both the governments of Argentina and the United Kingdom have assured the government of the United States that they wish to continue the efforts we are making towards a political solution," Haig said.

"It is clear tonight that the task will not be easy," he said.

Minutes before Haig's arrival, Costa Mendez had convinced "Haig will not leave with empty hands, because the United States is interested in peace."

In London, Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher met with defense chiefs who said the 40-ship British war fleet sent last week was nearing Ascension Island in the South Atlantic — about midway in the 8,000-mile journey to the Falklands.

Mrs. Thatcher said the latest leg of Haig's peace mission was "crucial," but British officials conceded they also were pessimistic about its outcome.

Both sides continued to beef up their forces for a war over the Falklands, the British colony, seized by an Argentine invasion force April 2.

Britain said it was doubling the force of about 20 Harrier Jump jets it has sent to the Falklands aboard two aircraft carriers with the fleet. Argentine President Leopoldo Galliani called President Reagan while Haig was in flight to discuss the crisis and pledge his "personal desire for a peaceful resolution of the dispute," White House deputy press secretary Larry Speakes said.

Reagan reaffirmed to the Argentine leader his own "commitment to the peaceful solution of the conflict in the South Atlantic," Speakes said.

In Buenos Aires, residents near the naval base of Punta Belgrano said several Argentine warships left the base and headed south toward the disputed islands.

A British television report said Argentina's only aircraft carrier, three submarines, a cruiser and at least two destroyers left the base, located 450 miles south of Buenos Aires.

A junta statement made an obvious reference to the fleet's departure but did not confirm the sailing explicitly. The statement blamed Britain for

Today's briefing

Reps question BPA rate hike

BOISE (UPI) — Representatives of Idaho city-owned utilities Wednesday night fired stern questions at Bonneville Power Administration officials who were touring the Northwest to explain the agency's request for a $731 million rate increase.

The mayor of Rupert, which is one of several city utility and power cooperative customers of the Portland, Ore.-based BPA, told agency officials the proposed increase was excessive for public utility customers.

"We should have first call on all hydropower in the BPA system, and it seems unlikely that the cost of this could increase 72 percent in the past year with proper management," Bill Whitlans said.

Rates of BPA's preference customers would go up 72 percent under the proposal, which is being reviewed by the public during hearings in nine Northwest cities this month.

Abbott sentenced again

NEW YORK (UPI) — Jailhouse author Jack Henry Abbott, who has spent most of his life behind bars, was branded an habitual criminal Thursday and sentenced to 15 years in jail in prison for the fatal stabbing of a waiter.

Abbott, the literary protégé of Norman Mailer, remained imprisoned as Judge Irving Kaufman read him to be a "persistent violent felony offender," a designation that enabled the judge to give him a life term maximum.

Abbott, 38, was convicted in January of first-degree manslaughter in the fatal stabbing of Richard Adan, 22, a waiter and aspiring playwright, outside a Manhattan restaurant last July 19.

Abbott, author of the best-selling prison diary, "In the Belly of the Beast," has spent all but 9½ months of his life in jail since he was 12 years old.

Stroh Brewery buys Schlitz

MILWAUKEE (UPI) — The Joe. Schlitz Brewing Co., which once boasted of making the "beer that made Milwaukee famous," was sold Thursday to the Stroh Brewery Co. of Detroit.

Once the nation's No. 1 beer-maker, the old-line Milwaukee-based firm has come out of a long period of red ink and flat sales. Schlitz would become a wholly owned subsidiary of the smaller Detroit brewer under the merger agreement yet to be approved by shareholders, but which has won approval by the boards of both firms.

The $17 per share deal, the nation's No. 3 brewery, and Stroh, ranked No. 7.

Williams to get free legal aid

ATLANTA (UPI) — Wayne B. Williams, convicted of slaying two of 28 young blacks murdered in Atlanta over a two year period, was declared indigent Thursday and will be provided free legal aid for his future appeals.

Superior Court Judge Clarence Cooper ruled Williams' future court costs, which include a $10,000 transcript from the convicted murderer's 2-month-long trial, would be assumed by the taxpayers of Georgia.

The transcript will be used by Williams' attorneys to support their claims for a new trial.

Williams, a black 23-year-old freelance photographer and talent scout, was convicted Feb. 27 of killing Jimmy Ray Payne, 21, and 27-year-old Nathaniel Cater. He was also linked by court testimony to nine of the other 26 slayings and a 10th never admitted to the task list last.

PUC hookup rule struck down

BOISE (UPI) — The Idaho Supreme Court Thursday struck down a discriminatory Idaho Public Utilities Commission rule that customers using electric space heating must pay a 50-per-kilowatt contribution charge for new hookups.

In an opinion written by Justice Allan G. Shepard, the court held the commission acted in excess of its statutory authority because the contribution charge unlawfully discriminated against customers who installed electric space heaters after March 1, 1980.

The commission order required all Washington Water Power Co. customers who installed or converted electric space heating after March 1, 1980, and who lived in areas where natural gas service was available to pay the contribution charge.

Caldwell braces for floods

CALDWELL (UPI) — Residents of low-lying parts of the Caldwell area braced for flooding Thursday as unusually heavy spring runoff increased along the Boise River.

City officials, backed by police officers going door to door in some sectors, warned residents of the possibility of flooding because of heavy snowfall this winter and the deep snowpack in the mountains.

The immediate urgency of the warning was due to increased releases from upstream Lucky Peak Reservoir beginning Thursday.

Mayor Al McCluskey said the city had bought 1,000 sandbags to prepare for high water and he asked city residents in the lowland areas to have their own sandbags in hand.

the "critical situation" in the South Atlantic and said "a real zone of aggression" — a reference to the blockade — forced it to adopt "self-defense measures."

Women were seen crying in the streets of Port Belgrano as the fleet sailed.

"A lot of people from here were on the blockade," she went," said Pablo Marques, a bus driver in neighboring Bahía Blanca. "We are ready to die for our country."

British officials said they expected Argentine troops to leave their mainland ports, but doubted they would try to break the 200-mile British blockade now in its fourth day around the Falklands.

Costa Mendez warned earlier that Argentina "would not tolerate" U.S. support for Britain in the event of war.

Costa Mendez said the approach of the British armada, less than 10 days from the Falklands, is "like a chapter of a science fiction novel." He said he could not say "publicly" what he thinks of Mrs. Thatcher.

In Argentina, Gen. Americo Daberi, commander of 6,000 Argentine troops now on the Falklands, said the British "do not know what is waiting for them" if they decide to invade the windswept islands 450 miles off the Argentine coast.

A steady flow of Hercules C-130 transport planes flew supplies to the islands and Argentina sent another 2,000 troops to Rio Gallegos, 1,740 miles south of Buenos Aires, on their way to the Falklands.

BOISE (UPI) — A state Public Utilities Commission order Thursday outlined implementation of a $7.29 million rate increase for Mountain Bell Telephone Co. in Idaho.

The order will raise the monthly cost of a home telephone by between 59 cents and 72 cents, officials said.

The basic charge for a residential telephone in Boise and Idaho Falls, for example, will increase from the current $3.34 rate to $3.94, while the basic charge for a business phone will go up by either $2.21 to $2.31, depending on the community.

The PUC order punts into effect its recent award of a $7.29 million rate increase to the company, Mountain Bell had requested a $23.9 million boost.

The cost of a new telephone installation will increase dramatically, the PUC said, because it must follow federal regulations requiring that charge to more closely reflect the actual installation cost.

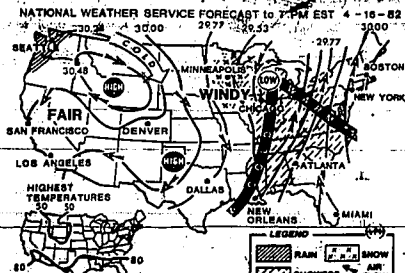

New phone hookups for residences will increase 86 percent, from $31.90 to $59.35. Business phone installations will cost $46.40 to $22.50, a 79 percent boost.

Long-distance calling rates for evenings, nights and weekends will decline, and during the day, rates for calls of short distances will remain the same. Some longer-mileage charges will increase, the commission said.

Leak spews toxic gas in San Jose

SAN JOSE (UPI) — An upper valve on a railroad tank car carrying anhydrous ammonia "gave way" Thursday night, spewing a cloud of toxic gas into the air.

The accident forced the voluntary evacuation of a small industrial section of the city.

A police spokeswoman said officials along the northern edge of the city were knocking on doors telling workers to leave their jobs if they became nauseous.

The cloud of gas began escaping from the tank car behind the Hills Brothers coffee plant about 8 p.m. Police said attempts to close the valve proved fruitless.

Anhydrous ammonia forms a toxic gas when it contacts the air. Water neutralizes the gas.

Fire fighters at the scene watered the cloud down, and it immediately began to dissipate.

Only official response stern

Late returns unpunished?

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Worried what to do if you miss the tax filing deadline by a day or two? If your tardiness is unintentional, try to relax — the Internal Revenue Service says you probably won't be punished.

Of course, if a court can be convinced you missed the tax filing deadline of midnight Thursday on purpose, you could face a year in jail and a $10,000 fine. The IRS obtains from 1,600 to 1,700 such convictions each year.

While the IRS won't officially concede the fact, a postmark a day or two after the April 15 deadline does not risk either the penalty or the interest, agency sources say.

However any inquiry to that effect will get a far sterner official response. "Someone who is simply late but ultimately files pays 5 percent per month of the tax due, not to exceed 25 percent," said IRS spokesman Larry Baldorf.

In addition, if the IRS has to send a tax bill, it will include not only the 5 percent late filing penalty, which is non-deductible, but a 20 percent annual interest rate on the unpaid balance.

If there is no tax due, there is no penalty.

Earlier this week an agency spokesman said that last year, "we got 1.4 million delinquent returns — people who came in after April 15 and had to pay a penalty."

There is — or more correctly was — an easy way to postpone filing a tax return. Requests for a 60-day extension, known as form 4668, must be filed by the deadline. Up until the final days before the deadline, 2,539,000 taxpayers had requested such extensions with many more expected to eventually show up.

The IRS expects to count a total of 96.3 million tax returns, 23 million of them filed since Monday.

Tax refund checks are guaranteed by the government to be in the mail by June 1 and actually can be expected about ten days sooner than that, the IRS says. This is still two weeks later than the six-week delivery time promised earlier, set back because of "the pile of returns."

But if any delays keep refunds bottled up for longer than 45 days, the government pays you 20 percent interest, retroactive to April 15.

If you asked the IRS to send you copies of any of your returns for past years, the request will take about six weeks to fulfill. Approximately 1.8 million people are expected to ask for copies of their past returns this year.

Suspected judge-killers indicted

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (UPI) — A jailed narcotics kingpin, a convicted killer and members of their families were indicted for murder and conspiracy Thursday in the slaying of a federal judge.

Stiff penalties against drug dealers earned the judge the nickname "Maximum John."

The indictments in the 1979 slaying of U.S. District Judge John H. Wood Jr. wound up a three-year, $4.7 million federal investigation.

Jamie "Jimmy" Chagra, 35, an El Paso, Texas, gambler jailed in Illinois for cocaine smuggling, and Charles V. Harrelson, 43, imprisoned in Texas on drug and weapons charges, were charged with murder and conspiracy in indictments handed up by the grand jury — the third such to investigate the case.

Also named were Chagra's lawyer and brother, Joe; Jimmy Chagra's wife, Elizabeth; and Harrelson's wife, Jo Ann.

The indictments contend Jimmy Chagra, scheduled for a drug trial in Wood's court, hired Harrelson for $250,000 to kill the judge — the first federal jurist killed in more than a century. The indictments allege Chagra wanted Wood killed rather than face trial in his court.

On May 29, 1979, Wood was shot once in the head by a high-powered rifle as he walked from his luxury San Antonio townhouse on his way to work.

