

Harsh words for Soviets

Reagan's U.N. speech attacks aggression

By JAMES McCARTNEY
Knight-Ridder Newspapers

UNITED NATIONS — President Reagan — outlined — an American "Agenda for Peace" here Thursday, while harshly attacking the Soviet Union for "aggression and support of violence" around the world.

In a speech to the United Nations General Assembly session on disarmament, Reagan said the United States stands ready to "take the next steps down the road" to arms control. But he warned that the Soviets must produce "deeds, not words" to demonstrate that they are equally sincere.

The president's anti-Soviet rhetoric came as a surprise since U.S.-Soviet talks on strategic nuclear arms reductions are scheduled to open June 29 in Geneva. His predecessors normally have refrained from tough talk on the eve of negotiations to improve the diplomatic atmosphere.

But Reagan recited a long list of Soviet acts of betrayal or violence since World War II, from violation of the Yalta agreements and building of the Berlin Wall, to the invasion of Czechoslovakia and sponsorship of guerrillas in Central America. These deeds constituted a "record of tyranny," he said.

"Soviet oppression is not limited to the countries they invade," he added. "At the very time the Soviet Union is trying to manipulate the peace movement in the West, it is stifling a budding peace movement at home."

Despite his impassioned plea for peace, in the 26-minute speech, Reagan was not interrupted by applause a single time. This was a reflection of the deep suspicion of U.S. motives by many of the Third World countries that make up a majority of the 151-member General Assembly.

Reagan made no effort to respond to a Soviet pledge two days ago before the same body to refrain from being the first to use nuclear weapons in war. That pledge received warm applause from the world body.

U.S. officials said the United States has no intention of making a similar pledge, and that the Soviet promise means little, because it is only words.

"We should not confuse the signing of agreements with the solving of problems," Reagan said in his address.

"Agreements genuinely reinforce peace only when they are kept. Otherwise we are building a paper castle that will be blown away by the winds of war," he said.

Reagan made one new arms control proposal in his speech — a suggestion that an international conference be held on military spending, so that the world might obtain a "true account" of Soviet expenditures.

Otherwise, he summarized "major arms control proposals" he has announced piecemeal over the last seven months, presenting them for the first time as a package.

Together, he said, they constitute an American "agenda for peace — a

Soviet diplomats angered by Reagan remarks

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — Representatives of the Soviet Union and their East European allies expressed anger Thursday over President Reagan's speech to the U.N. special session on disarmament.

"I have nothing to say," said Soviet Ambassador Oleg Troyanovsky brusquely. "I might not be able to control my feelings. I am not enthusiastic at all."

In a 25-minute speech laced with anti-Soviet rhetoric, the president recapped his own proposals for nuclear weapons control before the special U.N. disarmament session in the General Assembly.

Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko and his entire delegation sat glumly silent while other delegations applauded Reagan at the end of his speech.

"Very bad, very bad," said

Czechoslovak Foreign Minister Bohuslav Choupek.

He pointed out that Reagan gave no answer to the pledge by Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev Tuesday that the Kremlin would never be the first to use nuclear weapons.

"There was no answer to the main programs suggested by Gromyko and Brezhnev," Choupek said, adding, "I suppose he is not very concerned."

The speech was "definitely not a contribution to disarmament and peace," said a grim Richard Ovinikov, deputy to the Soviet U.N. ambassador.

"The United States' allies, on the other hand, were enthusiastic."

"I thought it was a very strong and well-presented expression of the U.S. position," British Ambassador Sir Anthony Parsons said.

He said he had not expected

Reagan, in his first speech to the United Nations, to respond to the Brezhnev statement.

"I think it would have been quite wrong for him to get into that kind of response," Parsons said. "He was presenting the United States position and I think it was done with great clarity and with great lucidity and — I am most delighted to say — with great brevity."

"He gets full marks from me," Parsons said.

Canadian Ambassador Gerard Pollack disagreed with those who claimed Reagan's speech was nothing but a rehash of previously-stated U.S. positions.

"There's a new proposition about the cut-off, if I heard it right," he said. "Also something more on communications between the U.S. and potential adversaries."

Galtieri forced out of Argentine junta

By United Press International

Argentine Gen. Leopoldo Galtieri said he was forced Thursday to resign as president-armed commander and leader of the three-man military junta.

"I'm going because the army did not give me backing to continue as army commander and president of the nation," Galtieri told reporters as he left the presidential palace.

Galtieri's effort to unite his nation backfired in defeat in the Falkland Islands war.

"I'm not one who abandons ship in the middle of storms or difficult hours, like those that the nation is now living through," Galtieri said. "I wanted the people to know that."

Military sources said Galtieri's resignation as president — a position he obtained only six months ago — will take effect today. The military command said Thursday Galtieri also was entering "voluntary retirement" as army chief.

Tolan, the state-run news agency, said Galtieri, 56, Interior Minister Alfredo Saint-Jean will become interim president while the junta chooses a permanent successor.

Government sources said the junta may pick a civilian to be permanent president or choose Air Force Commander Basilio Lami Dozo, whose branch of the armed forces put up the stiffest fight in the Falklands war with Britain.

Lami Dozo is commander of the Air Force, which bore the greatest combat losses but also raised Argentine spirits with daring raids that sink at least five British ships in the 74-day war with Britain.

Gen. Cristino Nicolaides, 56, commander of the First Army Corps, located outside Buenos Aires, was named the new commander of the army, effective today.

Military sources said the new junta, made up of Nicolaides, Lami Dozo and Navy Chief Adm. Jorge Isaac Anaya, will formally accept Galtieri's resignation as president after Nicolaides is installed as a junta member today.

Galtieri, who regarded Nicolaides as a close friend and gave him his commission in 1981, ordered the April 2 invasion of the British ruled colony and refused to accept Monday's surrender by his 10,000 troops at Stanley.

Thousands of these POWs went on an hour-long rampage Thursday and torched two buildings when rumors spread British ships taking prisoners home had sailed without them.

The Argentine army command said Galtieri, whose military career began in 1945, "resolved to go into voluntary retirement."

In the past five years, Argentina has had three presidents — all of them army commanders. The junta, composed of the leaders of each branch of the armed forces, appoints the president.

Galtieri became president in December 1981, replacing Roberto Viola, who was sentenced to sit down as army commander in December.

He met Wednesday with 14 of the nation's top generals, 12 of whom

Jack Warberg of Twin Falls helped peel 500 pounds of potatoes for a new world's record

Potato peelers mash record

By STEVE LIPSON
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The world record for potato peeling may have been brought to Idaho on Thursday, as a five-man team sliced through 500 pounds of potatoes in 30 minutes.

The existing record, set last year by a team in England, was 25 pounds peeled in 15 minutes. News of the Twin Falls feat will be submitted to the Guinness Book of World Records.

When this attempt to break the record was over, team members found all fingers present and accounted for, though three of them had cuts on their hands.

For the record, potatoes must be peeled with ordinary kitchen knives. When peeled, the spuds must weigh eight ounces or more and must meet "institutional cookery standards."

In establishing the world record, the peelers took full advantage of this admittedly vague standard.

The potatoes they used were large, so peelers could remove generous amounts of potato along with the peel while still keeping the finished product above the eight-ounce minimum. Large potatoes also meant that fewer potatoes had to be peeled before the record was broken.

Organizers of the potato-peeling team said their research showed — no provision in the rules for weighing the peeled product — the record is apparently based only on the starting weight of the potatoes peeled.

Team captain Tim Obenchain of Twin Falls started peeling each potato by making fast cuts at the ends, sometimes cutting off almost a third of the potato. Then he would remove thick slices of potato and peel with lengthwise strokes.

"I knew I should have been a doctor," he said.

"This is a combination of potato peeling and slicing," said team member Blaine Brecken of Nampa.

David Whiteley of Twin Falls, when asked how he prepared for the event, said he did no training. "If you train at all, you overtrain," he said.

Other members of the peeling team were Jack Warberg and Armour Anderson, both of Twin Falls. C.L. "Foggy" Fisher of Kimberly worked harder than the peelers as a one-man crew keeping buckets of potatoes filled at the feet of each peeler and collecting the peeled products.

"They told me I'd only have to peel a bucket, but they keep filling it up," Brecken said during the peeling.

The peelers were all Rotary Club members, and their record attempt was the first event of their district convention, which will be held in Twin Falls through Saturday.

The peeled potatoes were given to the Canyon Springs Inn, the site of the record attempt, where they will be turned into mashed potatoes.

Remember Watergate's lesson: Ford

By United Press International

The 10th anniversary of a "third-rate burglary" at the Watergate was marked across America Thursday with parties, polls and interviews.

Gerald Ford said so long as people remember Watergate, such a scandal won't happen again.

Ford, the only administration official whose career was helped by Watergate, was appointed vice president by Richard Nixon when Spiro Agnew resigned, and became president when the scandal forced Nixon from office.

In an interview on ABC's "Good Morning America," Ford said a similar political scandal is not possible now "because people remember too well the unfortunate developments that took place during that period in 1972 and '73."

But memories sometimes get short, and maybe in another generation, such an "unfortunate development" could take place, I certainly have no doubt.

Watergate, he said, could provide a valuable lesson for new generations of Americans.

"Hopefully, future generations will look back and say 'we don't want these kind of developments — an imperial presidency and mistakes made by top people,'" Ford said.

"The American people ought to re-read that history every once in awhile and not forget it, so they won't let it happen again."

The former president, who served the remaining 2 1/2 years of Nixon's term and lost to Jimmy Carter in 1976, said he does not regret pardoning Nixon.

"I believe today under identical circumstances, I would do as I did in 1974," he said. "We had to get the Watergate problem off the president's desk and the only way to do it... was to grant a pardon and to get on with the overall difficulties that were facing our country."

Television networks ran specials and interviews on Watergate. And a two-hour television documentary, "73 Days That Changed America," produced and syndicated by television interviewer Nancy Dickerson — was said to be TV outlets reaching some 60 percent of the nation's viewers.

John Ehrlichman, interviewed by Diane Sawyer on CBS' "Morning News" show, said the pardon of Watergate was having Ford and Jimmy Carter as presidents and a nation that was "dead in the water" for seven years.

Ehrlichman, Nixon's former domestic adviser, said, "I think a lot of our economic problems right now are a result of nobody minding the store for a long, long time, nobody with a sense of direction, no president with a real strong feeling of where he wanted to take the country."

Israeli troops continue to pound positions around Beirut

By United Press International

Israeli artillery and gunboats pounded Palestinian refugee camps and positions around Beirut Thursday, but PLO leader Yasser Arafat said his troops will never surrender in what he called Israel's U.S.-supported war in Lebanon.

"Victory is coming and we will fight until victory," Arafat said at a rally in Moslem West Beirut. "Beirut will be the grave for the aggressors and the Arab Spring will be held in the mountains 13 miles north of Beirut."

This aggression was prepared by the United States and executed by the Zionist criminal gang amid world silence," he said. Earlier, he estimated 10,000 Lebanese and Palestinians have been killed or wounded in the fighting.

In New York, Prime Minister Menachem Begin said his troops will not withdraw from Lebanon until Israel receives watertight assurances that its northern settlements will not be attacked by the Palestinians.

Working against time, U.S. envoy Philip Habib appealed for a three-hour truce to stall an Israeli drive into Beirut while he sought to negotiate a political settlement.

The Israeli Cabinet, meeting without Begin, answered Habib's request by reiterating its commitment to a cease-fire that collapsed within hours of being declared last week.

There was no immediate reaction from the Palestine Liberation Organization, whose earlier appeal for direct talks with the United States was rejected by the Reagan administration.

Palestinian and Lebanese officials reported sporadic fighting between guerrillas and Israeli troops surrounding the embattled Lebanese capital.

"We don't want to stay in Lebanon," Begin told some 500 Jewish leaders Thursday at a New York dinner, but added security arrangements must be set to ensure safety for residents of northern Israel before his troops withdraw.

Begin, who meets Friday with Secretary of State Alexander Haig and addresses the U.N. Special Session on Disarmament, said Israeli troops will not leave Lebanon until there is "absolute peace."

"We shall not succumb to friendly pressure if anybody tries to exert it on us," Begin said. He was scheduled to meet with President Reagan on Monday.

Begin said in an earlier speech that Israeli troops planned to withdraw from Lebanon "in a few weeks if it is possible."

During his speech, Begin displayed what he said were captured PLO documents listing several northern Israeli towns targeted for guerrilla attacks.

Three airliners belonging to Middle East Airlines, Lebanon's national carrier, were damaged when a flurry of bullets rained down on the runways at Beirut Airport.

Lebanese television said Israeli gunships shelled two refugee camps on the southern edge of the capital, Sabra and Shatila.

Fighting also was reported around the Bourj Barajneh refugee camp on Beirut's southern outskirts and in Aley, a Lebanese leftist stronghold in the mountains 13 miles north of Beirut.

Today's briefing

Reagan will run: Richards

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Republican National Chairman Richard Richards said Thursday he believes President Reagan will run for a second term and George Bush will be his running mate.

"We are operating under the assumption the president's going to run again," Richards told the National Press Club. "He picked the site for the 1984 convention and we're assuming he picked the site where he wants to be re-nominated."

The Republican National Committee's site selection committee earlier in the day formally recommended the convention be held in Dallas. Earlier this year Reagan wrote the committee saying he wanted the convention there.

Asked if Bush would remain as vice president, Richards replied: "I assume so."

"I don't know how a vice president could have operated better than George Bush has," he said. "He has earned the admiration and respect and I think the support of the conservatives who originally opposed his nomination."

Voting Act nears passage

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Spurred by the complaints of moderate Republicans, the Senate moved Thursday night toward passing an extension of the 1965 Voting Rights Act, called by supporters the most important civil rights measure.

Passage, expected late Thursday or today, was assured when Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., dropped his week-long filibuster against a procedural motion to consider the bill. The Senate began voting on weakening amendments and defeated them.

A knowledgeable Republican source said Helms agreed to drop opposition when Republican leader Howard Baker agreed to call up his constitutional amendment to require a balanced budget shortly.

Since the House passed the measure 309-24 last year and has agreed to take the Senate version intact, Senate action ended down an extension of the key provision for as long as 25 years and rattled language President Reagan has agreed to sign.

Two claim to be police chief

PAGE DALE, Mo. (UPI) — One of two men who claim to be police chief of this St. Louis suburb arrested the mayor and the man she had just ordered sworn in to take his place, on charges of speeding and disturbing the peace.

Odin Williams, hired last week by the board of aldermen as police chief, arrested Mayor Mary Hall and Mosses King Wednesday, minutes after an unscheduled ceremony in which Ms. Hall ordered the city clerk to swear in King as chief.

Merlin Guyot had been police chief until he was fired by the board in favor of Williams. Guyot has since dropped out of the controversy.

Williams told reporters he stopped King for driving "about 32 miles an hour" in a 35-mph zone Wednesday. King replied that he couldn't be arrested because he was the chief of police, Williams said.

"I said, 'Show me some identification,' said Williams. 'And he couldn't since I had the badge.'"

"So I didn't think there were two chiefs in this town, so I arrested him and charged him with impersonating the chief of police," said Williams, who also also charged King with speeding and with disturbing the police.

Donovan reception delayed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — With Labor Secretary Raymond Donovan vacationing in Europe, officials Thursday put off a reception in his honor next week and the Senate leadership agreed to probe the FBI's performance on his confirmation.

Labor Department spokesman Vernon Louviere said a luncheon by political appointees in the department was postponed because of Donovan's schedule, not because of a "trash of new stories" about investigations into Donovan's alleged organized crime connections.

"That isn't true... I can assure you of that," Louviere said. The event — described by one source as an "everybody loves him" gathering — has not been rescheduled.

Budget compromise bill 'fragile'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Senate and House negotiators approved a "fragile" $770 billion Republican compromise budget for 1983 early today and sent it to both chambers for final passage.

Members of the Senate-House conference committee, working until just after 11:30 a.m., cast a vote in favor of the budget plan together by GOP leaders and budget director David Stockman. It contains a projected deficit of nearly $104 billion next year.

The committee's task was to blend the Senate- and House-passed budgets into one final version, but since both of those were written by Republicans, House Democrats on the panel decided not to block passage of the compromise.

All but one Democratic amendment to the budget was rejected. The committee accepted an amendment by House Budget Committee Chairman James Jones, D-Okla., to restore $400 million to food stamps, Medicaid, and welfare and to restore $200 million to the space program.

A proposal by Rep. Stephen Solarz, D-N.Y., to restore $600 million to foreign aid was narrowly rejected, after Republican leaders told their members adding that amount to the deficit would endanger passage of the final budget in the conservative House.

Speaking of House GOP leader Bob Michel, Senate Budget Committee Chairman Pete Domenici, R-N.M., told his colleagues: "It is his opinion we have a fragile budget. He believes it has a reasonable chance of passage, as it stands now."

"I think the budget we have before us now can pass the Senate," Domenici added.

The Republicans used "accounting adjustments" in their compromise to come up with a deficit under $100 billion. And the accuracy of the numbers came under immediate fire from Democrats on the committee.

Falkland prisoners moved today

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (UPI) — The Argentine foreign ministry said Argentine and British ships, aided by the International Red Cross, will start bringing more than 10,000 prisoners of war back home this morning.

The foreign ministry said Thursday that the British ships Canberra and Norland as well as three Argentine ships and possibly Argentine planes would conduct the transfer.

London, Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher told Parliament Thursday the United Kingdom had refused to accept a cease-fire for the whole

South Atlantic and would not allow prisoners to be shipped directly to Argentine ports.

