By United Press International

About 5,500 Argentine POWs, many sick and weary, sailed home Friday on two British ships.

But Argentina—with a new interim president—still refused to fully surrender—and demanded Britain withdraw its forces from the Falkland Islands.

In a note to the United Nations, the junta warned it had only accepted a "limited" cease-fire and refused to sign an end to hostilities until all British forces leave the South Atlantic archipelago and economic sanctions are lifted.

Britain dismissed the Argentine threat of possible renewed fighting as a "face-saving device" and began releasing the first of the 11,845 prisoners who surrendered last Sunday at the island capital of Stanley—ending the 74-day war.

But the British said about 1,000 Argentine officers and specialists will be held prisoner until Argentina vows to cease all fighting.

Reports from the Falklands said 5,500 POWs sailed for Puerto Madryn in southern Argentina on the requisitioned cruise liner Canberra and the North Sea ferry Norland. The Argentine government promised safe conduct for the ships, which sailed under Red Cross supervision.

Gen. Leopoldo Galtieri, who ordered the Argentine seizure of the Falklands April 2, formally resigned as president, leader of the three-man military junta and army commander.

A hardline associate, Lt. Col. Cristino Nicolaides, was named the new army commander in a ceremony at the National Congress. He also will sit on the three-man ruling junta with Navy Commander Jorge Anaya and Air Force Commander Basilio Lami Dozo.

Nicolaides vowed to perform his duties "for the good of the army, for the good of the armed forces and for the good of all the Argentine people."

He then embraced Galtieri and presented him with a box whose contents were not disclosed.

Interior Minister Gen. Alfredo Saulo Jean, a soft-spoken army general, was sworn in as interim president until the ruling three-man junta chooses a permanent replacement.

Galtieri, who resigned under great pressure for Argentina's humiliation at the hands of the British, was hailed nonetheless as a worthy leader.

"I am convinced that men become great not only when... they are crowned by immediate success but also when they have the valor—as in

PLO rejects surrender plan

By United Press International

The 6,000 PLO guerrillas besieged in Moslem west Beirut by Israeli land, sea and air forces vowed Friday to fight to the death.

The PLO "categorically" rejected a proposal from U.S. Middle East envoy Philip Habib to surrender.

"If need be we shall fight from our camps alone for the world to know that no one can disarm this revolution with its will and approval," said Palestinian Liberation Organization second-in-command Salah Khalaf, code-named Abu Iyad.

The rejection came as Israeli observation units moved into central parts of Christian east Beirut and gunboats and artillery shelled Palestinian positions in the suburbs.

In Tel Aviv, Israeli Defense Minister Ariel Sharon said Israel wants the Lebanese army to remove the PLO from Beirut, stressing in newspaper interviews that Christian Phalangists, and not Israeli forces, were fighting in the city.

Israeli troops and guerrillas also clashed south of Beirut and in the mountains above the city, Beirut Radio said. The PLO claimed Israeli cease-fire violations despite a renewed truce commitment.

The estimated 6,000 Palestinian guerrillas have been surrounded by Israeli land, sea and air forces since Sunday. Habib appealed to them through an intermediary Thursday to lay down their arms.

Diplomats said the 11th-hour efforts by Habib and former Lebanese Prime Minister Saeb Salam to mediate a 48-hour cease-fire agreement appeared doomed.

"We are working under the assumption that this 48-hour truce is our last chance with the whole capital under threat of annihilation," Salam said earlier in the day after meetings with PLO and leftist leaders.

Salam, a key mediator between U.S. diplomats and the Palestinians, met with PLO leader Yasser Arafat and was in close contact with Habib. Arafat's deputy, Abu Iyad, was quoted by the PLO news agency

Begin speaks — A3 War, fun mixed — A5

WAR—As lashing-out at world "silence, conspiring and indifference" in the face of Israel's 13-day invasion of Lebanon.

At the United Nations, Arab diplomats walked out as Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin, leaning on a cane, addressed a General Assembly session on disarmament, calling self-defense the "most sacred duty of man."

"What should be banned, denounced and renounced is aggressive war," Begin said, without directly referring to the Israeli invasion to drive the PLO out of Lebanon.

Abu Iyad said Habib had asked the Palestinians to surrender their arms, confine themselves to refugee camps and send their leaders outside Beirut, under Israeli protection, and flying a white flag of surrender.

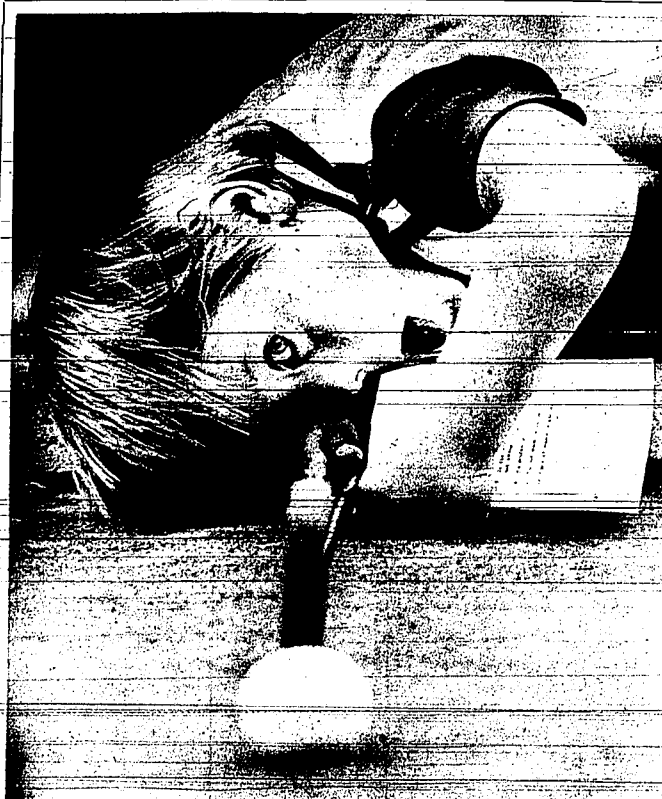

"We, the bases, cadres and leadership of the Palestinian revolution categorically reject these proposals," the guerrilla leader said.

Accusing the United States of being "responsible firstly and lastly" for the Israeli invasion, Abu Iyad attacked the Soviet Union for not helping the PLO.

"I do not understand the position of the Soviet Union," he said. "They can, by sending word to the United States, put an end to this massacre. It is up to Syria to move to save the Palestinian and Lebanese peoples."

George Habash, leader of a radical wing of the PLO, vowed to give the Israelis "a real battle" if their troops moved against PLO strongholds in the center of Moslem West Beirut.

State-run Radio Israel said the cabinet in Jerusalem had reiterated the Jewish state's commitment to a cease-fire declared June 12. But sporadic fighting continued in Beirut, where Palestinian positions were still being shelled by Israeli artillery and gunboats.

Evans will meet Batt four times

BOISE (UPI)—The two candidates for Idaho governor agreed Friday to discuss election issues side-by-side in a series of town meetings at Twin Falls, Nampa, Caldwell and Lewiston.

Democratic Gov. John Evans, who earlier this week declined to meet his Republican opponent—Lieutenant Gov. Phil Batt—in a formal debate, said he welcomed the town meetings as a way to "gain the attention of potential non-voters and stimulate their interest in voting."

Batt said he also expected the town meetings to be "interesting and stimulating." But Batt reiterated his dismay that the incumbent governor turned down an offer to participate in a debate to be sponsored by the Idaho Press Club and the League of Women Voters.

"I'm not criticizing the town-meeting format. These meetings will be valuable, but they will not give voters the same insight which would be provided by a debate," said Batt, a Wilder farmer.

Officials said the town meetings would be held June 28 at Jewett Auditorium in Caldwell, July 1 (tentative date) at an as-yet-undecided location in Twin Falls, Sept. 15 at Lewiston High School, and Oct. 11 (another tentative date) at an as-yet-undecided site in Nampa.

The meetings were slated to begin at 7 p.m. and last about two hours.

Spending, optimism both up

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Americans stepped up their spending sharply last month, giving the advance advance reason to say the recession is ending.

The government figures released Friday showed a 1.3 percent increase in May, the Commerce Department reported—the steepest climb since the beginning of the recession last summer.

But there also were new hints that an end to the recession will not necessarily mean a beginning of prosperity.

Even congressional agreement to one-year budget will not immediately persuade Wall Street and lenders to lower interest rates, Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldridge told reporters.

High interest rates, he said, could spoil a recovery. However, he hopes to see them gradually decline.

The 1.3 percent increase in personal spending, much of it apparently on new automobiles, was significant because prices have been going up by a far smaller percentage rate.

The same category of "personal consumption expenditures" was up only a revised 0.3 percent in April. The previous peak was August's 1.5 percent increase.

"I think the consumer is leading the way out of this recession," Baldridge said at a news conference. With Americans in a spending mood, the extra help of a tax reduction and Social Security cost-of-living increase in July should add more momentum to any economic turnaround, he indicated.

On the other side of the ledger sheet, the latest government figures on personal income suggested the new enthusiasm for spending may be premature.

While personal income before taxes was up by the most since November, 0.7 percent, the amount available to spend after taxes climbed only 0.2 percent. The increase in ultimate spending power the previous month had been a far stronger 0.7 percent.

With Americans spending more, but disposable income growth very weak, the amount of money saved appeared to be cut back. The unofficial savings rate for the single month of May was 5.3 percent of disposable income, compared to the official 5.8 percent savings rate in April, based on a three-month average.

In support of last year's tax increases, the administration stressed the importance of increased savings to provide investment funds for a "supply-side" business modernization initiative.

Instead, high interest rates and recession crippled earnings and businesses cut back their investment plans. Spending to support a recovery became at least as important a goal as saving, in the analyses of many leading economists.

Company offers bid for Kellwood

By STEVE LIPSON
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS—A Midwestern electronics firm has submitted an offer to purchase the vacant Kellwood Co. hosiery plant south of Twin Falls.

The company, which has been courted by the Twin Falls Chamber of Commerce for the past year, was not identified. Details about its purchase offer were not released.

News of the offer was announced Friday by Mike Dolton, the executive director of the Twin Falls chamber. Kellwood officials could not be reached for comment.

Although the offer has to be approved by the boards of directors of both companies before it can become final, Dolton expressed confidence that the sale will go through. "It looks good," he said.

Kellwood appears anxious to sell the building, which has been vacant since the summer of 1980, he said. The electronics company has made what appears to be a reasonable offer for the facility, Dolton said.

The offer was relayed to Kellwood after a whirlwind trip Wednesday and Thursday to the electronics company's headquarters by Dolton, chamber President Doug Vollmer and William "Brack" Hale of Ketchum, the real-estate broker representing Kellwood in efforts to sell the building.

"We answered their final questions and they made an offer," Dolton said.

Kellwood was notified by phone of the offer, which was then mailed to Kellwood's St. Louis headquarters.

Dolton said, "We just couldn't have found anybody more solid" working in the facility in January.

"They're looking at employing from the start, 50 to 100, and the potential is virtually unlimited," Dolton said.

Several weeks ago, an Idaho company was reported to have made an offer for the Kellwood building. However, there was some dispute among business leaders in Kellwood and other parties involved in the transaction about whether that document was a formal offer. In any case, no action had been expected on that proposal until the end of this month.

A major factor that enticed the electronics company to make an offer for the Twin Falls facility was the facility itself, Dolton said. Earlier this year, Kellwood cut its asking price on the 10-year-old

Court says doctors can't unify prices

WASHINGTON (UPI)—A divided Supreme Court joined the push for greater competition in the health care industry Friday.

The court ruled that it is illegal for doctors to band together and decide how much to charge.

The justices condemned a fee-setting arrangement among a group of Arizona physicians, signaling the medical profession is barred from price-fixing conspiracies just as are other businesses.

Justice John Paul Stevens, writing for the majority, said it makes no difference that the culprits were doctors, not conventional businessmen.

the doctors were setting maximum—not minimum—prices for their services as part of an insurance program.

