Senate votes to give up big tax break

By Knight-Ridder

WASHINGTON — The Senate voted overwhelmingly Thursday to repeal a tax break it gave itself five months ago.

Senators reimposed a $1,000 limit on business deductions that members of Congress can claim on their income tax returns.

The action, on a 70-23 vote, followed a public outcry over the congressional tax break, which allowed members of Congress to deduct as much as $19,000 for living expenses incurred in Washington.

"We don't visit Washington. We live here and visit our states. We shouldn't pretend we're down here on business trips," said Sen. Daniel Moynihan, D-N.Y.

The vote on the tax break came on an amendment to a spending bill still awaiting final Senate action. The House already has passed its own version of the spending bill and it makes no provision for repealing the tax break. Therefore, the fate of the taxbreak rests with a House and Senate conference committee.

In the final days of its session last year, Congress lifted a 30-year-old, $3,000 limit on deductions for living expenses and instructed the Internal Revenue Service to devise new tax rules for members of Congress.

The IRS determined that members of Congress could take an automatic $75-a-day deduction for every day of the year except those periods when Congressmen would not necessarily have to be in Washington in order to take the deduction.

Advocates of repealing the tax break argued that Congress was displaying a "double standard" in voting benefits for itself, while asking others to make sacrifices because of budget cuts.

"The public outcry was understandable and has been an embarrassment to us all," said Sen. James Exon, D-Nebr.

But defenders of the tax break said members of Congress should stand up to public pressure.

"We're about to be intimidated by the media," said Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., minutes before the vote.

"This will give the media another shot. The million dollar anchor men will be talking about our $4,000 savings."

Dole termed the reconsideration of the tax break a "circus."

Senate Democrats voted 42-2 to repeal the tax break. Republicans voted 28-21 for the repeal.

Idaho joins federal school-fund challenge

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Idaho joined nine other states in filing a suit Thursday to challenge Education Secretary Terrel Bell's decision to use decade-old census data in allocating funds.

The ten states stand to lose $105 million because of Bell's action.

The lawsuit, filed by New York on behalf of itself and Idaho, Utah, California, Connecticut, Illinois, Massachusetts, Nevada, New Jersey and Pennsylvania, asks the U.S. District Court to order 1980 data used instead for the Chapter 1 compensatory education program, formerly called Title I.

At issue is allocation of $2.4 billion in 1982-83 funds to schools with needy students. Funds are based on the number of poor students per county. States that gained needy students in the past decade stand to lose money under Bell's decision.

"The question here is not additional funds, but rather the just and legal allocation of existing funds among the different states," said Robert Abrams, New York attorney general, in a statement released by his office.

"If New York and other states are denied funds to which they are entitled, vital and highly successful education programs will be sharply cut back or destroyed," he said. Bell, speaking with reporters Monday, said the law requires him to use the most recent satisfactory data, but 1980 county-by-county numbers will not be ready until June at the earliest and it would take up to six weeks to fashion the information into allocation tables.

In addition, data for Puerto Rico, which received the tenth largest allocation this year, will not be ready until even later, Bell said, and it is unfair to use different data for Puerto Rico and the states.

"It's a tough call," Bell said. "I think I have made the most prudent decision I could make under the circumstances. Either way, on this, I'm going to be sued."

According to Nathan Riley, a spokesman for Abrams, New York will lose $40 million under Bell's decision. California will lose $23 million, Connecticut $3 million, Idaho $1.1 million, Illinois $5 million, Massachusetts $9 million, Nevada $22,000, New Jersey $17.2 million, Pennsylvania $5.5 million, and Utah $270,000.

The suit also is being filed as a class action on behalf of all students in the program, Riley said. The states ask a preliminary injunction stopping Bell from using the 1980 data and hope for a ruling early next month, he said.

Bell said states need to know soon how much they are getting so they can set budgets and staffing levels. He said delay would hurt more than half the states, which use census data to make sub-allocations, and the seven states that must by law base state allocations on the federal data base.

But Riley said over the past three years, the federal funding levels have not been published until anywhere from July through late October.

"We're questioning why the secretary sees the need to issue the allocation formulas so early when historically these figures have come out late," he said.

Riley also noted federal law forbids more than a 15 percent cut in any state's allocation, so "local communities can plan even if there is some delay."

Jerome County audit delays investigation

By RON ZELLAR
Times-News writer

JEROME — The Jerome County commission has scheduled a special meeting today to meet with an auditor, who may be assigned to review records in the county clerk's office.

Special Prosecutor Harry DeHaan says the hiring of an auditor would delay by three to four weeks a decision on whether charges should be brought against county Clerk Glenda Belk.

DeHaan was appointed May 5 by Fifth District Judge Theron Ward to review allegations of bribery that resulted from an inquiry by the state attorney general's office.

Information presented to DeHaan by state investigators and by Bill Dalling, the Jerome County prosecutor, dealt primarily with purchases made by Belk's office from one firm, American Data Products of Van Nuys, Calif.

Belk reportedly made more than $7,000 worth of purchases from the California-based office-supply company during her three-and-a-half years in office. The company has been implicated in a bribery investigation in Blaine County, and has admitted offering "bonuses" to customers in exchange for purchases.

DeHaan said Thursday his office has heard many other allegations since agreeing to accept the case. "There is a significant amount of speculation and innuendo going around about the Jerome Court-house," he said. "It is my obligation to lay as much of that to rest as possible."

DeHaan said he will file whatever charges are warranted simultaneously once the investigation is completed.

The auditor, Tony Messuri of Caldwell, is an expert in dealing with county records, he said.

Mel Grindstaff, the chairman of the Jerome County Board of Commissioners, said the commission would have preferred that the investigation be concluded as quickly as possible.

But he said the three commissioners are interested in clearing the air of charges, "so we decided about the only way was to have an audit done."

Grindstaff said the commission will discuss with Messuri what the audit will cost, and what kind of information the county can hope to gain from the review.

Argentine resistance 'fierce'

British troops push toward Port Stanley

By United Press International

British Marines and paratroopers met "fierce" resistance in a major ground offensive Thursday.

Paratroopers advanced in a pincer thrust against Argentine troops at Port Stanley and other key towns on the Falkland Islands, British news reports said.

The nearly 8-week-old war, until now a costly sea and air contest between Royal Navy and the Argentine Air Force, shifted to the marshy terrain of the Falklands themselves as Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher told Parliament in London that British troops were on the move.

"The House will obviously not expect me to give information that would endanger our troops," Mrs. Thatcher said in a terse report. "But our forces on the ground are moving forward from the bridgehead."

The Defense Ministry gave no details, but reports from British correspondents with the fleet said paratroopers and Royal Marines drove south and east from their 60-square-mile beachhead at Port San Carlos toward Port Darwin, Goose mortars and 120 mm anti-tank Wombat guns.

In Buenos Aires, the command said its troops attacked the beachhead by air and land Thursday and shot down a Harrier jet during British air raids on Port Stanley and Port Darwin, on East Falkland, and Port Howard, on West Falkland.

Argentina said its British-built Canberra bombers made bombing runs on San Carlos in the predawn darkness Thursday.

Argentine troops on the Falklands reportedly outnumber the 5,000-man British invasion force by nearly 2 to 1. But the British have the advantage of greater combat experience. The Argentine Army last saw battle in the 19th Century. Another 3,500 crack British troops aboard the requisitioned QE2 were expected to land soon.

In Buenos Aires, the Argentine military command said its warplanes, aided by clear skies, bombed and strafed British positions around San Carlos as British ships shelled Argentine positions around Port Stanley on the eastern side of the island.

Other reports, apparently from defense sources, said the ground advances were backed by carrier-based air strikes by Royal Air Force Harrier jets, straining Argentine defenses with 30 mm cannon fire and anti-personnel cluster bombs.

One report said the troops were ferried by helicopters in darkness and were in place by dawn to launch their assaults under cover of barrages laid down by 105 mm howitzers, 81 mm

Unofficial reports quoted by the BBC said British paratroopers shelled some 600 Argentine troops at Port Darwin, 10 miles south of the beachhead on the northwestern tip of the island, and met "fierce Argentine resistance."

Royal Marine Commandos simultaneously advanced toward Stanley, 50 miles from the beachhead, moving across soft, boggy ground with Scorpion light tanks and artillery, the reports said.

House votes down all four budget plans

WASHINGTON (UPI) — After five long days of dissent, the sharply divided House rejected all four 1983 budget proposals on roll call votes Thursday and adjourned for the Memorial Day weekend without approving any spending plan.

17 separate roll calls, the House killed an amended Democratic version 253-171.

As a last resort, the original, unamended budget plan approved by the House Budget Committee was then brought up for a final vote. But it, too, went down in defeat.

Budget experts have said the deficit could be $182 billion or even more if no budget resolution is passed to set limits on the various programs.

The House members, ill-tempered and frustrated after months of discussion and five long days of discord, voted 235-192 against the Republican version backed by President Reagan, and 289-137 against a moderate bipartisan alternative.

Moderate Republicans, negating the votes of conservative Democrats and defying Reagan's pleas, joined with mainstream Democrats to defeat the Republican budget plan. Last year, the conservative Democrats, the so-called "Boll Weevils," gave Reagan his tax and budget victories in the House.

The Republican plan proposed smaller tax revenue increases and larger cuts in non-defense programs than the Democratic or moderate bipartisan versions, with a military spending increase that was larger than the bipartisan plan and slightly smaller than the Democratic proposal.

Earlier in the day, 64 moderate House Republicans known as "Gypsy Moths" broke ranks and voted for the successful move to restore slashed Medicare funds at the expense of the military. House GOP leader Bob Michel feared the move would lead to that plan's defeat.

The Republican plan proposed smaller tax revenue increases and larger cuts in non-defense programs than the Democratic or moderate bipartisan versions, with a military spending increase that was larger than the bipartisan plan and slightly smaller than the Democratic proposal. After winning the Medicare vote early in the day, Democrats and "Gypsy Moths" sensed mainstream Republicans were in disarray, and upped the ceiling on federal pay increases from 4 percent to 5 percent and lifted a limit on cost-of-living increases for federal civilian and military retirees — adding about $1 billion overall — to the 1983 deficit.

The Medicare change was approved 228-196, with 64 Republicans voting for it.

It reduced the level of military growth in the Republican budget plan by about $4.9 billion in fiscal 1983 and transferred the resulting savings to Medicare. But the amendment did not affect the plan's $18.5 billion reduction in Medicare spending the following two years, 1984-85.

"You have the choice of a price of a submarine or the health of 29 million Americans," said the sponsor, Rep. Mary Rose Oakar, D-Ohio.

From his ranch near Santa Barbara, Calif., President Reagan's spokesman Larry Speakes quoted Reagan as saying: "The budget process is taking a sharp turn toward confusion. The Democratic leadership of the House seems to be bent on running a legislative process that will lead to no resolution of the 1983 budget."

Judge bans Dallas photos

CALDWELL (UPI) — Third District Circuit Judge Edward Lodge banned photographers from taking pictures of murder defendant Claude L. Loveless in Dallas near the Canyon County Courthouse Thursday as attorneys prepared to argue motions in the case.

The ruling extends beyond the single case, however, officials said. They said it means that no defendant may be photographed traveling between the courtroom and jail. "I rather, it is a permanent need," court officials have recognized, "for some period of time."

The order bans the public from a hallway in the courthouse while prisoners are being transported to court, and Lodge said it would remain in effect unless the county commission approves construction of a private stairway for prisoner access.

Coal plant purchases rapped

BOISE (UPI) — Idaho Power Co. should not be allowed to charge ratepayers for purchases it made for a proposed coal-fired plant that never was built, a staff auditor for the state Public Utilities Commission said Thursday.

In testimony prepared for the PUC, Stephanie Miller said commissioners should not allow the utility to pass on to customers $2.3 million in payments for a boiler for the proposed Pioneer coal-fired plant.

She said the utility also should be barred from charging ratepayers for the $1 million a year Idaho Power spends to purchase coal under a contract it entered while the PUC was considering an application to build the two-unit Pioneer plant.

Jones: Toughen drunk laws

BOISE (UPI) — Motorists who are arrested for the first time for drunk driving should be required to spend two days in jail, pay a $1,000 fine and undergo a medical examination to see if they have a serious alcoholism problem, Attorney General candidate Jim Jones said Thursday.

Jones, a Republican attorney from Jerome, said the current law is too lenient with people who drive while drunk. Unless the system is changed, intoxicated drivers will continue to kill innocent people on Idaho roads each year.

"We've got to get these people off the streets," Jones told the Idaho Press Club. "They've experimented with mandatory two-day jail terms for first offenders in California and other states, and it's been very effective. We need that and stiffer fines."

Batt raps Evans' bias

BOISE (UPI) — Lt. Gov. Phil Batt said Thursday industry is not willing to invest new capital in Idaho because Democratic Gov. John Evans has shown "a strong bias" against encouraging economic development in the state.

Batt, a Republican who will face Evans in November general election, said industries will not pump significant amounts of new money into the state economy as long as Evans sits in the chief executive's chair.

"I believe that because of his (Evans') actions and his rhetoric — which have indicated a strong bias against business as such," Batt said in his strongest criticism of Evans yet during his campaign for the top state office.

Ex-Bunker Hill workers sue

BOISE (UPI) — Three former Bunker Hill Co. employees have asked Idaho's U.S. District Court to certify as a class action their suit seeking reinstatement of insurance benefits cut off when the minerals producer shut down.

The three Kellogg men are typical of hundreds of Bunker Hill employees who lost their jobs when the lead, silver and zinc mine and smelter company phased out operations in 1981 and this year, the plaintiffs' attorney, Wayne Fuller of Caldwell, said in court papers filed Thursday.

The suit, filed in April, claimed Bunker Hill illegally withdrew medical, dental and other insurance benefits from "substantially more than" 500 employees at the Bunker complex, owned by Gulf Resources and Chemical Corp., Houston.

Fuller said certifying the case as a class action would save time and expenses because many other former Bunker Hill workers may file similar claims.

Execution chamber delivered

BOISE (UPI) — The state's newest execution chamber was delivered to the Idaho State Penitentiary Wednesday.

