

Fierce fighting breaks out

By United Press International

Waves of British marines and paratroopers invaded the Falkland Islands Friday but were met by Argentine counterattacks in fierce land, sea and air battles.

Fighting began before dawn and raged on into the night. Both sides suffered heavy losses.

"The Union Jack flies again on the Falkland Islands," said a report from the British fleet. "We are here to stay."

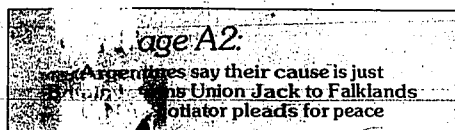

But Argentina said British invasion troops on the island — estimated by British defense sources at as many as 2,500 men — were being pounded by Argentine forces on the ground, backed by Argentine fighters and naval forces.

"We're thrashing them," said one military source in Buenos Aires. Britain reported casualties on both sides but had no figures beyond 21 men killed in the crash of one of its helicopters.

Argentina said the British suffered "heavy loss of life" as its troops, initially taken by surprise, "hurled themselves at the English," inflicting casualties and "throwing back the assault."

"The enemy forces that succeeded in landing are being attacked by units of the regular army with the support of the aircraft of the army, navy and air force stationed in the islands," the military junta said.

The junta claimed its jet fighters hit eight British frigates and two of the ships were believed to have sunk. It also said three British Sea Harrier jets and down in Friday. British special forces were shot down and damaged. Argentina admitted losing three frigates and two helicopters.

Exactly seven weeks ago, British forces "are tonight firmly established back on the Falkland Islands," Defense Secretary John Nott announced in London, leaving no doubt the troops were there to stay.

"A secure land base is being consolidated," he said. "Argentine forces have suffered some casualties and some prisoners have been taken."

"These are the most marvelous fighting forces in the world," said

Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher. "They're courageous, they're dedicated and they're fighting a just cause."

Spearheaded by 1,000 crack Marines and paratroopers, the invasion began by the light of the moon as scores of landing craft swept ashore.

Argentina struck back at dawn sending waves of Mirage and Skyhawk jetfighters to attack the fleet from their mainland air bases 450 miles away. The battle raged throughout the day and on into the next night.

Cartwheeling dogfights erupted in the clear skies as British Sea Harriers protecting the fleet met the attackers.

"The Argentinians were followed by their A4s," Nicholson said. "They came in very low from the West ... then turned into our anchorage and bombed. Two bombs fell just ahead of us, a third fell wide.

"We can actually see our missiles chasing the aircraft, zig-zagging and chasing as the Argentine pilots wildly maneuver their planes to escape."

A British spokesman said British Harriers jets and missiles destroyed 17 Argentine planes — nine Mirage, five Skyhawks and three Pucaras.

"Two Argentine helicopters, a Chinook and a Puma, have been destroyed on the ground. We have lost two of our small helicopters."

In Buenos Aires, a military spokesman conceded British forces had established a beachhead near Port San Carlos in the northwestern tip of the island. "It will be exterminated," a spokesman said.

Reagan: No U.S. troops

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan pledged Friday no American troops will be sent to the Falkland Islands.

But Reagan left open the possibility of U.S. forces aiding the British war effort by providing fuel elsewhere.

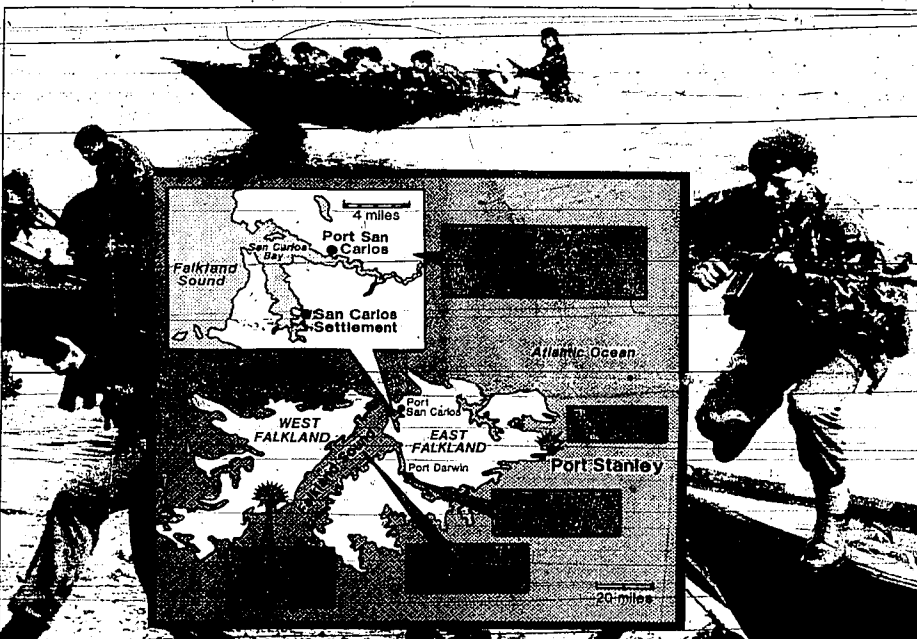

"Let me emphasize there will be no involvement whatsoever of U.S. military personnel in the conflict in the South Atlantic," deputy press secretary Larry Speakes said in a carefully worded statement that he said reflected the president's thinking.

By confining the pledge to the actual war zone around the islands claimed by both Britain and Argentina, the United States does not close out the option that U.S. troops could free up additional British troops by taking over their roles elsewhere.

Administration sources said Thursday that a number of U.S. Air Force KC-135 refueling tankers and their American crews have been made available to the British command in England and Europe. That would allow the British to reassign their own Victory tankers for South Atlantic duty.

The New York Times reported the administration also is prepared to provide radar, missiles and other arms to the British if needed.

'We're going ashore'

LONDON (UPI) — "They did it by moonlight, silently and successfully," a British television reporter declared Friday in the first eyewitness account of the British invasion of the Falkland Islands.

Michael Nicholson, a correspondent for Independent Television with the British fleet, told of the pre-dawn assault from at least 20 British ships assembled in the narrow channel dividing East and West Falkland Islands.

"Tonight the Union Jack flies again on the Falkland Islands," Nicholson told a television program by telephone. "They did it by moonlight, silently and successfully. They landed in their thousands," he said.

"The first landing craft hit the beaches a little after 6:30 local time (2:30 a.m. MDT), and with black faces heavily camouflaged, carrying enormous packs with mortars, machine guns, anti-tank rockets, all strapped to their backs, they clambered down the rope netting at the side of the mother ship into their landing craft.

"The landing craft were queuing up along side these ships like taxis. The men were cheerful. They were patient because they had to wait for a place,

Senate Republicans muzzle Democrats, complete budget

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Republican-controlled Senate, rejecting nearly every Democratic amendment, Friday rubber-stamped a 1983 budget with a deficit of nearly $116 billion.

The $784 billion spending plan was written by Senate Republican leaders.

The final vote was 49-43, generally along party lines. Republicans voting against the budget were Jesse Helms of North Carolina and Lowell Weicker of Connecticut. Democrats voting for the budget were Howell Heflin of Alabama, John Stennis of Mississippi and Edward Zorinsky of Nebraska.

President Reagan endorsed an earlier version of the plan that contained $4 billion in deficit reduction "savings" in Social Security, a provision Republican leaders later decided to appease mavericks within their ranks that had threatened to vote against it.

Once the Democratic-dominated House, which started its budget debate Friday, passes its resolution, the two versions will go to a joint Senate-House conference committee to split the differences. Each chamber, then will have to vote final approval of the resulting compromise.

The Senate budget resolution would freeze most non-military spending for the next three years at 1982 levels, eliminate cost-of-living increases for pensions except Social Security and railroad retirement for one year and limit increases to 4 percent the next two years.

It also would reduce defense growth by about $2 billion from Reagan's request, eliminate federal civilian pay raises in 1983 and limit increases to 4 percent the next two years, and seek $107 billion in new tax revenue.

The Republican majority defeated more than 30 amendments since the debate began a week ago. Most of them, by Democrats, attempted to balloon the budget by adding money to programs to help the poor, the elderly, the jobless, veterans, handicapped and disadvantaged school children.

The Republicans defeated attempts by Democrats to repeal the 10 percent individual income tax cut scheduled for July 1983 and to repeal the indexing of income tax rates to inflation, which begins in 1985 — both key parts of Reagan's economic program that he had declared untouchable.

They also beat back attempts to cut defense spending further, and to try to balance the budget by 1985 by raising more in tax revenue.

Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo., complained the deficit in the budget is too large to send the right signal to the financial community and allow interest rates to fall. Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., told his colleagues the budget "prescribes ever deeper cuts in programs for the elderly, the sick, the needy, and families trying to education their children.

"And it insists on these massive reductions in order to preserve the administration's unfair tax cut for the rich and its unwise plan for escalating the nuclear arms race," Kennedy said.

"It is now up to the House of Representatives to redeem the public interest in budget policy," he declared.

The House began its budget debate with Democratic leaders urging their members to slick together this year. Conservative "Boll Weevils" defected to give Reagan his budget and tax-cut victories last year.

In a strongly worded letter, House Speaker Thomas O'Neill and other Democratic leaders urged their members to support the resolution approved by the Democratic-led House Budget Committee.

"It is important that the Democratic Party establish a benchmark for all to see that fiscal responsibility can be achieved without inflicting punishment or lacking compassion for those in our society who are in need," the letter said.

Parole board wipes out Sirhan's freedom date

SIRHAN SIRHAN No parole in 1984

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI) — The California parole board, citing Sirhan "Bizarro" Sirhan's continued erratic behavior, Friday canceled the 1984 parole of the man who assassinated Sen. Robert Kennedy in 1968.

Officials at the state prison in Soledad told Sirhan of the decision, and said he remained passive and apparently expected the cancellation.

His attorney, Luke McKissack, said Sirhan "seemed despondent" when he talked briefly with the inmate by telephone.

"Let's face it, he's a despised person," McKissack said. "I would look into appealing the rejection decision in court, but not for awhile."

The board's decision recommended a psychiatric study of Sirhan before officials meet in November to consider whether he should receive a new parole date.

Board of Prison Terms Chairman Ray Brown, in announcing the decision at the state capital in Sacramento, said parole officials who granted the parole in 1975 made fundamental errors and did not have sufficient information about Sirhan's state of mind.

"In the imprudent granting of a parole date, fundamental errors occurred," Brown said in announcing the decision.

He said the 1975 panel mistakenly assumed it was required to set a date because of the state Supreme Court ruling which overturned the death penalty three years earlier, and took Sirhan off death row.

Brown also referred to Sirhan's "Bizarro" behavior, which would seek an alliance with the Soviet Union, and his angry statement in January that he "would turn the Arabs loose to get him out of prison dead or alive."

Brown, however, discounted prison hearsay that Sirhan plotted the death of Sen. Edward Kennedy and the theft of nuclear materials for Libya if released.

"Sirhan took it passively," said officer Jim Esten in Soledad. "He nodded his head several times and said 'Uh huh.' He appeared to gri his teeth. He had a piece of paper with him to take notes, and if I had to guess, he expected it judging from his expression."

Sirhan's chances for obtaining another parole date are slim. Brown said the board would consider whether he should be paroled again at a hearing in six months.

In saying that Sirhan was a despondent man, attorney McKissack referred in part to the public campaign led by Los Angeles County District Attorney John Van de Kamp that led to the 10-day recession hearing which concluded at Soledad prison May 10.

Van de Kamp, a candidate for state attorney general, contended that Sirhan should never be released, that killing a U.S. senator and presidential candidate was too great an attack on society.

But Brown said public pressure had no effect on the board's decision.

"Public outcry was not an issue ... I know there's an election coming up but this decision didn't evolve from an election. Some of the information we considered wasn't known until 1981."

Sirhan, 38, would have spent 16 years in prison by the time of his parole in 1984. He said he intended to settle in Jordan where his father still lives.

An immigrant living his family in the Los Angeles suburb of Pasadena, Sirhan shot and killed Kennedy on June 5, 1968. The crime was minutes after Kennedy was acclaimed the winner of California's Democratic presidential primary.

Today's briefing

British tactics attempt to demoralize troops

LONDON (UPI) — The British landings on the Falkland Islands Friday were part of a four-part military plan to demoralize Argentine troops at the point where they eventually surrender with the minimum loss of life on both sides, defense sources said.

The other three points in Britain's strategy of bringing psychological pressure to bear are isolation of the Argentine troops — thought to number about 9,000 — from mainland resupply of food, water, ammunition and mail; almost daily bombardment by sea and air of troops; and the old-fashioned use of propaganda radio broadcasts.

"You must remember that majority of Argentine troops on the Falklands are teenage conscripts not used to this kind of thing," one naval source said. "Their morale will be sinking each day as the fundamental realization sinks in that they will not be rescued but face being gradually wiped out."

Other defense sources said Friday's hit-and-run raids, like the one which destroyed 21 aircraft on a remote grass airstrip on Pebble Island last weekend, may change into hit-and-hold raids as Argentine defensive weaknesses are found.

The simultaneous raids were aimed not only at destroying specific ground targets but also to confuse and stretch the defending troops, the sources said.

British troops raise flag on Falklands

U.N. Secretary-General pleads for cease-fire

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar, in a losing race against time, urged the warring sides to accept a cease-fire Friday.

Argentine and British delegates blamed "one another for the failed peace talks."

"The prospect which faces us is one of destruction, continuing conflict and, above all, the loss of many, many young lives," Perez de Cuellar told an emergency meeting of the Security Council.

"Efforts must continue to find the means of avoiding this and restoring peace. There is no other course."

The council called an emergency meeting open to the public, to consider its next move after Perez de Cuellar's 12-day mediation effort between Britain and Argentina collapsed Thursday.

Argentina's Undersecretary for Foreign Affairs, Enrique Ros, told the meeting Britain "adopted an attitude of intransigence and based its demands on the negotiations." He charged Britain wanted to "artificially maintain... a colonial situation."

British Ambassador Sir Anthony Parsons accused Argentina of grossly violating the basic principles of the 1948 Charter by invading the Falklands April 2. After the negotiations failed, he said, Britain acted in self-defense.

Parsons said, "It makes a mockery of the right to self-determination for Argentina to attempt to replace a democratic government and democratically elected bodies in the Falkland Islands with a military dictatorship."

"The rights of the people of the Falkland Islands have been trampled by the invaders," he said.

British helicopter in Chile

LONDON (UPI) — A chartered Sea King helicopter abandoned on the west coast of Chile Sunday, it is believed British forces on the Falklands had extended their operations to the Argentine mainland, press reports said Friday.