Chief Justice Warren wrote, "grounded on faith in price competition as a market force and not on a policy of low-selling prices at the price of eliminating competition."

In this case, the rule is violated by a price restraint that tends to provide the same economic rewards to all practitioners regardless of their skill, their experience, their training, or their willingness to employ innovative and difficult procedures in individual cases, he said.

Dissenting were Chief Justice Warren Burger and Justices Lewis

Powell and William Rehnquist. Justices Sandra Day O'Connor and Harry Blackmun did not vote.

"It's a major breakthrough," said Kenneth Reed, a Phoenix attorney who handled the case for the Arizona attorney general's office. "This is an opening step in application of antitrust laws into the health law sector."

Hopefully, the result will be more competition in pricing and more restrictions on inflationary price increases than has been the case in the past.

Also Friday, the court handed a major victory to the retarded, ruling 9-0 that those in state mental facilities are entitled to humane treatment that gives them the greatest freedom.

But the court sidestepped a question about the rights of involuntarily committed mental patients to reject anti-psychotic drug treatments, instead ordering a lower court to rethink the issue.

In other decisions, the justices:

• Ruled 9-0 that the federal government—not California—has little to certain coastal land created through man-made extension of an oceanfront.

On a 7-2 vote, concluded federal courts have no power to exempt employees of some religious schools from state unemployment compensation programs.

Today's briefing

Haitians held illegally

MIAMI (UPI) — A federal judge ruled Friday the Immigration Service has been illegally detaining Haitian refugees for more than a year. Attorneys said the ruling could lead to the release of 1,910 aliens held across the country. However, U.S. District Judge Eugene P. Spellman did not say whether the Haitians would be released. A hearing was set for Wednesday to help spellman issue and determine how and when the 1,910 Haitians could be freed. Spellman ruled the government violated the technical aspect of the law, but he said the immigration policy of detaining illegal aliens was not in itself unlawful. The judge said no evidence that Haitians had been discriminated against because of their race or nationality. In Washington, the Justice Department welcomed Spellman's ruling that the Haitians were not being arrested because of their race.

ERA protester in hospital

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (UPI) — One of seven women fasting for the Equal Rights Amendment underwent minor surgery Friday night for a partially collapsed lung on the 32nd day of the hunger strike. Doctors said the lung collapse did not appear related to the hunger strike. Mary Ann Beall, of Falls Church, Va., was listed in "good" condition at Springfield Community Hospital after a tube was inserted in her chest to draw out air so her right lung could re-expand. Dr. Gregory Hulse, the emergency room physician, said the 15-minute procedure involved making a one-inch incision between Mrs. Beall's ribs and pushing the tube into the pleural cavity — a space between the lung and the chest wall. "She tolerated it fine," Hulse said. Mrs. Beall has said she was just recovering from pneumonia when she began the hunger strike.

Miami doctors agree

MIAMI (UPI) — A tentative agreement was reached Friday night that may bring an end to a 4-day-old surgery slowdown by 3,000 doctors at 34 South Florida Hospitals protesting malpractice insurance rates. "We have a tentative agreement," said Dr. Paul Baxi, vice president of Florida Physicians United for Health Cost Reform. It was reached in talks between the physicians, the governor's office, the insurance commissioner and representatives of both houses of the legislature. "There is no official approval yet," Baxi said. "The agreement is as most agreements are — a compromise." Surgeons and anesthesiologists who have been turning down non-emergency operations since Tuesday and have threatened to halt all surgery July 1 because of skyrocketing insurance premiums, said the plan could be approved by the legislature as early as Monday.

Author John Cheevers dies

OSHING, N.Y. (UPI) — John Cheever, the Pulitzer Prize-winning author who was known as "The Chekhov of the suburbs" for his stories of middle-class life, died of cancer Friday at his Oshing home. He was 70. A prize-winning writer of short stories and novels, Cheever once complained that fiction needed up-grading. "It can no longer operate as a sixth-rate boarding-house," he said. Cheever won a Pulitzer Prize for fiction in 1979 for "The Stories of John Cheever." He also won the coveted National Book Award in 1958 for "The Wapshot Chronicle," a tale of a Massachusetts South Shore family.

FDA approves heart plan

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — The Food and Drug Administration Friday approved a new University of Utah plan that will allow doctors to replace weak, but still beating human heart with an air-driven artificial heart. "The FDA signed the new protocol today," said University Medical Center spokesman John Dwan. Dr. William DeVries, who will perform the first artificial heart implant operation at the university, said, "We're very pleased. Now, perhaps we can begin moving ahead." The FDA had previously approved human experiments with Jarvik-7 heart only in patients whose natural hearts could not be restarted following cardiac surgery and who would otherwise die if taken off a heart-lung machine. The new criteria allows doctors to implant the device in people suffering from degenerative heart disease and who have less than six months to live. The change will greatly expand the number of people who can qualify to receive the man-made heart.

Steelworkers agree to talks

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — United Steelworkers union leaders Friday vowed to meet with U.S. steelmakers on steps that can be taken to help them through their worst slump in modern times. But union officials said the 263-79 vote by local union presidents making up the U.S.W.'s 633-member Basic Industry Steel Conference did not necessarily mean the union is willing to reopen its current contract, which runs another year. The local presidents also did not vote on the question of contract concessions — something apparently opposed by rank-and-file steelworkers across the nation. The rank-and-file leaders agreed the union should open "discussions (with steelmakers) for the purpose of exploring possible solutions to the problems of our members and the industry."

GOP's cautious of budget

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The White House called the Senate-House compromise 1983 budget "a good one" Friday, but Republican leaders in Congress were cautious about predicting its final passage next week or its impact on interest rates. Congressional negotiators resolved the differences between the budgets passed by the Senate and the House in an 11-hour session that ended with a voice vote taken about 12:45 a.m. EDT. It adopted a $770 billion Republican compromise with a projected $104.9 billion deficit. The budget goes to the Senate and House next week for final passage. If adopted, the next step will be for congressional committees to put together legislation to implement the broad spending and taxing targets in the blueprint.

Deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said the plan "seems like a good one. We hope it will be approved very quickly." But Senate Budget Committee Pete Domenici, R-N.M., one of the plan's architects, said, "I don't have any assurance it's going to pass in either house." The compromise, written behind closed doors Wednesday by congressional Republicans and budget director David Stockman, holds the deficit to $104 billion mostly through accounting adjustments. "The plan projects economic stimulus by the non-partisan Congressional Budget Office, and uses more optimistic Republican figures."

"If CBO were all that good, they'd be running the New York Stock Exchange," House Republican leader Bob Michel of Illinois said in response to reporters' questions about the accuracy of the economic assumptions in the compromise. Republicans have repeatedly said passage of a credible 1983 budget that holds down spending and future deficits would cause the financial markets to respond favorably and interest rates would fall.

Security Council, the Argentine Foreign Ministry said "the cease-fire that Argentina is observing will be precarious — while Britain persists — in its stance, defined by its military occupation, the blockade and the economic aggression." Argentina said full peace will not occur until Britain withdraws, lifts its sea and air blockade and ends the economic sanctions imposed by itself and the Common Market. British-U.N. ambassador Sir Anthony Parsons called the Argentine message a "face-saving device." "Forget it," he said, when asked about the new government stance. British defense sources said five war ships were meeting in the English Channel to relieve and replace damaged war ships now heading home. British officials said the latest count put the number of prisoners at 11,845, and the government had warned that it could not provide for the captured men on the frigid and scantily supplied islands. Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher said she would have preferred to spend the war with her troops at Stanley than with politicians at No. 10 Downing Street.

Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin addresses the U.N. General Assembly Friday.

'Let us shake hands, talk peace to each other, make agreements and all of us will change the course of history of our nations' — Menachem Begin

Begin tells U.N. self defense a 'sacred duty'

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin told the U.N. General Assembly Friday that self defense was "the most sacred duty of man," but Arab diplomats walked out before he addressed their nations.

The Egyptians were the "only" Arab delegation remaining in the assembly hall to hear Begin, who did not directly refer to the Israeli invasion of Lebanon.

Almost all of the Arab delegations walked out as Begin walked unsteadily to the rostrum, leaning heavily on his cane. The Soviet Union and East bloc nations boycotted the speech.

Only about 50 of the 157 delegations were represented, some by low-ranking diplomats. The U.S. delegation was present in force but without Secretary of State Alexander Haig, who had an almost two-hour breakfast meeting with Begin earlier in the day.

PLO representative Yehdi Labib Terzi later told the assembly the right to self-defense "applies to all people" and added, "We shall resist all attempts to annihilate the Palestinians," referring to Israel's invasion of Lebanon.

Begin shunned any reference to the fighting in the Middle East or the Palestine Liberation Organization in his speech to the Assembly's disarmament conference.

But he undoubtedly had Middle East events in mind when he told the assembly that "self defense is the most sacred duty of man."

"Peace is a beautiful idea. But if it confronts aggressive totalitarianism it is the greatest provocation inviting attack, subjugation and destruction," Begin said.

Leaning against the rostrum, Begin said the Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty proved it is possible for the country to negotiate with its neighbors.

"So we can do it," he said. "All of us can do it. Even faced with animosity, even with a state of war let us meet. Let us shake hands, talk peace to each other, make agreements and all of us will change the course of history of our nations."

Haig, Gromyko discuss 'broad principles'

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — Secretary of State Alexander Haig and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko met for nearly five hours Friday, discussing U.S. arms reduction proposals and the "broad principles" of Moscow-Washington relations.

Haig emerged from the meeting with Gromyko to tell reporters another meeting will be required to discuss "regional issues," presumably including the situation in Lebanon. They were to meet again this morning.

Gromyko declined comment on the five-hour meeting.

Haig said, "The focus of the discussion was the broad principles of U.S.-Soviet relationships."

He said he and Gromyko discussed a series of American proposals, including Strategic Arms Reduction, a cut-back to zero of intermediate range missiles stationed in Europe, a sharp cut in conventional ground forces, and so-called "confidence building" measures proposed by President Reagan in Berlin on June 11.

Haig said that the Saturday discussions will include "regional issues," which is expected to include the Middle East.

The two men were alone, except for interpreters, for most of the discussion in the office of the ambassador Jean Kirkpatrick on the 11th floor of the U.S. mission.

Haig and Gromyko, seated on identical blue velvet sofas in an office overlooking the U.N. main building, were having their third series of meetings. They have met once before in Geneva, and once in New York in 1981.

Hinckley jury begins insanity deliberations seven-woman, five-man jury, admonished by the judge not to be influenced by "sympathy, pity or compassion," began deliberations Friday on the sanity of John W. Hinckley Jr. when he shot President Reagan.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A

The jury began deciding the fate of the young drifter at 3:51 p.m. EDT at the close of the 39th day of the historic trial, and deliberated nearly 3 1/2 hours without reaching a verdict.

U.S. District Judge Barrington Parker then told the panel to recess for the evening and return this morning.

The 27-year-old defendant — the first man charged with shooting a president in 80 years — faces a variety of charges for gunning down Reagan and three other men March 30, 1981.

If convicted, Hinckley faces up to life in prison. If found innocent by reason of insanity, he would be committed to St. Elizabeth's Hospital in Washington — and would be entitled to a hearing within 60 days on whether he could be released because he was no longer mentally ill.

The jury includes a garage attendant, a janitor and two secretaries. The only white on the panel is a young woman who has worked with disturbed adolescents, who has a master's degree and who specialized in college in abnormal psychology of maladjusted youths.

The woman had planned to be married today, but postponed the wedding because of the trial.

Parker sent the jurors into deliberations with a mandate not to be influenced by "bias or anger" or "sympathy, pity or compassion" when they begin their deliberations.

"If you do, justice will not be served," he said.

The sandy-haired Hinckley sat impassively for two hours while Parker instructed the jury on the law, occasionally closing his eyes and cupping his hands in front of him.

Parker told the jurors if they find that the government has not proved Hinckley was "sane" when he shot Reagan, they must find him innocent by reason of insanity.

