

Dear Abby

Couple's incompatible clocks drive husband cuckoo

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: This is a second marriage for both of us. Elsie is 69 and I'm 70. We both lost our mates a few years ago and met at a retirement complex last year.

Elsie moved into my place, which is well-furnished, but she brought in a few of her own favorite pieces. One is a cuckoo clock that belonged to her parents. (She says she can't sleep without it.)

I have a grandfather clock that strikes on the hour, half-hour and quarter-hour. It keeps perfect time. Elsie's clock is very erratic. The cuckoo is supposed to come out of its house on the hour, but this one comes out whenever it feels like it, several times an hour, and cuckoos like crazy. Plus, the ticking of that clock is extremely loud and disturbing.

Last night at midnight I heard 12 gongs followed by endless cuckooing. Then in between the gongs of my clock, I heard the cuckooing of her clock continually until 5 a.m. That did it!

I told Elsie that those clocks were driving me crazy, and I would get rid of my clock if she'd get rid of hers. She wouldn't hear of it. I'm getting very impatient. How can we settle this? Aside from our incompatible clocks, we get along fine.

DEAR TROUBLE: IN TAMPA her clock fixed so that it will cuckoo only once on the hour when yours gongs. Otherwise you'll both wind up alone — with time on your hands.

DEAR ABBY: Mack and I own a little home in the suburbs, and last spring we planted a vegetable garden. With food prices going so high, we thought it would save us money.

When our tomato plants got about half a foot high, Mack started singing to them! He'd take his guitar, a six-pack of beer and a chair outside, plunk himself down in the middle of the tomato plants and sing. The more beer he drank, the louder he sang.

Mack claims it's a scientific fact that plants that get music produce more than plants that don't. Is there any truth to this?

DEAR SKEPTICAL SPOUSE: Experts say yes! But a word of caution. Better buy your tomatoes. No matter how expensive they get, it's cheaper than drying out Mack.

DEAR ABBY: My ex-husband and I are planning to remarry. We were married for 11 years and have three children. After being divorced for two years, we realize that we really love each other and we think we can now make a go of it.

We were married the first time at the city hall by a justice of the peace. It was a five-minute ceremony and there was nothing spiritual or beautiful about it. This time I want a REAL wedding in a church with a white wedding gown and veil. I've heard that white gowns and veils are for virgins only. I earned the right to wear one the first time but couldn't afford it then. My ex-husband is the only man I've ever slept with, so I still feel entitled to wear white. Am I wrong?

— ENTITLED OR NOT

DEAR ENTITLED: You're entitled. And it's not true that white wedding gowns are for virgins only. Traditionally, white gowns are for the FIRST marriage, but even that tradition has faded.

Mrs. Fisher recalls different times

Spicy Ann Fisher, longtime Buhl resident, grew up in West Virginia nearly 100 years ago

By LORAYNE O. SMITH
Times-News writer

BUHL — When Spicy Ann Fisher was a girl in West Virginia she went to dances on Saturdays.

"When a boy came to take you to a dance he'd come to pick you up with his horse and I'd ride behind him," the Buhl woman said.

Now 88, Mrs. Fisher has her own apartment which she maintains with the help of her daughters, even though she lived in a retirement center in Twin Falls a few years ago after a heart attack.

Recalling her girlhood nearly a century ago, Mrs. Fisher spoke of activities which are far removed from today's lifestyles. She was born Aug. 19, 1883, in Charleston, W. Va.

The main recreation was attending "platform dances" so called because the young folks danced on planks laid a few feet off the ground. Between dances they ate ice cream and drank lemonade.

Her family butchered pigs, using the fat to make soap. Ashes from hickory wood burned in the stoves were put in a hopper and ran water through them to make the lye for the soap.

Since this was before the days of home canning, winter menus featured such items as dried apples and beans.

When she was a girl, grain still was "cradled" the term for cutting by a hand scythe. Then it was tied in bundles and set in shocks until it could be threshed with a steam driven threshing machine.

There was no sugar but they had "barrels of molasses" on her father raised sugar cane and tobacco. When the Buhl woman seemed at a loss to give any reason for her long life, she laughingly said it might be attributed to "all that molasses."

Leaves from the sugar cane were used for fodder for the cattle and the stalks were ground on their farm at a small mill operated by horses. The liquid was collected into a pan and would be boiled down to make the molasses, she said.

The fourth child in a family of 12, Mrs. Fisher said she hoed corn as a girl. She attended the Sugar Grove Country school near their farm some 25 miles from Charleston, W. Va., but when she was about 16 she quit and went to work, following the pattern for large families in that day.

She worked as a hired girl in Charleston where she became acquainted with Eugene Fisher, whom she had known as a child. They were married in 1904.

"We were married in the state capitol building in Charleston," Mrs. Fisher said, "because I knew a retired Methodist minister who worked there as a night watchman."

The couple drove to the ceremony in the newest mode of transportation, a rubber tired buggy.

A few years after their marriage, her father joined the LDS church and in 1908 the Fishers joined a family group of about 30 people who came West by train.

"When we got to Utah we had one quarter to our name," she said. "When we first arrived out West I thought it was the most destitute place I'd ever seen."

They reached Colton, Utah, on a Monday noon and then had to drive by horse and buggy some 50 miles inland where LDS missionaries met them. That trip took two or three days.

"It was April and muddy," Mrs. Fisher said. "We had tents and bedding and we camped out along the way."

Mr. Fisher "worked out" for a year in the Duchesne area, and then the couple took an "Indian lease" in the Uintah Basin in northeastern Utah. This meant renting land from the government for $5 a year, from which the Indians supposedly drew royalties.

Although Mrs. Fisher admitted the Indians were "quite savage" to begin with and didn't like the whites coming, they later became very neighborly as they joined the LDS church. A daughter recalls her mother would "put the dresser in front of the door when Daddy was gone getting wood."

It was hard going at first on the Indian land, as they had to clear the sagebrush and pump water by horse and buggy from the Duchesne River.

"I drove horses when we broke the land," she said. But irrigation water was adequate and soon they were "doing pretty well." They farmed there 15 years until time got too hard.

During his search for work, Fisher came through Buhl but found a job with the railroad in Salt Lake City briefly and then for another two years in Delta, Utah, before the couple moved to Buhl in 1925.

"We landed here on a Saturday," she recalled, "and found an empty house in the Pecos. In addition, with an acre of ground which we bought for $300. Later on we purchased three more acres, eventually selling the land for $5,700."

Her husband, whom she described as a "Jack of all trades" worked variously for the phone company, highway department and canal firm.

Mrs. Fisher raised some 300 White Leghorn hens, selling eggs to the Idaho Egg Association and cared for their few cows as well as raising her five children. They include Lulu Fisher and Henry Fisher, both of Salt Lake City; Sarah Watson and Hattie Gorman, both of Buhl, and Lorraine Rees of Castleford. She has 14 grandchildren and many great-grandchildren.

Days of cheap retirement housing in Florida gone forever

By R.B. PLUNKETT JR.
New York Daily News

When George DuBato left Roslyn, N.Y., and retired to South Florida eight years ago, finding a retirement home was a pleasure.

"I came down and picked it out in one weekend," he says. "They were building homes as fast as they could. And they were beautiful and relatively inexpensive."

That was a common experience for Snow Belt residents retiring to the Sunshine State, and the retelling of those tales has kept the Florida retirement dream alive for three decades. After all, cheap housing and terrific weather are a hard combination to beat.

But those days may be gone forever. Today, you might have to be content with good weather. As in the rest of the nation, the one-two punch of high inflation and a recession has left Florida with two categories of homes — high-priced and higher priced. Add in high mortgage rates and George DuBato's story sounds like a fantasy.

"The market is different now," says Lewis Goodkin, a real estate analyst and specialist in Florida property. "The much coveted southern end of the state hasn't got any bargains left. There was just too much demand and not enough supply of homes in the Miami and Fort Lauderdale areas."

If you showed up on the Gold Coast this week, real estate agents say it might take you weeks to find a home you can afford and several weeks more to arrange financing. If you can find it. "And when you finally settle down, more than likely it will be well inland, away from the prime areas near the beach," says Goodkin.

In other words, buying a home isn't any easier in Florida than it is up North. And similar messages are being flashed back from Arizona and New Mexico — other areas generally associated with retirement.

The Sun Belt states may be free from overcrowding, winter storms and rocketing heating bills, but they aren't immune from the real estate woes that plague the rest of the country. Mortgage money has dried up considerably and, when available, carries an average 17 percent rate plus a 3 percent to 5 percent origination fee, or points. That means the borrower has to produce 3 percent to 5 percent of the amount of the mortgage in cash, up front.

"Once, the demand for homes came mainly from retired couples because there weren't many jobs," says Gary London, a Southwest real estate analyst. "But now the high-tech and computer companies are moving in from California, so there is housing demand from young working couples."

"Companies need affordable housing for their workers," London says. "The Northeast becomes more expensive, so businesses moved south to Florida. The same thing happened to Southern California companies.

So the retirees have to compete for the cheap housing. Here's a state-by-state rundown of the situation in three states sought-after by retirees:

FLORIDA
Unless you are very well-off, forget about the Gold Coast — Miami Beach, Fort Lauderdale and Palm Beach — and the southwest coastline — Lee and Collier counties. Simply, it is a classic case of supply and demand. South Florida has little room for building, so the supply is fixed. The demand, however, continues to grow — including buying by wealthy South Americans seeking U.S. land and drug dealers laundering illegal cash. As a result, this area carries a 40 percent premium over prices in the rest of the state.

However, the rest of the state has a good supply of single-family homes and condominiums with a median value of $45,300, according to a study by the University of Florida. "And since mortgage rates have slowed sales, it's a buyer's market," says Goodkin. "A retired couple coming to Florida with cash could do very well between now and the end of summer."

Already many developers have begun discounting prices on new homes to get rid of inventory (and pay back construction loans) or instituting "buy-down financing," where the builder will subsidize mortgage interest payments for a few years.

The rapid appreciation of older homes has slowed over the last 18 months (to about 4 percent annually). That's bad news for speculators who invested in real estate during the 1978-80 boom period. Now they are trying to unload their land holdings to move into more lucrative investments, so prices are beginning to drop slightly.

Among the up-and-coming areas is Pasco County, north of Tampa-St. Petersburg. With a coastline and open land for planned developments, Pasco is expected to double its population in 10 years and become a retirement mecca of the 1990s. Today, the median value of a home is $38,300.

Volusia County, just inland from Daytona Beach, is a northern coastline county expected to grow by almost 25 percent by 1990. Part of the reason is you can still buy oceanfront property for about $110 a square foot, compared to an average $170 a square foot in the Miami area and up to $300 in Palm Beach County. Today, the median price for a home in this area is $39,900.

Central Florida, or more specifically the Orlando metropolitan area, is cited by several analysts as having the best housing values in the state. In practical terms, that means there is a good supply of condominiums under

Tips may save doctor costs

By DOLLY KATZ
Knight-Ridder Newspapers

This year we will spend more than $250 billion, 10 percent of our gross national product, on health care.

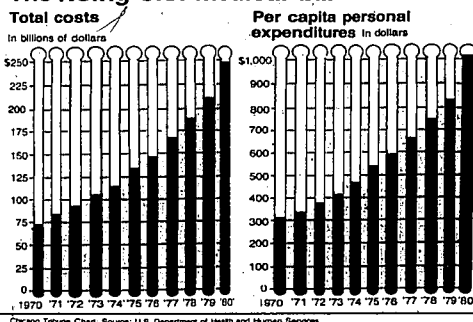

Nobody questions that we could spend a lot less and still get good health care. But the very magnitude and the outlay seems to dwarf any efforts to reduce it. It seems one might as well be an ant trying to level a sand dune grain by grain.

But take heart. You can make a difference. The national health care bill is, after all, made up of billions of individual medical bills just like yours. Certain steps you can take not only will reduce the nation's health care bill, but also will significantly reduce the amount you pay out of your own pocket. Consider:

- Choosing a doctor. If you have Blue Cross-Blue Shield health insurance, go to a participating doctor or dentist — one who has agreed to accept the Blues' price list for various treatments, so your charge is confined to the insurance deductible. If you go to a non-participating doctor, you will be required to pay the difference between the Blues' price list and the doctor's often considerably higher charges.

- Surgery. Unless the situation is an emergency, get a second opinion before you undergo any recommended operation. Estimates vary, but health experts generally agree that a significant amount of surgery performed in the United States is unnecessary. This is because the condition can be treated by other means, because no treatment is necessary, or because surgery won't help the problem.

The rising U.S. medical bill

Unnecessary surgery is not confined to hysterectomies and tonsillectomies; it encompasses all kinds of operations, from pacemaker implants to prostate surgery. Most insurance policies, including Blue Cross-Blue Shield, pay for second opinions, as do Medicare and Medicaid.

If possible, have your surgery done on an outpatient basis. Many hospitals and clinics now offer one-day surgery for hernia repair, some kinds of eye surgery, and other procedures. Besides the savings in time and money, outpatient surgery reduces the risk of hospital-acquired infections, which develop in one of 30 hospitalized patients.

- Drugs. Always ask the doctor why a specific drug is being ordered. Doctors sometimes prescribe drugs for patients not because the patients need them, but because they think the patients expect them. Vitamin B injections, harmless but useless except in the treatment of pernicious anemia and a few other very rare conditions, are a classic example.

Ask the doctor to prescribe a generic drug instead of a brand name. Drugs sold under their brand names (like Wyeth's Pen-Vee K) generally are much more expensive and no better than the same drugs marketed under their chemical names (penicillin V potassium).

Ask the doctor to prescribe the cheapest kind of drug you'll be able to do the job. Often, several different kinds of drugs are available for treatment of the same problem. For example, a urinary tract infection could be treated with $30 worth of a very expensive antibiotic called cephalosporin, with about $5 worth of a moderately priced tetracycline, or with $2.50 worth of a cheap sulfonamide.

The doctor may have a very good reason for prescribing one kind of drug over another or, on the other hand, may be prescribing it because a very successful advertising campaign has made the name familiar.

- X-rays. Doctors order X-rays for many reasons: to diagnose patients' problems, to protect themselves against malpractice suits, and sometimes out of habit. Question your doctor and dentist carefully about the need for an X-ray. Not every injury, for example, requires an X-ray to rule out the possibility of a bone fracture. A federal study found that emergency room doctors could safely reduce the number of skull X-rays on head trauma cases up to 50 percent if they followed a rigid set of guidelines for determining when X-rays are necessary.

Often, a specialist will order new X-rays on a patient even though the patient had the same X-rays done only a short time ago by another doctor. If that happens to you, tell the doctor that you already have a recent set of X-rays, and arrange to have them delivered. In addition to the extra expense, unnecessary X-rays needlessly expose you to potentially harmful radiation.

Illness in elderly found influenced by spouse's health

BERKELEY, Calif. (UPI) — The health of elderly people is often linked to how their spouses feel, according to a new study released Tuesday.

Public health specialists said elderly people with spouses who were recently ill were more likely to complain that they too felt sick than those who lived with someone who was healthy.

Researchers said they were intrigued at the unexpected finding which came from a large study of why some elderly people become ill while others remain in excellent health.

Information on 11 factors associated with health — such as age, gender, finances, height and weight, and sleep length — were sent to 1,500 people over 60 years old in Alameda County.

Surprisingly, the strongest indicator of health status turned out to be how the person's mate felt, said University of California researcher Meredith A. Minkler.

"We already knew that a number of factors, including social class, life satisfaction, smoking and exercise are related to overall health. We were looking for other, important and possibly overlooked variables," Minkler said.

She said the results support other research showing that people are more vulnerable to illness and death in the months after their spouses have died.

It also supports the growing body of evidence that suggests that systems influence one's health, she said.

"Future research should look at the degree of a mate's illness affecting health," Minkler said. "Is an illness in one spouse more important when a mate is chronically or terminally ill, or are minor illnesses also important? Right now, we don't have the answers."

In the survey, 24 percent of the people who were in fair or poor health reported that their mates had been ill within the past six months. In contrast, only 10 percent of people in good health had a mate ill within the last half year.

The strong association between the health of a couple could be that they share the same lifestyle and environment, Minkler said.

The average sleep length was found to be the second most important factor in the health of those surveyed. People sleeping fewer than five or more than 10 hours — often a symptom of depression — were found to be significantly more likely to be in poor health than other elderly people, the study showed.

Dr. Lamb

By LAWRENCE LAMB, M.D.
Newspaper Enterprise Association

DEAR DR. LAMB — My doctor tells me I have severe bronchitis and there is nothing to be done for me. He says I'll just have to live with it.

When I had a cold recently the cough turned into a bloody secretion that was so bad I could not lie flat to sleep. This went on for two days and nights then gradually cleared up.

The doctor gives me vitamin K and antibiotics to clear up the infection. At times I have a short spell of spitting up blood but it only lasts a few minutes. If I get a cold it's much worse.

Isn't there some form of surgery that can be done for people like me? I cannot accept the fact that nothing can be done.

DEAR READER — You are having something done for your chronic bronchitis. The antibiotic treatment is one very important example.

If you had a localized bleeder in the lungs it might be possible to seal it off. But the big problem is the fundamental inflammatory changes in the air passages in your lungs.

You should take every precaution possible to avoid exposure to respiratory infections. That includes exposure to the common cold. Getting flu shots each year to prevent flu if possible is important as well.

Some doctors feel that exercise can be helpful but this certainly has to be individualized. If your lung function permits, daily walks are at least important psychologically and for the rest of your body.

For people with rather severe pulmonary problems from chronic bronchitis and emphysema I like them to have an evaluation by a pulmonary specialist who does lung function studies.

The information is often helpful in deciding what course of management works best for that patient. Your doctor can refer you to such a physician; since you are from a fairly large community I am confident there is one in your city.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Does poor circulation go with the menopause? The last few years I have had to keep changing sleeping positions because my arms go to sleep.

Now my arms go to sleep and get that prickly sensation during the day as well. I'm 51 and have always been very healthy and I have never smoked. I hate to waste the doctor's time when I feel so healthy. I am a few pounds overweight.

DEAR READER — That is not likely poor circulation as caused by obstruction inside the arteries to your arms.

You are more likely to have some pressure on the nerves that go to your arm or on the arteries to your arms. This pressure could be caused by a neck muscle pressing on the nerve or artery, or from changes in your cervical spine.

Depending on what your symptoms really are, you could even have a carpal tunnel syndrome, pressure on your nerves and arteries in your wrist. It will require an examination to define what the source of pressure really is.

MR. AND MRS. PAUL NICKEL

MR. AND MRS. ROBERT JACKSON

TWIN FALLS — Mr. and Mrs. Paul G. Nickel of Twin Falls will celebrate their 50th anniversary at an open house Sunday at Immanuel Lutheran Church in Twin Falls. Friends are invited to call between 2 and 5 p.m.

Nickel and the former Anna Polak were married April 23, 1932, in Poland near Warschau and lived in Poland and Germany. Mrs. Nickel and one daughter came to Idaho in June, 1949. Nickel, accompanied by one son and two daughters, joined them in November, 1950. Mr. Nickel worked for Twin Falls Feed and Ice, retiring in 1970.

The event will be hosted by their children, "Wall" Nickel of Lincoln, Neb.; Ed Nickel of Omaha, Neb.; Dan Nickel of Kearney, Neb.; Gertrude Holte of Magna, Utah; Elfrieda Nickel Eisenhauer and Hilde Nickel Wyatt, both of Twin Falls. The couple has 12 grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

MR. AND MRS. JAMES ASH

TWIN FALLS — Mr. and Mrs. James Ash observed their 63th wedding anniversary recently in the recreation room of the SkyView Nursing home.

Ash and the former Emma Bridges were married April 15, 1917, at Seligman, Mo.

They came to Twin Falls in 1937. He trucked for farmers and worked at the starch plant for the Detwylers. Mrs. Ash did housekeeping and worked at the bean warehouse.

Seven of their nine living children attended the event which was hosted by Mr. and Mrs. Karl Ash, son and daughter-in-law; Mrs. Paula Woody, granddaughter, and Erin Woody, great-granddaughter.

The Ash children include Karl Ash, Hazel Newberry and Tom Ash, all of Twin Falls; Mary Wood of Ogden, John Ash Sr. and Jim Ash of Boise, George Ash of Homedale, Nadene Long of Filer, Bill Ash of Denver. The couple has 32 grandchildren, 65 great-grandchildren and 12 great-great-grandchildren.

Fisher

Mrs. Fisher belongs to the Relief Society and has attended the Singles group in her church.

After living 32 years on the acreage they moved into Buhl. Her husband died May 2, 1964. She has lived in Lincoln Apartments about 10 years, before and since her heart attack.

The longtime Buhl resident, who will be reach the century mark next year, said she has a hard time seeing. But anyone visiting her apartment, where friends and relatives seem to come and go frequently, finds her happy to talk about the many changes she has seen in nearly a century of "plain ordinary life."

Retirement

$50,000 and houses under $60,000. But no ocean and its breeze.

ARIZONA

Despite its reputation "back East," Arizona is not a big retirement area, say real estate analysts. Only about 150,000 people out of a population close to 3 million are retirees. And because much of the state has been set aside for national parks, government installations and Indian reservations, most retirees live in planned retirement communities that ring Phoenix and Tucson.