Defense lawyers for the Chagra and Harrelson's branded Thursday's indictments as "anarchy" and said they were "desperate" attempts by the government to pin the slaying on somebody.

A key witness in the case is Harrelson's stepdaughter, Teresa Starr Jasper, 24, who originally spent three months in jail for contempt rather than testify against him before a federal grand jury.

Earlier this week, however, Miss

Jasper was seen entering the federal grand jury room and the wording of indictment indicated she may have testified.

FBI Director William Webster in Washington praised the indictments as the product of careful investigation.

"(Wood's) murder was a direct attack on the system of criminal justice and the rule of law that are such integral parts of our American way of life," Webster told a news conference at FBI headquarters.

He said the investigation was painstaking — costing about $4.7 million and involving more than 70 agents.

"We started from nothing and built a case up," he said.

Reagan isolates self from budget

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan publicly maintained a rigid separation Thursday from compromise budget talks.

But Republican congressional leaders said he indirectly is involved in discussions that could lead to an agreement next week.

A Democratic senator, meanwhile, charged the president with playing a "game of political chicken" with the economy.

Although Reagan has insisted that his aides are only listening to congressional "discussions" of a compromise budget-and-tax package aimed at keeping the 1983 deficit below $100 billion, Senate GOP leader Howard Baker and Finance Committee Chairman Robert Dole said the president is keeping up with actual "negotiations."

Baker confessed he is "impatient . . . but not at odds" with the president in the Congress-White House impasse, and dismissed Democratic criticism as mere politics.

Reagan, speaking to Catholic educators in Chicago, repeated his longstanding view that the only way to keep the burgeoning budget deficit below $100 billion is to cut spending more than Congress is willing to do.

Both Baker and Dole contradicted Reagan's assertion that no negotiations can take place until congressional leaders agree on a complete budget and tax package.

Dole told reporters, "The president clearly knows what we're doing. He knows pretty much what's being considered" by congressional leader of both parties meeting with his top aides, chief staff James Baker and budget director David Stockman.

"He's said, 'Keep it up,' and to me that really is progress," Dole said. "In my view, we don't need many more meetings" before a compromise can be reached by next week, he said.

Baker disputed the president's characterization of the talks as mere "discussions" rather than "negotiations."

"You can't have these meetings with these people on this subject without it being called negotiations. They are negotiating," he told reporters.

Economy dead in water: Regan

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Factory production sagged 0.7 percent last month, the Federal Reserve Board reported Thursday, and once-optimistic Treasury Secretary Donald Regan said the economy is "dead in the water."

The Fed said its seasonally adjusted index of industrial production for March — representing almost a third of the nation's output of goods and services — dropped 8.3 percent below where it was when the recession began.

The latest figure transformed February's 1.2 percent production increase, widely heralded as a start of recovery, into nothing more than a brief interruption of an eight-month span of bad economic news.

Economists said February, reflected only a return to normal weather from January's bitter-cold that had reached into the Sun Belt.

The March decline came despite a small improvement in the auto industry as dealers, facing a 17-year low in supplies, ordered more cars. The annual auto assembly rate climbed from 4.1 million to 4.7 million units last month.

Production of appliances, furniture and other home goods plunged 1.7 percent and another major category, business equipment, was down 1.2 percent.

Regan abandoned much of the optimism about the economy that characterized his statements up to now.

"We are in a very steep recession at this point and the economy is dead in the water. It's not going anywhere," the administration's chief economic spokesman told ABC News shortly before the new factory figures were released.

This was in sharp contrast to his prediction Feb. 2 in a National Press Club speech that "the economy is going to come roaring back in the late spring."

Robert Ortner, the Commerce Department's chief economist, also subdued his usual optimistic forecasts of an imminent end to the recession.

"Maybe the recession is not going to end sharply like it has in the past," he said. "Maybe like an old soldier it will just fade away."

Our parole system is due for change

We don't agree 100 percent with the changes that attorney-general candidate Jim Jones, of Jerome has recommended for Idaho's parole system, but he does have a point.

The state parole board should not operate in a vacuum. There needs to be more input from the prosecutors and judges involved in the cases before paroles or commutations are granted.

That fact was made quite apparent — at a local level — in the last few days.

In 1971, Danny H. Williams pleaded guilty to a reduced second-degree murder charge in Lincoln County for the gruesome killing of Melba Gray of Shoshone. Subsequently, he was sentenced to life imprisonment in the state penitentiary. That sentence later was reduced to 30 years, and three years ago, he was paroled — after serving eight years in prison for MURDER.

The parole was given without advance notice to the Lincoln County prosecutor, who — after the fact — protested that Williams was not a fit subject for parole.

On April 6, he was arrested in Wichita, Kan., and charged with the murder of a 47-year-old woman.

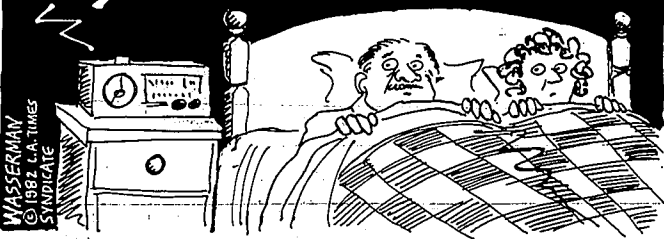

If Williams is found guilty of that crime, "I-told-you-so's" won't help. But changes can be — and should be — made in the present parole system.

We must reduce the chances that similar tragedies will occur in the future.

Speaker Olmstead put his foot in his mouth

Seems like House Speaker Ralph Olmstead, who thinks he ought to be governor of Idaho, is one of those politicians of the conservative party who thinks the definition of conservatism means that he should spend somebody else's money and hold onto his own. Of course, that's traditional! Only thing is, even the conservative party leaders don't agree with him on the practice of "a day's pay for a state job." As usual, Olmstead again put his foot in his mouth — especially when only a few months back he said, "Dues should not be a condition of employment."

From where I sit, Olmstead seems to oppose and scuttle much of the good legislation that comes up in Boise. Like for example, a $100 million tax-shift plan. And (he) said six to putting more teeth in the state's open-market law.

In addition, it's rumored that Olmstead has continually held shelve many of the proposals by the Idaho Fish and Game Department that were backed by the state's sportsmen groups. The $3 pheasant stamp is a good example.

Now, he advocates kickbacks from state employees! Wonder what next? EARLE E. ETTER SR. Jerome

Sen. Barker's efforts have helped education

I am sure the people in District 24 know that Sen. John Barker is a candidate for re-election to the Legislature. I would like them to also know of his untiring efforts in support of an area of vital interest to me — education.

John Barker was a major force in helping to implement the One Percent Initiative without doing irreparable harm to the public schools. He was instrumental in the adoption of a school district reform that provided greater equity for children and for taxpayers.

He works equally hard to defeat any laws that are best for the people of Idaho, including its children.

It is my hope that the people of District 24 will return John Barker to the Legislature so that he can continue to work in support of quality education for all of Idaho's children.

Judge Bruce knows how system works

I worked with Fifth District Judge Ron Bruce at the Idaho State Correctional Institute, where I was a prison guard and he was the assistant attorney general assigned to the Department of Corrections. It was my observation then that even the inmates who came in contact with him felt he treated them fairly and justly, even when legal confrontations ruled against the inmates.

Ron Bruce was highly admired by the prison staff, who felt a great loss when he was appointed Minidoka County magistrate judge.

Judge Bruce knows how the criminal system works. Few people come in close contact with the people the court system has already judged. Now, he has the opportunity to serve the community and to use his first-hand knowledge of the system. He knows how important rehabilitation is, but maybe more important, he has seen where it has failed. He can help us protect our community.

Ron Bruce is the right man for the job of Fifth District Judge. Gov. (John) Evans recognized that when he appointed him to finish Judge Bellwood's term. I hope the community joins with me and recognizes Ron Bruce's abilities on election day in May.

Just wait, non-symmetrical apparel is coming

By DICK WEST
Newhouse News International

WASHINGTON — Ever come across an idea that so thoroughly agrees with your own thinking that you immediately feel a sense of kinship?

My subconscious began sending up blips of consanguinity as I was reading plans by Edwin Page, a retired speech professor, to stage a "World's Fair To Change the World" in Raleigh, N.C., this summer.

There will, of course, be a conventional World's Fair running simultaneously and fairly close by in Knoxville, Tenn. But I should think the chances of fairgoers colliding are fairly remote.

At Page's fair, if it comes to fruition, the maddening throngs will look upon a fashion show unlikely to be duplicated in Knoxville. Or anywhere else for that matter.

Any garments he designs could be the even more eye-catching than the costume Sally Rand wore at the 1932 Chicago World's Fair.

Page, you see, is the creator of what he calls "non-symmetrical designs" in clothing. Some of the ideas apparently come to him as he is running up and down Pikes Peak in Colorado, which he has done 931 times since 1919.

Nevertheless, it was the non-symmetrical concept that aroused by sense of affinity. While reading his views on apparel, I could only nod vigorously and mutter injections of agreement.

"Why should both legs of a pair of pants be the same length?"

Why indeed?

I have often asked myself that question as I was taking a new pair of slacks back to the tailor for remedial alterations on the cuffs.

Page not only envisions dressing up conforming wimps in trousers whose legs vary in length — one long, one short, under his non-symmetrical tailoring, the legs also might be different colors, patterns and fabrics.

I like it, I tell you. I like it. Here is one's big chance to shuck the shackles imposed on clothing by Bill Blass, Pierre Cardin and the like, and let the "real me" shine through.

Now is the father of non-symmetrical wardrobes stopping at variegated pants legs. At the Raleigh fair, Page will introduce non-symmetrical architecture, non-symmetrical automobiles and non-symmetrical furniture.

This attack of what he decries as "the monotonous appearance of our world" also will feature women's clothing with build-in lighting "for almost endless variety."

I can see it all now. Along with the "hot pink" golf balls and two-tone tennis balls that have begun to appear on the links and courts, there soon will be players to match.

Golfers in knickerbockers, one leg buckled above the knee, the other fastened at the ankle. Tennis shots with double-knit alligators on one thigh, poplin kangaroos on the other.

Why, non-symmetry could lend a whole new dimension to designer jeans — skin-tight denims with the brand name on the hip spelled out in lights.

If you keep breathing, you may be 'entitled'

By OTIS PIKE
Newhouse News Service

WASHINGTON — From time to time, I need the Congress I love and know so well. It is their chance to get even. They can get me, and at the same time do something absolutely essential for my country.

While Congress and the president circle timidly around the acute problems of budgets and budget deficits, the nation is afflicted with an economic cancer so debilitating it cries out for radical surgery. Neither Congress nor the president dares touch the scalpel.

The disease is broadly labeled "entitlements." The worst offenders are the multitude of ways in which the government spends your money. Sometimes, the sickness is described as "uncontrollable." Entitlements are by no means uncontrollable, merely uncontrolled.

Former Sen. Harrison Williams, D-N.J., and I both got a raise on April Fool's Day. It was 6.7 percent and was supposed to represent an increase in our cost of living. I don't know what his worked out to, but mine was $2,904 a year. His would have been larger, for he served longer in Congress. While I, a Democratic congressman from New York, retired somewhat more willingly than he did, it doesn't matter unless you are kicked out for treason. To qualify for this raise, we had to do exactly one thing — keep breathing. As, and millions of other federal retirees, are "entitled." Together, we constitute an entitlement. Social Security recipients make another. Military retirees constitute a third.

Miles Benson, writing for the Newhouse News Service, did a fine story about our federal retirees last month. He pointed out that former House Speaker Carl Albert, retired for five years, has received so many cost-of-living raises since his retirement that only the president makes more federal money. Albert is making out better than Vice President Bush, at $79,125, or Chief Justice Warren Burger, at $96,000. Albert gets a little more than $100,000.