The foreign ministry said it had worked through the Red Cross and "if there are no inconveniences, the aforementioned transfer will begin in the morning."

"There is also the possibility some of the members of the Argentine forces will be transported to the continent by air," the foreign ministry added.

The foreign ministry did not say whether the soldiers traveling by ship would be taken directly to the Argentine mainland or transported to Uruguay or elsewhere first.

The private Noticias Argentinas news agency said Gen. Mario Menendez, Argentine commander on the Falklands, and other officers had been taken on a British war ship as the British fleet moved toward Ascension Island or Uruguay.

The news agency said Argentine troops could reach the Argentine mainland Saturday or Sunday.

Noticias-Argentinas said the first soldiers repatriated may be those on East Falkland, where the capital of Stanley is located.

demanded he accept a full cease-fire and surrender to the British on the Falklands.

Gallieri, calling the loss at Stanley a "partial defeat," vowed Wednesday to continue fighting and branded Gen. Mario Benjamin Menendez, the captured Argentine commander on the Falklands, a "traitor."

The Foreign Ministry said Eduardo Roca, Argentine Ambassador to the United Nations, also resigned for "reasons of health" and was temporarily replaced by the Foreign Ministry's director of international organizations, Arnoldo Listre.

Foreign Minister Costa Mendez offered his resignation Wednesday but it was refused.

News reports from the Falklands said Argentine POWs broke free of their guards, set fire to a school and the Globe shop where senior Argentine officers were sleeping and littered the island's capital with thousands of sodden kit bags, blankets and food scraps.

Britain said the requisitioned liner Canberra and the ferry Norland had not left Stanley because Argentina has refused to accept a full cease-fire or guarantee the ships' safe passage in the South Atlantic.

About 7,000 prisoners were temporarily housed on the ships. Tents intended for prisoners were lost May 25 when Argentine planes sank the Atlantic Conveyor.

British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher said the Canberra, with 5,000 POWs, probably would sail to background Uruguay, rather than directly home because the junta fears renewed rioting if thousands of beaten, demoralized troops return without their weapons aboard British ships.

broad-based, comprehensive series of proposals to reduce the risk of war."

They include calls for:

- Elimination of land-based intermediate-range missiles in Europe, a proposal he announced last November.
- A one-third reduction in long-range strategic ballistic missile warheads, proposed on May 9.
- A substantial reduction in NATO and Warsaw Pact ground and air forces, announced on his recent trip to Europe.

"New safeguards to reduce the risk of accidental war, which were also announced on the European trip.

These include advance notice of military exercises and intercontinental missile launches, and an "exchange of information on each side's strategic forces."

All of Reagan's arms reduction proposals would require the Soviet Union to cut back its forces more sharply than the United States.

Similarly, the latest Soviet proposal, its promise not to be the first nation to use nuclear weapons, would be a greater sacrifice for the West than for the communist block.

The United States and its NATO allies have never promised not to use nuclear weapons first. They believe nuclear weapons may be necessary to offset long-standing Soviet superiority in conventional weapons, especially tanks in Europe.

"Our purpose is to deter not just a nuclear war, but to deter a war in Europe," an official explained in a background briefing on the president's speech.

CHEYENNE, Wyo. (UPI) — Attorney General William French Smith, reversing a major Carter administration water policy, said Thursday the federal government must abide by state water law just "like everyone else."

Under Carter administration policy, all water on federal lands not already allocated to private or public use could be appropriated by a federal agency to carry out their authorized functions.

Smith announced the administration's legal opinion reversing this policy in a speech to the Cheyenne Chamber of Commerce. In Washington, the Justice Department released an 80-page legal memorandum outlining the new policy.

From now on, Smith said, all federal agencies must abide by state water law unless Congress directs otherwise.

"They must now take their place in line like everyone else and let the states decide," Smith said. "State laws, in certain instances, deny federal agencies water rights."

The "free rein" given to federal agencies in appropriating water rights was a "nightmare" for Western states, Smith told the local businessmen. "I am here to tell you that nightmare is over."

James Watt had reversed the Carter administration policy on non-reserved water rights last fall, but Watt's directive applied only to Interior Department lands.

The attorney general said his ruling would apply to all federal agencies "across the board," and affect numerous water rights lawsuits — some of which go back as far as 1926.

resource and public land specialist with the Friends of Earth environmental group, said the new policy represents a further rollback of environmental safeguards by the Reagan administration.

Conrad said since Watt has already imposed the policy, for the Interior Department, lands controlled by the Agriculture Department's U.S. Forest Service would be affected the most.

Conrad said state laws, particularly in the West, stress allowing upstream users to appropriate water without regard for those downstream and federal water reserve policy has retrained that "use-it-or-lose-it" impulse.

But Sen. Malcolm Wallop, R-Wyo., hailed Smith's ruling as giving "Western states a strong leg up in their battles with the federal government in water issues."

BOISE (UPI) — The federal government's decision to respect state water laws will save Idaho a lot of time and money by eliminating confrontations over water rights, the head of the Idaho Water Resources Department says.

Director Kenneth Dunn hailed the Reagan administration's move Thursday to reverse a Carter-era policy that called on federal agencies to bypass state laws to accomplish their goals.

"It's going to save my agency time and money now and in the future," Dunn said. "Not only will we save money, but so will state water resources agencies throughout the West."

Attorney General William French Smith announced at Cheyenne, Wyo., said that from now on, all federal agencies must comply with state water laws unless Congress directs otherwise. The new policy reverses a Carter administration rule that said all federal lands not already allocated to private or public use could be appropriated by a government agency to carry out its functions.

"I think the states have been battling them so much that their attorneys finally agreed they don't have a valid right (to override state water laws)," Dunn said. "It's a good states' rights decision."

"We've been going at it one de-

Dunn said the state has been successful in fights against actions by the Interior Department and Forest Service that conflicted with the state's system of water rights management.

But he said those fights have been costly and time-consuming for the money-strapped state agency, and the Reagan administration's policy change will relieve the burden.

The state official said conflicts have arisen with federal agencies when one of those agencies claims a non-reserved water right — a right not specifically granted by Congress in the creation of federal preserves.

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y. (UPI) — Demolition of 227 houses in the Love Canal area began Thursday, two years after residents were forced to abandon their home to escape the effects of thousands of tons of toxic chemicals buried there.

Philip Goodman, engineer in charge of the demolition, said the procedure is to take the houses off their foundations and then to demolish them. Debris will then be buried in their basements and covered with a six-inch clay cap.

The work was scheduled to conclude by September.

In other developments, the Love Canal Revitalization Agency said it will begin sending some of its members and Love Canal residents to Washington in an attempt to speed up the release of an Environmental Protection Agency assessment study on the area which was supposed to be made public this month.

All but two of the houses within the first and second rings around the chemically contaminated area that are now owned by the state Urban Development Corp. will be destroyed, Goodman added.

Ironically, the 99th street school, whose playgrounds are right over the controversial Hooker Chemical and Plastics Corp. dump site, is not scheduled for razing.

Hinckley cries during attorney's arguments

WASHINGTON (UPI) — John W. Hinckley Jr. covered his eyes and wept for the first time in his trial Thursday when his lawyer described the lonely drifter to a jury in closing arguments.

Defense attorney Vincent Fuller described Hinckley as "pathetic" — so sick he was afraid to reveal it. But a prosecutor told the jury Hinckley so calculated his shooting of President Reagan that he kept thinking "get the president" and had "kill" on his mind when he loaded his gun with exploding Dovesister bullets.

"This is the man that shot four people down in the street," chief prosecutor Roger Adelman said in his three-hour summation at Hinckley's historic trial.

Hinckley sat stoically through the prosecution's presentation, his eyes fixed straight ahead.

—But he seemed to lose his grip on himself when Fuller told the jury, "It is delusion to think you can assassinate the president of the United States."

ed-States and gain the love of woman."

Describing Hinckley as out of control because of his obsession for actress Jodie Foster, Fuller said, "Delusional thinking, pure and simple. It's pathetic."

He said Hinckley was "a psychotic who had a fear he was sick and who was afraid to disclose it."

Hinckley's face grew flushed, his shoulders shook for an instant and he wiped his eyes. The judge, seeing Hinckley in his most emotional state of the 38-day-old trial, promptly ordered a recess while a deputy marshal fetched a box of tissues and a glass of water. Lawyers huddled with the judge.

— After a brief delay, the judge told the jury, "It's either feast or famine — the courtroom is either too hot or too cold," and adjourned the proceedings.

—The defense will finish its closing arguments today. The judge also announced that because of unspecified conditions the jury was being sequestered beginning immediately.

Minutes before the session ends

Minutes before the session ended, two UPI reporters who had been barred from the courtroom were readmitted. Earlier, Adelman reminded the jury that Hinckley left an unmailed letter in his hotel room saying he wanted to impress Miss Foster with the "historical deed" of shooting the president.

"Is this the letter of a man suffering from an inner rage?" Adelman asked in a demanding voice, summing up the case against the man accused of shooting Reagan March 30, 1981. "This isn't John Hinckley in delusion," he said. "This is John Hinckley desiring fame."

Fuller, describing Hinckley as "unrealistic,"

"totally detached from reality," entreated the jury, "I ask you to put aside the horrors of March 30. That does not bear on the defendant's sanity."

Evans should meet Batt in fall debate

Although a political debate is a formalized setting, we think it is an important way for voters to hear and consider the views of political candidates.

It may not be a perfect setting. Television and the question-answer-rebuttal format can give an air of artificiality to such forums. Unless a candidate simply misses a cue or acts like a jerk, it's nearly impossible to "lose," although the impression voters get often can be craftily turned.

Political wisdom holds that Richard Nixon lost to John Kennedy in 1960 in part because of a poor debate performance, and the same has been said for Gerald Ford, and in turn, Jimmy Carter, whose up-tight performance against a relaxed Ronald Reagan may have put a nail in his election coffin.

Maybe that history is what Gov. John Evans has in mind with his decision this week not to meet challenger Lt. Gov. Phil Batt in a debate in this fall's campaign. We don't know who would come out stronger, but we think Evans has missed the call and should reconsider.

The proposed debate would be sponsored by two of Idaho's respected professional organizations, the League of Women Voters and the Idaho Press Club, which has members from both broadcast and print media. The setting wasn't cast in concrete, nor was the form.

Nor was the content. Evans believes he should be elected to another term, and we think he should be willing to stand up and tell us why. Batt, who has held an all-but-invisible position as lieutenant governor for four years, thinks he ought to get Evans' job. Again, we'd like to hear why.

Both candidates meet frequently with the press and make considerable use of other ways of making their views known. Fine. But we think Idaho voters are entitled to a face-to-face debate as well.

A face-to-face debate gives voters a chance to see each candidate make a statement, be challenged and respond. Phil Wenstand, the managing editor of KTVB-TV in Boise and the president of the Idaho Press Club, says providing a setting for that kind of exchange is the chief intent.

"It's a chance for voters to see a rebuttal then and there, to see the candidate thinking on his feet and under pressure. He has to respond then and there," says Wenstand.

We think Idaho voters are entitled to a vigorous exchange between Batt and Evans. Perhaps a "town meeting" format could be worked out, in which each man states his views, on the same platform, and responds individually to questions.

Evans said he would consider that approach. We urge him to do so.

Taxes: Whose fair share?

Times-News story: 45 percent of corporations pay $30 or less state taxes.
Surely most wage-earners know this. 'Tis like the famous quote of one of our corporate giants: "The government gets its fair share of taxes from me through my employees' withholding."

It will get worse under the new

Let's sell seats in Congress

Before the vote in the U.S. Senate, one member said, "I find it interesting that this year, contrary to the tradition, I am not being held up to public contempt." Gentlemen, you have earned my contempt for these many years.

Consulting my trusty scrapbook of 20 years of writing, I find five times where I have expressed contempt at the actions of our Congress. In two of these articles, I proposed we auction the seats in Congress and allocate the proceeds toward paying the national debt. This would eliminate the farce of holding elections, which seems but public endorsement of bribery, covert gifts and financial donations beyond the flexible laws purported to govern open buying of Congressional seats.

Here in a thinly populated state like Idaho, there are enough men of wealth to evenly divide the seats. Just imagine the fun the favor might have listening to the audience rebuff the bids: "Come on boys, who'll give a million for this fine seat. Don't be a tightwad, Mr. Rockefeller. You can't afford to see Citterio out-bid Chase Manhattan. Thank you, and now who bids a half. Thank you, and now two for this six-year seat."

All good, clean business and honest government assured. These men pay little or no taxes, and open rivalry would relieve them of work and worry. Of course, the great unwashed could still play at democracy by voting for state and county officials, and of course, school boards and city councils. They have little to say now in federal government, and by dropping this pretense, they would be free from the feeling of futility in listening to endless harangue and chest beating.

Now, to belabor the obvious: 1. Ten million lawyers would declare the proposal unconstitutional. 2. Could a politician be found who, when bought, would stay bought? 3. The present windbags would drown at missing a chance to exalt themselves.

Hospital's quality has declined

In response to the letter in your paper, Thursday, June 10, praising the efficiency of Magic Valley Memorial Hospital, I would like to tell Wendell that they should feel extremely lucky.

One year ago my wife went into MVMH and was only supposed to be there for three days for surgery and recovery. Because of an error in the typing on her blood, she was given two and one-half units of the wrong blood during surgery.

She suffers memory loss, weight loss and it has had an effect on our marriage, on our 4-year-old daughter and on our entire way of life.

My wife almost died twice during surgery while she was in this hospital. These people are supposed to be professionals. They are dealing with people's lives, not machines.

I slept, ate and lived in the waiting room, and if it wasn't for the girls in the intensive-care unit pumping me full of coffee, I would not have made it. I also have nothing but praise for the girls in the ICU ward, and the help I got the week that she was in ICU.

But it never should have happened. I feel that the hospital has dropped tremendously in the quality of its service since this big, fancy company started running it. The advantages do not outweigh the criticisms if it inflicts needless death and injury on the people of the Magic Valley.

RUSS BAKER
Twin Falls

Editor's note: In February, Mr. Baker filed a $50,000 lawsuit against Magic Valley Memorial Hospital, charging that his wife, Larayne Baker, suffered seizures, amnesia, disorientation, hallucinations and permanent damage to her nervous system after being given the wrong blood.

The suit seeks $1,000 as compensation for special medical and other expenses, $500,000 in general damages and $150,000 as compensation to Baker for the trauma caused to his marriage.

The case has been reviewed by a pre-litigation panel. Hospital administrator William Burns said the panel's findings have not been relayed yet to the hospital. He declined further comment on the case.

Humanism really communism

I am truly ashamed of The Times-News editorial staff to publish such a picture in their paper as the one that appeared the other morning, and I believe it was in Thursday's paper about school prayers. I cut the picture out and the reading under the picture—but I did not get the exact date, but it was within this past week.

I could not wonder if you agree with all this humanism that is going on in our world today and in our schools across our land, all the crime, sex and abortions among the teenagers.

We used to call this humanism of today, communism, but they are trying to be more clever by calling it humanism, today.

I was shocked and felt also humiliated, both when I saw that picture and angered when I read the words underneath the picture, because I am a born again Christian and believe very much in prayer, whether it be in our home, the schools or in our place of worship. It should have the same effect regardless.

Surely you must know we are living in the last days, and the more people that turn to God in prayer, believing and trusting have a better chance of being saved for all eternity.

God help us all to be more in prayer for our country, each other and Christians everywhere besides the last.

MRS. GEORGE D. WALKER
Filer

Editor's note: The "photo" that Mrs. Walker refers to was a cartoon that appeared on our editorial page on Thursday, May 27. The cartoonist was attempting to show, in his opinion, the problems that President Reagan's proposed constitutional amendment regarding prayer in the schools might cause.

Road atlas is great, but it's missing one thing: Potholes

WASHINGTON — The new Rand McNally Road Atlas for the United States, Canada and Mexico uses, by my count, no fewer than 50 symbols on its map.

In addition to marking 10 different types of roadways, including scenic routes, the atlas has symbols for: campsites, golf courses, airports, dams, mountain peaks, foot trails, ferries, time zones, points of entry and many other points of interest to the wayfarer public.

Distances on one map are computed not only in miles but in driving time. The distance between Williams, Ariz., and Winnemucca, Nev., is 686 miles as the Winnemucca flies. Rand McNally figures the driving time at 14 hours and 35 minutes.

A truly diligent motorist can find his way from Shoulderblade, Ky., to Cotton Plant, Ark., with a side trip to Waterproof, La., should he so desire.

Or you can select a route from Inuvik, Canada, beyond the Arctic Circle, to Chepo, below the Panama Canal, with a stopover at El Salvador, if that happens to be the driving vacation you've planned for this summer.

Another good thing for a motorist to know is that the Salton Sea Wildlife Refuge in California is entirely submerged. So don't plan to drive there unless your car is equipped with water wings.

Rand McNally is big on color distinctions. It marks campsites with green triangles and "highest point in state" with white triangles. As to what happens if there happens to be a campsite at the highest point in a state, I am not prepared to say.

Foot trails are marked with orange lines and ferry routes are marked with broken green lines, an important distinction that could spare a traveler the embarrassment of trying to hike along a ferry route.

Despite all this loving attention to detail, however, I found the atlas curiously unsatisfying.

Nowhere, amidst all those myriad symbols, did I see any sort of marking for potholes. Publication of road maps with locations of major potholes clearly designated would be a genuine public service.