There is no shortage of moderately priced housing. In greater Phoenix, a three-bedroom, 16,000-square-foot home ranges from $65,000 to $80,000. In Tucson, the same house sells in the $45,000 to $50,000 range, says Editor Pollack, vice president of Valley National Bank. There are very few condominiums (less than 9 percent of the population lives in condos).

However, getting a mortgage is the real problem. Arizona is a "due-on-sale" state, meaning banks can demand repayment of a mortgage once a house is sold. Therefore, it is next to impossible to assume an existing mortgage.

NEW MEXICO

The average resale price of a home in the greater Albuquerque area is $68,000, says the city board of realtors. But there are two important factors that make that house affordable. Until April 1, 1980, New Mexico had a 10 percent interest rate ceiling (under a usury law).

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Jackson

JEROME — Mr. and Mrs. Robert S. Jackson of Jerome will celebrate their 50th anniversary Sunday at an open house at the I.O.O.F. Hall in Jerome.

Friends and relatives are invited to call between 2 and 5 p.m.

Robert Jackson and the former Laura Mae Coble were married April 9, 1932, in Super, Okla.

Hosting the event will be their children, James B. Jackson of Denver, John Jackson of Shoup, Robert Jackson Jr. of Manassas, Va., Mrs. Art (Betty) Sims of the Philippines, and Mrs. Darryl (Anita) Cameron of Jerome.

Dear Abby

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: "This is a second marriage for both of us. Elsie is 69 and I'm 70. We both lost our mates a few years ago and met at a retirement complex last year.

Elsie moved into my place, which is well-furnished, but she brought in a few of her own favorite pieces. One is a cuckoo clock that belonged to her parents. (She says she can't sleep without it.)

I have a grandfather clock that strikes on the hour, half-hour and quarter-hour. It keeps perfect time. Elsie's clock is very erratic. The cuckoo is supposed to come out of its house on the hour, but this one comes out whenever it feels like it, several times an hour, and cuckoos like crazy. Plus, the ticking of that clock is extremely loud and disturbing.

Last night at midnight I heard 12 gongs followed by endless cuckooing. Then in between the gongs of my clock, I heard the cuckooing of her clock continually until 5 a.m. That did it!

I told Elsie that those clocks were driving me crazy, and I would get rid of my clock if she'd get rid of hers. She wouldn't hear of it. I'm getting very impatient. How can we settle this? Aside from our incompatible clocks, we get along fine.

—TROUBLE IN TAMPA
DEAR TROUBLE: Elsie should get her clock fixed so that it will cuckoo only once on the hour when yours gongs. Otherwise you'll both wind up alone — with time on your hands.

DEAR ABBY: Mack and I own a little home in the suburbs, and last spring we planted a vegetable garden. With food prices going so high, we thought it would save us money. When our tomato plants got about half a foot high, Mack started singing to them! He'd take his guitar, a six-pack of beer and a chair outside, plunk himself down in the middle of the tomato plants and sing. The more beer he drank, the louder he sang. Mack claims it's a scientific fact that plants that get music produce more than plants that don't. Is there any truth to this?

MACK'S SKEPTICAL SPOUSE
DEAR SPOUSE: My agriculture experts say yes! But a word of caution. Better buy your tomatoes. No matter how expensive they get, it's cheaper than drying out Mack.

DEAR ABBY: My ex-husband and I are planning to remarry. We were married for 11 years and have three children. After being divorced for two years, we realize that we really love each other and we think we can now make a go of it.

We were married the first time at the city hall by a justice of the peace. It was a five-minute ceremony and there was nothing spiritual or beautiful about it. This time I want a REAL wedding in a church with a white wedding gown and veil. I've heard that white gowns and veils are for virgins only. I earned the right to wear one the first time but couldn't afford it then. My ex-husband is the only man I've ever slept with, so I still feel entitled to wear white. Am I wrong?

—ENTITLED OR NOT?
DEAR ENTITLED: You're entitled. And it's not true that white wedding gowns are for virgins only. Traditionally, white gowns are for the FIRST marriage, but even that tradition has faded.

Jerome purchases linked to implicated firm

By RON ZELLAR
Times-News writer

JEROME — A Jerome County elected official bought more than $3,800 worth of office supplies from a California company implicated in a bribery probe in Blaine County. Had the supplies been purchased in Jerome or Twin Falls, they could have been obtained for half that amount, an investigation by The Times-News has determined. County records indicate that Glenda Bilk, the Jerome County clerk, auditor and recorder, placed four large orders for envelopes, ink pens and "frosted" tape from American Data Products of Van Nuys, Calif., during a 10-month period ending in January.

The last purchase was recorded just weeks before Blaine County Prosecutor Keith Roark announced he was investigating the purchasing practices of local governments in Blaine County. Roark's probe led to the arrest March 16 of two salesmen for American Data Products — Gary Marshall of San Diego, Calif., and Steve Nallon of Denver. Both men are awaiting extradition on charges of attempting to bribe the Blaine County sheriff and an investigator in Roark's office. The investigator allegedly obtained gifts of merchandise from the firm while posing as a county purchasing agent. Russell Reneau, the chief criminal investigator for the state attorney general's office, said an investigator from his office spent a day earlier this month in Jerome, checking leads that were developed when officials searched American Data Products offices in San Diego, Van Nuys and Denver. Reneau said his office is sifting through several boxes of information obtained. In the searches, and it will be reviewing purchases in other counties, as well as in Jerome. Evidence of illegality, he said, will be turned over to local prosecuting attorneys.

In an interview March 26 for a Times-News story about purchasing practices throughout the Magic Valley, Bilk said that tight budgets in recent years had prompted her to purchase office supplies in bulk from out-of-town companies. However, a comparison between American Data prices and those charged by Jerome and Twin Falls suppliers reveal that even the highest local prices averaged 35 percent lower than those on the invoices from American Data. In addition, shipping added roughly 10 percent to each of the orders from California. Confronted Wednesday with the price differences, Bilk attributed the orders to errors in judgment and a heavy workload. "If that's true," she said, "I made a mistake. That's all I can say."

"You get busy. A supplier calls, and something clicks that you thought you remembered from two days ago about needing paper, or typewriter ribbons, or something."

Bilk said she was never offered anything prior to making an order from American Data. But when asked if she was offered gifts after an order was placed, she said: "That gets into an area the guy from the attorney general's office told me not to go into."

Two of the four purchase orders studied in detail by a Times-News reporter were shipped to the attention of "Glenda Bilk." Bilk admitted placing all four orders. The purchases included 1,440 ink pens and 50 boxes of large envelopes, each containing 100 envelopes. Invoices showed the envelopes cost $29.95 a box in the quantity ordered. However, the North Side News, a Jerome weekly newspaper that sells office supplies to some county departments, offers the same item — undiscarded — for $16.20 a box.

Supplies cheaper locally

JEROME — Prices paid by the Jerome County clerk's office on supplies from American Data Products exceeded even the list price of better known brands, according to local suppliers.

Prices obtained from four orders placed between March 1981 and January 1982 compare unfavorably with those of local vendors:

- An order March 26, 1981, for 432 rolls of three-quarter-inch wide "frosted" tape cost the county $2.99 a roll, for a total of $1,408.93 including shipping.
- The North Side News, a Jerome supplier, sells Scotch-brand tape in the same dimensions for $2.10 a roll, or a total of $907.20. A Twin Falls firm, G and R Office Products, offers the same product for $1.90 a roll.
- Fifty boxes of 10-by-15-inch envelopes, ordered Jan. 15, 1982, cost $1,832.25 with shipping. The price per box was listed as $29.85.
- G and R Office Products sells its premium-grade envelopes in the same size for $15.40 a box. It also supplies an alternate brand for $11.74 a box, for a 50-box order of $587. North Side News offers the same premium-grade envelope for $16.20 a box, or a total of $810.
- The clerk's office purchased 1,440 "Datamate" pens in two separate orders placed Sept. 27 and Nov. 24 of 1981. The pens are stamped 89 cents each, although invoices show they were purchased in quantity for 59 cents apiece, or a total of $849.60. No record of shipping charges was attached.

No local firms carried the "Datamate" brand, which apparently is manufactured for American Data.

Clos Office Supply Inc. of Twin Falls offers a comparable office pen for 27 cents each, for a total of $388.80.

Winds whip flames across Anaheim

ANAHEIM, Calif. (UPI) — A blizzard fire sparked by a downed power line and driven by Santa Ana winds pushed flames through scores of suburban apartment houses Wednesday.

Nearly 1,500 people were left homeless by the blaze that caused more than $50 million damage. There were no known deaths in the devastating dawn blaze which erupted on a wood-shingled roof and raced through a four-square block area less than a mile from Disneyland, which was not threatened.

Assistant Fire Chief Ron Evans there was a "good possibility" the bodies of some residents unable to escape the racing flames would be found in the smoldering rubble of about 500 suburban garden apartments destroyed in the blaze.

"With that number of buildings down we always think of that," he said. "Maybe we should be optimistic, but I would expect some. We haven't had time to search. Until we go through the rubble we can't tell for sure."

Thousands of residents, many clutching pets and a few personal items they grabbed in haste, ran into the streets as the fire spread beneath the rising sun, which was obscured by thick black smoke. Many got out with only their nightclothes. Officials late Wednesday estimated that up to 1,500 people were left homeless by the fire. Police said no one would be allowed back into the area until it was declared safe, which would be this morning at the earliest.

The blaze broke out at 5:50 a.m. PST when 55 mph wind gusts pushed a power line into a palm tree, igniting it. The burning fronds fell onto the wood shake roof of an apartment building, which burst into flame.

The hot desert winds blew burning embers from roof to roof and destroyed nearly 50 apartment houses with about 500 living units in a four block area.

The fire was declared under control before noon, but emergency personnel faced with more than four-square blocks of devastation reminiscent of a war zone — continued to search for hidden flames in the charred, standing walls.

Evans said a "comb search" of the burned-out buildings would begin when it was safe, as long as the dreaded Santa Ana winds did not flare up and blow hot embers to the undamaged roofs of nearby buildings. The National Weather Service predicted winds could again gust up to 35 mph after sunset and firefighters feared live embers could ignite new blazes.

Gov. Edmund Brown Jr. quickly declared a state of emergency and flew to Orange County to inspect the damage.

Israel bombs Beirut

By United Press International

Israel jets bombed Palestinian coastal targets all the way up to suburban Beirut Wednesday, shattering a nine-month truce.

Israelis shot down two Syrian MIGs in a dogfight. The Syrians said they downed one Israeli jet, but Israel denied it.

Begin cabinet affirms Sinai pullout — A8

Israel border towns went on alert for possible retaliatory raids by the Palestine Liberation Organization. PLO leaders held urgent councils in Beirut and indicated they would follow American advice to act with utmost restraint, sources said.

But two radical Palestinian groups demanded a "military response." Third World nations at the United Nations denounced the raid and scheduled a closed-door meeting for today, to discuss possible sanctions against the Jewish state.

Palestinian officials said more than 20 people were killed and 80 wounded in the two-hour bombardment of Palestinian bases and camps along the Mediterranean coast from the suburbs near Beirut International Airport to Damour, 13 miles south.

A spokesman said five of the dead were guerrillas and the rest were civilians.

The raid, which came as Israel's Cabinet voted unanimously to return the eastern Sinai to Egypt as scheduled Sunday, shattered a July 24 cease-fire for Lebanon negotiated by U.S. Envoy Philip Habib. Habib had accused the PLO of numerous smaller violations of the truce.

Lebanese police said the Israel jets, described as U.S.-made F-15s and F-16s, destroyed a Syrian radar base in Doha, on the southern outskirts of Beirut, and several Palestinian bases.

Seven coastal villages and a Palestinian refugee camp in south Lebanon were damaged. Two ambulances racing along the coastal road also were hit, police said.

Lebanon requested urgent U.N. action and the Security Council was to meet at 11 a.m. EST today.

In Washington, the State Department urged both sides to "exercise the utmost restraint" and save the cease-fire "which serves the interests of all parties."

Falklands

Report claims Britain will seize South Georgia Islands

By United Press International

British warships were reported Wednesday moving into position for a possible attack on the South Georgia Islands.

The attack would be a stepping stone to the disputed Falkland Islands, invaded April 2 by Argentina.

In a move seen placing the country one step closer to a war economy, Argentina announced it was suspending cash payments on "interest, dividends and technical assistance" to investors outside the country.

Argentina also halted the transfer of profits from foreign investment and ordered they be paid instead in Argentine government external bonds.

In London, Foreign Secretary Francis Pym told Parliament that Britain would not rule out the use of force in the Falklands, invaded April 2 by Argentina. He was due in Washington today to present a set of proposals in reply to Argentina's latest peace plan for the 149-year-old British colony.

The British Defense Ministry refused to disclose the location of the task force and also declined comment on press reports that a spearhead force of destroyers, detached from the main task force, was speeding toward South Georgia, the Falklands dependency 800 miles southeast of the islands.

The London newspaper Daily Mail quoted unidentified "Pentagon sources" in Washington saying the leading warships of the British fleet "could be in position (today) for an assault on South Georgia."

Because of the small number of Argentine troops on the islands, estimated at 300-500 soldiers, London military experts said it would be relatively easy to recapture the South Georgias for use as a staging post dangerously close — for Argentina — to the Falklands.

Argentine government sources expressed concern over the reports and the Defense Ministry declined comment.

In Buenos Aires, Foreign Minister Nicanor Costa Mendez said he will travel to Washington Saturday to participate in Monday's meeting of the Organization of American States, scheduled to vote on Argentina's request for aid.

Financial sources said Argentina's suspension of cash payments apparently did not touch the repayment of Argentina's foreign debt, valued at more than $30 billion. The sources said the moves were aimed at preventing the flow of dollars and other hard currency out of the country.

It also said businesses must give top priority to military purchases.

On the high seas, a British Harrier jump jet scrambled from the aircraft carrier Hermes to intercept an Argentine military Boeing 707 that flew within 12 miles of the fleet, the BBC reported without specifying when the incident occurred. There was no shooting.

Britain also revealed that a few Argentine navy ships arrived at the Falkland Islands before its blockade was imposed.

Government officials said the British reply to the peace proposals falls into three main parts: withdrawal of Argentine forces, restoration of British administration, and a framework for deciding the future of the islands.

"I shall use every endeavor to achieve a peaceful settlement but at the same time, the use of force cannot be ruled out," Pym told Parliament. At the end of his speech he left and returned saying, "the use of force cannot at any stage be ruled out."

Committee favors expanded federal irrigation use limits

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A senate committee approved Wednesday a measure to raise the 160-acre limitation for use of federal irrigation water to a total of 2,080 acres of owned and leased land.

McClure, chairman of the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee and sponsor of the bill, said the vote was a "milestone toward lifting the unrealistically low acreage limitations which have clouded family farming operations throughout the West for years."

The measure applies to the amount of acreage farmers and corporations can own or lease and still obtain water from federal reclamation projects. The 160-acre limit was imposed by the 1902 Reclamation Act and has come under attack as outdated for modern farming operations.

"I believe the acreage cap we have adopted will allow successful family farming units to grow and prosper while prohibiting large corporate agriculture from gaining the benefits of federally subsidized irrigation water," McClure said after the committee vote.

A group called National Land for People out of Fresno, Calif., had attacked previous McClure proposals, saying they would benefit corporate farming operations at the expense of family farmers.

The bill approved by the committee establishes that a qualified recipient of federal irrigation water must be an individual or legal entity benefiting 25 people or less.

It also would allow legal entities benefiting more than 25 people to receive water, but on a limited basis, McClure said.

Qualified recipients benefiting 25 people or less may own 1,280 acres and the remainder of the 2,080 acres can be leased, he said. A 640-acre limit would be imposed for the so-called "limited recipients."

Dear Abby

DEAR ABBY: This is a second marriage for both of us. Elsie is 69 and I'm 70. We both lost our mates a few years ago and met at a retirement complex last year.

Elsie moved into my place, which is well-furnished, but she brought in a few of her own favorite pieces. One is a cuckoo clock that belonged to her parents. (She says she can't sleep without it.)

I have a grandfather clock that strikes on the hour, half-hour and quarter-hour. It keeps perfect time. Elsie's clock is very erratic. The cuckoo is supposed to come out of its house on the hour, but this one comes out whenever it feels like it, several times an hour, and cuckoos like crazy. Plus, the ticking of that clock is extremely loud and disturbing.

Last night at midnight I heard 12 gongs followed by endless cuckooing. Then in between the gongs of my clock, I heard the cuckooing of her clock continually until 5 a.m. That did it!

I told Elsie that those clocks were driving me crazy, and I would get rid of my clock if she'd get rid of hers. She wouldn't hear of it. I'm getting very impatient. How can we settle this? Aside from our incompatible clocks, we get along fine.

DEAR TROUBLE: Elsie should get her clock fixed so that it will cuckoo only once on the hour when yours gongs. Otherwise you'll both wind up alone — with time on your hands.

DEAR ABBY: Mack and I own a little home in the suburbs, and last spring we planted a vegetable garden. With food prices going so high, we thought it would save us money. When our tomato plants got about half a foot high, Mack started singing to them! He'd take his guitar, a six-pack of beer and a chair outside, plunk himself down in the middle of the tomato plants and sing. The more beer he drank, the louder he sang.

Mack claims it's a scientific fact that plants that get music produce more than plants that don't. Is there any truth to this?

— MACK'S SKEPTICAL SPOUSE
DEAR SPOUSE: My agriculture experts say yes! But a word of caution. Better buy your tomatoes. No matter how expensive they get, it's cheaper than drying out Mack.

DEAR ABBY: My ex-husband and I are planning to remarry. We were married for 11 years and have three children. After being divorced for two years, we realize that we really love each other and we think we can now make a go of it.

We were married the first time at the city hall by a justice of the peace. It was a five-minute ceremony and there was nothing spiritual or beautiful about it.

This time I want a REAL wedding in a church with a white wedding gown and veil. I've heard that white gowns and veils are for virgins only. I earned the right to wear one the first time but couldn't afford it then. My ex-husband is the only man I've ever slept with, so I still feel entitled to wear white. Am I wrong?

— ENTITLED OR NOT

DEAR ENTITLED: You're entitled. And, it's not true that white wedding gowns are for virgins only. Traditionally, white gowns are for the FIRST marriage, but even that tradition has faded.

Jerome purchases linked to implicated firm

By RON ZELLAR
Times-News writer

JEROME — A Jerome County elected official bought more than $3,800 worth of office supplies from a California company implicated in a bribery probe in Blaine County. Had the supplies been purchased in Jerome or Twin Falls, they could have been obtained for half that amount, an investigation by The Times-News has determined.

County records indicate that Glenda Belk, the Jerome County clerk, auditor and recorder, placed four large orders for envelopes, ink pens and "frosted" tape from American Data Products of Van Nuys, Calif., during a 10-month period ending in January.

The last purchase was recorded just weeks before Blaine County Prosecutor Richard Roark announced he was investigating the purchasing practices of local governments in Blaine County.

Roark's probe led to the arrest March 16 of two salesmen for American Data Products — Gary Marshall of San Diego, Calif., and Steve Nation of Denver.

Both men are awaiting extradition on charges of attempting to bribe the Blaine County sheriff and an investigator in Roark's office. The investigator allegedly obtained gifts of merchandise from the firm while posing as a county purchasing agent.

Russell Renuau, the chief criminal investigator for the state attorney general's office, said an investigator from his office spent a day earlier this month in Jerome, checking leads that were developed when officials searched American Data Products offices in San Diego, Van Nuys and Denver.

Renuau said his office is sifting through several boxes of information obtained in the searches, and it will be reviewing purchases in other counties, as well as in Jerome.

Evidence of illegality, he said, will be turned over to local prosecuting attorneys.

In an interview March 26 for a Times-News story about purchasing practices throughout the Magic Valley, Belk said that tight budgets in recent years had prompted her to purchase office supplies in bulk from out-of-town companies.

However, a comparison between American Data prices and those charged by Jerome and Twin Falls suppliers reveal that even the highest local prices averaged 35 percent lower than those on the invoices from American Data.

In addition, shipping added roughly 10 percent to each of the orders from California.

Confronted Wednesday with the price differences, Belk attributed the orders to errors in judgment and a heavy workload.

"If that's true," she said, "I made a mistake. That's all I can say."

"You get busy. A supplier calls, and something clicks that you thought you remembered from two days ago about needing paper, or typewriter ribbons, or something," Belk said, she was never offered anything prior to making an order from American Data. But when asked if she was offered gifts after an order was placed, she said: "That gets into an area the guy from the attorney general's office told us not to talk about."

Two of the four purchase orders studied in detail by a Times-News reporter were shipped to the attention of "Glenda Belk." Belk admitted placing all four orders.

The purchases included 1,440 ink pens and 50 boxes of large envelopes, each containing 100 envelopes.

Invoices showed the envelopes cost $29.95 a box in the quantity ordered. However, the North Side News, a Jerome weekly newspaper that sells office supplies to some county departments, offers the same item — undiscarded — for $16.20 a box.

Supplies cheaper locally

JEROME — Prices paid by the Jerome County clerk's office on supplies from American Data Products exceeded even the list price of better known brands, according to local suppliers.

Prices obtained from four orders placed between March 1981 and January 1982 compare unfavorably with those of local vendors.