Congress isn't going to do anything about entitlements until people get angry. Why? I can help.

When I went to Congress, I was given the choice of joining the federal retirement system or not. I chose not to, because you had to stay in office five years to be sure of getting a pension. I was a Democrat from a very Republican area.

The Republicans were kind, and when I was re-elected for a third two-year term, I joined the system. Then, I had the choice of whether to pay the contributions I should have made during the first two terms. I chose to do it, for Uncle Sam put up a dollar for every dollar I did.

To my astonishment, I learned that once I had the five years in, I could add four more years I spent in the service in World War II. These years would increase my pension exactly as if I had served them in Congress.

The Republicans remained kind, and after 18 years as a moderately undistinguished member of the House, I retired as if I had served 22 years.

When I went to Congress the pay was $22,500, and I thought I was in heaven. Congressmen must work hard. Now, I get $33,300 and must keep breathing.

Miles Benson wrote of former Republican Congressman Hastings Keith of Massachusetts, who collects his congressional retirement, a military retirement and Social Security.

Keith also suffers from a rare affliction called social conscience. He believes the $2,000 he collects for breathing all year is too much. He believes he should not get cost-of-living increases when his cost of living does not increase.

He has tried to dramatize the entitlement insanity by personally presenting a check to Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan. The secretary of the treasury has no time to mess with people afflicted with social conscience. Hastings Keith is a saint.

I am no saint, only a needler. Here I am, Congress, "entitled" to more money than I have earned, or deserve, or need. I love it. Come get me, and do your country a favor.

George Will

Can a democracy endure cost of stopping a dictator?

LONDON — The foreign secretary protested too much. His proclamation that "Britain does not appease dictators" indicated a ghost — the ghost of 1930 — hovering over the Tory government's handling of the Falkland crisis.

But something else — perhaps the cumulative humiliations of postwar decline; perhaps boredom with the real but banal success of welfare state materialism — caused the crisis to uncoil in Britain an atavistic impulse for national assertion.

No healthy nation is without a capacity for such assertiveness, and in this case, Britain is completely justified. But while the London Times cries, "We are all Falklanders" ("Ich bin ein Falkländer"), the fact remains that atavism is not a durable foundation for policy.

The question of self-consequence in this crisis is not about anyone's right of self-determination, or any 19th-century pedigree of sovereignty over the islands. The question is whether ever since Paganini, contemptuous aggression by a dictatorship can summon from a complacent democracy the stamina and sacrifices necessary for actions which, unlike the first martial music and fustian, are not fun.

Prime Minister Thatcher quotes Victoria: "Failure — the possibility does not exist." But Victoria, who strengthened her claret with whiskey and could cut short a 19th-century cleric's sermon with a tip of her fan, had more domestic consensus and a stronger treasury than Thatcher has.

Two hundred years ago this month, the British government was told that the 6-year-old war against the American colonies was an unsustainable drain on the nation's resources. Last week, before the fleet was over the horizon from Portsmouth, the government was being questioned about what tax increases or domestic spending cuts would pay for a long operation.

If Argentina chooses to prolong the crisis — and it is hard to see how the junta, having inflamed the mobs, can accept any resolution that could be had quickly — the cost will weaken NATO. Britain is supposed to supply more than half NATO's naval forces in the east Atlantic.

It also will weaken Britain's economy and hence, the Thatcher government.

Perhaps Alexander Haig should not have made the United States central to a crisis that probably cannot be resolved without causing the fall of at least one of the two governments in conflict. But the United States has most to lose from a political crisis in Britain, and in the South Atlantic, time may not be on Britain's side.

Haig reportedly argued in each capital that compromise was necessary to save the government in the other capital. But neither government gives a fig about the fate of the other.

This is a crisis where considerations of right and geopolitical converge, but by not siding more forthrightly with Britain, the United States is jeopardizing the objective it thinks it is serving: Latin American stability. By seeing obsessively concerned about the survival of existing regimes, the United States extends to those regimes a license for adventurism and settling old scores. That can convince a continent plagued with old grievances and restless new military elites. By sacrificing much for Argentine stability today, the United States may make itself a negligible force for restraint, and may bring about conditions in which Latin America will absorb so much of the U.S. government's attention that the United States will have little left for the rest of the world.

Furthermore, the idea that neutrality is a prerequisite for shuttle diplomacy is refuted by the example of Henry Kissinger's shuttling to and from Damascus. The United States was in no sense "neutral" between Israel and Syria.

Even before this crisis, the Thatcher government's decision further to reduce Britain's surface fleet was attacked from right and left. The left cares about shipbuilding and dockyard jobs.

Such will intensify debate here about the purchase of the Trident submarine. Many on the left will make Kipling's noises about restoring the fleet's glory, while their real motive will be to kill Britain's nuclear deterrent.

If Argentina's dictatorship were of the left, Britain's Labor opposition would already be opposing Thatcher's policy. Fortunately, Labor's leader, Michael Foot, and others on the left have their own ghosts — that of Franco and the Spanish Civil War in 1937. But today's left is out of practice at sounding patriotic, and it does not really want to become practiced.

Still the London Times is tutoring its readers in the wisdom of Frederick the Great: "Diplomacy without arms is like music without instruments." The fact that some voices are making sense tends to confirm the adage that an Englishman's mind works best when it is almost too late.

Dear Abby

She worries about size of breasts

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I'm 32, happily married to a wonderful man, but something has been troubling me ever since I was a young woman. I have no breasts. My husband says I am fine the way I am, but I'm not happy with them.

I'm very jealous every time I see a husband looking at girls who have breasts. I don't have. When I see full-breasted women on TV, in the movies or magazines, I feel cheated and inadequate. It's depressing.

DEAR DEPRESSED: How YOU feel about yourself is more important than how men feel about breasts. But for the record, an overwhelming number of men have written to say that breasts (or the absence of same) don't make one whit of difference to them, so if you're considering augmentation surgery, do it for yourself—not your husband.

DEAR ABBY: When I read the letter signed "Midnight Boxes," I knew I had to write. (He was the 20-year-old who woke up one morning with a black eye and a bruised jaw and didn't know how it happened.)

The same thing happened to me. I also "fought" in my sleep. Once I woke up with blood on my pillow and teeth so loose I couldn't eat solids for days. Another time I fell out of bed and broke my nose.

DEAR BEEN THERE: Fortunately, epilepsy, a once feared and misunderstood condition, has come out of the closet in recent years.

Anyone wanting more information about it should write to: The Epilepsy Foundation of America, 1628-L St., N.W., Washington, D.C. 20036. Please enclose a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope, as this is a non-profit organization.

DEAR ABBY: This is in response to the "swinging" bachelor—signed "Harvey"—who wanted to meet a nice woman—he could date for "a few laughs"—but no commitments.

Well, I'm an attractive 40-year-old divorcee who looks about 30. I am a very successful, professional real estate salesperson and appraiser. Most of the males I date either want to get married so I can support them, or start a relationship to pick my brain.

Frankly, it would be refreshing to go out with a man who wanted only to enjoy my company, have a few laughs and no commitments.

10 basic threats still don't work today

BY ERMA BOMBECK
Field Enterprises, Inc.

No one can pinpoint the exact day the first threat was made by a mother.

As close as anyone can figure, it was around the time of Eve who said to her son, Cain, "If you don't stop making faces at your brother, your face will turn into a pillar of salt."

Whatever you think of threats and intimidation, it's a weapon that has worked for mothers for years and is passed on from generation to generation.

Your ten basic menacing threats are still being used today and are as successful as ever in instilling fear and mistrust in a child.

"If you don't keep your hand in the car, the wind will blow your hand off." Despite the fact that you never knew anyone personally who had a hand blown off, I've never met a child who wants to take that chance.

"You cross your eyes one more time and they'll freeze that way." There was a rumor once of a telephone for frozen eyes of children who played the odds and lost, but it's not documented.

"Don't you dare wash your hair after 8:30 or you'll catch pneumonia." Someone's grandfather died once from pneumonia. I couldn't believe he didn't know better than to wash his hair after 8:30.

"If you don't comb your hair, the rats will build a nest in it." Would it look any different?

"You keep playing with those matches and you'll wet the bed." I was 35 before I trusted myself to light the stove for dinner.

"Those who play with their gum get very sick." Do you want to tell your mother that makes no sense whatsoever?

Bridge collapses, killing 13 men

EAST CHICAGO, Ind. (UPI) — A 50-foot-high bridge ramp bustling with construction workers collapsed in a jagged heap of concrete and steel Thursday, killing 13 men and injuring dozens.

Spokesmen for the Lake County Civil Defense and East Chicago Police departments said the search for victims was completed at 5 p.m. CST and the death toll probably would stand.

Officials said they had accounted for all workers at the site near the huge Inland Steel plant in the heart of the northwest Indiana foundry district. Earlier, state police said more than 30 workers were unaccounted for.

Lake County Coroner Albert Willardo said 12 bodies were at a temporary morgue set up at the No. 1 tin mill at the nearby Jones and Laughlin steel plant, and another was still on the site.

Willard earlier had said there were two bodies remaining at the site, but reduced that number to one as darkness fell.

The confusion came because the remaining body was set in concrete that was being poured at the time the ramp collapsed and observers were unable to immediately determine how many bodies were trapped in the concrete.

James Brannock was working within feet of a neighbor and friend when he heard the first crunch of destruction at about 10:30 a.m. CST.

"I heard a big crash — when I looked back I said, 'let's go'," Brannock said. He said he ran about 70 feet down the ramp, turned and saw the rest of the span collapsing. He did not see his fellow worker again.

"All I know is there was a bang, a crash and a lot of dead men," he said.

Three of the victims were listed as "John Does" because they were found without wallets or other identification.

Willardo said there would be a coroner's inquest that would take approximately two to three weeks, and it would be coordinated with state and federal Occupational Safety and Health Administration officials.

St. Catherine's Hospital in East Chicago reported 14 injured people were taken there, including two paramedics and two state building inspectors. Some of the injuries were critical, other were listed as serious. The paramedics were treated and released.

Other injured people were taken to hospitals in Hammond and Gary.

About 80 laborers were working on the narrow approach ramp to the Clive Avenue extension bridge when two sections filled with freshly poured concrete collapsed domino-style, hurling some workers to their deaths and crushing others caught beneath the span.

"Evidently they were pouring concrete on one of the spans when it collapsed," Gene Hallock, director of the Indiana Department of Highways said. "Presumably what fell was the falsework — the scaffolding that holds up the forms for the concrete."

Nick Kolenber, business representative for Iron Workers local 385, said it was the first bridge of its design in the Chicago area. He called it a "poured-in-place, precast, pre-tension segmented bridge."

"We considered it a very safe job," he said. "It had been almost accident-free."

Nader offers TV ad

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Consumer activist Ralph Nader said Thursday he has offered to appear in a television commercial with the chairman of General Motors to promote the use of auto seat belts.

The Nader offer is the subject of negotiations between federal transportation officials, GM and Nader, said National Highway Traffic Safety Administration spokesman Ed Pinto. "We hope we can work it out," he said.

The ad would be a part of the administration's $7 million public relations campaign to promote the use of seat belts announced by President Reagan at a White House ceremony Wednesday.

In a telephone interview, Nader said he doesn't think the ad campaign will work, "but if it saves one life, it's worth doing." He said his offer to appear with GM Chairman Roger Smith was "my way of testing" to see how serious GM is about encouraging the use of seat belts.

Pinto said Ray Peck, administrator of the safety agency, asked Smith "to think about" about the Nader offer at the White House Wednesday, but got no answer.

The idea got an unenthusiastic reaction from John McNulty, GM vice president for public relations, but was not rejected outright. "GM is making a serious effort to promote seat belt usage," McNulty said. "This is a serious matter and not a time for a personality contest."