"The law provides that a jury shall bring in a verdict of not guilty by reason of insanity if, at the time of the criminal conduct, the defendant, as a result of mental disease or defect, either lacked substantial capacity to conform his conduct to the requirements of the law, or lacked substantial capacity to appreciate the wrongfulness of his conduct," the judge said.

Parker also told the jurors the question of punishment if Hinckley is found guilty should not "enter into or influence your decision in any way." He admonished them to approach their deliberations with "fairness, impartiality and objectivity."

Shortly after deliberations began, the jury sent a note to Parker, but the judge did not come into the courtroom and reportedly dealt with the note in chambers.

The jury will be able to review stacks of Hinckley's writings, photographs of the scene and the shooting and videotaped testimony of actress Jodie Foster — whose love Hinckley hoped to win with his "dramatic act" — and recordings of phone calls to her.

Symms, McClure vote no

Voting Act overwhelmingly passes

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Crushing attempts to stall or cripple it, the Senate Friday overwhelmingly passed a 25-year extension of the Voting Rights Act, credited with opening the polls to millions of blacks and Hispanics.

The 85-8 vote, the biggest margin for any civil rights measure in modern history, took 10 days to pass the Senate, in contrast to the 25 days it took when first adopted in 1965 in the midst of national anguish over legal oppression of blacks — particularly in the South.

House leaders have said they will accept without change the Senate version, which differs from the one passed 389-24 by the House last year, and send it to President Reagan for his signature, possibly by next week.

Reagan hailed the outcome, saying in an official statement: "Today's responsible action by the Senate sends a strong, bipartisan message: no American's vote shall be defiled, diluted or denied."

A decision by Idaho's two Republican senators, James McClure and Steve Symms, to vote against the act drew reactions of surprise and dismay Friday from local officials representing Hispanic groups.

"It's kind of sad. Maybe the senators do not have the experience of being discriminated against," said Hector De Leon, deputy director of the Idaho Migrant Council.

"I don't know the why they voted this way. These people were in the minority even in their own party. I'm also surprised that in this particular issue they went against the president."

Symms called the act "wasteful, unnecessary and disruptive," adding, "If we have a problem with people needing to learn English, let's take the money we're spending printing ballots and train the people in the art of the English language, so we do have in fact an English-speaking country."

Conc. Scott King, wife of slain civil rights leader Martin Luther King, said in Atlanta she was "extremely gratified."

"The strong bipartisan support for this vital legislation should encourage everyone concerned with strengthening democracy in America," she said. "Minorities and all citizens will benefit by having a more responsive political system."

The act, extended in 1970 and again in 1975, bans discrimination in voting nationwide and requires nine states and parts of 13 others to clear proposed election law changes with the Justice Department.

The new extension would effectively overturn a 1980 Supreme Court decision that said only a state or locality's intent to discriminate was a reason for finding violations — not the results of elections in which blacks and other minorities felt their voting power was diluted.

Opponents said it would lead to federal judges ordering proportional representation at all levels of government — by remedying violations with schemes to ensure the election of minorities in proportion to their numbers in the population.

The bill specifically denies judges that power, and the Senate voted 97-1 Thursday night against an amendment that would let courts order proportional representation.

GOP picks Dallas

WASHINGTON — The Republican National Committee voted unanimously Friday to hold the 1984 GOP National Convention in Dallas, the city of President Reagan's choice.

The Republicans, making their selection about a year earlier than usual, picked one of the few major American cities that tends to vote Republican consistently.

Once the president expressed his preference, there was no doubt that Dallas would be the convention site. The RNC made it official on a vote Friday.

Democrats will name a committee in July to decide where they will hold their 1984 convention, and Houston is among sites being talked about. This reflects Texas' increasing importance in presidential elections. The new census gave the state 29 electoral votes in 1984, three more than in 1980 when Reagan carried Texas with 55 percent of its vote.

"We are excited in Dallas," Mayor Jack Evans said. "The entire city of Dallas joins me in extending a hearty welcome. Our economy is good in Dallas and its going to get better because you're going to help us."

The GOP convention, opening Aug. 20, 1984, is expected to pump tens of millions of dollars in the local economy.

Politicking begins for new president

By JOHN REICHERTZ
United Press International

Analysis

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina — The military junta again is looking for a president. But, unlike seven months ago when it chose Gen. Leopoldo Galtieri, its prestige is diminished and political parties and business groups may have to be mollified.

Galtieri, president, junta leader and army commander, formally resigned Friday under pressure for his role in the Falklands Islands war with Britain.

Politicking immediately began to find a new president.

The first names mentioned were:

• Air Force Commander Basilio Lami Dozo, head of the only branch of the armed forces that distinguished itself in Falklands fighting.

• "Falconer" Costa Mendez, a civilian who led the diplomatic initiatives to recover the islands.

• Interior Minister Alfredo Saint Jean, a top aide of Galtieri, who headed the government's efforts to set up the mechanisms to return power to civilians.

None of the candidates, however, fits the traditional power scheme that has existed the last six years — each of the three former presidents was an active or retired commander of the army — the largest of the three armed forces.

But with the military defeat in the Falklands, the army's prestige is at an all-time low.

And Galtieri's successor as army commander, 56-year-old — Cristiano Nicolaides, is not regarded as a likely president. He is a stern, right-wing general who has had rough relations with political parties.

His appointment, political sources said, would alienate civilians and politicians — two groups the junta needs for support, they said.

The sources added, however, it was possible the army's selection of Nicolaides could be an effort to balance the choice of a moderate official for president.

Lami Dozo would fit that description. He has sharply criticized the military record the past six years, especially in statements since the surrender to the British at Stanley.

As a result, he is clearly the favorite candidate of politicians.

But many of the economic interests that have supported the junta during the years would feel betrayed by the selection of Lami Dozo, business sources said.

"Lami Dozo will bring with him major economic changes," a source said.

A compromise candidate, the sources said, could be Saint Jean, a soft-spoken general who has frequently smoothed out the military's relations with political parties.

Saint Jean, however, said Friday that by no means does he want to be president.

Finally, Costa Mendez has been mentioned as a possible civilian president. But political sources said Costa Mendez would be foolish to get into a position where he had no direct base of support in a country governed by the military.

Costa Mendez, asked if he would like to have the job, burst into laughter.

Prince Andrew a decoy

LONDON (UPI) — Prince Andrew used his helicopter to decoy deadly Exocet missiles fired from Argentine war juts and was hailed a hero for rescuing British sailors from the sinking Atlantic Conveyor, reports from the Falklands Islands said Friday.

"I was very frightened then," Andrew recalled of the Atlantic Conveyor attack.

"It was something I shall never forget. It was quite horrific."

Andrew, 22, and next in line to the throne after Prince Charles, also called his mother Queen Elizabeth II when he landed in Stanley.

"I asked to be put through to Buckingham Palace, and the line was so clear it was like speaking to London from Edinburgh. My mother was in. It was about the right time in the evening," he said.

"She was quite surprised to hear from me. She asked to pass on how proud she was of everyone, and to say how marvellously all the troops had done."

Andrew said he flew his Sea King helicopter three or four hours a day behind the HMS Invincible to serve as a decoy to Exocet missiles — Argentina's deadliest weapon.

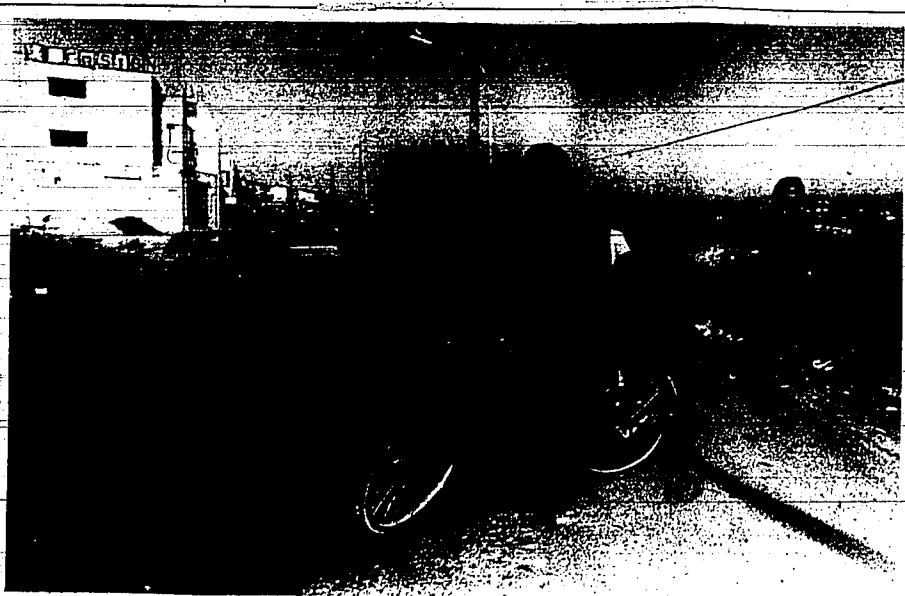

Andrew's helicopter: Squadron 820 rescues shipmates from the Atlantic Conveyor.

War doesn't block fun in Lebanon

JOUNIYEH, Lebanon (UPI) — Sunbathers and wind surfers packed the beaches, relaxing, laughing and pausing only occasionally to notice the thudding sound of guns that reminded those who cared to listen that there was a war on only a half-hour's drive away.

Surfers dotted the bright blue sea, water ski operators did a thriving business and amusement parks were in full swing.

It was the same scene all up the coast from Christian east Beirut, barely five miles from the war front, north to Jounieh and Tabarja Beach and on to Byblos. On the way the Casadino Liban was open for gambling.

Hotels were full along the coast and in the mountain resorts.

At the exclusive Al Bustan hotel in hilltop Beit Meri, guests had a panoramic view over the capital right down to the airport runways.

They stood on the sun terrace and sat in the restaurant watching as impacting Israeli and Palestinian shells threw up clouds of dirt and dust around the airport.

"We don't have any vacancies," a receptionist said at the Al Bustan, where rooms start at $100 a night. "We have all sorts of people, wealthy and bejeweled Lebanese and other Arabs as well as Western and Japanese diplomats and businessmen and their families."

Sharing the view were Israeli soldiers, their tanks and armored personnel carriers a bizarre sight among the expensive villas.

The return to Moslem west Beirut, where the trapped Palestinians expect an Israeli assault, provided a sharp contrast to the holiday mood in the sea and mountain resorts of the Christian region.

Checks were severe — by rightist Phalangie and Lebanese army units on the eastern side and by Syrian and Palestinian forces on the western side.

George Habash, veteran leader of the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine, held a news conference amid security precautions straight out of a spy movie.

The press was told to be at the Commodore Hotel at 11 a.m., ready to move at once to a secret location.

A PFLP official arrived at 11.30 a.m. and led a breakneck limousine race through narrow sidestreets to Habash's heavily guarded headquarters.

People leapt out of the way and at least one fruit cart was overturned.

Once in the building, the reporters, photographers and cameramen were hustled across the street to a basement two floors below the ground.

After 20 minutes in that bunker-like cellar it was back to the original room where Habash appeared, declaring that his guerrillas would never lay down their arms.

The crowded beaches seemed a lot more than five miles away.

Sharon says Lebanese must 'finish off' PLO

TEL AVIV, Israel (UPI) — Defense Minister Ariel Sharon said Friday Israel expects the Lebanese to "finish off" the PLO if they want to have an independent state again.

"The cleaning of Beirut of the PLO infrastructure is the clear task of the Lebanese government. There is a Lebanese army," Sharon said.

In an interview with the newspaper Yedioth Ahronoth, Sharon indicated what Lebanon's government must do to ensure its independence.

"To finish off the leadership of the PLO in West Beirut, disarm them, and arrest the thousands of guerrillas there," Sharon said. "Or else, they will not succeed in setting up either a government or a sovereign state."

Israel radio said Thursday Israel had waived responsibility for what its allies, the Lebanese Christian Phalangist militiamen, may do.

In another interview with the newspaper Ma'ariv, Sharon denied that Israeli forces were fighting in Beirut.