The helicopter, which appeared to have been deliberately torched by an incendiary grenade thrown by its crew, was found Thursday outside the Chilean town Punta Arenas — a few miles from the Argentine border.

Chile protested the incident but withdrew its protest saying it was satisfied with Britain's explanations that the helicopter was lost in bad weather on a reconnaissance mission, Foreign Minister Rene Rojas said.

U.S. denies plot

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (UPI) — U.S. Ambassador Harry Shuldsman Friday categorically denied he has been trying to destabilize the Argentine military regime to gain advantage for Britain in the Falklands crisis.

Reports of U.S. attempts to upset the government are part of a campaign of "disinformation" aimed at widening the differences between Argentina and the United States, he said.

Argentina suffered far greater losses in the first seven weeks of the Falkland Islands fighting, but after the British counter-invasion Friday Britain's casualties were starting to mount.

In London, the Ministry of Defense said 21 men were missing and presumed dead in a helicopter crash in the counter-invasion, but Secretary John Nott said there were more casualties on both sides to be reported later.

Previously, Britain had lost 24 troops — 20 in the sinking of the destroyer HMS Sheffield, and three Sea Harrier pilots who crashed or were shot down and one helicopter crewman.

The Argentines had reported more than 400 war dead. Although it did not specify the circumstances behind all the casualties, several hundred were known lost in the May 3 torpedo attack on the cruiser General Belgrano.

Snow could affect battles

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The weather has improved in the Falkland Islands, but snow and high winds may be hitting Britain's invading forces, the U.S. National Weather Service said Friday.

An infrared satellite photograph of the area showed that East Falkland and the west coast of the island had snow on the ground, said a spokesman for the agency's weather satellite operation.

"There is some scattered cloudiness on the southwestern shores of West Falkland, probably snow showers," he said. "Conditions would be windier than normal also."

Two sides fought in 1800s

LONDON (UPI) — Britain fought the country that now is Argentina once before in 1806-07 and lost.

A British fleet with a landing force of 1,600 men under the command of Sir Home Popham invaded the Spanish viceroyalty of La Plata that year, trying to do to Spain what Argentina did to Britain on April 2 when it captured the Falkland Islands.

The invasion of Buenos Aires, and a larger one the following year, proved to be the impetus to the creation of a national assembly on May 25, 1810, and Argentina's independence on July 9, 1816.

Minority opposes fighting

LONDON (UPI) — For the first time since the Falkland Islands were occupied by Argentina seven weeks ago, there was a significant split Friday in parliament's support for Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's policy.

The split was nowhere near important enough to have any effect on Mrs. Thatcher's current strategy to use military force. But it did show up clearly a segment of minority British opinion which opposes military action at any cost.

Britons, Argentines proud

Government's good news cheered in Argentina

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (UPI) — Argentines cheered government reports that their forces were repelling the long-awaited British invasion of the Falklands Friday but showed concern over the cost of saving national pride.

A crowd of about 200 men shouted and broke into the national anthem as the reports of Argentine counter-attacks and victories were placed on a billboard next to La Nacion newspaper office on a downtown Buenos Aires street.

"People are euphoric," said a businessman. "All they hear on the radio are victories: British planes shot down, British ships sunk."

Union Minister Nicanor Costa Mendez, who conferred with President Leopoldo Galtieri and other Junta members early in the morning, was expected to fly to New York Saturday to present Argentina's case to the U.N. Security Council.

A radio report from the islands, chief of the Rev. Pedro Fernandez, said the Argentine troops were facing the invasion with "great faith, confidence and optimism."

The defiant mood of the nation was summed up by an inscription on billboards that have appeared throughout Buenos Aires over the past few days.

The words are a Spanish translation of the American Declaration of Independence, accusing the British crown of murder, invasion, and violations of human and property rights.

The signs reflect the almost unanimous belief among Argentines that the Falklands, known by their Spanish name of Malvinas, were unjustly seized by Britain in the 19th century and must be returned to Argentine control.

But while the initial victories broadcast over the government-controlled radio and television were sweet, many people still were waiting for the inevitable reports on Argentine casualties and losses.

"This is really very sad," said a balding shoeshine man, Ruben Camelo, 50, as he bent over a customer. "Death and destruction never helped anybody. They should work it like ancient times and have the leaders fight each other out front instead of push buttons in an office."

An office worker, Manuel Vacilar, 30, said the new fighting was "sad but inevitable."

"The young will suffer. There will be a lot of deaths. But this is the way nations settle disputes, unfortunately."

Luis Corte, 35, a photographer impeccably dressed in a brown tweed suit, said, "We feel our cause is just, but this won't be settled until many lives are spent and many bodies are fired." We hold our breath before each battle and then watch for the outcome."

An elderly bank employee, asked his reaction on the street, huffed and said, "Frankly, I don't believe anything I hear any more from either side and don't know what to believe. It's all a shame, that's what I can say."

The government-controlled radio station does not report Argentine casualties or British victories. Most of the unfavorable news ends up on the inside pages of the next day's newspapers.

News of invasion heard at Briton dinner tables

LONDON (UPI) — Britons cheered the Falklands invasion from their dinner tables and living rooms Friday and Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher wished her troops "God speed" in the fierce fighting.

"Tonight the Union Jack is flying again on the Falkland Islands," reporter Michael Nicholson told home folks crowded around the television sets in the first eyewitness account of the invasion to be heard in Britain.

"We've done so well, it makes me want to polish my army boots and join them," said William Finch, 52, watching TV at home in Manchester, England.

"The sooner the better," joked his wife. "From the doorstep of 10 Downing Street, Mrs. Thatcher praised her combat troops."

"We've got marvelous fighting forces," she said. "They are fighting a just cause and we wish them God speed. Everyone's behind them. I don't think we only in this country but also many countries elsewhere."

The war dominated the dinner conversation at the home of London attorney David Roberts.

"I think we all agreed this should have happened in the very beginning," Ravden told UPI.

"But the government procrastinated to gain public opinion and now Argentina has the advance. We've treated Argentina with kid gloves. Now the Argentines have built up their troops, they have had time to check out our forces, our plans, it's all a joke."

A south London housewife expressed doubts about war. "I'm very worried," said Mrs. Anne Jenks. "The politicians are sitting down doing the talking and the young men out there are losing their lives."

One eyewitness television report told of British commandos finding a small village of "white stone buildings" and 30 "inhabitants" huddled in a makeshift bomb shelter.

"We're praying," said Bill Christie, president of the Falkland Islands Association, who heard the report in London.

In central London, in Piccadilly Circus and Leicester Square, the familiar scene of bright lights and smiling crowds was unchanged. Londoners and tourists out for the evening missed the television news flashes and were unaware of the latest developments.

Homegoing subway commuters seemed just as oblivious.

One couple compared notes on Andrew Lloyd Webber's new dance concert, a girl in red-and-white striped miniskirt and red nose expounded on the rock concert she had just attended.

material will be carefully evaluated on a case by case basis.

It was understood that all transactions will be on a "cash and carry" basis.

But both Speakes and State Dept. spokesman Dean Fischer said they would not discuss any details of any British request for assistance "or how we are responding."

British Ambassador Nicholas Nicholson called on Secretary of State Alexander Haig Friday morning to discuss the escalation of the fighting that followed the collapse of a mediation effort by U.N. Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar.

Henderson said after the meeting

Haig is aware of Britain's desire for a negotiated settlement, as well as its determination to "secure the withdrawal of Argentine forces" that seized the islands from Britain April 2.

"He always knew that those were not simply empty words by us but that we had the capability and will to ensure it," Henderson said.

While Henderson met with Haig, Argentine Ambassador Esteban Takacs met with Thomas Enders, the British secretary of state for Latin America.

Henderson said he briefed Haig on the "evolving military situation in the South Atlantic."

Although the discussions did not touch on any new peace initiatives, he said, "Secretary Haig will always be busy if, when the moment comes to play an important, not to say a decisive, part."

Henderson also declined to discuss any possible American aid, but said, "I'm in no doubt about the solidity, the integrity of U.S. support."

The White House statement was issued after Reagan received a personal briefing about the escalated fighting on the disputed islands and attended a National Security Council meeting.

It reiterated the administration stand that the United States will honor its commitments to Britain, but that Washington is ready to help in the search for peace.

drinking mugs of tea and hot cocoa on the deck.

"We're going ashore," one commander told Nicholson as he dropped into one of the assault crafts.

"We're going to land on the beach in landing craft. We're going to clear the immediate area and establish a beachhead. Then I'm going to move up onto the high ground and establish defensive positions on the reverse slopes," the commander said.

Nicholson said the assault from the first man to the last man ashore took just over four hours.

"As the last landing craft left us it was just beginning to get light and we could hear naval bombardments on the high ground just beyond us which was a known Argentinean troop position. In less than 15 minutes they'd bombarded that position with over sixty shells," Nicholson said.

Nicholson, from his vantage point on a ship in Falkland Sound, said the British troops and Scorpion tanks were clearly visible moving across the ground in brilliant, cold morning light.

"Already we know that they had unopposed landings at least in all but one of them. We could hear some firing when we passed in our ship at the beginning of a sound, he said.

"We could see the troops filing across the open moorlands, looking a little like Scotland, crouching, sometimes running then crouching again, running from one hillcock and one protest mound to the next.

"We could also see the Scorpion light tanks moving ahead of the infantry and minutes ago I watched as they spread out in line behind the tanks, moving towards a number of houses and we saw earlier on some smoke coming from some of those buildings.

The greatest fear of the troops on the ground and in the 20-ship invasion fleet bobbing in Falkland Sound was attack by Argentine jet fighters.

Judge tells restless Hinckley to stay put

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Warning that John W. Hinckley's restless departures from the courtroom may be affecting the jury, a federal judge told defense attorneys Friday that "the chief state of his mind is to stay."

Added to the ruling, Hinckley sat still while a Yale University psychologist testified the 26-year-old drifter might never have shot President Reagan if someone had predicted his fantasies by telling him "it was wrong."

Dr. Ernst Prelinger, under cross-examination by a federal prosecutor, said Hinckley's actions in attacking Reagan on March 30, 1981, "were dictated by a set of fantasies that had been there for a long time."

Prelinger also quoted Hinckley as telling him after his arrest that as a child, "I usually ended up getting what I wanted, one way or the other."

With the lawyers in the case huddled at the bench, U.S. District Judge Bartzinger Parker flushed his anger over Hinckley's failure to remain standing when he entered the courtroom at the start of the day.

"When I take the bench, I expect him to stand," Parker told defense attorney Vincent Fuller.

"Then the judge denied a request by Hinckley's attorney for his client to leave a court session for the fourth time since the trial began."

"He either stays or he doesn't stay," said Parker. "I don't know what to make of it, but I can see that it can have possibly an impact on this jury."

"Feeling that this is an open door that he can come and go according to his whims, I am not going to have it and I expect him to act as any other defendant in a criminal case when this court comes on the bench."

"Now if he wants to leave... he is not going to have that door as a revolving door."

Fuller told the judge he could not "control" Hinckley, whom he earlier described as a "very charged individual."

He referred to Hinckley's decision to stalk from the courtroom last week when actress Jodie Foster testified on videotape she had no relationship with Hinckley and to Hinckley's two other departures this week when he was feeling restless.

"Well I can control," Parker said. "The next time he does it... I won't let it go unnoticed."

Prelinger testified Thursday that based on clinical psychological tests administered to Hinckley in prison in the five weeks after the shooting, he suffered from severe mental illness.

On Friday, wrapping up two days of cross-examination by a prosecutor, Prelinger said Hinckley told authorities after his arrest that he "knew nothing about the shooting."

Reagan approves global military strategy

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan has approved a tough global military strategy aimed at shrinking the Soviet empire and persuading the Kremlin to turn its attention to "bullets, not guns," his national security adviser said Friday.

William Clark delivered the administration's first comprehensive statement on national security strategy in a speech at the Center for Strategic and International Studies at Georgetown University.

White House officials said the administration is in the process of developing coordinated diplomatic, political, economic and informational strategies.

"It is our fondest hope that with an active yet prudent national security policy, we might one day convince the leadership of the Soviet Union to turn their attention inward, to seek the legitimacy that only comes from the consent of the governed, and thus to address the hopes and dreams of their own people," Clark said.

The statement, which critics have been demanding for more than a year, summarizes policy the administration has been developing since Oct. 2 when the president unveiled his $180 billion program to modernize the strategic nuclear force.

It comes less than a month before a NATO summit in Bonn and at a time when the United States is seeking to open strategic arms negotiations with the Soviet Union.

It also deals specifically with the MX missile. The Senate has withheld $2 billion the administration seeks for production of the first nine missiles until the administration decides on a permanent basing method.

Hatch thinks Donovan should study quitting

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Senate Labor chairman Orrin Hatch offered a veiled suggestion that embattled Labor Secretary Raymond Donovan consider resigning because of damage to the Reagan administration, a syndicated columnist said Friday.

In an interview with columnist Donald Lambro, Hatch fed growing reports of unrest in the White House and Capitol Hill over continuing attention to allegations that Donovan has ties to organized crime.

The interview was conducted Thursday of last week, a day before a reported death threat was made to a Senate investigator looking into the allegations against Donovan.

Donovan spokesman Vernon Louviere said Friday the secretary had no comment on the resignation issue.

RAYMOND DONOVAN
Opposition grows at Capitol

Communications Workers Union President Glenn Watts Thursday called for Donovan to resign in the aftermath of the death threat report and what he said was ineptitude in operating the department. But AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland disagreed Friday.

"My feeling is that the post has been largely unoccupied for about a year and a half now, at least in terms of the statutory obligations of the office, which are to advance and defend the interests of working men and women," Kirkland told a news conference in Hartford, Conn.

"My personal view is that the question of the accusations, the allegations that have been made about him are still resting in the judiciary and ought not to afford a judgment at this time."

Kirkland said Donovan "has been following instructions to cut back drastically on the programs that are of vital concern to the well-being of working people," and added, "I'm not under any illusion that his departure would alter that."

Lambro reported that Hatch maintained during the interview his posture of giving Donovan the benefit of the doubt about the allegations he is tied to organized crime.

Lambro said Hatch then added, speaking carefully, "But you know everybody reaches a point where you have to make an analysis of whether you are helping the administration or hindering it."

Armenian teen pleads innocent

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — An Armenian teenager pleaded innocent Friday to charges he assassinated the Turkish consul general in a daylight ambush earlier this year. He was ordered to stand trial July 14.

Hampig "Harry" Sassounian, 19, could face the death penalty if convicted because of the allegation Consul General Kemal Arlikan was shot because of his nationality.

Arlikan was killed Jan. 28 when two men ambushed his car at a busy intersection and riddled him with bullets. A second suspect in the shooting, Krikor Saliba, is being sought.