Potholes, I should think, could be indicated by little drawings of broken axles. Since Rand McNally has chosen not to mark the locations of caves, chasms, craters and other abysses, the colors that might have designated these fissures could be used to suggest the dimensions of the potholes. To wit:

- Axles over broken orange lines symbolize potholes with foot trails.
- Axles with little green tents symbolize potholes in which camping is permitted.
- Axles over broken blue lines symbolize potholes with ferry crossings.
- Axles with black slash marks symbolize potholes that have been dammed.
- Axles over black triangles are ports of entry.

Success in war often diminishes in the aftermath battle

WASHINGTON — If the leaders of governments knew the outcome of the actions they take, they wouldn't take half of them.

If the Argentine junta expected their occupation of the Falklands to result in more than 700 dead, more than 1,000 prisoners and a major military defeat, would they have done it? Of course not.

If the British Parliament had known the recapture of the Falklands would cost more than 200 lives and uncounted hundreds of wounded, would it still have endorsed the operation? Probably, but with much more debate and much less unanimity.

And when the Union Jack again flies over Stanley, what is the outcome? The British will have made, at great cost, a point of high principle in international law. Aggression must not be allowed to succeed.

The British, of course, say the Argentines were the aggressors. The United States agrees with them, and so does the United Nations.

The Argentines, of course, say the British are the aggressors. The Organization of American States agrees with them.

So one outcome is that a goodly portion of mankind will believe that aggression has indeed succeeded.

What then? That which Britain has regained at very high cost must be defended at very high cost. Already, the British have made it clear they would like someone else, the United Nations or perhaps the United States, to share that cost, or even to take it over.

Half the earth away, the outcome also is in doubt in the Middle East. When the Israeli ambassador to Britain, Shlomo Argov, was the victim of an assassination attempt, it was given as the reason for an invasion of Lebanon and a war against the Palestine Liberation Organization. It wasn't a reason, but an excuse.

The invasion obviously had been thoroughly planned and prepared, and the news that the would-be assassin had been an invasion of Lebanon and a war against the Palestine Liberation Organization. It wasn't a reason, but an excuse.

The new reason given was to remove PLO guns from within range of Israeli settlements. This was accomplished within 72 hours, but the Israelis marched on, and the casualty figures mounted.

Militarily, the Israeli invasion of Lebanon has been a smashing success. But the outcome remains in doubt.

Some years ago, the House Armed Services

Committee met in secret session. An airport near Saigon had been attacked by guerrillas. U.S. servicemen had been killed. U.S. aircraft destroyed.

"Revenge," demanded the hawks on the committee. All we had to do was remove Viet Cong guerrillas and guns from within range of our bases. A few people had doubts, but even fewer expressed them. Revenge is a much stronger emotion, and much better politics, than doubt is. So we pushed them back and established new bases to protect the old bases. Then the new bases were attacked, and we had to establish new bases to protect them.

The Palestinians say they have been dispossessed of their lands and their homes. It isn't irrational for them to detest the people who have dispossessed them.

The head of the International Red Cross delegation in Beirut has estimated that in one week 600,000 people have been made homeless in southern Lebanon. Creating a miserable, homeless people is a frightful result of Israel's military success. It will breed more hatred and terror.

Both Britain and Israel know there is something after military success. There is the awesome job of occupying, defending and monitoring the territory they have captured. Both of them would like the United States to take over that job or at least participate in it.

The United States should resist their kind offers. There is a terribly long way to go, and the outcome is very much in doubt.

Otis Pike, a former congressman, writes his column for the Newhouse News Service.

Errors in BLM inventory

BOISE (UPI) — Acreage figures on potential wilderness areas in Idaho which were included in a Bureau of Land Management inventory of public lands vary widely from numbers submitted to state headquarters by analysts in district offices.

In some cases, the discrepancy was more than 30,000 acres, officials said Thursday. Wilderness coordinators in three of the state's six BLM district offices said numbers they compiled on wilderness study areas in their region apparently were downgraded significantly before the inventory was released this week.

These coordinators said they didn't know why the acreage numbers had been altered, but a state BLM official said adjustments were needed because the district offices submitted "some bum figures."

Canyon rim farmland not on list — B1

John Butz, coordinator in the Idaho Falls district, said he submitted a potential wilderness figure of 348,640. The number listed in the published report was 313,640.

"I'm really surprised. That's not what I sent to the state office," said Butz.

In the Boise District, coordinator John Bonediel said he compiled a figure of 703,000 acres. That number had dropped to 689,749 by the time the inventory was released.

And in the Shoshone District, coordinator Rob Helle said he determined that 422,188 acres are under study as wilderness. The inventory listed acreage at 392,626.

In the Shoshone case, Harold Brown — district really specialist — said he downgraded Helle's figure, but planned to reinstate the original number when he submits a new report to the state office next week.

First word that major discrepancies existed in the figures was revealed to UPI Thursday by Sen. Mike Mitchell, a Lewiston Democrat running for lieutenant governor who led the fight to gain public release of the inventory.

Mitchell said the "apparent carelessness" which went into compiling the data shows "they (the federal government) don't really care if the figures don't add up right. They already know what they want to do."

School board looks at cuts during emergency meeting

GRANGEVILLE (UPI) — The Idaho Board of Education will consider several methods to cut costs and raise revenue to meet the state's mandated 9-percent spending reduction.

Alternatives under consideration include trimming funding for intercollegiate athletics, cutting staff, raising student fees, consolidating departments and eliminating duplicate academic programs.

"We have operated on the assumption that nothing is so sacred that it shouldn't be considered," said University of Idaho President Richard Gibb. "And I mean nothing."

Board members scheduled a special meeting on June 22 in Boise to decide whether an emergency declaration to allow public colleges and universities to lay off employees on short notice should be adopted and what cuts or fee hikes, if any, should be made.

The board also will consider at its special meeting whether a financial emergency exists for programs under its control, including the Office of the Board of Education, the State Education Department, the School for the Deaf and Blind in Gooding and the divisions of Vocational Education and Vocational Rehabilitation.

Jail murder suspect released on bail

BOISE (UPI) — The lawyer for one of five youths accused of torturing and killing a fellow juvenile inmate at the Ada County Jail sold a judge evidence which showed his client's intent.

William Tway, attorney for Joseph M. Krahn, told Fourth District Magistrate George Carey "the preliminary hearing will probably exonerate my client."

Tway then asked the judge to set a $10,000 bail for Krahn, 17, and Carey agreed after Prosecutor Jay Rosenthal said he had no objection to releasing the defendant.

Tway and four other lawyers representing the youths — who are charged with the Memorial Day slaying of 17-year-old Christopher Peterman — appeared at a special hearing Wednesday to ask for a delay in the scheduled June 17 preliminary hearing.

They also asked Carey to invoke a century-old Idaho law requiring the closure of preliminary hearings at the request of a defendant. The magistrate postponed the evidentiary hearing to June 24, and said he would rule on the request for closure at that time.

On Memorial Day, Peterman was beaten, kicked, gouged and burned for nearly five hours while in the juvenile section of the Ada County Jail. He was booked into jail the previous Friday for failing to pay $75 in traffic fines and court costs.

Rosenthal said Peterman was found in the shower area of the Ada County Jail cell, not in the jail exercise yard as earlier reports said.

Rosenthal's comments contradicted Ada County Sheriff F.C. "Chuck"

Palmer, who earlier said Peterman was found in the jail exercise yard after he was beaten.

Rosenthal would not say how Peterman reached the shower area from the exercise yard, where authorities have said he was beaten.

"How the boy got in there is an evidentiary matter of material importance to certain parts of the case," he said.

The question over where Peterman was found was raised when "People" magazine this week quoted Palmer as saying, "Peterman was found in a shower stall. Palmer was quoted Sunday by the 'Denver Post' as saying the youth was found in the juvenile cell."

Rosenthal said Krahn had no other convictions than a traffic offense. He also said he agreed to support bail considering "the extent of his (Krahn's) involvement in the crime."

Neither Rosenthal or Tway would say if Krahn will testify against the other defendants.

High court upholds law to commit 'insane' defendants

BOISE (UPI) — A state law allowing the Department of Health and Welfare to automatically commit to mental institutions defendants who are acquitted of crimes by reason of insanity was upheld Thursday.

The Idaho Supreme Court, in affirming lower court rulings in three separate cases, said the law was constitutional because defendants who rely on an insanity defense also admit to committing the crime and to being mentally ill.

Appeals to the Supreme Court came from six men committed to institutions after they were found not guilty in criminal cases by reason of insanity.

The men — Timothy P. Downing, Peter J. Harrison, Alvin H. Penn, David A. Carter, Jimmy D. Russell and William D. Josman — claimed that since they were acquitted of the criminal charges, they could not be committed to a mental institution without a hearing that proved they continued to suffer from mental disease.

All the appellants in the lawsuits were committed to State Hospital South in Blackfoot.

In an opinion written by Chief Justice Robert Baker, the court ruled that "the defense of mental disease or defect is, of itself, sufficient to authorize commitment automatically upon acquittal by reason of mental disease or defect."

"By pleading an insanity defense, the defendant admits not only mental irresponsibility, but also the commission of the act upon which prosecution is based."

New car dealers weather recession

MCCALL (UPI) — The retail new car industry in Idaho is not doing that badly despite the recession, said Wally Orvik, president of the Idaho Automobile Dealers Association Wednesday.

"I don't think anybody is that concerned" about the recession, Orvik said. "All in all, given the state of the economy, they're hanging on pretty well. They feel like there's an upturn coming and they'll be able to muddle through until then."

Orvik and about 160 other Gem State dealers and suppliers began Wednesday their 44th annual convention in McCall.

The Moscow new car dealer added that while five new car dealers in the state have closed this year, two have opened.

Cause of blindness wrongly diagnosed

CHICAGO (UPI) — The leading cause of blindness in adults was incorrectly diagnosed by physicians in more than six out of 10 cases in a "landmark" study of diabetes, it was reported Thursday.

Diabetic retinopathy, blamed for 40 percent of the blindness cases among adults, was diagnosed correctly in "just 39 percent of examinations performed by 23 primary care physicians and specialists," the American Medical Association said in the University of Pennsylvania study.

The study of 11 patients between the years 1970-79 was reported in the current issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association. Twenty-three physicians performed retinal examinations on 10 diabetic patients and one normal patient with dilated pupils.

General ophthalmologists and retinal specialists correctly diagnosed the ailment 53 percent and 70 percent of the time, said Dr. Elliott J. Sussman, assistant professor of medicine who headed the investigation. Retinal specialists had a correct diagnosis rate of 27 percent. That compared to 31 percent for non-specialist residents and 36 percent for ophthalmologists.

Physicians believe the degenerative process in diabetic retinopathy begins early in the course of diabetes and develops over a period of years before becoming clinically apparent.

The earliest signs include tiny balloon-like dilations on the retinal blood vessels. Tiny hemorrhages occur when the dilations rupture.

The more advanced stage, called proliferative retinopathy, is incorrectly diagnosed in 70 percent of the patients who receive the diagnosis, Dr. Jay S. Skriver of the University of Miami School of Medicine said in an accompanying editorial.

Skriver, who described the study as "landmark," said young diabetic patients should be examined by their physician each year for retinopathy. They should be examined by an ophthalmologist after about eight to 10 years, or earlier if there are indications of the eye disease.

Skriver the serious consequences of diabetes raise questions of whether primary care physicians are aware of the study's findings and are able to recognize the eye disease.

Space craft may explain '10th planet'

MOUNTAIN VIEW, Calif. (UPI) — A pair of American space craft may soon discover what mystery object — a 10th planet, a black hole or a visiting dark star — is throwing Uranus and Neptune 600 miles off course each year, NASA scientists said Thursday.

From data going back to Galileo, Neptune and Uranus are known to be regularly pulled from their predicted orbits by gravitational force — but the cause of their deviation from their predicted orbits has never been determined.

A 1978 report by the U.S. Naval Observatory discarded a possible explanation, long favored, that the effect was produced by the planet Pluto. The theory was abandoned after the discovery of a satellite of Pluto, called Charon, leading to a re-calculation of Pluto's mass.

Scientists found the Pluto-Charon mass was only about one-fifth the mass of the earth's moon, far too little to account for the tiny but regular shifts in the orbits of Neptune and Uranus.

They said a large, dark-star type object perhaps as big as the sun and perhaps 50 billion miles beyond the outermost planet could produce the orbital shifts in the two planets. A vastly larger black hole twice as far away is also consistent with the findings.

Or, according to the scientists, the pull of an undiscovered planet-sized object perhaps 3 billion miles beyond the Pluto-Neptune orbits would also explain the phenomenon.

The space agency said its scientists last summer began approaching the problem with data from Pioneer 10 and 11, the most distant man-made objects in the solar system. Data analysis will begin in October and an answer might come in three years, NASA said.

Pioneer 10 and 11 are now traveling on the solar system's opposite sides. The Pioneer closest to the mystery object should feel its pull more than the other Pioneer.

By comparing their escape trajectory, the scientists hope to calculate something about the size and location of the mysterious body.

Dr. John Anderson of the Jet Propulsion Laboratory said the object was more likely to be a passing star too dark to be seen than to be a 10th planet whose existence has long been speculated.

Preliminary study

Chemical decaffeinator causes cancer in mice

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Preliminary results of a two-year government study show a chemical commonly used to decaffeinate coffee caused liver cancer in laboratory mice, a federal researcher said Thursday.

The substance, methylene chloride, belongs to a chemical family that includes trichloroethylene, which coffee manufacturers stopped using in the 1970s after tests showed it caused cancer.

John Mennear, a toxicologist for the National Toxicology Program, which is sponsoring the study, cautioned results are still preliminary and the final version will not go before the program board until September.

"The bottom line, if the numbers don't change and the board approves it, is that this is a carcinogenic effect and it's produced by very high doses," he said.

General Foods Corp., which makes Sanka decaffeinated coffee, recently got FDA approval to use another decaffeinating chemical, ethyl acetate, instead of methylene chloride.

"We have no doubts about methylene chloride and that was not one of the reasons we petitioned the FDA for ethyl acetate," General Foods' spokesman Jack Whiteman told the Los Angeles Times.

"Any food company must constantly explore new ways to make a better product," he said.

Mennear said 37 percent of male mice fed high doses of the chemical developed cancer, compared with 17 percent of mice not fed it. Of female mice, 18 percent developed cancer when fed the high dose, but none of those not fed methylene chloride developed cancer.

Mennear spoke in a telephone interview from the National Institute of Environmental Health Science's Laboratories in Research Triangle Park, N.C., where the study is being conducted. The preliminary results were first reported by the Los Angeles Times.

The Food and Drug Administration will review the completed study to decide if methylene chloride should be banned, spokesman James Greene said.

"For several years we have suspected that methylene chloride could be a 'carcinogen' because it comes from the same chemical family as trichloroethylene," he said.

"We cannot take any action, nor would we," Greene added, "until the study is completed and we have a chance to review it."

According to National Coffee Association statistics, about 14 percent of coffee drinkers favor the beverage decaffeinated. Although coffee drinking has declined over the past 30 years, consumption of decaffeinated brands has risen.

"The industry feels that methylene chloride is safe," said David Kuhnt, the association's public relations man. He would not comment on the preliminary study results, but said the high methylene chloride doses given mice were the equivalent of a person drinking 12 million to 24 million cups of coffee a day.

Left-handers vulnerable to headaches, other illnesses

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Left-handed people, who make up about 15 percent of the population, are far more likely to get ulcers and suffer migraine headaches, a Harvard Medical School brain scientist reported.

A major study showed the frequency of auto-immune diseases, which include some types of arthritis and diabetes — to be 25 percent higher among left-handers, Dr. Norman Geschwind said Wednesday.

Such diseases occur when the body's immune system attacks healthy tissue instead of warding off invading organisms.

Left-handers also are more likely to have learning disabilities and gastrointestinal disorders such as ulcers, thyroid problems and lupus, Geschwind told reporters at the annual meeting of the Endocrine Society.

"There is an increased number of left-handers among patients with all the well-studied developmental learning disabilities," Geschwind said. "These disorders, which are more common in boys than girls, include dyslexia, stuttering, delayed speech, autism, hyperactivity and the Tourette syndrome."

Geschwind said he and Dr. Peter Behan of Scotland conducted a study of 506 men and women with an equal amount of left-handers and right-handers before making the conclusions which will be published this fall in the Proceedings of the national Academy of Sciences.

Valley life

Dear Abby

Faith unshared lacks completeness

BY ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
Universal Press-Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I think you were right when you told that 15-year-old girl to date boys of her own faith. I had parents who tried to tell me that, but I didn't listen. I was raised a Catholic, but I fell madly in love with a Lutheran boy. (He converted to marry me.)

Now 22 years later I go to church alone and our four children don't go to church at all. When they were youngsters, they went with me. Their father went occasionally, but his heart really wasn't in it and he slowly drifted away from the church. Soon the children stopped going, too.

I go to church because it is a vital part of my life. We never knew when love will "hit," and when it does, it becomes the most important thing in your life. I love my husband, but there is something missing because we don't share our prayers and religious faith. Perhaps I shouldn't complain. It only hurts on Sundays.

—THINKING OUT LOUD

DEAR THINKING: Yours was a refreshing relief from the many letters stating that dating was a far cry from marrying. However, I still maintain that dating usually leads to marriage. And if religion is an important part of your life, shop only in a store you can buy from.

DEAR ABBY: I have never been able to understand why a wife would expect a Mother's Day present from her husband. I've been married for 25 years, and if my husband ever gave me a gift for Mother's Day, I would personally throw it at him! I'm not his mother!

We are best friends and passionate lovers, but never would I accept a Mother's Day gift from a man who still turns my crank!

I'm signing my real name with permission to use it.