Until the 14-by-60-foot mobile home arrived, the state had no building at the prison to execute condemned prisoners.

By state law, executions require three adjoining rooms: a room for 12 witnesses, a room for the executioners and the death chamber. The executioners must not be seen by either the witnesses or the condemned prisoner, but the prisoner must be in full view of the witnesses, Corrections Director C.W. "Bill" Crowl said.

The mobile home, built by Cliff Industries Inc. of Nampa, cost the state $16,680, said Don Cook, operations and mechanical director for the Corrections Department.

Small plane crash kills eight

CHANDLER, Ariz. (UPI) — A twin-engine plane crashed in a newly-plowed field and caught fire Thursday, killing eight people, including a 6-year-old boy.

The victims, all badly burned, never had a chance of surviving the nose-first impact and fire, a witness said.

Seven of the victims were from Yuma, Ariz., and were returning there after a visit to the Chandler-Tempe area. The eighth victim, the youngster, Todd Bryce, was from Tempe, Ariz.

Chandler officials identified the pilot as Gerald L. Breinhardt, president of the Jacobson Development Co. of Yuma, owner of the aircraft.

The Cessna 320 crashed minutes after taking off from nearby Stellar Air Park for the 180-mile flight to Yuma.

Deputy Fire Chief Jim Harsi said authorities had a "hard" time determining the number of victims because of the burned and battered condition of the bodies.

"It's a pretty gory scene," Harsi said.

Later authorities said nine were confirmed dead, but they revised that to eight when a woman informed them she had dropped off eight people at Stellar Air Park for a flight to Yuma, Ariz. Investigators said the orange, brown and tan color of the plane the woman described matched that of the downed aircraft.

Two hours after the noon-hour crash Harsi said investigators who made a visual inspection "thought they saw nine bodies; we're still not sure."

Four teens rob high school classroom

NEW YORK (UPI) — Four teenage robbers — one armed with a gun — barged into a classroom at Brooklyn Technical High School Thursday and robbed students of more than $700 in cash and jewelry, police said.

None of the students at the prestigious high school were injured in the robbery, which occurred at 1:40 p.m. in a fourth-floor classroom.

"They were quite shaken and very, very nervous and upset," one investigator said, "But everybody was all right."

Detective Jerry Quinn of the 88th Precinct said the robbery occurred after a 46-year-old English teacher, a woman, had begun a lecture on English literature to 28 members of the school's senior class.

Two of the robbers stayed outside as lookouts while the other two entered the classroom and ordered the students to hand over their valuables.

Quinn said one of the robbers pointed a gun at the class, while the other went up and down the aisles, taking gold chains, watches and cash from the students.

One student told police a $600 chain was taken. Other students handed over their money in amounts that averaged $3 and $5 each.

Rain likely through Saturday

Twin Falls, Burley-Rupert, Jerome-Gooding areas:
Periods of light rain likely today and Saturday. Westerly winds 20 to 30 mph at times. Lows upper 30s and highs upper 50s.
Camas Prairie, Halley, Wood River valley:
Periods of rain with snow above 5,000 feet today and Saturday. Windy at times. Lows near 30 and highs 45 to 50.
Northern Nevada and Utah:
For Nevada, cool and windy with scattered showers today and Saturday. For Utah, scattered showers and thundershowers today. Becoming partly cloudy Saturday with widely scattered showers, mainly Saturday afternoon. Turning colder.

Synopsis:
Cool and showery conditions are expected to prevail over much of the Pacific into the Memorial Day weekend. An upper level low pressure system over Oregon Thursday will drift over Idaho late Friday. It will linger over the area, influencing Idaho's weather on into the weekend. Cool and moist air will remain over the state.

During the past 24 hours the wettest part of the state was northern Idaho. Elsewhere the moisture has been light or none. Temperatures overnight were relatively mild although cool for the season. Most readings were in the 40s; however, McCall had a low of 30, and Deadwood had the lowest in the state, 28. The warmest Thursday was Malad with 72-degree highs.

The snow levels continue to lower in the mountains, reaching 5,000 feet in southern Idaho. Those who may be traveling or camping in the mountains over the holiday weekend should keep posted on the latest forecasts for the mountain areas and be prepared for cool and wet conditions.

There may be a few delays in agricultural work due to wind and a few showers. Conditions will be generally good through Tuesday. Plant emergence and growth will be slower and irrigation needs will be less than usual for this time of year — because of below-normal temperatures.

Spraying forecast conditions will be generally poor today as winds increase to 15 to 25 mph.

The particulate count in Twin Falls Thursday was 84.

Soil temperatures maximum today will be down 2 degrees at 54. Pan evaporation will be .22 today and .26 Saturday.

Elsewhere in the nation, Redmond, Ore., had the lowest temperature Thursday morning, 26 degrees, while Bullhead City, Ariz., reported the high of 100 degrees.

U.S. continues to abide by nuclear arms treaties: Reagan

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan will offer the Kremlin a pledge that America will continue to abide by the restraints laid down in previous nuclear arms treaties — as long as Moscow does the same — a White House aide said Thursday.

Counselor Edwin Meese said the president will propose in a Memorial Day address at Arlington Cemetery Monday that the provisions of SALT I and II serve as interim restraints during the long process of negotiating a new strategic arms reduction treaty.

Coming at a time of increasing pressure at home and abroad for a nuclear weapons freeze, the move appears aimed at strengthening Reagan's position in debate on the arms control issue in Congress and at the NATO summit meeting in Bonn June 9 and 10.

It is designed to clear away confusion over the administration's arms policy and to deflate proposals for ratification of the still pending SALT II.

In testimony before the Senate Relations Committee two weeks ago, Secretary of State Alexander Haig declared that "SALT is dead" but said the United States is abiding by certain of its provisions.

The president made a similar statement at his May 13 televised

Many senators oppose Jordan sale

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Nearly half the Senate lined up Thursday behind a bipartisan resolution urging President Reagan not to sell advanced weapons systems to Jordan.

The non-binding resolution offered by supporters of Israel would put the Senate on record as opposing sales "under present conditions" in which Jordan rejects the Camp David peace process and purchases weapons from the Soviet Union.

The resolution also warns that advanced weapons sales would "jeopardize both the security of Israel and progress towards peace in the Middle East."

Since multiple warheads cannot be verified by present means, Reagan left open the possibility that the United States was declaring a free-for-all on the number of warheads each side would be permitted on its launchers.

Reagan has rejected proposals by former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger and members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee for interim ratification of SALT II, which still is on the Senate calendar.

The treaty was signed by President Jimmy Carter and Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev in 1979 to replace the five-year "SALT I" treaty, which expired in 1977.

Reagan contends that ratifying SALT II would "legitimize the arms race," because it gives Moscow an edge in powerful land-based missiles and thus removes any incentive for the Soviets to negotiate reductions.

Sources said the president already has "blunted the nuke issue" with his May 9 proposal for a one-third cut in land and sea-based nuclear warheads and a ceiling on their total destructive force.

Foreign Relations Committee but Carter asked the Senate to shelve it after the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan.

Committee approves McMahon

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate Intelligence Committee Thursday unanimously approved the nomination of John McMahon as the CIA's No. 2 official.

The career intelligence official pledged to resist political influences.

McMahon, who began with the CIA as a clerk in 1951, was named by President Reagan to succeed Adm. Bobby Ray Inman as deputy director. The full Senate is expected to act on the nomination early next month.

The unanimous committee vote to recommend approval of McMahon came after several members sought assurances that he would provide "unvarnished" intelligence reports.

"We want raw assessments, not political judgments," said Sen. Joseph Biden, D-Del.

Biden openly stated what has been an undercurrent in the committee's dealings with the CIA — a lack of confidence by some members in the reports of CIA Director William Casey.

"We don't always leap at them to embrace them as being the whole story," Biden said. "That may be a little unfair, but in my humble opinion that lingering doubt exists among some of us on the committee."

Biden said he and others "used to really rely on Admiral Inman" to set

JOHN MCMAHON

the record straight.

Inman's recent announcement he would resign prompted speculation that he quit because of disagreements with the way Casey runs the CIA. Inman denied the reports and said he had long planned to go into private business.

Biden said the committee did not suspect Casey of lying but, "we sometimes wondered whether we were getting the whole truth or sometimes wondered whether or not it was politicized. But we knew if we got Inman up here afterwards he'd never varnish it for us."

"We're counting on you to be straight with us," Biden said.

Under questioning from Sen. Walter Huddleston, D-Ky., McMahon said he probably would resign if pressured to submit — biased or politicized — intelligence analyses.

"Intelligence analysts are very independent people," McMahon said. "They call them as they see them. Our job is to produce intelligence the way we see it — whether it fits any particular mold or not."

McMahon conceded that the intelligence is sometimes wrong. But, he said, "once we publish it, it's gone."

Asked if he would tell the committee of undue pressure McMahon said, "I don't know if I would advise the committee, but I think I would resign if I'd been pressured" to submit politicized assessments.

McMahon said he thinks Casey will want to improve his relations with the committee.

More women wait until 30 to give birth

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Women in their early 30s, who postponed child-bearing to establish their careers, are now producing a "mini-baby boom," the government reported Thursday.

First births to women in their 30s — themselves products of the post World War II baby boom — more than doubled in the 1970s, rising from 54,000 in 1970 to 116,000 in 1979, the National Center for Health Statistics reported.

The rate of first births also went up for women in their early 30s — from 7 births per 1,000 women in 1972 to 12.1 in 1979, a 73 percent increase, the study said.

The study, "Trends in First Births to Older Mothers," said first-birth rates rose for women in every age group from 25 to 35, but the increase was sharpest for women aged 30-34.

Stephanie J. Ventura of the center's vital statistics division, the study's author, described the phenomenon in an interview as a "mini-baby boom."

Hinckley warned by judge

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A federal judge warned John W. Hinckley Thursday he cannot continue to wander in and out of court.

The presidential assailant — speaking for the first time at his trial — meekly replied, "I'd like to stay."

Hinckley assured the judge he feels "fully competent" to assist his lawyers in mounting his defense.

After an all-day hearing with the jury absent, U.S. District Judge Barrington Parker delivered the defense a serious blow by barring testimony about sophisticated X-rays showing abnormalities in Hinckley's brain.

Defense lawyers had contended such abnormalities are common among schizophrenics, and a defense psychiatrist earlier told the jury he based his finding that Hinckley was psychotic in part on results of the special X-rays, called CAT scans.

After listening to — three psychiatrists and a radiologist testify — Parker ruled there was "a lack of general acceptance" in the psychiatric field of the use of CAT scans to diagnose or support findings of schizophrenia.

When Hinckley apparently decided to return to court Thursday morning, Parker summoned the 26-year-old drifter to the lectern and warned that his repeated absences from the courtroom will not be tolerated.

"You don't have the right to just stand up and walk out of court," Parker told Hinckley, apparently exasperated with the defendant's fourth absence from the proceeding.

"Do you understand the court's position on this?" asked Parker, who has a reputation as a stern and crusty jurist.

"I believe so — that I can't come and go," Hinckley replied.

"I do wish to come or go on a whim or anything like that. I'd like to stay in court and watch all the proceedings," said Hinckley, speaking publicly for the first time at his 23-day-old trial for shooting President Reagan.

New laws needed on drunk driving

Saturday dawns beautiful and warm. How about a trip to the mountains for a day of hiking and picnicking? Sounds great.

But watch out on the way home. Nearly half the drivers going down the mountains have had something to drink, and one in 10 is legally too drunk to be driving.

High as those figures sound, they are based on a new survey by the state Transportation Department, which set up an alcohol roadblock on Idaho 21 last Saturday to test drivers coming down to Boise from the mountains. Here's what they found:

Between 8 and 10 p.m., one in three drivers showed some alcohol content, and 7.7 percent were legally drunk.

From 10 p.m. to midnight, nearly half of the drivers' (44 percent) had some alcohol content, and one in 10 was legally drunk, over the .08 percent legal alcohol limit.

Idaho 21, which winds from Boise to Stanley through the Sawtooth Wilderness Area, is a popular, accessible, scenic route. But the highway also has a reputation as a dangerous one, the scene of many accidents where alcohol is a factor.

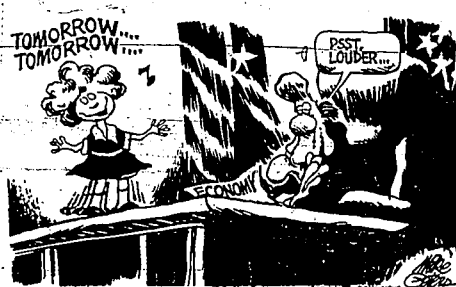

We wonder if a survey along highways 93 and 75 from Sun Valley to Twin Falls on any Saturday night would show a similar pattern.

Every year, an estimated 50,000 Americans are killed in automobile accidents on the nation's highways, and experts say half of those fatal accidents are alcohol related.

Automobile accidents are the single largest killer of young people, and virtually every teenager you talk to knows someone who has been either killed or seriously injured in a car wreck in which alcohol was involved.

Acceptance of these losses seems as widespread as the knowledge of them. Drunken driving simply is not being taken seriously in a society where a large percent of the population both drives and drinks.

Perhaps nothing short of stiff and sure prison terms will reduce the carnage. As it is now, dozens and dozens of Idahoans apparently are getting behind the wheel drunk, with little regard for their own safety or that of others. We'd like to see the Legislature tackle this one again.

National work card would stop flow of illegal aliens

It was a question I expected. "Where did your parents or grandparents come from?" I knew somebody would ask it after I wrote a column supporting a proposed bill aimed at reducing the number of illegal aliens in this country.

The person who asked the question — a lady with a throbbing social conscience — added: "I assume you're of immigrant stock."

The answer was obvious. Of course I'm of immigrant stock. Who isn't?

Only two American groups aren't descended from immigrants: The Indians, who are the only truly American natives, and the blacks, who were essentially kidnapped victims.

So all the rest of us are here because somebody got on the boat. The only differences are when our ancestors came here and from where — a distinction that's important only if you want to get into the Social Register.

In my case, my father was brought here by his widowed mother when he was a child. My mother was born here of immigrant parents. I knew what the lady's next question would be:

"Then how can you propose depriving others of the kind of opportunity that your immigrant ancestors had?" Ah, she thought she had me.