As envisioned by Nader, the 30-second public service ad would have him and Smith seated in the front seat of a car. "I say, 'I don't agree much with GM,'" and he says, 'I don't agree with Ralph Nader.' But we say we both say we agree on one thing: as long as you have your seat belts, why not use them?"

Chauffeur charged with selling confession from 'Freeway Killer'

MANHATTAN BEACH, Calif. (UPI) — A former chauffeur for the attorney of "Freeway Killer" William Bonin was arrested for selling the killer's handwritten confession and incriminating tapes, police said Thursday.

A private investigator, working for the attorney in cooperation with police, found the 110-page confession and other material including tapes of four telephone calls in which Bonin reportedly claimed there were undiscovered bodies of murder victims that police did not yet know about.

Bonin, who has been sentenced to die in the gas chamber for the homosexual torture slayings of 10 young men and boys in Los Angeles County, faces charges for four more slayings in suburban Orange County and possibly for five other killings in other counties.

A total of 44 slayings were originally linked by police, and Bonin has reportedly admitted at least 21 of them.

The material in question, recovered in Hollywood a short time after the arrest, was sealed at the police station and might never be available to prosecutors or police.

David Vigil, recently fired as the chauffeur for attorney William Charvet, was taken into custody in the parking lot of an athletic club late Wednesday night as he walked toward the trunk of his car to complete the sale of the allegedly stolen and illegal goods.

Vigil, 30, was booked on suspicion of receiving stolen property and freed on $100,000 bail. Detectives said they would also seek charges of grand theft and unauthorized recording of a telephone conversation.

Charvet, Bonin's attorney, said he first learned of the alleged theft two weeks ago when an attorney representing William Fugh — facing trial for helping Bonin kill the teenage victim — reported that Vigil had offered him information and showed him documents related to the freeway case.

Hatfield introduces bill to cut federal abortion funds

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., introduced a bill Thursday to prohibit federal financing of abortions and allow the Supreme Court to reconsider its 1973 decision legalizing the procedure.

Hatfield said Congress is unlikely to abolish abortion — which has sharply divided its opponents — in this session, so he urged attacking it "by degrees." His measure seeks "to affirm the intrinsic value of all human life, to recognize the humanity of unborn children."

"The denial of that life is no less abhorrent than killing by terrorist violence; the suffering of our elderly and poor, or our mutual threat of nuclear destruction," Hatfield said.

A member of his staff said the bill would allow the Supreme Court to review its controversial 1973 Roe vs. Wade ruling, and that Hatfield does not want to overturn the ruling by statute, which other bills would do.

Hatfield, a leading evangelical Christian, staked his opposition to abortion as part of a broad-based commitment against nuclear war, oppression and poverty. Many of his more fundamentalist fellow Christians focus their opposition to abortion far more narrowly. A similar bill is expected to be introduced in the House by Rep. Henry Hyde, R-Ill., who since 1976 has been successful in attaching amendments to the annual appropriation bills to prohibit federal funding of abortions.

Pirate killings ruled self defense

NASSAU, The Bahamas (UPI) — A retired airline pilot who shot and killed three pirates on his boat, his cabin cruiser in the Bahamas acted in self defense and will not be charged, officials said Thursday.

Lawrence Holloway, 62, was questioned in Nassau and released after police determined he should not be charged in the Tuesday afternoon shooting aboard Holloway's motor cruiser.

Holloway and his wife, Audrey, told Bahamian police they were anchored off Joulfiers Cay early Tuesday afternoon in their 37-foot boat Whip Ray when three men — a 45-year-old man and two boys age 15 and 16 — sneaked aboard the boat.

Holloway, a former Pan Am pilot, said he was lounging below decks with his wife when he looked up and saw someone walking by the cabin window. When he went topside to investigate, he found the man and the two boys on the deck, their dinghy tied to the Whip Ray.

Holloway said the Bahamians were friendly at first, asking for matches, water and food in exchange for fish they had on board the dinghy.

The older man then whipped out a knife and started cleaning fish on the deck of the Whip Ray.

"I was very uneasy throughout all this," Audrey Holloway told the Miami Herald. "They were asking so many questions. They wanted to know how the boat was steered; how much fuel it used and how far it would go."

Suspicious, Mrs. Holloway went below while her husband stayed on top talking with the men.

Several times, the older Bahamian tried to lure her out of the cabin, offering to sell her two conch pearls. She stayed below.

Mrs. Holloway got a 45-caliber pistol hidden below decks. She sat on it to hide it.

A few minutes later, the adult Bahamian grabbed her husband and put the knife to his throat.

"I saw what happened," Mrs. Holloway said. "I started up the companionway with both hands on the gun. I yelled something. The man looked up and my husband grabbed the gun from me."

Holloway and the Bahamian struggled, the gun fired, and the Bahamian fell to the deck.

The teenagers then rushed Holloway and he fired again, hitting both.

Mariel Hemingway as she appeared on Playboy's cover: She prefers Ketchum over Hollywood... most of the time

With her latest film Hemingway stirring up controversy

By BOB LARDINE
New York Daily News

HOLLYWOOD — "I'm not against homosexuality," said lovely Mariel Hemingway. "I don't feel lesbianism is a horrible, wrong thing. And I don't believe it is an unnatural practice."

The 20-year-old actress quickly points out: "I'm not a lesbian myself." In her coming movie, "Personal Best" the Ketchum resident and granddaughter of the late Ernest Hemingway portrays a 17-year-old track and field performer who has a three-year lesbian relationship with another athlete, played by Patrice Donnelly.

Though there's plenty of nudity and eroticism in the film, it is basically a story of a teen-ager maturing as a woman, and winding up in a heterosexual relationship with Kenny Moore.

It annoys Mariel that so many people want to concentrate on the homosexuality in the movie. "It just represents a small segment of the picture," she said. "It's really a story of two girls and how they become women. Though the movie is about two women athletes, it's a situation that could happen in any lifestyle. These two girls met at a time when they both needed each other at a crucial period in their lives, and they fell in love, had a lesbian relationship and then when they broke up continued to love each other."

Mariel prepared for her role as a pentathlon athlete by going through a rigorous regimen for a year. She ran, swam, bicycled and weight lifted so she would be able to perform as a hurdler, high jumper, discus thrower, and otherwise in track and field events in the film.

"I was very thin (5 feet 10½ inches, 118 pounds) when I got the role," she said. "By the time I began the picture, I was 132, and it was all muscle. I trained four hours a day, and was in terrific shape."

The first Mariel ever heard of "Personal Best" was when she received the script. It was written by Robert Towne, who also produced and directed the film. Towne received an Oscar for his screenplay "Chinatown," and also was nominated for Academy Awards for his writing efforts on "The Last Detail" and "Shampoo." However, Mariel had never heard of him. "You must remember," she says with a laugh, "that I live in Ketchum, Idaho, and we don't know about such things."

It turns out that Towne actually was seeking a woman athlete to play the lead role of Chris Cahill. He couldn't find one adequate for his purposes so he looked around for an actress that could do it. He caught a magazine story in which Mariel was depicted jumping on a trampoline, and decided she was able enough to portray the strenuous role.

"Actually, I am fairly athletic," said Mariel. "I ski continually in Idaho, and—of course—swim and bicycle ride."

Mariel liked the script as soon as she read it, and wasn't perturbed in the least by the fact that she would have to be naked in several scenes. "The nudity didn't bother me a bit," she said. "Towne made all the girls in the picture feel very comfortable about it. The sets were all closed, and the crew was fabulous. They never made fun of us. I think the nudity was handled tastefully, and wasn't the least bit vulgar."

"Personal Best" represents Mariel's third movie. Previously, she appeared in "Lipstick" with her sister, Nancy, and then was nominated for an Oscar in Woody Allen's film, "Manhattan."

In May, she'll begin work on Bob Fosse's new picture, "Star 80," in which she'll portray the late Dorothy Stratten, a young actress killed by her estranged husband.

Mariel won't spend her time here in Hollywood waiting for her new film to begin.

"I'm going back to Ketchum," she said. "Nothing would persuade me to move here. It's beautiful in Idaho, and I'm currently building a new house there. The people in Ketchum aren't that excited about having an actress in their midst. But I grew up there, and being an actress is no big deal."

'Personal Best' an excellent film; focuses on characters

By DESMOND RYAN
Knight-Ridder Newspapers

Films like "Making Love" and the forthcoming "Victor, Victoria" do something to redeem Hollywood's treatment of homosexuals and kick open a closet door that has been merely ajar for a long time.

Because it contains a candid treatment of a lesbian relationship and happens to arrive at a time when films are suddenly extending some sympathy toward gay people, the temptation exists to consign "Personal Best" to this sudden rash of homosexual movies. That would be an injustice to Robert Towne's provocative and absorbing study of world-class athletes.

For one thing, such a classification invariably means that the film's real and imagined slances on gay issues supplant discussion of its merits as a movie. And "Personal Best" has a great deal of merit by any measure.

The film, which marks the directing debut of one of our best screenwriters, views the lesbian love of two athletes as a matter of natural bodily expression and release. Towne's film is, as much as anything else, a celebration of the beauty of the body at its most perfect. To that end, he has made the relationship explicitly physical instead of platonic or merely a subject of dark hints.

In discussing "Personal Best," Towne has been at great pains to discourage emphasis on the movie's most overtly sensational aspect. His film is a study of a relationship that is sundered by the compellive instincts of the two partners, Chris (Mariel Hemingway) and Tory (Patrice Donnelly). It examines the price of achieving one's personal best at this level of competition in track and field.

Although it adheres to the traditional narrative structure of the sports film, "Personal Best" ranges far beyond its confines. Unlike "Chariots of Fire," which is keenly interested in the metaphorical potential of sport, "Personal Best" is fascinated with the facts of what it takes to be a world-class athlete.

Towne establishes this with an opening shot that draws the audience into his obsessive and driven way of life. He shows a runner's lane on a track. Drops of moisture, like the first sign of rain, splash the surface. It is not rain, but drops of perspiration. And it is not the sweat of exhaustion, but of tension as a sprinter waits to explode from the starting blocks.

In the beginning, Chris is an interloper in the world, a hurdler of indifferent technique, lacking the killer instinct that makes Olympians. Tory, a pentathlete, pressures her coach (Scott Glenn) into helping Chris realize her considerable potential. He, in turn, encourages her to abandon the hurdles and compete against Tory in the pentathlon, thus placing a unique strain on their efforts to be merely lovers.

Unlike the two young men in "Chariots of Fire," the women in Towne's movie are not fired by lofty idealism or the need to prove something for a cause. Rather, they are athletes for whom the pursuit of a goal overwhelms the goal itself. Why do they endure the incredible training and restrictions on their lives? There are no pat answers in "Personal Best" because there are none to be found on the track and field that Towne evokes with such accuracy.

In fact, he poses the question most specifically with a swimmer who takes up with Chris. He has won two gold medals, and his thought as the anthem was played at the Olympics was: "Is that all there is?" Since the age of 10 he had swum 20,000 meters a day.

The film follows the women through several meets leading up to the Olympic trials for the Moscow games, which were, of course, boycotted by the United States. The athletes knew they were competing for a paltry national team that would never compete in earnest. It made no difference, a point that tellingly casts Towne's view of the runner's world.

The two women acquaint themselves well, although Hemingway is still wanting in range of expression, and Glenn is excellent as the domineering, cajoling coach. Towne has fashioned an absorbing and thoughtful movie and set himself a considerable personal best to aim for when he makes another one.

group to show, so it was a lot of hard work. But I did become bigger and more muscular," says Mariel.

"As soon as 'Personal Best' wrapped, Mariel was back in Idaho and the great outdoors. Immediately dropping her intensive training regimen. "I still ski and run," she said. "But I don't do any of the track-and-field workouts and I don't do as much weight training as I used to. I'm not in an athlete's shape and I'm not as big as I was, but I'm definitely keeping in shape."