An order March 26, 1981, for 432 rolls of three-quarter-inch wide "frosted" tape cost the county $2.99 a roll, for a total of $1,408.93 including shipping.

The North Side News, a Jerome supplier, sells Scotch-brand tape in the same dimensions for $2.10 a roll, or a total of $907.20. A Twin Falls firm, G and R Office Products, offers the same product for $1.90 a roll.

Fifty boxes of 10-by-15-inch envelopes, ordered Jan. 15, 1982, cost $1,633.33 with shipping. The price per box was listed as $32.65.

G and R Office Products sells its premium-grade envelopes in the same size for $15.40 a box. It also supplies an alternate brand for $11.74 a box, for a 50-box order of $587. North Side News offers the same premium-grade envelope for $16.20 a box, or a total of $810.

The clerk's office purchased 1,440 "Datamate" pens in two separate orders placed Sept. 27 and Nov. 24 of 1981. The pens are stamped 69 cents each, although invoices show they were purchased in quantity for 59 cents apiece, or a total of $849.60. No record of shipping charges was attached.

No local firms carried the "Datamate" brand, which apparently is manufactured for American Data.

Israel bombs Beirut

Israel jets bombed Palestinian coastal targets all the way up to suburban Beirut Wednesday, shattering a nine-month truce.

Israelis shot down two Syrian MIGs in a dogfight. The Syrians said they downed one Israeli jet, but Israel denied it.

Israel border towns went on alert for possible retaliatory raids by the Palestine Liberation Organization. PLO leaders held urgent councils in Beirut and indicated they would follow American advice to act with utmost restraint, sources said.

But two radical Palestinian groups demanded a "military response."

Third World nations at the United Nations denounced the raid and scheduled a closed-door meeting for today to discuss possible sanctions against the Jewish state.

Palestinian officials said more than 20 people were killed and 80 wounded in the two-hour bombardment of Palestinian bases and camps along the Mediterranean coast from the suburbs near Beirut. International Airport in Damour, 13 miles south.

A spokesman said five of the dead were guerrillas and the rest were civilians.

The raid, which came as Israel's Cabinet voted unanimously to return the eastern Sinai to Egypt as scheduled Sunday, shattered a July 24 cease-fire for Lebanon negotiated by U.S. Envoy Philip Habib. Israel had accused the PLO of numerous smaller violations of the truce.

Lebanese police said the Israel jets, described as U.S.-made F-15s and F-16s, destroyed a Syrian radar base in Doha, on the southern outskirts of Beirut, and several Palestinian bases.

Seven coastal villages and a Palestinian refugee camp in south Lebanon were damaged. Two ambulances racing along the coastal road also were hit, police said.

Winds whip flames across Anaheim

ANAHEIM, Calif. (UPI) — A blowtorch fire sparked by a downed power line and driven by Santa Ana winds pushed flames through scores of suburban apartment houses Wednesday.

Nearly 1,500 people were left homeless by the blaze that caused more than $50 million damage.

There were no known deaths in the devastating dawn blaze, which erupted on a wood-shingled roof and raced through a four-square block area less than a mile from Disneyland, which was not threatened.

Assistant Fire Chief Ron Evans there was a "good possibility" the bodies of some residents unable to escape the racing flames would be found in the smoldering rubble of about 50 suburban garden apartments destroyed in the blaze.

"With that number of buildings down we always think of that," he said. "Maybe we should be optimistic, but I would expect some. We haven't had time to search. Until we go through the rubble we can't tell for sure."

Thousands of residents, many clutching pets and a few personal items they grabbed in haste, ran into the streets as the fire spread beneath the rising sun, which was obscured by thick black smoke. Many got out with only their nightclothes.

Officials late Wednesday estimated that up to 1,500 people were left homeless by the fire. Police said no one would be allowed back into the area until it was declared safe, which would be this morning at the earliest.

The blaze broke out at 5:50 a.m. PST when 55 mph wind gusts pushed a power line into a palm tree, igniting it. The burning fronds fell onto the wood shake roof of an apartment building, which burst into flame.

The hot desert winds blew burning embers from roof to roof and destroyed nearly 50 apartment houses with about 500 living units in a four block area.

Falklands

Report claims Britain will seize South Georgia Islands

By United Press International

British warships were reported Wednesday moving into position for a possible attack on the South Georgia Islands.

The attack would be a stepping stone to the disputed Falkland Islands, invaded April 2 by Argentina.

In a move seen placing the country one step closer to a war economy, Argentina announced it was suspending cash payments on "interest, dividends and technical assistance" to investors outside the country.

Argentina also halted the transfer of profits from foreign investment and ordered they be paid instead in Argentine government external bonds.

In London, Foreign Secretary Francis Pym told Parliament that Britain would not rule out the use of force in the Falklands, invaded April 2 by Argentina. He was due in Washington today to present a set of proposals in reply to Argentina's latest peace plan for the 149-year-old British colony.

The British Defense Ministry refused to disclose the location of the task force and also declined comment on press reports that a spearhead force of destroyers, detached from the main task force, was speeding toward South Georgia, the Falklands, dependency 800 miles southeast of the islands.

The London newspaper Daily Mail quoted unidentified "Pentagon sources" in Washington saying the leading warships of the British fleet "could be in position (today) for an assault on South Georgia."

Because of the small number of Argentine troops on the islands, estimated at 300-500 soldiers, London military experts said it would be relatively easy to recapture the South Georgias for use as a staging post dangerously close — for Argentina — to the Falklands.

Argentine government sources expressed concern over the reports and the Defense Ministry declined comment.

In Buenos Aires, Foreign Minister Nicanor Costa Mendez said he will travel to Washington Saturday to participate in Monday's meeting of the Organization of American States, scheduled to vote on Argentina's request for aid.

Financial sources said Argentina's suspension of cash payments apparently did not touch the repayment of Argentina's foreign debt, valued at more than $30 billion. The sources said the moves were aimed at preventing the flow of dollars and other hard currency out of the country.

It also said business must give top priority to military purchases.

On the high seas, a British Harrier jump jet scrambled from the aircraft carrier Hermes to intercept an Argentine military Boeing 707 that flew within 12 miles of the fleet, the BBC reported without specifying when the incident occurred. There was no shooting.

Britain also revealed that a few Argentine navy ships arrived at the Falkland Islands before its blockade was imposed.

Government officials said the British reply to the peace proposals falls into three main parts: withdrawal of Argentine forces, restoration of British administration, and a framework for deciding the future of the islands.

"I shall use every endeavor to achieve a peaceful settlement but at the same time the use of force cannot be ruled out," Pym told Parliament. At the end of his speech he left and returned saying, "the use of force cannot at any stage be ruled out."

Committee favors expanded federal irrigation use limits

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A senate committee approved Wednesday a measure to raise the 160-acre limitation for use of federal irrigation water to a total of 2,080 acres of owned and leased land.

Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho, said.

McClure, chairman of the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee and sponsor of the bill, said the vote was a "milestone toward lifting the unrealistically low acreage limitations which have clouded family farming operations throughout the West for years."

The measure applies to the amount of acreage farmers and corporations can own or lease and still obtain water from federal reclamation projects. The 160-acre limit was imposed by the 1902 Reclamation Act and has come under attack as outdated for modern farming operations.

"I believe the acreage cap we have adopted will allow successful family farming units to grow and prosper while prohibiting large corporate agriculture from gaining the benefits of federally subsidized irrigation water," McClure said after the committee vote.

A group called National Land for People out of Fresno, Calif., had attacked previous McClure proposals, saying they would benefit corporate farming operations at the expense of family farmers.

The bill approved by the committee establishes that a qualified recipient of federal irrigation water must be an individual or legal entity benefiting 25 people or less.

It also would allow legal entities — benefiting more than 25 people to receive water; but on a limited basis, McClure said.

Qualified recipients benefiting 25 people or less may own 1,280 acres and the remainder of the 2,080 acres can be leased, he said. A 640-acre limit would apply to the so-called "limited recipients."

President Reagan, on his way to an afternoon of horseback riding at Quantico, Va., told reporters he would not comment because the "situation is too sensitive."

Five Syrian MIGs intercepted five Israeli jets just north of Beirut and Syrian and Lebanese officials said one Israeli and two Syrian planes were downed.

Lebanese police said two Israeli pilots parachuted to the ground near the Syrian-controlled eastern city of Shitara.

But an Israeli military spokesman in Tel Aviv said all the Israeli jets "returned safely to base" after downing two Syrian MIG-23s — the 17th and 18th Syrian jets to be shot down over Lebanon since 1979.

Israel said it ordered the raid after one Israeli soldier was killed and one wounded by a land mine explosion in south Lebanon earlier in the day. It said the incident constituted a Palestinian violation of the cease-fire and climaxed a number of "bloody and murderous attacks against Israeli citizens in Israel and Europe."

$300,000 awarded in Rely suit

CEDAR RAPIDS, Iowa (UPI) — A federal court jury Wednesday found Procter & Gamble liable in the toxic shock syndrome death of a woman who used Rely tampons and awarded her family $300,000 in damages.

Michael Kehm had sought more than $30 million from the company for the death of his wife, Patricia, 25, four days after she used the tampons. But the jury only awarded compensatory damages and no punitive damages.

"Procter gambled and lost," said Kehm's lawyer, Tom Riley, after the verdict was announced. "We made legal history today. We beat one of the largest corporations in the world." Riley receives one-third of the judgment as his fee.

Top CIA official resigns

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Bobby Ray Inman, the No. 2 man at the Central Intelligence Agency, resigned Wednesday, prompting expressions of regret on Capitol Hill where the Navy admiral was highly regarded.

President Reagan accepted the letter of resignation, which did not cite a reason for Inman's decision to quit CIA.

In the letter Inman, 51, also announced he would resign from the Navy.

Jury acquits F. Lee Bailey

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — F. Lee Bailey was cleared of drunken driving charges Wednesday by a municipal court jury who said the famous Boston lawyer was only guilty of running a stop sign.

A jury of six women and five men in the courtroom of Judge Maxine M. Chesney acquitted Bailey after 7 1/2 hours of deliberation after the two week trial that was one of the longest drunken driving cases in San Francisco history.

At the sentencing hearing after the verdicts were announced, Mrs. Chesney said Bailey would either have to pay a $50 fine or make a donation to the Northern California Service League, a group which helps prisoners.

Bailey said he would make the donation to the service group.

County commissioners review all orders placed by department heads and sign each voucher before payment is authorized.

Chairman Mel Grindstaff said Wednesday the three county commissioners are not versed sufficiently on supply prices to adequately pass judgment on purchases.

"We allow each office to purchase their own supplies," Grindstaff said. "As long as they don't go over their budgets, we don't pay much attention."

The clerk's budget for supplies and expenses in the 1981-82 fiscal year is $6,500, according to Belk.

However, some of the orders placed with American Data were split among two or more budgets.

An order for 96 dozen "Datamate" ink pens, for example, allocated 288 pens each to the clerk's and elections' budgets, and 576 pens to the district court budget. The three offices have about 10 full-time employees.

William Dalling, the Jerome County prosecutor, said Wednesday he is awaiting a written report from the attorney general's office before deciding whether to launch an investigation of his own.

"It's quite possible that information from the attorney general will dictate further steps," Dalling said. He emphasized that the Boise investigator reviewed expenditures by all county departments.

If evidence of bribery is uncovered, state law spells out circumstances for both felony and misdemeanor charges, according to Dalling.

"As I read the law," he said, "a person who violates any of those statutes forfeits their office, regardless of what other penalties are imposed."

The inquiry could easily take on political overtones, Dalling conceded. Inter-office rivalries in the Court-house are widespread. Two secretaries in the prosecutor's office previously served as deputy clerks. One filed earlier this month as a Republican to oppose Belk, a Democrat.

In addition, a deputy clerk and an employee in the assessor's office have filed for the county treasurer's slot held by Elsie Childers, who was appointed when the incumbent resigned.

"I plan to work closely with the attorney general's office," Dalling said. "If it looks like it's becoming political, I will turn it over to them." Roark said Jerome County purchases were outside his jurisdiction. But based on his knowledge of American Data Products, he said he would look carefully at any purchase from the firm larger than $150.

At a news conference March 18, Roark displayed a table full of gifts, ranging in size from small tools to a microwave oven. He said companies — including American Data Products — could afford to offer the items because they were overcharging for purchases.

The Blaine County prosecutor said this week he is working with the attorney general's office to negotiate an agreement in which the company will agree to cease operations in Idaho and refund any overcharges that can be documented.

An attorney for American Data, Harvey Tack of Los Angeles, said Wednesday the firm is reviewing certain aspects of its nationwide office-supply business following the arrest of two of its employees.

Tuck declined to comment on the discussions with Idaho authorities, but he said the company, as standard practice, offers additional merchandise to private businesses in exchange for bulk orders.

"We do offer premiums to the companies who purchase from us," he said. "We are checking to see if employees carried out those policies in their transactions (with small governments) in Idaho."

A check of Twin Falls County purchasing records revealed two purchases from American Data Products during the 1980-81 fiscal year.

The county assessor's office ordered 12 dozen ink pens for $93 in April 1981, and a division of the county clerk's office purchased 864 memo pads for $632 in March 1981.

The memo pads, priced at 67 cents each, could have been obtained for 23 cents each from Cios Office Supply Inc. or for 23.5 cents apiece from G and R Office Products. Both are Twin Falls firms.

Pence, the Twin Falls County clerk, auditor and recorder, said he questioned the purchases, a magistrate's court officer, when the bill arrived.

Pence said he later returned a duplicate order shipped by the same company, and ordered that no subsequent purchases be made from American Data.

Dallas set to return

RENO, (UPI) — Claude Dallas Wednesday signed the papers allowing his speedy return to Idaho to face murder charges in the shooting of two game wardens.

Washoe County Chief Criminal Deputy Sheriff Mills Lane said Idaho authorities probably would take him to Boise today.

Governor Robert List signed the extradition warrant to turn him over to Idaho at the request from Idaho Governor John Evans.

Washoe District Judge Peter Breen told Dallas he could fight extradition, but that all Idaho authorities would have to prove to him that he was indeed Claude Dallas and that the warrant charging him with murder was properly executed.

"I'd like to waive extradition," said Dallas from his wheelchair.

Earlier, there were indications Dallas would fight extradition, but Reno attorney Larry McNabney said

Dallas agreed his return to Idaho was "inevitable."

Dallas was captured Sunday north of Winnemucca after eluding authorities across the west and Canada for 15 months.

He tried to escape in a pickup truck, but was apprehended after he was wounded in the heel by a volley of bullets fired into the vehicle. Because of that wound, he made his court appearance from a wheelchair.

FBI agents returned him to Reno under federal custody, but federal fugitive charges were dropped to hasten proceedings on the state murder charges.

Dallas allegedly killed William Pogue and Wilson Elms when they came to his remote trapping camp along the Owyhee River in January, 1981, to investigate reports he had been poaching bobcats out of season.

McNabney said it is his understanding Dallas will face capital murder charges in Idaho and, if convicted, could be sentenced to death.

After learning Dallas had decided not to oppose his extradition, Owyhee County Prosecutor Clayton Anderson and Sheriff Tim Nettleton began making arrangements for the prisoner's transfer to Idaho.

The sheriff, his deputies and the prosecutor huddled for several hours Wednesday in the Owyhee County Courthouse at Murphy, but a spokesman said no decisions had been made by evening about when or how to move Dallas.

Deputy Sheriff Richard Prescott said the earliest Dallas could be picked up by Idaho authorities at Reno probably was today.

It was not known whether Dallas would be kept in the Owyhee County Jail at Murphy or at some other county jail in southwest Idaho while the South Carolina native awaited prosecution.

Police find guns at Dallas hideout

WINNEMUCCA, Nev. (UPI) — Eight firearms have been confiscated by authorities from the Paradise Hill trailer where Claude Dallas spent his last days as a fugitive.

Owyhee County Sheriff Tim Nettleton said Tuesday he and Humboldt County Sheriff's deputies found five handguns, two rifles and a shotgun belonging to Dallas at a trailer owned by Craig Carver.

The guns and Dallas' personal belongings were confiscated after authorities obtained a search warrant late Monday.

Dallas, who is accused of the slayings of Idaho Fish and Game officers William Pogue, 50, and Wilson Conley Elms, 34, last year, was arrested after a shoot-out Sunday in the desert about 20 miles north of Winnemucca, Nev.

The handguns are a .38-caliber, a .22-caliber, two .44-caliber revolvers and a .357-caliber Magnum. Also confiscated were a .22-caliber rifle, a .30-30 rifle and a 12-gauge pump action shotgun.

Three more weapons — a second .357-caliber Magnum handgun, another .22-caliber handgun and a second .30-30 rifle — were seized by FBI agents when they captured Dallas Sunday night, Nettleton said.

Task force seeks study of rabbit population

BOISE (UPI) — The Idaho Task Force on Jack Rabbit Control recommended Wednesday that Congress fund a national study of the causes of population booms of the crop-eating creatures and ways of controlling their numbers.

The 8- to 10-year study would cost about $80,000 the first year and about $740,000 each year thereafter, according to the proposal drawn up by the University of Idaho's College of Agriculture.

Copies of the proposal were presented March 8 to staff members in Sen. James McClure's office and to members of the National Cattlemen's Association in Washington, D.C., by UI Agriculture College Dean Raymond Miller.

The proposal calls for test stations near the Snake River Birds of Prey Conservation Area in southwestern Idaho, another in the Magic Valley, one in southeastern Idaho near the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory and a fourth in the Curlew Valley near Snowville, Utah.

A consultant to the governor and the chairman of the committee, meanwhile, blasted a membership publication by the Fund for Animals which they claimed "sensationalized" the Mud Lake rabbit drives last winter.

The publication shows pictures of men playing "bunny baseball" — tossing the animals in the air and striking them with clubs — and of children participating in the drives which netted more than 130,000 rabbits in eastern Idaho.

The proposed national study of black-tailed jack rabbits would monitor the animals at the four stations to determine what factors produced the cyclical population peaks and what triggered the subsequent decline in numbers.

The study also would examine the effects of range fires and other land-use practices on rabbit populations, investigate the use of chemical, biological and mechanical control of the animals' numbers and collect general data on the hares.

Dr. James Peek, a UI professor who helped draft the proposal, said studies already have narrowed the cause of population declines to predation or food shortages. He said a research team in Utah believes a peak in coyote populations causes rabbit numbers to drop, while Canadian scientists believe the decline is caused by starvation.

The recommendation will be included in a final report to the governor's office, which Nelson said he hopes to deliver by May 1. Wednesday's meeting of the task force was its last as a body.

Evans seeks tourist industry

MOSCOW (UPI) — Although some Idahans would like to keep newcomers away, Gov. John Evans says a high-powered tourist industry can be developed without sparking a permanent influx of out-of-staters.

"We should develop a tourist industry where people will visit, leave their green behind, and go back home again," the chief executive said in an appearance Tuesday night at the 43rd annual Natural Resources Week at the University of Idaho.

In addition to urging support of the tourist industry, Evans encouraged efforts to boost the state's industries and new markets for forest products. He also gave a list of priorities for a "balanced" use of Idaho's natural resources.

He said Idaho must continue to pursue state and industry cooperation in using the state's resources, and that state and federal agencies and all residents must emphasize on conservation and development of resources.

Robber gets free room and board

CALDWELL (UPI) — A 28-year-old Nampa man, who said he pretended to rob a convenience store to get free room and board in jail, was sentenced this week to three months in jail.

Layne Notling testified in court last week that he called a telephone operator to alert police to his intended robbery, and later whistled to officers who were searching for him.

Third District Judge Edward Lodge sentenced Notling to six months in jail and a $300 fine. But Lodge suspended three months of the sentence and let the seven weeks Notling has been in jail awaiting trial count toward his sentence.

Notling said he was homeless, hungry and without money when he recalled a radio news item about a man robbing a bank to land in jail.

Another war in Korea shouldn't be a surprise

While the attention of most Americans is directed toward the Falkland Islands, another long-time potential crisis erupted again Wednesday.

It developed into a four-hour shootout between South Korean and North Korean forces along the border separating those two nations.

Two aspects of the incident stand out. First, several subjects of North Korea's Kim Il Sung decided to risk their lives — and most of the group apparently paid with them — in an attempt to escape to the comparative freedom of South Korea. That says a great deal about the repressive conditions in the so-called Democratic People's Republic, which occupies the northern half of the Korean peninsula.

But it emphasizes again the desire for freedom — or at least to find better conditions for living — that is present in almost every human. Even though South Korea isn't the least repressive land in the world, it apparently looks much better to some citizens of its neighboring nation than their home grounds.

Second, given the long-standing animosities of both Koreans to unify the peninsula, the belligerent attitude of the North Korean government and the tension that has persisted for almost 40 years, the possibility exists for a renewal of the warfare that devastated Korea three decades ago.

With their attention diverted by a variety of foreign and domestic crises, Americans tend to forget about, or ignore, the distinct possibilities for a second war in Korea. With U.S. forces stationed there and an alliance with the Seoul government, American involvement in such a war would be certain.

Yet if such a war should develop, it could easily escalate from an incident as minor as that which took place Wednesday. And most Americans would be taken by surprise — again.