But she didn't, because I'm not proposing that anybody be deprived of the kind of opportunity that my immigrant ancestors had.

They came here legally, at a time when the national policy of this country was to encourage immigration.

This country, with its incredible industrial expansion, needed more people for the factories and mines and mills. It needed them to work farms.

But that's not the national policy anymore. We don't need millions of immigrants, most of them unskilled, because the economy can't absorb them.

So I'm in favor of immigrants having the same kind of deal as the earlier ones had — coming here legally, and within a numbers limit set by this country.

I'm also in favor of this country continuing to be humane in granting political asylum to those who are valid political refugees. But I'm not soft-headed enough to believe that we should let the torrent of illegal immigration go on — not when millions of this country's citizens can't find work, and the cost of social services is already being stretched to the breaking point.

Yet, this is what some naive souls believe — that if somebody manages to slip across the border, that should be enough to assure him or her of resident status. So many groups even want illegals to receive full social benefits — including voting rights.

They consider themselves humane and generous and concerned for their fellow man. But are they? If they are that concerned about their fellow man, then why haven't they considered the impact that millions of illegal aliens will have on those who are already at the bottom of the economic ladder?

Most of the illegals come here for one reason: Jobs.

They work hard, they work cheap, and they are the kind of employees that many businessmen love — they keep their mouths shut and, out of fear, do exactly what they're told.

That's why many businessmen are delighted by our sieve-like borders. They don't have to build plants in Mexico to find cheap labor; they just wait for the Mexicans to sneak up here.

So they spread the myth that only the illegals are willing to do the dirty and hard jobs; that native-born Americans refuse to take these jobs.

Basically, that's racist propaganda. What it obviously means is that blacks, who have the highest jobless rate, are turning down jobs that illegal immigrants are willing to take. And that's nonsense. Blacks have been doing the dirty jobs in this country longer than anyone else.

Every immigrant group has had to start at the bottom. The Irish, the Slavs, the Italians have all been in the ditches, the mines and the mills.

But nobody's done the dirty jobs longer, for generation after generation, than the blacks. Think — when was the last time you saw a blond, blue-eyed shoe-shine man?

And they're still willing to take them, if that's all that the job market has to offer. Any time some plant puts up the for-hire sign, blacks are waiting in line, no matter how much drudgery the job involves.

It's probably true that black employees aren't as putty-like as some terrified illegals. And they shouldn't be. Their ancestors paid their slavery dues. So by 1982, they have a right to ask a reasonable rate of pay and decent working conditions for the four-hour shift.

But many of the employers who beat that only illegals will do their dirty work are saying, in effect, that they are unwilling to pay enough to get anybody but an illegal to do it.

So the answer isn't to let millions of illegals pour into this country and take those jobs, but to pay a decent wage and, if necessary, pass without checking out the allegations made against the service.

We have been associated with Magic Valley Ambulance Service for the past four years, and we can assure the public that MVAS does not use uncertified personnel, but uses only a qualified emergency staff.

Not only did the hospital board make a hasty decision, but it seemed to have overlooked the dedicated service provided for the past 16 years by Magic Valley Ambulance Service.

We would like to know how the hospital board and emergency room personnel can condemn one service or the other, when it is their responsibility and duty to work with all ambulance services using their facility, for the benefit and well being of the patients.

The hasty decision that the MVMH board made was a slander to a reputable business in this community and to its staff, and we feel that a public apology should be made.

Symms is not a statesman

Statesmanship, among other things, is the ability to grasp your opponent's perspective and lead the situation from irreconcilable polarity to compromise and peaceful solution. It is the recognition of, and the fight against, absolutism, and what Walter Lippmann called "blind spots."

Judging from Idaho Sen. Steve Symms' performance on the May 17 edition of the MacNeill-Leher Report, "he is unable to grasp or fulfill the role of statesman."

The subject was Cuba and her relations with the United States. Sen. Symms asserted that Cuba is actively pursuing the violent overthrow of the Mexican government.

The Mexican government, on the other hand, makes no secret of the fact that current relations with Castro are diplomatically and economically excellent. Possibly the senator, with his vast knowledge and experience in dealing with Cuba, knows something the Mexicans do not. He also noted that Cuba's domestic situation, its high literacy rate and standard of living in comparison with other Latin American countries is due solely to the support of the Soviet Union.

Cuba actively supports wars of national liberation abroad. The United States came into being through a war of national liberation that was actively supported by France. Cuba openly supports negotiation as an alternative to civil war. The United States will not negotiate with revolutionaries. It was rightly pointed out on the program that Cuba doesn't have the power to create the movements she supports.

Revolution is born from social injustice within a country, and though it may be aided from without, its reasons are within. If the inequities were addressed by the government concerned, there would be no Marxist revolution in Latin America.

The United States should encourage this if she truly wants to prevent revolution, but anyone who has studied U.S. involvement in Latin America knows that we put our money and interest behind the status quo, regardless of how repressive the regime may be.

In her treatment of people at home and her pursuit of her interests abroad, the United States uses blatant double standards of morality, condoning violations of human rights that if committed here at home would surely bring impeachment of the administration that allowed them to happen.

Not all teachers 'collective'

Several Glens Ferry teachers, who claim to be the "majority" of the Glens Ferry teaching system, seem to be concerned with issues which should be an individual concern, rather than a "collective" concern.

Like a labor union, they seem to want the public to believe that private issues of an individual teacher should be the issues of every teacher, collectively.

The Glens Ferry Education Association organization does not actually represent the majority of the faculty. It only represents the majority of those who belong to it. Not all teachers belong to the organization, nor believe collectively. Several teachers prefer to think that individuality and serving the education of the students is more important than holding with "collective" ideals, which only further the benefits of the members of an organization rather than a higher standard of education for the students.

The Glens Ferry Education Association has misrepresented several of its premises in hoping to gain more faculty members as follows: Although it is impossible for each teacher to be completely satisfied with every decision of the superintendent and the board, every teacher should evaluate individually, not collectively, his or her benefits, grievances and abilities to reach and meet the needs of the students. Every teacher should ask himself or herself, "Am I functioning individually to the best of my ability, or am I thinking and functioning collectively?" Do we want students to learn, think and react collectively, or do we want them to learn individually and the ability to think for themselves?

We should set examples for the students in the art of thinking. How can we do this when some of our own faculty claim to be representing all of us, when in actuality they are representing only those who belong to their organization.

Why should we blame Mr. (James) Reed (the superintendent) for our shortcomings? I think each teacher should carefully evaluate his and her goals. Are we trying to improve education for the students by stimulating individual learning, or are we trying to impose conditions on ourselves for only ourselves?

ERA hunger striker Sonia Johnson rests her head on the lap of Shirley Wallace Thursday

Johnson's mother writes Reagan

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (UPI) — The leader of a hunger strike for the Equal Rights Amendment said Thursday she was "touched" her mother sent a letter to President Reagan pleading with him to save her life.

Sonia Johnson, who has been fasting with six other ERA supporters since May 18, said her mother — Ida Harris of Logan, Utah — sent the letter without telling her.

In the letter, Mrs. Harris urged the president to convince Republican Gov. James R. Thompson to change a legislative rule blocking the ratification of the ERA in Illinois.

"I'm Sonia Johnson's mother and these women fasting in Springfield, Ill., are in dead earnest. I'm terrified that she will die," the letter said.

"I'm outraged that women have to do this kind of thing to get justice, having to fight to their death for rights which should be guaranteed to them under the Constitution as women did for suffrage."

She told Reagan he will be "blessed" by women forever if he persuades Thompson to change a rule which requires U.S. constitutional amendments be approved by a three-fifths vote of the Illinois Legislature.

ERA supporters said they have enough votes for the amendment if the rules are changed to a simple majority. Thompson, an ERA supporter, has argued it is up to the Legislature — and not him — to decide the rules under which it operates.

Mrs. Johnson, who has confined herself to a wheelchair since Monday, has vowed to fast until June 30, the deadline for ratification, or until the ERA is passed.

"I was very touched by that letter," said Ms. Johnson, holding her daily vigil with the other hunger strikers in the Capitol rotunda.

"I think it made me feel good to do that. You can be 46 years old and you're still a baby to your mother. I don't think it hurts for whoever reads the president's mail to see a mother's love."

Mrs. Harris, in a telephone interview from her Logan home, said Reagan has not yet responded. But both Mrs. Harris and her husband, Alvin, said they are sure their daughter will die if necessary for the ERA.

"I wish somebody would go up there and stop them," Harris said. "There is 30 days to go yet and that's too long. They can't make it."

Supplemental funding bill nears passage in Senate

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate voted Thursday night to suspend its rules and take up a $5.12 billion housing stimulus proposal.

Passage of both it and the parent 1982 Urgent Supplemental Appropriations appeared certain by the end of the night.

The vote was 63-27, more than the required two-thirds.

Conservative Sen. William Armstrong, R-Colo., ended his delaying tactics against the controversial housing proposal — which President Reagan has hinted he will veto — and allowed the Senate to get an early start on its Memorial Day recess.

Armstrong charged that Rule XXII, the suspension of rules which Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., used to get consideration of his proposal — had never once been used in its 65-year history.

The Colorado Republican's filibuster had been cracked by a 95-2 cloture vote earlier in the day, but after the Senate finished the rest of the pending amendments to the parent 1982 Urgent Supplemental Appropriations bill, he kept the Senate waiting for nearly two hours.

Armstrong then dropped his opposition to the unanimous consent that Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., needed for the Senate to suspend the rules, and allowed him to call up his housing proposal Thursday night.

Before darkness fell, the Senate finished work on all of the amendments to the supplemental appropriations bill — except for Lugar's housing proposal.

The Senate voted 52-38 to restore jurisdiction of the Mine Safety and Health Administration over sand, gravel, clay and stone operations. Congress voted last year to switch jurisdiction to the Occupational Safety and Health Administration.

Sen. Dale Bumpers, D-Ark., sponsor of the amendment, argued that under OSHA the fatality rate on mines has been increasing. Sen. Arlen Specter, R-Pa., said OSHA had only 27 inspectors while MSHA has 8,000.

The Senate approved by voice vote measures sponsored by Sens. Quentin Burdick, D-N.D., and Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, to provide $2 million for second, third and fourth class postage in order to stabilize Postal Service funding and eliminate the need for a rate change Oct. 1.

Asked company for $10,000

Donovan witness sought money

NEW YORK (UPI) — A new witness who testified against Labor Secretary Raymond Donovan requested $10,000 from Donovan's construction company a week before he was interviewed by FBI agents about Donovan, a company lawyer said Thursday.

Theodore Geiser, an attorney for the Schlavone Construction Co. of New Jersey, said the witness, James Donelan, requested the $10,000 payment in a Jan. 16, 1981 letter written to the company by his lawyer, Arnold Gold.

He said Donelan claimed the money was set aside for him in a Schlavone account that the company says is nonexistent.

A federal law enforcement official said Thursday that Donelan was interviewed by FBI agents on Jan. 23, 1981, a week after the letter to Schlavone.

The official said the FBI had contacted Donelan earlier in January and that Donelan made no allegations of criminal wrongdoing against Donovan during the Jan. 23 interview.

The interview was carried out in conjunction with the Senate Labor Committee's January 1981 confirmation hearings on Donovan's appointment as secretary of labor. Donovan was then a Schlavone executive.

The official said the interview was not forwarded to the committee because nothing Donelan said reached the level of an allegation against Donovan.

But on Wednesday, Donelan, testified before a special grand jury in Brooklyn investigating allegations of wrongdoing against Donovan.

In interviews with The New York Times and the Wall Street Journal, Donelan said he testified Donovan told him more than a decade ago that he had received inside bidding information about New Jersey Turnpike Authority contracts. Authority officials have denied the allegation.

Geiser said Donelan, a New Jersey businessman who owned a company that did business with Schlavone, had never requested the payment of the money before Jan. 16 and had not done any business with Schlavone for at least 10 years prior to the request.

The Jan. 16 letter to Schlavone said that in the early 1970s, "approximately $10,000 was set aside in a separate account to be held by your attorney in the event any judgment would be rendered against him (Donelan) and for various other services."

Geiser said the company responded in a letter dated Jan. 22, 1981, that there was no such account. The lawyer said he did not believe Donelan would have received the letter by the time of the Jan. 23 FBI interview.

Moon talks with Jesus

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Rev. Sun Myung Moon testified Thursday that he frequently talks with Jesus, Moses and Buddha, and believes he has a chance of becoming the "True Messiah, or reincarnation of Jesus."

"I do not say I am the true messiah, but I have the possibility of becoming the real messiah," said the 62-year-old Korean evangelist who founded the 11-million member Unification Church in 1957 and is now its spiritual leader.

Moon's afternoon testimony was halted by a federal appeals court, which scheduled a hearing today on motion to discontinue the trial at which Moon is testifying.

CLOSED-MEMORIAL WEEKEND

Moroccan landing field deal signed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United States and Morocco signed an agreement Thursday to permit U.S. aircraft to use Moroccan landing fields in "emergency" situations. Full details of the accord were not revealed.

The agreement was signed for the United States by Secretary of State Alexander Haig.

A spokesman said that the arrangement covers "emergency" use of the facilities but that the full text of the agreement, which will not require Senate approval, will be kept secret.

The spokesman said that the use of the unspecified Moroccan bases does not involve any payment by the United States, although the United States will pay to have some of the bases facilities to be upgraded.

The announcement did not say how many bases will be available to U.S. forces in the North African nation.

The Moroccan agreement is in line with a series of landing rights that the United States has put together with Middle East countries for the possible use by the Rapid Deployment Force, which would defend the Persian Gulf in the event of a threat to the oil fields.

Survivor describes Coventry sinking

LONDON (UPI) — One Argentine bomb triggered a fireball that crippled the British destroyer Coventry within seconds in Falkland Islands waters this week, a survivor of the sunken British warship said Thursday.

Commander Geoffrey Land, one of the 250 survivors of the 3,500-ton vessel, said two Argentine Skyhawk fighter-bombers were sunk by sailors on the ship before it sunk in Tuesday's Argentine air strike against the British fleet.