"This time, her stay with her family will be shorter. In a rather unusual — for her — move, Mariel set her sights on a new part and proceeded to fight for it rather than wait for opportunity to come knocking in Ketchum. Her goal: the lead role in "Star 80," director-Bob-Fosse's impressionistic biography of the late Playmate of the Year Dorothy Stratten, which starts filming in May. "It was unusual for me to really fight to get a part," she smiled. "But it was very exciting. And it was a good thing for me to have to do."

Says she prefers Idaho lifestyle

Mariel talks about Ketchum, Hollywood in Playboy article

In the brief story which accompanied the photos, Hemingway talked about Ketchum, Hollywood and her career as an actress. Here are some excerpts that article, reprinted with permission from Playboy:

"It would be difficult to find a less likely candidate for controversy," said the article. "As befits someone who has spent almost all of her life in the less-than-thriving metropolis of Ketchum with her family, Mariel seems small-town from her love of the outdoors and the simple life to her high, girlish voice, which makes her sound much younger than her 20 years. As a New York reporter once discovered, she's so sweet that she was even reluctant to speak ill of a fictional character in one of her movies."

"Besides her Oscar nomination, she created a sensation at Cannes (Paris film festival) and found herself sought after by all sorts of trendy types who'd never set foot in Idaho. It was a life she liked, but only in a limited way.

"Most of my friends aren't in the film industry," she explained. "I don't go on dates that much — they make me very nervous. And I don't go to parties or anything like that. I'm not real social."

"Writer-director Robert Towne cast Mariel for the athletic role in "Personal Best" because she had a reputation of being a good athlete. Most of the articles about Mariel he had read talked about her skiing, horseback riding and athletic lifestyle. "He figured I was athletic," recalled Mariel wistfully. "So did I. I thought this running and jumping would be easy to do. I didn't know it was going to be so difficult!"

As a Playboy press release points out, Towne hired a coach for Mariel in Los Angeles and made her work out four to five hours a day. She worked out a full year before a frame was shot for the movie. "I did all the workouts the other athletes did, only at a lower level. I wanted every muscle

Richard Pryor's 'Live' one of the funniest films of its kind

By GENE SISKEL
Chicago Tribune

I have never laughed louder, longer or more often at a movie than at "Richard Pryor - Live in Concert," which I saw a couple of years ago.

The entire audience screamed throughout the picture as Pryor joked about everything from suffering a heart attack to how a black man would have reacted to experiencing the Linda Blair character in "The Exorcist." It would have been a much shorter movie, Pryor suggested in his inimitable foul-mouthed manner.

Based on that movie, which was nothing more than a recording of a couple of one-man concerts by Pryor, I was willing to call him the funniest man in America.

Having seen his latest concert film, "Richard Pryor, Live on the Sunset Strip," the judgment stands. Woody Allen makes better movies, but not funnier ones.

The only problem with the new movie is that it comes across as extremely short, running only 82 minutes. The first concert film wasn't much longer, but there's a difference. "Live on the Sunset Strip" was filmed after Pryor's near-tragic burning and waits until the one-hour mark of the

RICHARD PRYOR
Siskel never laughed harder movie to tell us his version of what happened.

Of course, we're waiting for that, and when we finally get it, the movie is virtually over. It's much too abrupt.

Another problem that director Joe Layton has found only one boring way to break up Pryor's monologues. He simply gives us crowd-reaction shots of people laughing their heads off. More often than not, the crowd shot includes a black and a white person sitting side-by-side. I guess those shots are supposed to tell us that everybody loves Richard Pryor. In fact, many of those shots appear to be cheerlessly conceded to the jokes.

This movie was filmed at live concerts as well as in a special movie-studio session, which was needed to develop more material.

That aside, what we're dealing with here is a very funny man. Unfortunately for some people, I suppose, if you take away Pryor's favorite four-letter word, he doesn't have much of an audible act.

The film opens with a montage of marquee names of a number of famous Sunset Strip haunts, including the Chateau Marmont Hotel where John Belushi died. That sends off a shiver. Then Pryor appears, walking through the crowd in a concert hall wearing — what else? — a flaming-red suit. Silver shoes, a black shirt and a black pocket handkerchief with a yellow rose complete the outfit.

His first string of jokes involves the theater — how can we put it politely? — that Americans are not enjoying as much intercourse these days, due to the presidency of Ronald Reagan. Things were better sexually with Jimmy Carter, Pryor says, because you could — during his speeches. There was no reason to listen.

Movies

Now, with Reagan, Pryor argues, you've got to listen, and if you listen, you'll realize that we don't have much time left on this planet, so you'd better get your last few shots in.

(You now have some insight into the problem of reviewing Richard Pryor. You can't quote directly from his act without getting fired.)

Another theme that runs through the film's humor is that Pryor has got religion now. Right at the beginning, he acknowledges that he's not angry anymore, and that may have taken an edge off his best stuff. Indeed, he shows a little bit like SCTV talk show host Sammy Maudlin as he announces that "racism is a bitch" and that after his visit to Africa, he's never again going to call a black man "a nigger."

But then comes Pryor's tale of how he was severely burned, and he is in rare form. He doesn't hide the truth. After trying to get us to believe that all he was doing "was drinking cookies and milk," Pryor admits he was doing free-base cocaine. "But why was I the only one who ever caught on fire doing it?" he asks, plaintively. Later he explains that he soon realized that God had been looking out for him, because "my — didn't burn."

During the same piece, Pryor launches into a marvelous three-way conversation between his free-base pipe and himself and between his good friend Jim Brown and himself.

It turns into a variation of one of those old Donald Duck cartoons — you know, with the devil on one of Donald's shoulders and the angel on the other. In the case of Pryor, his old devil pipe is forever calling out, "Hey, Rich, stay in the room and have a smoke." And Jim Brown, after observing Pryor's addiction, is forever saying, "Whatcha gonna do?"

Few performers can hold our attention in a movie for more than an hour, working alone on a stage. Richard Pryor does it better than anyone. If there was any doubt that he has fully recovered from his accident, this film removes it.

Typical Neil Simon

'Pictures' predictable but sweet as honey

By JoAnn Rhett

Knigh-Ridder Newspapers

Neil Simon's "I Ought to Be in Pictures," like his recent "Only When I Laugh," centers on the reconciliation of a precocious teenager and a self-centered, immature parent.

"In 'Only When I Laugh,'" a daughter tries to bring up her alcoholic mother. In "I Ought to Be in Pictures," a 19-year-old girl hitchhikes across the country to meet the father who abandoned her and her younger brother 16 years earlier.

"Not much happens in 'Pictures' — no high drama or low melodrama. The girl's parents will never be close, but at least her mother and father speak on the phone before she leaves Hollywood after 10 weeks for her Brooklyn home. Her father hasn't made much of a commitment to the nice woman who shares his bed once a week, but he has asked her not to go off with another man to Hawaii.

Small doors are quietly opened in the fortuitous lives of these people, and they're opened with such finesse that "Pictures" is a gentle, warming movie on an entirely human scale.

Simon's comedy debuted in January 1980, at the Mark Taper Forum in Los Angeles. In the play, Manoff as young Libby Gladys Tucker and Tony Curtis as her father Herb, a slovenly, good-natured screenwriter and pony player. By the time the play migrated to Simon's personal Broadway house, the Eugene O'Neill, Curtis had suffered a somewhat undignified heave-ho in favor of Ron Leibman. Manoff, the daughter of actress Lee Grant, won a Tony and rode the role to the silver screen where Walter Matthau replaced Leibman.

Manoff is an engaging, refreshing performer with her mother's calm dark eyes and the little familial wobble in her alto voice. The movie's nicest surprise, though, is 61-year-old Matthau. At this point in his career, his idiosyncratic voice and posture and curmudgeonly outlook seem almost too familiar. His shoulders still bear the weight of the world and he still walks as though suffering from diaper rash, yet his Herb is a characterization of tenderness and delicacy.

As the studio hairdresser supporting two children of her own, Ann-Margret is sometimes too subdued. Her Sloppy, though, is also warm and believable without being soupy. You come to believe in her relationship with the determinedly unsuccessful Herb even though horrors, a shapeless blouse and baggy jeans never quite disguise her glamorous figure, and jazzy walk.

Simon's characters, particularly the two women, are a bit too glib. And the picture as a whole neatly sidesteps the thorny issue of swine who don't support their children. Yet there is beauty in its dulceness (we go with characters to the supermarket, the garage, the bus station, the late-night delicatessen, the baseball stadium, just as though they were real people) and wisdom in its approach to fathers and daughters and what they need from each other.

Do not expect fireworks. Expect a small, careful movie that indulges a vulnerable teenager's wish to read the poetry of Emily Dickinson to her father. Herb's in his pajamas, and cinematographer David Walsh's camera pulls back to frame the two of them in his barren living room. Were it not for the ill-concealed, fatherly pleasure on Matthau's scamed face, the scene would be pure "humor." Instead, it's pure honey — smooth and sweet and hold the sticky.

Override levy for Kimberly schools asked

By KATE LOPEZ
Times-News correspondent

When voters in the Kimberly School District go to the polls on May 18, they will be deciding more than just who will be on the next school board.

They also will be deciding the fate of a $50,000 override levy.

Wednesday night, the Kimberly school board — after a lengthy discussion — voted unanimously to place the override issue on the May 18th ballot.

The $50,000 amount is the same figure that district residents approved last year for the 1981-82 school year.

The $50,000 request would give the district only enough money to maintain its existing staff and programs, according to J. Hamilton Smith, the chairman of the school board.

If the levy request fails, the only alternative would be to "cut staff and programs," Hamilton said, which would result in already crowded classrooms becoming more crowded.

Superintendent George Powell said after the meeting that staff cuts would be accomplished by not filling vacancies created by retirements and resignations.

One suggestion on how to save money that was considered by the board was to abolish kindergarten. However, Hamilton said this would not be a practical.

"Approximately $38,000 of our (state) monies are received for the kindergarten classes," he said. "If we cut it (kindergarten), we'd lose the money and not accomplish one thing."

The state funds public school districts on the basis of funding units, which are determined by a district's enrollment.

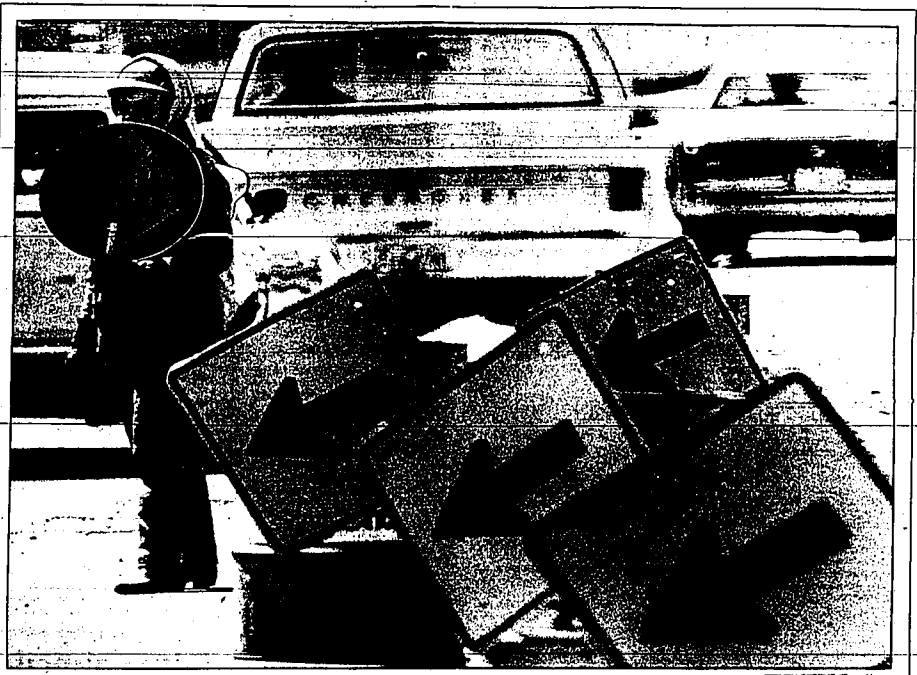

Board members concluded that there is not a lot they can do to keep operating costs from increasing.