Parole board is to blame

In November 1970, Danny Williams brutally murdered a young mother in Shoshone. Williams was convicted and sentenced to life in prison.

After eight years in prison, Williams was paroled, turned out to kill again.

I do not know how long this "mad dog" has been free. Nevertheless, he has been free long enough to (apparently) strike once more.

The Idaho parole board should be very proud of their "humanitarian act" of turning this vicious killer free.

What good does it do for the courts to try, convict and sentence a person to prison, and then have a group of "soft heads" release the convict?

Especially when that convict is a vicious, brutal killer?

It's past time for a new parole board, or else new laws to govern the acts or power of that board.

I would suggest that in such cases as murder, the members of the parole board be held responsible for the conduct or acts of the parolee. In other words, if the parolee murders again, make a prison term for the parole board mandatory.

I'll wager that members of the board would have some second thoughts before freeing a convicted murderer if they were faced with a term in prison.

Olmstead needs to explain

Mr. Olmstead, are you the same pro right-to-work legislator who said the worker shouldn't have to pay a fee to get a job? Please explain to me the difference between me paying union dues and you forcing your legislative employees to give you a day's wages? What happened to the equal-opportunity-employer law? I would never work for a person who forces me to contribute to his political party as a means of employment. It's tactics like this that forces the working people to band together and form unions against management.

As governor, will you require all state employees to pay a compulsory due to the Republican Party? Why shouldn't I be allowed to pay union dues, when the Legislature voted a $46,500 appropriation (to pay) dues to national and regional legislative organizations and associations? I pay dues with my money and not the taxpayers'.

I challenge you, Mr. Olmstead, and your Republican cohorts to clean your own doorstep before you clean mine. What does right to work mean — right to work for a Republican?

Difference between abortion and infanticide almost nil

Must doctors take extraordinary steps to assure the survival of a newborn baby who is diagnosed as retarded? If not, can they hasten his death by refusing to give him food or water?

And if it's all right to let an infant die, shouldn't the doctors be merciful and kill him quickly by an injection or smothering, instead of waiting for him to die slowly of dehydration and starvation?

If many obstetricians have come to be comfortable — or at least resigned — to doing abortions, will some pediatricians eventually come to see doing away with defective babies as a routine part of their practice?

A nation that has not yet come to a comfortable consensus on abortion is rapidly being pushed to formulate an ethical and legal policy on whether parents can order a defective baby left to die after he is born.

It's an agonizing issue for which neither legislatures, courts, physicians, medical ethics or even definitions of mercy provide satisfactory answers.

The painful sequence of events that occurred last week in Bloomington, Ind., is becoming increasingly familiar. This time, it was a baby born with Down's syndrome and abnormalities of the esophagus that made swallowing impossible. The esophageal defect could have been corrected by routine surgery. But the error in the baby's chromosomes meant permanent mental retardation and other lifelong problems.

George Will

Is being an unwanted baby now a capital offense?

WASHINGTON — The baby was born in Bloomington, Ind., the sort of academic community where medical facilities are more apt to be better than moral judgments are.

Like one of every 700 or so babies, this one had Down's syndrome, a genetic defect involving varying degrees of retardation and, sometimes, serious physical defects.

The baby needed serious but feasible surgery to enable food to reach its stomach. The parents refused the surgery, and presumably, they refused to yield custody to any of the couples eager to become the baby's guardians. The parents chose to starve their baby to death.

Their lawyer concocted an Orwellian euphemism for this refusal of potentially life-saving treatment — "treatment to do nothing." It is an old story: Language must be mutilated when a perceived rationalization of an act is incompatible with a straightforward description of the act.

Indiana courts, accommodating the law to the Zeitgeist, refused to order surgery, and thus sanctioned the homicide.

Common sense and common usage require use of the word "homicide." The law usually encompasses homicides by negligence. The Indiana killing was worse. It was the result of premeditated, aggressive, tenacious action, in the hospital and in courts.

Such homicides can no longer be considered aberrations, or culturally incongruous. They are part of a social program to serve the convenience of adults by authorizing adults to destroy inconvenient young life. The parents' legal arguments, conducted in private, reportedly emphasized — what else? — "freedom of choice."

The freedom to choose to kill inconvenient life is being extended, precisely as predicted, beyond fetal life to categories of inconvenient infants, such as Down's syndrome babies. There is no reason — none — to doubt that if the baby had not had Down's syndrome, the operation would have been ordered without hesitation,

The parents decided to refuse permission for surgery or for intravenous feedings that would have kept the baby alive while other plans could have been made for him. At least six people made offers of adoption. In effect, the parents decided to use the swallowing defect as a fortuitous, legal way to get rid of a Down's child they didn't want.

Indiana courts refused to intervene. And the baby died in a week, as legal efforts were being made to get the U.S. Supreme Court to order the hospital to try to save his life.

Now, the ugly postmortem questions remain.

Should fathers and mothers have such life and death power over their baby? If so, what about parents of a child with Down's syndrome who is born otherwise healthy and with a near-normal life expectancy? What if they choose to starve that infant to death? Would this be any different, morally, than what happened to the Indiana child?

Is it really worse to kill an unwanted baby after he is born than during the second trimester of his prenatal life, when amniocentesis is able to determine whether he suffers from a chromosomal error such as Down's syndrome? Or is it simply more acceptable to kill an unborn baby no one can see than one whose death is visible after his birth?

Opponents of abortion have long argued that once it becomes socially and legally acceptable to kill unwanted infants before birth, it would be easy to slip into condoning their death after birth. Are we already on that slippery slope?

So far, the courts have established no clear record on what should be done when parents refuse to give a child with birth defects life-saving treatment.

The courts, for example, have turned down requests to order cardiac surgery for a California child with Down's syndrome whose life span is limited without it. But they did order treatment for the severely deformed Siamese twins, born in Illinois several months ago, who were being left to die on their parents' instructions.

The courts also are sending out mixed signals on what are known as "wrongful-life" cases in which parents seek damages because of the birth of an unwanted child, and "wrongful-birth" cases, which essentially pose the awesome question of whether it is better to live with a serious handicap than not to be alive at all.

In a few states, courts have refused to hear "wrongful-life" cases because the questions they raise about the ultimate value of life are essentially unanswerable by current legal standards. But more than 100 suits charging wrongful life or birth have been filed. A few have been settled — at least one for $1.5 million.

But is there anyway we could set up criteria to determine which baby's life has value or who is better off dead? How could such killing lists avoid including other people who are social problems — the senile, for example, or the mentally ill or the socially deviant?

Who should decide which newborns to save and which are not worth caring about? Most of those who accept the idea that some infants need not be kept alive want the decision to rest with parents and their physician — just like abortion — without involving courts or medical ethics committees.

"It should depend," one doctor said, "on which baby's life has value for his parents."

It is becoming increasingly difficult to see the thin line between the justification for abortion and for infanticide. In fact, arguments for infanticide as it is now practiced, are much stronger than for abortion. Infanticide at least ends the life of a child with serious problems. Abortion kills more than a million healthy, normal infants every year.

There are many historic precedents for infanticide and many rationalizations, ranging from genetic purification of the race to preventing unwanted children from being a burden to families and society. Many cultures simply made it acceptable and required no excuses, as we do now for abortion.

If it isn't a slippery slope we're on, it's beginning to feel like it.

to merit any protection that inconveniences an adult's freedom of choice.

The Indiana parents consulted with doctors about the "treatment" they chose. But this was not at any point, in any sense, a medical decision. Such homicides in hospitals are common and will become more so now that a state's courts have given them an imprimatur.

There should be interesting litigation now that Indiana courts — whether they understand this or not — are going to decide which categories of newborns, besides Down's syndrome children, can be killed by mandatory neglect. House of the baby died, the parents' lawyer was on the CBS Morning News, praising his clients' "courage."

He said: "The easiest thing would have been to defer, let somebody else make that decision."

Oh? Someone had to deliberate about whether or not to starve the baby? When did it become natural, even necessary, in Indiana for parents to sit around debating whether to love or starve their newborns?

The lawyer said it was a "no-win situation" because "there would have been horrific trauma — trauma to the child, who would never have enjoyed a quality of life of any sort, trauma to the family, trauma to society."

In this "no-win" situation, the parents won: The county was prevented from ordering surgery; prospective adopters were frustrated; the baby is dead. Furthermore, how is society traumatized whenever a Down's syndrome baby is not killed?

It was, I believe, George Orwell who warned that insincerity is the enemy of sensible language.

Someone should counsel the counselor to stop babbling about Down's syndrome children not having "any sort" of quality of life. The task of convincing communities to provide services and human sympathy for the retarded is difficult enough without incoherent lawyers laying down the law about whose life does and whose does not have "meaning."

The Washington Post headlined its report: "The Demise of Infant Doe," the name used in court. "Demise," indeed. That suggests an event unplanned, even perhaps unexplained. ("The Demise of Abraham Lincoln"?)

The Post's story began: "An Indiana couple, backed by the state's highest court and the family doctor, allowed their severely retarded newborn baby to die last Thursday night."

But "severely retarded" is a misjudgment (also appearing in the New York Times) that is both a cause and an effect of cases like the one in Indiana. There is no way of knowing, and no reason to believe, that the baby would have been "severely retarded."

A small fraction of Down's syndrome children are severely retarded. The degree of retardation cannot be known at birth. Furthermore, such children are dramatically responsive to infant stimulation and other early interventions. But, like other children, they need to eat.

When a commentator has a direct personal interest in an issue, it behooves him to say so. Some of my best friends are Down's syndrome citizens. Citizens are what Down's syndrome children become if they avoid being homicide victims in hospitals.

Jonathan Will, 10, a fourth-grader and Orioles fan — and the best little-hitter in southern Maryland — has Down's syndrome. He does not "suffer from," as newspapers are wont to say, Down's syndrome. He suffers from nothing, except anxiety about the Orioles' lousy start.

He is doing nicely, thank you. But he is bound to have quite enough problems dealing with society — receiving rights, let alone empathy. He can do without people like Infant Doe's parents, and courts like Indiana's asserting by their actions the principle that people like him are less than fully human.

On the evidence, Down's syndrome citizens have little to learn about being human from the people responsible for the death of Infant Doe.

George F. Will writes his column for the Washington Post Co.

Government can't select religious groups to regulate

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A sharply split Supreme Court ruled Wednesday that government cannot favor one religion over another by regulating the finances of some — but not all — groups of worship.

On a 4-4 vote in a Minnesota case, the justices concluded states cannot force newer, non-traditional religious organizations to open up their financial records to government audits, while failing to monitor more established religions.

In a victory for the Rev. Sun Myung Moon's Unification Church, the court struck down part of a state law requiring religious groups to disclose their funding sources if they collect more than half their money by public fund-raising, such as soliciting door-to-door and in airports and bus terminals.

Under the provision, religious groups obtaining more than 50 percent of their contributions from their own members or an affiliated church group do not have to register with the state and keep records.

Generally, traditional Catholic, Protestant and Jewish organizations fell into that category.

Writing for the majority, Justice William Brennan declared Minnesota's "50 percent rule" creates an "official denominational preference" that directly conflicts with First Amendment guarantees of freedom of religion.

"The provision was drafted with the explicit intention of including particular religious denominations and excluding others," Brennan said.

The decision, however, was not a total vindication for the Unification Church. The majority noted that unless Moon's group proves it is a "religious organization" under Minnesota law, the state can force it to register as a charitable, non-religious group.

It would then have to obey stringent state reporting requirements.

Led by Justice William Rehnquist, the dissenting members of the high court — in a protest that touched on the theme of judicial activism — charged the majority decision exceeded the court's authority.

Rehnquist accused the majority of issuing an "advisory" opinion — something the court usually refrains from doing — because Moon's group has not proven under Minnesota law it is a religious organization.

"There can be no doubt about the impropriety of the court's action this day," Rehnquist said. He was joined in dissent by Chief Justice Warren Burger and Justices Byron White and Sandra Day O'Connor.

In the majority with Brennan were Justices Thurgood Marshall, Harry Blackmun, Lewis Powell and John Paul Stevens.

Minnesota claimed the law is needed to protect contributors from possible fraud by groups such as the Unification Church.

ANAHEIM, Calif. (UPI) — They escaped with their lives, but hundreds of fire victims lost everything else — their pets, the tools of their trades and the mementos of a lifetime.

"It's all gone, all gone, all gone," a woman in an orange smock sobbed unconsoledly at a Red Cross evacuation center at Ball Junior High School on the edge of the burned-out apartments.

"Nothing is left at all," she cried in hysteria. "I lost everything, my dog burned up and everything," Marine Cpl. Mike Jones, 23, who is stationed in nearby Tustin and lived in the building where the fire was ignited, said in an interview.

Jones, dressed in fatigues, said he and his wife carried out their 5-month-old daughter, Nicole, but did not have time to grab their German Shepherd.

Homer Herbert, 70, said he and his wife, an artist, had to run as "the lifetime of her paintings burned up" in their apartment. "I wish we had just one," he said. "If only we had just one."

Bush urges 'statesmanlike' nuclear weapons debate

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The administration welcomes the growing national debate about nuclear weapons, Vice President George Bush said Wednesday.

But he urged that the discussions be "statesmanlike" and avoid "political demagoguery."

Bush, speaking to officials of public radio stations from throughout the country, said President Reagan appreciated the concerns of congressional sponsors of anti-nuclear resolutions.

"There are no differences regarding goals. All want to reduce the numbers of nuclear weapons," said Bush.

But he repeated Reagan's rejection of an immediate freeze on superpower nuclear arsenals, on grounds the Soviets hold an edge over the United States.

The vice president spoke in the midst of a nationwide "Ground Zero" week in which anti-nuclear groups have been staging educational events about the danger of nuclear war, a topic of increasing concern among Americans.

"There have been allegations we're frustrated by this debate," Bush said. "It's not true at all. We welcome the debate."

But, he added, "Not freezing, but reducing nuclear weapons is one of this administration's highest priorities. It is something that drives this president. He believes in it."

Reagan's advisers are concerned opposition to a deployment freeze has cost him public support and left the impression of him as a "warlike" president. The White House has tried to deflect those charges, and Bush called the freeze issue a "subject about which there is a great misunderstanding."

He urged participants in the national debate on the nuclear arms race to conduct themselves in a "statesmanlike manner."

"This issue is far too important to the United States — far too important to the entire world — for political demagoguery," he said.

Bush said the first step in reducing nuclear weapons is to seek "parity" with the Soviets, redress the imbalances, so that any negotiated freeze will not result in a U.S. or Western European disadvantage.

O'Neill waits on Reagan to settle budget negotiations

WASHINGTON (UPI) — While some congressional Republicans expressed "serious impatience," Democratic strategists resumed budget negotiations Wednesday.

House Speaker Thomas O'Neill instructed the Democrats to "see what the president is willing to offer."

"He must go first," the Massachusetts Democrat declared in a challenge to the White House.

O'Neill said the only thing negotiators have agreed in bargaining with the White House so far is that the federal deficit would be $175 billion in 1983, $215 billion in 1984 and rise to $240 billion in fiscal 1985 unless something is done to cut spending or increase taxes. But both sides hope to keep it to $95 billion next year, he said.

In a telephone call to O'Neill Tuesday, and in a televised appearance before reporters, Reagan offered to "go the extra mile" to achieve an acceptable compromise.

But the speaker said Wednesday, "If he is sincere in his desire to get the nation out of the terrible economic mess it is in, then he must come forward with some specifics."

"President Reagan proved yesterday that he was willing to walk a mile — for a camera. He has yet to prove he is willing to walk a mile for a compromise," O'Neill told reporters.

"Go back to the talks and see what the president is willing to offer... what he is willing to agree to," O'Neill said he told his negotiators. "Then we will lay down a proposal of our own."

What's what

Hotel fires, so devastating during the last several years, date back as far as the hotels themselves. In 1880, an imaginative fellow invented special suspenders designed to let endangered guests jump out of windows without hurting themselves. So elastic were these suspenders that they were supposed to break the jumper's fall. First trial of them looked as though it would work in a dandy manner. The jumper slowed, touched the ground, then snapped right back up again and crashed into the wall just below the third floor window. Prisoner killed him.

The aborigines of Australia always speak specifically, never generally. The Kamilaroi there have 12 words for masks of various size and color, but no word for mask. They have nine words for coconuts in different stages of ripeness, but no word for coconut.

FLEAS

Q. My dog has fleas. Those fleas lay eggs. How long does it take those eggs to hatch?
A. Two to four days.

Q. Why is the sort of timepiece you carry in your pocket or wear on your wrist called a "watch"?
A. Because the first to use them were the men who kept the night watch, the "all's well" crew.

Q. What was the first musical instrument?
A. The drum. Most agree the second was some sort of flute. But whether it was made of a reed or a hollowed human shinbone is unknown. Both the Incas and the Tibetans, much later in man's saga, made fancy flutes out of the arm bones and leg bones of people.

FEWER BIRTHS

Those people in their middle seventies have something curious in common. They were born at a time when women of North America gave birth to the fewest children. Between 1905 and 1909, about 20 percent of the women had never had any children, and many of the others had only had one or two. What caused this dearth of birth during those several years remains unexplained.

Most common fatal malignancy 60 years ago was stomach cancer. Then about 1930, fewer and fewer cases were reported, and it has since become relatively rare. Client asks why. Doctors think spoiled food caused it earlier, and they credit the spread of refrigeration for its decline.

No sister should forget that the Russian word for "brother" is "brat."

Changing times for the DAR

By United Press International

CHANGING TIMES

Leontine Price sang before the Daughters of the American Revolution Tuesday, dedicated her performance to Marian Anderson, and received a standing ovation. It was newsworthy because Miss Price is black. In 1939 the DAR wouldn't let Miss Anderson, sing at Constitution Hall because she was black. Then first lady Eleanor Roosevelt invited Miss Anderson to sing at the Lincoln Memorial and 75,000 persons attended. Mrs. Roosevelt also resigned from the DAR.

HOPE ETERNAL

One of the hardest things about staging a television comedy special is lining up guests. So says Bob Hope, who will be 79 next month, and whose NBC specials are among the few comedy-variety shows on TV. He bagged Jack Lemmon for the May 3 special by making him an offer he couldn't refuse — the show would be taped in Texas and Lemmon could play in the Legends of Golf tournament. "Bingo, he got me," Lemmon said in Austin, where the show was taped.

FIGHTING WORDS

To mild-mannered Fred Rogers, being called too gentle and a "sissy" are fighting words. Well, almost. Rogers, an ordained minister and pioneer in children's television with

BING'S THINGS

A warehouse full of Bing Crosby memorabilia will be sold at auction in San Francisco in May. On the block will be Crosby's platinum records, guitars, clubs, fishing rods, trophies, letters, photographs, paintings — even the walls of his dressing room at Paramount where he made "Road" films with Bob Hope and Dorothy Lamour.

Man robbed during rescue attempt

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Norman Kevan, whose money was stolen from the pants he left behind when he dove 75 feet from a city bridge in a futile attempt to rescue a suicide victim, says thanks but no thanks.

He appreciates all the cards and letters he has received at South Side Hospital while recovering from a broken leg sustained in the daring try last Saturday, but he says he can't keep the money people have sent.

"I just can't," he said.

Instead, Kevan said he will turn the money over to the family of the suicide victim to help pay for his funeral when the body is recovered.

"I'm not looking for more headlines in the paper," Kevan said. "I just want all the people who sent money to know this is where it's going. The family can't afford a funeral and I've got a steady job. I don't need it."

... I just wish the damned person who took it in the first place felt the same way."

Kevan had just cashed his paycheck that evening and transferred $175 from his wallet to his pants. Ironically, fearing he might be robbed as he walked home from a tavern.

On his way home, Kevan was approached by a woman in a car crying that her boyfriend — identified as Leroy Blake, 21, of the South Side — had jumped off the bridge. A former lifeguard, Kevan called police and then went to the Birmingham Bridge.

"I just didn't even think about it," he said. "I pulled off my clothes and gave the lady my wallet. I told her if I didn't make it to be sure my family knew I wasn't a suicide."

But Kevan's attempt failed, because of deadly cold water temperatures and because Blake was much bigger than he and resisted his efforts. Kevan finally swam to shore.

He didn't discover the money was missing until after he recovered from hypothermia in the hospital, where the mail and money have been coming in a steady flow since.

"It's tremendous, all the wonderful people out there," Kevan said. "But I want all these people who sent in money and checks to know that I'm not going to keep it. I just can't."

Koreas trade bullets, accusations

SEOUL, South Korea (UPI) — North and South Korea traded accusations Wednesday after a fierce four-hour firefight, apparently touched off when North Korean border guards tried to stop four of their soldiers from defecting.

U.S. Rear Adm. James G. Storms, acting as senior U.N. Command delegate to the Korean Military Armistice Commission, sent a note to North Korea protesting the pre-dawn incident.

Storms said North Korean troops fired "hundreds of rounds of automatic weapons and machinegun fire," much of it directed at southern guard posts in the demilitarized zone between the two Koreas, divided since 1945.

The clash came five days before the scheduled arrival of Vice President George Bush, as part of a five-nation Asian trip, for ceremonies commemorating the centennial of a U.S.-Korean commercial treaty.

It was the first border clash this year and the most serious in recent years. Seven border incidents were reported last year.