At least 20 crewmen perished in the loss of Britain's fourth warship of the Falklands campaign.

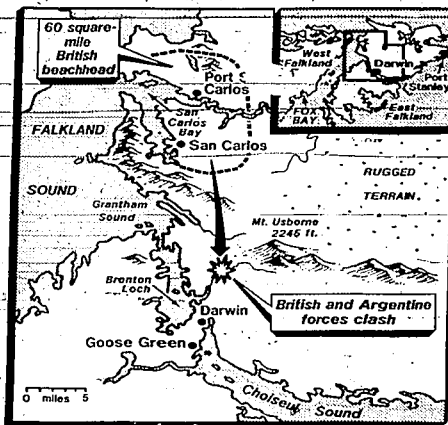

"We had splashed two Skyhawks with Sea Dart missiles before a third hit us low on the port side with a bomb," Land, the Coventry's weapons engineering officer, told pool reporters with the task force.

"There was a loud explosion and a fireball swept through the operations room giving a few of us flash burns. The ship lost all power and began to list to port very quickly," he said.

"There was no panic and the wounded made their way to the upper decks" from where all surviving crewmen were rescued by liferafts, helicopters and other vessels of the task force, Land said.

The owners of the destroyed Atlantic Conveyor said Thursday at least 12 men, including the jovial, bearded captain of the abandoned ship, are feared dead in Tuesday's Exocet missile attack on the requisitioned merchant cargo ship.

A Cunard spokesman said Capt. Ian North, 57, and four other crewmen were missing in the South Atlantic.

Loss of boats, planes, lives mounts in Falklands fighting

By United Press International

As of Thursday, Britain said it had destroyed 55 Argentine planes and 10 helicopters in South Atlantic battles since Argentina invaded the Falkland Islands April 2. The British task force has lost five ships and 100 men.

The latest casualties among the British forces were 21 deaths aboard the destroyer HMS Coventry and four dead on the Atlantic Conveyor. Eight others were missing. Both ships were attacked by Argentine warplanes Tuesday.

Britain has lost five Harrier jump jets, eight helicopters, the destroyers HMS Sheffield and HMS Coventry, the frigates HMS Ardent and HMS Antelope and the requisitioned ship Atlantic Conveyor — severely damaged by an Exocet missile Tuesday.

The total of 100 British deaths includes 20 men aboard HMS Sheffield, 21 aboard a Sea King helicopter that crashed during preparations for the May 21 counterinvasion, and 22 aboard HMS Ardent.

The Defense Ministry in London said Argentine losses include 20 Mirage, 20 Skyhawks, one Canberra, two Pucaras, one Recce aircraft and 11 aircraft destroyed on the ground on Pebble Island.

Argentine losses include 321 men aboard the sunken cruiser General Belgrano and at least 46 pilots, according to the British. One sailor was injured when the Argentine submarine Santa Fe was destroyed at South Georgia.

The last casualty figures released by Argentina were May 12, when it said that in addition to the Belgrano casualties, it had suffered 41 dead, 41 injured and eight missing.

Frigates burn easily

Sinking ships cause second look

By BRUCE INGERSOLL
Chicago Sun-Times

WASHINGTON — For the British frigates Ardent and Antelope, it was baptism by fire indeed, a fatal baptism in the South Atlantic.

The Ardent was wrecked by a rocket attack and the Antelope by a 500-pound bomb, but what ultimately did these sister ships in was fire, raging at temperatures as high as 2,200 degrees.

Both ships had superstructures made mostly of aluminum, and in all that heat their aluminum skins crumpled and collapsed and then melted.

The Antelope, a British war correspondent reported, "burned white-hot through the night... At dawn, it was still glowing red, the side ripped open, everything above deck level reduced to mangled, black metal. Then, on Monday afternoon, 'the pipe broke her back and, as the sea rushed in, a white cloud erupted. The hot metal was finally cooled.'"

Analysis

After the fiery demise of the Ardent and the Antelope, some political foes of the British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher questioned the wisdom of building ship superstructures, or decks, out of something as vulnerable as aluminum.

"That's what happens to people who put their faith in the wrong materials," says Norman Friedman, deputy director of the Hudson Institute at Croton on Hudson, N.Y.

There's no cause, however, for smugness on our part, Friedman and other naval analysts point out. Since the 1950s, our Navy has been every bit as enamored as the Royal Navy with the advantages of lightweight aluminum alloys. With the exception of aircraft carriers, virtually all our warships have steel hulls and aluminum superstructures.

Our naval architects, in trying to cram radar, guided missiles and computerized combat information centers aboard our ships, found they had a problem with top-heaviness. This left them with two options: build a bigger hull to carry the added weight of modern technology or build a lighter superstructure. They opted for the latter, primarily because it was the cheaper way to go.

By using aluminum instead of steel, they were able to reduce superstructure weight by 5 percent. They also managed to cut construction costs by 2 percent. Lost in this trade-off, however, was a lot of "ship survivability."

One analyst likens today's warships to "eggshells." Most were designed in peacetime and were war to break out tomorrow, they would be vulnerable to the "cheap kill." Retired Rear Adm. Julian S. Lake defines cheap kill as the "loss of mission capability due to light damage."

Our Navy became concerned about the increasing peril of shipboard fires and the increasing risk of cheap kills long before the burned-out hulks of the Ardent and the Antelope went down.

During the Vietnam War in 1972, the U.S. destroyer Worden was accidentally knocked out of action by an errant U.S. missile that did not even hit the superstructure. Its fragmentation warhead exploded 75 to 100 feet overhead, but the flying shrapnel did heavy damage, killed one seaman and injured seven others.

Afterwards, all the shrapnel was gathered up and analyzed, Lake writes in International Defense Review. "Two-thirds of it was aluminum from the Worden's superstructure."

In 1975, the U.S. cruiser Belknap collided with the aircraft carrier John F. Kennedy in the Mediterranean and caught fire.

"The Belknap burned down to the gunnels," says one analyst. "Essentially, there was nothing left but a hollow shell. It took more than four years to reconstruct it."

"The sight of that ship melting, I think, had a profound effect," adds Friedman.

Pope leaves on hectic trip

VATICAN CITY (UPI) — John Paul II leaves Britain on a six-day trip to Britain, the first by any pope, and the start of a hectic three weeks of travel that includes a meeting with President Reagan and a visit to Argentina.

On the eve of his departure, the Vatican formally confirmed reports from Geneva that the pope would also pay a one-day visit to the Swiss city on June 15.

John Paul's Alitalia 727 jet is scheduled to leave Rome early in the morning for the 2½-hour flight to London where officials said security preparations eclipsed even those for last year's royal wedding.

British police, working in close collaboration with Vatican security forces, will be concerned about potential terrorist threats, demonstrations by Protestant extremists and the vast crowds expected to attend the pope's masses and line the routes of his motorcades.

The trip to eight cities in England, Scotland and Wales is one of the most controversial foreign visits undertaken by John Paul, 62, who has insisted the trip was "strictly pastoral and ecclesiological."

He was apparently forced to schedule a follow-up visit to Argentina June 11-12 to offset criticism for going to Britain while war raged in the South Atlantic.

Dayan's son scorns father in book

TEL AVIV, Israel (UPI) — A son of Moshe Dayan, who was out of his father's will, accused the Israeli soldier-statesman of incompetence and greed in a bitter attack published Thursday.

Ehud Dayan, second of Dayan's three children by his first wife, leveled the surprising allegations in the manuscript of a book "Life as a Side Show" he is writing, excerpts of which were carried by the newspaper Ma'ariv.

"In the evening of your days, you turned blind," he wrote of Dayan, who was 66 years old when he died of cancer last October.

The son mocked his father's abilities as a general and statesman. He said the man with the black eye patch, who was hailed as the hero of the 1967 Middle East war, would have failed a platoon leader's course in an "enlightened" nation like Britain.

Ehud begins his story with a description of the readiness of the will. Dayan's second wife, Rachel, and the three children from his first marriage, Yael, Ehud and Assaf, were present.

"Forty five minutes after entering the office we left the room three shamed remnants and one millionaire," Ehud wrote. The second Mrs. Dayan inherited almost everything from Dayan's property, writings and lecture tours abroad.

It's Collection Time

Your newspaper carrier makes it a point to collect at a regular time — convenient to you.

In that way your carrier comes expected and you can be ready.

You can help, too, by having the money at hand so the carrier won't have to come back. Believe us, that will be appreciated.

Because this young person is in business and depends on full collection of the route for full profit. And repeat calls mean extra work and no extra profit.

Hence, next time, your boy or girl comes by to collect, be ready — and watch that big smile, which says "Thank you."

Japan will announce new trade concessions

TOKYO (UPI) — Japan's foreign minister summoned the ambassadors of the United States, Canada and the Common Market nations Thursday in a diplomatic offensive to win support for Japan's sweeping new trade proposals.

An eight-point plan to reduce tariffs, increase import quotas and help foreign businesses break into the difficult Japanese market was outlined for the envoys by Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakuruchi, officials said.

Foreign Ministry officials said the government would announce officially the plan today in anticipation of the Versailles summit of the world's seven largest industrial nations, expected to focus on trade restrictions during meetings beginning next week.

Japan expects to lose $68 million in government revenue from the tariff reductions, against trade surpluses of $18 billion with the United States and $13 billion with the 10 nations of the European Economic Community in 1981.

Sakuruchi told the envoys the package represented the outcome of Japan's best efforts and that their "understanding is necessary to maintain the momentum" for further opening of the Japanese market, the officials said.

A U.S. Embassy spokesman said U.S. Ambassador Mike Mansfield expressed appreciation for the package as a "second step on a long journey toward the further opening of Japan's market."

The measures included removal or reductions of import duties on 215 industrial and farm products and an increase in import quotas for four farm and fishery items, they said.

A ministry spokesman said the package would allow 450 industrial items to enter the Japanese market duty-free.

By 1987, he said, tariffs on all imported industrial products would be reduced to an average 3 percent compared to more than 4 percent in the United States and the Common Market.

The package also was expected to include measures for the government to aid foreign cigarette manufacturers through complicated distribution networks and to standardize import procedures for a number of other goods.

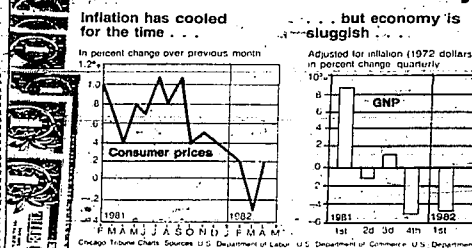

A first round of market-opening measures was implemented two months ago, but failed to appease overseas critics. They included tariff cuts on about 1,600 items and some simplification of import procedures.

Tokyo's action follows persistent pressure from the United States and European allies to reduce surpluses.

Japan still maintains import quotas for 22 sensitive farm and fishery products, on which it will begin negotiate with the United States in October.

State of the U.S. economy

Gradual but early recovery predicted

NEW YORK (UPI) — Low inflation and resolution of the current budget impasse will spawn an early but gradual recovery from the recession and a sharp drop in interest rates by the end of the year, three economists predicted Thursday.

Martin Anderson, senior fellow at Stanford University's Hoover Institution and former director of the White House Office of Policy Development, said 1983 should see short-term interest rates fall to around 10 percent from the current 12-14 percent and long-term rates to 11-12 percent from 13-14 percent.

Unemployment will be around 7-8 percent next year, compared with more than 9 percent now, and inflation about 5 percent, Anderson told the general meeting of the American Iron and Steel Institute.

"There is such tremendous pressure for a compromise (by the White House and Congress) on cutting the budget deficit that I think there will be a series of undramatic, modest agreements — including some cuts in defense" which will propel the economy into a slow recovery, Anderson said.

He cited the new attitude in Washington in favor of cutting government spending and President Reagan's resolve to see his economic program through as some of the "basic forces operating in the economy which are extremely encouraging" and provide a foundation for a sustained upturn.

William Freund, senior vice president and chief economist at the New York Stock Exchange, also predicted a "mild and gradual recovery brought on in part by lower inflation, which raises real income, and by the July tax cut."

Freund also based his optimism on the growing consensus in Washington over the need for a lid on government spending and for increased savings and investment.

Stocks stay low before holiday

NEW YORK (UPI) — Stock prices skidded to a two-month low in slow pre-holiday trading Thursday as the investment community showed concern about high interest rates and large federal budget deficits.

Several market situations attracted attention but the overall list was featureless as investors worried about the bloody British-Argentine fighting in the Falkland Islands.

The Dow Jones Industrial average, which lost 3.81 points Wednesday, dropped 3.81 points to 824.96, the lowest finish since it closed at 822.77 on March 31. It has lost 44.24 points since the start of the session.

The New York Stock Exchange index shed 0.30 to 61.88 and the price of an average share decreased 12 cents. Standard & Poor's 500-stock index lost 0.45 to 112.66. Declines topped advances—925-455 among the 1,862 issues traded.

Most Amtrak employees sign labor agreement

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Amtrak Thursday signed labor agreements covering more than 70 percent of its employees, with six non-operating unions accepting significant wage concessions.

Amtrak president Alan Boyd said the agreements would save $132 million over their three-year period as compared to freight railroad contracts, assuming nine smaller unions accept the same agreements. Amtrak has about 18,000 employees.

For the first time in the history of rail labor negotiations, passenger service employees bargained separately from freight employees.

The agreements—signed Thursday—include a wage increase of no more than 18.7 percent over 39 months, compared with a little more than 30 percent in freight railroad contracts signed last year.

The changes in work rules, which had grown up over decades, included such provisions as allowing split shifts, allowing employee starting times to be altered, and requiring employees to remain in certain jobs for fixed periods rather than bidding frequently to different jobs.

"We've made these concessions for the future of Amtrak," said Richard Kilroy, international president of the Brotherhood of Railway and Airline Clerks.

Kilroy said it was clear that Congress and the administration had drawn the line on spending for Amtrak labor, and that his members agreed concessions would be necessary. A strike never really was considered, he said, because employees have a stake in a healthy Amtrak.

"If they (Amtrak) grow, we get more members and they are better off," he said.

There were some contract improvements, including major holidays and improvements in health and dental plans.