McClure waits on lawsuit over Birds of Prey study

BOISE (UPI) — Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho, will introduce legislation to stop the withdrawal of 482,000 acres for the proposed Snake River Birds of Prey National Conservation Area until a lawsuit contesting the validity of environmental studies is resolved.

With a lawsuit clouding the Senate issue, the study is unlikely to come into the field and hold hearings before legislation is introduced, McClure aide James Collier told the Sheep Producer/Environmentalist Committee.

McClure, who was scheduled to address the meeting of the regional organization representing environmentalists and wool growers, was unable to do so because of budget deliberations in Congress.

Sagebrush Rebellion Inc. filed a lawsuit over the Birds of Prey Area in southwestern Idaho, contending that the environmental impact statement was inadequate.

Rayola Jacobson of Grand View, secretary of the organization, said if the court upholds the study was not adequate, former Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus' withdrawal of the area would be declared "null and void and we go back to square

Surplus federal land inventory rapped

BOISE (UPI) — Environmentalists from western states attacked President Reagan's program to inventory surplus federal land Friday, saying his approach to reducing the national debt is being conducted in secret.

Idaho Conservation League Director Pat Ford told delegates to a meeting of the regional Sheep Producer/Environmentalist Committee he was "fearful" of the Federal Property Review Board established by Reagan to target public land for sales.

"There's something happening in the White House that we don't know what it's about, and a lot of it is scary," Ford said.

Members of the committee, designed to open channels of communication between conservationists and the region's wool growers, first questioned Rep. Larry Craig, R-Idaho, their luncheon speaker, about the possibility of federal land sales.

Then, they hotly debated the issue during an afternoon session featuring a representative of the Montana Wilderness Society, Max Rogers of the office of Idaho Sen. James McClure and Idaho Bureau of Land Management Director Clair Whitlock.

"You may be upset about the sale of public land, but it's not coming from my side of the fence," said Jeff Sideaway, a sheep rancher from St. Anthony, Idaho, in response to Ford's comments. "I'd just as soon get rid of all of it (federally owned land) except naval bases and experiment stations."

But Bob Klesling, a representative of the Nature Conservancy of Helena, Mont., said environmentalists "aren't upset with the sale per se, it's the mechanism — procedures they're using" in targeting land for disposal.

Reagan has issued a presidential order, requiring federal agencies to earmark land that could be sold. The purpose of the inventory is to attempt to raise roughly $17 billion to help reduce the national debt.

Whitlock said the BLM's inventory has been completed — and he has been ordered not to release the acreage figures. The information has been forwarded to the property review board, he said.

While some attending the meeting said the review was no different from wilderness inventories completed under the Carter administration, Whitlock said the difference was timing.

Craig, however, said he had been unaware that the inventory process had been secret — and he vowed to seek the data "as soon as I get back in Washington on Monday."

Tax hike considered

BOISE (UPI) — Gov. John Evans said Friday he will consider recommending tax increases to get the state back on its financial feet in fiscal year 1983 and beyond — but only if the economy remains depressed and spending cuts can't be stretched far enough to balance the budget.

The Democrat said the state must keep its education system financially stable and "not let" administrators and legislators must consider possible tax increases and other revenue-boosting steps.

He said officials have a "heavy responsibility" to maintain education programs. "We can't short-change the future... If it's necessary go to the people and ask for some tax increases," his staff will consider taxing options, he said.

Schools end up with more money

BOISE (UPI) — While agency administrators scurry to prevent a projected $12.1 million budget deficit, state officials say Idaho's public schools will end up with more money than was originally budgeted.

The Public School Endowment Fund and the Oil and Gas Lease Fund will generate at least $1 million more than the state Education Department expected, Idaho Public Instruction Superintendent Jerry Evans told the Idaho Press-Tribune in Nampa Thursday.

But that extra money won't be used automatically to help offset the predicted $3.9 million Idaho taxpayers may have to pay in additional property taxes to make up for the projected budget shortfall.

Evans said unless some special action is taken by the Legislature or the state Board of Examiners prior to June 30 when the fiscal year ends, the deficiency levy designed to maintain public school funding despite cutbacks in other programs "will be implemented as the law provides."

Batt skips payday

BOISE (UPI) — Gubernatorial candidate Phil Batt says he will pass up his June lieutenant governor's salary in response to Gov. John Evans' request for budget reductions to offset an expected $12.1 million general account deficit this fiscal year.

The GOP gubernatorial candidate said he chose to forego his salary, rather than furloughing his one employee, so that his office won't be closed one day each week.

Idaho statutes require that state offices remain open for business five days a week, he said.

The announcement came as the state's roughly 7,000 general-fund workers took Friday off for the second week in a row.

Change timber policy

COLEUR D'ALENE (UPI) — The Idaho Land Board could help the wood-products industry in 30 days if it altered its timber-sale policies, Attorney General David Leroy said Friday.

"It is good business and good government for the state to keep our timber industry working and competitive in this time of economic downturn," Leroy said during a round of business and campaign meetings in North Idaho.

Road still not cleared

BOISE (UPI) — For the first time in years, the portion of the Idaho 21 between Grandjean and Stanley will not be cleared in time for Memorial Day.

State transportation officials say it's impossible to open the road before mid-June because of heavy snow, slides, dangerous conditions — and tight budgets.

Meanwhile, business owners from Idaho City to Stanley are hurting, and they've been waiting for the holiday rush to help them out.

What's what

Typical human produces 15 pounds of hair in a lifetime. Oldest known fruit is the fig. Woodrow Wilson kept 48 sheep on the White House lawn. Three out of 10 high school students eat no breakfast. Takes 15,200 turnip seeds to weigh an ounce. The more beautiful the coed, the less happy she is 25 years later, some studies suggest. Pennsylvania got around to outlawing the scalping of Indians in 1951.

Q. Do any Arabs ice skate?
A. Evidently; Moslem Kuwait has two rinks in a new ice complex, one for men, the other for women.

No fulltime babysitter should forget that "Alma Mater" is Latin for "foster mother."

CRACKER JACK DOG

Q. Want to play "Name That Dog"? Okay, how about the dog on the "Cracker Jack" box?
A. Bingo is that canine's moniker.

Did the electronic parts in your 1981 car, if such you own, add much to the price of that automobile? Shouldn't have. Such parts in the average 1981 model were only valued at about $94.

Q. You said the most popular monogram initial is "M." What's the least popular?
A. "X."

TO DYE A DOG

Sir, the tint your lady rinses into her hair, if any, is not ting for canines. Yet say it's apt to irritate the animal's skin. Those groomers who think it quaint to dye their showdogs use food coloring.

Do you hand out your business cards? If so, do you ever recall an instance wherein the party you gave it to actually looked at it? Almost invariably, a recipient just pockets such a card as though compelled not to read it in your presence.

Thomas Gainsborough painted his famous "Blue Boy" to prove his contention that blue painting need not be dull. Question: Did he prove it?

Q. How many of Stradivari's violins still exist?
A. At least 600. Most of these are still played by top violinists.

Falwell speech interrupted

CANBERRA, Australia (UPI) — About 40 irate demonstrators burst into a press luncheon for Moral Majority leader Jerry Falwell Friday, disrupting his nationally-broadcast speech with taunts of "fascist!" and challenges to walk on water.

Falwell was greeted at Canberra's National Press Club by some 150 shouting protesters — some dressed as members of the Klu Klux Klan — who called themselves, "The Moral Monopoly," "Campaign Against Repression" and "A Coalition for Harboring Indefinite Chastity."

Von Bulow signs bail voucher

NEWPORT, R.I. (UPI) — Relaxed and joking, Claus-Von-Bulow signed a $1 million bail voucher Friday to keep himself out of prison while he appeals his conviction of trying to kill his heiress wife with insulin injections. Judge Thomas H. Needham was told that the process of evaluating von Bulow's wealth was incomplete and he gave the prosecution and defense more time to verify the Danish jetsetter's financial situation.

Mrs. Kissinger's charges refused

NEWARK, N.J. (UPI) — A judge Friday refused to dismiss an assault charge against Nancy Kissinger, wife of former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, for allegedly choking a pro-nuclear activist who insulted her husband.

Mrs. Kissinger's lawyer said a "full blown trial" on the charge and the certain publicity was "inappropriate," and urged Superior Court Judge Arthur Blake to throw out the case, which was scheduled to go on trial Wednesday.

Nicaragua raids Costa Rica villages

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (UPI) — Nicaraguan commandos raided two Costa Rican villages Friday, killing and kidnapping several right-wing rebels and prompting Costa Rica to order national police on alert.

Sources in the Public Security Ministry said President Luis Alberto Monge will request that renegade Sandinista Eder Pastora, known as Commander Zero, leave Costa Rica along with his followers.

The sources said Monge was worried Pastora's presence could provoke more Nicaraguan attacks on Costa Rica.

Gandhi's party losing support in India

NEW DELHI, India (UPI) — Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's Congress Party suffered setbacks in three state elections Friday, crucial tests of her popularity since returning to power two years ago.

With some 57 million ballots cast, Mrs. Gandhi's party was losing against opposition groups in three of four state government elections. The elections were held Wednesday, although votes still were being tabulated Friday.

Filipino hijacker overpowered

CEBU, Philippines (UPI) — Crewmen overpowered and captured a grenade-toting Filipino sugar planter who hijacked an airliner Friday to demand political reforms and $22,500 in back pay for serving in the U.S. military in World War II.

The hijacker suffered a blooded head as he wrestled into custody by the pilot and co-pilot of the Philippine Airlines BAC-111 jetliner at Cebu airport. The plane carried 108 passengers and five crew members when the hijacker seized control during a domestic flight.

The crew grabbed the hijacker when he put his hands inside his pocket to examine a written amnesty offer from the government.

South Korean president fires 11

SEOUL, South Korea (UPI) — President Chun Doo Hwan Friday replaced half of his 22-member Cabinet that resigned to take responsibility for a financial fraud scandal, the largest in Korean history, involving more than $600 million.

The cabinet shakeup shows President Chun's determination to get the government to carry out state affairs with a new resolve and responsibility, a presidential spokesman said.

OPEC will keep prices, supply steady

QUITO, Ecuador (UPI) — The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries said Friday it has decided to maintain for the time being its $34-a-barrel base price and current limits on production.

The decision to preserve the status quo should mean stable pump prices and heating oil bills for the American consumer this summer.

OPEC Secretary-General Marc Nan-Ngwen told reporters "prices will stay the same and the (production) ceilings will stay the same until further notice."

Saudi Arabian Oil Minister Sheikh

Ahmed Zaki Yamani said, "Our aim is to defend the $34 price... not to go up or down."

Yamani, whose kingdom calls the shots on OPEC pricing and production, said the cartel would raise the ceiling on its output, easing demand and upward pressure on prices, if the base price should begin to rise.

OPEC was expected to hold an emergency session in early July to review its decision April 1 to limit its output to 17.5 million barrels a day in a desperate gamble to dry up the global oil glut and prevent its prices from collapsing.

But there was no immediate confirmation of whether OPEC had officially decided to hold the July summit.

The OPEC ministers returned to private sessions in an apparent attempt to work out sharp divisions within the 13-nation cartel over individual production levels. OPEC had hoped to present a united front at the semi-annual ministerial meeting.

Reliable sources said Yamani walked out of the morning session after Iraq charged Iran with violating its OPEC-designated production ceiling of 7 1/2 million barrels a day.

Outgoing OPEC President Mana Saed Otaiba started his colleagues Thursday when he said the world oil market could recover from the glut fully within a few weeks and the ceiling should be removed immediately.

Saudi Arabia, OPEC's largest producer, sided with Otaiba, who also is the United Arab Emirates' oil minister. But Algeria pressed for a permanent regulation of OPEC's output and Venezuela, said the ceiling should be maintained at least through the end of this year when demand for OPEC oil is expected to pick up.

Blast near U.S. Embassy

Three bombs kill 11 in Beirut

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Three powerful bombs, including one just outside the U.S. Embassy, ripped through Muslim west Beirut Friday in an hour-long blitz that left 11 people dead and 18 wounded, police said.

A shadowy terrorist group calling itself the Organization for the Liberation of Lebanon from Foreigners claimed responsibility for the bombings in a telephone call to UPI.

The first bomb exploded within 100 yards of U.S. Embassy near the Beirut waterfront only an hour after U.S. Deputy Assistant Secretary of State Morris Draper ended talks with Lebanese officials and flew to Damascus.

Lebanese television said one man was killed and witnesses said three people were injured in the blast near the waterfront.

A second bomb, exploding less than 60 minutes later, blew out the side of a building housing Al Morabit, a leftist magazine, killing at least 10 people and wounding 15.

The sources expected the death toll to increase with the second under debris.

Angry gunmen fired toward photographers and shot into the air to clear the streets in case of further explosions.

Five minutes later, a third bomb exploded on a crowded shopping street but caused no casualties.

An anonymous caller claiming to represent the bombers vowed to continue the attacks until all foreigners left Lebanon.

Glenns Ferry teachers blast superintendent

By GLEN WARCHOL
Times-News writer

GLENN'S FERRY — Teachers in the Glenns Ferry School District have given their superintendent a vote of no confidence and have mounted a petition drive to reinstate a teacher fired last week.

"We no longer have any confidence in the administrative leadership and abilities of the current superintendent of schools, Jim Reed," states a letter that was signed by a majority of the district's 40 teachers. The exact number of instructors signing the letter was not disclosed because the teachers fear identification and reprisal.

The two-page letter, minus the signatures, was delivered Thursday evening to Gerald Bybee, the chairman of the school board, by Cliff Mitchell, the chief teachers' negotiator.

The letter explained that the teachers are reacting to Reed's personnel administration methods, which it said, "have been grounded in the theories of intimidation."

"Many of us have personally been subjected to these tactics, and all of us have witnessed it being practiced on our colleagues," the teachers' letter states.

Reed's hard-line methods, according to Mitchell, culminated in the board's refusal to renew the contract of Mike Kincaid, a sixth-grade teacher and president of the Glenns Ferry Education Association.

Reed said Friday that the letter was a "very incorrect appraisal" of his administrative methods.

"I don't have to like an individual to treat them fairly," Reed said.

"I have good employees. They don't all like me, and I don't like every one of them. But that doesn't mean I'm not fair in my dealings with them."

Although the school board has not taken any formal action on the letter, Bybee said that the board is 100 percent behind Reed.

"The basic feeling of the community is of strong support for Mr. Reed," he said.

According to Bybee, a letter of support for Reed also is being circulated in the district. Twenty-two district employees have signed the letter, Bybee said, although he didn't know how many of those were teachers.