He said "other elements" freed from "long years of Syrian and PLO cruel oppression" seized the opportunity "to get rid, once and for all, of the guerrillas who had brought catastrophe upon their country and upon them."

Israel radio acknowledged that U.S. envoy Philip Habib sought a 48-hour cease-fire where the Palestine Liberation Organization would lay down its arms and Israel would relax its pressure on Beirut.

Prime Minister Menachem Begin was in New York to deliver a speech on disarmament at the United Nations

— the site eight years ago of an appearance by PLO chief Yasser Arafat, then at the height of his international prestige.

Arafat is now holed up in the Moslem western sector of Beirut, trapped there with thousands of his guerrillas.

— Israeli statements made no mention of Arafat's fate but concentrated instead on what they portrayed as the opportunity Lebanon now had for an independent state free of any foreign armies — including Israel's.

Fahd asks God to aid Islam

NICOSIA, Cyprus (UPI) — King Fahd of Saudi Arabia beseeched God Friday from Mecca — Islam's holiest shrine — to give victory to Moslems and save the beleaguered Palestinians and Lebanese from their "misfortune and ordeal."

Riyadh radio said Fahd, who took over the Saudi Arabian throne last Sunday after the death of his brother Khaled, offered the prayer during a visit to the grand mosque in Mecca, the foremost Moslem shrine.

Fahd urged all Moslems to "dedicate their hearts sincerely to God so that he may have mercy on us and disappoint this cloud.

"As we stand in this holy place, we beseech the almighty to give victory to Islam and Moslems and to find a way out from their misfortune and ordeal for our brothers, the Palestinians and Lebanese," Fahd said.

"This is a time that requires a unification of ranks," he said.

"Our Islamic ethics and Arab morals can provide a solution to all our problems."

Fahd made no reference to a call Thursday by Libyan President Moammar Khadafi for an Arab summit on the Lebanon crisis.

Money, children and long-distance driving—these are said to be the three main sources of argument between husbands and wives. Debate over money and children is too various to itemize. Besides, you already know all about that. In the matter of trip driving, however, researchers claim most husbands complain that their wives can't read road maps, and ask directions.

Q. Are the male schoolteachers in Saudi Arabia permitted to teach female students?
A. Only by way of closed-circuit TV.

Polls show 7 percent of the group Americans have never heard of "Custer's Last Stand."

NOSTRADAMUS

Most renowned of history's prognosticators was Nostradamus, who made his predictions between 1503 and 1566 B.C. Am. asked if he actually foresaw the assassinations of John and Robert Kennedy. Can't say that. But he did predict that three powerful brothers would rise in politics and he said one would be killed by a thunderbolt in the daylight and the other at night. Nostradamus came up with some uncanny visions. He predicted the Great London fire of 1666 and the French Revolution. He wrote of Louis Pasteur by name—And he said Germany would get a leader named Hitler, close enough to Hitler to be noteworthy.

NUDE ON STAGE

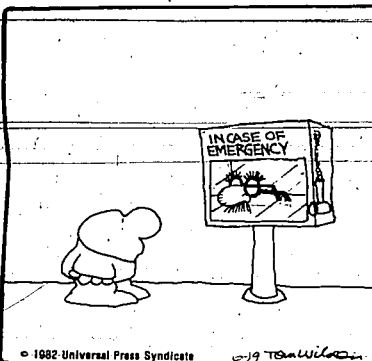

Q. Did women ever appear stark naked on stage when my granddad was a boy?
A. Not unless he was a boy after 1919. That was the year the first woman performed in total nude on a stage. At the Folies Bergeres in France, it was. The show so excited the audience of the day—that travelers from all over the world converged on Paris.

This is reportedly the most widely quoted joke in the Soviet Union: "What's the difference between Capitalism and Socialism?" Answer: "Capitalism is the exploitation of man by man. Socialism is the opposite."

Q. Bartenders mix some drinks with grenadine. What is it?
A. Pomegranate syrup.

Brooke pictures can't be shown

By United Press International

NIX PIX

Nude photographs of Brooke Shields posed for six years ago can't be published or sold by the man who took them, a New York court has ruled, overturning an earlier decision. Photographer Gary Gross had argued that Teri Shields agreed his photographs of her daughter could be sold. But the judges ruled the young actress-model, "a hapless child victim," shouldn't be "bound by an agreement" to which grasping adults bound her. Judge Sidney Asche said the pictures of Miss Shields, now 17, standing nude in a bathtub violate her right to privacy.

TOUCHE

"A writer's career depends on what he writes, not on what other people write about him." So said Jerry Kosinski Friday of accusations he gets "compositional help" on his books. The Polish-born author was responding in Paris to an article in a New York "weekly," the Village Voice, in which two Kosinski assistants said they did more than just proof-read the author's prose. One of the assistants, Barbara Mackey, was quoted as saying, "The ideas were all his... but the words were often mine." Kosinski, whose novel "Being There" was made into a movie by Peter Sellers, and who played a role in the movie "Reds," said he planned no legal action against the newspaper. "In no way do I question the right of a newspaper to publish what it wants."

BURGER BONANZA

A waitress from the Cleveland suburb of Parma has won the $1 million prize in a hamburger chain's contest. "I've never had money before. Now my family and I will enjoy life more, I guess," said a somewhat tentative Rose Medrano, 22, who came to the United States from Calabria, Italy, 10 years ago with her parents and sister. Miss Medrano was with her fiancé Tony Rolando, also 22 and a supermarket stockman, and her sister when she got the winning tickets at a Burger King outlet in Seven Hills, Ohio. She collects $50,000 now and $40,000 a year for 32 years, and plans to help her family because "times haven't been too good lately."

FOUR AND OH

Paul McCartney, the richest Beatle, celebrated his 40th birthday Friday but friends said his entry into middle age was muted—spotted in studio mixing songs for a new album. McCartney has invested some of his huge income in music publishing and holds hundreds of copyrights of Broadway show tunes and other famous songs. His birthday leaves only one of the three surviving Beatles under 40. George Harrison reaches that plateau next Feb. 25.

YALIES

The question that vexes Yale grads in California is whether to support Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. or San Diego Mayor Pete Wilson in the state's forthcoming senate race. Both Brown and Wilson are graduates of the Yale Alumni Association in Sacramento, which has prompted some of its California graduates to urge that the candidates stage a debate this summer. Ray Banton, president of the Yale Alumni Association in Sacramento, says the political rivals have "expressed interest" in the idea. Democrat Brown graduated from Yale Law School in 1964, Republican Wilson from Yale College in 1955.

Reckless drivers in South Dakota race

PIERRE, S.D. (UPI) — In South Dakota where the politics are sometimes fast and furious, Gov. Bill Janklow and Democratic challenger Mike O'Connor have at least one thing in common: In their drive to win the November election.

Whichever candidate wins this fall may be forced to make his travels in a chauffeur-driven car. The crux of the common ground is each candidate's somewhat erratic driving record. Janklow recently received a warning letter from the Public Safety Department for compiling nine points for speeding and other traffic violations. Records show O'Connor has eight negative points on his record and has also received a warning. A driver who accumulates 15 negative points over a year or 22 negative points in two years can lose his license.

The warning letters are sent out by the department whenever a driver compiles half the number of points needed to lose a license.

But officer, I really did see an elephant

HOLLIDAYSBURG, Pa. (UPI) — No elephant jokes, please. Margaret Lightner really did wake up Friday to find a full-sized pachyderm cavorting in her backyard.

Bonnie the elephant is part of the traveling Great American Circus, which was in the western Pennsylvania community for a performance. Bonnie apparently broke her chain during the night and lumbered about three blocks to Mrs. Lightner's house. Neighbors spotted the animal, woke Mrs. Lightner and called local police. "I didn't believe it when I got the call," police dispatcher R.C. Miller said of his conversation with James Myers, 21, who lives next door to Mrs. Lightner and reported the incident. "I wanted to ask him what he had been drinking."

Mrs. Lightner said the neighborhood was shrouded in dense fog and mist when she came outside around 4:30 a.m. and, upon spotting her unusual visitor, at first thought, "I was seeing a vision." "It was an eerie feeling," she said. "You see this shadowy thing with its big ears flapping. Right away you know it was an elephant."

"Bonnie was here for quite a while. She enjoyed my trees immensely, wrapping herself around them and taking a few branches with her. She enjoyed eating my lawn. But she seemed very tame," Mrs. Lightner said.

Bonnie left 4-inch-deep footprints in the lawn, Mrs. Lightner said, but did not damage her garden. "I've got a garden with flowers and a lot of things. She sidestepped those daintily. But she did love my trees," she said.

Police arrived and tried to move Bonnie by prodding her with a hose, Mrs. Lightner said. But the animal — perhaps thinking she was being asked to perform — reared up on her hind legs.

Public TV

Schlaefle new general manager

GRANGEVILLE (UPI) — The State Board of Education wrapped up its two-day meeting in Grangeville Friday by appointing Jack Schlaefle as general manager of the Idaho public broadcasting system.

The position was created by the 1982 Legislature to coordinate the three station network.

Board members ordered Schlaefle, currently manager of KAIT-TV in Boise, to appear at a special meeting Tuesday with budget proposals for the public television system in Idaho.

Those proposals should include a plan to allocate the $80,000 appropriated by the Legislature to operate KAIT, KISU in Pocatello and KUID in Moscow during the next fiscal year, and a plan to implement a 9-percent spending cut ordered earlier this week by Gov. John Evans to help the state meet an expected $41.8 million revenue shortfall, the board said.

Board members initially voted to pay Schlaefle the salary he now earns as KAIT manager, but later amended its motion to postpone until the special meeting a decision on the salary level. They said the new central manager would assume his post July 1.

In submitting his job application, Schlaefle said he asked for a guarantee that any employees assigned to the central management staff be given an opportunity to continue their work if the structure later be changed by the Legislature. However, he withdrew that request prior to Friday's appointment.

At the board meeting earlier Friday, Idaho's superintendent of public instruction said it is uncertain whether $18.8 million of state public school funds will be transferred to local school districts on schedule this year.

Jerry Evans, told the board the quarterly payments are adjusted each year with a final payment on July 15.

"I keep saying it's not nearly that certain. It's only a possibility," Evans said.

Miner declares candidacy

BOISE (UPI) — Republican Doyle Miner made his official declaration of candidacy for state treasurer Friday by paying the required $100 filing fee, claiming a spot on the November ballot opposite the Democratic incumbent, Marjorie Ruth Moon.

Miner, executive director of the Idaho Pharmacy Board, is a former state representative from St. Anthony who now lives in Star, west of Boise. Officials said Miner appeared in the Idaho secretary of state's office Friday afternoon to make his official declaration and pay the filing fee for a successful primary election write-in candidate — one day before the deadline listed under state law.

He qualified for a ballot position by garnering 2,285 write-in votes in the May 25 primary election. He had needed 1,000 votes to fill the vacant spot on the Republican ballot.

The write-in effort was necessary because no GOP candidates for the treasurer's office surfaced prior to the primary filing deadline in April. Miner left the Legislature three years ago to become executive director of the Pharmacy Board. To return to elected office, he now must defeat Miss Moon, who is seeking a sixth four-year term.

The official has said he will resign his Pharmacy Board post later this year, probably in August or September, to devote more time to his campaign against Miss Moon, who was unopposed when she won a fifth term in 1978.

Funds approved for INEL testing

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A joint Senate-House conference committee has authorized legislation providing for $57 million to continue a nuclear reactor testing program at Idaho National Engineering Laboratory for the next two years.

House members had wanted to cut the programs funding to $30 million, said Sen. Steve Symms.

The appropriation was approved as part of the budget for the Nuclear Regulatory Commission.

The Idaho Republican said the committee also accepted a plan to continue the program beyond 1984 provided an international consortium of businesses and governments pool their resources to fund the project.

The committee authorized the NRC to contribute up to $5 million per year to the program over the subsequent three years.

Birds of Prey

Group cleared to join suit

BOISE (UPI) — A federal judge Friday cleared the way for a national agricultural organization to participate in a suit that challenges the legality of the government's expansion of the Snake River Birds of Prey Area in southern Idaho.