"Our utility bills alone for March were approximately $7,500," Hamilton said. "We have no alternative but to hope the override passes."

To add to the problems of an already extended budget, board members learned that the South Central Health District will charge a fee, starting in the 1982-83 school year, for the free health services it now provides the district.

"A basic-service health plan, which includes nursing consultation to students and parents, the fluoride program and vision checks, to name a few, will now cost the district $2.50 per student," Powell reported.

Board members delayed any further discussion on the matter until alternative methods of providing health care can be reviewed.

Cassia school board postpones decision on override levy vote

BURLEY — A decision on whether to put an override levy before the Cassia County voters was postponed at Wednesday's Cassia school board meeting.

Board members' concerns about the hardships of farmers and other property owners led to a delay in the override decision, according to Superintendent Norman Hurst.

With board approval, a $200,000 override issue will be on the May 18 ballot, when school board members throughout the state will be elected. The final decision will be made at a special meeting sometime before the election, he said.

Override levies have been approved by the district's voters every year for the last two decades, Hurst said. Last year's $400,000 override passed handily.

Last week, however, Cassia County voters rejected an $8.75 million bond issue. The money would have financed a building program to solve the district's overcrowding problems.

Hurst said no decision has been made on whether the board will try again to pass the bond issue after the six-month waiting period required by state law.

In the meantime, he said, the overcrowding will be eased by shifting class assignments and using resource rooms as regular classrooms.

Cassia County addresses violations

Sheriff: Stop at RR signs or get ticket

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News correspondent

BURLEY — Cassia County Sheriff deputies will begin issuing tickets to residents who continue to ignore stop signs at railroad crossings, Sheriff Ray Mitchell warned Thursday.

According to residents living near Declo, Springdale, Peila and the area surrounding Burley, 50 percent of the drivers on county roads do not stop at the signs, Mitchell said.

To comply with state law, the Burley Highway District erected the signs at all railroad crossings on county roads in February, Mitchell said. Previously, advance warning signs were used.

"The stop signs were put up for people's protection, regardless of how much people dislike them," he said.

After the signs were in place, deputies gave verbal warnings but few citations to disobeying drivers, Mitchell said. The sheriff's office decided it would take time for residents using the roads to become familiar with the new signs, he said.

However, at a Monday county commission meeting, the sheriff said many people still are not obeying the signs.

"We're really getting a lot of flak over the deal," Mitchell told the commissioners.

In a Wednesday meeting with the commissioners and Prosecutor Al Barrus, Mitchell said it was decided to enforce the law and begin issuing more citations.

"The law says you have to stop," the sheriff said. Violators can receive a $29 fine if they are cited. Burley Highway District director Neal Thomas says his employees have had to replace dozens of knocked-down stop signs.

"They just don't want to stop, I guess," he says. "We didn't even get them all up before people started knocking them down."

"Criticism coming into his office over the signs has died down at this time, and so has the knocking down of the signs, Thomas says. However, he expects more incidents because "it goes in spurts."

At $3 a sign, taxpayers are footing the bill for the disgruntled residents who are knocking them down, he says.

Agreements in dispute

Suit seeks to define Sun Valley Co. role with arts center

By STEPHANIE SCHOROW
Times-News writer

SUN VALLEY — The Sun Valley Center for the Arts and Humanities has filed a lawsuit against the Sun Valley Co. in a complicated case aimed at determining how much power — if any — the company has over the center.

The five-count suit also involves a dispute over improvement of the narrow road leading to the Sun Valley Center. The center wants to widen the road for safety reasons. The company, which owns the land where the road is located, opposes for aesthetic reasons.

The suit was filed last week in Fifth District Court in Blaine County by Lee Schlander, the center's attorney. The Sun Valley center is a non-profit, educational institution that sponsors visual arts, performing arts and humanities programs. The Sun Valley Co. owns the world-famous ski resort.

A hearing has been set for May 7.

In 1971, the Sun Valley Co., then owned by Bill Janss, donated about six acres along Trail Creek for the construction of an arts center. In 1974, the center sold some of that land to the Ketchum-Sun Valley Community School, which now shares some facilities with the center. The Salt Lake City-based Holding Corp. purchased the Sun Valley Co. from Janss in 1977.

At issue in the suit is the rescission of a "reversionary clause" in the 1971 deed that gave the land to the center.

The clause stated that if the arts center ceased to exist, the land would return to Sun Valley Co., according to Wally Huffman, the Sun Valley Co. general manager.

By revoking this clause before Janss sold the company to Holding, the Sun Valley Co. gave up any control over the property, says Glenn Janss, the wife of Bill Janss and the chairman of the center's board of directors.

However, Huffman contends that the original deed continues to give the company the right to review any sale of the land by the center.

Both Mrs. Janss and Huffman say the intent of the 1971 deed was to ensure the land was to be used only for cultural and educational activities, and not sold for commercial development.

Earlier this year, the center sought to sell a portion of the disputed land to the community school to provide funds for the financially troubled center. The facilities to be built on the land were to be used jointly by the school and the center.

The Sun Valley Co. informed the center in January that it opposed the sale. Huffman says the company feels the sale, and resulting new facilities, will cause overcrowding on the small campus — putting further strain on the access road and creating additional pressure to expand.

Schlander said the center's continued viability depends on its ability to sell the land and raise additional money. And Mrs. Janss says the center's support of the community school complies with the intent of the 1971 deed. She charges that the company has adopted an "anti-growth" position on promoting arts in Sun Valley.

In the suit, the center asks the court to issue a declaratory judgment that Sun Valley Co. does not have any further rights to the land occupied by the center. It also asks the court to rule that the company may not interfere with the sale of land to the school.

The suit asks for damages from the company for allegedly blocking the sale of $650,000 in property to the school.

The suit also asks for a declaratory

Barker, Stivers tell officials of changes New laws give local governments greater funding sources, protection

By MARTIN J. TRILLHAASE
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Legislation passed this year will provide local governments with some additional funds and an added measure of protection against costly medical indigent bills, Magic Valley officials were told Thursday.

Addressing the board of directors of the Region IV Development Association, state Sen. John Barker, R-Buhl, and Rep. T.W. Stivers, R-Twin Falls, outlined a series of state measures that will affect the operation of local governments.

The Region IV board is composed of representatives from cities and counties in the eight-county Magic Valley.

Barker, the chairman of the Senate Health, Education, and Welfare Committee, said several counties and cities in the region stand to receive additional funds through the imposition of the 3 percent sales tax on liquor sales.

Under the bill passed by the 1982 legislature, the additional dollars

IAC director describes new laws vital to county governments

JEROME — Charles Holden, the executive director of the Idaho Association of Counties, told Magic Valley's elected officials Wednesday that three bills passed by the 1982 Legislature are especially vital to county governments.

Speaking at a District IV IAC meeting in Jerome, Holden said the important measures were two bills dealing with indigents' medical bills and one that allows local authorities to set the salaries of prosecutors and county commissioners.

Created by the sales tax will be distributed on the basis of liquor sales in individual cities and counties. However, no unit of government will receive more than 1 percent of revenues than it did in 1981, he said.

Based on estimates prepared by the state liquor dispensary, the major increases in the Magic Valley will go to Blaine and Twin Falls counties.

Twin Falls County will receive an increase of $84,627, partly because of liquor sales and partly because the Holden said one of the indigent bills, which deals with catastrophic insurance, may not solve all the problems counties have had, but it could help many counties that are held responsible for huge medical bills for indigents involved in accidents or who are suffering from costly illnesses.

As for setting their own salaries, Holden said, "If you can't take the heat, you can always appoint a citizens committee to make a study and a recommendation, and then follow the recommendation."

These estimates assume a 6 percent increase in liquor sales.

Cities and counties also will receive additional road-repair dollars under the Legislature's decision to increase the state gasoline tax by a cent, Barker said. The one-year-only increase is expected to raise about $4 million statewide, he said.

For Twin Falls County, that means an anticipated $180,000 addition in road-repair funds. Individual cities within the county will divide up about $100,000 in additional funds, Barker said.

Barker also talked about the Legislature's decision to approve a statewide medical indigent insurance program, which is designed to protect counties from expensive medical bills incurred by indigents. Under the measure, counties will be assessed at an estimated rate of 70 cents per person to establish a $50,000 fund.

Counties will cover the first $10,000 of a claim. The $50,000 fund will cover administrative costs, insurance premiums and cover $600,000 in indigent claims. Once the $600,000 fund is depleted, the $2 million insurance policy will be applied.

Stivers, the chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, said the Legislature passed a number of measures designed to enhance law enforcement and streamline the court system.

These measures include:

- The establishment of a statewide arson and fraud investigative unit to be funded by the insurance industry.
- Eliminating the possibility of jury trials for minor traffic infractions, a move intended to speed-up court procedures. In order to accomplish that, the Legislature removed minor infractions from the criminal code and redefined them as civil offenses.
- Providing for a continuing garnishment of wages in order to collect child-support payments.
- Eliminating a procedure that allowed for the acquittal of criminal defendants on grounds of mental defect or disease.

Power outages in area reported

TWIN FALLS — Residents throughout the Magic Valley experienced sporadic power outages early Thursday.

Wet snow caused utility lines to sag into each other and into wet tree branches, tripping fuses in an area from Hansen to Buhl in the southern part of the valley, and as far north as Shoshone and Hivert, according to Barry Knoblich, Idaho Power Co. division operating supervisor.

Some 1,400 customers in the Kimberly area were without power for one and one-half hours, he said. Outages also affected Hansen, Wendell, Gooding, Hagerman, Shoshone and an area between South Park and the Twin Falls-Sun Valley Regional Airport.

A crew of about 45 linemen worked from 11:30 p.m. Wednesday to 10 a.m. Thursday to restore power as the outages occurred.

Knoblich said similar outages usually occur each fall at the start of the winter season, but they are rare after mid-March.

Arson suspected in Malta blaze

MALTA — Arson is suspected in the April 7 fire that destroyed Roman's Rockhouse Cafe in Malta.

Evidence was found at the scene indicating the blaze was caused by a public meeting in Twin Falls today.

Detective Don Taylor of the Cassia County Sheriff's Department. He said the sheriff's office has several suspects in the case, but is refused to give any further details.

Taylor said Malta firefighters responded to a call at 1:30 a.m. to find a fire in the kitchen and bar area of the cafe. At 6 a.m., firemen were called back to the scene, only to find the building engulfed by flames, he said.

Cassia County Sheriff Ray Mitchell said the Fire Department had checked the building thoroughly the first time to make sure the fire was out.

The cafe is owned by Roman Garza, Taylor said.

Hansen to open re-election bid

TWIN FALLS — Rep. George Hansen will launch his bid for re-election with a public meeting in Twin Falls today.

At 2:30 p.m. stop at the Twin Falls-Sun Valley Regional Airport is one of four campaign speeches Hansen plans across southern Idaho.

Hansen is seeking a seventh term as Idaho's 2nd District congressman.

The incumbent Republican is facing no challenger in the primary, two Democratic candidates — George Anthony of Filer and Richard Stallings of Reburx — are vying for his seat.

Paul council OKs trash dump site change

PAUL — Trash will be delivered from Paul to Cassia County's new garbage-fueled steam plant — if the Cassia commissioners agree.

Mayor Robert Larsen said Paul City Council decided Wednesday to haul the city's refuse to the incinerator in Paul, which is currently paying for the Mindoka County landfill, city clerk L. Tibbitts said. The city pays $31 a month at the landfill.