Carlene Viner, the district's director of special services, who works directly under Reed, told The Times-News Friday that she has never seen him use tactics of intimidation with a teacher.

"He's a strong administrator," Viner said. "He expects the best out of his staff. I don't think that is negative."

In addition, Reed has often supported teachers before the school board, Viner said.

Many teachers, however, believe Kincaid's role in bringing collective bargaining to Glenns Ferry left him in disfavor with the superintendent and resulted in his contract not being renewed for next year.

The recommendation for that action came from Superintendent Reed, and his actions in this matter are what turned an unpleasant situation of intimidation into one which is now unworkable," the letter states.

What action will be taken on the letter, Reed said, is up to the board. However, he questioned the ethics and fairness of the charges being made without any names attached to the letter.

Close call

A lucky William Wiese of Twin Falls is helped onto a stretcher by Magic Valley ambulance personnel. Wiese, driving his 1981 Ford Bronco, failed to negotiate a curve Friday in the 400 block of Diamond Street and crashed into a barricade. A large board penetrated the car's firewall like a spear, tearing out the driver's seat and exiting through the side window. Wiese escaped with only scrapes. He was treated and released at the hospital. Citations are pending, according to police.

Number of primary races not contested

By BRUCE HAMMOND
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Numerous candidates are running, unopposed in Tuesday's primary election; and most have sought little or no publicity to date.

Examples can be found with incumbent legislators who paid their $15 filing fee, but have had no other campaign donations or expenditures.

Perhaps the most active unopposed candidates are those running for statewide or congressional seats, including Democrat Gov. John Evans. Evans is seeking a second elected term, having been first appointed to fill the vacancy left when Cecil Andrus became secretary of the Interior in 1977.

Other Democrats running unopposed for statewide offices in Tuesday's primary are: Sen. Mike Mitchell, D-Lewiston, a candidate for lieutenant governor; state Auditor Joe Williams; and state Treasurer Marjorie Ruth Moon.

On the Republican side of the primary, Doyle Miner of Boise is starting an unusual bid as a write-in for treasurer. He is expected to easily gather the 1,000 votes he needs in the primary to place him on November's general election ballot opposite Moon. If he ultimately unseats Moon, Miner would be the first write-in candidate to win a statewide office in 92 years.

A former state representative, Miner is perhaps best known for his term as co-chairman of the Joint Finance and Appropriations Committee.

Another uncontested primary candidate is incumbent Rep. George Hansen, R-Idaho, although two Democrats are vying to oppose him. Hansen is seeking a seventh term from the 2nd Congressional District.

Two incumbent Republicans — Secretary of State Pete Cenarrusa and Superintendent of Public Instruction Jerry Evans — are running unopposed on either side of the ballot.

The Legislature, Numerous House and Senate candidates from the Magic Valley are running unopposed in the primary as well. But most will eventually face challenges in the fall election.

Exceptions exist in districts 23, 24 and 25 where no Democrats filed.

District 21: Rep. Steve Antone, R-Rupert, is running unopposed in the primary but an American Party candidate, Charles Wilcher of Paul, says he will oppose Antone in the general election.

The other incumbent representative, Rep. Mack Neibaur, R-Paul, also has no primary competition, but will be challenged in the fall by Clarence Bellem, a Democrat from Rupert.

The Senate race will be contested in Tuesday's primary election.

Land swap plan eyes future growth

SHOSHONE — The Bureau of Land Management is reviewing a proposed land swap in Jerome and Lincoln counties that could fuel interest in commercial development at the Interstate 84-U.S. 93 interchange.

Thorn Creek Cattle Association, a group composed of about a dozen ranchers, has proposed trading 900 acres of private land at Thorn Creek Reservoir for about 120 acres of public land southwest of the I-84 interchange. The intersection is situated three miles north of Twin Falls.

Exact acreages involved in the deal would depend on values established by a government appraisal.

The swap also could require the creation of a "mini-plan" on land use to determine the fate of other land in the vicinity of the interchange, according to Jack Durham, an area manager for the Shoshone BLM District.

The Jerome County Comprehensive Plan and County zoning maps designate 1,280 acres near the interchange for future commercial development. Last week the county commission also went on record supporting the proposed Thorn Creek exchange.

Lester Gilman, one of the ranchers in the association, said the group has no specific plans for the parcel, but is aware of its potential for commercial development.

A BLM land-use plan in 1983 will review the status of area lands, including those near the interchange. In addition, a Reagon administration program to identify surplus lands for possible sale could play a role in determining who gets the parcel, Durham said.

At present, some 10,000 acres in southern Jerome county, including segments near the interchange, are under lease application by the Southern Idaho Regional Airport Authority. However, the proposed regional airport itself is not under active consideration.

A change in the legal standing of the airport effort would necessitate a re-evaluation of those lands under lease, said Harold Brown, realty specialist for the Shoshone BLM District. Several candidates in Tuesday's primary election have advocated abolishing the SIRAA.

The list of surplus lands submitted to Reagon's Property Review Board excluded the acres under SIRAA lease application, Brown said.

Durham noted that a plan 10 years ago to auction a portion of the land near the interchange was scrapped when no buyers came forward. But he said interest in the parcel has grown as commercial land in Twin Falls has become more expensive.

Public meetings and a review of other options would precede any decision to involve the land in an exchange agreement, Brown said. In a totally unrelated land exchange, the BLM last week published legal notice of the final step in a four-year effort to acquire Clover Creek Canyon in Elmore County in exchange for agricultural land in Elmore and Jerome counties.

The Clover Creek tract supports a large deer herd, and has other recreational potential, according to BLM officials.

Joe Davidson, the private landowner, said one of the two exchange parcels, situated near Bell Rapids, already is being farmed this spring.

Deeds for the second parcel, southwest of Jerome Butte, will be conveyed later this summer unless there is any public objection, Brown said.

Inability to get leaks fixed frustrates city

Bottom drops out of Hagerman sewage lagoon

By KELLA EVERITT
Times-News writer

HAGERMAN — Leaks in the Hagerman sewage lagoon system could cost the city between $350,000 to $1 million to repair — but it doesn't have the money.

After nearly two-and-a-half years of the city contending with the leaks, the bottom literally dropped out of the system Wednesday night. But it posed no immediate health problem, ac-ording to a state official.

"We've been told to monitor the ponds every day," Mayor Karen Yarbrough said. "Anything over a one-fourth inch drop in the water level we're supposed to report" to the state Department of Health and Welfare.

Wednesday night, she said, the water level in "cell 2," the only one of three ponds in the leaking system that is operating, dropped one-and-a-half feet in 24 hours. An investigation by city crews revealed a two-foot hole in the bottom of the lagoon pond.

"At this point is little the city can do about it," Health and Welfare said to let it go," Yarbrough said.

According to Gary Burkett, an engineer for the health department's Division of Environmental Health, does not pose an immediate health hazard to the aquifer. But he said there are concerns of a long-term problem with pollution of the underground water supply for the six to 10 homes between the city's sewage lagoons and the Snake River.

Burkett said the South Central District Health Department has been monitoring wells in the area for the last 16 months but has not identified any pollution problems that could be attributed to the leak of sewage from the lagoons into the aquifer.

Since Wednesday's leak began, the city has been instructed to begin chlorinating the effluent in the system as a short-term protective measure, Burkett said. "We anticipate sealing the hole some time next week, but the patch would be only a temporary solution."

According to Yarbrough, construction on the system was begun in 1977 or '78, and has "never been completely completed." She said that two of the three ponds in the system are dry right now, while test holes are being drilled to determine the cause of the leaks.

False alarms from hospital construction plague firemen

By STEPHANIE SCHOROW
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The call goes out over the police scanner: Alarm at Magic Valley Memorial Hospital.

But just as the Twin Falls fire trucks roar out of the station, the recall goes out. Another false alarm.

Scenarios like that have been happening frequently over the last several months as the hospital undergoes extensive remodeling. On Thursday, fire trucks raced to the hospital only to find a basement alarm inadvertently had gone off.

"Dust from construction, disruptions in the electrical system or surges in the water lines can set off the hospital's false alarm system."

About once a week, MVMH's alarms go off leaving firemen wondering, "Could it be real this time?" Hospital officials say they have tried to forewarn the fire department about certain construction jobs that might set off the alarm.

But, administrator Bill Burns recalls, even when the workers took pains to seal off the basement kitchen, where dust was being actively work on the elevator shaft allowed dust to shoot up to the fifth floor, triggering the alarm there.

Nor can the hospital shut down its entire alarm system. So, fire Chief Robert Bopp says, the department must treat each alarm like the real thing.

Burns, Bopp and other officials have met to try to work out a solution. "We have been a thorn in their (the fire department's) side and I admit it. But I don't know what to do about it," Burns says.

Hospital officials say they try to call the fire department as soon as possible after a false alarm is set off.

However, Twin Falls police dispatchers are at least on occasion, have expressed anger at both the frequency of the false alarms and delays by the hospital staff in calling in the "all-clear" signal.

"The problem is, we don't know (if an alarm is real)," says Steve Fisher, assistant hospital administrator. "We have to investigate if it's a real fire. If we don't know we set one off, we have to research to see what did set it off."

The dispatchers also have questioned the expense incurred by the fire department's responses to false alarms.

"Certainly any time we run out the truck, we expend fuel and energy that could be used for something else," Bopp says. But he adds, "I'm sure it's not a large amount."

"We treat (every call) as if it's a real fire even though it would be easy to get complacent about it. The time we delayed would be the time they would have something there."

Police Chief Jim Qualls says, "I think we're going to have to live with it until they get done."

Fire trucks seen outside MVMH stem from a rash of false alarms caused by construction

Judge gives man a choice: Prison or leave state forever

TWIN FALLS — A 20-year-old Twin Falls man avoided a prison term on Friday by agreeing to leave the state and never return.

George R. Smith faced serving a prison term after he admitted violating an 18-month probation during a Fifth District Court hearing.

Idaho Division of Probation and Parole officials charged that Smith, who was placed on probation following a 1981 forgery conviction, had violated his probation by failing to make victim restitution payments, changing addresses without the permission of his probation officer, and by trespassing at Twin Falls Beverage Inc., 356 Bridge St., on May 7.

The trespassing charge was later dismissed, according to defense lawyer Mike Powers.

Powers asked Judge Theron Ward to commute Smith's previously suspended one-to-14 year prison sentence to a short term in the county jail, saying the defendant planned to move to New Jersey on June 15.

Prosecutor Harry DeHaan called that a "reasonable solution," and Ward commuted the sentence to eight months in the county jail, with credit for the six months Smith had already served at the North Idaho Correctional Institute in Cottonwood.

Ward said he also had agreed time at the Twin Falls County Jail while awaiting disposition of his case, although they were unsure about how much.

Ward provided that Smith would be released on June 15 "on the provision Mr. Smith, that you leave the state of Idaho and you never return to the state of Idaho."

Meanwhile, 19-year-old Joseph Gwin of Twin Falls was ordered to spend the next 120 days at the Cottonwood penitentiary following the term. Ward will decide whether to place Gwin on probation or order him to serve a prison sentence of up to 14 years for the July 10, 1981, theft of a pickup truck.

Gwin also faces an armed robbery charge in Jerome and a grand larceny charge in Rawlins, Wyo.

Defense lawyer Golden Bennett had argued for leniency, saying his client's criminal record stemmed from alcohol abuse problems. He added that Gwin had been undergoing treatment at Magic Valley Alcohol Rehabilitation Center in March and had shown excellent progress.

But Bennett did not oppose a presentence investigation report's recommending the Cottonwood program, a recommendation that DeHaan said was an "absolute minimum court sentence."

Ward ordered 19-year-old Dana James Dade of Twin Falls to spend the next four months at the Cottonwood facility, Clinging Dade's extensive juvenile and adult criminal record "reflects the defendant's request for a probation."

Dade pleaded guilty to possessing stereo equipment that was stolen from Century Auto Sound, 307 Oak St., earlier this year.

Ward said the only thing stopping him from sending Dade to the Idaho state penitentiary was the defendant's age.

"You have the record of a man who could be 40 years old," Ward told Dade.

Larry Fennelwald, 25, of Hansen, pleaded guilty to a charge of grand theft by possession of stolen property in connection with the theft of an M1 .30 caliber carbine earlier this year.

Ward ordered a presentence investigation and granted the defendant's request for release from jail without bond. Defense lawyer Mike Powers argued that the defendant, who was unable to post the previous bail of $900, had turned himself in to authorities and had a job waiting for him if he could be released.

James Edward Blair, 30, of Buhl, pleaded innocent to a charge that he sold marijuana to a confidential informant last year. No date for a jury trial was set.

No confidence

"Since the letter isn't signed, I don't know what to make of it," he said.

Mitchell said that despite the fear of reprisals if the teachers' names were known, "I was really impressed that some of these people are willing to stick their necks out and support what we think is right."

Teachers have received their contracts for next year, Mitchell said, but they fear that the same methods used against Kincaid might be turned on them next school year.

In addition to the vote of no confidence of the majority, or the authenticity of the signatures themselves, Mitchell said, the teachers "would allow them to be examined by a third party, such as a clergyman."

As a first step, the petition calls for the reinstatement of Kincaid. The petition has been signed by more than 200 citizens, he said.

The teachers feel that the timing of Kincaid's probation and dismissal came suspiciously close to his success, as president of the GFEA, in bringing collective bargaining to the school district.

On March 25, an election to decide who would be the bargaining agent for the district's teachers was held. The GFEA was selected and Kincaid requested a date for the first negotiation session.

On March 29, Reed made the first in a series of three administrative observations of Kincaid's class.

On April 8, in executive session, the board put Kincaid on probation. In an April 13 letter from the board, Kincaid was told he had been put on 30 days probation for three reasons:

- Inadequate lesson preparation.
- Lack of clear short-term and long-term subject objectives.
- Inadequate classroom organization and management skills.

The board said the administration would give Kincaid help in improving his "problem" areas. The letter ends by saying that at the May 13 board meeting action would be taken on Kincaid's probation.

At that meeting, the board voted to deny Kincaid a contract for the 1982-83 school year.

Reed says that he had had conversations about Kincaid from the time of his hiring. Those conversations, he said, grew stronger during Kincaid's three years with the district.

"The overriding statement is that we didn't see a teacher that was as proficient in the classroom as we thought we deserved," he said. "We didn't see the competence there that we wanted."

During his first two years in the district, Kincaid worked in the remedial reading program. Viner, who was Kincaid's supervisor at that time, evaluated him several times, but declined to comment Friday on Kincaid's competence.