A South Korean Defense Ministry announcement said the clash erupted before dawn at Hwachun, a border town about 55 miles northeast of Seoul.

North Korea, without mentioning any defectors, charged South Korea troops fired at civil police on a routine patrol along the demilitarized zone, causing an unspecified number of casualties.

Three hours after the firefight started, mine explosions were heard in the communist side of the zone, apparently triggered by the fleeing defectors, the announcement said.

After daybreak, four bodies were seen 600 yards from the military demarcation line dividing the zone, either killed or wounded by the mines, the South Koreans said.

North Korean troops fired some 800 rounds of automatic weapon and recoilless rifle fire from the northern sector of the Korean DMZ in an attempt to stop the four communist defectors from fleeing south, it said.

The North Koreans fired about 50 tracer bullets to pin down the defectors and eight times issued orders on loudspeakers for them to halt, the South Korean announcement said.

South Korean soldiers, manning the southern side of the 2.6-mile-wide dividing zone, returned fire in self-defense but suffered no casualties, it said. Part of a South Korean wire fence was destroyed, it said.

The official (North) Korean Central News Agency—monitored in Tokyo, said the South Korean troops fired more than 23,000 large caliber rounds around dawn.

The broadcast said North Korea lodged a protest against the incident, saying "The enemy must be mindful that if he persists in provocations against our side, he will have to bear full responsibility for all the consequences."

Begin's cabinet vote confirms Israel will pull out from Sinai

YAMIT, Israeli-occupied Sinai (UPI) — Israeli troops smashed doors with axes and sprayed water and foam Wednesday to evict weeping squatters from the last Jewish settlement in the Sinai.

The clash in the desert came as Prime Minister Menachem Begin's Cabinet ended weeks of uncertainty by voting unanimously at a meeting in Jerusalem that the return of the region to Egypt would be carried out as scheduled on Sunday.

An estimated 20,000 Israeli troops, under orders to use maximum restraint and avoid any shooting, launched the massive evacuation operation that officers said could take the remaining four days until the final withdrawal.

"You'll all be fighting the Egyptians here in two months," one of some 3,000 anti-withdrawal squatters shouted to troops over a loudspeaker.

"You're sentencing yourself to death," Israeli warplanes meanwhile attacked Palestinian positions outside Beirut, killing more than 20 people, wounding 19 others and downing two Syrian jets in strikes the military said were retaliation for a series of Palestinian provocations.

Militant U.S.-born Rabbi Meir Kahane told pool reporters that a group of extremists belonging to his Kach movement had withdrawn their threat to commit suicide in an abandoned air-raid shelter.

Kahane, arriving by plane from the United States, was rushed in by helicopter to ask them to give up.

"We gave the soldiers a good fight but we got creamed," said Danny Stimmel, 19, of Queens, New York, a Kach activist.

The soldiers, unarmed except for axes to break down doors, ran into a barrage of rocks, firebombs and shouts in the evacuation of the desert town that was built on territory captured from Egypt in the 1967 Middle East War.

As the settlers were dragged to buses, bulldozers began destroying Yamit's neatly arranged houses. Israel is razing them so they will not provide shelter for Palestinian guerrillas.

"I thought we wouldn't have to leave but now I see that it's over," said Michael Brenner, a veteran Yamit grocery store owner, who watched in a daze with his wife and baby as his house crashed to the ground.

Most of the Sinai's long-time residents already had evacuated the string of Sinai settlements. Each received tens of thousands of dollars in compensation from the government for their homes, farms and businesses.

mounted "against commercial interests" and implied they had not expected fatalities. They said they were investigating reports that the telephoned warnings came to late to avoid the two deaths.

Police said the IRA "clearly intends to provoke violence" ahead of the anniversary May 5 of Sands' death. He was the first of 10 prisoners to starve themselves to death in a hunger strike protest in the Maze jail last year.

Northern Ireland fears IRA bombings

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (UPI) — The IRA claimed responsibility Wednesday for a coordinated bomb blitz that raised fears of a new terror campaign on the anniversary of the May 1981 death of hunger striker Bobby Sands.

Two unidentified men were killed in a car bomb blast just before midnight Tuesday in the town square at Magherafelt, 30 miles northwest of Belfast. A policeman and two civilians were cut by flying glass.

The bombers gave a telephone warning at 11:40 p.m. and the device went off with a roar 10 minutes later — before the area could be completely evacuated.

Earlier, car bombs hit Belfast and Londonderry and the towns of Strabane and Ballymena and three incendiary devices blasted an auto supply shop owned by a local Protestant politician at Bessbrook near the Irish republic border.

The provisional Irish Republican Army said the bomb attack was

Spanish priest killed in Uganda

KAMPALA, Uganda (UPI) — Suspected anti-government guerrillas gunned down a Spanish priest and injured two other people in a daylight attack near the Ugandan capital, one of the survivors said Wednesday.

Roman Catholic priest Osmond Bilba, 37, was shot twice in the neck and head as he was driving a panel van along the main Kampala-Entebbe road at mid-day Tuesday, Italian priest Torquato Paolucci, told reporters in Kampala.

Paolucci and an unidentified Ugandan woman survived the attack by playing dead as their assailants stripped them of their watches and rifled their pockets while they lay bleeding in the smashed and bullet-ridden vehicle.

Paolucci said the van was travelling along the road toward Entebbe when a white car with three men inside pulled alongside and ordered the Spanish priest to stop. He ignored the order and accelerated as the attackers gave chase firing an automatic rifle.

Dangerous waste buried in loopholes

Thursday, April 22, 1982 Times-News, Twin Falls, Idaho A-9

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A loophole that allows companies with small amounts of hazardous wastes to dump them in landfills endangers public health and could cost billions for cleanup, investigators told Congress Wednesday.

The Office of Technology Assessment, an arm of Congress that reviews the rationale for various policies, said the number of sanitary landfills contaminated because of the loophole eventually could outnumber abandoned waste dumps currently eligible for cleanup under the so-called Superfund.

Industries generating hazardous waste are required to contribute to the Superfund, created by the Carter administration to clean up the waste.

Rep. James Florio, D-N.J., who chaired a subcommittee hearing where the report was released, said there are 350,000 sanitary landfills and open dumps that potentially can receive hazardous waste from sources that individually produce only small amounts.

"These facilities have none of the technical standards to protect ground water that are likely to be required for hazardous waste landfills," Florio said.

Environmental Protection Agency regulations developed during the Carter administration allow companies or other waste generators producing up to 2,200 pounds of hazardous waste to dispose of them in sanitary landfills without the record-keeping required of larger generators.

Joel Hirschhorn, a researcher for the congressional office, said workers at some landfills are being injured "and perhaps most disturbing is the creation of future inoperative and uncontrolled waste sites that will pose the same type of risk and economic burdens as present abandoned hazardous waste sites."

Hirschhorn said EPA granted the exclusion based on two contracted studies made between 1978 and 1980, but a review of those studies indicates their results "are likely to be invalid."

Small generators may account for up to 10 percent of the hazardous waste being produced, not 1 percent as the studies indicated, he said. In addition, he said EPA did not adequately address the cost of eventual cleanups necessitated by the exclusion.

"OTA estimates that the direct cost of such cleanups, excluding the costs of adverse impacts on health and environment, could total billions of dollars," Hirschhorn said.

"Considering present expenditures, regulating small generators probably would cost tens of millions annually to government."

Carol MacLennan, representing a Denver group fighting conditions at the Lowry Landfill southeast of that city, told the hearing the exemption for small waste generators "has the effect of sanctioning innumerable Lowry Landfills around the country."

She said the exemption is forcing states to regulate hazardous materials under solid waste laws that are inappropriate.

Federal impact aid cuts hurt U.S. school districts

WASHINGTON (UPI) — School districts nationwide may have to close classrooms and compromise quality because of cuts in federal impact aid, education officials Congress Wednesday.

Federal impact aid, $757 million in fiscal 1981, was cut to $473 million in the current fiscal year and would drop to $286.9 million under the Reagan administration's proposed 1983 budget.

The federal aid goes to schools based on the number of students from military, federal employee and Indian families, and tenants in low-rent federal housing — generally those exempt from paying the local property taxes. Last year's budget legislation called for phasing out aid for all but students whose parents live and work on federal property.

"We have exhausted our reserves," David Fish, special projects director for the San Diego, Calif., schools, told a House education and labor subcommittee.

One-fourth of the Navy's Pacific Fleet is based in San Diego, which saw its impact aid cut from $11 million in the 1979-80 school year to $8.7 million this year, he said.

GNP shrinks, economy flat

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Strong downward pressure on the economy continued in the opening months of 1982, the government reported Wednesday.

A top official said there are "no clear-cut signals" the recession has run its course.

The Commerce Department reported that the gross national product was shrinking at an annual rate of 3.9 percent in the first three months of this year, and Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige said there may be no growth through June.

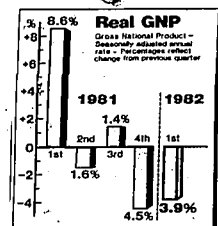

The department said the January through March contraction — the second consecutive quarter of deterioration — kept the GNP below the annual $3 trillion level many economists had expected by now.

Weakness in the auto industry, declining exports and sagging housing investment were blamed as the key ingredients in the nation's eighth recession since World War II.

At the same time, the recession cooled the annual inflation rate, as measured against the output of all goods and services, to 3.6 percent.

"Today's report shows that we were still firmly in the grip of recession in the first quarter," Baldrige told reporters.

"There are no clear-cut signals that the recession is at an end," he said. The 3.9 percent reverse put the annual GNP at $1,633.6 billion in inflation-adjusted dollars. The contraction, for the first time since the 1980 recession, translated into a decline in current dollars of 0.4 percent, to $2,953.1 billion — $2,953.1 billion.

The latest figures, on top of the October-December 4.5 percent drop, showed the current recession has eroded the economy by 8.4 percent so far, compared to the 9.9 percent decline in 1980. All GNP figures were seasonally adjusted.

"We won't be roaring back if interest rates are still high," Baldrige said. "I would expect ... an essentially flat second quarter."

But he said the second half of the year beginning in July could see growth of up to "5 or 6 percent recovery" — if interest rates come down following a bipartisan compromise on controlling the size of the federal deficit.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said the GNP report contained "indicators the recession is at bottom."

President Reagan has insisted his economic recovery program will lead to a rebound in the second half of the year — in time to ease unemployment

Durable goods orders climb in March

WASHINGTON (UPI) — New durable goods orders climbed 1.9 percent last month with help from improved transportation industry and machinery business and revisions of earlier data.

The government reported Wednesday new orders for manufacturers' durable goods went up $1.5 billion from February to $81.3 billion, the second consecutive month of improvement but still 9.3 percent under July's peak level before the recession began.

February's orders were sharply revised upward to become a 3.5 percent surge instead of the last reported 1.7 percent increase.

And both February and March numbers benefited in contrast by a further revision downward in January totals. January's orders, affected by the severe weather that reached into the Sunbelt, actually went down 3.35 percent instead of the last reported 2 percent decline, the department said.

recession worries before the November congressional elections.

The GNP report included some bright spots — a quarterly increase in personal spending, despite a decrease for March alone, and an inflation rate throughout the economy of just 3.6 percent.

The inflation figure reflected lower prices for gasoline, cars and consumer services, the department said.

The 3.6 percent rate of inflation for all goods and services, the government's "implicit price deflator," matched a similarly low rate in the first quarter of 1976.

Fery sees bright side

BOISE — Despite current hard times, Boise Cascade Corp. Chairman John B. Fery remains optimistic.

In comments at the corporation's annual shareholders' meeting Tuesday, Fery said the nation is on the way to solving some of its economic problems.

While inflation is coming down and savings increasing, interest rates will not come down until a "reasonable expectation exists that a reduction in federal budget deficits will occur," he said. If there is a compromise on the federal budget, he should begin to see a slow but steady improvement later this year, Fery said.

"The depression in home building made 1981 a disappointing year for Boise Cascade," Fery said. He also admitted the first quarter of 1982 was a difficult period.

The company reported income of $120 million or $4.50 per share during 1981, compared with $135 million or $5.08 per share before an extraordinary gain in 1980. First quarter earnings for 1982 amounted to $5.6 million or 21 cents a share, compared to $37.5 million or $1.40 a year earlier.

"The first quarter of this year was extremely tough and the outlook for the second quarter is not encouraging," Fery said.

As for the third quarter and beyond, Fery said significant improvement depends on the national economy, specifically on lower interest rates.

Boise Cascade closes Emmett plant

BOISE (UPI) — Boise Cascade Corp. closed its Emmett plywood plant for at least three weeks Wednesday.

Company officials said about 150 employees will be laid off until demand for plywood increases. They said lumber markets will be monitored on a daily basis to determine when work will resume.

Meanwhile, the company will install new equipment to increase efficiency of log-peeling operations at Emmett.

The plywood mill was closed from Jan. 15 until March 1, when Boise Cascade reopened six mills following extensive layoffs throughout its wood-products operations in southwestern Idaho.

Filer trustees adopt middle-school concept

By KAREN MAIN
Times-News correspondent

FILER — The middle-school concept will be implemented by the Filer school system this fall. Although some details need to be worked out, school board members approved the concept at Monday night's board meeting, which was held in Hollister.

The middle school, which is now being used in many schools throughout Idaho, will be a "school within a school," Superintendent Sheldon Kovarsky said.

The sixth-graders, who presently have just one teacher throughout the day, will be introduced to the idea of having different teachers for particular subjects.

Kovarsky, who started "the first middle school" in Wyoming 16 years ago, said rearranging the schedules of sixth-grade students will give them a gradual transition from elementary school to junior high and high school.

The sixth-grade students will go to three different classrooms for social studies, science and math. Each class will be taught by a different teacher. The rest of the day they will be taught by one teacher "they can identify with," Kovarsky said.

Sixth-grade students will intermingle at lunch with the seventh- and eighth-graders, but they will not be involved in intramural sports with the higher grades.

It is "not such a big adjustment factor" when students graduate from middle school to the seventh grade, Kovarsky said.

Filer psychologist Fred McCabe asked the school board if the students are currently "experiencing psychological trauma" when they go on to junior high school.

"We do have a high failure rate, low grade rate, I should say," said Bill Heaps, the junior-high principal.

Studies have shown that there is a high failure rate for students entering junior high from elementary school, Kovarsky said.

Junior high is "just a miniature high school without a marching band," he said, and a "middle school will 'bridge that gap.'"

School board members voted to use the middle-school concept, as fully as the sixth-grade class from Hollister can be incorporated into the plan.

In another new policy, senior-high students will be required to attend six classes a day next year, instead of the present three classes.

Many high schools, such as Twin Falls, are considering keeping seniors in school a full day because half-day attendance proves to be a disadvantage later, said Larry Roberts, the high-school principal.

After talking to a few students who have graduated from Filer High School, Roberts said the students found their "first year in school (college) was a disaster" because "they hadn't studied for a year" and it "just about did them in."

In order to offer another elective for the students who will be in school longer, the school board voted to hire a business teacher.

Filer High School now has typing and accounting classes, and "that's it," Roberts said.

The new instructor will teach shorthand and general business classes. Then, "down the road," Roberts said, high-school students can obtain a vocational certificate in business, comparable to the one offered at the College of Southern Idaho.

The school board also approved the hiring a full-time music teacher for the elementary and junior-high grades.

The music teacher will work with the band teacher Kevin Paustian and travel to the Filer elementary school and junior high, and the Hollister elementary school to teach vocal music.

Hagerman youths build benches for city park

HAGERMAN — Monday was a nice day to build benches in the park. 50 students from Wayne Hills' agricultural class at Hagerman High School went out to the city park to finish some benches they had started previously. The benches, built entirely by junior and senior students in Hills' classes, were made from materials donated by the city of Hagerman.

The students welded the bench frames, then attached the wooden planks to the structure, which is located at the northwest corner of the city park by the baseball diamond.

Monday's activities also included a short dedication ceremony.

Buhl schools seek voter approval for $95,000 tax levy

By KAREN MAIN
Times-News correspondent

BUHL — A tax levy to raise $95,000 a year over the next three years for the Buhl School District's plant facilities fund will be placed on the May 18 ballot.

Buhl school board members voted to place the tax increase on the ballot at a special meeting held April 9.

The tax, which requires a two-thirds majority to pass, will provide for the repair and replacement of school equipment, and building maintenance.

Superintendent Robert Pratt said the district needs the money — in addition to the $60,000 a year it spends on maintenance — to restore or buy new equipment.

The funds will be used for such items as roofs, heaters, boilers, windows, doors, the gymnasium floor, bleachers, sprinkler pipes, audiovisual equipment, and possibly the construction of a water well, Pratt said.

The tax would be levied at $.52 for every $10,000 of property at the assessed value for taxation purposes.

Previous plant facilities levies were passed by the voters in 1972 and 1975. In 1978, the school district used $30,000 of the money it received from the sale of a block of land where the old junior high stood, for maintenance.

But by 1980, Pratt said the district had "literally run out of revenue" for building repairs.

If the proposed levy is enacted, Pratt said the money first will be applied to minimum repairs and hopefully some money will be left over for major projects or emergency expenses.

"All of these things are needed, but because money is tight, we can't do it all," he said.

Unless an unexpected necessity does arise, such as a boiler needing major repair or replacement, Pratt said the district plans to use any extra funds to replace the gymnasium floor or have a water well drilled for the school's use.

At the present time, the school receives its water from the city system. But with its own well, the school district could irrigate the 20 acres of land it owns.

Richfield schools ask for override

RICHFIELD — The Richfield school board is asking district residents to approve a $20,000 override levy.

Superintendent A.J. Jones said the override election will be held in conjunction with the May 18 school board election.

"The $20,000 is one-third less than the amount that we asked for last year," he said.

In other action at Monday's board meeting, the board agreed that a district school bus can be used to transport baseball teams to out-of-area baseball games and for a swimming group to travel to the pool in Shoshone this summer.

The board also agreed to allow local baseball teams to use the school playing field.

Sewer hook-up hike in Hagerman draws flak

By GLEN WARCHOL
Times-News writer

HAGERMAN — An attempt by City Council to bolster sagging town finances sparked a heated dispute at Tuesday's meeting.

The discussion centered around recent hikes in sewer and water hook-up fees. At a special meeting Friday, Hagerman City Council increased water hook-up fees from $100 to $225 and sewer fees from $100 to $200, plus the cost of labor and materials.

The reason for the increases is that the previous fees were not meeting the expense of hooking into the city's services, according to council.

Council members have expressed frustration with other city financial concerns, including leaking sewage-treatment lagoons, which have forced the city to seek an "imminent threat" block grant from the state to pay for repair work.

Bruce Bothwell, the owner of Bothwell Construction Co., however, had little sympathy for council Tuesday night. Bothwell said he was suspicious of the timing of the rate increases — just 10 days prior to his completing construction on the first of a six-house project in Hagerman.

Bothwell also questioned the wisdom of council approving the increases at a special meeting. The meeting was open to the public but unattended.

He said that while the meeting was "announced" legally, he questioned the ethics of council making major policy changes without a special effort to gather community input.

"I'm wondering what was the urgency of calling a special meeting to discuss, pass and put into law this resolution?" Bothwell asked. "Don't you think there are more citizens in the town — that you represent — who would like to know what in the hell is happening?"

Council members maintained that proper notification of the meeting had been given and the hook-up fees were increased in the interest of the taxpayers, especially those who are on fixed incomes and cannot financially bear another increase in the water and sewerage rates.

In a related issue, Bothwell wanted the city to participate in laying a six-inch water main to his houses for the same cost per foot as a project approved at the last council meeting for the Annie Greensprings subdivision.

According to council, the Greensprings subdivision's standard water lines will be replaced with more than 1,000 feet of six-inch water main to improve water pressure. Council is also requiring a fire hydrant. The residents will contribute $750 to the estimated $5,000 to $6,000 that the project will cost.

Since the subdivision residents already paid hook-up fees on the original line five years ago, council said no additional fees would be levied to connect to the new line.

For the same cost per foot, Bothwell asked that a 6-inch main line be laid from 250 feet south on Second Street to Bruneau Street, where his six-house subdivision will be completed in a little over a year.

Council, however, did not see the two situations as similar because the fire hydrant was needed at the Greensprings subdivision. Besides, council members said, the city simply has no money available to pay for Bothwell's project.

"You're putting one house in there," Councilwoman Karen Yarbrough said. "Why should the people in town pay for it, for you to make money?"

After wrangling for more than 30 minutes, Bothwell and the city compromised. The city agreed to pay half of the $425 estimated cost for the pipe and provide a backhoe for the work.

Jerome council OKs medical bill for man injured by tear gas

By BONNIE BAIRD-JONES
Times-News writer

JEROME — Somewhat reluctantly, Jerome City Council approved $1,047 in medical bills Tuesday night for a prisoner who was forced from a motel room by tear gas last year.

The claim by Howard Davis, a 68-year-old transient, was approved by council on the advice of its attorney, but not until several council members voiced their concerns.

Acting Mayor Henry Pharris and Councilman Glen Capps both urged that some effort be made to hold medical treatment of prisoners to a level of necessity, "without a lot of frills."

"I can't help but feel resentful that someone can come to town, try to rob and possibly kill somebody, and then take advantage of us by leaving the community to pay his medical bill," Capps said.