The American Farm Bureau Federation was granted permission by U.S. District Judge Fred M. Taylor to serve as a friend of the court in Sagebrush Rebellion Inc.'s fight against the Interior Department over a 1980 order setting aside from development nearly 483,000 acres for the raptors.

Before he left office after the 1980 Republican election landslide, then-Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus, a former Democratic governor of Idaho, issued an executive order withdrawing the acreage from development for 20 years.

Sagebrush Rebellion, which represents agricultural and development groups in several Western states, first sued Andrus in April 1980 over an Interior Department proposal in Congress to create an expanded bird refuge along the Snake River Canyon. The suit later was expanded to attack the November 1980 executive order.

After a 40-minute hearing Friday, Taylor told Farm Bureau lawyers they could file friend-of-the-court briefs within 10 days, so long as the documents didn't mirror briefs filed earlier in the case by other pro-development groups.

Court records also showed Sagebrush Rebellion is preparing to file a motion for summary judgment in the case, and the Interior Department is preparing to file a competing motion, indicating a ruling from Taylor may be delivered within the next few weeks.

No fee collection system for BLM

BOISE (UPI) — Most Idahoans who use Bureau of Land Management land for recreation will not be affected by a proposal to raise user fees because the BLM has not implemented any collection systems at its state campground facilities, officials said Friday.

Martin Zimmer, manager of the Boise BLM District, said the agency only charges recreation fees where services or facilities are provided.

Zimmer said those that will be affected by the proposed increase are those who use developed BLM campgrounds where fees are collected, those who participate in or sponsor competitive of commercial recreation activities on public land, those who use high-use areas where permits are issued to prevent overuse or damage to the resources and those who participate in large off-road vehicle events.

U.S. church membership is growing

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The tiny, conservative Christian — and Missionary Alliance — increased its membership rates by 9.04 percent in 1980, but church membership in general, while growing, still failed to keep up with the growth of the population.

The result: 134,816,943 persons were counted as church members in 1980, an increase of 1,347,253 over 1979. But the percentage of the U.S. population identified as church members slipped from 60.5 percent in 1979 to 58.7 percent in 1980.

The figures — the latest available — are contained in the new edition of the Yearbook of American and Canadian Churches, published for the National Council of Churches, by Abingdon Press.

And the increase in church membership brought some good news to the nation's beleaguered mainstream Protestant churches, which have been suffering a dramatic membership decline since the mid and late 1960s.

"I wouldn't yet call it a trend, but we are seeing some early indications that declines in mainline churches may be leveling off," said Constant Jaquet, the yearbook editor.

To underscore the point, Jaquet pointed to data showing a smaller loss for four mainline Protestant churches in 1980 than in 1979, with one of the four — the Lutheran Church — in America, actually posting a 0.7 percent gain in 1980.

The other three whose membership losses almost have ground to a standstill were the United Methodist Church, with a .7 percent loss, the American Lutheran Church, with a .4 percent loss and the United Church of Christ, with a .5 percent loss.

By contrast, a number of conservative bodies, like the Christian and Missionary Alliance, which added 15,724 members to bring its total to 189,710, showed healthy increases.

The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, which had 2,000 members, a growth of 3.81 percent to bring its total membership to 2,811,000, while the Assemblies of God grew by 6.34 percent.

The Baha'i Faith accepts all 'gods'

Israeli-based belief has Idaho members

By SUSAN GALLAGHER
 Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Global unity is the underlying philosophy of a worldwide religious group that includes a firmly established membership in southern Idaho.

Worldwide, the greatest growth of the 138-year-old Baha'i Faith is in rural areas, says Harry Massoth, a Baha'i member who lives in Jerome, in the United States, areas of significant growth include the Deep South.

The Baha'i (pronounced "bah-igh") Faith has been active in southern Idaho for more than a decade, according to Rene Davis, also of Jerome. Just how many Baha'is there are in area is hard to determine because of the geographic division of the faith's local assemblies, Davis says.

The Baha'i Faith is organized into an elected local assembly of nine persons, an elected national assembly and an international body, the Universal House of Justice, based in Israel. Sometime in their lives, Baha'is are expected to make a pilgrimage to the Holy Land.

Baha'i teachings emphasize the bonds between humans and nature, the equality of men and women, and the importance of the nuclear family, according to members. Baha'is acknowledge all major religions as significant in achieving the unity of mankind, and the founders of the major religions are viewed as having equal standing.

Practitioners of the faith believe that God manifests himself to man periodically through messengers such as Jesus Christ and Buddha, and that the most recent messenger was Baha'u'llah in the 19th century. Baha'is have few rituals and no professional clergy.

Recent activities of the Baha'is in southern Idaho included a Sun Valley summer session last week for children and adults.

Davis says the program encompassed youth and family-life counseling seminars and creative arts. Eighty to 100 Baha'is were expected.

Membership in southern Idaho spans all age groups and occupations, says Massoth, who is a plant researcher and a former executive for the National Conference of Christians and Jews.

The Baha'i Faith was founded in Iran, where Baha'is number about half a million persons, making them the country's largest religious minority. Baha'is have been killed by government firing squads in Iran, where followers of the faith are viewed as heretics. The executions have been officially opposed by the United Nations and a number of individual governments, including those of Canada and the United States.

Salvadoran officials killed

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (UPI) — The air force Friday mounted an operation to retrieve the bodies of El Salvador's deputy defense chief and other high-ranking military officials killed in a helicopter crash Thursday.

The Ministry of Defense denied rebel claims that insurgent forces shot down the helicopter, killing Col. Francisco Adolfo Castillo, assistant secretary of defense, and Col. Salvador Beltran Luna, head of the Commando Instruction Center and commander of Morazan province.

The rebel radio said meanwhile that a U.S.-supplied warplane made its first bomb attack on guerrilla positions since its arrival in El Salvador this week. It did not say whether the bombing caused any casualties.

An estimated 5,000 government soldiers continued to battle both rebels and bad weather in Morazan in the largest single operation of the war, aimed at dislodging rebels from Perquin, a village that used to have about 3,000 residents, 72 miles northeast of the capital of San Salvador.

The clandestine radio-Venceremos said rebel forces attacked the rear flanks of the relief column marching north from the provincial capital of San Francisco Gotera, about 18 miles south of Perquin.

"At 10:45 a.m. (Thursday) our forces used 81 mm mortars to attack the rear guard of the enemy, causing five killed or wounded in enemy artillery squads employed around Jocoaitique," a town midway between Perquin and Gotera, the radio said.

"At 1 p.m. (Thursday) an A-37 plane of unknown origin attacked out positions around Perquin, dropping six bombs," the radio said. If true, the attack would be the first by the U.S.-supplied A-37 fighter bomber since a shipment of six arrived in El Salvador Wednesday.

The Defense Ministry attributed the helicopter crash to "some sort of mechanical failure or a collision against some peak because of the bad weather in that region."

The helicopter went down "in the zone in which recent battles were fought between armed forces troops and terrorist groups" just south of the town of San Fernando, 71 miles northeast of San Salvador, a ministry spokesman said.

Also aboard the helicopter were a security guard and the pilot.

Red Army trial ends with death sentences

TOKYO (UPI) — A court sentenced two members of the United Red Army to death Friday, ending a 10-year-long trial of the terrorist group most notorious for the 1972 Lod airport massacre in Israel. One of the condemned defendants said she deserved to die.

Hiroko Nagata, 37, and Hiroshi Sakaguchi, 35, were convicted of murder and sentenced to die for the 1971-72 slayings of 14 fellow terrorists.

A third defendant was sentenced to 20 years imprisonment in connection with the slayings.

The slayings, which grew out of an internal split in the Red Army, took place between December 1971 and February 1972. The attack on Lod airport, in which 26 people were killed, took place a few months later in May 1972.

The defendants were also convicted of killing three people, including two policemen, in a gunbattle with police.

"I think the death sentence was only natural," Miss Nagata said through her attorney after the trial. "There shouldn't be any other punishment."

Vietnam opponents join forces

BANGKOK, Thailand (UPI) — Three factions fighting Vietnamese forces in Cambodia have united under a government-in-exile headed by deposed Cambodian leader Prince Norodom Sihanouk, diplomatic sources said Friday.

The coalition, formed to depose the Vietnamese-supported government of Heng Samrin, also includes former Prime Minister Son Sann and Khieu Samphan, leader of the Khmer Rouge.

In Singapore, U.S. Deputy Secretary of State Walter Stoessel called the report on the impending formation of an anti-Vietnamese coalition "excellent news."

"A new government in Cambodia will give the people in that country renewed political confidence and will show the way to peace and stability in Southeast Asia," said Stoessel, in Singapore, for talks with foreign ministers of the five-nation Association of Southeast Asian Nations.

A senior official traveling with Stoessel said discussions are under way on the question of giving supplies and support to the non-communist elements in the new coalition. But he ruled out arms supplies.

He said the United States has no intention of making direct contact with the Khmer Rouge because of its record of atrocities during its four-year rule, which ended with Vietnam's January 1979 invasion.

Vietnam maintains more than 150,000 troops in Cambodia.

Sihanouk, currently living in Pyongyang, North Korea, has not formally accepted the agreement which would make him president but is pledged to abide by the decision of the two other anti-Vietnamese groups.

The Malaysian news agency Bernama said the three faction leaders are tentatively scheduled to meet June 22 to sign the coalition agreement.

The breakthrough in the coalition talks came in secret talks in Thailand this week, diplomatic and intelligence sources said. Sources warned the accord could break down.

"But I have to admit they've never been this close before and it may actually work," one Western analyst said.

German film star Curt Jurgens dies

VIENNA, Austria (UPI) — West German movie actor Curt Jurgens, steely blue-eyed star of countless World War II epics, died of heart failure in a hospital Friday. He was 66.

Jurgens, who friends said had refused to slow down despite years of heart trouble and the replacement of three heart valves in an operation in the United States two years ago, had been hospitalized for the past two months.

His doctor, Anton Neumayr, said he had been making progress up to a week ago but suffered a relapse Monday.

Jurgens, once described by Brigitte Bardot as the sexiest man she knew, was the German-speaking movie world's third-biggest star. His death followed those of Austrian actress Romy Schneider May 29 and West German film director Rainer Werner Fassbinder June 10.

Jurgens, who made a total of more than 160 films, began his film career in 1936 with "Imperial Waltz." He established himself internationally with performances in "The Enemy Below" in 1957 and a year later in "Inn of the Sixth Happiness," co-starring with Ingrid Bergman.

Blond-haired and blue-eyed, Jurgens went on to star in such films as "The Blue Angel" (1958), "I Am At The Stars" (1959), "Nicholas and Alexandra" (1971) and the James Bond thriller "The Spy Who Loved Me" (1977).

Upset Banks loses triple jump in big meet

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — Robert Cannon upset American record-holder Willie Banks in the triple jump and Kim Schnurpfell won the women's 10,000-meter crown Friday night in the U.S. Outdoor Track and Field Championships.

The meet is sponsored by Mobil. In other final events, Jim Heiring won the men's 20-kilometer walk, Susan Liers Westerfield captured the women's 5,000-meter walk, and the Stanford Track Club women's 4 X 800 relay team set a meet record with a time of 8:22.26.

Cannon, who competes for the Athletic Attic, scored a dramatic victory when he soared 55 feet, 4 inches on the last jump of the day to push Banks down to a shocking third place, behind Cannon's teammate Paul Jordan, who had leaped 54-10 1/2 in the trials.

Banks, who entertained the crowd all throughout and was heavily favored, could manage only 54-10 1/2, and he fouled on his last attempt.

"I thought I could have won it all along," said Cannon, who won his first American title. "It was just a matter of putting everything together."

Banks complained about a dead spot on the jumping runway, saying, "I tried everything possible, and I just couldn't adjust to the problem. It was just one of those days. I just couldn't get over the dead spot."

Schnurpfell, a junior at Stanford, recorded the third-best American time of the year, 33:25.88, in winning the 10,000 over Julie Shea of Athletics West, who was second in 33:38.74.