Hospital officials stand by ambulance vote

By STEPHANIE SCHORW
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Magic Valley Memorial Hospital officials are standing by their decision to use one of the two ambulance services available in the county, although they feel it is to give specific reasons for the decision.

A resolution passed Monday night by the hospital board that said all routine transfers would go only to the Twin Falls Emergency Medical Services sparked an investigation of the county's two ambulance services.

The county commissioners said that investigation found that Debris

Brodigan, who runs the Twin Falls Emergency Medical Services, did not have a business license. Brodigan was charged Wednesday with violating the county's ambulance ordinance. But the charge later was dismissed, and Brodigan was issued a proper license.

MVMH administrator Bill Burns says that the hospital has stepped rotating routine ambulance calls between the two services.

Monday's resolution stated that Magic Valley Ambulance Service, run by Cloyce Edwards, the county commissioner, violates the certification requirements of the county's ambulance ordinance. It also questioned the "quality of care" provided by Edwards' service.

The resolution originally was drafted by the hospital's trauma committee, which reviews emergency medical procedures.

Edwards says the resolution had "false accusations and hollow charges."

"I think the emergency-room doctors and nurses are favoring Brodigan to more or less hurt our service and do away with us," Dr. Harry Brumbach, the trauma committee chairman, said the quality-of-care assessments based on "instances and observations" cited by the emergency-room physicians.

Dr. Carl Bontrager, an emergency-room physician, declined to give specific examples of the lack of "quality of care," citing confidentiality problems. He contends, however, he does have documentation supporting his position.

"The committee reviewed the information available, and the committee felt there was difference in patient care. That was the basis for the recommendation," he says.

Burns said he "preferred not to make a statement" on specific examples of patient-care problems.

MVMH attorney Fred Decker also declined to discuss specifics because of a "threat of litigation," but he would not elaborate.

Another issue raised by the resolution is whether the county's ordinance, which regulates the licensing and operation of ambulances, sets stricter standards than state requirements, and whether the county's rules supersede those of the state.

The section in question stipulates: "that the attendant, driver or attendant-driver has received such education training as deemed necessary by the State Emergency Medical Services standards and has successfully passed tests necessary to certify to same."

Burns says the trauma committee believed this section meant two certified persons are required on every ambulance run. The state's EMS laws require only one certified person on each call.

Both Brumbach and Bontrager say that Edwards' service often made runs with one certified person, which met state requirements but, in their opinion, violated the county ordinance. They say Brodigan's service always had two certified persons on every call.

Negotiations stall; so Cassia teachers request mediator

By GLEN WARCHOL
Times-News writer

BURLEY — Voting this week to declare an impasse, teachers in the Cassia County School District look to a mediator to break the stalemate in contract negotiations with the school board.

Until the board and teachers meet and agree on a mediator, no date can be set for the next negotiation session. If they decide on federal mediator, negotiations could be delayed a month or more.

Early this month, teachers in the Minidoka County School District also declared an impasse, after rejecting the board's 5 percent across-the-board salary offer. The Minidoka teachers objected to the raise being contingent on voter approval of a $250,000 override levy.

However, the option to reopen bargaining before the arrival of a mediator is available in an impasse situation.

Teachers in Cassia County went into negotiations in mid-May, proposing a progressive salary schedule, with a 4 percent increase in the starting salary — from $11,865 to $12,340 — and 3.5 percent increment raises for both educational advancement and years of experience, according to Howard Garrard, a spokesman for the teachers. The teachers' proposed schedule would increase their salaries by 12.9 percent overall, he said.

The board's last offer to the teachers was an additive schedule, with 3.5 percent increments for experience and additional education, and a $12,458 base salary — a 5 percent increase — Garrard said. Although the teachers' base-salary request is lower than the board's offer, he said the teachers would gain more through the progressive schedule they have proposed.

Superintendent Norman Hurst said the board's offer — one of several made during negotiations — would increase district spending next year by 8 percent. The district's projected funding, he said, will increase by 6.9 percent next year, with the recent $220,000 override levy and carryover funds included.

The additional 1.1 percent in spending required by the board's offer would be made up in cuts in capital outlay items and maintenance and operation, Hurst said.

The current salary schedule provides a base salary of $11,865, with a system of additive raises for educational advancement that vary from 3.5 percent to 4 percent, and raises for experience that vary from 2 percent to 3 percent throughout the scale.

The significant difference between the teachers' proposed schedule and both the current schedule and board's offer, Garrard said, is that teachers want the schedule to be progressive, rather than additive. An additive schedule calculates the increases for education and experience on the base, or starting, salary. A progressive schedule calculates the increases on a teacher's present salary.

A progressive schedule makes a significant difference in pay, Garrard said, especially to teachers who, at 12 or 13 years of experience, have reached the end of the salary schedule.

Sewage plant upgrade project gurgles to life

By SUSAN GALLAGHER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A portion of the $6 million worth of improvements at the Twin Falls sewage-treatment plant gurgled into action Thursday.

A concrete basin, which resembles a swimming pool with gridded walkways. A control room for the basin was prepped into service Thursday, and a few yards away, partially treated waste water flowed into a new clarifier for the first time.

The debut of these facilities and equipment is the first major step toward the anticipated July start-up of the entire plant, according to Steve Hyland, an engineering consultant for the reconstruction project. Overall, Hyland said, Thursday's premiere would be well.

It was a positive development at a facility that has been the focal point of more disputes than city officials care to count. Disagreements range from the processing of Idaho Food Products industrial wastes to lawsuits over alleged flaws in the original sewage plant.

The reconstruction began about 18 months ago because the original plant couldn't handle all of Twin Falls' industrial and residential wastes in compliance with federal environmental-protection standards.

The new plant was expected to be in operation next month, but harsh winter weather and delays in the delivery of equipment lengthened the construction period, according to City Manager Tom Couney.

Hyland said that by using a portion of the new facilities and equipment, it is possible to take older parts of the plant out of service temporarily and upgrade them. He said the various transitions should involve no apparent effect on sewage service.

During the last few weeks, the installation of equipment has been checked, and factory representatives have been training personnel in the use of the new equipment.

Hyland said the hauling of liquid sludge from the sewage plant to agricultural lands about 10 times a year will not be discontinued as soon as the plant goes on line.

Insulation consisting of fire retardant ground-up newspapers and cardboard is sprayed into an attic by Ruben Salazar.

CAA actively seeking eligible homes for winter weatherization program

By STEPHANIE SCHORW
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — With summer finally making an appearance, most homeowners are probably thinking less about insulation and more about air conditioning.

But winterization remains much on the mind of officials at the South Central Community Action Agency.

They are actively seeking out homeowners, renters or apartment dwellers who meet low-income guidelines and qualify for the agency's weatherization program.

The weatherization program, begun six years ago, is funded through the U.S. Department of Energy. The 1982 grant for this area is $250,000.

The DOE recently set a minimum quota of homes the agency must winterize in order to stay funded at the same level. The 1982 quota is 242; the CAA has completed 132.

Sharon Fisher, the weatherization office manager, says the CAA has stepped up its activity to ensure the quota is met by Dec. 31. But with the coming of summer, when fewer persons are thinking about high heating bills, she says more activity is needed.

While the agency is running out of applications, Fisher does not believe they are running out of homes that need insulation in the eight-county area of Magic Valley.

"I don't think we've hit a saturation point at all,"

She's particularly interested in reaching residents of the northern counties during the summer, since transportation there becomes more difficult in the winter.

Fisher admits some people may abuse the department of attempting to make work to ensure that the funding level remains high, but she insists that the clients served under the program could not afford to do the work themselves.

CAA crews put in caulk and blow in ceiling insulation, wrap water heaters, repair windows and install storm windows. Each home has a $900 limit on material, but both it and the labor are provided free of charge. No cosmetic work is done, Fisher says.

The majority of the program's clients are senior citizens, living on fixed incomes in homes built before heat became a high-priced item.

"We're only servicing low-income persons who could not do it if it was not a free service,"

Fisher says.

Income guidelines used for the program are 125 percent of the federal poverty guidelines. For example, a non-farm household of one must make less than $5,850 a year or $487.50 a month to qualify. A non-farm family of four must make less than $11,625 a year or $968.75 a month.

All work is performed by a nine-person crew that works full-time for the program.

If the person is renting the home, permission must be granted by the property owner. The CAA also asks rental owners to sign an agreement not to raise the rent for a year after the work is complete.

Morning fire destroys Burley motorcycle shop

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News correspondent

BURLEY — An early morning fire Thursday destroyed Thompson's Suzuki-Kawasaki motorcycle store at 1430 Overland Ave. in Burley.

The Burley Police Department was notified of the fire by a call from an unidentified woman about 2:45 a.m. When firefighters arrived, the building was engulfed in flames, according to Cal Sterling, the Fire Department's shift captain.

Shortly afterward, the blaze spread to the repair-shop area of the Singer Sewing Center store, about 25 feet north of Thompson's business, Sterling said. A separate motorcycle store, which also caught fire, Both structures sustained considerable damage, he said.

There was also minor smoke damage to Magic Carpet Travel Agency, north of the sewing business, Sterling said.

The fires were brought under control about 6 a.m. No damage estimates were available from the Fire Department by Thursday afternoon. However, Richard Thompson, the owner of the motorcycle store, estimated his loss at more than $350,000.

The cause of the fire has not been determined, and the case is under investigation. But Sterling said there is no reason to suspect arson at this time.

The building containing the motorcycle store was a one-story structure of about 5,000 square feet, according to Thompson, who said he was in the process of buying the building.

"You just can't believe it," Thompson said after he viewed the remains of his business, which had been at the Overland address for more than three years.

Sterling said 37 firefighters and six engines were used to battle the blaze.

Assessors protest state order to boost property values

By MARTY TRILLHAASE
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — County assessors and the State Tax Commission are set to lock horns over a tax commission directive calling for an increase in residential property tax assessments in many areas of the state.

Twin Falls County Assessor Dorothy Hamby is among those protesting the tax commission's directive, saying the tax commission's plan for Twin Falls would increase city residential property values by 26 percent. That would translate into a property tax increase of about 10-15 percent for those taxpayers, she says.

Other counties are receiving different assessment orders and some, such as Cassia County, have been deemed to be within an acceptable level of compliance.

But several assessors in the Magic Valley, including Blaine County Assessor Del Nicholson, Gooding County Assessor Brent Giesler and Lincoln County Assessor Imogene Hensley say they will protest the tax commission's directive.

Our county assessors across the state may protest the directive, although some apparently are complying, according to John Wasden, Bonneville County Assessor and president of the state assessors' association.

"I can certainly say that those that I've talked to, everyone that I've talked to, has been in agreement that they would protest this, even though they would comply with it, some of them. They still don't like it," he says. "I think when it comes right down to it, probably most of them are going to comply. That's a feeling that I have. You can't buck City Hall."

The degree of protest, ranging from public statements to outright legal battles, may hinge on two developments slated for next week.

First, members of the Idaho Association of Counties and the Idaho Assessors Association will meet with the tax commission representatives on Wednesday.

Wasden says his organization will ask the tax commission to back off.

"The most important thing we're going to be discussing is to try to get the tax commission to soften their approach on this thing a little bit," Wasden says.

Second, Lincoln County and tax commission officials are scheduled to hold a hearing on Thursday concerning Hensley's position on the matter. Her refusal to comply with the tax commission's directive has produced a more formal order to comply, which has led to Thursday's hearing.

N. Doug Rose, the Lincoln County prosecutor, says he is prepared to challenge the legality of the tax commission's order.

"I think the assessor has done her job remarkably well," Rose says. "I think what's happening right now is the State Tax Commission has taken over the responsibilities of the assessor. Maybe we're wasting a lot of money by having county assessors anymore because it looks like the State Tax Commission is taking that over and I don't think that's right."

Indy drivers meet without controversy

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — The drivers' meeting for participants of the 66th Indianapolis 500 occurred without incident Thursday despite the controversy surrounding last year's meeting and the subsequent discussion of the rules of the race are discussed and despite the fact most people attending Thursday were involved in the 1981 scoring fiasco, different rules interpretations were discussed.

It was last May when Bobby Unser violated the rule which states that cars cannot pass while coming out of the pits during a yellow flag. Unser was penalized one lap for the violation after the race was over, appealed, and the lap was returned many months later to give him the victory. The rule says that drivers must determine their position relative to the field on the track upon exiting the pits and get into the position or behind when re-entering the pack at the end of Turn Two.

Chief Steward Tom Binford said the rule remains unchanged.

Reagan formally accepts 1984 L.A. Olympics

ROME (UPI) — President Ronald Reagan Thursday sent formal acceptance for the 1984 Los Angeles Olympics, confirming the Games would be run in compliance with the Olympic charter.

The letter, to International Olympic Committee President Juan Antonio Samaranch, stated, "It is my pleasure to reiterate the assurance of the American people to welcome the Olympic Games to Los Angeles in 1984 and state that the Olympic charter will be enforced."

IOC Director Monique Berlioux said the IOC had also received assurances from Peter Ueberroth, president of the L.A. Olympic Organizing Committee, that they would observe the Olympic rule stipulating Olympic identity cards would guarantee entry into the country instead of visas.

President Reagan's response followed an earlier letter from Soviet Minister of Sport Sergi Pavlov, president of the Soviet National Olympic Committee, pointing out that Los Angeles, in violation of the Olympic charter, had not yet submitted the written guarantees of its government confirming the compliance of the rules of the charter.

In his letter Pavlov stressed that entry to countries should be according to all holders of Olympic identity cards, which would have the force of entry visas.

Berlioux told a news conference Thursday the IOC's 85th session had accepted the Los Angeles proposal, provided the IOC was informed and approved the cost of athletes' housing and the organizers also provided more information to all national Olympic committees.

Ueberroth said athletes would be charged between $45-$50 a day. This was only 20 percent of the real costs and the organizing committee would pay the rest.

"It's the best we could do," he said, pointing out that the national Olympic committees would receive $15 million from the IOC, "part of the television rights. This represented $100-$150 per athlete taking part."

In an oblique reference to Pavlov's letter, Ueberroth denied the Soviets were conducting a personal campaign against the United States.