Davis barricaded himself in a motel room in Jerome last October after unsuccessfully attempting to rob the business. He fired two shots at city and county police officers before tear gas was fired into the room. He still refused to surrender, and officers were forced to enter the building and bring him out. Police Chief Darryl Cameron said. He was overcome by the gas and required hospitalization.

In other action Tuesday night:

• Council took a $15,500 bid for re-roofing the library under advisement. Only one bid was received, from Quality Workers Inc. of Twin Falls, but the amount exceeded the $12,000 budgeted for the project.

• Two public hearings were set for a proposed block grant to fund improvements to the city water system. The first will be at 3 p.m. on May 4, and the second will be held at 4 p.m. on the same day during the regular City Council meeting.

• May 18 was set as the date for opening bids for 4,500 tons of gravel for the city's street-patching and improvement program this summer. Public-works director Lanny Sloan said that is about 250 tons more than originally planned, but the excessive street-patching work this spring will require more material.

• Council also approved conference and training trips for police and library workers. approved new uniforms for the Police Department; authorized payment of 90 percent of the cost for new police radio equipment, with the final 10 percent to be paid when final details are complete; and authorized the Police Department to obtain part-time help for animal-control work while the city dogcatcher takes his accumulated 220 hours of compensatory time.

Gooding drag strip proposed

GOODING — A drag strip at Gooding Municipal Airport was proposed to City Council on Monday night.

Frank Fuqua and John Brown are seeking to lease an unused runway at the airport to establish Magic Valley Raceway.

The site was used as a race track several years ago.

According to the proposal by Fuqua and Brown, the drag strip, plus 100 feet of land along each side, would be fenced off and the surface of the asphalt runway repaired.

The men want to hold a professional race in which drivers can compete for cash prizes once a month, and an amateur race for local teens each month, on separate weekends.

"We'd like a place to race without having to go to Boise or Pocatello," Brown said. "It also would provide a safe place for teenagers to race, getting them off Main Street and other inappropriate places."

Eventually, the pair will try to get National Hot Rod Association sanction for the raceway.

They explained that such an establishment could bring in business and be of financial benefit to the area.

"We're not asking anything from the city except permission to use the blacktop," Brown said.

The matter was taken under advisement until the council's regular meeting May 3. However, council agreed that the operator of such an establishment would have to provide complete liability insurance.

Council also will consult its attorney, Cecil Hobday, concerning legalities and lease terms since the area is leased now by Lester Silman of Gooding for livestock grazing.

Silman appeared at the meeting and said he would consider a sublease of the runway area if it were properly fenced and prepared, so that the raceway did not interfere with his livestock.

"We also need to consult the airport board and (Gooding Police) Chief Bill Bunn before we do anything more," Councilman Bob Molten told the pair.

Brown and Fuqua were told that "nothing more than a short-term lease can be considered."

Silman's lease expires Dec. 31, 1982. At that time, the area again will be offered for lease to the highest bidder.

"We do not favor renewable lease options," Molten said.

Also under consideration by the council is a request for the city to participate in the improvement of a baseball playing field at the Idaho State School for the Deaf and Blind.

Chie Crane and Greg Nicholas of the Optimist Club told council they need the additional ball diamonds for the use of baseball teams the club sponsors each summer.

Nicholas said the state school has tried to establish a baseball field on its property but has been unsuccessful because of funding problems.

The area designated for a playing field by the school has been made available to the Optimists. "If we improve the field, the school will irrigate and maintain it," Nicholas said.

Council agreed to study the possibility of city participation in the project.

In other action, the city set May 3 through 14 as city clean-up week.

The city superintendent, Lloyd McLeod, said city trucks and crews will be available to collect extra trash, brush and tree limbs during those weeks.

City street, utility crews affected

Jerome adopts 4-day work week

JEROME — City street and utility crews in Jerome will begin working four 10-hour days each week next month.

Lanny Sloan, the city's public-works director, recommended the plan two weeks ago and received City Council approval for it Tuesday night.

He said other communities have tried the system and have found it increases productivity and saves money. Sloan said workmen will be able to stay on a job longer.

Workers in the two departments will go to work at 7 a.m., have a 30-minute lunch break on the job site and work until 5:30 p.m. Work days will be Monday through Thursday, Sloan said, giving the workers three-day weekends without losing the full 40-hour work week.

"All but about two of the men have indicated they would like this sort of schedule," Sloan said. "It would continue from May through September."

Sloan said in the event of a holiday week, employees still will work four days but for only 32 hours. He said the work schedule could be changed to four eight-hour days, or three 10-hour days and a two-hour day for a holiday schedule.

Council members agreed to "give it a try" and see if the system works.

Filer

The two teachers also will be allowed to use a room at the Filer elementary school that used to be a music room but now is a fourth-grade classroom.

In other matters at Monday night's board meeting:

- Repairs to the high-school gymnasium, to be made this summer, were approved.

- At a cost of approximately $13,000, the gymnasium will receive new lighting, new doors, replacement of acoustical tiles on the walls, lower ceilings in the stage area, re-sanded bleachers, painting and perhaps some new lockers.

- The board voted to spend $500 to $600 to turn the concession booth at the high school into a darkroom for photography. The darkroom will be used by the yearbook-journalism club. Creation of a photography class sometime in the future would be possible.

- The board voted to replace drama with communication skills as a requirement for sophomores in high school. Drama will continue as an elective.

- A basic computer-science class was added to the high school curriculum for next year.

Building dog pound for Jerome could cost $25,000, Rasco says

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

JEROME — Efforts to raise $25,000 for a new dog pound in Jerome may need the support of city and county residents alike.

Gladys Rasco, head of the Friends of Animals organization in Jerome, told City Council on Tuesday night that she has been pushing down on her requests for help to upgrade the pound.

4-H clubs and several other groups and individuals who live in the county have refused aid because of reports that the city pound does not accept stray or abandoned animals from the rural area, she said. But Rasco told council, "there are no boundaries to animal problems."

Police Chief Darrell Cameron told Rasco that rural residents may bring animals to the pound, providing they pay a fee to compensate for the fact they are not taxed for pound operations — as Jerome residents are. He said anyone can adopt animals from the pound regardless of where they live.

Acting Mayor Henry Pharris said he would work with Friends of Animals to help work out the problem, but he agreed with Rasco that the county commissioners are not willing to participate in a pound program.

Rasco said the cost estimates for a new facility that she obtained from builders were astronomical, ranging from $75,000 to $82,000.

Since then, however, she said she has visited the Filer dog pound, which was built by community donations, and she found it both adequate and economical.

"If Filer can have that kind of a dog pound, maintained by the Police Department, Jerome, with a full-time dog catcher, should be able to at least meet the same standard," she said.

Rasco said that after reviewing the Filer facility, she is confident that for $25,000, Jerome could have an adequate and safe pound about twice the size of the one in Filer.

"I don't think it is unreasonable to believe we can raise this amount and build a new facility this fall," she said.

Needed for ambulance

Defibrillator grant sought

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

JEROME — St. Benedict's Hospital received approval from the Jerome County commissioners Monday to apply for a cardiac defibrillation unit for the Jerome County Emergency Medical Services ambulance.

The application, to be made by the hospital staff, with co-sponsorship from the county, will seek a grant for the equipment at a reduced cost through the state Department of Health and Welfare.

Hospital administrator Robert Campbell, nursing supervisor Delores Smith and ambulance operator Gerald Oster met with the county officials to explain the need for the unit.

Campbell said the present defibrillation equipment in the hospital's emergency room is loaned to patients with critical heart problems who must be transported to other hospitals.

"We are glad to loan the equipment, except that it leaves us without it should another cardiac patient be brought to the hospital," he said. "So far, we have been lucky, but we have to be left without the defibrillator in the event we need it."

The equipment is used to electrically restart a person's heart should it stop. The cost of the unit is estimated at $5,000 to $8,000, but Oster said if the grant application is approved, Jerome would be in line for one of the units the health department plans to buy and make available on a priority basis.

In response to questions from the commissioners, Oster said he could have members of his staff trained to use the equipment within a few months. At present, he said there are several members of the Twin Falls Emergency Medical Services team that can and will operate the units. In addition, registered nurses at the hospital will assist the ambulance crews if needed.

He said ambulances serving areas where there are larger medical centers, such as in Twin Falls, may not need such units, but "we transport a large number of heart patients from Jerome to larger hospitals, and the demand for the equipment is high."

Oster told the commissioners that he also is working on an emergency driveway at the hospital to facilitate ambulance traffic. He said volunteers from the Jerome County Search and Rescue unit have been helping with the labor. Total costs probably will be about $600 to $700.

Gardening school in Jerome slated next Wednesday

JEROME — Novice gardeners — and those with years of experience — may pick up some pointers on raising better produce if they attend a program in Jerome next Wednesday at 1:15 p.m.

Jesse Wilson, the Jerome County agriculture extension agent, says the gardening school is open to everyone, and there is no charge.

"This is a good opportunity for those planning to plant gardens this spring to get help with individual problems," Wilson said. "We will have several experts speaking on the program, and they will be available to answer individual questions."

The meeting will be held in the basement of the Jerome County Courthouse and will continue until 4 p.m.

Ed Koster, the Gooding county agent, will speak on garden layout. Rod McCoy, the Blaine County agent, will discuss transplanting techniques. Raised beds and mulching will be covered by Carey Locke of Mindoka County, while Ivan Hopkins, the Lincoln County agent, will discuss drip irrigation. Wilson said a number of Jerome-area gardeners have expressed interest in drip irrigation systems.

Lois Nadelny of Camas County is scheduled to discuss how to troubleshoot garden problems. Fertilizers will be the topic of Steve Petri, a specialist with the University of Idaho Extension Service.

Gaming facility in Glens Ferry focuses on youths

GLENS FERRY — A youth center has opened in Glens Ferry, in the basement of the Farmhouse Cafe.

The game room is primarily for youths, but parents are welcome to visit, according to Tyrone Morris, the manager of the facility.

A similar effort to provide a recreation center in the basement of the cafe several months ago was abandoned because of problems with a bar that was located in the basement at that time. But Morris promises there will be absolutely no alcoholic beverages allowed in the new facility.

Besides offering a wide variety of electronic games, the youth center also will feature pinball machines, pool tables and a football table.

The facility will offer refreshments, and it will be open from 3 to 11 a.m. on school days and from 11 a.m. to 11 p.m. on non-school days.

Jerome Chamber to plan for 75th

JEROME — A planning meeting for the 75th anniversary observance in Jerome has been scheduled for Friday morning.

The North Side 75th Anniversary Committee will meet at 9:30 a.m. at the Good Earth Restaurant. Alice Sonnenchen, a board member, is asking all committee members to attend in order to get an update on developments in celebration plans.

Jerome clean-up day set Saturday

JEROME — Residents and business owners in Jerome are sprucing up the community.
 Larry Sloan, the city's public-works director, said the annual spring clean-up is in full swing in city parks and on city property.
 And this Saturday is the citywide cleanup day, with the Jerome

Chamber of Commerce and the North Side Board of Realtors in charge.
 Dale Buttram, chairman of the Saturday program, is urging residents to clean up their yards and homes, put the trash in bags and place the bags in the alleys by Saturday morning, so volunteers manning pickup trucks can collect the debris.
 He said any item that can be handed by one man may be left in the alleys for pickup.

 Ethel Nelson, the chamber manager, said clean-up volunteers will meet Saturday at 8 a.m. in the Fireside Restaurant parking lot. Those who have pickup trucks are asked to bring them. The city also will furnish two pickups.

Jerome commission candidates to speak

JEROME — Chamber of Commerce members will have an opportunity to meet Jerome County commission candidates during their luncheon meeting next Wednesday.
 All candidates for the two commission seats who have opposition in the May 25 primary have been asked to attend the meeting. Each will be given a few minutes for a brief "campaign speech," and then, they will answer questions from chamber members and guests.

 Chamber President Con Paulos said anyone interested in meeting the candidates is welcome to attend the Wednesday noon meeting at the Good Earth Restaurant.
 Candidates in the Third District include incumbent Henry Schutte, Warren Sigle and Carl Montgomery, all seeking the Republican nomination. In the First District, Carl Butler and Hank Bekker are contending for the Republican nomination for the chance to oppose incumbent Democrat Mel Grindstaff in November.

Canal users rebated for cost of dam

Refund to show up on '83 bill

By BRUCE HAMMOND
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Local canal subscribers are going to receive a $776,291 rebate on next year's fees, thanks to a federal refund.

The money is repayment for funds contributed by members of the American Falls Reservoir District for reconstruction of the dam.

"Although the final project financing was completed in December of 1980, these refunds were delayed because of the necessity of obtaining an IRS ruling and specific legislation approved by the Idaho Legislature," said the district president, John Barker of Buhl.

The American Falls Dam was rebuilt in 1977 as a federal project, although private financing was used to start the program. The refund represents money put up by five local canal companies for engineering costs and feasibility studies during the early stages of the work, Barker said.

A special bill passed by Congress in 1980 also was required before the repayment could be authorized. In addition, to the Idaho legislation that was needed.

"We'd hoped the money would have arrived in time to offset fees this year," said Ted Diehl, the manager of the Northside Canal Co. "But since our assessments had to go out in December, we'll have to wait until next year to include the refund."

The money will be used to offset the canal companies' operating budgets and should lower canal fees significantly next year. Because budgets for next year have not been formulated, Diehl said he could not estimate how much the refunds would lower canal fees.

The Northside Canal Co. is receiving the largest refund, $470,354, but the Twin Falls Canal Co. also is receiving a significant sum, $255,089.

Barker said the checks were being distributed Wednesday.

About $39,000 is being distributed to individual shareholders in the Aberdeen-Springfield District, rather than to the canal company. That's because Aberdeen-Springfield, located in north American Falls, overlaps into other reservoir districts, and only those subscribers living in the American Falls district contributed to the project.

The two other companies benefiting from the refunds are the Filer Canal District, which is receiving $9,626, and the Martin Canal District, which will get $2,406.

Barker said rehabilitation of the American Falls Dam restored the storage capacity to 100 percent of its potential. That compares to the 65 percent restricted storage capacity imposed by the Bureau of Reclamation because of the deteriorating condition of the dam before rehabilitation.

The reservoir district also owns space in Jackson Reservoir in Wyoming, however. That facility still is to be expanded 100,000 acre-feet, or 75 percent of capacity, because of a federal ruling.

Director vows to break even, anyway.

Health board passes deficit budget

By STEPHANIE SCHOROW
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The board of the South Central District Health Department approved a preliminary 1983 budget Wednesday that has a projected $85,900 deficit.

However, department director Gerald Hurst vows that the district will not "go into the hole" next year.

He says the deficit may be made up with increased revenues from several sources — as a last resort — by cutting staff. A projected $90,000 deficit for this fiscal year has been reduced through the loss of four full-time employees and other cost-cutting measures.

The preliminary budget approved by the board calls for total income of $1,261,500 and total costs of $1,347,400. This budget now will go to the district's eight county commissioners for their approval.

—The district health department is requesting $455,500 from the Magic Valley's eight county governments, a 5 percent increase over last year.

$12,398; Minidoka, $62,704; and Twin Falls, $167,761.

The district has been granted a 6.6 percent increase in general revenue funds from the state. In a move designed to generate more income, the board approved the district's participation in an investment program. Under this program, the district's idle funds — an estimated $300,000 — will be invested by state Treasurer Marjorie Ruth Moon, with interest accruing to the district.

At a 12 percent interest rate, the district may receive $38,000 a year, Hurst says. "Thirty-six thousand a year is not big money, but it's big money to us, faced with an $85,000 deficit," he says.

The program also has a 24-hour "turnaround time," meaning funds would be available on a day's notice, he says.

However, because the actual interest is not certain yet, the investment program has not been figured into the fiscal 1983 budget, he says.

Another program that may bring the department more revenue is a proposal to begin charging school districts for health-education services.

Cheryl Juntunen, the physical health director for the district, outlined the health-education package the district will present to school districts beginning next week.

Services provided under a basic package would include: health-education planning, follow-up on students with chronic or unknown health problems, assistance with communicable disease control and dental hygiene programs.

Juntunen says the charge for these services "would be lower than anticipated," but she declined to discuss specifics, pending discussion with school superintendents. The department originally had proposed a fee of $2.50 per student.

Immunization programs, now sponsored by the district, would continue to be provided at no charge.

Hurst says that with good participation from school districts, the program would bring in an estimated $25,000 to $30,000 in additional revenues. Public health nurses now spend about 10 percent of their time on school health programs.

Hurst says that if schools participate in the health-education program, if investments yield significant interest and if county governments fund the department as requested, the department will not be forced to reduce its staff.

But "that's a lot of ifs," he says. Otherwise, the department will reduce its staff by at least three full-time employees in fiscal 1983, he says.

P&Z urged denial of Crystal Springs, but county OKs it

By MARTY TRILLHAASE
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The three Twin Falls county commissioners unanimously reversed a recommendation from the county zoning board Wednesday and authorized construction of the Crystal Springs Estates subdivision.

In addition to the position of the Twin Falls County Planning and Zoning Commission, the commissioners also rejected criticism of the proposed project from the Idaho Fish and Game Department and the Filer school board.

The decision concerns a proposed 82-unit subdivision to be located on a 122-acre parcel in the Crystal Springs orchard area, approximately five miles north of Filer.

Crystal Springs developers David Millard of Seattle and Roy Bylund of Filer had requested county approval of a preliminary plat for the project earlier this year. Following months of discussions, the zoning board denied the request at its April 8 meeting.

The zoning board's 8-1 vote against the developers was based on two major concerns:

- Fish and game officials indicated the project would be detrimental to wildlife in the area.

- Filer school board members objected to the project because school buses could not negotiate the road leading down the Snake River Canyon to the development.

Millard and Bylund appealed the zoning board's decision to the county commissioners, who held a public hearing on the matter Friday. Although seven people attended that hearing, no one representing the developers was present.

Since the hearing, the Filer school board revised its position on the development. On Monday, the board voted to expand its earlier opposition to the project, adding an objection that the project would generate additional students at a time when Filer schools already are overcrowded.

The county commissioners' decision addressed each of those concerns in the following manner:

- Since the property is zoned as an outdoor recreational area, the developers are within their rights to build a subdivision on the land. If the property is to be used for a wildlife habitat, then the owners should be compensated for the subsequent restriction that would be placed upon them.

- The project will be built in stages during a 20-year period. That plan, coupled with the current economic slowdown, should result in a gradual increase of school-age children. As such, the development will not pose a hardship on the Filer school system.

- Parents of students living in the development will be responsible for transporting their children to a bus stop at the top of the grade. Developers will be required to inform potential customers of that arrangement.

Finally, Commissioner Merl Leonard characterized the efforts to block the Crystal Springs project as inconsistent, given the approval of other developments in the Snake River Canyon. He cited the proposed Thousand Waters subdivision as one example.

DHW boss says agency's 'credibility' is up

By STEPHANIE SCHOROW
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Nearly a year after being named director of the Department of Health and Welfare, Thomas "Les" Purce says the agency has made "significant improvement in credibility" during the last legislative session.

"I think that we have a base we can build on," he said Wednesday during a quarterly tour of Twin Falls' DHW facilities.

However, Purce continues to warn of further cutbacks from the federal government, and he says the state's ability to take over social-service programs will depend largely on a turnaround in the economy.

In an interview with The Times-News, he discussed the uncertain funding for the department, stemming from unresolved budget questions at the federal level.

"We're in a waiting game for the final budget resolution," he says.

President Ronald Reagan's proposed "swap" — in which the federal government would take over the Medicaid program while the states would take over the food stamp and Aid to Families with Dependent Children programs — "is not something that's going to be pushed at this point," Purce says.

He says Idaho would lose $30 million under the swap. However, another 20 percent cutback in Title XX money, which funds social services like child protection and youth rehabilitation, is expected for fiscal year 1983, Purce says.

The block grants awarded to Idaho in this fiscal year reduced federal grants by about $5 million. The DHW asked the Legislature for $2 million and received $500,000. Still, Purce says he does not anticipate department layoffs. He contends that budget reductions will be made up by not filling positions opened by normal attrition.

He says he feels that at some point the federal government will "freeze" further cutbacks. "It's clear that many programs can't operate effectively without some federal dollars."

Questioned about the continued antagonism expressed toward DHW by many citizens, Purce says: "The key to our success in the perception of the public is through our communication with the public."

"Everyone knows what welfare is, but people don't realize the majority of our dollars are spent in medical areas."

He does anticipate changes in social programs to make them more "state-oriented and more community-oriented."

(And) "I don't know that that's bad."

Realtor's association president says housing is a buyers' market now

By STEVE LIPSON
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The housing market has more sellers than buyers, but more buyers would enter if they knew the lengths sellers will go in order to sell their homes.

At least that is the contention of James L. Morphey, a Pocatello real-estate agent and the current president of the Idaho Association of Realtors.

Prices have stabilized, Morphey says. Adjusting for the delayed payments and below-market interest rates on such payments that many sellers will accept, prices have actually fallen in those cases. "This is a real buyers' market," he says.

Morphey was interviewed Wednesday in Twin Falls. He is on a speaking tour of the state during Private Property Week, a promotion of the National Association of Realtors, aimed at making people aware of their property rights and the threats — mainly from government — that those rights will be weakened.