Schnurpfell said that she tightened up a bit when Shea passed her with about five laps to go before retaking the lead. She said, "Then I said to myself, 'Just relax.' Otherwise, I would have bagged the whole race and gone to last place."

Heiring, of the Athletic Attic, won the men's 20-kilometer walk with a time of 1 hour, 30 minutes, 24.3 seconds, beating Ray Sharp, who was clocked in 1:32:29.8. The first two finishers in most events qualify for the U.S. national team which competes in three major international meets this summer.

Liers, of the Island TC, took the women's 5,000-meter walk in 24:56.6. She lapped the entire field, including second-place finisher Bonnie Dillon of the West Valley TC.

The Stanford team Evonne Hannus, Roger Jacobs, and John Griffiths, and Tami Esmoning broke the three-year-old meet record of 6:31.4 held by the Oral Roberts TC. In second place were the LA Mercantiles in 6:38.26.

In qualifying, even Evonne Asford, who led in April, she would not race any more this season, surprised everyone by showing up in the second heat of the women's 100-meter dash. And she won it easily in 11.17 seconds.

Qualifying along with Asford were Merlene Ottey (11.12), Chandra Cheeseborough (11.35), Alice Brown (11.44), and Jeanette Bolden (11.45).

Carl Lewis, who was disappointed in the timing when the qualifying for the long jump was postponed, cruised to an easy victory in his heat of the 100-meter trials in 10.23. His sister, Carol, meanwhile, was the leading qualifier in the women's long jump at 21 feet 10 inches.

Lewis said he would not comment about his performances until completing the eagerly awaited long jump finals Saturday night. There has been speculation he is about to announce he will not compete for the University of Houston next season.

Other qualifiers in the men's 100 were Calvin Smith (10.39), Mel Latany (10.52) and Georgia football star Herschel Walker (10.33). Stanley Floyd, Lewis' Houston teammate, was forced to withdraw from the 100 just before his heat because of a pulled hamstring.

Argentina, Brazil advance in World Cup tournament

MADRID, Spain. (UPI) — Defending champion Argentina, its players crying in joy, defeated Hungary 4-1 Friday to keep its World Cup hopes alive, and Brazil, samba-danced soccer-style for a 4-1 victory over Scotland, and an almost certain second-round berth in the 24-nation tournament.

Earlier Friday, Italy and Peru drew 1-1, ending the drought of goals in Group 1 in which the first two games were scoreless ties.

But it was the South American powers who commanded center stage, with the drama focused on the Group 1 clash in Alicante.

It was there Argentina was fighting to salvage its pride on two fronts following the military surrender to Britain in the Falkland Islands conflict and a 1-0 loss to Belgium in the opening game of this 12th World Cup.

A defeat would have meant Argentina becoming the first defending champion to make a first-round exit since Brazil in 1966 and the Hungarians were in a confident mood after its record-setting 10-1 massacre of El Salvador.

But the South Americans responded to the challenge like true champions, paced by superstar Diego Maradona with two goals. The other Argentine goals came from Daniel Bertoni and Osvaldo Ardiles, the former club player of England's Tottenham.

Hatspar who has vowed never to play for another British team after losing a cousin in the Falklands. Gabor Poloskei scored Hungary's lone goal with 14 minutes to go.

There were emotional scenes as the Argentine players left the field, with several in tears as they acknowledged the waving blue-and-white flags of their fans.

The victory provided Argentina with a lifeline but even if it beats El Salvador, as expected the group could still end in a three-way tie if the Belgians defeat the Central Americans but then lose to Hungary.

But there was no disputing Argentina's mastery display Friday. After an early series of nightmare misses, Bertoni opened the scoring from close range in the 27th minute and two minutes later fired in a shot which goalkeeper Ferenc Meszaros could only parry, leaving Maradona with a tap-in.

The second half was only three minutes old when Maradona struck again, this time driving home a left-footer from inside the box. Ardiles added to Hungary's torment with the fourth goal in the 61st minute.

Brazil, the three-time champion, showed the form which has made it the favorite with its second comeback victory in Group 6, this time at the expense of the Scots in Seville.

The Soviet Union shocked the South American masters by scoring first, but went on to lose 2-1. Now it is Scotland's turn to feel the steel edge of Brazil's rapier attack.

Scotland, a 5-2 winner against New Zealand in its opener, went ahead after 17 minutes when David Narcey blasted home a headed pass from John Wark. But as the Scots wilted in the heat, Brazil mounted a wave of attacks and tied it 12 minutes before the half with Zico demonstrating his banana-kick specialty by bending the ball round Scotland's defensive wall from a free kick.

The rampaging Brazilians left Scotland in tatters in the second half. Oscar headed in a corner from Junior to make it 2-1 in the 48th minute. Eder chipped over goalkeeper Alan Rough 36 minutes later and Falcao wrapped it up with four minutes left with a blistering 35-yarder off the post.

The result left Brazil at the head of its group with four points and almost certain to breeze through to the next three victories after its meeting with New Zealand. The scene is now set for Scotland and the Soviet Union to fight for the other berth, providing first-time qualifier New Zealand does not produce any upsets.

The Italy-Peru encounter lacked lustre, but at least provided Group 1 with a goal.

Bruno Conti ended 198 barren minutes to give Italy a first-half lead, but with seven minutes left Peru evened it when a shot by Ruben Diaz was deflected into the net by Italian defender Fulvio Collovati.

Following earlier goalless ties between Peru and Cameroon and Italy and Poland, Group 1 followers were beginning to forget what a goal looked like.

Devlin on top of anonymous Open leaders

Watson, Kite, Jack keep close

By BILL LYON
Knight-Ridder Newspapers

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. — So who is winning the U.S. Open, you ask? Well, mostly the unknown, the unretired and the unmenged.

On a chilled, overcast kind of day, under stark-belly skies and with the sea mist like post-nasal drip, the second round of the Open turned the leader board from Who's Who into "Who's There?"

There's Bruce Devlin, still hanging in there, and that wouldn't have been so much a surprise if this had been 16 years ago.

And there's Lawrence, Ronnie Rinker, who sounds like he ought to be playing safety for Bear Bryant with all those other Billy Bob's and Jimmy Joe's down at Alabama.

And there's Scott Simpson, whose career victories can be counted on one finger.

And there's Calvin Peete, a one-time itinerant vegetable picker who used to wear diamonds in his teeth and say things like: "Now this is what they mean by a million-dollar smile."

And there's Lyn Litt, who in 8 1/2 years on the Tour is still winless.

Had enough?

Part of the charm of the Open always has been that it is just that open, to anyone who can get in it, the same way Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid got into banks. By shooting their way in.

Devlin, virtually inactive on the Tour since 1972, last in 69 on his opening 70 and is alone at 113, a commendable five under par on one of the game's nastier courses.

Closest to him was Floridian Larry Rinker, 24, who's needed four tries before he earned his Tour card. He shot 67, the best round of the tournament, and was three under at 141, two behind Devlin.

The two make the look more like a charity buffet than the Open. Devlin is 195th on the money list, Rinker 210th.

Third after 36 holes, at 142, was Simpson, while Loft, Peete, first-round co-leader Billy Rogers and Andy North, who won the 1978 Open but nothing since, were tied for fourth at 143.

That makes seven golfers under par heading into today's third round (TV-ABC, 1:30 p.m. MDT). And where are the more familiar names, the bigger guns?

Still, with a close enough. Tom Watson and Tom Kite, for example, were among those at even-par 144: So was Jack Nicklaus, who shot 70 yesterday. And David Graham, the defending champion, was positioned nicely at 145.

Devlin, the solo leader, had seven birdies, seven pars, four bogeys and very nearly an eagle in his second round. His third shot at the scenic par-five 13, a wedge, sent the ball into the cup, but it popped back out and spun three feet behind the hole.

Devlin said he had been driving with impressive accuracy after switching, in desperation, to one of those new metal drivers.

"I put one in my bag at 5:30 p.m. Wednesday, which is a hell of a gamble," he said. "I had driven so badly all during practice, and then, on the range, there was an equipment manufacturer's representative. He got me to try a metal driver and I hit a bucket of balls and said, why not? I've always been a traditionalist and thought those kind of clubs were a little gimmicky. I never thought I'd be using one."

Of all the surprise names on the leader board, Rinker was the one requiring the most research. He equaled the 24 hole Friday, draining a 35-foot putt, and birdied the next two. He closed out the front side with one more birdie sandwiched around three bogeys, and then finished with a sturish, with birdies on each of the last three holes. He weighs only 142 pounds and looks about 12 years old. He hasn't cashed a check in the last nine tournaments.

The first time I saw this course, in practice, I shot 58, with no bogeys," he said. "Then, in the first round of the Bing Crosby, I had an 83."

"You have to have an illusion that this is just another golf tournament," he suggested. "And that light mist moistened the greens. If we get this type of weather the last two days, six under will be a good 72-hole score. If we get wind again, even par will be good."

Rinker strays from usual golfing form

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (UPI) — To Larry Rinker, it is just another tournament. But for the struggling tour pro from Florida, he did not play Friday like he usually does in other tournaments.

Rinker had survived the 36-hole cut on three times in 17 previous tournaments this year, but shot a 5-under-par 67 at Pebble Beach Friday to vault into contention at the midway point of the U.S. Open.

"When I went out to play today I just wanted to play a good round," said Rinker, who had a 2-over-74 on Thursday. "Then, when I eagled the second hole, I started playing aggressively."

Rinker reached the green in two at the par-5 second and made a 35-foot putt for his three. He then birdied the third and fourth holes. But after a mid-round slump in which he bogeyed three out of four holes, he ran in three straight birdies to close his round.

He made putts of 15, 20 and 30 feet at the final three holes.

"I look at this as just another golf tournament," said Rinker, 24, of Orlando, Fla. "The press builds this tournament up. If we built it like the press does, we would be in a heap of trouble."

So does that mean Rinker will not feel any pressure when he embarks on his third round Saturday?

"Well, I didn't say that," Rinker said.

Despite having won only $2,112 on the tour in this, his second year on the circuit, Rinker has the tour's low round this year — a 62 at Tallahassee. He shot that score in the opening round, but followed that up with rounds of 75, 71 and 74 and finished tied for 27th.

Rinker, with shaggy blond hair and looking even more youthful than his 24 years, picked up some support from the younger set on the golf course Friday.

"There were a lot of people hollering," said Rinker. "It's nice to have people who don't know cheer for you. I usually don't have many people following me around."

Ex-All Pro claims 40 percent of NFLers have used coke

By BILL BRUBAKER
New York Daily News

NEW YORK — Former All-Pro defensive end Carl Eller, a rehabilitated cocaine addict who is now a paid drug consultant to the National Football League, has claimed that 40 percent of the NFL's 1,500 players have experimented with cocaine and that 15 percent are "problem users" of the illegal drug.

In a separate interview with the New York Daily News, co-author Pete Rozelle admitted that illegal drug use among NFL players "could be a larger problem for us than it is in society."

Eller said his estimates of drug use are based on his own experience and recent conversations with dozens of NFL players.

"I'd say every club in the league has at least one problem user and that there are several problem clubs in the league," Eller said.

Eller defined problem clubs as "clubs that have four or five players that need serious care." He declined to name the clubs.

"Also believe that between 20 percent to 25 percent of NFL players are getting into the problem area as far as misuse of all kinds of drugs and alcohol," Eller said. "The combination of cocaine and alcohol gives us the greatest problems."

Rozelle said in previous interviews that he did not believe drug abuse was a major problem among NFL players.

"My personal opinion is that this is not a major problem for us," Rozelle told the Daily News in 1980. "The problem of marijuana and cocaine exists in the NFL, but to a lesser extent than for people of the same age in society today."

Rozelle said he changed his opinion after speaking with Eller and examining information gathered by the NFL security staff.

"Carl has told us enough to indicate that it's not a wave of drug abuse," Rozelle said. "But he gave us his feelings, having gone through it, of what percentage on each team uses drugs. It's just guesswork on his part but we feel it's knowledgeable guesswork."