There is mutual benefit for the city and the county, Larsen said. The county sells the steam from the incinerator to the Simplot processing plant. The trip to the incinerator will be easier on the city's garbage equipment because the road to the incinerator, near Heyburn, is paved, while the road to the landfill is a dirt road.

The county commissioners meet Monday and if they approve the agreement, trash hauling could begin next week, Tibbitts said.

Burglars steal toys and games

TWIN FALLS — An estimated $38 in toys and games were taken in a burglary at Hobby Town Toys, 227 Main Ave. E., Twin Falls, between 9:30 p.m. Tuesday and 9 a.m. Wednesday, according to Twin Falls police.

Castelford woman kills herself

CASTLEFORD — Helen Ida Runyan, 46, of Castelford, died Wednesday afternoon of a self-inflicted gunshot wound, according to Twin Falls County Sheriff's deputies.

The woman drove from her home about 3 p.m., and workers at the Runyan farm in the Roseworth area found her body in a field about 5 p.m., deputies said.

Coroner Clyde Edwards has ruled the death a suicide. A full obituary is elsewhere on this page.

Pen inmate arraigned for drugs

TWIN FALLS — A state penitentiary inmate was brought to Twin Falls County on Monday, as prosecutors began their case against him on a 7-month-old felony drug case.

Donald Gene Ballard, 33, is charged with two counts of selling marijuana in Twin Falls County. He is in prison for a conviction in Ada County.

The Twin Falls County charges stem from two separate incidents — Sept. 3 and Sept. 9 — in which the defendant allegedly participated in the sale of one pound of marijuana to an undercover state narcotics agent.

Following Ballard's initial appearance in Fifth District Magistrate Court on Tuesday, bond was set at $25,000 on each count. Ballard was transferred back to prison Thursday.

The public defender's office has been appointed to represent him.

Youths display energy projects

TWIN FALLS — More than two dozen Magic Valley junior-high students will display energy-conservation projects at the Blue Lakes mall in Twin Falls this Saturday.

The students are participants in the third annual Alternative Energy Contest, sponsored by Idaho Power Co.

The projects will be judged on originality, practicality, workmanship and the contestant's ability to explain the project's function. Cash prizes of up to $100 will be awarded.

The projects will go on display at 9 a.m. Awards will be presented at 3:30 p.m.

JEROME — Church buildings in Jerome that are available for kindergarten classes include the Nazarene and Episcopal facilities.

Church of the Nazarene officials have offered the school board half-day use of its church classrooms.

The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints officials have also offered to offer facilities for days or half-days because of tax problems that might arise.

A story in the Times-News on Thursday incorrectly quoted school board member Joe Skoug as saying the Mormon buildings would be available half-days.

Mistakes plus Bobcat arms doom Bruins

By CHRIS HAFT
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Strong pitching by the Burley Bobcats and a horrendous second inning for Twin Falls combined to bring the Bruins their third consecutive defeat Thursday afternoon, 6-5.

The deuces were wild, and so were the Bruins. Twin Falls managed to commit two errors, two wild pitches and two walks after two were out in the second inning, allowing Burley to score four runs.

It was an important victory for the 7-3 Bobcats, who improved their chances at gaining a first-round bye in next month's Fourth District A-1 Tournament. Solid performances from starter Allen Rice and reliever Rick Asson keyed Burley's success.

After Rice limited the Bruins to a single run before faltering in the fourth inning, Asson took over and permitted Twin Falls just two hits and a run over the final 3 1/2 innings.

"Both of them have carried us most of the year," Burley Coach Dean Satterfield said of Rice (4-1) and Asson (3-1).

Coach Bill Ingram labeled tentativeness as the reason why his Bruins fell to 11-4.

"I'm not being aggressive," Ingram said. "We didn't play that badly today, but we're just asleep. I think we need to toughen up mentally a little bit."

"I think we had too easy a start (Twin Falls won its first seven games and 11 of its first 12), and we're probably tired, but those aren't excuses."

The Bruins had no excuses for their shabby second inning. With two out and nobody on base, Twin Falls starter Victor Valdez walked Kory Knapp. Asson then hit a grounder to third baseman David Slotten, who threw the ball away, allowing Knapp to go to third.

Mark Leonard's wind-blown fly ball carried over left-fielder Mike Federico's head and fell for a double, scoring Knapp and Asson and giving Burley a 3-1 lead.

Brook Brodeen replaced Valdez after a walk to Jim McCord. Brodeen promptly fired two pitches to the backstop, bringing Leonard home and sending McCord to third. McCord scored the inning's final run on shortstop Shawn Humberger's error.

A fourth-inning rally brought the Bruins within a run of the Bobcats. With Mike Black on third and Brock

Tigers show signs of life, Cardinals erase question marks

Despite injuries, Detroit takes home opener

By United Press International

Sparky Anderson's Detroit Tigers may be severely wounded, but they're not dead.

Dave Rozema, who started for the Tigers, left in the fourth inning with spasms in his back between his shoulder blades. Mill Wilcox also has a sore back and the Tigers have two players (Rick Leach and Ed Miller) already on the disabled list plus another, catcher Lance Parrish, who has a strained tendon in his left hand that will probably sideline him for another week. Backup catcher Bill Fahey has a bad knee.

The heavy casualties did not prevent Lou Whitaker from snapping a 2-2 tie with a run-scoring single in the sixth inning and Enos Cabell added his second RBI single an inning later Thursday to give the Detroit Tigers a 4-2 victory over the Toronto Blue Jays in their home opener.

A crowd of 51,038 watched relievers

American

Kevin Saucier and Elias Sosa hold Toronto to four hits and no runs over the last 5-2-3 innings. Saucier evaded his record at 1-1 and Sosa picked up his first save.

With the score tied at 2-2, Jerry Turner lined into a double play with runners on first and second and nobody out, apparently squashing a sixth inning outburst. But Larry Herndon scored all the way from first base on Whitaker's hit-and-run single into right-center.

Twins 11, A's 5

At Minneapolis, rookie Kent Hrbek hit his fifth home run of the year in a three-run sixth inning and fellow-rookie Randy Johnson added a three-run shot, his fourth hit of the day, in a six-run eighth to spark Minnesota.

Hrbek opened the sixth with a home run which bounced off the football press box in deep right center field off loser Rick Langford, 1-1.

White Sox 8, Red Sox 4
At Boston, Steve Kemp cracked a two-run homer and Jim Morrison broke an 0-for-13 slump with a two-run double to lead the White Sox to their fifth straight victory. With the score tied 1-1 in the third, Kemp sent Bob Ojeda's 24 pitch over the left field wall, scoring Tony Bernazard, who had singled, and giving Chicago a 3-1 lead.

Indians 8, Brewers 1

At Cleveland, Bert Blyleven allowed two hits over seven innings and Bake McBride and Rick Manning each drove in two runs to spark the Indians. Blyleven, who worked only 7-2-3 innings in spring training while being hammered by slow problems, retired the first 14 Brewers in order before Ben Oglivie doubled in the fifth. Mike Caldwell suffered the loss.

St. Louis pitchers keep baffling opponents

By United Press International

Suddenly, the St. Louis Cardinals' pitching staff is looking more like an exclamation point than a question mark.

Steve Mura turned in the Cardinals' second straight complete game victory Thursday by beating the Chicago Cubs, 6-1, on a four-hitter as St. Louis stretched its winning streak to five games.

After Andy Rincon stopped the Cubs, 3-1, on three hits Wednesday, Mura blanked Chicago for eight innings Thursday before Keith Moreland spoiled his shutout bid by drilling a solo homer with two out in the ninth. It was Moreland's fourth homer of the season.

It was far too little and too late for the Cubs, however, as the Cardinals got early home runs from Lonnie Smith and George Hendrick and sent

National

Doug Bird to his second loss in three decisions.

Smith hit his second homer of the season with one out in the fifth inning and Hendrick belted his third homer, a solo shot, with one out in the sixth.

Mura, acquired from San Diego in the off-season, struck out five and walked two.

Pirates 4, Expos 3

At Montreal, Omar Moreno singled home Johnny Ray with the winning run in the top of the ninth inning to give the Pirates their victory. With the score tied 3-3, Ray led off the ninth with a single against Steve Rogers.

After pinch-hitter Willie Stargell hit into a double play, Ray scored when Moreno singled to shallow center field off reliever Woodie Fryman to help make a winner of Kent Tekulve.

Dave Parker and Jason Thompson homered for Pittsburgh.

Phillies 8, Mets 4 (12 innings)

At New York, Manny Trillo led off the 13th inning with a single off Charlie Puleo, who suffered his first major league loss, and was sacrificed to second. After an intentional walk to Pete Rose and a walk to Greg Gross, Gary Carter grounded out to third baseman Hubie Brooks, who threw to second attempting a double play.

Rose broke up the relay attempt by second baseman Wally Backman and Trillo scored for a 5-4 lead. Luis Aguayo, who had only two homers in his two previous major-league seasons, then followed with his three-run shot.

Mookie Wilson homered for New York, his second in two days.

Wadkins leads Tournament of Champions

RANCHO LA COSTA, Calif. (UPI) — Lanny Wadkins fired a Sunday-par 67 Thursday to take a two-stroke lead after the first round of the $350,000 Tournament of Champions.

The tournament is sponsored by MONY. Wadkins, 32, in his 12th year as a pro tour player, brilliantly through 17 holes, carding six birdies. His lone bogey came on the par-4 18th hole.

Tied at 69 were Tom Watson, who won the tournament in 1979 and 1980, Bill Rogers and Hale Irwin. Another stroke behind were seven more players — Tom Weiskopf, Bruce Lietzke, Fuzzy Zoeller and David Graham, Ed Flori, Jim Simons and Andy Bean.

Defending champion Lee Trevino was at 1-under-par 71, while Masters champion Craig Stadler had three consecutive bogies followed by a double bogey on the front side for 2-over 74.

Wadkins, who finished third on the money list in 1977 and 10th on the list in 1979 but was just 61st last year, qualified for the tournament by winning the Phoenix Open earlier this year with an amazing 263. He missed the cut at Hawaii, Los Angeles and in the Tournament Players Championship, however.

His first birdie came on the par-5 third hole when he sank a 12-foot putt. He sank a six-foot putt on the sixth hole to move to 2-under, and on No. 8 he rolled in a 30-foot putt for his third birdie to make the turn at 3-under 33.

He broke out of a tie for the lead with a birdie on the 10th hole and then opened up a two-stroke lead with back-to-back birdies on the 12th and 13th holes, including another 20-foot putt on No. 12.

His sixth birdie came on the 16th hole. After saving par on No. 16 by hooking his second shot around a tree and two-putting, he came to the par-4, 423-yard 16th hole.

"My second shot landed 55 yards straight to the left of the pin," Wadkins said. "The next shot landed in a trap and I had to hit it with one foot in the sand and the other on the grass."

"I put it within 12 feet and made the putt. That's what you call a working man's bogey."

Wadkins said he played one of his most solid rounds of the year, and his best putting round.

"I only hit a few funky shots," he said. "Funky is when you hit it and then ask 'Where did it go?'"

Watson, a four-time Player of the Year who lost that title to Rogers last year, shot an even-par 36 on the front side, but reeled off consecutive birdies on the 11th, 12th and 13th holes — all on putts inside eight feet — to move into the tie for second place.

Watson said it was not a round he was proud of, despite the good score.

"That round was like a real bad painting," he said. "It was so ugly, you hate to look at it, but it still sold. I had trouble all day and not in any one area. I hit bad drives and good drives. I hit some bad irons and some irons stiff to the pin."

Post on top of Women's International with 2-under 70—a rare below-par effort

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (UPI) — Sandra Post, shooting one of only three sub-par rounds, had a Sunday-par 70 Thursday over the long and tough Devil's Elbow Course to take a one-shot lead over Beth Daniel and Sally Little in the first round of the LPGA Women's International golf tournament.