Morphey says he sees nothing ironic about the real-estate industry warning against government interference with the rights of property owners while the industry also advocates new government programs to help make more mortgage money available.

"Our association is not advocating anything that would increase the federal deficit," Morphey says. It is seeking regulation changes to help money flow into mortgage markets. It is also asking that the government take any steps necessary to reduce the federal deficit.

Cutting the deficit is the only way to reduce interest rates, he says. That would lead to a recovery from the depression in the housing industry, which would help pull the country out of its current recession.

Money for housing is a good investment, Morphey says. It offers a textbook study in supply-side economics — by getting the government out of the money markets it would clear the way for lower interest rates, more home construction, increased employment and an increased tax base, he says.

Morphey also repeated what has become the watchword of the real-estate industry during the last three years of declining sales and record high interest rates: "Now is the time to buy."

But it now is the time to buy, he was asked, does that mean real-estate agents were wrong when they gave that same advice during the last three years?

"We always said now is the time to buy," Morphey says. "The best time to buy for me was 10 years ago when I first got into the business, but the next best time to buy is now. We can't predict the future. We do know that when interest rates go down, prices go up."

Housing has been a good investment in the past and will prove to be so again, he says.

Despite a recession that has lasted longer, and hit the housing industry harder, than any downturn since the Great Depression, the American dream is still to own property, Morphey says.

Custom car show prize awarded

Winning car was a big surprise

TWIN FALLS — When a man on the phone asked Doug Peton when he was picking up his car, Peton didn't understand what was happening.

After all, his pickup truck was parked in the driveway.

"But then he said it was the new car I'd just won, and then I remembered the car show," Peton said.

The 47-year-old market manager for Loomis Inc. is the winner of the 1982 Ford Escort given away at the sixth annual Twin Falls Road and Custom show on Sunday.

Peton's single ticket, was placed in a rolling bin and picked up for the car drawing.

"I just asked the man — I didn't catch his name — 'everything was happening so fast — I was putting me on,' Peton said. 'I never won anything in my life.'"

In fact, Peton had not even looked at the compact, cream-colored car, which carried a sticker price of $6,100. He had attended the show early Sunday and did not attend the drawing, forcing the show sponsors to call him at home about 6:30 p.m. Sunday.

About 8,500 people attended the two-day car show at the College of Southern Idaho Expo Center.

Part of the proceeds from the event will be donated to community activities by the show's sponsor, the Magic Valley Early Iron Club. Past recipients include CSI's Herrett Museum and the senior-citizen groups. The show also is used as a fund-raiser for the club's July car rally, each year.

As for Peton's new car, he picked it up from the Twin Falls Ford dealership Monday afternoon and drove it to a business meeting in Jerome as a trial.

"Yeah, I think I'll probably keep it," he said. "It drives great on the road."

"Of course, I have to find out how much tax I'll have to pay on it before I decide for sure."

Volunteer helps other volunteers find opportunities to help

By STEPHANIE SCHOROW
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Pat Menck loves her home and loves her family — but sometimes she feels she has to get away from it all.

Like others who have time to donate to the Twin Falls resident became a volunteer. However, Menck became a volunteer who helps other volunteers.

Menck is part of a new Volunteers in "Service" to "America" program, which, oddly enough, is being implemented just as VISTA itself is being phased out. In fact, Menck may be one of the last VISTA volunteers placed in Twin Falls.

During the first three months of her 12-month VISTA stint, Menck will research the need for a "volunteer clearinghouse." The clearinghouse would match persons who want to volunteer with places that need assistance.

She is contacting non-profit agencies and county commissions throughout the Magic Valley to determine their needs for volunteers.

Armed with that knowledge, she will develop and run a program that will meet those needs. In the meantime, she will take over the "Somebody Needs You" feature that appears weekly in the Times-News.

"There are many people out there who want to volunteer — like myself.

coordinates needs

Maybe they want to volunteer just one hour a week. They don't know where to go," she says.

Menck, officially dubbed the Magic Valley Volunteer Coordinator, intends to be a contact person for potential volunteers unsure of "where to go."

She finds it a happy coincidence that the beginning of her assignment coincides with National Volunteers Week.

Menck, 40, the mother of two grown children, suspects there are others who are tired of just "sitting at home." A resident of Twin Falls for 26 years, she found herself with extra time after she sold her clothing business, Kay's Closet.

She had been a Cub Scout den mother, a foster-care parent and active in her church. When she saw an ad asking for VISTA workers, she applied.

Her program is funded by VISTA. Office space and supervision are provided by the regional Department of Health and Welfare. A community steering committee is being formed to provide additional input.

Unlike other VISTA programs, the six current participants in Menck's program have been placed in their home towns, meaning they already have valuable knowledge of the area. They also will serve as supervisors, rather than perform "hands-on" volunteer tasks.

The use of volunteers for community assistance is a cornerstone of President Reagan's new federalism policy, but as a volunteer, "you're also fulfilling a need inside yourself," Menck says.

Volunteers often get more satisfaction out of their actions than the people they are helping, notes Ernie Shropshire, a DIW social-services worker who is acting as Menck's supervisor.

Hospital's junior volunteer program explores health careers

Editor's note: This week is National Volunteers Week—Many area social-service agencies depend on volunteers to make their programs work. Some of these agencies will be spotlighted on this page throughout the week in articles provided by the agencies.

The Magic Valley Memorial Hospital junior volunteer program was organized to give students an opportunity to explore hospital careers in the health-care field.

Qualifications include being at least 14, having good grades in school, dependability, willingness to accept responsibility and the desire to help.

The rewards of being a junior volunteer are personal development, learning new skills and making a contribution to the community.

Currently, MVMMH has 20 active junior volunteers. They meet the first Monday evening of each month for fun and instruction in various career opportunities.

The summer junior volunteer program will begin in early June. All interested students should call Sue Summers, the program's director, at 737-2167.

'Confused' robber drops money

BURLEY — An armed man robbed a Burley station Tuesday night, but he became "confused" and dropped most of the money as he escaped, according to Burley police.

About 8:25 p.m., a young, white male walked into the United Oil Gas Station off Overland Avenue. The man bought a six-pack of beer, pulled a knife and then demanded money from the attendant, according to Capt. Pete Rodriguez.

After the attendant handed over the money, the suspect apparently became confused or frightened for some unknown reason and dropped most of the money on the floor, he said.

The man escaped on foot. Rodriguez would not release the name of the station attendant, and the amount of money taken was not known. There were no injuries in the incident.

Workshops on a variety of migrant education topics will be held all day Saturday at the junior high school.

Generator stolen

TWIN FALLS — A 2-year-old generator was reported missing from the Girl Scout camp near the Diamond Field Jack's snowmobile area in Twin Falls, earlier this week.

If purchased new, the generator would cost an estimated $1,300, deputies said.

Rapists sentenced

Judge sends men to prison for assault on Ketchum woman

COEUR D'ALENE (UPI) — Two Kent, Wash., men, convicted of raping a 27-year-old Ketchum woman last week, were sentenced to prison terms Tuesday despite emotional pleas for mercy from parents and attorneys.

"This has been a nightmare that we have continued to feel even now," said Stephen Elkins Sr., in urging First District Judge Gary Haman not to send his son, Stephen Gus Elkins Jr., 20, to the Idaho State Penitentiary.

But Haman ordered an eight-year term for the younger Elkins and five years for his accomplice, Joseph Scott Hansen, 19, in connection with the August 1981, rape on a dirt road south of Coeur d'Alene.

The defendants and their parents quietly accepted the sentences Monday. But when the conviction was handed down in March, Elkins, his parents and girlfriend rallied the victim, and Hansen moaned and fainted.

Haman said he imposed the lesser sentence on Hansen because he believed the younger defendant was the follower, and Elkins was "far more aggressive."

"I don't think you would have done [that] by yourself," the judge said to Hansen.

Hansen's attorney, John Luster of Coeur d'Alene, unsuccessfully urged the judge not to send his client to prison, saying the young man faces violence at the penitentiary.

"Nobody deserves what he's looking at if he gets down there" to the Boise prison, Luster said.

But Haman said Hansen could stay out of the main prison and avoid five years by impressing corrections officials.

Marc Haws, the Kootenai County chief deputy prosecutor, urged Haman to impose a 15-year sentence on Elkins because his criminal record, including juvenile offenses, involved six felonies and as many misdemeanor convictions.

Elkins "has been able to manipulate and deceive for too long," Haws said, referring to Elkins' record and apparent ability to gain his parents' support despite the many convictions.

"What he needs is not more mercy," Haws told the judge. "What he needs is more justice. What he needs is to be held accountable for his actions. Somebody should have put him over their knee a long time ago."

The elder Elkins, however, said his son had been battling with a drug problem for the last two years and was improving. He asked Haman not to place the younger Elkins in a situation "where he'll lose hope."

Haman rejected Haws' criticism of Elkins' parents, saying he could not blame them for their son's actions.

He said he would not impose the 15 years Haws requested — or the possible maximum life sentence — because "you (Elkins) can't be all bad, or you wouldn't have that kind of support from your parents."

"I don't think in the interest of society, I can just close the door and shut it forever" on Elkins, Haman said. He said it seemed as if Elkins' father was correct — and that the defendant was "trying to grow up but hasn't quite accomplished that."

"I hope to God that you do, not necessarily for you, but for your parents," Haman said.

Guilty plea offered in drug case

TWIN FALLS — A Filer man faces a prison sentence of up to three years for illegal possession of cocaine.

Kevin Scott Wilson, 22, pleaded guilty to the charge during a Fifth District Court hearing Monday.

Wilson was arrested by state Bureau of Narcotics agents after a motel maid discovered cocaine in a room rented by the defendant. Wilson told Judge Daniel Meehl that the cocaine was obtained for a bachelor party that was held in the room.

Meehl ordered a presentence investigation.

In another case heard Monday, a 29-year-old Eden man, who was convicted of forgery, was placed on a two-year probation in lieu of a seven-year prison sentence.

Under the terms of Glen Garner's probation, he will be required to pay $250 in restitution to his victims and $70 to Twin Falls County as reimbursement for the services of the public defender.

New Eden mayor hopes to lure small business to spur growth

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

EDEN — Owen Hammond, the newly appointed mayor of Eden, hopes to see at least one new, small business in the community in the near future.

"We need to spark some growth, and we need a small business or industry if the town is to grow," Hammond says.

"We can't handle anything too large, but if we had something to give us 100 or even 150 jobs, our tax base would expand and we could meet the needs for community services," he says.

In order to attract business or industry, Hammond says the city's water system needs upgrading and streets must be improved. A grant application already has been submitted for funds to handle both needs, he says.

The water system needs some new lines and fire hydrants for better fire protection.

Eden now has about 350 residents, a slight increase in population over the past few years, he says, but growth has been slow and limited.

The community's low tax base gives Eden officials a limited budget, but Hammond says it isn't any worse than any other small town, and he believes the budget can be stretched to cover essential services. And if the community is approved for a street and water improvement grant, he says it should be in fairly good shape for the next few years.

Hammond took over as mayor Monday during a special meeting called by City Council for the purpose of making the appointment. He will fill the remaining 20 months of the term of former Mayor Nina Eisenhauer, who resigned two weeks ago.

The new mayor served 14 years as Eden's town marshal and maintenance foreman.

"That's why they asked me to serve as mayor" he says. "They (council members) felt I knew the town and its needs."

Sun Valley OKs dog ordinance and recreation center

SUN VALLEY — A new dog ordinance was adopted by Sun Valley City Council at Tuesday's meeting.

The ordinance is similar in language to a model ordinance that's being recommended by Blaine County officials, according to Mayor Ruth Lieder. Cities throughout Blaine County are adopting ordinances designed to provide general compatibility in fees, fines and rules.

Lieder said the Sun Valley ordinance also contains some specialized provisions and fees for animals brought to the city by tourists. It also varies from the model ordinance by allowing licenses to be valid for five years, instead of the two years adopted by most of the other cities in Blaine County.

The common ordinances also will assist in the funding of the newly created animal hospice center in Sun Valley, and it sets procedures for delivering unwanted animals to that facility.

In other action, council gave approval for the Harker Center, a recreation complex being developed by the Elkhorn Property Owners Association.

The $750,000 project is being paid for by the Elkhorn property owners, who recently gave approval — by a 60 percent margin — to a special assessment to finance construction of the center, according to Steve Harvill, the association manager.

Harvill said the facility, designed for the private use of Elkhorn property owners, will be located between the existing tennis courts at Elkhorn Village. A large clubhouse will anchor the two tennis court areas, and it will feature a lounge, an Olympic-sized swimming pool, children's wading pool and a covered Jacuzzi. In addition, the center will feature a changing area and a pro shop that will serve tennis enthusiasts in the summer and cross-country skiers in the winter.

Although some site clearing already has begun, the main construction work is anticipated to begin around May 3, Harvill said. A Thanksgiving target date has been set for completion.

Rupert council awards park upkeep contract

Also considers building-permit change

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News correspondent

RUPERT — A sure sign of spring is cities turning the attention to park maintenance, and that's what Rupert City Council did at its meeting Tuesday.

The city awarded Andy Henschel of Rupert a $3,300-per-month contract for park maintenance, according to Councilman Dwaine Allred.

The contract with Henschel will run from April to October, said Councilwoman June Dombeck, who oversees city recreation.

In past years, the city has hired one employee to maintain the city's 32 acres of parks, and in turn, he has hired crews, Dombeck said. By awarding a contract each season, the city plans to save money in the long run, although Dombeck had no figures at this time, she said.

Henschel will care for about 21 acres of parks, while the city will maintain the parks near downtown, the library and behind the City Hall and Chamber of Commerce buildings, Dombeck said. City crews also will take care of irrigating all the city parks, she said.

The parks near the downtown area always have been well cared for, but the city would not extend that same attention to outlying parks, she said.

Council also discussed a possible change in the city's building-permit procedure, although no action was taken Tuesday, Allred said. Council members discussed the possibility of having building inspectors check sites within 24 hours after permits have been filed, he said.

The discussion was prompted by a recent case in which a resident had taken out permit, and after the project was completed, it was discovered the building violated a zoning ordinance, according to Minidoka County building inspector Bill McClung.

According to county officials, building inspectors now visit construction sites at the convenience of the builder.

New housing project seeks exemption of property tax

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls County commissioners are considering exempting a new low-income housing center from property taxes.

Representatives of Valley Vista Village asked the commissioners for the exemption Monday.

The complex, being constructed by the National Benevolent Association of the Christian Church, is designed to house low-income senior citizens. The 61-unit housing project, located at 633 Rose St. N., is scheduled for occupancy around the first of June.

Valley Vista representatives asked for the exemption on the basis of the company's non-profit status.

Since the housing project has not been completed, it has not been assessed for taxing purposes. As such, county officials say they do not know what the potential property tax is.

Commission Chairman Ann Cover said the board will make a decision on the request this week.

Contractors began work on the project Oct. 1, and had planned to finish the project May 1. But poor weather conditions have pushed the deadline back one month.

In addition to the 61 one-bedroom units, the project will contain a community center, laundry facilities, a common area, business offices and a storage area with a workshop.

Each of the units will feature emergency signaling devices that will notify officials in the community center if a resident requires aid.

Participation Special Olympians place competing over winning

By CHRIS HAFT
Times-News writer

ROBERT — It's ironic that the truest athletes aren't those with the strongest bodies, the most awards and the best statistics. The pure athletes best embody, as coaches tend to say, "what it's all about," for their performances feature maximum effort. They seek neither glory nor money, and not even victory. They find joy in mere participation, a joy easily and wonderfully achieved.

More than 180 such athletes representing 12 different Magic Valley organizations for the mentally retarded competed Wednesday morning in the Special Olympics Area Games at Minico High School's track.

It was only partially an athletic event. Mostly, it was a labor of love for the organizers and volunteers, and a paradise for the retarded children and adults who revel in this opportunity to run around the track, throw softballs, high and standing long jump, play basketball and generally frolic.

"Let's put it this way," said Raddy Ashcraft, 20, when asked what he enjoyed about athletics. "In one word, everything."

Finishing first or last didn't matter. Neither did vaulting or knocking down the high jump bar. Order of finish meant nothing to the participants, who were smiles before, during and after competing in their events.

Asked if winning meant anything, Ashcraft replied, "No, not to me. I just do it for the fun of it."

The fun was apparent at the gymnasium, where referees blithely ignored traveling violations and the like during an Olympian's basketball game. One Olympian even patted an official on the back. When was the last time that happened?

The enjoyment proved contagious. The volunteers, consisting mostly of Minico students, never ceased encouraging the Olympians and cheering their efforts.

"Hello, Danny! Come see me and I'll give you a hug," a bubbly female worker urged as an athlete prepared for high jump.

"It's a tremendous feeling for everybody involved," said Bruce Clarke, director of Idaho Special Olympics. "It's great for the athletes; of course, but also for the coaches and volunteers, too."

One of the volunteers was Randy Homer, Minico's three-sport star. Homer was stationed at the high jump area, where he spends time as a member of the Spartans' track team.

Homer plainly enjoyed watching the Olympians, though what he saw also gave him some perspective. "It makes me appreciate what I've got," he said.

Timely Writer's withdrawal almost assures full 20-horse field

Air Forbes Won probably will leave gate as Derby favorite

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI) — With early choice Timely Writer out of Kentucky Derby contention because of stomach surgery, Wood Memorial victor Air Forbes Won emerged Wednesday as the likely favorite for the Derby on May 1.

"I would think Air Forbes Won ought to be the favorite right now," said Raymond Johnson, a retired Churchill Downs publicist who saw his first Derby in 1923 and spent 52 years as a sportswriter in Nashville, Tenn.

The elimination of Timely Writer — who was reported "bright and alert" at a Lexington veterinarian clinic following Tuesday night's surgery — apparently will insure a full 20-horse Derby field, Johnson predicted.

"I expect we'll have 20 horses in the Derby," Johnson said. "The top 20 money winners — no doubt about it."

Lynn Stone, president of the track, also predicted the elimination of Timely Writer from contention would push the Derby field to the 20-horse limit.

Under track rules, if more than 20 horses are entered in the Derby, only the top 20 career money winners will be allowed to start in the 1 1/4-mile racing classic.

Air Forbes Won, undefeated in four career starts and the son of 1976 Derby and Belmont Stakes winner Bold Forbes, won last Saturday's 1 1/8-mile, $175,000 Wood Memorial at Aqueduct with a strong finish against Shamateur.

After the Wood Memorial victory, trainer Frank LaBocetta said his colt "deserves to be one of the main choices in Kentucky" for the 108th Derby.

Eleven Wood Memorial winners — including four of the last seven — have managed to win the Derby, including 1981 winner Pleasant Colony.

Timely Writer, the sleek winner of the Florida Derby and Flamingo Stakes, was shipped to Lexington on Tuesday for surgery at the Hagyard-Davidson-McGee Clinic.

One of the colt's veterinarians, Dr. Paul Thorpe, said the next few days would be critical for Timely Writer, who may have developed the stomach and intestinal inflammation by eating a piece of moldy straw.

"The horse is doing very well and we believe he will recover unless something unforeseen happens," Thorpe said. "He is drinking water and eating and his intestines seem to be working properly."

The co-owner of Timely Writer said Wednesday he missed the chance of a lifetime when his colt became ill earlier this week.

"It's only once in a lifetime," sighed Peter Martin, a Boston wholesale meat supplier who owns the colt with his brother, Francis Martin of Quincy, Mass.

Martin said his family was "very, very unhappy and very dejected" over the removal of Timely Writer from Derby contention.

Martin said he never doubted the ability of his horse — his first stakes winner ever — to win the coveted Run for the Roses on May 1. "I was so sure, I knew it was going to happen," he said.

Martin indicated he didn't think the vagaries of horse racing would allow another Derby horse for him. "You don't get that opportunity too many times around."

Never another Derby horse? "Everyone lives and hopes," Martin replied.

With his surgery, Timely Writer joined the ranks of other Derby favorites forced out of contention, including Hoist the Flag, who was injured one month before the 1971 Derby. Other Derby favorites forced out of contention include Sir Gaylord, Gen. Duke, Stagehand, Equipoise, Buckpasser, Graustark, Ocean Wave and Autocrat.

Millionaire understands not to argue with pistol

EDMONTON, Alberta (UPI) — Multimillionaire sportsman Peter Pocklington said Wednesday he was "too frightened to blink" during his 11 hours in captivity at the point of a .357-magnum by hooded gunman demanding $1 million ransom.

The owner of the Edmonton Oilers hockey club was in satisfactory condition recovered from minor wounds to the chest and arm. He was grazed by the same police bullet that felled his captor to end the ordeal in Pocklington's mansion Tuesday night.

Pocklington, from his bed in the University of Alberta Hospital, said the gunman initially demanded $2 million. Police said the demand was scaled down to $1 million during marathon bargaining with police.

"Yes, I felt my life was threatened, but about 95 percent of the time, I knew I was going to make it," Pocklington reported. "It's like a hockey game. You win it, you lose it. I'm lucky to be alive."

The swashbuckling Pocklington, 40, once told an interviewer, "What a character. When some body puts a gun to your face, how many times you blink — that's character."

Reminded — of — his — remark — Pocklington said that during the detention in his lavish, Tudor-style mansion. "I was too frightened to blink."