"The Soviets are not a problem to us. They are not standing alone. All want the Los Angeles Organizing Committee to conduct the Games according to the Olympic charter and I support it. They are just as consistent with other countries," he said.

Astro owner McMullen purchases club

NHL approves Rockies' move to New Jersey

NEW YORK (UPI) — The NHL Thursday approved the sale of the Colorado Rockies to a group headed by John McMullen, and agreed to the subsequent transfer of the franchise to the 19,100-seat Meadowlands Arena in East Rutherford, N.J.

The New Jersey club, as yet unnamed, will move to the Patrick Division, competing with the three-time Stanley Cup champion New York Islanders, the New York Rangers, the Philadelphia Flyers, the Washington Capitals and the Pittsburgh Penguins.

The Winnipeg Jets, who were in the Norris Division, will replace Colorado in the Smythe Division in return for a financial consideration of an estimated $5 million.

Officials at the Meadowlands, who have hoped for an NHL team since before they opened the arena last June, were obviously elated with the decision.

"I'm very pleased," said Jon Hanson, Chairman of the New Jersey Sports and Exposition Authority.

"We've been trying for a while to bring a team here."

NHL President John A. Ziegler Jr. indicated the major details of the transfer have been settled.

The total cost to McMullen is an estimated $27.30 million. The figure includes the purchase price, an unspecified transfer fee to the league, the financial consideration to the Winnipeg team, and indemnification to the Flyers, Rangers and Islanders for allowing a fourth team into the New York-Philadelphia corridor.

When the Islanders joined the NHL in 1972, they paid $5 million in indemnities to the Rangers for the right to share the Greater New York area.

McMullen, who is the owner of the Houston Astros baseball team, purchased the club from Peter Gilbert, the Buffalo Cable TV entrepreneur who had bought the team in February, 1981 for $7 million. The team's estimated operational losses this past season were $4 million.

Mr. Gilbert lost substantial money, even with this transaction," said Ziegler.

Court: NCAA must give up documents

TOPEKA, Kan. (UPI) — In a major decision Thursday, the Kansas Supreme Court said the NCAA must hand over to the Birmingham Post-Herald 15 documents concerning an investigation into basketball recruitment practices.

Bobby Lee Hurt, a highly recruited high school basketball player from Alabama, was the subject of 15 documents included in a massive NCAA file on college recruiting practices.

The Post-Herald, Birmingham, Ala., wanted to obtain the file in defending itself in an Alabama libel suit. However, the state's highest court ruled in a 5-2 decision that only part of the file could be released.

The 15 documents include 11 telephone calls and four interviews, all involving the newspaper and a former student at Butler High School in Huntsville, Ala.

The court's decision was contrary to a decision made in Johnson County District Court by Judge Marion Chipman, who had granted the newspaper's subpoena of the NCAA file should stand. The higher court said Chipman should have taken the time to look through the entire file and realize that some of the records should not be released.

The libel case stemmed from a Post-Herald story printed in the summer of 1981 alleging that Edward Seal, Butler High School's principal, had paid Hurt out of soft drink machine revenues and gate receipts to play basketball while in high school.

The payments allegedly came after Hurt threatened to transfer to another high school. The newspaper had sealed a $8.9 million libel suit against the newspaper, and later asked for an additional $800,000 in damages in a second libel suit.

The Post-Herald also reported that Hurt was pressured into attending the University of Alabama by an alumnus to whom he owed money for a car. Hurt had committed to play for another university, but signed with Alabama at the last minute.

The Post-Herald wanted to obtain NCAA records for its defense, and asked that the NCAA headquarters in Johnson County, Kan., release its investigation file.

The NCAA protested in district court, but was told by Chipman to hand the file over to the newspaper. That resulted in action filed with the Kansas Supreme Court.

Written arguments from NCAA attorneys said much of the information requested by the Post-Herald was irrelevant to the newspaper's defense, and the information also had been obtained with the understanding that it would be kept confidential.

There are allegations about individuals' sexual preferences, mental capacity, drug and alcohol use and financial condition, academic records of students, anonymous letters and memoranda of telephone calls and internal memoranda of interviews which include mental impressions, speculation and conclusions, attorneys for the NCAA wrote.

Releasing the file also would damage future NCAA investigations, the attorneys wrote, adding that the Post-Herald had clearly shown that it could not obtain the information through other sources.

The Kansas Supreme Court conducted an emergency May 21 hearing, and Thursday issued its decision on the matter.

"This court finds the action taken by Judge Chipman was arbitrary in that an in camera inspection of the NCAA files tendered for examination was not undertaken upon hearing the application for a protective order," the court said in its decision.

Justices Alex Fromme and Harold Herd dissented in the ruling.

Filmmaker Marian Marzynski points to the subject of a scene while showing his film to a class of Glenns Ferry students

'This is really an unusual place. They have a certain innocence.'

Glenns Ferry film an intimate profile. . .

By GLEN WARCHOL
Times-News writer

GLENN'S FERRY — The people of Glenns Ferry have always had a rich story to tell. But it took a talented outsider to gently pry it from their hearts, and craft it into a gift to share with their friends, families and future generations.

"People need to tell a story," Chicago-based television producer Marian Marzynski said. "They want to share their story."

Marzynski and a seven-man film crew worked in Glenns Ferry the first week of April. The goal of the project was to produce a documentary on life in rural America. In the return, the town received an archive of video tapes, and its children learned about media.

Marzynski returned early this month with a one-hour tape, and a two-and-a-half hour "fat edited" version. The total of 11 hours of material shot in the town in April will be returned this week to form Glenns Ferry's video archive.

Marzynski showed the one-hour film and special segments to classes at the school and had two screenings of the film with residents. He discussed with Glenns Ferry what media is and what it can be to people. Marzynski believes people should control media, not the other way around.

The most amazing thing about the film is that Marzynski — a Polish immigrant with a foreign accent and mannerisms — was able to slip into the lives of these Southern Idaho ranchers, businessmen and railroaders and get them to tell their stories. And they did it in front of full television crew.

"I am able to explain their putting it on television. It is just increasing the number of people they can share it with," Marzynski said.

"I am only an invisible movie guy who makes this possible for them. I build a comfortable stage for them."

From the video stage that Marzynski built in Glenns Ferry, the townspeople told their stories. The one-hour version of the film is a rich, deeply woven tapestry of rural Idaho life.

The film explores the joys and problems of a small Southern Idaho community. The one-hour version recorded ranchers worried about water, wives painfully remembering killing frosts, and the plain hard work of cattle branding.

Joy and strength is rooted in the cohesiveness of the family, whether it be Spanish-speaking migrant workers or established Mormon land owners.

But Marzynski didn't end his study of rural American life there. The film contains a moving segment on elementary children talking about what their fathers mean to them. In yet another class, students shared their dreams with the filmmaker.

Marzynski says he tried to focus on the similarities that bond people together in his film

Marzynski, who fled the Nazis as a Jewish child in Poland, came to the United States in the 1960s when Jews were again persecuted in his country, this time by the communist government. He has developed a belief that the differences between people are dwarfed by what they hold in common as humans. The residents of Glenns Ferry, he said, are no different than people anywhere else.

"Most of the problems these people are talking about exist everywhere," he said. "Making a family and making a living is what this place is about. What is outside the family?"

The film reflected his philosophy. The differences normally recognized between groups in Southern Idaho were blurred by their overwhelming similarities and inter-relationships as people. An established Glenns Ferry rancher, whose father migrated to America from the Basque province of Spain, is proceeded in the film by the story of a migrant Hispanic family whose roots also extend back to Spain — through Texas and Mexico. Both are shown in the context of the family, husband to wife, parents to children.

The changes history has had on the town are explored in a film sequence of an elderly couple who married in 1914.

"They met when he was a young railroader and she played piano for the silent movies and local dances."

"Once in a while I would get a relief woman, so I could go down and dance with him," she says, with a girlish teasing in her voice. Marzynski's cinematographer, Jean de Seignac, pans the camera to capture the fond glance between the couple.

"He was quite a dancer," she says.

Later, in a "season" of current dating rituals in Glenns Ferry, a school student's complaint of long drives for something to do. They tell Marzynski about rabbit-hunting dates.

"It's just something to sit close to him and go out and shoot rabbits," a blonde teenager tells the filmmaker. Marzynski asks them about kissing in Glenns Ferry. Can it be done in school?

"You're not supposed to," a teenager in a truck says. "But there ain't much they can do afterwards."

Marzynski celebrates the beauty and whity she says lies just under the surface of everyday life.

"I think people are alike everywhere," he says. "I like the things that transcend."

He smiles. "Young people in Glenns Ferry kiss. Kissing is everywhere."

The candor in the film is sometimes stunning, as when Marzynski chronicles a discussion between several high school girls and a friend who is pregnant but not married. They other students are curious and a little scandalized, but a strong bond of friendship and support flows between the women.

"How did you tell your mom?"

"After seeing you being able to carry through with it, I think I could," one girl says with admiration.

Then finally, "Do you want a boy or a girl?"

Marzynski was searching for any small town for his film. Glenns Ferry, he said, was beyond his expectations.

"This is really an unusual place," he said. "They have a certain innocence. They don't know how to be artificial."

"We wondered, why are these people so simple and pure?" Marzynski said, then laughed. "We thought, at first, maybe the area is pure and this affected the people's brains!"

Based on his experience in Glenns Ferry, Marzynski has been in contact with Ted Turner's Cable News Network in Atlanta. Turner is financing a series of "American Profiles." Marzynski wants to return to the region to produce a profile of Idaho.

The Idaho Commission on the Arts is working with KATV, the PBS station in Boise, to have the Glenns Ferry film re-edited and narrated for broadcast.

. . . But school plans to censor some sensitive scenes

By GLEN WARCHOL
Times-News writer

GLENN'S FERRY — It came as a surprise to Marian Marzynski that soon after he left Glenns Ferry, a decision was made to censor his film.

"At the screenings there was a reaction of a few isolated voices," a baffled Marzynski said in a telephone interview Wednesday. "But no requests from the people involved."

The decision to edit out offending parts of the film was made by the Glenns Ferry school administration.

Superintendent Jim Reed said that he personally was impressed by the quality of film.

"It was startling and it was bold," said Reed. "My gut-level reaction is to leave it alone. But politically, I think we better not foster resentment."

Carlene Viner, director of special services, who coordinated Marzynski's work in Glenns Ferry, said that the film contained some sequences where children had said personal and potentially embarrassing things about their parents.

"Children have a way of saying things," Viner said,

'Children have a way of saying things. They're naive. . . and they don't understand the effect they can have.'

— Carlene Viner, director of special services

"they're naive and innocent, and they don't understand the effect they can have."

In the interest of good taste, Viner said, about a minute, and a half of the film will be edited out. The questionable material will not only be removed from the shorter versions of the film, according to Viner, but from the 11 hours of archive tapes.

One of the questionable statements, she said, came during a discussion with an unwed mother. A student said that her own mother had been pregnant at the time of her marriage. Other parts of the film objected to were references by a student to drug use and a boy's recounting of his father's death.

"It's kind of private information, and it's a small community," Viner said. "Sometimes it's pretty hard to live in a small town."

"I think it was impact he (Marzynski) was looking for. We really don't want impact. We have enough trouble."

Marzynski said that he would have removed anything from the film at the request of the embarrassed party. But he said he is certain the individuals involved are not aware of the censorship.

"It's not a complaint of the people involved," he said. "It's just a protective measure. They (the administration) are overreacting to the fear of controversy."

"If 'Madam X' had complained," he said referring to the student's pregnancy statement. "I would have taken it out."

"Madame X" was contacted by The Times-News Wednesday. She said she was unaware that the statement had been made in the film or that it was to be censored.

"It doesn't offend me. It's a fact," she said. "I don't really think my rights have been violated."

"We've always been open with our daughter and she's not ashamed of it."

Her husband, however, did not agree. He said that the statement embarrassed him, and he would rather it be edited from the film and their name not appear in print.

In explaining his philosophy as a producer of documentaries, Marzynski had said, "Whatever is honest and spontaneous is the best thing to show. If you can afford to be open about the rough aspects of life — you are a good person."

Reed tried to explain the documentary expectations for a small town in Southern Idaho.

"A lot of people wanted a 'Walton's story,'" Reed said. "Thirty minutes long, and everything ends happily."

'Missing,' Lemmon winners at Cannes Film Festival

By ROGER EBERT
Chicago Sun-Times

Review on Page C4

CANNES, France — Two films against political oppression, one from a major Hollywood studio, the other made by an escaped Turkish convict, shared the grand prize here at the Cannes Film Festival. "Missing," the film by Costa Gavras starring Jack Lemmon and Sissy Spacek, shared the Palm d'Or, or top prize, with "Yol" by Yilmaz Guney, who has been wanted by Turkish police since fleeing a government prison in October, 1961. Although the Turks have asked interpol to assist in Guney's recapture, he appeared here for press conferences and interviews.

"Missing," which opened in February in the United States, tells the story of a young American who disappears in a country much like Chile. When his father and wife (Lemmon and Spacek) seek to discover what happened to him, they stumble across what looks like collaboration by U.S. Embassy officials in his disappearance.

"Yol," an attack on conditions in contemporary Turkey, tells the story of three convicts who leave a minimum-security prison and run into political and social difficulties on the outside. Guney, convicted of murder after being charged with the death of a judge in a Turkish restaurant, wrote the screenplay in prison, directed it through instructions to his associates, and then — life copying art — escaped in the same manner as his characters and finished editing the film in Switzerland.

Lemmon won the festival's best actor award for "Missing" and Hungarian actress Jadviga Jankovics-Cieslak won best actress for "Un Autre Regard," a drama about two lesbians in a modern communist state.

The special jury prize went to "Night of Falling Stars," by the Italian brother-directors Paolo and Vittorio Taviani.

Motels

Story reveals history; unexpected uses

By LAURA BERMAN
Knight-Ridder Newspapers

Long before the days of Psychology Today, sociologists were plying their dubious science in creative ways. One of these is cited by American Heritage (June-July) in the course of a historical essay on the development of the motel.

Motels had their roots in the early history of the automobile, when peripatetic Americans began cross-country travel in earnest. Before they became proper motels, they were auto campgrounds — spaces leased out by farmers for carloads to unpack and camp for the night.