A select field of 59 top professionals and amateurs found the 6,200-yard layout one of the toughest tests on the tour this year with only three golfers breaking par and another four posting even 72s.

One shot behind Daniel and Little, the defending champion and the tour's leading money winner, were Debbie Austin, Donna White, Hollis Stacy, and Cathy Morse and with even pars. At one over were Kathy Whitworth and Vicki Tabor.

"The course played very long today, the longest I've ever seen it play," said Stacy, who should know because she makes her home on this tropical resort island. "The tees were back, so were the pins and the wind was blowing like a son of a gun."

Post, who has earned only $3,779 this year but has seen her game come around in the past two weeks, had a 34-36 that included four birdies and two bogeys, and said she didn't think things would get much better in terms of scoring.

"Looking at the past champions, and the scores they won with speaks for itself," she said. "You've just got to take every day as it comes. There isn't one hole or one shot you can let up on."

Last year, Little won in a playoff, but was only one under after the 72 holes of regulation. A 9-under-par 279 is the lowest winning score in this 7-year-old tournament, which models itself after the Masters, and used to call itself that before officials at Augusta objected.

While Post held the lead, Little was the player who drew the most attention. She also won here in 1976, and is coming off a victory two weeks ago in the Dinah Shore Invitational, her second win of the year.

"My timing was 100 percent today," said the 30-year-old South African. "But anytime I shoot under par, I'm happy. It's really a tough course to score well on."

Niners may sign Nehemiah

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The Super Bowl champion San Francisco 49ers said they hope to announce today the signing of Reynaldo Nehemiah, the world record holder in the high hurdles.

Nehemiah and his agent, Ron Stanko, met with 49ers coach and general manager Bill Walsh Thursday amid speculation an agreement has been reached on a multi-year contract.

"Nothing has been signed as yet," said a 49ers spokesman, "but we hope to announce Nehemiah has agreed to a contract at our news conference Friday. We presented Nehemiah and his agent with a contract proposal and they asked for time to study it."

Nehemiah, who last played football as a wishbone quarterback for Fairwood High School in Scotch Plains, N.J., in 1977, has been sought by seven other NFL teams — Philadelphia, Washington, New England, Dallas, Oakland, San Diego and Pittsburgh. He will be tried as a wide receiver should he agree to the 4-year terms.

Should Nehemiah decide to try his hand at football, he will be ineligible for the 1984 Olympics, a goal he had set for himself earlier. But according to some of his close friends, he has never been with track and field in recent months, mostly because of a lack of competition.

In his workout for the 49ers, Nehemiah clocked 4.1 seconds for 40 yards, his close friend Jim Bin the fastest player in the NFL should he make the grade. He is 6-foot-1 and weighs 177 pounds.

There is some question about Nehemiah's durability but none as to his ability. He is the only man to run the 110-meter high hurdles in under 13 seconds.

Vandal, Bronco cagers lure centers

By United Press International A 6-foot-10, 200-pound high school senior from Auburn, Calif., has signed a national letter of intent to attend the University of Idaho and play basketball for the Vandals next fall.

Idaho athletic officials said Pete Reitz from Placer High School in California intends to play for the Big Sky Conference champions next year. Reitz was an honorable mention all-conference player during his senior year, averaging 10 points and six rebounds per game.

NBA makes tie-breaking procedures

NEW YORK (UPI) — The National Basketball Association Thursday issued tie-breaking procedures for Western Conference teams in case of a three-way or four-way tie for the remaining playoff positions.

Denver 7-4, Phoenix 5-5, Houston 4-7. Denver and Phoenix would qualify.

Denver 8-3, Houston 5-6, Golden State 3-7. Denver and Houston would qualify.

Denver, Golden State and Phoenix: Golden State 6-5, Denver 5-6, Phoenix 5-6. Golden State and Denver would qualify.

Golden State, Houston and Phoenix: Houston 7-3, Golden State 5-6, Phoenix 4-7. Houston and Golden State would qualify.

If there's a four-way tie among Houston, Denver, Golden State and Phoenix to determine three remaining playoff spots, Denver and Houston would qualify as a result of cumulative winning percentages.

By Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag

Today's hand came up in a duplicate club championship. All pairs except one bid four spades going down one or more tricks. Our pair bid only three spades, but made four. Had East opened three diamonds in first seat,

North-South would have been propelled into game. But East passed and West opened one heart in third chair. North made an off-bridge takeout double and East now tried three diamonds, which was passed back in North. He doubled again and judged to pass South's three spade response. The diamond ace won the first trick and West continued with the queen forcing dummy to trump, with the spade seven. Declarer now led the spade jack to his king in order to try a heart finesse. The jack was covered by the king and won by dummy's ace. Next the heart queen was cashed and a small heart trumped in the closed hand. A club to the king was followed by a final heart ruff in declarer's hand. South led a club to dummy's ace, his eighth trick, and exited with a club. The defense was hopeless. Eventually dummy's ace-jack of trumps provided two more tricks.

Careful timing had given South the overtrick. He had several finesses to choose from, but the heart finesse was the only one he needed to take the club finesse as the play developed and the king was finally forced to lead spades for him. (NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.)

Television

Teachers back on the tube again

By JERRY KRUPNICK
Newhouse News Service

NEW YORK — Television, in its usual repetitive manner, is undergoing a mini-revival of the classroom comedy.

No — "Welcome Back, Kotter" is not doing a network encore in reruns. Nor is "Room 222" or "Our Miss Brooks" anywhere in sight.

But this month we are being enrolled in back-to-school nights, apparently because the TV powers-that-be have decided the medium is ready once again for a touch of classroom.

The two newcomers — "Making the Grade" and "Teachers Only" — are both "limited series," which means they must get very early acceptance or flunk.

The term already has started for "Making the Grade," which CBS is scheduling for the Monday night slot usually occupied by "House Calls." If first impressions are any criteria, the show is in big trouble.

Don't misunderstand. We enjoyed "Making the Grade" very much. It is well-made and funny, and we liked its leading players.

Unfortunately, a piece-of-fluff movie with gooney Gary Coleman was the opposite last week and cluttered everything else. The initial low rating for "Making the Grade" proves our theory that it's not what you are but where you are that counts.

Which brings us to "Teachers Only," the NBC comedy that comes out Wednesday, a timeslot temporarily vacated by "Love, Sidney."

Lynn Redgrave is the star of "Teachers Only." She had left CBS "House Calls" abruptly that night involved the producer's refusal to allow her to nurse her infant on the set and to give her more money and equal billing with Wayne Rogers.

With "Teachers Only," Redgrave is getting star billing and a lot more money.

Redgrave is cast as a high school English teacher at a school apparently in California. She's one of those marvelous teachers — modern, understanding, interested in all her students, uncomplaining.

The problem with the show is that the high school itself is improbable, obviously some comedy writer's idea of what goes on in our schools today. Check it out with your kids. No matter what type of community you live in — rich, poor, middle class — this is just not the way it is.

For openers, Redgrave becomes involved with one of the female students, whose parents are divorced. The girl seizes upon her teacher as a mother figure and wants to move in. Eventually — and predictably — Redgrave persuades the student that she has to live her own life and can't go around resenting forever what her parents have done.

It is all done with one-liners thrown in at random and the sappy high school setting adds nothing to the story line. Redgrave is her usual pleasing self, and Norman Fell as the principal has a wry way with a punch line. But the others at the school barely make the grade.

All this is in contrast to "Making the Grade." Here, the locale at an inner city school in East St. Louis is realistic, the people are funny and the situations have guts to them.

We think James Naughton as the dean of boys could be a new TV series superstar. Graham Jarvis, the lovable Charlie of "Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman," is terrific as the officious vice principal. And Steven Peterman as the new teacher in town is easy to like.

"Making the Grade" has the solid feel of a good ensemble situation comedy. "Teachers Only" is designed as a "star vehicle" and depends on how much of a fan club Lynn Redgrave can draw. If Wednesday's opener is the norm, count us absent.

LYNN REDGRAVE
Not quite making the grade

Leash loosens on commercials, kid shows

By KENNETH R. CLARK
UPI TV Reporter

NEW YORK — Youngsters who watch what passes for children's television these days soon may find themselves under mounting commercial pressure to whine and throw tantrums for goodies seen on the tube, but Clare O'Brien won't be sorry for most of their parents. She says they have it coming.

Mrs. O'Brien, who helped create the ex-quisite PBS children's show, "The Big Blue Marble," said commercially minded or the younger set is the likely outcome of FCC chairman Mark S. Fowler's determination to deregulate the broadcast industry.

The move, mandated by President Reagan, will brighten the networks at the expense of younger viewers — protected heretofore from hard-sell commercial messages in their programming — but she doubts if enough parents care any more to change the scenario.

"Now that the head's off the cereal manufacturers they can more or less go in and leech the kid audience," she said. "The same thing goes for the candy and toy manufacturers — and the toy manufacturers aren't going to concern themselves with toy safety issues the way they had to before.

"I don't know what's going to happen in terms of advertising minutes per hour...but advertising isn't the biggest problem to me. The programming causes me many more reservations."

Programming — in an era that has seen CBS's "The Carolan" and "Carnegie" reduced to 15 minutes and buried at dawn — is something a lot of people interested in children's television fare are worried about now that the FCC appears to be getting out of the regulating business.

"It's a real crapshoot," Mrs. O'Brien said. "It's either going to mean nothing will be on for kids at all, or that a lot of garbage will be on. It's very easy, if you watch children and how they relate to television, to see how they get hooked on garbage."

"They speak back those commercials to you — 'ring around the collar' — even things that aren't intended for them. Now the advertisers can go back and do pretty much whatever they want to do if the commissioner has his way."

Money, she said, will be the hinge upon which children's programming will turn for better or for worse at the commercial networks.

"We're in an interesting transition now," she said. "I'm curious to see...when the heat gets off the advertisers and they can go after those little kids if a market will be created. I'm not inclined to say anything good will come out of it in terms of good programming, but I do think a lot of the networks have stayed back because of regulations in advertising."

"Nothing's going to come out of the networks unless there's a lot of money to be made in it."

The networks, however, were not the sole targets of Mrs. O'Brien's cynicism. "Most parents, she said, deserve what the networks are about to give them."

"When I first got involved in television, I had a lot of very naive notions that the general public really wanted what was best for their kids," she said. "In 10 years, I've learned that not everybody does. We're raising a generation of children with no taste and that's a terrible thing, but a lot of people don't care."

"I've talked to women who have children in private schools in New York and they say, 'look, I need that television. I don't care what my kids are watching when it gives me two or three hours of peace and quiet.'"

"When the kids start soaking up the full impact of the toy and candy commercials, peace and quiet may be short lived."

This week's best Friday

"Barney Miller" on ABC: Barney and his men become embroiled with Russia's KGB and the shipping of computer micro-chips behind the Iron Curtain, and Wolo arrests a would-be prostitute who's trying to supplement her U.S. Army pay.

Saturday

CBS offers a nice movie: "Same Time, Next Year." A chance encounter between two happily married people turns into a once-a-year relationship that spans three decades. Ellen Burstyn and Alan Alda star.

Sunday

"Yanks" is the ABC movie starring Vanessa Redgrave and Richard Gere. A young soldier finds a love he cannot keep and a memory he cannot lose in this war romance. For Dean Martin fans, NBC offers "Dean Martin at the Wild Animal Park" with Don DeLuise, Barbi Benton and Jerry Reed.

Monday

"CBS Reports: The American Israeli Connection." Correspondent Andrew Lack anchors this look at the complex and very personal ties between Israel and the United States and whether those ties, once so powerful, may now be in peril.

Tuesday

The CBS movie "Parole" might be interesting. A dedicated Boston parole officer's experiences with a troubled young parolee highlight the problems many former prisoners encounter when thrust back into a society with inadequate employment skills and prison-induced emotional scars. James Naughton, Lori Cardille and Ted Ross star.