Kincaid's only formal evaluation as a regular classroom teacher was done by his principal, Cecil Watson, on Jan. 14. The evaluation form provides a "1-5" rating, with teachers with "Excellent, Good, Needs Improvement, Acceptable and Unacceptable" levels.

In the January evaluation, Watson scored Kincaid in the "good" range in most areas. He received a "needs improvement" rating in four of 58 areas on the evaluation. Viner, who was Kincaid's supervisor at that time, evaluated him several times, but declined to comment Friday on Kincaid's competence.

Bad roads delay sale of permits to cut wood in Sawtooth forest

TWIN FALLS — Officials have delayed the sale of firewood-cutting permits on the Sawtooth National Forest in order to minimize damage to wet and snow-covered roads.

Firewood permits costing $2.50 a cord will go on sale at ranger district offices beginning June 1, according to Paul Barker, the Sawtooth forest supervisor.

"Many of the roads into wood-cutting areas on the Twin Falls and Burley districts will be inaccessible until about mid-June," Barker said, while cutting areas in the Fairfield, Stanley and Ketchum areas might not be clear until the end of June.

"As soon as the snow is gone and the roads are dry enough to handle loaded vehicles, wood cutters will find that most of the forest is open and available," Barker says.

The Forest Service plans to construct several temporary roads in the South Hills in July to provide access into areas where there is a new supply of dead trees, according to Joe Frazier, the Twin Falls District ranger.

Road-building costs will be paid by permits collected from last year's initial effort at charging for firewood permits, Frazier said.

After June 1, permits can be obtained on weekdays from the Twin Falls District office at 1061 Blue Lakes Blvd. N., and Saturdays and Sundays at the Rock Creek Guard Station.

Permits also will be available from forest offices in Ketchum, Fairfield, Burley and Stanley, and at the Sawtooth National Recreation Area headquarters eight miles north of Ketchum.

A limit of 10 cords per family is available without a commercial permit. "Permit cutting areas" to provide information, ensure compliance with the permit system and to check chain-saw spark arresters and other safety equipment.

Construction of Ontario, Ore., the prime contractor, she said, and the ponds were installed by Gale Construction of Boise, a subcontractor.

Burkett said the ponds passed leakage tests when construction was completed. The first leaks began appearing between six months and a year later.

The ponds, he said, are "over fractured basalt. As the water washes through the bottom of the pond (as they are designed to do), it's taking the sealant membrane with it."

According to an official at Gale Construction, who asked not to be identified, "the ponds were built according to plans and specifications. There was a problem there. It's an engineering problem."

Burkett said the state and the federal Environmental Protection Agency have funded a study by a private engineering firm to determine the cause of the leaks. "In the hope of raising funds from any parties identified as being responsible for the failure," the report, which should also offer solutions to the problem if possible, is due "in the next two or three weeks."

"Until we've identified the problem, we don't feel it is wise to let the city reconstruct. We don't want to reconstruct the error made the first time," Burkett said.

But Yarbrough said the two years of delays in solving the problem have left her and other city officials "very frustrated." Those reservations, he said, grew stronger during Kincaid's three years with the district.

Reed says that he had had conversations about Kincaid from the time of his hiring. Those conversations, he said, grew stronger during Kincaid's three years with the district.

"We don't want to likely solutions seem to be laying a new sealant base at the bottom of all the ponds, at a cost of approximately $300,000, or covering the floor of the ponds with PVC plastic. While the plastic may be a better solution, the cost is estimated at $1 million.

"The city just doesn't have that kind of money," she said.

A meeting is planned Monday in Boise to discuss funding options for the repairs. Burkett said that "Hagerman has a high priority" in his department for what funds are available. "We've been budgeting for corrective measures, trying to set aside some reserve funds, but unfortunately, the funds haven't released the $200,000 yet."

"I'm a little bit optimistic we'll get the money to seal one of the ponds right away," he said. "Hopefully, over the long run, we'll get all three fixed."

The mayor said the city is hoping to Students participating will be Alett Boyer, Edie Goedhart, Jennifer Koopman, Rickie Robby and Katy Prins, Penny Lawton, Kristy Larue, Brenda Moore, Leslie Ruby, Amber VanderLust and Andrea Williams. Prins will play a cello solo.

TFHS diploma ceremonies set

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls High School will hold its baccalaureate service this Sunday, May 23, at 10 a.m. in the high school gym.

Lavera Thornock, president of the Twin Falls Mormon Stake, will be the speaker.

Commencement will be held Friday, May 28, at 8 p.m. in the College of Southern Idaho gymnasium.

Cycle accident victim 'critical'

TWIN FALLS — A Twin Falls motorcyclist who lost his left leg in an accident last Saturday remained in critical condition Friday night.

Lyle Barker, 22, was hospitalized in critical condition at St. Luke's Hospital in Boise.

His passenger, Angelina Born, 19, of Twin Falls, was reported in stable condition in Magic Valley Memorial Hospital. Born also lost her left leg in the accident.

Elections

District 22: Incumbent Rep. Dan Kelly, R-Mountain Home, is running alone in his bid for re-election.

For the incumbent District 22 House seat, however, there will be a general election race, but no primary contest. Incumbent Rep. Arthur Issac, R-Mountain Home, and Democrat Mark Larsen of Mountain Home have both filed.

No primary challenge exists for the two District 22 Senate candidates — Democrat Claire Wetherell and Republican Vernon Gillespie, both of Mountain Home.

District 23: Democrat Bill Hollaman of Wendell has no primary opposition in his bid to compete against the winner of the Republican contest between incumbent Rep.

Gordon Hollifield, R-Jerome, and Archie Walker of Bliss.

In the race for the other House seat, each party has offered one candidate — incumbent Rep. John Brooks, R-Gooding, and Democrat Dick Strickland of Gooding.

The Senate race is contested.

District 24: Incumbent Rep. Lawrence Knigge, R-Filer, has neither primary nor general election competition.

But the other incumbent, Rep. Roy Bracker, R-Twin Falls, eventually will have to face Democrat Diana Van Hooser of Buhl.

The Senate race is contested.

District 25: Sen. Laird Noh, R-Kimberly, is running completely unopposed in his bid for re-election.

Although she has no primary competition, Republican Donna Scott of Twin Falls will have to face independent candidate Chris Tacklington of Twin Falls in the general election bid for the House seat being vacated by House majority whip Ralph Olmstead, a gubernatorial candidate.

The other House member, Rep. Tom Silvers, R-Twin Falls, also appears unopposed in both elections.

District 26: The American Party also has fielded a write-in candidate for representative, Marvin Wharton of Burley. Wharton will oppose the winner of the Republican primary race between incumbent Rep. Ernest Hale, R-Burley, and Michael Jones of Burley.

For the other House seat, incumbent Rep. Vard Chabrum, R-Albion, appears completely unopposed.

The Senate position is contested.

Chinese seed firm delegation to talk

TWIN FALLS — A delegation from the national seed company of the People's Republic of China will visit Twin Falls Tuesday and speak at a luncheon sponsored by the Idaho World Trade Association.

The association is made up of businesses exporting goods from Idaho or who are interested in promoting sales of Idaho products in world markets.

The 56-nation luncheon at the Canyon Springs Inn is open to the public. It is the association's regular monthly meeting.

Members of the Chinese delegation will be at the Canyon Springs Inn for a half hour, before the luncheon for people interested in meeting with them to discuss the Chinese seed industry.

WHITE Mortuary

There are some good reasons why most Twin Falls area families call the White Mortuary when they need the services of a funeral director. Previous service, attention to detail, attractive facilities, compassionate understanding, trust and a staff who really cares. These are just a few of the reasons. White Mortuary and Crematory

Jerome Republicans will pick clerk, treasurer candidates

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

JEROME — Tuesday's primary in Jerome County will feature two-way races on the Republican ballot for the offices of treasurer and clerk.

Two Republicans, Richard W. Goetsch, a Jerome accountant, and Cheryl Watts, now a secretary in the county prosecutor's office, are seeking the right to oppose the incumbent county clerk, Claudi Beik, a Democrat, in November.

In the GOP treasurer's race, incumbent Elsie Childers is opposed by Mildred Worthington, who is employed in the county assessor's office.

Irene Roberts, who works in the county clerk's office, filed for the Democratic nomination in the treasurer's race, but she has withdrawn for "personal reasons."

Elsie Childers has worked in the treasurer's office 18 years, including two years as treasurer. Although she is the current treasurer, this is her first appearance on the ballot. She was appointed to the position two years ago.

She says she has no changes in mind, but hopes to continue doing a good job for the county's taxpayers.

Claudi Beik says she has worked in the office, Childers says that the county's tax rolls have grown from about 6,000 taxpayers to more than 10,000.

Raised in Jerome, where she graduated from high school, she says her major education has been the experience gained from her Courthouse job, and she is counting on that experience to gain support from the voters.

"Being county treasurer is actually two jobs," Childers says. "I am responsible for all of the county revenue, such as fines, fees and other collections, and I am charged with taxing collecting. I enjoy it and enjoy working with people of the county."

Childers and her husband, W.E. Childers, have two sons and six grandchildren. She is active in the Methodist Church, the Rebekah Lodge and the Sugar Loaf Grange.

Mildred Worthington is the chief deputy assessor in Jerome County, having worked in that office for the past three years.

She has spent all of her life in Jerome with the exception of four years in California.

Worthington says she has worked with the county computers in the assessor's office and feels it is an exciting, new program.

"I would welcome the opportunity to continue working with the tax rolls and expanding computer programs in the treasurer's office. There is no end to what we can do to make the work more efficient and quicker with the computer equipment."

Worthington, who is single, says she believes she can work well with all of the other elected county officials, and her experience in the assessor's office will help her make a smooth transition into the treasurer's position.

Dick Goetsch is seeking the office of clerk, auditor and recorder because he says he always has been interested in government and community affairs.

harmony between elected officials in the county, and he believes his experience qualifies him to handle the work efficiently and economically.

Goetsch has worked in data processing, personnel management and business administration. He is an accountant for Valley Utilities in Jerome.

"I like the idea of the present (Reagan) administration for local governments. This is a critical time for families and taxpayers, cities, counties and the nation. We need to work together."

He and his wife, Aileen, have two children and have lived in the Jerome area for the past 14 years.

Cheryl Watts worked for nine-and-a-half years in the clerk's office. And she says that knowledge has broadened her understanding of the legal aspects involved at the county level.

During her time in the clerk's office, Watts said she performed all aspects of the clerk's and auditor's duties, and she was in charge of the district court section of the office part of the time.

Watts says that she feels experience is vital to the office, and that her experience qualifies her to meet the requirements of the job in an efficient manner.

She is married to Bill Watts, and they are the parents of two children.

Two Republicans seek nomination for Jerome assessor

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

JEROME — Three candidates, one Democrat and two Republicans, are running in Tuesday's primary for the office of Jerome County assessor.

Incumbent William Kersey Jr. is not seeking re-election, but two employees of his office would like the job.

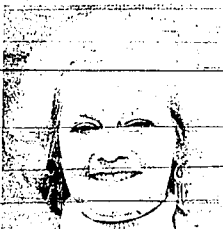

Terril Jones, the head appraiser for the assessor's office, is opposed by Marjorie DuBois, who works in the American Falls Reservoir District office in Jerome. Both are Republicans.

Ed Messenger, also an appraiser in the assessor's office, is running unopposed on the Democratic ticket. He has 14 years' experience in appraisal work, covering work in five counties.

can handle the job to the satisfaction of county residents. I would utilize this experience to meet the needs of the people in as fair a means as possible."

Jones, who has been in the assessor's office three years, is a third-generation Jerome County resident. He earned a degree in business administration and accounting from Idaho State University.

Several county officeholders have no opposition in Tuesday's primary. They include: Prosecutor William Dalling, a Republican who was appointed to the position last fall to succeed Roger Burdick, who became a magistrate judge; Democrat Mel Grindstaff, the First District county commissioner; Treasurer Glenda Beik, a Democrat; and Coroner Gerald M. Oster, a Republican.

Marjorie DuBois says her experience covers 23 years in the assessment field, four years in the assessor's office in Jerome County and 13 years in Sacramento, Calif., in an assessor's office.

For the past six years, she has worked in the reservoir district office, where she also handles assessments for water users. DuBois also says she has completed a number of special courses in appraisal work.

The last nine years I spent in Sacramento were in an administrative and supervisory position. I think this, with my work in Jerome County, gives me a well-rounded background for county assessor."

She has lived in Jerome for the past 12 years. In addition to her own career, she assists her husband, Howard, in operating their farm. They are the parents of two grown sons.

She also holds a real-estate sales license, has been active on the Republican Central Committee and is a member of the Jerome Grange.

Jones is Kersey's head appraiser. He says it is his duty to assist the assessor in maintaining, planning and carrying out an ongoing appraisal program in the county. That includes appraisals for homes, farms, businesses and commercial properties.

As a result, Jones says he has worked closely with the county's businessmen and residents.

"His goal, he says, would be to maintain existing programs, keeping assessments fair to the individual taxpayer. He says he has worked with the county's computer system in handling appraisals and assessments, and is well-acquainted with the procedure.

GOP leaders will select state delegates

TWIN FALLS — Republican central committees will select delegates to the party's state convention during a series of meetings in May and June.

Jerome County's meeting is slated for May 27 at 8:30 p.m. in the Jerome County Courthouse.

Delegates from Twin Falls County will be selected June 2, beginning at the Twin Falls County Courthouse Building. Delegates representing districts 24 and 25 (Twin Falls County) will be selected separately at that meeting.

Economy prompts large number of candidates in Camas

By STEPHANIE SCHOROW
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Economic conditions and retiring incumbents have sparked an unusually crowded field of candidates in Camas County.

Tuesday's primary features 15 candidates, vying for three county positions.

The candidates say the area's lack of jobs and the retirement of district court Clerk George Gill of Fairfield and Assessor Edward Reagan encouraged a large number of persons to seek public office for the first time.

Several candidates, contacted by the Times-News, expressed pleasure and even pride that so many populated Camas County (turnout was 50 percent). "This way, people have a selection," one person said.

In a contest that often receives little attention, six persons are running for the combined post of county clerk, auditor and recorder, which pays $13,872 a year.

The Republican candidates are Lyle Huffer, Sue Robbins and Polly Bennett. The Democratic candidates are Roy Atwood, Mary Lee Huntington and Mike Danielson.

Polly Atwood, 42, moved to Fairfield about seven years ago and works as a cook at the Country Kitchen there. A graduate of Twin Falls High School, she has 14 years experience in banking. She has worked as a bookkeeper and teller at First Federal Savings in Twin Falls, Twin Falls Bank and Trust, and Idaho First National in Mountain Home and Boise.

"I feel I have the background for the job," she says.