—ETHEL PRICE,
BELLARE, TEXAS

DEAR ETHEL: The Bible says, "A virtuous woman ... her price is above rubies." Your "Price" sounds like a jewel. Easy on the advertising. Ephemeral, just you and your "Price-less."

DEAR ABBY: Your column in the Pacific Stars and Stripes is well-read by service personnel overseas, so if you print your answer you will be helping a lot of servicemen and women who have the same problem I have.

Civilian friends are always asking me to purchase certain items for them through the Base Exchange (P.X.), which sells merchandise to those of us in the armed forces at a great savings. They always offer to give me the money in advance so I am in no way inconvenienced.

I don't want to be rude or unfriendly, but I really don't want to break the rules. So how do I get out of doing them this favor in the most courteous manner possible?

—A.P.O. SAN FRANCISCO

DEAR A.P.O.: Tell them that because such favors are clearly in violation of regulations, you deeply regret that you can't accommodate them. Period.

DEAR ABBY: Now that it's grass-cutting season, I hope you'll print this so others won't have to go through what we went through.

Last year we bought a riding lawn mower. Our children (both under 3 years old) were fascinated with it. Our first mistake was letting the children outside while the grass was being cut. Our next mistake was letting them ride on the mower with us.

When our son ran out to get on the lawn mower, his shoe got caught, and quick as a flash the boy lay on his back. We are grateful to God and the doctors he led us to that the boy will walk again.

My husband and I cringe when we see a child near (or riding on) a lawn mower. If this makes your column, maybe others will profit by our terrible nightmare.

Gift ideas listed for Father's day

By LAURA OWENS
Knight-Ridder Newspapers

Father's Day is June 20, and Dad is sick, and tired of getting neckties and pencil sets each year. We know because he called the other day and told us. He was too embarrassed to tell you in person, because he loves you and didn't want to hurt your feelings. He can't wear a tie anyway with his new guayabera shirt. So here are a few gifts that Dad will appreciate.

Dad has a real problem: He wants to know what time it is, but he wants to listen to Perry Como at the same time. What to do?

This pressing problem has had world-famous scientists and engineers scratching their heads for years (we can't take the space to name them here, but they're all very famous), and now miracle space-age technology has at last found a solution.

For the gadget-mad Dad, try the Continental Quartz Radio Chrono Alarm Wrist Radio.

Dick Tracy, out your heart out! Lately, wristwatches are doing everything but waxing the kitchen floor, and this one's no exception.

There are so many buttons on this thing it will keep Dad out of everyone's hair for weeks.

It has mode select. It has a beeping alarm. It has an AM radio that Dad can boogie to by pressing a button and plugging in a special headset. (Can you boogie to Perry Como? Hey, Dad, does ...)

There's a tiny radio dial to tune in his favorite station, and the sound reproduction through the 'phones is surprisingly good.

Oh, yes. It tells time, too. The Continental Quartz Radio Chrono Alarm Wrist Radio (what?) with headphones, is available for $39.95 in retail stores.

Ergonomically speaking, Dad's office chair is probably a disaster. It causes him to slouch, slump and twist around all day in an effort to get comfortable.

Now, science and high-tech design comes to the rescue with the Cyborg Chair from Rudd International Corp.

This is a chair that thinks. As Dad shifts his sitting position, a hidden hydraulic cylinder constantly adjusts the angle of the seat through a range of four degrees.

Three pneumatic cylinders also adjust the chair to Dad's own body contours, and he can see exactly where he stands (sits?) by checking the electronic LED readout panel that shows seat height and seat angle.

The chair was designed in collaboration with Jacob Jensen, the man who designs the ultra-expensive Bang and Olufsen stereo systems.

A warning: Dad might be so busy sitting pretty he may never come home from work.

The Cyborg Chair, depending on what options are included, retails for between $800 and $1,200 at fine furniture stores. For more information, write to Peter Jensen, 77 E. Andrews Dr. NW, Suite 311, Atlanta, Ga. 30305.

Second hand smoke is problem

By LAWRENCE LAMB, M.D.
Newspaper Enterprise Association

DEAR DR. LAMB: — I am a nonsmoker and smoke bothers me a great deal. Being in an environment filled with smoke makes my sinus passages sore and irritated, my throat scratchy and my eyes burn. In addition to the physical discomfort and sensitivity, I am very concerned about cancer.

The problem is that I work in an office where smoking is highly approved and accepted. It is allowed any place and any time, making it impossible for me to escape.

Since smoking is not disapproved and no steps will be taken to limit or curtail smoking, I'm in a bind. What can I do now concerned should I be about the effect of working daily in a smoke-filled environment?

Should I have periodic checks such as a chest X-ray to see if my health is being harmed? Is there anything I can do to protect myself other than quitting my job?

Quitting would not be a very happy solution as basically I really like my job. I'm 39 and single. I need employment and jobs are not easy to find. I am very concerned and desperately need to find a solution.

DEAR READER: Unfortunately there is no medical solution. It is a sociological problem. It is difficult for nonsmokers to realize why smokers are so rude and inconsiderate. Most smokers would not ordinarily inflict suffering on others. But smokers usually do not have any concept of the impact of their habit on other people. They don't experience it so they have no way of knowing it.

Second-hand smoke has been proved to be a health hazard. Studies show it narrows the airways of lungs in nonsmokers. It will cause irritation as you describe. The end of a burning cigarette may be more than most smokers can tolerate. It provides five times as much carbon monoxide, twice as much tar and nicotine and 46 times as much ammonia as inhaled cigarette smoke. It generates more than 4,000 compounds to pollute the air.

Cancer is unlikely but respiratory problems are increased. Second-hand smoke is equivalent to being a light smoker. My personal opinion is that employers should have "smoke rooms." All other smoking should be banned. And it should be banned from all public places.

I am sending you The Health Letter 19-6, Tobacco. The Great Health Hazard. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10101.

DEAR DR. LAMB: — How does medical science explain the fact that women live about 10 years longer than men? I have never seen a medical explanation.

DEAR READER: — The answer is in the death statistics. Remember that the average age of death is just that — an average. Many men live to ripe old ages. Violent deaths are a factor. In males age 15 to 34 there are nearly 50,000 violent deaths a year, 32,000 from accidents and the rest from suicide and homicide. There are only 14,000 deaths in females from these causes. There are also twice as many deaths from accidents in young males from age 1 to 14.

Deaths from heart disease are a big factor, killing nearly 44,000 men between the ages of 35 and 54 each year but only 13,000 women of the same age. Deaths from heart disease in women are much more common well after the menopause. The rate of deaths from heart disease does not become equal for males and females until age 65.

DEAR DR. LAMB: — My 5-year-old granddaughter has what I think is called an "inverted chest."

I recently heard of another little girl who had an operation to correct this birth defect. I have always secretly worried about this condition. I casually mentioned it to my daughter and told her about the operation. She didn't comment so she is probably like I am and doesn't want to face facts. Is this serious? Should a chest operation be considered? You know how we grandmothers worry about our grandchildren.

DEAR READER: — Of course you are concerned and so is her mother. This is technically called pectus excavatum and it is a birth defect. In most instances it has no effects on the lungs or heart.

In those rare cases where it does cause compression, surgery can be performed. In other instances the operation is done solely for cosmetic reasons. Whether that is justified or not depends a lot on how marked the defect is. Your daughter should rely on her little girl's doctor for advice on the basis of his examination.

Youth, 11, efficient lobbyist

COLUMBUS, Ohio (UPI) — The state's youngest registered lobbyist wears a three-piece suit, carries a briefcase and delivers a surprisingly polished pitch for a boy of 11.

Todd Martindale registered last Friday to lobby against a tax bill, scheduled for a vote today, that includes a 4 percent cut in state aid to schools.

"I'm opposed to Senate Bill 539," said the young lobbyist as he patrolled the halls of the Statehouse, searching for legislators on whom to practice.

"We need the revenues for education, and the tax increase lowers the value of the dollar," he said. "Besides, the budget cuts are for the poor and elderly, and you can't pick out those who need the money and who doesn't."

"We need to lower business taxes so business will come here and we can have jobs for people," said Martindale, who describes himself as an independent liberal.

Martindale, 11, "enter state grade" at Franklin Middle School next fall, got interested in politics during the 1978 presidential campaign when he was 5.

Gerald Ford was running against Jimmy Carter, he recalled. "I liked Gerald Ford because nothing bad happened that year. The economy was good then compared to what has been following Ohio's disastrous budget follies since January, when state officials discovered a $1.3 billion hole."

He registered as an official lobbyist "against cuts for schools" and began firing off letters to legislative leaders involved with negotiating the final budget-tax bill.

"It's too late," he said, predicting the bill would pass. But it wasn't too late to catch the eye of Gov. James A. Rhodes, 72, a grandfather who dotes on kids and respects ambition.

"Little gov!" commanded Rhodes. "C'mon back." Martindale was summoned into the governor's inner sanctum and positioned at Rhodes' desk.

"Wow!" exclaimed the youngster. "This is better than the Oval Office."

Turning reporter, Todd immediately asked the governor if he was going to sign Senate Bill 539 and was told yes.

Then, like a good lobbyist who gains entry, Martindale began pressing the governor on Senate Bill 360, which creates urban enterprise zones to attract business.

"Good," said Rhodes. "Great! It's made for immediate expansion. I think Cleveland will benefit from this."

On the way out, Martindale met Sen. M. Morris Jackson of Cleveland and engaged in discussion of school financing and nuclear warfare. "I've never met anybody like you," marveled Jackson.

Informed that Martindale wants to get into government and politics, Jackson recommended he get a business degree first. "Then you can go to law school or be a politician."

Regional medical center dedicated

Brad Warden, R.N., shows guests an operating room in the hospital's new wing. Public tours will continue today.

By STEPHANIE SCHOROW
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Against the backdrop of a large, new "Emergency" sign, dedication ceremonies for Magic Valley Regional Medical Center were held Thursday.

"Thank heavens for this day. I thought it was never coming," said R.W. "Woody" Pierce, the chairman of the hospital's construction committee for nearly 20 years.

Pierce, who spoke with other hospital and community officials in an afternoon ceremony, said the day's event should not be considered a dedication, but a "rededication of the commitment of people of the Magic Valley to provide the ultimate in health care for the people in this area."

About 100 persons braved a scorching sun to hear comments by Curtis Eaton, the president of Twin Falls Bank and Trust, and John Julius, the district vice president of the Hospital Corporation of America, the hospital's management company.

At least twice, beepers interrupted the proceedings to alert staff to emergencies. Once, the sound of an ambulance nearly drowned out the speakers.

"May we, this day, dedicate the Magic Valley Regional Medical Center, through the cooperation of all involved, to a new and higher degree of accomplishment," Eaton said.

Ann Cover, the chairman of the Twin Falls County commission, said the ceremony was being held in a "fitting place," because from that spot, one could see the old Twin Falls County hospital building, the building built in 1951 and the new wing.

Dr. Mark Grefenson, the president-elect of the hospital's medical staff, looking over the audience, said, "I remember three bond issues, the last of which was successful."

"Now, we're opening a new facility, which for so long we so desperately needed," he said. "We hope that this new facility is not where we stop."

The new wing is scheduled to be in operation by mid-July. It contains two patient floors, the laboratory, emergency room, intensive-care unit, cardiac unit, physical therapy, surgery and other departments. The older section of the hospital then will be rededicated.

The ceremony was highlighted by a surprise visit by the hospital's administrator, Bill Burns, who was admitted to the hospital Tuesday following an accident in which he injured his foot.

Wheeled out on a hospital bed, with his foot in a cast, Burns asked that the community "all join hands to work to provide total and complete health care for Magic Valley."

Hospital board Chairman Clarence Hollifield cut the red ribbon officially opening the facility, saying, "When you have health, you have everything. This is the motto I've worked on during my time on the board."

Public tours of the new facility will be held today from 2 to 8 p.m.

State police name new District 4 supervisor

TWIN FALLS — Robert F. "Bob" Wright has been named lieutenant in charge of District 4 of the Idaho State Police.

The district headquarters are in Twin Falls. The appointment is effective Sunday, according to Col. Victor Barfuss, superintendent of state police, who made the announcement Thursday.

Wright was one of 30 sergeants in the state who took the required application test for the job, Barfuss said.

Wright has 23 years of service with the state police and has been a sergeant in the Twin Falls area district for the past 10 years.

Barfuss said J.L. Wright will supervise 18 patrolmen, two sergeants, four dispatchers and a secretary in the eight-county district. Until July 1, he also will be in charge of two ports of entry, but those will be transferred to the Department of Transportation after July 1.

Col. Barfuss said the five men with the best test scores were selected for final consideration. Then he and the Director of Law Enforcement, John Thoeny, agreed on Wright's qualifications for the job.

Wright began his career with the Idaho State Police working in a port of entry in Coeur d'Alene. He later became the officer in charge of the roving port and then a patrolman, all in the Coeur d'Alene area.

He transferred to Twin Falls in 1971 as a sergeant and has been in the local district since that time. "I don't expect to make many changes, especially with the tight economic situation in the state," Wright said. "We will be pushing for service to the public and for cooperation with other law enforcement agencies."

Wright said that since all agencies are short on funds it is to their advantage to work closely together. District 4 runs from the Nevada state line to Stanley and from the Elmore County line to the Power County line.

Wright said there are 18 patrolmen in the district, compared to 24 just two years ago. He agreed with Barfuss that there probably will not be another officer named to replace him as sergeant. Instead of three sergeants, the district will have only the two remaining, Sgt. E. D. Strickfaden and Sgt. Ron Eggleston.

Blaine assessor awaits tax order

By MARTY TRILLHAASE
Times-News writer

HAILEY — State Tax Commission officials are set to decide whether Blaine County Assessor Del Nicholson will be ordered to increase residential property values for property-tax purposes.

Nicholson's resistance to previous Tax Commission directives led to a hearing on Wednesday in Hailey. Apparently, no compromise was reached at the session, which was attended by Tax Commission representatives and Blaine County officials. Tax Commission officials now will review information presented at that hearing and determine whether to issue a formal order to Nicholson, said David High, a Deputy Attorney General assigned to the Tax Commission.

High said a decision should be issued next week. Nicholson said he will wait for the Tax Commission's decision before deciding whether to pursue the matter further.

"I'll have to take a look and see what effect it has on individual taxpayers," he said. "If there is no equity in the order, then I cannot accept it. If it creates equity and order, then I'd be the last to fight it."

By comparing the sale prices of properties to the assessed value of similar properties, Blaine County has changed hands, Tax Commission analysts have concluded that residential properties in Blaine County are undervalued for taxing purposes.

Under Idaho's One Percent Initiative, property must be assessed at market value. "The Tax Commission wants Nicholson to 'index,' or prorate all similar properties that were not formally assessed to a new, market-value figure based on the sales-ratio studies."

But Nicholson says those studies are too arbitrary because they do not take into account the terms of a sale. Nicholson said he didn't present any new sales data to contradict the Tax Commission's findings. Instead, he continued his challenge of the Tax Commission's own figures.

"We discussed what they had there. We didn't present any new sales, just showed the lack of uniformity in the sales," he said.

Meanwhile, Dorothy Hamby, the Twin Falls County Assessor, has completed a study of property sales that will lead to increased assessments on land in the city of Twin Falls.

Hamby agreed to undertake the study last week as part of a compromise reached with the Tax Commission. In return, Tax Commission officials agreed to drop their earlier order that residential property assessments in the city of Twin Falls be increased 26 percent and that rural residential property assessments be increased 17 percent. Hamby said the move will result in a minimal tax increase for residential property owners in the city and a minimal tax decrease for non-residential property owners.

But no general estimate of the increase was available as of Wednesday because the amount of increase will vary between properties, she said.

"I would have to complete the total indexing and then it would be an approximate figure," she said. "I would not be able to quote a range at all. But what I'm saying is the actual tax-dollar increase should be minimal."

Hamby said new assessment notices will be mailed out by the end of the week. She encouraged any property owner who believes his assessment exceeds market value to appeal the assessment.

"If they have time to come in and I can do something about it if they actually exceed a market value," she said.

Valuable land excluded from BLM sale list

By RON ZELLAR
Times-News writer

SHOSHONE — Valuable lands on the rim of the Snake River Canyon were excluded from a Bureau of Land Management inventory of "underutilized" lands submitted to a presidential review panel.

The largest block of lands for potential sale listed in the BLM inventory were those in a category "with potential for cultivated agriculture." The Shoshone BLM District supplied roughly 70,000 of the 168,000 acres of potential farm land included in the statewide inventory.

Neither the Shoshone nor the Burley District listed lands they manage on the Snake River Canyon Rim — potentially the most valuable real estate controlled by the agency in the Magic Valley.

Harold Brown, a really specialist for the Shoshone District, said public response during hearings on the district's Canyon Area land-use plan indicated overwhelming sentiment that the scenic lands be retained in public ownership.

In such cases, Brown said, the district reasoned that scenic and recreational pursuits were the best use for the parcels.

Carl Simonson, the Burley District really specialist, said a similar decision was reached for lands on the south side of the canyon, based on public comments gathered in preparing the Twin Falls, Cassia and Bannock-Onida land-use plans.

The controversial land inventory would have the greatest impact in this area in the Shoshone District if all the lands identified under the program eventually are sold. Roughly 4.8 percent of the 1,880,000 acres the district manages was included in the sale program, compared to less than 1 percent in the Burley District.

Clair Willock, the Idaho state BLM director, lifted an embargo on information contained in the inventory Thursday after conferring with Secretary of the Interior James Watt.

Watt received a request to release the information from state Attorney General David Leroy and Lt. Gov. Phil Batt. Both are Republican candidates for state office, and the public lands controversy has been an issue in their opponents' campaigns.