But it was up to Kansas Hal Borland to seize on the next step: When nearby towns seeking tourists offered free camping, this undercutting his quarter-a-night facility, he built 15 "tent houses," flimsy cabins equipped with beds and gas burners. Suddenly, travelers had a convenient stopping place that was inexpensive, informal and more comfortable than sleeping in a field.

By 1935, there were more than 16,000 motels, some of them built in the shape of wigwags, log cabins and New England colonials. At this time, the sociology department at Southern Methodist University in Dallas conceived its study. Graduate students paired off in couples, rented cabins at Dallas area motels, and spent the nights seated by the windows watching customers come and go.

Their results included the startling finding that "at least 75 percent of the camps' business consists of Dallas couples who find in the anonymity and privacy afforded them ideal conditions in which to engage in illicit sex relations."

By 1960, J. Edgar Hoover had proclaimed a majority of tourist camps and motels to be disreputable places, partly because fugitives from justice holed up in motels where lax registration policies made them difficult to trace. But no League of Decency could put a halt to these ever-more popular accommodations, and by the 1960s, motels had spread into the cities as "motor hotels."

Magazines

Writer Paul Lancaster notes that in recent years the original concept of the motel has regained popularity, as developers build no-frills motels with cheaper rates. He observes, "A cheap, comfortable casual tourist accommodation was a good idea when Motel T was first chugging down the highway, and it still is."

Eye Catchers:

The New Republic (June 2). Mark Crispin Miller dissects a TV commercial for Shield Soap, in which a towel-clad male leans out the window and complains that his wife has switched soap on him. "Shield is better," she replies. "It's extra strength." "After some mind-twisting but fascinating analysis, with help from Dr. Freud, Miller concludes that the commercial is a lesson in misogyny. Also, James Atlas reviews Philip Roth's early novel "Letting Go," and finds it an unrecognized masterpiece that both foreshadows Roth's later work and stands on its own as a mature literary work.

The New Republic (June). The classic car magazine celebrates its 35th anniversary with a fat and happy issue that includes a pull-out poster of world driving champions. It also contains a few thoughts from Henry Ford, among them this view of design: "There is no beauty that does not arise from a functional requirement... the things that do best what they are supposed to do are by that very fact the most beautiful things."

Dunaway 'locked into' her role

Q. Faye Dunaway's portrayal of the late Joan Crawford in "Mommie Dearest" was unaccountably accurate. How did she prepare for the role?

A. Calling it "the most meticulous job of acting I've ever done," Dunaway says she first read the book, then she watched all of Crawford's movies, listened to tapes of her voice and interviewed her friends. "As an actress it was the most spooky, frightening role," recalls Dunaway, "to play someone so well known, someone whose image is indelibly etched in people's minds. It was a great challenge, but also very difficult to be so locked into a real person."

Q. When Richard Thomas left "The Waltons," was he replaced as John-Boy?

A. Eventually, but John-Boy wasn't a major character after Thomas departed at the end of the 1976-77 season. Robert Whitman, as John-Boy, was seen in several shows in each of the last two seasons.

Q. Did Jack Burns play Andy Griffith's deputy in "The Andy Griffith Show," before or after Don Knotts?

Was that before or after Burns joined Avery Schreiber?

A. Knotts, who was bumbling Barney Fife for five seasons, 1960-65, left for Disney movies and his own variety series, and Burns, as Warren Ferguson, joined the Mayberry police force that fall. Burns and Schreiber had been partners since 1959 and worked together in clubs and at Chicago's Second City. They split in 1965 to do TV shows, but Schreiber's choice wasn't as good as Burns'. Schreiber was in NBC's "My Mother, the Car," remembered as one of the great bombs of TV. The team had a TV reunion in 1967 in CBS summer series, split again until a 1973 benefit appearance. That led to a 1973 ABC-TV summer variety series. Since then, they have worked together off and on.

Q. Was there ever a program called "The Ponderosa"? I know it was a ranch on "Bonanza," but I've told there was a program with the same name. Who starred in it?

A. It was "Ponderosa" and it was "Bonanza" by another name. Early in TV, it was used to use a different title when a show was syndicated to local stations while the original series was still on a network. After "Bonanza" was canceled in 1973, during its 11th season, the reruns were known by the original title, "M-A-S-I-I," first run on CBS at the same time many local stations have reruns under the same name, but "Happy Days," still in first run on ABC, is called "Happy Days Again" in repeats.

Plot may be fiction, but insights make 'Missing' a winner

Jack Lemmon's persona too strong for the 'non-fictional' role

By GENE SISKEL
Chicago Tribune

Movies can work in mysterious ways. They can have a life of their own that even the director, the presumed author of the piece, may not understand or have intended. Such a film is the political thriller, "Missing," directed by Constantin Costa-Gavras ("Z," "State of Siege"), who regularly makes films about governments subverting individual freedoms.

From all outward appearances, "Missing" would like to be a severe indictment of the way the United States government, through its Central Intelligence Agency, flagrantly meddles in the affairs of other nations — even to the point of sanctioning the murder of an American citizen who has uncovered the meddling.

That's the charge the film makes by implication in adapting the real-life story of the disappearance and death of an American student in Chile in 1973 as the Salvador Allende regime was being toppled and replaced with a military dictatorship. Allegedly, have been made that our CIA played a role in that event.

"Missing" opens with the on-screen notice that the film is "based on a true story. The incidents and facts are documented." But then we get the casting of Sissy Spacek as the missing student's wife and Jack Lemmon as his conservative businessman father. Well, you can't tell me that everything Spacek and Lemmon do, and all the resonances they bring from their earlier films, have been taken from the real-life story of the death of Charles Horman.

The casting of Spacek and Lemmon — especially Lemmon — marks "Missing" for all of its politics, as a Hollywood film, sort of a "Save the Tiger" and "Coal Miner's Daughter" versus the CIA.

Spacek does a much better job than Lemmon of disappearing into character, but even when she begins to rattle off names of political movements and foreign countries, we have to say "hold on."

So why a positive rating for "Missing"? That's where the strange, independent power of a film comes into play. There are some powerful small matters in "Missing" that push their way to the forefront amid the phoniness and contrivance, scenes and images that have little or nothing to do with Jack Lemmon or Sissy Spacek or the missing young man (played by John Shea, highly regarded New York stage actor).

First and foremost is a scene where Spacek is walking in the streets of what we eventually learn is Santiago, Chile. She's trying to find her way home in the night after curfew, and there is gunfire in the streets. She spots a fat, young American man also on the run, and as she turns the corner of a downtown building, she and we run into a major thoroughfare that is ablaze with searchlights, tanks and soldiers.

The shock of that image is enormous. What if you turned the corner downtown and saw a scene like that, and it wasn't some kind of parade? It's shocking. That's a dictatorship.

We also see, in another brief scene, an older man hauled out of a restaurant in broad daylight by men with business suits, presumably the junta's secret police, Charles Horman, the young American, objects and is slapped to the ground; and the people with him think he is crazy for making a stand like that.

So what "Missing" does very well is educate visually what a dictatorship looks like in the streets and how it acts upon individuals. And for a nation that gets the bulk of its knowledge on such matters from two-minute pieces on the national TV news, the information is very important.

There's another piece of information in "Missing" that's fresh. And that is in its portrait of the members of the American diplomatic corps — in particular, the State Department civil servant. We meet a number of such characters in "Missing," and they are played in all shades of evil, from benign wimp to heavy duty bad guy.

These are the kinds of people that movies rarely give any time to. They normally exist in the backgrounds of scenes, typically in groups. They open doors and nod their heads.

In "Missing," however, we get a much better sense of these characters, individuals doing a most unpleasant job, and we understand the "bunker mentality" that sets in and allows them to do whatever their government — our government — tells them to do. In other words, you can call it the State Department. If you wish, but it might as well be a branch of the Defense Department.

These men tolerated the Jack Lemmon character, suffer the Sissy Spacek character and detest the John Shea character. They want to ease all of them out the door, out of the country, so they can get on with their business.

The value of understanding that is enormous. Our government has such missions of people located all over the world. Yes, they are there to help American tourists if they lose their passports, but they're also there for other more important and strategic reasons.

"Missing" reveals all of that. It may be fuzzy on the facts of the disappearance of Charles Horman, and it never convinced me that our CIA was in any way responsible for his death, but "Missing" did reveal the truth of dictatorships and U.S. government personnel in foreign lands. And that is no small achievement.

Two people can't make love without turning into killer cats?

'Cat People' slick, stylistic, sensual but not very scary

By JACK MATTHEWS
Knight-Ridder Newspapers

HOLLYWOOD — If Paul Schrader's current version of "Cat People" had been the one shown to audiences in 1942, rather than the Jacques Tourneur original, it might have killed people.

Hearts would have stopped, stomachs would have turned, lungs and legs would have pumped shrieking crowds to the exits long before the end of the second reel.

Unfortunately for those of us who recall scary movies fondly, this is 1982, and we've seen it all before. Through modern technical wizardry and liberated standards, we've seen people turn into animals on screen. We've seen limbs — bones, sinew, muscle, veins and all — ripped out of sockets. We've seen walls splayed with blood. And we've certainly seen a lot of pretty naked people getting after each other.

So shock-proof have we become in the 10 years since the grossly spooky "The Exorcist," and the graphically sexual "Last Tango in Paris," that it seems hardly controversial to point out that "Cat People" is the first major motion picture to join themes of bestiality, cannibalism and incest.

Ah, yes, a young virgin learns that her roots are in the leopard family and that to make love with anyone but her brother will turn her into a panther and her lover into an apocalyptic snack. You could run a personal ad in the Village Voice and probably start a club.

It's not director Paul Schrader's fault that "Cat People" doesn't strike the terror he's after. He has created one of the more stylishly brutal, if frightful, fright films in a long time and one worth seeing for technique alone.

Schrader, the maverick Calvinist from Grand Rapids, Mich., who wrote "Taxi Driver" and directed such films as "Hardcore" and "An American Gigolo," was brought into the "Cat People" project by Universal Pictures to upgrade it from its intended level of low-budget exploitation.

With the recent cycle of gore horror and beastly-transmutations on the wane, Schrader decided to explore the mystical sexual underpinnings of "Cat People's" bestial theme, and though the whole thing falls into an illogical heap by the midpoint, it has several fascinating elements.

Chief among them is Nastassia Kinski, whose body and natural feline grace gives her performance as the sensuous, frightened Irena an eerie verisimilitude. Before the makeup goes on, her face seems catlike enough to land her on the label of Nine Lives.

Kinski brings the same virginal-innocence to this role as she did to Roman Polanski's "Tess," but there's more than an independent spirit growing inside this time. There is instead a powerful sexual urge, repressed by an innate fear she'll become an animal if she does. When she is reunited with her brother Paul (Malcolm McDowell) for the first time since childhood, she is both repulsed and aroused by his persistent sexual advances.

Eventually, she learns they are other-worldly siblings, descendants of a tribe evolved from the ritual couplings of panthers and sacrificial virgins, and that they can retain their human form only by making love with blood relatives.

This is not good news for a kid who's just landed a job in the gift shop at the New Orleans zoo, and fallen in love with the zoo's handsome curator, John Heard. Dilemmas abound.

Will she make love with her brother, and keep him off the streets at night? Or will she lose her virginity to Heard, at an even greater loss to him? Will McDowell make good on his threat to stalk and eliminate any competitors? Will Annette O'Toole, Heard's former girlfriend, stand by her man with that cat standing behind her?

McDowell seems to relish his duality, leaping around the room and hissing sweet nothings to his sister. Some of this is funny when it's not supposed to be, but you'll be fascinated by the weightless spring they've managed to put in his step.

Heard's curator, a man whose passionate commitment to animals gets a full hearing in Kinski's court, is less interesting and less believable than either of the cat people in his life. And Ruby Dee, as McDowell's mysterious soulmate, looks to be psyching herself up for a Halloween party.

Schrader made good use of Ferdinand Scarfotti's starkly beautiful coral set, where panthers and humans mingle around a gnarled tree in the film's long, surreal prologue. Then he made bad use of it in a later dream sequence so unnecessarily abrupt it seems to have been inserted by mistake.

"Cat People" cost $14 million to make, and it looks it. But that's not the point. Will it scare you?

Boo!
If that did, it might.

Dear Abby

Her case opens a can of worms

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 22-year-old woman who has worms. How can I get rid of them without going to a doctor? My husband is in the Army, and when I go to the doctor on the base, I have to tell him what's wrong with me in front of a bunch of people. It's kind of embarrassing to say I've got worms.

How did I get worms anyway? Please write back and tell me all you know about worms. Thank you.

COVER UP MY LOCATION
DEAR COVER UP: Dr. Jaime Paris, my medical consultant, said it is unwise to assume that you diagnosed your case correctly without having been examined by a physician. Therefore, he hesitated to give me much information about worms. However, this is what I worried out of him:

PINWORMS, the commonest type of worms, are transmitted by personal contact. Pinworms are often epidemic in schools; children bring them home to their families.

TAPEWORMS can be transmitted by eating raw fish, or being in close contact with pets — particularly dogs. They can also be transmitted through water or foods — especially lettuce. Please see a doctor. And tell his nurse you would appreciate some privacy.

DEAR ABBY: With summer here, please call your readers' attention to the danger of automobiles equipped with power windows. Who knows how many young lives you could save?

In just one day I heard of two incidents where two drivers in an advertisement pushed the rear-window button while a child's head was out the window! Even the children themselves can accidentally push the button with their knees — unless the driver can lock the window at his seat. I hope you think this is important enough to print.

— MILLIE H. IN HARRISBURG
DEAR MILLIE: I do. Now, meet Lloyd Kleckner, who has another lifesaving suggestion for automobile drivers.

DEAR ABBY: My sister-in-law, Margaret, was going to ride along with two other women who came by for her. When they pulled up (both sitting in front) Margaret started to get into the back, when they said, "There's plenty of room for three in front."

As she started to get in, the woman on the right moved to make room for Margaret, and she accidentally stepped on the gas pedal. The car lurched and Margaret was thrown to the pavement and broke her leg.

It was a nasty break, which will take a long time to heal. Please warn your readers to always shift into "park" when people are getting into and out of a car.