In 1965, Mike Danielson, 45, bought a farm in Camas County, where he raised sheep and pigs. For two years, he worked for the Wood River Resource Area and has served as the deputy auditor, clerk and recorder, and deputy assessor for the last 10 months. He feels he has gained valuable experience in county government.

He is running for clerk because "I need the work of, cause it's a position I know the most about; have the best background." In 1965, Lee Huntington, 38, has lived in Fairfield for three years and works as a waitress at the Country Kitchen. She previously worked for Mesa Lutheran Hospital in Mesa, Ariz., where she was in charge of scheduling and receiving patients, typing records and bookkeeping. She also attended patient conferences, giving her experience in dealing with the public.

Sue Robbins, 34, has lived in Fairfield for 12 years and works as a housekeeper at the Hidden Paradise Ranch. She also has worked as a secretary-receptionist for a Jerome finance company and as a teller at First Security Bank in Twin Falls.

"I would like to have a more challenging job," she says. "I think I can do a good job (as clerk)."

Rollie Bennett, 38, was raised in Fairfield and has lived in Camas County for the last 10 years. He has worked as a technician for the Lawrence Radiation Lab at the University of California at Berkeley, and for 10 years, he ran an appliance business in Boise, where he gained experience in bookkeeping.

He says he now helps his wife run the Hill City Store and assists on his brother's farm.

He's seeking the clerk's position because "the job would be more challenging. I like to get more involved with the community."

Lyle Huffer, 55, or Corral, is a long-time county resident. He formerly managed a credit-union branch in Fairfield and since it closed, he has been unemployed. He also has worked for the Camas Prairie Grain Growers' Inc.

"People asked me to (run)," he says. "I decided I could do the job, and so why not?"

The race for the assessor's job, which pays $13,540, features four persons vying for the Republican nomination. They are: LaMar Lauritzen, Derrall Huffer, Wilburline "Willie" Roby and Linda Martin. The winner will face Billy N. McGinnis of Fairfield who is running unopposed for the Democratic nomination.

Derrall Huffer (brother to Lyle), 61, of Corral, a long-time county resident, has farmed and now works for Sun Valley Ranches.

He chose to run because of "pressure from friends" but just decided to do something different. "He feels his agricultural work has given him the knowledge of the land in the Camas Prairie that's needed" for the assessor's job.

Linda Martin, 26, has lived in Fairfield about 13 years. She runs the Wanderer Drive-in, where she does all her own bookkeeping and typing. She also has worked at such jobs as motel-manager, janitor and grocery clerk.

She decided to run when she learned Reagan was retiring. "I thought I could do just as good a job as he did."

Wilburline "Willie" Roby, 41, has lived in Fairfield 10 years and had driven the school bus for three years. She has worked as a waitress and at the Market Basket as a cashier.

"I have the time and the energy to do the job, and I like working with the public."

LaMar Lauritzen, 43, has lived most of his life in Camas County, working as a farmer. He sold his farm last year and presently does custom farm work for other operators.

For two years, he built houses in the county and in the Northwest, and he has served as chairman of the Soil Conservation Service the last two years.

His experience, both in building and in handling experience qualify him for the county assessor's position.

A three-way primary race has emerged for the Democratic nomination for county treasurer, a post that pays $13,548 a year. Penny Pauls, Jean Johnson and Patricia Lee are running as Democrats. The winner will face incumbent Wilma Colter of Fairfield, who is running as a Republican.

Jean Johnson, 38, moved to Fairfield three-and-a-half years ago from Boise. She presently works part-time as a data-entry person for Superior Simulations, a new Fairfield computer firm, and as a typist for the local newspaper.

While living in Boise, she worked as secretary to the Boise mayor, as a legal secretary and as a data processor in the county's office. She also has worked for Ore-Ida Foods and Idaho First National Bank.

"I have 20 years experience in secretarial and bookkeeping, and a large amount of experience in public relations. Therefore, I feel I'm qualified to run."

Patricia Lee, 48, a Fairfield native, works as a cook and a cashier for the Soldier Mountain Ski Resort. She feels she has "a lot of public-relations experience," from jobs like working for the county prosecutor's office to keeping books for her husband's store.

She is running because "I wanted a year-round job. Then, I've always been interested in this type of thing, in the government here."

Penny Pauls, 27, has lived in the Fairfield area nearly all her life. She works as a waitress for the Country Kitchen.

She worked for the U.S. Forest Service for three years with the Youth Conservation Corps program and on a trail crew.

She decided to run for county treasurer "because I thought I could do the job."

Region IV sets its 1983 priorities

TWIN FALLS — The board of directors of the Region IV Development Association has voted to retain its economic priorities in seeking federal grant funds for the upcoming fiscal year.

The board, consisting of city, county and community leaders from the eight-county Magic Valley region, unanimously approved updated overall economic development program Thursday, which differs little from the 1982 plan.

The program assesses local economic needs throughout the region and is submitted to the federal Economic Development Administration.

Among the objectives spelled out by the 1983 plan are:

- Develop low-cost, alternative sources of financing
- Improve the basic organization framework of cities where problems have restricted economic development and posed health and safety hazards.

Train and assist the unemployed in finding long-term employment.

Promote expansion and development of existing and new businesses and industries.

The board made one major change by dropping a proposed 40-acre industrial park for Buhl from its list of priority projects.

The move followed word that Burley Chamber of Commerce members have decided to delay seeking federal funding for the estimated $400,000 project.

Retained as priority projects were the extension of the Jerome sewer system, a project estimated to cost $17,000, and providing business-district water mains for the city of Ketchum, which is expected to cost $230,000.

Kimberly and Murtaugh both plan school-budget hearings

MURTAUGH — A special school board meeting will be held Monday, June 7, at 7:30 p.m. at Murtaugh High School to discuss the 1982-83 budget.

The projected budget for the district is $483,003, compared to this year's budget of $433,504.

Local tax revenues are expected to generate $123,561.

KIMBERLY — School board officials in Kimberly will hold a special meeting at 8 p.m. on Tuesday, June 1, to discuss the 1982-83 budget.

The projected budget for the district is $1,245 million, compared to this year's budget of $1,168 million. The budget includes a $60,000 override levy approved by residents Tuesday.

The Times-News

Our church news guidelines

The Times-News encourages any church in the Magic Valley area to submit information for our listing of church services, which appears each Saturday.

To ensure your information is used, follow these guidelines:

- The deadline for church news is Thursday noon.
- Typewritten or plainly printed information is best; it helps eliminate errors.
- Provide full information — complete names, times, locations, day and date — include the name of the community — we serve many and a phone number to call if more information is needed.

If you have questions about church news, call 733-8931 between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m., and ask for Glenda May or Kinney.

BARKER WORKS FOR YOU!

SPONSORED LEGISLATION TO PROVIDE CATASTOPHIC CARE FOR THE MEDICALLY NEEDY

Senator John Barker has and will continue to look-out for your pocketbook. At Twin Falls, where we have a Regional Medical Center, the catastrophic cost of the medically indigent will be spread over the state and not unduly burden the taxpayers of this county. John Barker was the sponsor of catastrophic care legislation.

Re-elect John M. Barker

Senator District 24

Republican Primary May 25

Paid by Barker for Senator, John K. Cato, Treasurer

Volkswagen of America has just announced a price reduction on Jettas, Pickups, and Rabbits both in gasoline and diesel engines. These reductions are as much as $625.00 on our most popular Rabbit "L" model. We at Chris Jordan VW commend Volkswagen of America for this recent price reduction and have decided to offer our own price reduction as well. The above are a few examples of the tremendous new prices offered on some of our most popular models. All of our inventory in these models carry similar price savings. Come out today and test drive one.

Thank you
Chris Jordan

Celtics even series with defense

PHILADELPHIA (UPI)—The Boston Celtics have another date with history, thanks to a never-say-die attitude and armoring defense.

With Robert Parish and Larry Bird teaming to spark a run of 12 consecutive fourth-quarter points, the Celtics, given up for dead less than a week ago, forced a deciding game in the NBA Eastern Conference final with an 88-75 victory over the shell-shocked Philadelphia 76ers Friday night.

The Celtics, who successfully rebounded from a 3-1 deficit for the second year in a row Sunday with a win in Boston Garden. If they are victorious, it will only be the fifth time in NBA history that a team has come back from a 3-1 deficit to win a playoff series.

Parish, playing with five fouls, gave the Celtics their first lead of the game, 69-67, on a jumper with 7:58 remaining and that sparked Boston's momentum the rest of the way.

The surge ended with Boston on top 73-67 following a Bird basket with 6:47 left. The Sixers then cut the deficit to 74-73 on two free throws by Julius Erving with 4:28 left before Gerald Henderson and Kevin McHale paced an 8-0 run over the next 2:18 for the Celtics.

"We kept them on the same number for a long time," Boston Coach Bill Fitch said. "That was the peak of our game. The ball was not dropping for them, but our defense was very aggressive. We gave them the outside shots and played the passing lanes very well."

"Once we got the lead, it was like new blood for us. It was like a reward for the way we were playing."

The Boston defense limited Philadelphia to just 27 points in the second half, 11 in the final quarter, as the Sixers made a little history of their own.

The 27 points was the lowest total for a half in any NBA playoff game since the creation of the 24-second clock in 1954. Philadelphia made only 7-of-34 shots (20.6 percent) in the final two quarters and were 3-of-19 (15.8) in the fourth period. In the last 18:12 of the game, the Sixers made only five field goals, two of them coming on go-ahead calls.

"I don't remember ever feeling as bad as I do now," Toney said. "I couldn't contribute to the team. I really wasn't in it like I should have been."

"Toney is a great player," Fitch said. "Some shots just wouldn't go in for him tonight. Sunday (when Toney scored 39 points) he got some baskets that he probably shouldn't have. But he is a great shooter."

McHale led Boston with 17 points, 10 in the final period, while Bird and Parish each added 14 and Henderson 13. Erving led all scorers with 24.

The Celtics, who trailed 48-42 at halftime, tied the score for the first time at 51-51 on a follow-up basket by Cedric Maxwell with 8:39 left in the third period. The game was tied twice more before Philadelphia took a 64-58 lead just before the end of the period.

McHale and Erving then exchanged 3-point plays to put the Sixers ahead 67-61 with 9:46 remaining before the Celtics began their winning surge.

With history on their side, the Celtics are expected to continue their winning ways Sunday and advance to the title series against the Los Angeles Lakers, but McHale said his team must guard against over confidence.

"There's another game," he warned. "It's not over yet by any means."

Minico makes title game

Schow powers Spartans

By CHRIS HAFT Times-News writer

BOISE — Jeff Schow and stout pitching — the combination that has worked so well for Minico this season — Friday night put the Spartans in the state championship game for the second straight year.

With Schow striking a bases-loaded triple in the second inning and Ed Beckstead and Johnny Miller hitting Pocatello to three hits, Minico advances to the finals of the A-1 State Baseball Tournament by outlasting the Indians, 4-2, at Borah Field.

Minico faces Lewiston for the crown tonight at 8. The Bengals, 2-0 winners over Twin Falls in Thursday's tourney opener, reached the finals by beating Nampa Friday night, 6-4.

Neatness counted for both teams. Minico committed no errors. Pocatello made just one and got turned a rapid double play. The major element tipping the scales was Schow's second-inning two-out blast.

With the bases loaded and one out, Tracy Wodskow forced Dave Garro at home plate, keeping the bases loaded. Lynn VanDyveny walked, forcing in the game's first run and bringing Schow to the plate.

Wood River High sophomore Lisa Bernhagen clears the bar at 5'10" to set a new state meet record in the girls high jump.

Twin Falls rally tops Skyline, 5-4

By CHRIS HAFT Times-News writer

NAMPA — For four innings, the only thing worse than the Twin Falls Bruins' hitting Friday night was their luck.

However, both improved radically and dramatically over the final three innings. Trailing 4-0, the Bruins scored one run in the fifth, three in the sixth and more in the seventh on Curt Thlemann's double to defeat Skyline, 5-4, eliminating the Grizzlies from the A-1 State Baseball Tournament at Rodon Park.

Twin Falls' meate, Borah, a 12-2 winner over Kearsley on Friday night, today at 11 a.m. on Borah Field in Boise for the consolation championship.

Three singles that should have been three outs helped Skyline to three fourth-inning runs and appeared to deflate Twin Falls' spirit. But the Bruins, who had managed just two hits off Grizzlie right-hander Dennis Kelsner in the first four innings, erupted for five hits.

After the biggest hit of course, belonged to Thlemann. The Twin Falls catcher had been wallowing in a 0-for-10 slump when he went to bat in the seventh inning with nobody out and pinch-runner Scott Morgan on first.

After a bases-loaded second base on the second pitch to Thlemann, Kelsner ran the count to 2-2. Thlemann fouled off a pitch, then reached for a high curve ball and smacked it into the left-center field gap, scoring Morgan easily.

"I've been really pressing," Thlemann said. "I haven't hit well in the last eight games or so."

Nevertheless, Thlemann insisted he felt confident before striking his decisive double.

"I knew I was going to get a hit," he said. "I just felt it. I knew a curve was coming. He had been shaking the first sign off and had thrown curves, and when he shook another sign off, I knew it was coming."

Nobody knew Thlemann's late rally was coming. Even after Todd Wipington doubled to lead off the fifth and scored on a throwing error, ending the Bruins' string of 14 consecutive

Bruin girls hold own; Jerome-Wood River have troubles

By LARRY HOVEY Times-News writer

BOISE — Six records fell, another was tied and chances for a Jerome-Wood River showdown race for the team title diminished.

All that highlighted the first day of the Idaho State Girls Track and Field Championships Friday.

In happier moments, Wood River saw its talented sophomore Lisa Bernhagen break the all-time state high jump record at 5'10". That was about the opening event of the evening session. But in the final event, Wood River's Lori Pascoe, rated a likely contender for points in two distance events, went unplaced in the 3,200-meters.

Things remained on an even keel for Twin Falls in its quest to regain the title it lost to Capital a year ago. The Bruins, getting a record to begin from Dino Libert and the best times in the sprints from Sally Butts, lost Macie Miller in the intermediate hurdles but that was offset when Sherry Ford moved easily into the finals of the 100 hurdles. Nancy McGinnis finished fourth in the 3,200, just missing third in a desperate struggle with Pocatello freshman Heather Campbell over the final 20 yards. McGinnis came from well back to challenge.

In the A-3 division, Wendell's bin crew forged ahead as hoped with the strength of Kamiah plus the emergence of Salmon River in the preliminaries, made things a bit dim for the Trojans hope of retaining their crown.