The report released Thursday contained no information on the location of the parcels, but Willock instructed district offices to cooperate with public inquiries.

Brown said the Shoshone District was at work Thursday on a map that will indicate where the lands it listed are located. The map and other material to pinpoint the sections should be ready early next week, he said.

While the Shoshone District included more land than the Burley District, the Burley District parcels are potentially more valuable. The average value in the Shoshone District was $40 an acre, compared to a Burley average of $1,518 an acre.

The difference, Simonson said, stems from the fact that Burley had more lands in the "lands in urbanizing areas or with residential, commercial or industrial value" category.

Included were 1,650 acres near Pocatello and a 40-acre parcel near Buhl, he said.

Officials in the BLM state office determined that, on average, residential lands are worth $3,000 an acre, commercial lands $5,000 an acre and industrial-commercial lands $10,000 an acre.

The Burley District, which stretches from the state's southern border to the Snake River and from Pocatello to Bliss, identified only around 1,200 acres with agricultural potential in Twin Falls and Cassia counties.

The Shoshone-District manages land from the Snake River north to the national forest boundary and from American Falls to Glenns Ferry.

The estimated fair market value of all 295,000 acres included in the Idaho inventory is slightly more than $90 million acres, according to Trudie Olson, a BLM spokeswoman in Boise. Holdings not targeted for sale have a value of around $900 million.

Region IV board grants aid to health advisory council

By MARTY TRILLHAASE
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Region IV Development Association has extended a lifeline to the regional health systems Sub-Area Advisory Council on Thursday.

The Sub-Area Advisory Council, set up in 1976 as part of the Idaho Health Systems Agency, was facing extinction on Oct. 1 due to the loss of federal funds.

Local officials, representing each of the eight Magic Valley counties and acting as the Region IV board of directors, unanimously agreed to sponsor the council. Under that agreement, Region IV staff members will provide clerical services for the council, but the organization will not provide any funding.

County commissioners from throughout the region now will be approached for funding to cover the travel costs of council members, who are all volunteers, said Betty Ann Clarke, a former IHSA staffer who attended the meeting.

Members of the sub-area council are charged with making recommendations on a certificate of need application for funding to cover the travel costs of council members, who are all volunteers, said Betty Ann Clarke, a former IHSA staffer who attended the meeting.

Center's recent expansion program and the Idaho Migrant Council's rural health clinic.

The council attempts to balance health-care needs against rising health-care costs due to redundant services and equipment, according to Everett Ward, a Lincoln County commissioner. Although the council has no veto power, it can attempt to sway public opinion, Ward said.

"All we ever were was an advisory council. That's all we will be again." But the council's scope of activities may change under the new arrangement, he said, indicating the frequency of the group's meetings may drop from its present monthly schedule to a quarterly basis.

In other matters, by a narrow margin, the Region IV board issued a favorable recommendation concerning a Family Health Services Corp. request for $25,415 in federal funds for a migrant "high-risk" pregnancy program.

As a regional clearinghouse, the Region IV board provides local opinion that is considered by federal agencies issuing grants.

Board members voted 4-to-3 in favor of issuing a favorable recommendation for the request, but before some officials attacked the program as inefficient. According to Cookie Atkins, representing Family Health Services Corp., the grant would be used to finance a pharmacy and to pay consulting fees for obstetricians and pediatricians.

An estimated 3,000 persons in Twin Falls, Jerome, Gooding, Lincoln, Cassia and Minidoka counties will be served by the program during the agricultural season.

But Allen Bauscher, a Camas County commissioner, argued that the program was overly expensive and that migrant workers "should be paying for a lot of medical help themselves."

Ward countered that the board was not being asked what it thought of the federal block-grant program. The question was whether the program would do a good job of distributing the block-grant funds, he said.

"The last couple meetings, whenever the word migrant comes up, a red flag comes up," he said. "I don't think we should be taking it out on Cookie's program."

A second migrant-health grant request fared much better. With Bauscher casting the sole no vote, the board issued a favorable recommendation on a request for $90,105 to provide a mobile medical clinic for migrants.

Agencies such as the South Central District Health Department will work in conjunction with the program, Atkins said.

School immunization ruling wins praise

By STEPHANIE SCHOROW
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS—An unofficial legal opinion that "puts teeth" in Idaho's immunization law was applauded by Gerald Hurst, director of the South Central District Health Department, during the health board's meeting Wednesday.

The opinion, issued by the attorney general's office in May and released on Monday, held that a local school board does not have to adopt its own rules and regulations before refusing to admit students who are not properly immunized.

The opinion stemmed from cases in Pocatello, Blackfoot and Challis in which school boards excluded students from school because they did not have proper immunizations.

The state immunization law states that within 60 days after entering school, all children must be immunized against polio, measles, rubella, mumps, diphtheria, whooping cough and tetanus.

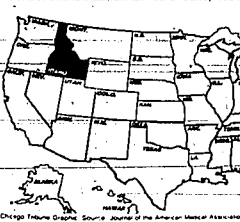

Exemptions may be allowed on a physician's order, or if parents submit a signed statement objecting on religious grounds. The law has no mechanism for enforcement.

Hurst said parents in the three school districts did not cite religious convictions or medical reasons for refusing to allow their children to be immunized.

The unofficial opinion, submitted by Larry Knudson, deputy attorney general, also said school boards could Measles in the U.S.

School immunization law as of June, 1981

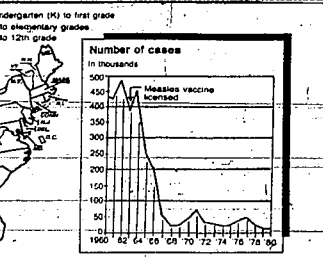

Only 83 percent of all Magic Valley children are immunized according to state standards adopt rules to enforce the statute, although the rules were not necessary to exclude students.

Few parents in the South Central Health District have asked that their children be exempt from the immunization laws, Hurst said.

But since the district has not reached its goal in immunization levels, he said the opinion would boost the district's immunization efforts.

An immunization level of 90 percent is commonly accepted as the level needed to prevent epidemics.

About 83 percent of the school-age children in the eight Magic Valley counties were immunized as of the 1981-1982 school year, according to health department officials. Twin Falls County has a 79 percent immunization level.

Immunizations are available in various clinics sponsored by the district at a cost of $2 per visit.

In other business, the health board discussed financial problems stemming from the state's budgetary crisis.

The board approved the return of $9,711 in state funds back to the state, which was received as part of a 3.5 percent cutback in this year's allocations.

Hurst told the board that the district expects to lose about $28,500 in state funds from next year's budget. That would increase the district's anticipated deficit from $70,000 to $100,000, he said. The district currently anticipates total expenses of approximately $1.3 million for the coming fiscal year.

But because funds from both the state and the federal government's block grant have not yet been set, he asked the board that the preliminary budget, already compiled, be retained for now, without revision.

Board Chairman William Chancy said, "whichever way you look, we're running uphill. It's going to be a continual battle to provide services under the reign of tight money and to balance the budget in the 1983 fiscal year."

Hurst also asked to be allowed to use a district car for travel between his home and office, although the department recently adopted a policy restricting such use by its employees. Hurst said he often was called to the office at odd hours and on weekends.

The board member from Cassia County said the original policy left exemptions up to the "discretion" of the director and told Hurst to use his own discretion in his personal use of the district car.

Parade, carnival, contests will highlight Paul Shindig

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News correspondent

PAUL — A parade, carnival and pig scramble are a few of the activities set for the fourth annual Paul Shindig this Saturday.

The event, sponsored by the Paul Chamber of Commerce, will begin at 6 a.m. with a breakfast at the City Park, according to Missy Stuart, the chamber president.

The cost of the breakfast, sponsored by the American Legion, is $1.50 for adults and $1 for children under 6 years of age.

The parade will begin at 1 p.m. and start at the Paul Elementary School. Participants will go down Idaho Street from the school, past the City Park, down Second Street East and back to the school by way of Second Street North.

The grand marshal for the event will be 101-year-old Lulu Corless of Paul, Stuart said.

The pig scramble will be held in the afternoon in a vacant lot near the park. No starting time has been set.

Children participating in the event will chase a greased pig in a pen, and those who can catch an animal will be allowed to keep it, Stuart said.

Children up to age 13 may participate.

Several community-service groups will sell food, balloons and candy at the park where a carnival also will be located.

The chamber will sell hamburgers and corn-on-the-cob, with proceeds going to various community activities, Stuart said.

Gift drawings also will be held throughout the day. Prizes will include a lawnmower, gift certificates and a lamp, she said.

The purpose of the Paul Shindig is to "put Paul on the map" and launch the community's July 4 events, Stuart said.

Budweiser Clydesdales set Magic Valley visit

TWIN FALLS — The Budweiser Clydesdales will visit the Magic Valley next week as part of a trip taking them from their California base to Canada.

The eight-horse team is scheduled to arrive in the area Thursday, June 24. The horses will be displayed and led on parade at several locations throughout the Magic Valley between Friday and the following Monday, June 28. Their Magic Valley stop is being sponsored by the Southern Idaho Distributing Co.

They can be seen from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Friday at the Twin Falls County fairgrounds in Piler; from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. Saturday at the Blue Lakes Mall in Twin Falls; from noon to 3 p.m. Sunday at the Burley fairgrounds; and from noon to 3 p.m. Monday in Kelchum at Horning's Park.

The team of horses is one of three Budweiser Clydesdales teams touring the country. The others are based in New Hampshire and Missouri.

The Clydesdales became the symbol for Budweiser after the repeal of prohibition in 1933. To celebrate the event, August A. Busch Jr., now honorary chairman of Anheuser-Busch Inc., assembled a team of horses to pull a red, white and gold beer wagon.

Defensive driving course for senior citizens offered

TWIN FALLS — A defensive driving course tailored to the needs of senior citizens will be offered again in Twin Falls.

"55 Alive — Mature Driving" is designed to give the participants a review of the rules of the road and accident prevention.

More importantly, the course offers an overview of the physical changes that accompany aging as they relate to driving, and the potential driving hazards of medications commonly taken by senior citizens.

The Twin Falls City Police also will visit the class to give the group tips on safer driving in the city.

The two-day class, limited to 20 people, consists of short slide-illustrated lectures, followed by group discussions.

The course will be held in the First United Presbyterian Church dining room at 309 Fifth Ave. N., on Thursday, June 24, and Friday, June 25, from 10 to 4:30 p.m.

Anyone over 55 years of age is eligible to take the course, which costs $5 for materials.

Registration should be made in advance by calling Lila Denton at 734-5974 or Gwen Jacobs at 734-5084.

4-H sheep weigh-in planned

JEROME — All 4-H club members who plan to sell sheep projects following the annual Jerome County Fair must have their animals weighed Saturday.

Robert Ohlenschlaeger, county extension agriculture agent, said a weigh-in for sheep projects in the east end of the county will be held at the Berwyn-Mussman home, a half-mile south of Eden. Sheep will be shown prior to the weigh-in. The weigh-in will be held from 7:30 to 9 a.m.

The remainder of the 4-H members with sheep projects may weigh their animals at the county fairgrounds in Jerome, beginning at 10 a.m.

There is a $1 fee for shearing the animals. Maximum weight at this time is 70 pounds for each animal, which should result in a fair-time weight of about 100 pounds, Ohlenschlaeger said.

Cool weather this spring was especially healthy for the plants, he said, and they began to bloom in large numbers this week.

The blooming stage of plants at Craters of the Moon typically lasts only about two weeks. Horticulturists, so those planning to see the display should do so soon.

Traffic violation sends driver to jail

JEROME — A 19-year-old Jerome motorist, stopped for a routine traffic violation, has been charged with driving while intoxicated and possession of a controlled substance.

Jerome Police Chief Darrell Cameron said Mark C. Weigt, was arrested about 9 p.m. in the 100 block of South Adams St.

Cameron said Weigt was in custody late Thursday, awaiting arraignment in magistrate court on the two charges. He said officers confiscated a sizable quantity of marijuana seeds and paraphernalia.

Gunfire shatters Eden night

EDEN — An argument that started in an Eden bar Wednesday night erupted into gunfire a short time later.

Esquino Nove Alvarez, 39, of Eden, was being held in the Jerome County Jail Thursday night on charges of assault with a deadly weapon with intent to commit murder.

Jerome County Sheriff Eliza Hall said bond was set at $15,000.

Hall said the incident allegedly began in the Trophy Club with an argument between Alvarez and Joe Harral, age unknown, also of Eden. He said Harral left the bar about midnight, got into his automobile, drove down the street and made a U-turn. As Harral drove back past the bar, shots were fired into his vehicle, striking the hood and door, but just missing the driver, Hall said.

Police, arriving shortly afterwards, arrested Alvarez at the scene.

Correction

EDEN — An article in Thursday's Times-News incorrectly identified Hazelton as the community where officials were pleased with the response to a call for voluntary licensing of dogs in the city. The correct city was Eden, where officials report all dogs in the city have been licensed. According to Edith Uhl, the city clerk, there is no requirement for rabies shots.

2 who claim to be playing lousy pace Open

Bruce Devlin, official move TV cables to get at his ball near 14th green

Rogers, Devlin at 70 as wind makes Pebble Beach nasty

By RON RAPOPORT
Chicago Sun-Times

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. — Bill Rogers says he has been struggling. Bruce Devlin says he has been playing "so poorly" it's pathetic. The two of them are tied for the lead in the U.S. Open. Nothing made sense at Pebble Beach in the first round of the Open Thursday.

The course, which the golfers had been saying all week might yield some good scores, turned 80 into a badge of honor. The favorites struggled manfully to stay within shouting distance of par so they would have a chance another day.

And the leaderboard was headed by the 44th name on the money-winning list (Rogers), and a guy who hasn't won in 10 years and whose best previous finish this year was a tie for 45th (Devlin).

"It was," said Jack Nicklaus, "a difficult day to play golf." When it was over, Rogers and Devlin were in the lead with 2-under-par rounds of 70 while Tom Watson shot 72, Nicklaus was in a huge group at 73 and Craig Stadler had a 76. Ray Floyd limped in with 78 after taking a 41 on the front nine.

At least they had an advantage on Bob F. Smith, who brought up the rear with a 91. Smith one-pulled the seventh hole for a quadruple bogey. Walter Zembriski and Bill Brodell were close ahead at 88.

"I couldn't believe it," said Brodell, who plays on the Butte des Morts (Hill of Death) golf course in Appleton, Wis. "It was embarrassing, my worst competitive round since I was in my teens."

U.S. Open

Then there was Frank Connor who shot an even-par 36 on the front nine, but took a 47 on the back side to finish at 83. Connor bogeyed the 14th hole, double-bogeyed 15 and 16 and took a quadruple-bogey 9 on 18. Some big names had similar problems. There were former Open winners like Lou Graham (75), Hale Irwin (72), Hubert Green and Lee Trevino (78). There was Gary Player with a 76, Larry Nelson with a 78, Phil Chi-Rodriguez with an 80, and Arnold Palmer with an 81. Even some of the players with respectable scores had something to complain about. Danny Edwards was six strokes under par leaving the 13th hole, but double-bogeyed 14 and 17 while bogeying 16 to lose five strokes in four holes and finish at 71. Ben Crenshaw was also doing fairly well until he triple-bogeyed the 16th hole and double-bogeyed 18 to take a 76.

So perhaps it should not come as a surprise that Rogers and Devlin are ahead. Since Rogers' magnificent campaign last year — he won three tournaments, finished fifth on the money list and was named PGA player of the year — he hasn't been able to do anything right.

"I'm at a point where I haven't been able to turn it around," Rogers said. "I expected to come back like gangbusters this year, but it sure hasn't happened."

Devlin was even more astonished to find himself tied for the lead. After winning two tournaments in 1972, the 44-year-old Australian gave up full-time participation in the tour to devote himself to golf course architecture. He hasn't won since.

"It wasn't the smartest move I ever made, but I made it so I have to suffer the consequences," Devlin said of leaving the tour. "I wasn't enjoying it. I was sick of traveling and lost my desire."

Devlin normally plays about 15 tournaments a year now and 1982 has been a disaster to this point. He has missed four of eight cuts and finished no better than a tie for 45th. "The few times I've played it's just been pathetic," he said. "It's been horrible. I've become bad."

Devlin began playing golf when his father, an avid player, lost an arm in a car accident and wanted somebody to accompany him on the course without feeling self-conscious. He was a much better player with one arm than two, Devlin said.

Trained as a journeyman plumber, Devlin soon became the best golfer in the family and his pipe wrench for a pitching wedge. He later came to the United States and over a 20-year period has won some $860,000.

"It's been a long time since I've won a golf tournament," he said. "But you never know."

Devlin trying return

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (UPI) — You have to go all the way back to the late 1950s and Ben Hogan for the last time a golfer quit at the top of his game. No one ever said Bruce Devlin, the skinny Australian, was in Hogan's class but he wasn't all that bad considering he started out as a plumber and didn't take up golf seriously until he was in his 20s. Almost 10 years ago, after winning at Pleasant Valley and the Houston Open for his best year ever on the American Tour, Devlin decided golf wasn't fun anymore and he quit to go into the course architecture field with a couple of friends.

14 gets Edwards—B6

Devlin has picked the U.S. Open in which to make a comeback of sorts this week. He shot a two-under-par 70 Thursday at windy Pebble Beach, and that enabled him to come off the course tied with Bill Rogers for the first round lead.

Now a television golf commentator and part-time real estate developer in Houston, Devlin has no illusions about winning the Open, but as he said, anything is possible.

"It's been a long time since I won a golf tournament," he said, "but stranger things can happen than my winning the Open."