Asked to elaborate on Eller's "guesswork," Rozelle said, "I wouldn't want to get into that with you. But in private talks with him, we've developed information."

If Eller's estimates are correct, there are proportionately more cocaine users in the NFL than in the rest of society. According to the National Institute on Drug Abuse, an estimated 14 to 17 million Americans — 6 to 8 percent of the population — have used cocaine at least once.

These most recent statistics are three years old, however, and are expected to increase when new estimates are released this fall.

Eller's comments come a week after former NFL player Don Reese charged in a Sports

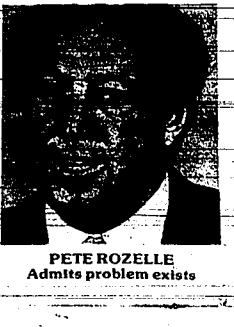

Illustrated story that cocaine use is widespread in the NFL. Reese, who was convicted in 1977 of selling cocaine, admitted using the drug throughout his NFL career and said he saw prominent players using it during his tenure with the Miami Dolphins, New Orleans Saints and San Diego Chargers.

Reese also charged that the NFL "turned its back" on him when he sought help for his addiction in 1980. Rozelle vigorously denied that and charged that most of Reese's allegations in the story were either erroneous or exaggerated.

"It's really unfortunate that a fellow who hasn't made it has put a point on all the players in the league," Rozelle said. "I don't think that's fair. We have a drug problem but we haven't put our heads in the sand. We are fighting it every way that we can. (The NFL, which has had a drug policy since 1971, implemented a rehabilitation program in 1980.)"

Assessor may fight Gooding tax hike order

By MARTY TRILLHAASE
Times-News writer

GOODING — Gooding County Assessor Brent Giesler received his anticipated order from the State Tax Commission Thursday to increase the assessed valuation of residential properties for taxing purposes.

While the order calls for a smaller increase than expected, Giesler says he still doesn't like it.

He plans to meet Monday with the Gooding County commissioners to discuss his next step, which he says is likely to be a battle in Fifth District Court.

However, the Tax Commission can make its own assessment adjustments when it sits as the state board of equalization in August to review county assessments.

Giesler, who has resisted previous directives to increase property assessments, was the subject of a Tax Commission hearing last week.

As a result of that hearing, the Tax Commission issued the following order:

- Giesler — must — increase — the assessed value of residential property within the city of Gooding by 15 percent.
- Initially, Tax Commission officials wanted the assessment of that property to rise by 20 percent.
- The value of residential property within the city of Gooding must be increased by 17 percent. Earlier, Giesler was told to increase the assessment by 18 percent.
- Increase the value of rural subdivision lots by 15 percent and increase the value of rural residential tracts by 14 percent. Originally, Tax Commission officials were seeking a 20 percent increase in the assessments.
- It was considerably less than what they first proposed, but I still don't agree with it," Giesler says.

Under Idaho's One Percent Initiative, taxing rates are set in terms of market-value dollar amounts. Tax Commission officials say the increases are required in order to bring the assessments on those properties up to the market-value level.

"They've arrived at that conclusion by comparing the sales value of properties to the assessed value. If a pattern of significant discrepancy exists between the sales price and the assessed value, the Tax Commission can order assessors to 'index,' or pro-rate, all similar properties that were not assessed formally to the new market-value figure."

But Giesler is challenging the concept on several fronts.

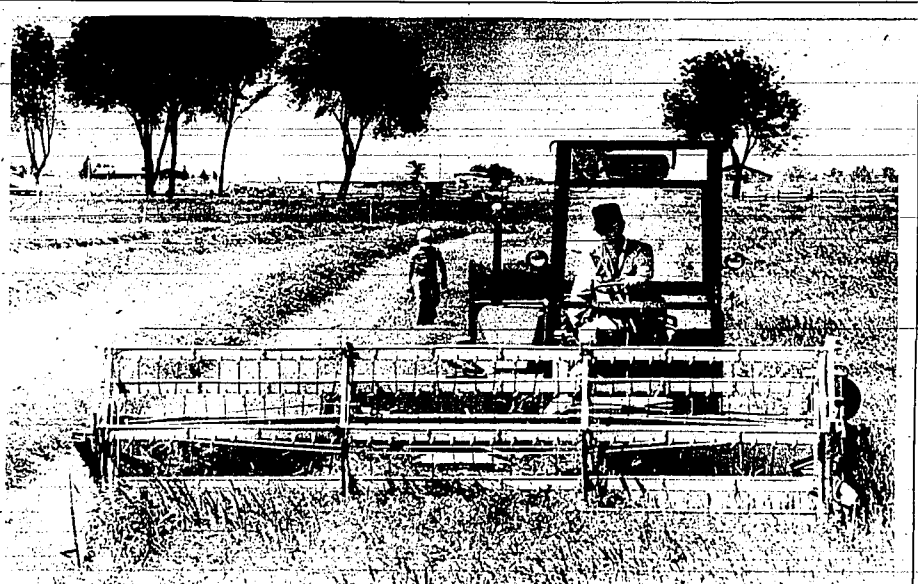

Giesler contends the Tax Commission's order is based on arbitrary figures that fail to take into account the terms of a sale.

"The figures would place some properties over market value and decrease equity in taxation," Giesler says. He says that the Tax Commission has no authority to order assessors to bring assessments up to 1982 market values since it has not adopted rules and regulations to implement such a move.

The order represents an attempt by the Tax Commission to usurp the authority of the county assessors, Giesler says.

Regardless of his position, Giesler says his office is not equipped to comply with the order, which requires him to draft and mail 6,500 new assessment notices by June 28.

"We're on a manual system. We're not on a computer. There isn't any way physically possible that I can do that, even if I wanted to."

Board will decide Monday

CSI president may get new contract

By GLEN WARCHOL
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Recovering from an illness earlier this year, James L. "Doc" Taylor probably will be given the option to continue as president of the College of Southern Idaho, according to college trustees.

Taylor has been a driving force behind the community college since its inception in 1964. During that time, he has developed a reputation among state legislators and federal education officials for his ingenuity and tenaciousness when it comes to garnering money for CSI. In late December, Taylor was hospitalized, reportedly for a recurring blood disorder, and was granted a leave of absence from his duties, including his annual trip to the Legislature to appeal for funding. It was the first year he had not appeared before the Legislature.

Taylor returned to his duties, at least on a part-time basis, shortly before the end of the spring term and appeared at commencement ceremonies.

According to members of the CSI board of trustees, the board is satisfied with Taylor's health, and it will offer him his annual contract at Monday's board meeting.

However, Taylor and his doctor ultimately will decide whether he has recovered sufficiently to resume his leadership role, according to trustee Bob Blaseck.

Considering Taylor's past performance and contribution to the college, the contract offer is more or less a formality, said Chairman LeRoy Craig. The real decision is Taylor's.

"I feel that a contract will be offered to him; I feel he will accept a contract; and I feel he will continue,"

Craig said. "But that's just my opinion."

Support for Taylor also came from the board's most recent member, Thad Scholtes, who was appointed to the board in November.

"I would think the sentiment of the board is to offer him a contract, and it's up to him whether he wants to accept it," Scholtes said. "He's going to make his own mind up, as he always has. If he doesn't feel up to it, he'll turn us down."

Taylor, who is on vacation, could not be reached for comment.

Council members say health reviews needed

By STEPHANIE SCHOROW
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Like the weather, the high cost of medical care often is talked about but seldom acted upon. The rescue of a local health planning council by the Region IV Development Association Inc., reflects a commitment to try to turn talk into action.

While members of the Sub-Area Council of the Idaho Health Systems Agency express reservations about the council's past effectiveness in reviewing health-care plans and issuing recommendations, they continue to support the idea of local health planning.

Without an organization like the council, they say, health decisions might be made by state officials without heeding the wishes of local residents.

Because of the cut-off of federal funds for its parent agency, the IHS, the Region IV Sub-Area Council (SAC) had seemed destined for demise "until the development association threw it a lifeline by offering to provide it with clerical services. In effect, the SAC now will be under the 'umbrella' of the association."

The structure of the SAC — which now has 29 members appointed by Magic Valley county commissioners and is governed by both federal regulations and its own bylaws — remains to be determined, says Betty Ann Clarke, a SAC representative from Camas County.

Just how the new organization will fit into the complex certificate-of-need process is uncertain, Clarke says the group will meet in August to develop guidelines. County commissioners will be asked to reimburse the travel expenses of members from their county.

Clarke was ecstatic the group would continue to exist. "I just whooped for joy," she says. "We won't be bothered or incumbered by federal regulations in an independent, volunteer group. We're going to do watchdog health planning."

There's a lot of pitfalls in keeping planning on a local level. (But I'm a firm believer that's where it should be done. We depended on the feds too long," she says.

However, even SAC supporters say the organization had not achieved its original aims, although they attribute it in part to the choking effect of federal requirements.

"There's been a tremendous amount of effort. What it generated, I'm disappointed in," says Louise Rehwalt of Paul, a long-time SAC member. Yet, "I've always been hopeful. I've been discouraged, but I've been hopeful."

The SAC grew out of the Comprehensive Health Planning Act passed by Congress in 1970. A Magic Valley CHIP unit was formed to review health-care proposals, according to Dr. Charles Parker of Hagerman, who was involved both in the CHIP and the IHS.

The Idaho Health Systems Agency, funded in 1975, superseded the CHIP. Local sub-area councils, representing both consumers and health providers, were formed in 1976.

The IHS was to work alongside the Statewide Health Planning and Development Agency (SHPPA) under the supervision of the Statewide Health Coordinating Council (SHCC). The SHCC was a voluntary health-

Power planner predicts greater need

By RON ZELLAR
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Northwest must continue seeking conservation and new sources of electricity despite a lull in the demand for power, Bob Saxvik told a statewide convention of Rotarians meeting Friday in Twin Falls.

Saxvik, formerly of Burley, is vice chairman of the Northwest Power Planning Council, the organization charged by Congress with guiding the Bonneville Power Administration in assuring the region's energy needs.

Noting that Raft River Rural Electric of Malta has taken the lead in a power consortium that is proposing a hydroelectric project at Eagle Rock, Saxvik said the council is looking for ways to establish a timetable for such projects to give assurance to crops that they are not risking their money needlessly.

Three of the council's members plan to meet in July with the Pacific Northwest Electric Co., the consortium affiliated with Raft River in the Eagle Rock project, Saxvik said after his luncheon address to the District 540 Rotary conference.

PNGC has posed several questions to the council in writing, in an effort to evaluate construction projects, he said.

The BPA might have to choose its "resource options." A sponsor would agree to do the initial work, such as engineering studies and licensing, and then hold the project until a particular decision date.

The council then would decide whether to go ahead with the project, delay it or cancel it. In any case, however, the region would bear the cost of the option chosen.

Too much time has been spent trying to fix the blame for cancellation of two of five nuclear power plants in Washington state, Saxvik said.

Wall Street ultimately killed the two plants, he said, when it refused to sell any more low-interest bonds for the projects, which had risen in cost from $4 billion to $22.5 billion.

Reacting to criticism of BPA's conservation program, Saxvik said the council was empowered by Congress to look to conservation first, among the region's resources.

"I don't know of any conservation program that is any more costly than building any more of the WPPSS plants," he said.

Virus strikes fish hatchery, killing half the fry

WENDELL — A virus at the Niagara Springs steelhead trout hatchery has killed nearly half of the 1.9 million fry placed in the facility's raceways, said officials say the steelhead-rearing program will not be hampered seriously.

Evan Parrish, a spokesman for the state Department of Fish and Game, said the disease is similar to a cold or the flu in humans, and has existed throughout the Columbia and Snake river drainage areas for several years.

Two strains of the virus, IPN and IHV, have been identified, each affecting different parts of the fish's body. Both are fatal to fish that contract the disease.

Young fish are particularly susceptible, Parrish said, and as many as 80 percent of the fry have died in some raceways at the Niagara hatchery. Others still in tanks in the hatchery building have not been affected, however.