Bernhagen, a possible four-first entry, won all her preliminary heats in the sprints. But a problem loomed in the form of Kristen Jensen of Kendrick who looms strong in the 100 and shattered the overall state 200-meter mark with a time of 25.2. The Jensen-Bernhagen combination poses a threat to Jerome's plans for a big point harvest in the sprints behind Vicki Winder and Joni James. But the Tigers still have their four relays for help.

Jerome boys grab A-2 track lead

By LARRY HOVEY Times-News writer

BOISE — On the shot-put championship of sophomore Gary Hulseley and the 1-2 3,200-meter finish by Robin Mehn and Craig Foote, the Jerome Tigers jumped into the lead of the State A-2 Boys Track and Field title chase Friday.

Hulseley, setting career bests with two throws, won the shot at 55-23 and 59-11 in the final. Mehn and Foote, running almost in tandem, led the early in the second lap of the 3,200 and simply extended it. The wound up battling for the title over the final 150 yards with Mehn just holding off his junior competitor.

In the A-3 division, Wendell's Steve Luttmere successfully defended his pole vault mark, winning the title at 13-0. He took the title there and then went, without success, record hunting.

His teammate, Rod Hegji, who later qualified for the finals in the 100-meter hurdles, gave Wendell a momentary meet lead by taking the shot at 50-11.5. But the Trojans have very few events left.

While the field finals dominated most of the day, the 3,200 finals in all three classifications were tight. The big one came in the A-1 division where Borah's Rick Bergesen, accused of never winning the big one, unleashed a withering last-quarter sprint to overhaul Minico junior Albert Lara in a record time of 9:16.5.

Going into the last lap it appeared Lara had shaken the three-week slump he's been in in this event. He stretched ahead by probably 50 yards going into the final lap. But Lara isn't known for having a kick and when Bergesen moved up quickly on the back stretch, the crowd could suddenly see his confidence. He stormed around Lara coming off the final curve and went on to win by four seconds.

Bergesen had a little trouble understanding how he could make up so much distance in 400 meters. "I guess it was a 59 (second last lap) but I don't know," he said.

Although he knew of Bergesen's going into the race, "I never knew how much lead I had because I never looked back," he said, off the top of the stretch. "I heard the crowd and looked back and saw him coming."

Lara said he couldn't feel bad with the second place. "It's the best time I've ever run," he pointed out.

In other events, Borah's Greg Harrison proved he's capable of

Umpqua 1 win away from national tourney

By MARV CLEMONS and MARCUS PRATER Times-News writers

TWIN FALLS — Umpqua Community College is one win away from the national junior college baseball tournament.

The Timbermen downed two Idaho schools — North Idaho College and the College of Southern Idaho — at Frontier Field Friday to finish the first day of the Region 18 tourney with a 2-0 record.

Umpqua is in today's p.m. championship game opposite the winner of the 1 p.m. CSI versus Linn-Benton contest.

Southern Idaho, trying to return to the national tourney for the first time since 1979, used the long ball to defeat Linn-Benton in its first game Friday afternoon, but fell victim to some errors and Umpqua's timely hitting in the late game that ended just a few seconds before midnight.

North Idaho was the one team ousted from the tourney Friday as it suffered losses to both Umpqua and Linn-Benton.

The results of Friday's games:

CSI vs. Linn-Benton 5

The Golden Eagles used the long ball in downing rival Linn-Benton Community College Friday afternoon.

Right fielder Bobby Thompson crashed two homers while Tim McMannon and Mike Calolari each had one.

Linn-Benton's Brian Bonds started the Roadrunners with a one-out double in the top of the first inning. He took third on a passed ball and scored on Scott Anderson's single to give the visitors a 1-0 lead.

CSI responded with a three-run outburst in the bottom of the inning, all runs and hits coming with two outs.

Thompson started the home run charge with a hit to dead center field.

"He (Linn-Benton pitcher Rick Rosenzweig) got a first ball-a-little high," Thompson said. "They call anything above the waist a ball in the regionals, so I probably shouldn't have swung at it."

Mike Robbins followed with an in-field single and that brought the 6-5-2 McMannon to the plate. He hit his shot to left-center to put the Eagles out to a 1-1 tie.

Calolari, just a 150-pound second baseman, hit his solo homer in the second inning to right-center. The ball just cleared the fence and the Eagles appeared to gain special delight in seeing the Sparks, Nev., sophomore travel around the bases.

"He's hit over the homer" before," Walker said. "But don't ask me when."

Linn-Benton got back within a run in the top of the third as three singles, a walk and a balk allowed two Roadrunners to cross the plate. CSI hurler Scott Troester finally escaped the inning by getting Jeff Waddington to fly to center with two runners on base. Jerry James, Mark Stathas and Mark Fetler all had singles during the rally.

Thompson got one of the runs back in the last of the third as he walked, went to second on a balk, took third on McMannon's single and scored on Phil Brasse's grounder. Linn-Benton tried to turn Brasse's grounder into a double play to end the inning, but he beat the throw to first and Thompson scored.

Brasse moved CSI's lead to 6-3 in the bottom of the sixth inning as he reached on an error, was bunted to second by Sonny Pigg, took third on a grounder to shortstop and scored on a passes ball.

The Eagles put the game away for good in the seventh inning, scoring four runs after Linn-Benton had retired the top two Eagles in the order.

Thompson started the rally with a homer down the left field line; his second of the game and ninth of the season.

Robbins then walked as did

McMannon. That brought Linn-Benton Coach Dave Dangler out to the mound and he removed Rosemus. Brasse faced Kurt Lewandowski and hit a shallow pop-up to center. The ball fell in amidst three Roadrunners, allowing the running Robbins and McMannon to score.

Brasse then scored CSI's final run of the game when Sonny Pigg doubled down the left field line. Pigg was picked off second to end the rally.

David Wrape, who had replaced Troester in the seventh inning, ran into trouble in the ninth. Joel Slosig doubled to start the inning and when Walker reached to put Brian Osberg on the mound, Linn-Benton had closed the gap to 10-5.

Osberg went to 3-2 on Waddington before he forced him to ground to third. Pigg knocked down the line and over the long throw to Robbins to secure the win, CSI's 31st in 37 out.

Umpqua's Brad Goodwin opened up the contest the way the Timbermen would control the game in the final innings. The center fielder whipped a Greg Stefanich fast ball into right field, Goodwin stole second and was advanced to third on a ground out by Neal Brown and Jeff Franks went to first after being hit with Christopher's pitch.

Rich Middleton's double scored two runners and put the Eagles down 2-0 after the first of the initial inning.

The Eagles started a little quicker, but slowed down considerably after Darrell Freter tripled into left-center field and was advanced to home when the Eagles' clean-up batter Mike Robbins singled.

The Eagles tied the contest in the bottom of the third when Freter walked, stole second, advanced to third on a catcher's error and scored when Bobby Thompson singled.

However, the Eagles stay in contention as brief.

Umpqua's Goodwin scored on a wild pitch after a lead-off double in the top of the fifth. An inning later four hits and two CSI errors gave the Timbermen a 7-2 lead.

CSI closed the gap to 7-4 after a two-run eighth, but Umpqua's Jack Holstad's three-run homer in the ninth virtually shut the door on the Eagles.

North Idaho's hopes of a close game with Linn-Benton was ended in the first inning when the Roadrunners' left fielder Jerry James opened with a single that would later turn into their first run of the 12-4 victory.

A pair of doubles by Mark Stathas and Tom Daniels gave the Roadrunners a 4-0 lead after the first inning. North Idaho mustered two hits in the first but failed to score.

Umpqua 9, NIC 4

In the tourney opener, Umpqua broke open a tight game with a five-run seventh inning and Ed McCarter pitched a complete game for a 9-4 victory.

North Idaho took a 1-0 lead in the top of the first inning when Brian Bonds doubled, took third on a passed ball and scored on Scott Anderson's single. Umpqua's Jeff Franks responded by giving the Timbermen a 2-1 lead in the second.

Neal Brown, a first baseman, was reached on an error before Franks, a left-handed hitter, smashed Scott Topp's delivery over the right field fence for a two-run homer. The ball bounced once and hit the National Guard armory.

Umpqua made its lead 3-1 in the fourth inning when Rich Middleton reached on a fielder's choice, went to second on a passed ball and scored on Dave Rice's single up the middle.

North Idaho pulled back within a run when Alex Reim hit a two-out solo homer to center field in the top of the fifth inning.

The Timbermen collected five hits and two walks to score five runs in the seventh inning to assume a 8-2 lead. Brown had a three-run triple to highlight the inning. Topp was driven from the mound when the first three Timbermen reached base, but relief pitcher Aramburu didn't have much more luck as he allowed a walk to Brad Goodwin and Brown's triple. Franks then drove in Brown with a blooper single before NIC could retire the Timbermen.

NIC scored twice in the bottom of the seventh inning on three singles and an Umpqua error. But McCarter finished Darren Taylor to stop the rally.

Umpqua's Brent Collins added a solo runner to right-center for the final margin.

Swedberg places third

SAN ANGELO, Texas — College of Southern Idaho's Kimberly Swedberg set a school record and placed third in the 5,000-meters Friday night at the National Junior College Athletic Association Track and Field Championships.

Swedberg bettered her own school mark by some 30 seconds in clocking a 17:48 to finish third.

Beth Fiesler, running in the 10,000 finals, placed sixth in 31:29.

Jerome

Continued from Page D1 meeting the challenge of Capital's Clint Smith in the sprints. Both clocked 10.7 in the short one with Harrison setting a preliminary record of 21.6 against a 21.9 for Smith in the furlong. Harrison won his 400 heat in 49.8, an eased up tenth higher than Don Ames of Capital won his.

Although the A-2 3200 was the slowest of the three finals, Jerome Coach Tim Dunne was far from displeased with the 18 points it won. The Tigers, expected to have a tough battle with Middleton for the team crown, sustained a setback when Scott Cannady was disqualified in the 400 preliminaries for running out of lane.

Scott Birkinbine singled to drive in two runs, chasing Brodine and bringing Victor Valdez to the mound for the Bruins. Twin Falls pitched a double play, but Jim Andrus drove in the Grizzlies' fourth run with a single.

points against Jerome's 28 Friday but the Vikings showed that scoring better now than the field events are over.

For Hulsey, the difference in the shotput probably came on his first effort. The entire field seemed tight but on his first turn a 54-11 throw and that seemed to collapse the field. His winning throw came on his final effort in the preliminaries.

He knew he had the title when he stepped in for his final throw. "I decided to go for it but I lost it. When you go for everything in one throw that's when you usually mess up."

Could this be the start of a three-year dynasty? "I hope so," the big sophomore smiled.

In other boys' qualifying, McCall-Donnelly's Steve Odmark and Don Leonard of Coeur d'Alene set the pace in the hurdles with a couple of classification records.

Twin Falls advanced Tim Stevens and Steve Galley into the 400 finals and Larry Hurt in the 100. Roger Duffin qualified in both hurdles, as did Bruin Don McMurray in the highs. Greg Potzemick of Malco picked up a sixth in the discus.

Hegi and Luttmer headed the A-3 effort with Ken Burgess of Castletford and Paul Gerhardt of Glens Ferry going three-four in the 3200 — again separated by about a yard.

Lea fires 1-hitter over eight innings

By MIKE TULLY UPI sports writer

Charlie Lea is not quite what he used to be.

"I had very similar stuff to the time I pitched the no-hitter last year," Lea said Friday night after allowing one hit over eight innings to lead the Montreal Expos to a 2-0 victory over the Cincinnati Reds.

"I walked four that time too and I got in jams just like I did tonight," Lea continued the right-hander. "I made good pitches at certain times."

Lea, a 6-foot-4 right-hander who spun his gem against San Francisco last season, outpitched Reds right-hander Mario Soto, 3-4, who tossed 11 and a half innings.

Lea permitted only a one-out single by Dan Driessen in the sixth until he allowed a leadoff single to Driessen in the ninth and was replaced by Woodie Fryman, who earned his second save.

"Lea was awful good, wasn't he," said Montreal manager Jim Fanning.

Charlie Lea was outstanding. He's been good for us every game. He threw 134 pitches and I wanted a fresh arm in there in the ninth."

In evening his record at 8-2. Lea struck out six and walked four. He was at his best in the sixth, retiring Larry Blittner and Paul Householder on called third strikes to end the inning.

"I made two good pitches to Blittner that he couldn't hit," Lea said. "It was a slider inside to Blittner and a fastball inside to Householder."

The Reds loaded the bases on a walk to Ron Oester, Tim Raines' error on Dave Concepcion's grounder and Driessen's sharp single to right. Raines doubled to open the game.

National

Terry Francona sacrificed him to third and Andre Dawson's sacrifice fly made it 1-0.

A double by Warren Cromartie and Lea's bad-bounce single over first base made it 2-0 in the second inning. Lea went 4-for-4 on the night, singling in the ninth.

The game was delayed two hours and two minutes at the start by rain.

Padres 7, Pirates 5
At San Diego, Ruppert Jones drove in two runs and John Montefusco won his first game in exactly a month. Montefusco, 2-4, last won on April 21, against San Francisco. Gary Lucas got the last out to record his sixth save.

Braves 7, Phillies 6
At Atlanta, third baseman Mike Schmidt booted a ground ball with two out and the bases loaded in the seventh, allowing a run to score and capping a Braves comeback. Steve Bedrosian, 3-4, pitched the final three innings to notch the victory. Sparky

Lyle, 1-1, took the loss. Astros 5, Mets 1
At Houston, Don Sutton became the first seventh-game winner in the NL, pitching a six-hitter over eight innings. Sutton, 7-1, struck out seven and walked three. The Mets have won only three of their last 19 games in the Dome.

Cardinals 6, Dodgers 3
At Los Angeles, rookie catcher Glenn Brummer, called up because of injuries to Darrell Porter and Gene Tenen, singled in two runs to highlight a three-run sixth. Steve Mura, 4-3, was the winner with Bruce Streeter earning his 12th save. Jerry Reuss fell to 4-4.

Cubs 6, Giants 4
At San Francisco, pinch hitter Gary Woods bases-loaded a double highlighted a five-run, seventh-inning rally. The triumph was the ninth in the last 13 games for Chicago and lifted the Cubs from the East cellar.

White Sox 3, Indians 2
At Chicago, Bill Almon's two-out RBI double broke a 2-2 tie in the seventh inning to lift the White Sox to eighth place in the American League.

Milwaukee 4, Mariners 1
At Milwaukee, Robin Yount drove in two runs with a pair of singles and Ted Simmons lined a two-run double to put the Milwaukee Brewers over Goylord Perry and the Seattle Mariners.

Bob McClure raised his record to 2-1 with relief help from Rolfe Fingers in the seventh as they combined on a four-inning.