Devlin said two things motivated him to play in this year's Open.

"I played in five or six tournaments earlier in the year," he said. "I played miserably in all of them. But I wanted to play Pebble Beach because it's a course that forces you to play better."

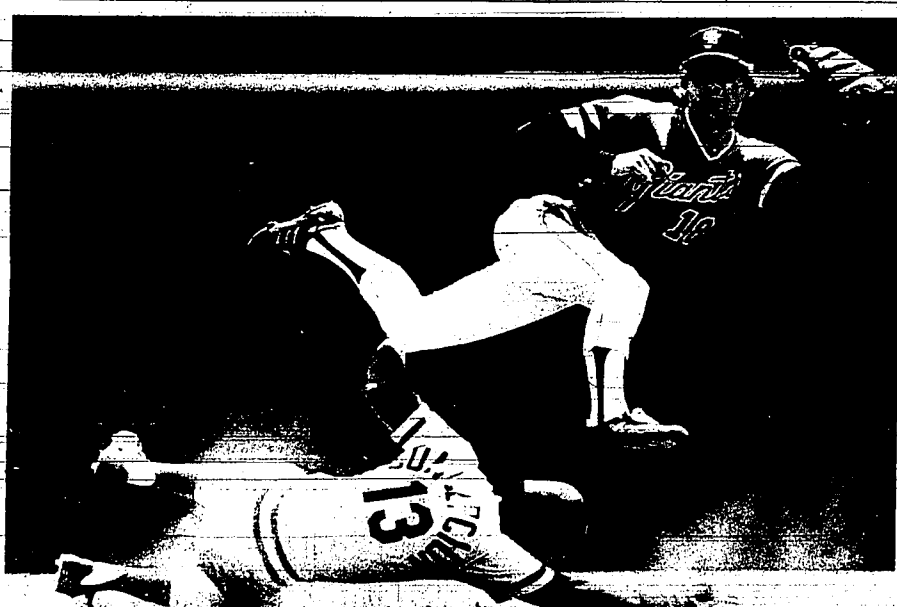

So Devlin tried to qualify at Memphis. He shot 140 and tied him with 10 others going for nine spots. He made it on the first playoff hole with a birdie.

His second reason for wanting to play again is that he sought to gain experience for 1983 when the top 125 money winners from this year will be free to tee it up anytime they like on the PGA Tour.

"If I ever want to play again on Tour," Devlin said, "this is the year because of next year's exempt tour. I suppose I should stick around now and try to win $40,000 or $50,000. It would be better to do it all this week and get it out of the way."

Devlin, who grew up playing in the wind, had few problems in the opening round here. He did lose three strokes when he bogeyed the sixth and double-bogeyed the seventh. But Devlin had cogged the second and he also birdied the ninth, 11th, 15th and 16th holes. The only other blemish on his card was a bogey at 10.

"I guess I was recognized as a good wind player in the good old days," he laughed. "I grew up in the wind and I learned how to play in it. The wind didn't bother me here. It was a good round and I enjoyed all of it."

CSI men slip out of top 10

Roe holds second place in steer wrestling

BOZEMAN, Mont. (UPI) — College of Southern Idaho's Joe Roe is in second place in the steer wrestling at the College National Finals Rodeo midway through the second go-round. Roe, a Wendell High graduate, had a 10.7-second clocking Thursday night and is second behind Marty Devers of Southeastern Oklahoma State, who downed his steer in 9.5 seconds.

CSI slipped out of the top 10 in the team standings after Thursday's competition. Cody Lambert of Sul Ross State rode Red Top to a 64 Thursday night to move into second place in saddle broncs and bolster his all-around lead. The Texas wrangler's second go-round ride gave him a total of 130 to two head. That's 4 points behind Chuck Morris of California's Hartnell College.

Thomas Hickey of Eastfield College, also in Texas, scored a 66 on Last Chance Thursday night to take the bareback lead with 1.5 on two head. He posed out Wednesday leader Kenneth Smith of Eastern New Mexico by one point.

No other leads changed hands Thursday night as Sul Ross State held onto its men's lead and Southeastern Oklahoma State continued to pace the women. Breakaway roping leader Sabrina Pike of Southeastern Oklahoma State continued to pace the women's all-around race, followed by Cheryl Overfelt of Southern Colorado and Patsy Cowart of Southeastern Oklahoma State.

The top 10 finishers in individual events at the end of tonight's competition move into Saturday's championship round.

In women's competition, Sul Ross State was second, while Arizona, Black Hills State, Southern Colorado and Utah State were tied for third. New Mexico Junior College was seventh, Panhandle State and Wyoming were tied for eighth. Central Arizona was 10th.

Western Texas College and Hartnell switched places in the men's team standings Thursday. Hartnell ended the day in second place, while Western Texas settled for third. They were followed by Southwest Texas Junior College and Southeastern Oklahoma State. Tied for sixth were Central Arizona, Montana State and McNeese State of Louisiana. South Dakota State and Cal Poly-San Luis Obispo were knotted in 10th place.

Blum Mountain Community College of Oregon fell from sixth to 11th place Thursday.

For Thursday's results, see Scoreboard on Page B4.

Smog, crime worry Soviet Olympic bosses

MOSCOW (UPI) — The Soviet Union's top sports officials Thursday denied their country has any plan to boycott the 1984 Los Angeles Olympics.

But in the same breath said the Russian team could stay home unless the United States guarantees all athletes will be safe from smog and street crime.

Sergei Pavlov, chairman of the national sports committee, and the Soviet Union National Olympic Committee, said he wants specific assurances about "the grave problem" of safety in Los Angeles, which he said has "the highest murder rate in the world."

One Western diplomat said the Russian officials concern about security reflected his country's worry about possible defectors during the Games.

President Reagan promised the International Olympic Committee earlier this year that the Los Angeles Games would comply with the terms of the Olympic Charter. Pavlov said, however, that IOC attorneys decided Reagan's message was not sufficiently explicit.

"Ticking off a series of arrangements for the games where he contended the Los Angeles organizers were either behind schedule or in technical violation of the Olympic Charter."

He conceded the deadline for backing out of the Games was far off — May 24, 1984 — but warned of rising "concern at instability in the life of Los Angeles itself, (and) the growing crime rate in that city."

"Where are the guarantees that participants in the Games will be safe?" Pavlov asked.

Questioned specifically under what circumstances the Soviet team would or would not go to Los Angeles, Pavlov said, "Boycott is somebody else's word, not that of the Olympic Committee of the U.S.S.R. We make our participation contingent only on the observance of the rules contained in the Olympic Charter."

29-0 Longjump 100-meter marks are Lewis' targets

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — Bertha on the American national team are at stake and assaults on several records are planned during the three-day U.S. Outdoor Track and Field Championships.

The meet in Knoxville today with five final events and trials for most others. The event is also the culmination of the outdoor Grand Prix series sponsored by Mobil, which awards $2,500 to the athletic clubs of winners of 15 events.

Despite the absence of some of the stars of past years — hurdler Renaldo Nehemiah left to join the NFL's San Francisco 49ers and sprinter Evelyn Ashford "needs a rest" according to her coach — this will be one of the most competitive meets in recent memory. The top two American finishers in most events qualify for the national team which has three major meets this summer.

Expected temperatures in the mid-80s and high humidity will hamper attempts at exceptionally fast times in the distance events, and a newly resurfaced straightaway, which tends to get spongy in the heat, at the University of Tennessee's Tom Black Track will test the sprinters' abilities.

However, this hasn't deterred the sensational Carl Lewis from declaring his intention to go all-out for world records in the long jump and 100 meters. If he does, it would be remarkable as both marks have stood for 14 years, since the high-altitude Mexico City Olympics.

Lewis will face a strong challenge from Tennessee alumnus Jeff Phillips in the 100, as well as Stanley Floyd if he is recovered from a pulled hamstring suffered last Saturday. All have been closing in on Jim Hines' record of 9.95.

"To set a world record in the 100, the ideal conditions are warm weather and good competition," Lewis says. But he adds, "It's difficult to set records in championship meets, because you are more concerned about winning."

Even more eagerly anticipated is Lewis' attempt to break Bob Beamon's incredible long jump of 29 feet, 2 1/2 inches. He hasn't come closer than 28 1/2 feet legally, but he demonstrated his potential by leaping over 28-10 on a jump that was barely foul.

"I've underemphasized my sprinting to get ready for the long jump," Lewis said. "I can jump 29 feet. I won't predict when it will happen but it could go off any time."

Hurdler Clifton Clark, a teammate of his at the University of Houston, worked out with Lewis on Monday and was impressed.

"He looked smooth," Clark said. "He's ready. Look for him to go the high 28's, at least. He's been putting an emphasis on his jumping, making sure people call him a long jumper, sprinter, not a sprinter-long jumper."

The women's hurdles race Saturday night also has threatened the American record of 12.86, with Stephanie Lightower, hometown favorite Benita Fitzgerald and Candy Young nearly evenly matched.

Nehemiah's retirement leaves Greg Foster as the overwhelming favorite in the men's 110-meter hurdles.

Unpredictable Cubs claim 4th straight

By United Press International

The Chicago Cubs are as unpredictable as the wind that blows around Wrigley Field.

After losing 13 games in a row, the Cubs won their fourth straight Thursday by defeating the Montreal Expos, 12-8, behind a four-hit and three RBI performance by first baseman Bill Buckner.

Buckner, who has 12 hits in his last 16 at bats, had a two-run homer in the fifth to lead the Cubs' 16-hit attack. Jay Johnstone, who had three hits, and Bump Willis also homered for Chicago.

Mike Proly, 1-0, who relieved starter Randy Martz with two out in the fifth, earned the victory while David Palmer, 1-1, took the loss. Although Martz didn't get the victory, he did deliver a three-run double in the third.

Johnstone hit his fourth home run of the season in the first inning and

National

Buckner followed with a single, stole second and scored from there on a wild pitch.

Andre Dawson's RBI single in the third cut out the lead to 2-1, but the Cubs broke loose for six runs in their half of the inning.

Keith Moreland led off with a single and was followed by Leon Durham, who stole second and third. After Jody Davis walked, Durham scored when Palmer dropped the ball in a run-down play. Ryne Sandberg was intentionally walked to load the bases and Martz' double scored all three runners. Johnstone and Buckner had RBI singles to cap the inning.

The Expos scored three in the fourth inning, taking advantage of a Cub error. They closed to 8-6 with two runs in the fifth inning, on Al Oliver's two-run homer, his seventh. Willis' homer and Buckner's two-run shot increased the Cubs' lead to 11-6 in the fifth inning. Montreal's Jerry White hit a solo homer in the sixth inning, his second of the year, but Chicago added a run in the eighth on Sandberg's RBI single.

Montreal got its final run in the ninth on a leadoff double by Dawson, his fourth hit of the game, and an RBI single by Oliver.

Rodriguez, Cesar Cedeno drove in two first-inning runs with a double and Charlie Leibrandt pitched seven strong innings to pace the Reds to victory. Tom Hume took over for Leibrandt, 3-1, in the eighth and earned his 14th save and second in two days.

Phillies 4, Pirates 3 (11)
At Pittsburgh, Gary Matthews led off the 11th with his second solo homer of the game, enabling the Phillies to break a five-game losing streak with a victory over the Pirates, who played the game under protest.

Matthews hit a 3-1 pitch off reliever Rod Sewer, 4-4, over the left field wall to help Ron Reed to his second victory in three decisions.

The Pirates played the game under protest as the result of a ninth-inning sequence that produced a Philadelphia double play. With none out and Tony Pena on first, Lee Lacy attempted to sacrifice. The umpires initially ruled that pitcher Spooky Lyle trapped the ball and threw it first for an apparent sacrifice.

Phillies Manager Pat Corrales argued that Lyle had caught the ball on a fly and had doubled Pena off. But the umpires agreed, prompting the Pirates to play the game under protest.

Mannen homers twice

TWIN FALLS — Tony Mannen, warming up with the weather, crashed two homers and John Johnson added another in pacing Wholesale Carpet past Windbreak-Sewer and Water Specialty 9-8 Thursday night.

In other slowpitch A League play, Gateway Trail, getting homers from Gary Huft (2), Murray Johnson and Rocky Reese, trimmed Twin Falls Bank and Trust 2-5. Jay Bemis homered for the losers. Depot Grill-Turf Club downed Falls Brand 10-6 and Barton's Club 93 thumped Budweiser 14-2.

In B League, Kentucky Fried Chicken dropped Blue Lakes Realty 9-2 despite a homer by Robb Grant. Local 283 took a C League win from Budweiser Light 12-3.

Church League play saw Immanuel Lutheran thump the Baptist Bombers 27-5. Twin Falls Reformed trim Bible Baptist 11-3 and United Methodist topple Kimberly Nazarene 7-2.

Angel Reggie Jackson takes third base as Toronto's Rance Mulliniks misses throw. Jackson scored on the play.

White Sox fielder atones for errors

By United Press International

It was lucky for the Chicago White Sox that the guy who hit the ball best Thursday didn't have to field it.

Tony Bernazard, the White Sox's second baseman, made three errors in the field but atoned for his mistakes with four RBI, including a bases-loaded double, that carried Chicago to an 11-7 victory over the Oakland A's.

At Oakland, Steve Kemp clipped in with three RBI to pace a 16-hit attack that enabled the White Sox to complete a three-game sweep of the A's.

Bernazard greeted reliever Bo McLaughlin with a bases-loaded double in the third inning to give the White Sox a 4-0 lead. Bernazard added an RBI single in the fourth then scored on a double by Steve Kemp.

Kemp added a two-run single in the fifth.

Steve Trout, who pitched 6 1-3 innings, evened his record at 5-5, allowing five runs, three earned, on five hits and five walks. Kevin Hickey earned his second save with 1 1-3 innings of scoreless relief.

Jeff Newman had a two-run homer and Dwayne Murphy a two-run single for the A's.

Brewers 3, Tigers 1(11)

At Detroit, shortstop Alan Trammell's error with two out in the 11th inning enabled Ned Yost to score from third base and give the Brewers their victory.

Leser Dave Tobik, 2-1, struck out the first two batters after taking over for Dan Petry at the start of the 11th but Yost slammed a triple to the flagpole in left center. Ben Oglivie was walked intentionally and Gorman Thomas hit a soft line drive that seemed to handcuff Trammell when it came up on the first hop. It glanced off his midsection and went right into right field as Yost scored the tie-breaking run.

Red Sox 6, Indians 3

At Cleveland, Dave Stapleton drove in two runs with a homer and a double to pace the Red Sox to victory. Mike Torrez, who had not picked up a victory since May 15, went 8 2-3 innings to boost his record to 4-3.

Torrez had a shutout until the ninth when the Indians loaded the bases with two out and Alan Bannister delivered a bases-clearing double. Mark Clear relieved and, after walking Chris Bando, struck out pinch hitter Karl Pagan to end the game.

Rangers 4, Mariners 1

Seattle's Buddy Bell went 3-for-4, including a bases-loaded double, to spark the Rangers over the Mariners behind the eight-hit pitching of Rick Honeycutt.

Bell's double off loser Gene Nelson, 5-4, was the key blow in the third inning as the Rangers scored four runs. Doug Flynn led off the inning with a single, stole second and Mark Wagner singled and Johnny Grubb walked to load the bases. Bell then cleared the bases with a double to left-center and scored on a single by Dave Hostetler.

Honeycutt, 2-7, struck out two and walked three in notching his third complete game of the season.

Angels 10, Blue Jays 8

At Anaheim, Calif., Bobby Grieh belted a three-run homer to cap a six-run third inning and Don Baylor delivered three run-scoring singles to pace the Angels.

Rod Carew also had four hits in California's 14-hit attack to run his batting streak to 21 straight games, the longest of his career and one short of the club record. During his streak, Carew is 36-for-83, a .434 clip. He is batting .332 on the season and the four-hit game was the 44th of his career.

After being staked to an 8-0 lead, right-hander Bruce Kison coasted to his sixth victory in eight decisions. The Angel starter worked 6 2-3 innings, allowing four runs on six hits, including a two-run homer by Jesse Barfield in the fifth inning.

After scoring an unearned run in the second inning, the Angels chased Luis Leal, 5-4, with six runs on five hits in the third.

With one out, California loaded the bases on singles by Bob Boone and Carew, sandwiched around a walk to Brian Downing. Baylor singled home one run and Reggie Jackson followed with a two-run single to right. Then Grieh hit a towering fly ball over the center field fence for his eighth home run of the season.

Kuwait-Czechoslovakia draw highlights World Cup action

MADRID, Spain (UPI) — Kuwait, the team with a live camel as its mascot, held Czechoslovakia to a 1-1 draw in a Group 3 match Thursday to continue the string of surprise performances by the World Cup soccer championship underdogs.

Kuwait, making its first appearance in the finals, could not match Algeria's history-making 2-1 victory over co-favorite West Germany Wednesday, but the "Camel Corps" did enough to show it is worthy of a place in the 24-nation finals.

Austria, considered West Germany's major Group 2 rival, got off to a winning start Thursday by beating Chile 1-0 in Orinda with a first-half header from Walter Schachner, but had a lucky escape six minutes later when Carlos Caszely missed a penalty kick.

Yugoslavia and Northern Ireland, the last two teams in the competition to see action in the first round, played out a draw scoreless tie in a Group 5 match at Zaragoza. This kept the group all even with host-nation Spain having drawn 1-1 with Honduras Wednesday night.

A crowd of only 7,000 — not even the camel turned up — saw the Kuwaitis make its World Cup debut in Valladolid where the Czechoslovaks found their Brazilian-coached opponents in an uncompromising mood.