Idaho Power Co. spokesman Larry

Taylor said the utility has asked the University of Idaho's School of Fisheries to submit a proposal for researching the problem and preventing it. Idaho Power provided the hatchery for Fish and Game to operate.

Officials from the school are scheduled to meet with representatives from Idaho Power and Fish and Game sometime next week.

A similar problem at Niagara Springs in 1973 prompted state officials to kill all of the hatchery's fish and disinfect the facility, Parrish said. But hatchery managers had learned to live with the problem in recent years, taking certain preventive measures to avoid serious losses.

Fish that survive the two viruses appear to develop normally and experience no problems when released back into rivers and streams, he said.

The steelhead-release program for the year is not in serious jeopardy, Parrish said. The department still has 400,000 fry at a facility on the Pahringer River, and it also could recover surplus fish from a federal hatchery near Hagerman.

Retired FBI agents hold Jackpot convention

By SUSAN GALLAGHER
Times-News writer

JACKPOT — J. Edgar Hoover died in 1972, but scores of his agents are alive and well — and 30 of them are in Jackpot.

Retired FBI agents from the Northwest, Nevada and Montana began arriving Friday at Cactus Pete's for a weekend convention.

Collectively, the conversations among men who devoted 25 and 30 years to the FBI could constitute an oral history of the bureau, and the influence of the legendary Hoover. Two of the former agents, Jack Newell and George Lee, retired in 1975 and 1978, respectively, after a combined total of 55 years of FBI work; 36 of them in southern Idaho. Both men live in Twin Falls.

There are more than 6,000 retired agents in the United States, according to Newell, and through regional chapters; they try to meet regularly to advance their knowledge of FBI developments.

Retired agents also have assisted their comrades.

Newell said retirees raised several million dollars to fight the wiretapping charges brought against W. Mark Felt in connection with the 1970s activities of the Weather Underground political organization. Felt is a

Twin Falls native who rose to occupy the FBI's No. 2 position.

Changes within the bureau range from a different perspective in pursuing criminal cases to relaxation of the much-begrudged dress code, Lee and Newell said Friday.

"Years ago, we would have been wearing a suit and tie, even in a place like this," Lee said as he glanced around at Cactus Pete's coffee shop. Agents "went around and around on that thing for years," on grounds that their clothing often made them conspicuous while investigating cases.

Hoover insisted on suits and hats, however, as it was only recently that agents were told they could dress to fit the circumstances. And the focus of investigations has shifted dramatically, Newell says.

"For years, we were involved in investigations of the interstate transportation of stolen vehicles," he says. "Now, the bureau is more interested in car-theft rings, white-collar crimes, anti-racketeering and corruption in union activities."

While the Magic Valley has escaped some of the crimes that fall under the bureau's jurisdiction, southern Idaho had enough crime to keep agents stimulated, Newell says.

"There were criminal types who

Judge Ward refuses to end teen's robbery prison sentence

By MARTY TRILLHAASE
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Judge Theron Ward refused Friday to end an 18-year-old Twin Falls man's seven-year prison sentence.

The sentence had been imposed for the robbery of an elderly woman in her home earlier this year.

The defendant, Kirby Anthony, did appear in Fifth District Court when his lawyer, Mr. Powers, asked Ward to reconsider the sentence.

Powers noted that Ward had denied a request earlier to bring Anthony to Twin Falls to testify at the hearing.

Anthony was one of two men arrested for the Jan. 8 robbery of Sheila Smith, 131, Fifth Ave. E. Charges against Anthony's co-defendant, his 19-year-old brother, Mike, were dismissed in February. At the time, prosecutors said they had been misled about the older brother apparently had attempted to stop the robbery.

According to the charges, Kirby Anthony convinced the woman to allow him inside her home to use the telephone. Once inside, he sprayed tear gas in her face and robbed the victim of her money. The older Anthony remained outside during the incident.

Kirby Anthony was sentenced to a seven-year prison term on March 5. Defense lawyers had attempted to avoid prison for the man, but Ward's decision was substantially below the 30-year maximum penalty for robbery in Idaho.

Powers contended that his client should be released from prison in view of his age.

"I think Mr. Anthony's concern is, he's young, basically," Powers said. "Whatever effect that environment has had on Mr. Anthony has already happened."

In lieu of prison, Powers asked Ward to either place Anthony on a 120-day term at the North Idaho Correctional Institute at Cottonwood, a move that could lead to probation, or commute the prison sentence to a shorter term in the county jail.

But Prosecutor Harry DeHaan said the punishment fit the crime. Noting the defendant's prior record of juvenile offenses, he urged Ward not to alter the sentence.

"Kirby Anthony made a little old lady in a wheelchair and took her money," DeHaan said. "I think he's getting exactly the type of education he's asked for."

The prosecutor's comment prompted the defendant's older brother, Barry Anthony, who was present in the courtroom, to ask if DeHaan had a vendetta against his family.

In denying the motion, Ward left open the possibility that he may alter his decision at a later time. He said the request was premature, coming just three months after the sentence was imposed, and he said the seven-year sentence holds the potential for an early parole.

In other court matters Friday:

Grady Olsen, 21, of Boise, was sentenced for two first-degree burglary convictions and a misdemeanor drunken-driving offense. Ward placed Olsen on a three-year probation and ordered him to undergo alcoholic treatment in lieu of a suspended prison sentence of up to 15 years. DeHaan offered no objection to defense lawyer Greg Fuller's request for probation.

Derrell Dumas, 20, of Buhl, pleaded innocent to a charge of aggravated battery. Dumas, who is free without bond, is charged with beating 36-year-old Mar-Lee Vaughn of Buhl, the defendant's cousin and the baby-sitter of his child, on May 3. No date for the trial, anticipated to last two days, was set.

Debbie Allen, 21, of Hansen, pleaded guilty to a charge that she wrote a bogus $157 check to the Falls Eye Center, 444 Shoshone St. E., on Dec. 17. She could be ordered to serve up to three years in prison for the offense.

Accident triggers power outage

TWIN FALLS — An automobile accident triggered a brief power outage Thursday night on the north and east sides of Twin Falls.

An Idaho Power spokesman said he received a call from the Twin Falls Police Department at about 10 p.m., saying that a pickup truck had struck a power pole, leaving live wires on the ground.

Officials switched off the line and restored power about 10 minutes later. Some 1,867 customers were affected. The truck sustained $1,000 in damages, according to police. The driver, Wesley Hutton of Buhl, was cited for reckless driving. There were no injuries.

Beans Inc. criminal case has trial date set

SALT LAKE CITY — The trial of the former mayor of Salinas, Calif., James Woods, and his former employee in connection with a fire at a warehouse has been scheduled for August.

It was agreed in a pre-trial conference Thursday that Woods and Martin Taylor of Madera, Calif., will go on trial Aug. 23 on charges of arson and insurance fraud. The criminal charges in connection with the fire at the Beans Inc. warehouse in Filer three years ago were filed in Salt Lake City because one of a group of insurance companies whose policies covered the warehouse is based there, as is the insurance adjuster who investigated the fire.

Earlier this month, Woods said he could not afford to hire a lawyer and asked the court to appoint one for him. That request was denied, according to a spokesman for the Salt Lake County Attorney's Office.

Woods was president of Commodity Marketing Corp., which owned the Beans Inc. warehouse in Filer, but he said he has been unemployed since the time of the warehouse fire.

Coroner rules man's death was accidental

BOISE — The Ada County coroner's office has ruled that the death of a Gooding man stemmed from injuries he received in an automobile accident north of Twin Falls last week.

Filer state police officers had noted that 83-year-old John Vernon Bumgarner had been ill at the time of the accident.

Bumgarner died Wednesday at St. Alphonsus Hospital in Boise. According to a spokesman for the coroner's office, the cause of death was congestive heart failure and a fractured cervical vertebra. The death was listed as accidental, and no autopsy was performed.

Bumgarner was injured June 11, when a car, driven by his wife, Neva Bumgarner, collided with a south-bound car at the U.S. 93 and 144 interchange.

State police said the collision occurred when Bumgarner's north-bound car attempted a left turn in planning group. The SHPDA was composed of paid professionals within the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare.

The primary aim of the complicated system was to hold down health-care costs by setting a state health plan and scrutinizing health-care proposals to see if they were needed according to the plan.

In 1980, when a certificate-of-need law was passed, another group, the Idaho Health Facility Review Board, was added to the system. That gubernatorial appointed group was to make all final certificate-of-need decisions.

Noting those agencies were mandated by the federal government, Parker says the system obviously was designed for a bigger state than Idaho.

In the last four years, the Region IV SAC has reviewed a variety of proposals affecting Magic Valley residents, including: the addition of long-term care beds at Blaine County Hospital; expansion of the Magic Valley Regional Medical Center facilities; creation of a Jerome dialysis clinic; and the development of shelter care homes for the mentally retarded in Twin Falls and Rupert.

The SAC's recommendations were not always followed. For example, the local SAC and the IHSA board recommended approval of the Rupert shelter care home. But the SHPDA recommended disapproval and a certificate of need was denied.

Also, SAC members are restricted severely in what they could do as an advisory group, says SAC member Brett Brailford of Wendell.

For example, three groups, including the Idaho Migration Council, applied for federal funds to run a Burley migrant health clinic. The SAC could not choose between them; it had to review each separately, instead. It approved two of the three, in effect leaving any real decision to another agency.

Dr. George Warner of Twin Falls, a member of the Idaho Facilities Review Board, said, "I would question whether the CON (certificate of need) process has been cost effective. . . I question that because health care costs are still rising."

Warner does feel the review process has improved the area's quality of health care by requiring high standards for new projects.

Yet Parker, Warner, Rehwalt and Brailford say they support local input into certificate-of-need decisions.

"I think the people in the local community being affected by the application should have some means of input," Warner says.

"I got reservations and I got pluses (about the SAC)," Brailford says. "I'm afraid if local participation is not continued then that decision-making process will revert to the state entirely."

SAC members question whether leaving all certificate-of-need reviews to SHPDA allows for adequate local input. SHPDA does not mandate public hearings, although they can be held on request of the applicant or any interested parties. But hearings may be held in Boise, not necessarily in the area affected.

The Idaho Health Facilities Review Board also is concerned about the effect of the IHSA's demise. Warner and two board members have been appointed to a committee to study the situation.

"Right now at this point, no one seems to know how this (the new SAC) will work. It's all a matter of funding," Clarke says.

would leave the major metropolitan areas and think they were losing themselves in the remote portions of Nevada and Idaho," he says. While he was working in southern Idaho, five bank burglaries were under investigation simultaneously, and the persons who were ranked third and fourth on the FBI's "10-most-wanted-suspects" list were arrested in the Sawtooth Mountains.

There were major arrests from time to time, but by and large, the notion that FBI agents led glamorous lives is fiction, Lee says.

"I think a lot of that started with radio programs and the Lindbergh trial," he says. "Our work was satisfying. When a case was seen through to prosecution, there was something tangible as a result of your efforts."

Both Newell and Lee met Hoover and felt his influence during most of their careers.

"He was a disciplinarian," Newell says. "There were rules, and you abided by them. There has been some criticism of him, but most agents of our vintage highly respected Mr. Hoover, and would readily lay down our lives" because of the image he cast.

THE ACES BOBBY WOLFF

"Habit is a cable. We weave a thread of it every day, and at last we cannot break it." - Horace Mann.

Most declarers would lose today's capricious slam simply because of habit. Only the most careful approach will alert declarer to danger and then he may think of the plan to make the slam.

Dummy's heart-ace wins and declarer is lulled to carelessness by the promise of an easy 13 tricks, given a decent 3-2 trump break.

A trump is led to declarer's a king-to-heart-ace and another trump is led to declarer's king to ruff another heart. Too late now, the bad news strikes East. East has a sure trump trick and declarer's last heart in dummy gets his trump trick early but declarer can take 12 tricks.

Even if East returns a trump, declarer wins and ruffs a heart. He leads a diamond to his ace to ruff his last heart and comes back to hand via the club king. Two high trumps exhaust East while dummy discards diamonds and the high clubs.