"I thought up to this time I could handle the situation. But, when it happens, it's pretty frightening. I feel strongly for anyone who gets into that situation."

Pocklington and his captor were hospitalized under police guard at opposite ends of the fifth floor emergency ward. The gunman was in stable condition after surgery for "extensive orthopedic repair" to his right arm.

Police identified a suspect in

too scared to blink

custody as Mirko Petrovic, 29.

No charges had yet been laid, he said.

Sitting in his hospital bed, wearing only a gold chain, his chest bare and his left arm bandaged, the bearded Pocklington had no harsh words for his captor.

"Over the day, I found he was just a fellow who wanted a lot of money. It was just a business deal. We got pretty close in the situation. I felt a lot of empathy for him."

Pocklington said he was "feeling a awful lot better." His wife, Eva, spent the night by his bedside on a roll-away cot.

Hospital officials said they feared the couple may suffer "severe aftershock" from full realization of the ordeal.

Pocklington said he was thankful his wife had escaped the gunman when he tried to force her into a truck. Police spokesman Lance Beswick said the hostage-taking appeared to be an "aborted kidnapping attempt" of Mrs. Pocklington.

Asked if his wife's break for freedom was wise, Pocklington said "absolutely."

Philadelphia slaughters Hawks 111-76

By United Press International

The Philadelphia 76ers have disappointed their followers with their play in the playoffs the last few years. They lost the first round a small step to rectify the situation.

Darryl Dawkins scored 27 points, pulled down nine rebounds and blocked eight shots to propel the 76ers to 111-76 romp over the Atlanta Hawks in the opening game of their NBA Eastern Conference mini-series.

The 76ers can wrap up the best-of-three series Friday night in Atlanta. A third game, if necessary, will be played Sunday in Philadelphia.

Dawkins, who only returned to the lineup last month after suffering a broken leg in January, hit on 12 of 17 shots from the field. He sparked the Philadelphia romp with 10 points in the first quarter as Philadelphia took a 28-20 lead.

Julius Erving scored 12 of his 20 points in the second quarter, but the real story for the Sixers in that period was their defense. They held Atlanta without a field goal for the first 5:20 of the quarter and limited the Hawks to 16 points on 22 percent shooting from the field en route to a 53-38 halftime lead.

The Hawks were never in the game after that as Philadelphia's margin reached 27 points midway through the third quarter.

The Hawks were led by John Drew with 18 and Dan Roundfield added 13. The Atlanta cause was hampered in the first half when Drew and Eddie Johnson picked up their third personal fouls midway through the second quarter. Johnson, Atlanta's No. 3 scorer with a 17.8-point average, went scoreless in the first half and finished with just four points.

A tap-in by Caldwell Jones with 3:38 left in the first quarter broke a 14-14 tie and gave Philadelphia the lead for good.

The Atlanta cause was hampered in the first half when Drew and Eddie Johnson picked up their third personal fouls midway through the second quarter. Johnson, Atlanta's No. 3 scorer with a 17.8-point average, went scoreless in the first half and finished with just four points.

A tap-in by Caldwell Jones with 3:38 left in the first quarter broke a 14-14 tie and gave Philadelphia the lead for good.

Arum denied that he stood to lose hundreds of thousands of dollars if the fight was called off and said he had no financial stake in the contest.

Justice Kipper, South African vice president of the WBA, said the ruling was "incomprehensible." He said Ayala had contested only one of the rules of the WBA but there were others which allowed the fight to go ahead.

Meanwhile, Lou Duva, one of Ayala's managers, said from his Totowa, N.J., office Wednesday that he has written to Michael T. Asen, Moore's attorney, informing him that Ayala is available for a title defense on May 2.

According to Duva, Moore's contract with Weir is contingent on the bout being a title fight and that Moore has no further obligations to fight

At Seattle, Gus Williams scored 23 of his 27 points in the second half and the Seattle SuperSonics took command in the third quarter en route to a 102-87 victory over the Houston Rockets.

Game two of the series is slated for Houston Friday night.

Williams, the leading scorer for Seattle during the regular season, came alive in the third quarter after hitting just 1-of-8 from the field in the first half.

The speedy All-Star guard had six points as Seattle outscored Houston 13-4 during the final 6 1/2 minutes of the third period. Williams got his first fastbreak score of the game at the tail end of the spurt.

Moore's 90-day period ends on May 2. "No. 3 ranked Tony Ayala is available on May 2, 1992," Duva said. NBC is interested in televising the fight. We're offering Moore $300,000, the same as he's getting in South Africa, to fight Tony Ayala for the title on May 2 anywhere in the U.S."

"Davey Moore has to fight the leading available contender by May 2 or he can be stripped of his title. He cannot claim no one could put a title fight together. We're offering him the leading available contender. If he wants to fight a non-title fight and make himself unavailable and possibly lose his title, that's his business."

Atlanta extends record to 13 straight

By United Press International

Thirteen down, 149 to go. Claudell Washington's two-run single with two out in the bottom of the ninth inning Wednesday night lifted the Atlanta Braves to their major league-record 13th straight victory, a 4-3 decision over the Cincinnati Reds.

Matt Snider led off the ninth with a walk, and Rafael Ramirez followed with an infield single to start the Atlanta ninth off. Bob Shirley, 0-1. One out later, Brett Butler's grounder to short hit Snider for the second out of the inning.

A wild pitch by reliever Jim Kern and an intentional walk to pinch hitter Biff Pocoroba loaded the bases and reliever Jim Price surrendered a sharp single to center to Washington to keep intact Atlanta's perfect record.

Larry Blittner, starting only his second game of the season, belted a three-run homer in the third inning to gave the Reds a 3-0 lead. The Braves cut the gap to 3-1 on Chris Chambliss' home run leading off the fifth. It was the second homer in two nights for Chambliss, who has a 10-game hitting streak.

The Braves scored again in the seventh after Dale Murphy led off with a double and moved to third on Chambliss' long fly. After Bruce Benedict walked, Tom Hume came on in relief of starter Mario Soto. Rafael Ramirez's sacrifice fly scored Murphy but Hume got pinch hitter Ken Smith to fly out and end the inning.

At Montreal, Warren Courtie's bases-loaded sacrifice fly highlighted a three-run sixth inning as the Expos defeated Philadelphia, sending Phillies ace Steve Carlton down to his fourth straight defeat. Carlton, who lost two games to the Expos in last fall's NL divisional series, has now lost six consecutive decisions to Montreal.

At Pittsburgh, Tom Herr doubled home two runs and Gene Tenace had three hits, including a solo homer, to lead streaking St. Louis to its 10th straight victory. Starter Steve Mura, 2-0, combined with Dave LaPointe and Bruce Sutter on a five-hitter.

At New York, a two-run single by Ron Hodges highlighted a five-run eighth inning to power the Mets. Mookie Wilson led off the eighth with a single to right off Lee Smith and one out later, George Foster walked and Dave Kingman followed with an RBI single off loser Bill Campbell, 0-1. A throwing error by Larry Bowa tied the score for New York.

Underwood brothers have family day

By United Press International

Wednesday was a day to be named Underwood.

At Oakland, Calif., Joe Rudi belted a three-run homer and Jeff Newman added a two-run shot, lifting Tom Underwood and the Oakland A's to a 5-2 victory over the Minnesota Twins.

Tom's brother, Pat, checked Kansas City on four hits in the first inning to lift the Tigers to a 4-1 victory over the Royals.

The A's had only six hits, but four of them came in the fourth when they topped a scoreless tie for a lead on their way to their fifth straight triumph. A double by Tony Armas and a walk to Mickey Klutts preceded Rudi's homer and after Dave McKay singled, Newman homered to cap the rally. Oakland got all its hits off starter Darrell Jackson, 0-2.

The Twins managed eight hits off Underwood, three of them coming in the fifth when they scored their two runs. Underwood walked three and struck out three for his first victory in two decisions.

John Castino singled, Sal Butera walked and Lenny Paez singled to load the bases in the fifth. Castino scored on Gary Ward's sacrifice fly and Butera scored on Mickey Hatch's double.

At Detroit, losing pitcher Larry Gura, 1-1, the sixth left-handed starter in a row to face Detroit, walked leadoff man Chet Lemon and one out later Gibson rocketed his home run of the season into the upper deck in right center. He had beaten Kansas City Monday night with a two-run homer in the eighth inning.

At Milwaukee, Rich Gedeon's three-run double capped a six-run third inning and Dennis Eckersley notched his 100th career victory to pace the Red Sox. The loss was the eighth straight for Baltimore and their 2-9 record is their worst since the team moved to Baltimore in 1955.

Brewers 3, Toronto 1
At Milwaukee, Paul Molitor belted a two-run homer and Ted Simmons collected three hits in helping the Brewers snap a five-game losing streak. Ben Oglivie's bases-loaded walk in the seventh accounted for Milwaukee's final run.

At Chicago, Ron Gaudry fired a three-hitter and Willie Randolph drove in the only run with a fifth-inning single for the Yankees. Gaudry, 2-0, pitched his first shutout since July 23, 1980 and the 20th of his career in hurling his second straight complete game.

Rangers 4, Indians 2
At Arlington, Mike Richardson, entering the game hitting .147, drove in two runs and Doc Medich and Steve Comer scattered eight hits to spark the Texas Rangers to a 4-2 decision over the Cleveland Indians.

Olympic champs beg Congress for coins

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Five former gold medalists appeared before the House Subcommittee on Consumer Affairs and Coinage Wednesday urging passage of a commemorative coin act to provide several million dollars for the 1984 Olympics and the U.S. Olympic Committee.

Subcommittee Chairman Rep. Frank Annunzio, D-Ill., is pushing a bill that would have one coin minted and marketed by the Treasury. Rep. Fernand J. St. Germain, D-R.I., chairman of the House Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs Committee, wants a 17-coin set marketed privately.

St. Germain's bill has the backing of the Reagan administration and is similar to a bill that passed the Senate unanimously last December. Annunzio, however, plans at least two more days of hearings with several philatelists scheduled to testify.

Swimmers Donna deVarona and John Nabor, sprinter Willie Rudolph, pole vaulter Rev. Bob Richards and former Congressman Bob Mathias, Olympic gold medal winner in the decathlon in 1952 and 1956, testified Wednesday that further delays in the coin act would only expand the approximately $20 million in revenues lost by earlier delays. "We aren't asking for federal funds and don't want any," said Nabor, a member of the Board of Directors for the 1984 Olympics in Los Angeles who won the 100 and 200 meter backstroke in the 1976 Olympics at Montreal.

"We intend to divide the money evenly between the Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee and the U.S. Olympic Committee. The USOC will use its part of its funds to establish an endowment so we won't ever have to come back to Congress looking for ways to help fund our Olympic program."

St. Germain's bill is similar to one passed unanimously by the Senate last December. Rep. Jerry M. Patterson, D-Calif., Wednesday withdrew a bill he had introduced last year and became a co-sponsor of St. Germain's bill, with some modifications to ensure no cost to the federal government.

Their bill provides for private marketing, under a public bidding plan, while Annunzio's bill calls for government marketing. "I want all of the money to go to the Olympics, but they don't want that," said Annunzio.

Cousineau signs Oiler offer sheet

HOUSTON (UPI) — The Houston Oilers Wednesday confirmed that free-agent linebacker Tom Cousineau, who was chosen by Buffalo in the 1979 NFL draft but went to Canada instead, had signed an Oilers offer sheet.

The Bills, who own the NFL rights to the three-year Canadian Football League veteran, must match the Houston offer by Monday or Cousineau will become an Oilers player, officials said.

Details of the Oilers' proposal were withheld, but Houston reportedly offered the former Montreal Alouettes star a three-year package worth $1.5 million, including bonuses.

Cousineau's annual salary would be about $350,000, which would make him the second-highest paid Houston player behind quarterback Ken Stabler. It would also make him the No. 2 NFL linebacker behind Jack Lambert of Pittsburgh.

TWIN FALLS — Charles Spoonhauer, basketball's reigning room philosopher, will be the featured speaker at the College of Southern Idaho sports banquet Saturday night.

The banquet, which honors men and women from all athletic teams, will begin at 7 p.m. Saturday at the school cafeteria. Coaches of the respective teams will introduce their players, give a brief rundown of their seasons and, in some cases, present special awards to individuals for outstanding achievement.

Spoonhauer currently is assistant basketball coach at University of Nebraska but first came to Twin Falls as the head mentor of the Burlington, Ia., team that won the K and T Steel Tournament three years ago.

Although he has serious moments when he's recruiting and coaching, he doesn't have many while clinging to a lecture.

"We believe," said Athletic Director Dave Campbell, "that in Coach Spoonhauer we have one of the most, if not the most, entertaining speakers in the banquet's history."

Tickets for the banquet, $6 per person, may be purchased at the CSI athletic office or at the door Saturday evening.

Campbell said a no-host cocktail hour in the banquet room of the Rock Creek Restaurant on Addison Ave. W. will follow the formal session.

The banquet is open to all friends of the CSI athletic department.

Hornung's illness not serious

NEW YORK (UPI) — Former Green Bay Packer "Golden Boy" Paul Hornung was released from Bellevue Hospital Wednesday after doctors decided a spell of dizziness and nausea he suffered was not serious, officials said.

"Fortunately it was nothing serious. Maybe he got some bad food or something," said hospital spokesman James Walsh.

"If this happens again we told him to see his own doctor," Walsh said.

The 46-year-old former football star was admitted to the hospital Tuesday.

Hornung was an All-America quarterback at Notre Dame before coming to Green Bay as a first-round draft choice in 1957.

Russians top U.S. hockey team

HELSINKI, Finland (UPI) — Two goals each by Alexander Kozhevnikov and Victor Zhukovtsov overcame a fine performance by U.S. goalie Steve Janaszak and paced Russia to an 8-4 victory over the United States Wednesday, leaving the Americans pointless in the World Ice Hockey Championships.

Janaszak was named the American MVP for the game although he failed to halt the onslaught of the Soviets, who kept the puck in U.S. territory during most of the game.

The American goals were scored by Brian Erickson, Gordie Roberts, Gary De Grio and Bob Miller after the Russians had taken command of the game.

The match was marred by a fight between Scot Kleinendorst and Zinetula Bilyaletdinov in the second period after the Russian tripped Kleinendorst. Finnish referee Raimo Sepponen called a two-minute penalty on the Russian. But before Bilyaletdinov could leave the ice, Kleinendorst threw off his gloves and began throwing punches.

ISU signs three more cagers

POCATELLO, Idaho (UPI) — Idaho State University head basketball coach Wayne Ballard announced Wednesday that "A" junior college transfer and two more high school seniors have signed national letters-of-intent to play for the Bengals next year.

The signings brought to four the number of recruits enlisted by ISU. The latest batch of players will join Donn Holston of Highland High in Pocatello, who announced his intention to play college basketball in his home town last week.

Ballard said ISU had signed 6-foot-7, 235-pound Willard Thomas, who played last season for Barton County, Kan., College. He averaged 13.5 points and 8.4 rebounds per game for the squad last year and had a game-high 33 points against national junior college champion Midland, Texas.

The two players who will enter ISU next year as freshmen are Joe O'Neal, a 6-6 forward from Basic High School in Henderson, Nev., and 6-2 guard Pat Anderson of Colbert, Okla., High School.

O'Neal averaged 19.4 points and 15.6 rebounds per game during his senior year. Ballard said. The recruit also scored more than half of his team's total points during 10 outings last season.

Anderson was an All-State and All-Star Team from Oklahoma last year. He averaged 23.8 points, 12 rebounds, nine assists and six steals during his last year at Colbert.

Ohio State signs Jerry Lucas' son

COLUMBUS, Ohio (UPI) — Matt Valcic-Lucas, adopted son of former three-time Ohio State All-America Jerry Lucas, Wednesday signed a national basketball letter-of-intent with the Buckeyes.

The 6-3 Valcic-Lucas, who averaged 28 points, 16 rebounds, 9 assists and 4 blocked shots per game the past season for Word of Faith Academy, a non-denominational Christian school in New Orleans, La., played his first three years of high school basketball at a Christian school in Fremont, Calif., where he met Lucas' son, Jeff.

Lucas and his wife became Matt's legal guardians a year ago and later adopted him after he moved with them to New Orleans.

Lucas contacted Ohio State Coach Eldon Miller, who sent one of his assistants, Gerry Sears, to New Orleans to see Matt play.

Order bars giant oil tankers from entering Puget Sound

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Transportation Secretary Drew Lewis Wednesday signed a final rule barring super-tankers from Puget Sound in Washington state, a victory for environmentalists.

The rule replaces an interim measure imposed by the Transportation Department in 1978 after a Supreme Court ruling holding that a state limit on tanker size infringed on interstate commerce.

Environmentalists opposed the super-tankers, fearing oil spills in an area noted for recreational boating.

Under the rule, tankers of more than 125,000 deadweight tons must stay out of Puget Sound.

At the signing ceremony, Lewis noted the role of Sen. Slade Gorton, R-Wash., in following the rule-making process. "He has been extremely effective in keeping the members of the Washington state delegation informed of the issues and the results of public hearings," said Lewis.

Under the final rule, the super-tankers are prohibited from entering ports in the sound by being barred from operating in waters east of the Discovery Island and New Dungeness lights, and all waters north and south of those lights.

The department, in a news release on the signing, said the overwhelming majority of comments from individuals and organizations in the Puget Sound area favored retention of the tonnage limit.

Last summer, 12 Greenpeace members from Seattle, Wash., went cover, B.C., were arrested for disrupting Coast Guard maneuverability tests with the empty tanker B.T. San Diego, an 180,000 dwt vessel, on the Strait of Juan de Fuca east of Port Angeles at the opening of the sound.

Council to challenge Antelope vote results

ANTELOPE, Ore. (UPI) — The City Council took only a few minutes to decide unanimously to challenge the vote in an election last week townspeople hoped would keep a guru from India and his followers out of town.

City Attorney Keith Mobley said a hearing date for review of the election will be set in Wasco County Circuit Court in The Dalles. He said a contested election takes precedence over other matters on the court's docket.

Followers of the guru own the 64,000-acre Big Muddy Ranch southeast of Antelope. Residents have claimed guru followers moved into town so they could vote in the election.

The town hoped to disincorporate and become part of the county to keep the guru's followers from getting a majority in the town.

Officials forgive theft of flowers

OGDEN, Utah (UPI) — Ogden City officials say they have forgiven a woman who stole flowers from the municipal cemetery 25 years ago.

The mother of four, who declined to identify herself in a letter to the city mayor's office, said, "I have asked for the Lord's forgiveness, and now I'm asking for yours."

The woman said she was a teenager in 1957 when she and two other girls took "two armfuls of flowers" from the cemetery to decorate tables at a luncheon.

Police link tunnel fire to drunk

MARTINEZ, Calif. (UPI) — Authorities say the woman whose car stalled, possibly causing the blazing Caldecott Tunnel crash that killed seven people, was drunk.

Contra Costa Sheriff's Capt. Al Moore said blood alcohol tests performed during an autopsy of Janice Ferris, 34, San Leandro, showed a blood alcohol level of .17 percent. A person is considered intoxicated with a reading of .10 percent.

He said an Oakland laboratory conducted tests on all victims of the April 7 accident. Four of the other victims were not intoxicated, he said, while George and Kathleen Lanz of San Francisco were too badly burned to make the test of any value.

Moore emphasized that it was still too early in the investigation to know whether the blood alcohol levels in Ms. Ferris' body had any bearing on the accident.

Sgt. Jim Mattos of the California Highway Patrol said that if Ms. Ferris had been drunk and her car was not moving, "That could have been what was going on with the accident. But it might not have had an effect. At 17, you are not falling-down drunk. But anyone driving with that blood alcohol level is substantially impaired."

A spokesman for the CHP said that its report in the accident would be released in about two weeks.

Accounts of the accident say an AC-Transit bus struck a gasoline tanker after swerving to avoid the Ferris car, which apparently had stalled in the left-hand lane of the tunnel's north bore.

The tanker overturned, spilling part of its 8,000 gallons of gasoline, which exploded and caused the prices have bottomed out and pump prices could climb 20 cents a gallon by the end of year.

"The declining price levels we've been experiencing cannot continue indefinitely," George M. Keller said.

"In the present surplus market, most refiners and marketers are not even recovering their full costs."

The current oil glut could be gone by the end of this year if the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries maintains its 17.5 million barrels-a-day production ceiling, he said.

Keller said if OPEC nations cut production further—crude oil prices would soon stabilize at $32 to $34 a barrel.

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The chairman of Standard Oil of California says gasoline prices have bottomed out and pump prices could climb 20 cents a gallon by the end of year.

Penthouse trial juror sent home

COMPTON, Calif. (UPI) — Superior Court Judge Kenneth Gale Wednesday dismissed a juror from the $522 million libel suit filed against Penthouse magazine by Rancho La Costa resort following a closed session in chambers.

No official explanation for the dismissal was given, but Penthouse attorney Michael Aguirre said La Costa lawyers had asked that juror Adrian DeDoe be dismissed because he was seen laughing at Aguirre as jurors filed out of the courtroom.

DeDoe, of Long Beach, Calif., left the courtroom saying he did not know why he was dismissed, only that he had allegedly "touched someone."

One of five alternate jurors replaced DeDoe as the trial moved into the third day of final arguments.