The Europeans took a 20th-minute lead from a penalty kick by Antonin Panenka, but the Kuwaitis fought back and were rewarded when Faisal Al-Dakhil equalized 12 minutes into the second half with a powerful 25-meter drive.

Czechoslovakia, runner-up in 1934 and 1962 and making its seventh appearance in the finals, seemed surprised at the expertise shown by the Kuwaitis, who have reaped the benefits of a string of coaches from soccer's most successful nation, Brazil.

Kuwait's display Thursday was a tribute to its present Brazilian tutor, Carlos Alberto, who was quick to see the desert was no home for South America's subtle samba-style grace and concocted an individual style of Middle Eastern promise to satisfy the oil-rich sheiks.

Czechoslovakia could count itself fortunate to escape with one point. The 20th-minute penalty decision when Ladislav Vizek was brought down in a tangle of legs by Abdullah Mayaff looked harsh. Indeed, the players shaped up for a goal-kick when Ghanalan referee Benlham Dwomoh pointed dramatically to the penalty spot and Panenka made no mistake with his well-placed right-footed shot just inside the post.

It was only justice when Kuwait tied the score, with Al-Dakhil shrugging off two tackles before firing a fierce drive past goalkeeper Stanislav Seman.

The draw left Kuwait in a confident mood for Sunday's match against France, which is still recovering from Wednesday's 3-1 defeat by England, after Bryan Robson had scored in 27 seconds for the fastest goal in the history of the competition.

A rain-slick surface, which had players skidding about, made ball control difficult in the match between Austria and Chile.

But the conditions did not upset Schachner, who kept the Chilean defense confused throughout the 90 minutes.

Schachner's aggressiveness was rewarded in the 21st minute when he rose above a crowd of defenders to nod in a cross from fullback Bernd Kraus. The striker came close to scoring again in the 63th minute with a thunderous drive which beat goalkeeper Mario Obden, only to see the ball ricochet off the post.

Chile had several chances, but lacked effective finishing — a fault which was underlined by Caszely's penalty miss in the 27th minute.

The South American giants of the tournament play their second matches tonight, with the center of attention focused on Alicante. It's there that defending champion Argentina, its crown hanging by a thread, faces Hungary, the team which set an all-time World Cup finals-scoring record, needing victory to avoid first round elimination.

Argentina, rocked by a 1-0 defeat by Belgium in the tournament opener last Sunday, could not have had a tougher battle survival than against the "Magnificent Magyars," who blasted El Salvador 10-1 in its Group 3 clash Wednesday night.

Grid coaches see matches on television

MARBELLA, Spain (UPI) — Four college football coaches, on a golfing holiday in Spain, are putting in some extra time this week watching the World Cup soccer finals.

Johnny Majors of Tennessee, Bill Yeaman of Houston, Jim Weisen of Washington State and 1981 winner of Washington are vacationing on Spain's southern Costa del Sol and have taken time off from golfing to watch a few World Cup matches on television.

"I've watched matches of the North American Soccer League," said Walden, admitting the NASL had not fired his imagination. "I don't understand the rules of soccer, but I love to watch any sport when it's played by its best practitioners."

Walden said it was a rare privilege to see the likes of Brazilian soccer stars Zico, Socrates and Foder, or the Soviet Union's Vladimir Bessonov.

Jerome group presenting 'Annie Get Your Gun'

JEROME — The love story of two frontier days sharpshooters, Annie Oakley and Frank Butler, 'Annie Get Your Gun' will open tonight as a tribute to Jerome's 75th anniversary. A cast of about 45 Northside Players will present the Irving Berlin musical, the second production for the group. Following tonight's performance, the show will continue Saturday and Sunday and will run again Friday, Saturday and Sunday next week. The non-profit group donates its profits to the Jerome School District.

ducer Greg Fuller. "I'm very excited about it and feel it is the type of show that everyone can enjoy. Some of our talent is extremely good."

All in all, Fuller said, about 100 people are involved in the production. Starring as Annie is Cathleen Flores of Kimberly and Frank Butler, her sharp shooting rival who falls in love with her, is played by Tim Kay of Jerome.

Director is Mike Winterholter of Jerome assisted by Bruce Whitehead of Jackpot, Nev.

'Capt. Kirk' Shatner would just love to see 'Star Trek III'

By LUAINEELEE
Knight-Ridder Newspapers

HOLLYWOOD — Capt. Kirk looks great. And he has been promoted to admiral. What more could the chief of the world's most famous StarShip ask for? Not much, actor William Shatner says. He loves the part he played for three years on NBC's "Star Trek."

He ought to. After the series left the network, syndication followed, and "Star Trek" became one of the most popular series in television's history. Shatner says he's especially fond of his role in the second feature film based on the popular series, "Star Trek: The Wrath of Khan."

"There was obviously a very conscious attempt to go back to the best qualities of the series which were humanity and human problems and using the special effects as an escape valve to keep the audience on the edge of their seats. But we tried to never forget that human values were what made the series popular. That was where we didn't pay enough attention in the first film."

That first movie, "Star Trek: The Motion Picture," was a critical bust. But it recouped its $44 million easily, earning more than $100 million this far.

"The Wrath of Khan" cost only $12 million, Shatner says. But this version of the "Star Trek" episodes boasts something different: the death of Mr. Spock (Leonard Nimoy). Shatner feels that element will improve box office receipts. "The only problem was to ameliorate the death of Spock with the desire of the audience for him to live," the 51-year-old actor said.

"The only adjustment that was made was the last shot in the film of Spock's sarcophagus lying in the vegetation. The scene was added," Shatner implies, as a device to allow Spock's resurrection. "If there should be another 'Star Trek' movie."

"To tamper with one of the major elements (in the story) would be very risky, let alone considering how much I would miss Leonard. I'm of the opinion that you don't have to worry about that."

The Canadian-born Shatner feels sure another "Trek" movie will be made. "I'm not committed to it, but what a fool I'd be to say no," he said, laughing.

Shatner's cop series, "T.J. Hooker" will be back on ABC this fall. About that, he has mixed emotions. "It should be fun and entertaining, and after only four shows we were in the top 20. But it's still a debilitating work. It's like Mount Everest: the north slope." He has already begun running 5 1/2 miles a day and working with weights to build up his endurance.

Shatner has always enjoyed considerable autonomy over his projects, an enviable position that he admits is rare. "When you're the lead in a series, the writers, the producer come to you. There's an ongoing flow of creative information going on all the time. Both from the fact that they could use suggestions — and as the leading character — they want to make sure that you agree with the idea that they have. This happens only when you're indispensable," he said.

Shatner began his career on the stage, and continues to work in legitimate theater whenever he has the chance. "It takes about a minute to overcome the image of Kirk on the stage. What I like about it is that the evening's entertainment is on my shoulders."

Supporting the burden of drama is something Shatner does well, an ability that is less obvious in his Kirk persona than in his one-man-show or his PBS "Andersonville" performance. "I don't have a technique for acting, I admit to my shame. It's just there. As far as I'm concerned, an actor's emotions are just below the magma of his sophistication. And it's always there to be called on."

Shatner finds Kirk's life paralleling his own, and he still seems challenged by the role. "The only goal I've always had was to find good roles to perform. Good acting roles are rare anyway, and in view of the competition, they're even more rare."

July gem show at CSI will be largest in Idaho

TWIN FALLS — Idaho's largest annual gem and mineral show, with more than 100 dealers from throughout the United States, will be held July 9 through 11 at the College of Southern Idaho Expo Center in Twin Falls.

Gene Anthis, organizer of the sixth annual show, said the exhibits will include gems and minerals, gem equipment, jewelry, arts and crafts and antiques. There will be demonstrations on silversmithing and gold panning and gold recovery equipment by the Gold Prospectors Association of America.

The Commander Guard Drill Team from Hill Air Force Base will perform Saturday. The group has appeared on several major television shows, the Ice Capades, in Disneyland and in activities with Bob Hope.

A metal detector treasure hunt will be conducted. Awards will be given for first through fifth place for the most money found; anyone who finds a coin can keep it. The Twin Falls Optimist Club will sponsor a barbecue for the public. Hours for the "Idaho Gem State Days" are 9:30 a.m. to 9:30 p.m. Friday and Saturday.

Herrett Museum Art Gallery gets $500 Skaggs grant

TWIN FALLS — A $500 grant from the L.J. and Mary C. Skaggs Foundation will enable the Herrett Museum Art Gallery at the College of Southern Idaho to bring in an art show from two internationally known artists.

The CSI gallery is one of 17 visual art organizations in the United States designed to help art museums, university galleries and community art centers with limited budgets to receive rental fee assistance for exhibitions circulated by the Art-Museum Association of San Francisco.

CSI art curator Mike Green said the $500 will be applied to a $1,000 show which will be brought in October 1983. The artists are Robert Rauschenberg and James Rosenquist and the display will feature 48 by 36-inch silk screen prints. Green said they try to bring in one major show a year and this grant will provide the means to show the works of these two prominent artists.

The Art Museum Association (formerly Western Association of Art Museums) is a national, nonprofit, museum service organization founded in 1921 to contribute to the improvement of professional standards and to provide quality visual arts programs to museums and their audiences. The association provides traveling exhibitions, fine arts insurance, management training, technical consultants and other services to 475 member institutions throughout North America.

Hard to believe player's motives sincere

Sports Illustrated blasts NFL drug use

By LAURA BERMAN
Knight-Ridder Newspapers

Former NFL player Don Reese's own confessions place Sports Illustrated (June 14) as carefully written so readers know Reese is performing a social service by revealing the drug habits of his colleagues, that he's not just rating on his friends. The exercise is not altogether convincing.

After six weeks in a drug rehabilitation program, Reese would have readers believe he's a reformed man. Yet he also readily admits that he spent a year in jail for a one-time drug deal and began using cocaine again two years after being given his second chance by the New Orleans Saints.

There's no denying the sheer shock value of what he has to say. "If you care about the game, you have to be alarmed. What you see on the tube on Sunday afternoon is often a lie," he says. "When players are messed up, the game is messed up. All else being equal, you line up 11 guys who don't use drugs against 11 who do — and the guys who don't will win every time."

Reese recounts his days of free-basing cocaine in his kitchen with other NFL stars. His plans for help that went unheard. And he suggests that rather than do anything about rampant drug abuse, the NFL will discredit his account by discrediting him, "a guy who admits he took drugs, and dealt drugs, and did all the wrong and stupid things," he says he's done.

Reese says he hates football, that the world of professional football destroyed his life. But when his place written with John Underwood — dramatically shows that his life has been wrecked by drugs, it falls to show how his disintegration is football's fault.

And then, you really have to wonder about a guy who names his best friends — players with reputations and still viable careers — in this Sports Illustrated cover story. Reese says Chuck Muncie of the San Diego Chargers is an NFL player being destroyed by cocaine. Why is Muncie singled out for this honor? Because, Reese says, he loves Muncie like a brother. Hummmmm.

Eye Catchers:

McCall's (June): More puff on Princess Diana. Since writer Diane Dubovay wasn't allowed to speak to the princess, she quotes taxi drivers and English gossip writers as authorities. She learns first-hand that the princess has "shapely legs" and from a friend of the princess' family that "Diana is a very sexy girl."

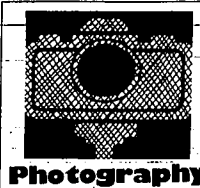

The New Yorker (June 14): Everything you always wanted to know about the aircraft industry — plus some — John Newhouse's four-part series. Newhouse predicts the European Airbus Industrie, a supplier of passenger carriers, may eventually drive some of the American companies out of business.

Steady camera crucial for slow-speed photos

By TONY SPINA
Knight-Ridder Newspapers

I've been having trouble shooting at low shutter speeds — like 1/15th or 1/30th of a second. I get movement. How can I hold my camera steady at low shutter speeds?

Let me give you a few tips that I've learned that have helped me when shooting at low speeds. You should practice pressing down on the shutter release, because many people have the tendency to press or jerk the camera when snapping. Instead, try squeezing the release gently until the shutter goes off. Practice this a few times. Take a deep breath and then exhale and when you've let all the air out of your lungs — your body is motionless just at the point of pressing down gently on the shutter release. Also, try bracing yourself against a wall, if possible, with the camera strap wrapped tightly around your elbows. In a seated position, pull one knee up and place your camera on it, using it like a tripod.

I have always had trouble getting good exposures, so I purchased an automatic camera. How important is exposure?

A correct exposure is important for getting top-quality prints. Too little exposure causes excessive loss of shadow detail. A print from an underexposed negative will have shadow areas in which even the lighter subject tones print black.

White dark subject areas in the shadow areas get too much exposure. They may lose some of the light and shadow effect of the subject.

Serious overexposure, however, produces undesirable effects. If the shadow areas get too much exposure, they may lose some of the light and shadow effect of the subject.

'Annie' doesn't live up to fat budget or great expectations

By ROGER FIBERT
Chicago Sun-Times

In the abstract, "Annie" is fun. It has lots of movement and color, dance and music, sound and fury. In the particular, it has all sorts of problems, and I guess the only way to really enjoy the movie is to just ignore the particulars. I will nevertheless mention a few particulars.

One is the story itself, about how Little Orphan Annie is rescued from a cruel orphanage by a billionaire who wants... a Real-An-Orphan... for Christmas. This is said to be a universal story. Critics have written that you just can't help cheering for Annie as she faces the cold world with pluck and courage. I didn't find myself cheering much, though, since Annie didn't seem to need the encouragement; as played by the feisty young Aileen Quinn, she is the sort of child who makes adults run for the hills.

The adventures she gets herself into are likewise questionable. I've never thought of "Oliver!" as a particularly realistic musical, but at least when its little hero said "Please, sir, more food?" there was a hint of truth: Annie had been plunged into pure fantasy, into the mindless sort of musical boosterism that plays big for Broadway theater parties but almost always translates to the movie screen as sheer contrivance.

"Annie" is not about anything. It contains lots of subjects (such as cruel orphanages, the Great Depression, scheming con-men, heartless billionaires and President Franklin Delano Roosevelt) but it isn't about them. It's not even really about whether Annie will survive her encounters with them, since the book of this musical is so rigorously machine-made, so relentlessly formulaic. It's one of those movies where you can amaze your friends by leaving the auditorium, standing blindfolded in the lobby and correctly predicting the outcome.

And yet I sort of enjoyed the movie. I enjoyed the energy that was visible on the screen, and the sumptuousness of the production numbers, and the good-humor of several of the performances — especially those by Albert Finney, as Daddy Warbucks, and Carol Burnett, as Miss Hannigan.

Aileen Quinn sort of grew on me, too. She cannot be said to really play a child — at least not the sort of plausible flesh-and-blood child that Henry Thomas creates in "E.T." But Quinn is talented, can dance well and sing passably, and does not seem to be an overtrained puppet like, say, Ricky Schroeder. She seems more like the kind of kid who will get this acting out of her system and go on to be student body president.

If there is a center to the film, it belongs to Albert Finney. He has a thankless task: He must portray Daddy Warbucks as a self-centered, smug rich man who has everything in the world, except love, and who learns to love through the example of a little girl. This is the sort of role actors kill over — to avoid playing. Albert Finney has true grit. He's gone through this personality transformation twice; he starred in "Scrge" in 1970. This time, he even pulls it off, by underplaying. He isn't too aloof at the beginning, and he's not too soft-hearted at the end. He has a certain detachment. Annie may win his heart, but she'll still have to phone for an appointment.

Will kids like the movie? I honestly don't know. When I was a kid, I didn't like movies about other kids, maybe because I was jealous (why does that kid get to ride a horse in the Derby?). The movie is being promoted as a family entertainment, but was it really a family musical, even on the stage? I dunno. I think it was more of a product, a clever concoction of nostalgia, hard-sell sentiment, small children and cute dogs. The movie is the same mixture as before. It's like some kind of dumb toy that doesn't do anything or go anywhere, but is fun to watch as it spins mindlessly around and around.

Hard to escape 'Saturday Night Live' image

Radner happy with co-star, lover Gene Wilder

By RICHARD FREEDMAN
Newhouse News Service

NEW YORK — Nobody likes bad reviews, but Gilda Radner has developed a technique for coping with them. When her latest movie, "Hanky Panky," opened recently to some critical hostility, she was off in Europe with her co-star and current love, Gene Wilder.

Like her earlier films, "Gilda Live" and "First Family," "Hanky Panky" got more than its fair share of raptures. It's really a very diverting comedy adventure involving Wilder and Radner in a mad effort to get some top-secret documents to the proper authorities instead of letting them fall into the villainous clutches of Gene Wilder.

"I have a very silly attitude to reviews — I read them," Miss Radner was saying in New York before the film opened. "Of course, I read them with one hand over my eyes. But I can't resist spreading my fingers just a little to take a peek."

When "Gilda Live" got panned it was especially painful because there was my name in the title. I'd see headlines saying, "Gilda Bombs" — me, personally.

our third year. Now I feel I'm a receptacle for stored-up resentments the program developed in some people.

"I was so happy when John Belushi's 'Continental Divide' was reviewed with hardly a mention of his years on 'Saturday Night Live.' He was just beginning to get out from under the television stigma and being accepted as a real movie actor when he died, poor man."

Of "First Family," in which Miss Radner played the irrepressible daughter of the weirdest president in U.S. history, she says: "Talent and humor were there, (but) the movie gave up somewhere in the middle. Buck Henry just wanted to make a film with some friends, so it never had the advertising push it needed."

"I sneaked into a theater once, all hidden in a huge coat, just to see how audiences responded. They seemed to enjoy it a lot more than the critics did."