Bobby Unser will not try to qualify for Indy

BOBBY UNSER
Is not retired

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — A sad and apologetic Bobby Unser, winner of last year's Indianapolis 500, announced Friday he will not attempt to qualify a car for the May 30 auto racing classic.

Unser, a three time Indy winner, denied he is a retired race car driver and suggested he has made a few "rash decisions" in the last year that have affected his racing career.

Unser's decision not to run at Indianapolis this year is a direct result of his agreement to manage Mexican driver Josele Garza's racing team. The team had two March-Cosworths entered at Indianapolis, one for Garza and one for Unser, but that plan was foiled after Garza crashed his car in practice last week.

Unser drove the second car around the Indianapolis Motor Speedway several times this week, but said he was just getting the car set up for his young driver.

Unser, 47, who has driven in 19 consecutive Indianapolis races, said he was unhappy over his decision to sit out this year's race.

"I don't say this being very happy," Unser said. "I took the job with the Garza family, and when I have a commitment I work pretty hard and pretty serious.

"I'm extremely sad that I'm not driving. Things were set up so that I could get Josele to a speed that was reasonable. I had things ready to go. I've waited as long as is reasonable, and I'm not going to run this year."

What Unser had "ready to go" was a ride with either Roger Penske or Pat Patrick, two veteran race car owners with whom cars Unser was obviously upset that he was not part of the Penske team that produced so much success with a new car, the PC-10, after driving for Penske the previous three years.

"I had a little bit to do with the making of that race car," Unser said. "I thank Penske and Patrick for the generous offers to myself in terms of race cars I could drive, as that I would run the large races; that a very good contract with Roger Penske. He's really bent over backwards for me. He hasn't pushed me or pressured me."

Unser said he may drive in other champ car races this season.

Unser was declared the winner of the 181st race after four months of hearings and appeals, brought on by a protest from Mario Andretti that Unser illegally passed cars coming out of the pits during a yellow light period.

Unser's race after four months of hearings and appeals, brought on by a protest from Mario Andretti that Unser illegally passed cars coming out of the pits during a yellow light period.

"There was a lot of bitterness," Unser said. "Mario and I both were victims—I was looking for something else, I was disappointed in racing. If I was going to make the decision to manage Garza (today), it wouldn't be the same."

Unser apologized to his fans, saying they were the ones that would be most hurt by his decision.

The last time a driver did not complete the year after winning at Indianapolis was in 1957, when Sam Hanks retired after winning the 500.

Rain kept cars off the track for most of the day Friday, although Speedway officials were able to get it dry for more-than-an-hour-of-practice late in the afternoon. Scott Brayton and veteran George Snider made their first appearances, trying to get cars ready for qualifying Saturday.

Eleven spots remain in the starting field and once those spots are filled bumping procedures begin. Bumping occurs when a car completes a qualifying run that is faster than the slowest speed among the 33 cars originally in the field.

Former Saint indicted on cocaine charges

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — Former Saints running back Mike Strachan was indicted by a federal grand jury Friday on cocaine distribution charges in a wide-ranging investigation of drug use in professional sports.

Strachan, 31, was indicted along with the New Orleans club last year and went into real estate, surrounded to officials shortly after the indictment was returned. He pleaded innocent to seven counts of distribution of cocaine and conspiracy to distribute the drug and was released on $50,000 bond.

Trial was scheduled July 1, U.S. Attorney John Voltz said.

The Saints cooperated in the ongoing investigation by the U.S. attorney's office and the Drug Enforcement Administration.

"The New Orleans Saints football team management cooperated with us fully," Voltz said. "We provided witnesses to us and documentary evidence."

If convicted on the drug charges, Strachan could be jailed up to 105 years and fined a maximum of $175,000, Voltz said.

Voltz said the investigation into drug use by professional athletes was ongoing but declined to specify what the grand jury was studying.

"The investigation is continuing," he said. "There are indications that we need to go further into it."

"The investigation is wide-ranging in that it will include the boundaries that need to be included. At this point, we're working what we need to do. Where it will take us we don't know at this point—but there are many interesting avenues."

Prosecutors presented evidence to the grand jury that indicated Strachan participated in alleged drug transactions between February 1980 and last month, the indictment said.

Former New Orleans running back Chuck Muncie and cornerback Ricky

Ray testified before the panel after Strachan's name was linked to cocaine sales during the trial of Joselyn Bruno, a longtime friend of Strachan. Bruno was convicted in April of selling cocaine.

Muncie now plays for the San Diego Chargers and Ray is with the Miami Dolphins.

During the investigation, government witness Lawrence Hardister Jr., who pleaded guilty to one cocaine charge in the case, told prosecutors Strachan was Bruno's partner in a cocaine operation.

He said Strachan received $7,200 in a drug deal at a New Orleans hotel.

Leonard denies report he'll box again

MITCHELLEVILLE, Md. (UPI) — Welterweight boxing champion Sugar Ray Leonard today denied a statement from his trainer that he will resume his career as soon as he recovers from eye surgery, a spokesman said.

Chubby Brown, a spokesman for Leonard, read a statement from the boxer that said, "To set the record straight, there has been no decision on my part as to resuming my boxing career."

Leonard's trainer, Janks Morton, said Thursday that there is "no question about it" that Leonard will fight again.

"We won't do anything until the last part of December, and then we'll begin lightly to work out. Right now, nature needs to take its course," Morton said.

But Leonard said any statement about his career will come from him.

"I am presently recuperating at my home in Mitchellville. My eye is healing just fine, but any announcement about boxing is much too premature. No announcement will be made until my eye is completely healed, which should be several months from now."

Nelson takes one-shot lead on home course

ATLANTA (UPI) — Larry Nelson, playing within walking distance of home, took a one-shot lead over Scott Hoch Friday at the midway point of the Atlanta Golf Classic with a two-round total of 11 under-par 133.

Nelson, who lives just off the 18th fairway — where he hooked his drive into a lake Friday — had a 67 to go with his opening 66 and said he's setting his sights on the tournament record of 23-under 265 set three years ago by Andy Bean.

"That's going to take some pretty low scores," said Nelson, "but I feel good and I'm putting great. I haven't done anything well all four days this year so I think it is time for something to happen."

Hoch, who started the second round one stroke behind Nelson and first-round co-leader Keith Ferguson, who had a 72-138, posted his second 67 and credited his play to a new grip he put on his putter Wednesday.

LARRY NELSON
Lives just off 18

Friday morning because of two rain delays Thursday. The start of play Friday was delayed for 90 minutes by fog.

"I knew when I looked out my window this morning they would never get off on time," said Nelson who completed his first round Thursday.

"The long wait probably would have bothered me more if I hadn't been home, but I don't think it really bothered me at all."

Nelson hadn't even teed off yet when Hoch finished at 10-under. "I knew I was four shots behind before I even started," he said. "The important thing was not to try to make up those shots too quickly. With that in mind, it was kind of a relaxing day."

Nelson, starting on the back nine, had only two pars over his first 10 holes — pinking up six birdies and two bogeys, including the one at 18 which occurred within shouting distance of the new home he and his family moved into just a few weeks ago.

Nelson tied that point with Hoch on the leader board, then posted five straight pars before sinking a seven-foot birdie putt to take the lead.

"My grip had been slipping but now I feel confident again," said Hoch, who was in month in New Orleans. "I'm already 10 shots better off than I thought I was going to be this week."

Lanny Wadkins, winner this year at Phoenix and in the Tournament of Champions, vaulted into third place at 8-under 136 Friday when, after bogeying the first hole, he had nine birdies over the last 15 for an 8-under-par 64.

Nelson and Wadkins, like Hoch, wanted to talk about their putting changes.

Nelson, who won the Classic two years ago and won the PGA Championship at another Atlanta course last summer, said he made a "slight change" Wednesday "that made a world of difference. I putted so bad last week at the Colonial, I considered coming home and giving it up," he said. "I don't need that kind of aggravation."

"But everything has turned around now. The rest of the year should be a lot of fun."

Wadkins said he changed putters after shooting even par in the first round because he needed one with a firmer shaft. "The greens were too rough for the one I was using," he said. "The switch made a world of difference."

Wayne Levi, Roger Maltbie and Peter Jacobsen were all at 137. Defending champion Tom Watson, with a 70 in the second round, was another shot back, along with Fergus, Peter Oosterhuis and Gibby Gilbert.

A total of 54 golfers had to compete the first round through the still five holes, right where he started, Hoch was the first seven holes of the second round — then got five birdies over the rest of the round.

"I enjoyed playing the course, so it must be a good one for me," said Hoch who has already won more than three times as much as he won in each of his first two full years on the PGA Tour. "I used to put pressure on myself by trying to make things happen, but now I just let it happen. Since I got married late last year I have a lot more stability and confidence in my life."

Capone putted well, rolling home four birdie putts ranging from four to 15 feet. But a weak drive on the 10th and a missed putt on the 13th resulted in bogeys.

"Sometimes your score doesn't reflect your game," she insisted. "I do feel good about what I did out there."

Morse, who has not won on the women's tour in five years, had three birdies against one bogey in a steady round.

"But there's always tomorrow and tomorrow can kill you," she said. "There are quite a few girls who would be champions if a tournament lasted only 10 holes."

Defending champion Kathy Whitworth had problems with the greens and managed just a 73. Nancy Lopez disappointed a substantial gallery and herself with a 75.

The 83-player field will be cut to the low 70 scores plus ties after today's second round. The tournament concludes Sunday.

Little shows her talents don't match her name

NEW ROCHELLE, N.Y. (UPI) — Sally Little, whose growing golfing talents have consistently belied her name, fired a four-under-par 68 Friday to take a one-shot lead over Amy Alcott after the first round of a $125,000 LPGA tournament.

The tournament is known as the Chrysler-Plymouth Classic.

Donna Capone and Cathy Morse are two shots off the pace at 70 while Kathy Hite and Vicki Tabor are at one-under 71. Sixteen other players are within six shots of the lead in the 54-hole event.

Little, a 30-year-old South African, was helped by accurate iron play, particularly on the back nine of the 6,684-yard Wykagyl Country Club course. She had four birdies in six holes after making the turn in 1 under.

After hitting a tree with her second shot on the 17th, she saved par on the final hole with a delicate chip from behind the green and a 10-foot putt.

"I had to par that hole," said Little, a three-time winner this year. "Otherwise, I'd have left this course with a sour taste in my mouth and a bogey on my scorecard."

Little, who leads the LPGA money list with $123,084, earned birdie putts on the first, third and sixth holes, only pausing on that streak when she missed a four-footer on the 199-yard par-3 fourth for a bogey. Little's drive on the par-3 seventh landed 25 feet from the pin and she three-putted for a bogey.

"In previous years I might have become rattled at that point and totally fallen apart," she said. "But I'm a lot happier with myself now because my game is continually improving. It feels pretty good to be Sally Little now."

Little started the back nine with birdies on 10 and 11, saved par on the 12th by lofting a sand wedge from the rough within two feet and used the same club to set up a birdie on the 15th.

The tree then intervened on the 17th.

"I think that tree moved a little," she joked — and a bogey resulted. On the 18th, she flew the green with a poor wedge shot but finished with an accurate chip and a cool putt.

"But there are two more rounds to go," Little cautioned. "You never know."

Alcott, who has won once this year, had a roller-coaster front nine as she carded three birdies and two bogeys. But despite some careless chipping on the back nine, Alcott sank a 12-foot putt for a birdie on the 13th and followed with a well-struck 71 on the troublesome 17th to set up a short birdie putt.

"I think I'm hitting the ball well so I have to be satisfied," Alcott said. "Each hole on this course is a challenge, though. I love that kind of golf course and I think it will inspire me to play even better."

Capone putted well, rolling home four birdie putts ranging from four to 15 feet. But a weak drive on the 10th and a missed putt on the 13th resulted in bogeys.

"Sometimes your score doesn't reflect your game," she insisted. "I do feel good about what I did out there."

Burden apparently trying to avoid jail

MINEOLA, N.Y. (UPI) — Former New York Knicks basketball player Luther "Ticky" Burden has jumped his $60,000 bail in an apparent attempt to avoid serving a 6- to 18-year prison term for a bank robbery conviction, officials said Friday.

Burden's disappearance came to light when he failed to surrender himself in Nassau County Court in Mineola to begin serving the prison sentence.

Burden, 29, had been free in ball while he appealed a conviction of an $18,000 armed robbery of the Guardian Bank in Hempstead on July 3, 1980.

Preakness wagering set record

BALTIMORE (UPI) — The Preakness Stakes at Pimlico attracted more than $5 million in wagering, the most ever bet in a single race in North America, track officials said Friday.

The Preakness handle of $5,578,022 surpassed the previous record of $4,575 bet on this year's Kentucky Derby at Churchill Downs in Louisville.

Pimlico officials offered Other-Track-Wagering, allowing people to place bets on the 107th running of the Preakness at 18 race tracks in the U.S. and at New York's Off-Track Betting offices.

New Montreal team becomes official

MONTREAL (UPI) — Montreal's new Canadian Football League franchise, replacing the debt-ridden and defunct Alouettes, was made official Friday when a Quebec Superior Court Justice ruled against a writ of seizure from former Alouette owner Sam Berger.

Following the ruling by Justice Paul Reeves, the CFL declared the new yet-to-be-named franchise official and transferred all player contracts from the former Alouettes, except that of quarterback Vince Ferragamo, to the new club.

"Now all remaining impediments to the operation of a new franchise have been removed," CFL lawyer Allan Hilton said. "The player contracts were assigned to the new club today."

Tapp maintains PBA lead over Slaker

TORRANCE, Calif. (UPI) — Charlie Tapp raised his match play record to 13-3 Friday to maintain a 129-pin lead over Gil Slaker in a $125,000 stop on the Pro Bowlers Association tour.

The event is sponsored by AC-DeLo.

Tapp, of St. Paul, Minn., who took the lead in the tournament by posting an 8-0 record in the fourth round Thursday, rolled a 1,717 series while winning five of eight games in round five.

He totaled 7,764, including bonus pins, for 34 games — a 216 average for the tournament.

The top five bowlers after the sixth round were slated to advance to today's finals, where the top prize is $21,000.

Browns send another player to Raiders

CLEVELAND (UPI) — The Cleveland Browns traded starting outside-linebacker Don Goodo to the Oakland Raiders Friday for "future considerations."

Goodo was the third veteran the Browns had sent to Oakland in the past three weeks. Running back Greg Pruitt and defensive end Lytle Alzado were traded April 29.

Goodo was acquired from the San Diego Chargers before the 1980 opener and he started four games that year and all 16 games in 1981.