— LLOYD KLECKNER

DEAR ABBY: I have a problem a lot of kids my age have, so I hope you will come up with an answer and print it. I'm 17 and a junior in high school. I'm an average student and I guess you could call me an average guy. People are always asking me what I am going to do with my future. And my problem is, I don't know yet.

When I tell them that, they look at me like I am weird or stupid, so please tell me how I am supposed to answer that question so I won't feel embarrassed.

— FUZZY FUTURE

DEAR FUZZY: You need not feel embarrassed for admitting that at 17 you don't know how you want to spend the rest of your life.

You are very wise, not "weird or stupid," to defer such an important decision until you are reasonably certain. Hat's off to you for your honesty and good judgment.

Fibrillation of heart explained

By LAWRENCE LAMB, M.D.
Newspaper Enterprise Association

DEAR DR. LAMB: What is fibrillation of the heart? Is this a condition that occurs suddenly and goes away suddenly, or is it a chronic condition?

I am 27, and several times in my life I have had spells with my heart beating irregular and then beating real fast afterwards. The last one had I went to the hospital and they did an electrocardiogram, but by then it had stopped, or returned to normal. They didn't detect anything.

Is this something I should be concerned about? My heart has been checked many times and nothing shows up. This is the reason I want to know if fibrillation of the heart could be my problem.

DEAR READER: To answer your question directly, fibrillation refers to a rapid twitching of the heart muscle. When the atria are fibrillating it is called atrial fibrillation and they may be "twitching" at a rate of 500 per minute. Only a few of these 500 impulses are transmitted to the bottom part of the heart, the ventricles that are the heavy pumping chambers that pump blood through your arteries.

If the number of impulses that get through are less than 100 a minute the person may not even notice what has happened. But if a lot of the impulses get through causing a fast heartbeat then he will usually notice it. The impulses that get through are irregular and the pulse is irregular.

Atrial fibrillation can occur in episodes, starting suddenly and stopping suddenly. Or it can be chronic with persistent fibrillation.

Most attacks of sudden fast heartbeats that stop suddenly are paroxysmal tachycardias. And they can occur in people who have no underlying heart disease.

It is annoying that the episodes are often gone by the time you get an electrocardiogram. That is why long-term monitoring for several days is sometimes done. But if you only have such attacks once or twice a year this may not be practical either.

Extra- or irregular or premature beats just before the onset of paroxysmal tachycardias may make the pulse irregular. To give you more information I am sending you The Health Letter number 6-12, Heart Irregularities, Skipped Beats, Tachycardias. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 150, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB: Would you please explain what pleurisy is, what are the symptoms and can it be cured? How can I get help? My doctor says that I may have a touch of it. I sure would like help from someone.

DEAR READER: Pleurisy means inflammation of the pleura. The pleura is the sheet-like lining that covers the inner surface of your rib cage. It looks a lot like clear plastic wrapping paper. The inflammation usually involves the tiny muscles in the chest wall just under it.

When your chest wall moves it causes pain. The hallmark of pleurisy is chest pain with breathing, particularly deep breaths, or with coughing.

There are many causes of the inflammation: from virus respiratory infections to inflammation from a blood clot to the lungs. Treatment does depend on the underlying cause.

The vast majority are virus infections and are best treated with analgesics, plain aspirin, may help, and local heat. The rest depends upon the "lincture of time."

State art contest winners reported

TWIN FALLS: Four Twin Falls students were state winners in the art contest sponsored by the Idaho Federation of Women's Clubs.

Sheri Boberg, ninth grader at Robert Stuart Junior High School, placed first in Division 4. Kristopher Nystrom, Twin Falls high school senior, was second in his division; Angie Brundow, Harrison fifth grader, won honorable mention in Division 2, and Kevin Lamy, Stuart ninth grader, won honorable mention in Division 4.

The Twentieth Century Club of Twin Falls, a member of the General Federation, sponsors the poetry and art contests each year.

Local winners of the poetry contest were: Division 1, grades kindergarten through third grade — Stephanie Kitley, Jennifer Emery, both of Harrison School, Jenna Jones of Lincoln School and Carol Reierich, Harrison.

Division 2, grades four through six — Dian Baker of Lincoln, Randi McDermott, Rachel Carter and Kris Horner of Sawtooth.

Division 3, grades seven through nine — Ignacia Carrion of Robert Stuart Junior High.

Division 4, grades 10 through 12 — Ellen Stumpf, Bob Mitchell, Robyn Tickner and Greg Howells, all of Twin Falls High School.

Winners at the district contest which was judged at the District No. 2 convention held in Twin Falls in April were: Emery, Kitley, Jones, McDermott, Stumpf, Mitchell and Tickner.

Art contest local winners were: Division 1, kindergarten through second grade — Will Watkins of Lincoln, Melanie Burton and Eric Busher and Joshua Larson, all of Lincoln. Division 2, grades third and four — Shannon Willis of Harrison, Lari Swope, Terra Hamerick, Shavna Specht and Angie Winn, all of Moraine.

Division 3, grades five and six — Rachel Carter of Sawtooth, Erin Cecil of Harrison, Alex Galong of Lincoln, Angie Brunkow and Matt Allen, both of Harrison.

Division 4, grades seven through nine — Sheri Boberg, Kevin Lang and Brenda Rowley, all of Robert Stuart Jr. High, and Jeff Alldon and Bobby Brown of Vera C. O'Leary Junior High.

Winners at the district contest were: Brunkow, Harrison, Boberg and Rowley.

Winners were awarded a blue ribbon and $3 for first place, a red ribbon and $2 for second place winner and a white ribbon and $1 for third place winner. Yellow ribbons were awarded to honorable mention winners.

Judges for the local poetry contest were Lucile Jones and Fern Manning.

Prostate treatment studied

By EDWARD EDELSON
New York Daily News

German researchers have reported preliminary success with a drug treatment that could eliminate the need to castrate men who have advanced cancer of the prostate.

The drug was effective in a limited trial because it reduced production of testosterone, the male sex hormone, the researchers reported in Lancet, the British medical journal. Testosterone stimulates the growth of prostate cancer, and men with advanced prostate cancer often are castrated to slow or reverse cancer growth by stopping the production of the hormone.

Prostate cancer is a major killer of older men. The American Cancer Society estimates that 73,000 new cases will be diagnosed this year and that the malignancy will cause 23,300 deaths.

The German researchers used buserelin, a synthetic, more powerful version of LHRH — luteinizing hormone releasing hormone — which plays an important role in regulating sexual function in both men and women. The work was done at the Free University of Berlin.

Nine men with advanced cancer of the prostate were given daily injections of buserelin every day for three days. They then took the drug by nasal spray daily for as long as 24 weeks.

At first, production of LHRH by the patients went up. Then it began to decline, and testosterone production declined with it. In some patients given small daily doses of buserelin, testosterone levels returned to normal after a few weeks. But in patients who got larger doses, hormone levels were "similar to those of castrated men," the researchers reported.

What's what

Q. Was the founder of Occidental Petroleum, Armand Hammer, named after a box of baking soda?

A. Quaint query. No, sir, his folks just happened to like Armand, the name of the hero in Alexander Dumas' "Camille."

Any experienced woman who had occasion to buy a bra before 1939 may recall that until then there was no such thing as cup sizing.

Under the law in France, a butcher can't stock chopped meat. It has to be chopped fresh for each customer.

LONDON BRIDGE

Q. Has London Bridge ever really fallen down? Like in the nursery rhyme?

A. No, sir. There have been several London Bridges since the first was built in 1170. Wooden houses like upon have been burned down repeatedly and bridges in that succession have been torn down. But none has ever fallen.

Q. When dogs eat grass, does that mean they're sick?

A. Such was long the common belief. But vets now say that dogs eat grass because they like its taste. They can't digest it. So they throw it up.

Q. Don't all poisonous snakes on this continent give birth to live young?

A. All except coral snakes.

SMALL BUSINESS

Ninety-seven percent of the companies in the United States are small businesses. They turn out 43 percent of the Gross National Product. And they employ 58 percent of the work force. What makes them special is the fact that they're run mostly by highly independent individuals who tend to go it alone. This also explains why they're so often shafted by the big-government-business alliance. They find it difficult to organize for their own benefit.

Q. Did President Jimmy Carter ever sign any bills with his real name?

A. By "real" I take it you mean the formal "James Earl Carter." No, sir, he sought and got authority to run for the presidency as Jimmy in all 50 states. And he was the only U.S. President who abandoned his original name entirely.

Couple dissolves marriage but book business thrives

Friday, May 28, 1982 Times-News, Twin Falls, Idaho C-7

DEEPAVEN, Minn. (UPI) — For eight years Vicki and Bruce Lansky ran in the fast lane as their company, publishing books on children and parenting, progressed from a "Ma and Pa" in-home operation to a $2 million business.

New they are divorcing after 14 years of marriage — but their business relationship will continue.

Vicki Lansky, 40, is the prototype of everyone's slightly ruffled Mom who has endeared herself to television audiences on talk shows. Her marriage apparently cracked from an excess of togetherness.

"When marital roles and business roles become confused, chaos results," said her husband, Bruce. "Sometimes the fairy tale turns into a bad dream."

Despite the break, their Meadowbrook Press, which produced Mrs. Lansky's extremely successful, "Feed Me! I'm Yours" and "The Taming of the C.A.N.D.Y. Monster," will continue publishing books — as many as 10 a year.

Meadowbrook, with 27 employees, sells a million books a year. It currently has 25 publications in print.

Any books she writes in the future will carry the name Vicki Lansky. She said she is "proud of the name" so familiar to readers and in no way regrets her marriage.

Her progression into the big-time spotlight is a mother's dream. Like many women, she's not sure she's earned her place in the sun because she didn't suffer and bleed for it.

She went from a traditional upbringing in a "traditional" wife-and-mother's role. Eight years ago she wrote "Feed Me," with five other mothers, as a church cookbook. The possibilities for promotion of the book became apparent to her husband, who left his job at Pillsbury Co. to begin a publishing business in the couple's home.

"A little success can help you believe you can do the next thing," he said. "It didn't occur to us that we couldn't do a lot of things that make sense, like selling baby care books in infant shops."

The couple's approach to marketing books, developed into what Lansky calls "the best distribution system in the country for selling infant books."

The Lansky children, Doug and Dana, were 1 and 3 when it all began, and Mrs. Lansky began sharing with radio listeners and television viewers "what worked for me" in parenting.

"Vicki projects terrifically on television," Lansky said. "She has a gut feeling for what parents are concerned about and uses a practical approach."

In 1978 "C.A.N.D.Y. Monster" scored a phenomenal success, remaining on one major best seller list for 17 weeks. Currently the "Best Baby Name Book in The Whole World," co-authored with Bruce, is selling 10,000 to 20,000 copies a month.

In 1980 Meadowbrook published Vicki's "Practical Parenting Tips," containing more than 1,000 ideas for the first five years of parenting. A revised and expanded edition was published earlier this year.

She also compiles and edits a practical parenting newsletter that formed the basis for the parenting tips book.

"I never expected to reach out and touch people like this," Mrs. Lansky said. "Maybe my appearance on TV talking about diaper rash elevated the role of women dealing with the same problem."

It's difficult to get stroked as a parent, she said, adding, "I stroke parents, I tell them, 'You may not have done it perfectly, but you did it fine.' I have a bond with people who are at the same emotional level as I am."

It's been an on-the-job learning process, she said, adding that she listens to what other people say, profits from their advice, and usually puts it in one of her books. There's something about the tip format, which the Lanskys have used in a number of books and which Mrs. Lansky employs on television and in her newsletter, "that helps people shift gears," she said.

From her vantage point as a one time "insecure young parent," she touches young people who want to provide the best life for their children and to avoid the mistakes their parents made.

"Parents are more involved in the birth (of their children) these days," she said, "and want to be more involved in nurturing."

Talking about babies at social gatherings, once commonly accepted among young mothers, fell out of favor as the feminist movement burgeoned.

"It's starting to have more status, now that the people in charge (those in their 30s) are starting to have babies," Mrs. Lansky said.

She has "made a living being a mother," she said, and never had to do it at the expense of her family. Despite several moves of the publishing company, the Lanskys have remained close to their home, allowing flexibility in time spent with children and canceling out any commuting time.

She now employs a woman one day a week to do the laundry and clean the house. Otherwise she still juggles children, a home, and a job, saying, "Our play is our work."

Her new status as a single may lead her into writing books on divorce and single parenting but the direction of her new life is still undecided.

Lansky calls their company "a rarity in the publishing business, since it gets its ideas from the people its books are intended for."

This week's best

Friday

ABC offers "This Is Kate Bennett," a story about a TV news team that chooses to stay on the streets where the action is. Sure they do.

Saturday

Part two of "Smoke," a drama about a son (Ron Howard) who will not accept his new stepfather, airs on CBS's "Walt Disney."

Sunday

Raquel Welch makes her TV dramatic debut in "The Legend of Walks Far Woman" on NBC. She plays an American Indian living in late-19th Century Montana who is caught up in the glory and tragedy of her people's last great stand. This might be good even without Raquel.

Monday

Louis Gossett Jr. and Cicely Tyson move cautiously toward a new love when they meet in "Benney's Place," an ABC's theater of the month presentation. The story focuses on how people handle growing older. Definitely better than the normal network fare.

Tuesday

It's all re-runs tonight and most of them aren't even good ones. Best bets are "Bret Maverick," "Soundarum" and "It's about how modern sound technology has shaped our lives. If you're not into PBS, you might try "Rodeo Girl," a so-so movie on CBS or, better yet, give it a try on cable again tonight. Tennis anyone?

Wednesday

The Media Probes series on PBS has been pretty good. This week's installment is called "Soundarum" and it's about how modern sound technology has shaped our lives. If you're not into PBS, you might try "Rodeo Girl," a so-so movie on CBS or, better yet, give it a try on cable again tonight. Tennis anyone?

Thursday

An ABC "Closeup" probes the actions of former FBI director J. Edgar Hoover—a fascinating but sometimes scary individual who left his imprint on national politics and policy as well as the agency—in an investigative report which includes new information about Hoover's controversial career.