Hoping to shed her image as a rowdy comedian for a supposedly more serious romantic role, she took on "Hanky Panky" largely because its original title was more suspenseful.

didn't have any lines.

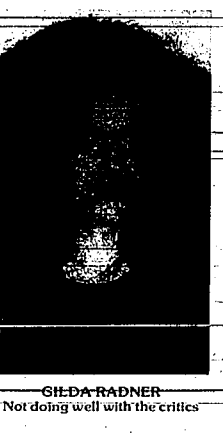

"Everybody else had a line but me. I was told just to stand there on stage and sway tragically. I ripped my top off. I got so frustrated. That's when I got the idea classical tragedy was not for me."

In her senior year she left Michigan for Canada, where she appeared in "Godspell" — and as a member of Toronto's "Second City" troupe, joining "Saturday Night Live" in 1975.

"I never finished at Michigan," she says, "but I took some correspondence courses with the University of Wisconsin. It was so lonely, I couldn't stand it."

"Every autumn when classes would begin I'd get dressed in my fall wardrobe in order to walk to the post office for my latest assignments. Somehow it wasn't like real campus life."

Although she can't boast a diploma, Gilda Radner has enjoyed a certain victory over academia. "A recent issue of the Michigan Alumni Bulletin had a cover picture of Roseanne Roseannadanna on it," she says proudly. "So I assume at least Roseanne graduated."

GILDA RADNER
Not doing well with the critics

Brief movie reviews

From Times-News wire services

ANNIE: A movie that's good but falls far short of living up to its fat budget or great expectations. Stars Albert Finney, Carol Burnett, Bernadette Peters, Ann Reinking, Tim Curry, Geoffrey Holder and Edward Herrmann. Directed by John Huston. 3 stars.

BODY HEAT: A tempestuous, '40s-style melodrama about the fateful union of a danger-seeking attorney (William Hurt) and a lusty young woman (Kathleen Turner) who is trapped in a bad marriage with a wealthy older man. Sometimes raunchy, but always well-acted. Rated R. 3 stars.

CHARIOTS OF FIRE: The beautifully told but predictable story of two athletes who competed in the 100-meter dash for England in the 1924 Olympics. One man runs for the glory of God; the other, to punish his adversaries. Rated PG. 3 stars.

PERSONAL BEST: A fascinating study of a couple of women athletes, one a veteran, the other an ingenuer, who dabble with love-making as they train together and compete against each other against the backdrop of the 1980 Moscow Olympics. The film is more about personal growth through competition than about lesbianism. "Quarther" theory is much naught. Rated R. 3 1/2 stars.

PORKY'S: The ultimate 1950s teen-age macho sex fantasy movie, featuring naked girls, dirty language, fistfights, clever kids and stupid cops, and actual simu-lated sex. Plus, prophylactics, double entendres, racism, fat jokes, hookers, Alex Karras and more. Dumb, very dumb. Rated R. 1 star.

'SHARKY'S MACHINE: Burt Reynolds stars as a "Dirty Harry"-style detective who chases a high-powered, pinner and Atlanta. When Reynolds stays in character, the film works well as a straight thriller. When he winks at the audience with his dialogue, the film falls apart. R. 2 1/2 stars.

What's what

More and more women over age 30 are having their first babies. Specifically, 50 percent more than a decade ago. They are of the first generation that really had a choice in this momentous matter. What's noteworthy, too, is that half the women out there now aren't even conscious of the fact that the other half never had any choice at all.

Q. Name the three windiest towns in the United States.
A. 1. Guadalupe Pass, Texas. 2. Medicine Bow, Wyo. And 3. Livingston, Mont. In that order.

Only mammals that routinely bear identical quadruplets are the armadillos.

STATUS IN RETIREMENT

You never escape status, evidently. It exists, too, in retirement homes, where theoretically all are equal, but where, in fact, each resident winds up at some level of prestige. The best of health tends to put you high up on the scale. Next comes your ability to socialize with the others. Third, it's said, is how often your children come to see you. The upper crust in retirement homes are those most frequently visited by their offspring.

Q. What were the dying words of Anne Boleyn?
A. "The executioner is, I believe, very expert, and my neck is very thin."

You'll find neither clocks nor water fountains in the casinos of Las Vegas.

CAREER WOMEN

Maybe it's to be expected that career women read more magazines and go out to dinner more frequently than do women who work entirely in their own homes. An ad agency study shows that. But less expected is the same study's finding that career women bake more cakes, cook more elaborate meals, and garden more, too.

Q. What's the most popular housepaint color now?
A. White, outside and inside.

How appropriate that Miss Rose Bush in The Philippines opened a florist shop!

More lawyers practice in Chicago than in all of England.

Never refrigerate garlic. Got that?

Michael Reagan mad at media; says he'll get back at journalists

By BETTELOU PETERSON
Knight-Ridder Newspapers

Q. We never read anything about Michael Reagan any more. As the son of the president, is he off limits to the press?

A. The son of Jane Wyman and Ronald Reagan feels he's been maligned by the media and prefers to stay his distance from reporters. "The press in my opinion is trying to make everybody in the family look like a fool," he says disgustedly. "I started with the Carlers, and now they're laying into us. Other people use their fathers' names, but the Reagan children, they say they're cashing in on their name. In reality, we all use our fathers' names, don't we? One of these days, I'm going to go off, half-cooked, and get even. Sometime, I'm going to fight back."

Q. I have thought of proposing to author Colleen McCullough, a most eligible millionaire. Why hasn't she ever married?

A. The 45-year-old writer, who gained instant fame with "The Thorn Birds," feels that she is too much like most men to handle, all 5 feet 10 inches and 200 pounds. "I am too strong," she shrugs. "I'm better at most things, better in most fields and the male ego is awfully fragile. I don't hate men; it is just absolutely impossible to live with me. I don't blame the poor fellows; and I enjoy living on my own." Besides, with no man to please, McCullough is free to indulge in an occasional sugar binge. "I figure it's my choice and I just don't like the thought of having to worry about my body."

Q. Why does Steve Martin refuse to discuss his famous art collection? Is he afraid of being ripped off?

A. "When it comes to art, which is so personal — and I'm not trying to make it part of my personality — I'm not willing to say dumb things about it," confesses the comedian. "I want the freedom to be stupid and not to learn about it, to think about something I still don't understand. It's like why I'm a vegetarian, I don't know. I can't defend myself, and I don't have to defend myself. It's like the artist doesn't have to explain or justify anything about it. And I think it's important for me to keep that position, for my own personal health."

Q. I saw "Dr. Dealie," with Rex Harrison, not long ago. Then I saw him again in "My Fair Lady." Both movies date back to 1930s. Is Harrison still alive?

A. Harrison's movie career peaked with "Lady," made in 1934. "Do it," made in 1937, was a near miss and is best known now for the song "Talk to the Animals." Harrison's made some films since, done occasional TV, most recently he has been playing Prof. Higgins in a touring revival of "My Fair Lady."

Q. I've really become interested in Roger Moore's portrayal of "The Saint" on TV and in the movies. Give me a rundown of the years he did the role both on TV and in the movies. What was his age at the time?

A. Moore, now 34, has played Leslie Charteris' "Robin Hood of Crime" only on TV. The British-produced, syndicated series was made 1983-84 when Moore was 35 to 40. "The Saint" first turned up in the movies in 1938, with Louis Hayward. George Sanders did three "Saint" films, 1939-40, and Hugh Sinclair was the Saint in 1941, the last of the movies.

Q. What can you tell us about an actor named Turhan Bey?

A. Turkish actor Bey, now 62, came along in the 1940s, when many of Hollywood's top male stars were off on a service and sent home with pity-patting both on screen and off. Some of his films were "Arabian Nights," "All Baba and the 40 Thieves," "Dragon Seed," and "Adventures of Casanova." Post-war parts became scarce and he turned still photographer, later moving to Europe.

Q. I can't imagine that a great actor like Henry Fonda ever stooped to doing a television series. I'm told he did, but I can't believe it.

A. He did, not just once, but twice. Fonda's never been shy about television, and started acting in drama on stage in the early 1930s. He took the TV series plunge in 1959 in "The Deputy," an NBC Western. It lasted two seasons, until 1961. Ten years later, Fonda was back in a family comedy in which he played a cop: "The Smith Family" was on ABC, 1971-72.

Q. I never heard the results of the Milwaukee Symphony's attempt to set a record for assembling the world's largest orchestra. Was it successful?

A. The Symphony, which was seeking only 98 musicians (one more than the 110-year-old record as recorded by The Guinness Book of World Records) wound up with 5,177, gathered in a parking lot where they played "one number," "Stars and Stripes Forever." The orchestra included 680 flutes, 569 clarinets, 568 violins, 47 trumpets, and 1,040 kazoes.

Q. Settle an argument — has Johnny Carson been married two or three times?

A. The 56-year-old czar of the night owl set has been to the altar three times and to the divorce courts twice. He married the former Judy Wolcott, his first wife, in 1958. They were divorced in 1963, the same year he married Joanne Copeland. Carson's second marital attempt ended in a well-publicized divorce 10 years ago and he then took model Elaine Rouss as his third. Joanne and Johnny enjoy a blissful existence in a Bel Air mansion, reputedly worth $5 million, where he plays tennis and drums, "to work off his hostilities."

Ms. Shire just loves the sequels

By HARRY TFSSEL
Knight-Ridder Newspapers

HOLLYWOOD — "It's a lovely thing to work in sequels," said Talia Shire, who plays the role of Rocky's wife in "Rocky III." "Being with an ongoing cast always is fun. It's more like our little ensemble."

"It was a delight to come back and work with them. We all like each other a lot."

The ensemble, including Carl Weathers, Burgess Meredith and Burt Young, has returned for the latest adventures in the Rocky Balboa saga.

Talia was an best actress Oscar nomination for her performance as the painfully shy Adrian in the first "Rocky."

"It's a terrific thing to take a character and develop it through the years," she said. "Your own life changes, and it's fun to see how those changes are reflected in the character you play."

The changes in her life: "There was an end of a marriage, and a new one, and a new child."

"And, dealing with a transformation based on being loved by someone and loving somebody a lot and sustaining it."

Talia, her hair now cut short for a "gamine look," is married to producer Jack Schwartzman and they live in a Spanish-style home near Beverly Hills. They have a 2-year-old son, Jason, and she also has a 6-year-old son, Matthew, from her previous marriage to composer David Shire.

The changes in Adrian through the first two "Rocky" films?

"When we met her in number one," Talia said, "she was at a crisis point. She either was going to live — have a relationship with somebody — or she was going to be one of those living-dead people you see."

"Luckily, the relationship she had was a true love and that changes you. And so her transformation was positive."

"She began to exhibit her strength domestically, but she had tremendous fear of Rocky going back into the ring." "In the second picture she has run the gamut of a person who was going to be discarded to a woman who truly has love and can sustain it."

"She has courage and insight, and understands her husband's real battles against self-doubt and fear."

Talia laughs when asked if she'd do a fourth "Rocky" film.

"I'd love it," she said. "Sybilster and I even have joked about coming back for our silver wedding anniversary."

"You know, there's something about sequels and seeing your old friends on the screen going through changes. It makes people feel secure."

Sunday shows rip American industry

By KENNETH R. CLARK
UPI TV Reporter

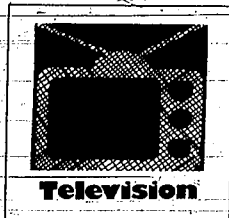

NEW YORK — Few other industries have done more to build America than autos and oil. To see one of them in rags and the other pictured as a moral bankrupt is like finding one's mother drunk in the gutter.

Such, however, are the times, and Sunday, both autos and oil will find themselves in the television pillory — autos for what can only be assessed as corporate stupidity, and oil for larceny so grand as to be virtually untouchable by the law.

Capitol Cities TV Productions is syndicating "U.S. Autos." Gearing up for "Survivor" in 150 markets nationwide (but it will not air locally). Local ABC stations will air "Closeup: The Oil Game" from 9-10 p.m., MDT.

The Capitol Cities documentary, hosted by New York Times associate editor Tom Wicker, traces the decline of the American auto industry from the days when "Made in Japan" was a synonym for junk, to the takeover by foreign manufacturers — notably the Japanese — of almost one-third of the U.S. auto market.

Reasons for the reversal are many, but essentially the blame is laid at the doorstep of an industry that grew so fat and sleek it ignored a growing demand for change.

Foreign automakers, unshackled by the fierce labor-management antagonism that has typified the American marketplace and eager to adopt new technological methods, were quick to supply the need.

Representatives from Car and Driver magazine and Consumer Reports confirm that foreign cars today are anything but junk, while many American models are little else.

Automaker and union officials are shown as men who, finally having seen the light, are retrenching both in the board room and on the assembly line, in an effort to beat the competition, and put the industry back on its wheels.

The heart of the retrenchment is simple.

They are copying the Japanese. ABC's "Oil Game" is more complex and far more bitter. Unlike their colleagues in Detroit, oil barons are richer than ever, and ABC says they got that way by clipping American consumers for billions of dollars under the umbrella of government regulated oil prices.

The regulations, designating four classifications of oil and assigning radically divergent price ceilings to each, were designed in the wake of the 1974 Arab oil embargo to protect consumers from skyrocketing prices.

Instead, they proved to be a license to steal with impunity on the part of people who buy and sell crude oil in the pipeline, and of major oil companies which the documentary charges were willing partners in the swindle.

It was carried out through an elaborate and complicated process. Department of Energy investigators have labeled a "daisy chain" in which the four grades of oil were sold, mislabeled, resold and mislabeled again with soaring and illegal profits for everyone involved.

Some individuals became multimillionaires overnight, but few of them ever were indicted or convicted, and ABC correspondent John Fielding says in the current climate of deregulation, few are likely to be.

"What you have is the most massive fraud, in monetary terms, that has ever been perpetrated on the American people," an outraged Congressman Albert Gore tells Fielding, who worked on the documentary for more than a year.

But price gouging is not the only sin laid at the oil companies' doorstep. Fielding charges some of the Louisiana salt domes, designed to store high-grade crude — against another embargo, actually contain nothing but crankcase oil.

He also contends major oil companies have cheated the government for more than 20 years by hiding oil pumped from public lands.

Fielding said he gave the oil companies every opportunity to balance his report, but that "none of them would talk to us — we got nothing."

'Lou Grant' misses cable option

LOS ANGELES (KNT) — "CBS allowed 'M-A-S-H' to have its two-hour goodbye," Ed Asner of "Lou Grant" says. "It's a damned shame it didn't allow us."

Asner was addressing the Television Critics Association about the demise of "Lou Grant." Like "Taxi," Asner said, the program stood a chance of moving to cable TV, but MTM Productions rebuffed Home Box Office's offer of a two-hour encore special.

"The producers termed it not worth the effort," Asner said. "It's all too problematical. And it's too sad, under those circumstances."

When he talks of "those circumstances," Asner is speaking of CBS's abrupt cancellation of a program the network formerly supported and praised highly — a cancellation, Asner said, that had less to do with a ratings decline than the star's vocal political outpourings.

"They say our show had a 16 percent drop for the season," Asner said.

Nielsens put 3 networks in old lineup

NEW YORK (UPI) — After a few fluctuations in week past, the three networks realigned themselves in their customary prime time Nielsen ranks last week — CBS in first place with a rating of 13.8 and an audience share of 28, ABC second with 12.9 and 26, and NBC trailing third with 11.2 and 21.

Scores for the network evening news were in the same formation.

NBC's movie "Sister, Sister," written by Maya Angelou and attacked as "anti-Christian" by the Rev. Donald Wildmon, probably was something of a disappointment to both sides.

NBC, and most television critics of the print media, defended it. Wildmon urged members of his Coalition for Better Television to watch it and complain.

"Sister, Sister" scored a rating of 14.3 and a share of 24 to place 24th on the Nielsen list of 69.

The Top 10 programs for the week ending June 13, according to the A.C. Nielsen Co., were:

1. Hart to Hart (ABC).
2. The Jeffersons (CBS).
3. Three's Company (ABC).
4. Too Close for Comfort (ABC).
5. Trapper John (CBS).
6. M-A-S-H (CBS).
7. Alice (CBS).
8. Hill Street Blues (NBC).
9. 60 Minutes (CBS).
10. Gimme a Break (NBC).

This week's best

Friday

On ABC's "Benson," members of the governor's staff purchase shares in an unknown company, and become involved in their own weird version of the stock exchange. (Yes, it's a rerun.) Another option is "Freedom," an ABC movie about a rebellious teenage girl who obtains permission from her mother to take to the back roads of America only to discover the price of being on her own.

Saturday

CBS offers "Walt Disney: The Cherokee Trail"—a western-adventure drama by Louis L'Amour about a determined young widow and her 10-year-old daughter who take over her dead husband's position as manager of a stagecoach depot in the Colorado wilderness.

Sunday

ABC exposes oil industry profits in a news "Closeup," calling oil pricing one of the biggest consumer ripoffs in American history.

Monday

By far the best tonight is NBC's movie adaptation of "Xin'ti Mischaviv," a Tony Award-winning musical tribute to the music of Fats Waller. Best of the reruns are the standards, "WKRP," "M.A.S.H." and "House Calls."

Tuesday

A blah night. Reruns dominate with the exception of the CBS movie "If Things Were Different," a ho-hummer starring Don Murray and Suzanne Pleshette, and the sly Junior Miss Pageant also on CBS.

Wednesday

The Greatest American Hero is the best bet on this night of more reruns. Ralph discovers he can see into the future and doesn't like what he sees.

Thursday

Another snoozer: Beyond "90/30" on ABC, there isn't even a good rerun to recommend. Try tennis instead.
